The Solicitor-General: Pending the implementation of the charging scheme in the Criminal Justice Bill, the police and Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) are establishing non-statutory arrangements (based on those which were piloted in 2002) which involve their working together more closely pre-charge. One element is the provision of early CPS advice through a duty prosecutor routinely stationed at busy police stations or charging centres. These arrangements, which in some Areas are still at the planning stage, should be in operation in all Areas by the end of the year. Prior to the charging pilot, advices sought by the police from most forces were usually limited to a few cases involving substantial legal difficulty. Frequently, advice was sought after charge when many of the issues were already decided and Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) intervention would often involve a reversal of previous police decisions. In the charging pilot last year over 6,100 advices were sought by the police during the period of CPS attendance.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Solicitor-General what the Crown Prosecution Service budget was for (a) 2002–03 and (b) 2001–02. [128862]

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service resource budget was (a) £464 million for 2002–03 and (b) £402 million for 2001–02.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Solicitor-General how many additional lawyers the CPS employed in 2002–03 [128873]

The Solicitor-General: The number of lawyers in post has increased by 237 during the period from 1 April 2002 to 31 March 2003, when the total stood at 2,267.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Solicitor-General what percentage of CPS staff work in areas prosecuting or supporting the prosecution of offenders. [128874]

The Solicitor-General: All staff in the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) are employed to ensure that the CPS can fulfil its statutory functions, namely prosecuting offenders. A table showing the percentage of staff working in different functional areas follows.

Functional area	Percentage
Areas	88.1
HQ casework	2.6
HQ policy	1.2
Headquarters	4.3
Service centres	3.8
Total	100

Domestic Violence

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Solicitor-General if she will make a statement on guidance issued to the Crown Prosecution Service on the conduct of cases involving domestic violence. [129395]

The Solicitor-General: Cases involving domestic violence are conducted in accordance with the Crown Prosecution Service revised policy on prosecution of cases of domestic violence issued in November 2001. The policy focuses on the safety of the victim and children, while holding abusers accountable for their actions. The CPS is committed to supporting victims by, where appropriate, the use of special measures and, wherever possible, by constructing cases on the basis of evidence other than that of the victim.

The CPS network of domestic violence co-ordinators facilitates implementation of the revised policy, assists in providing training and shares and promotes good practice and a consistency of approach across the 42 areas.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Solicitor-General how many people in the Law Officers' department had a role in advice given on the legality of the continued occupation of Iraq. [128964]

The Solicitor-General: There are two officials in the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers who assist in dealing with any questions of international law relating to Iraq. There is a longstanding convention, followed by successive governments, that neither the substance of Law Officers' advice, nor the fact that they have been consulted, is publicly disclosed. This is consistent with paragraphs 2 and 4*(d)* of Part II of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Criminal Justice Reform

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Solicitor-General what new structures have been developed to manage delivery and reform of the CJS at national and local levels. [128724]

The Solicitor-General: The Government established a National Criminal Justice Board and 42 Local Criminal Justice Boards following recommendations made by Lord Justice Auld in his review of the Criminal Courts and as part of a wider package of Criminal Justice reform announced in the White Paper "Justice for All".

At a national level, a National Criminal Justice Board comprising CJS Ministers, senior officials from the Home Office, the CPS, the Department for Constitutional Affairs and senior representatives from the police and the judiciary, is responsible for supporting Local Boards in delivery of the PSA targets and for managing the Government's overall CJS reform programme.

Through the Local Boards, chief officers from the police, the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS), the Probation Service, Prisons, Youth Offender Teams and the courts are working together locally to bring more offenders to justice and to improve public confidence in the Criminal Justice System (CJS).

Criminal Trials

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Solicitor-General how many criminal trials collapsed as a result of witnesses receiving payment from media organisations in each of the last 10 years. [127660]

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) keeps a wide range of statistical information on matters pertaining to the prosecution of cases, as do the courts and other criminal justice agencies. Data is gathered by CPS on generic reasons leading to unsuccessful case outcomes but this does not extend to specific and unusual acts, such as a witness receiving payment from a media organisation.

Crown Court Cases

Mrs Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Solicitor-General what percentage of cases in the Crown court resulted in a conviction in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03. [128856]

The Solicitor-General: In 2001–02 the Crown Prosecution secured convictions in 73.3 per cent. of Crown court cases. This rose to 74.5 per cent. in 2002–03.

Mrs Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Solicitor-General what percentage of defendants who pleaded not guilty in the Crown court were convicted in 2002–03. [128857]

The Solicitor-General: In 2002–03, the Crown Prosecution Service secured convictions in respect of 61.9 per cent. of all defendants who pleaded not guilty and whose cases proceeded to a contested hearing in the Crown court.

Magistrates Courts

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Solicitor-General what the discontinuance rate was in magistrates court cases in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03. [128861]

The Solicitor-General: Discontinuances—those cases in which a decision is made not to proceed before evidence is heard by the court—fell from 16.2 per cent. of all magistrates court cases prosecuted by the Crown Prosecution Service in magistrates courts in 2001–02 to 15.5 per cent. in 2002–03. These figures include cases in which the defendant was bound over without a trial being held.

Mrs Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Solicitor-General what percentage of prosecutions in the magistrates courts secured a conviction in 2002–03; and how many defendants pleaded or were found guilty. [128855]

The Solicitor-General: In 2002 03 the Crown Prosecution Service secured convictions in 76.8 per cent. of all prosecutions in the magistrates courts. This figure comprised 811,583 guilty pleas and 166,909 verdicts of guilty after trial.

Vulnerable Adults (Video Evidence)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Solicitor-General what definition is used of a vulnerable adult as it relates to the admissibility of video recorded statements as evidence in chief in Crown Court proceedings. [128726]

The Solicitor-General: Chapter 1 of the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 provides for a witness to be eligible as a vulnerable adult for assistance by the use of video recorded evidence if the court considers that the quality of the evidence given by the witness is likely to be diminished by reason of any of the following circumstances:

(i) the witness suffers from a mental disorder within the meaning of the Mental Health Act 1983; or

(ii) otherwise has a significant impairment of intelligence and social functioning; or

(iii) that the witness has a physical disability or is suffering from a physical disorder.

The court will consider any views expressed by the witness pursuant to section 16 (4) of the Act.

Once a witness is deemed eligible, then in relation to adult vulnerable witnesses, the court needs to be satisfied that the video will maximise the quality of their evidence.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Building Works

Dr. Cable: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission what work is outstanding on (a) Norman Shaw North, (b) Norman Shaw South and (c) Portcullis House; and what the estimated completion date is. [128789]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: No work is outstanding in Norman Shaw North other than routine maintenance.

In Norman Shaw South the refurbishment contractor has defects liability until February 2004 and he will attend to any items as necessary. The design consultant has liability to resolve window closure details and an issue in connection with air conditioning design. Also, some minor alterations were requested by the Accommodation and Works Committee for execution this summer.

In Portcullis House the water feature contractor is currently fulfilling his defects liability and the fenestration contractor has one item remaining from his defects schedule which is to be dealt with in September.

Parliamentary Ticket Office

Mr. Evans: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, how much the Houses of Parliament ticket office has cost in each year since its construction. [127949]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: During the period of the trial opening (2000 and 2001) of the summer line of route, tickets were on sale in Westminster Hall. Following the Houses' decision to put the arrangement on a permanent footing, and pending the outcome of discussions with Westminster City Council as the local planning authority and with English Heritage, a temporary facility on Abingdon Green was used as a ticket office in 2002. The cost was £53,500, of which the House of Commons share was £32,100.

The permanent ticket office used this year for the first time has an estimated cost of £155,000 (the House of Commons share is £93,000). It will be dismantled and put into store during the winter and with due maintenance it is expected to be used each summer for at least 10 years. The annual cost will therefore be £15,500, of which the House of Commons' share will be £9,300.

Dr. Cable: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission what the cost of constructing the Houses of Parliament ticket office was; what the cost of storing the ticket office until 2004 will be; which company has been selected to store the ticket office until 2004; and if he will make a statement. [128788]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: The permanent ticket office used this year for the first time has an estimated cost of £155,000 (the House of Commons share is £93,000). It will be dismantled and put into store during the winter and with due maintenance it is expected to be used each summer for at least 10 years. The annual cost will therefore be £15,500, of which the House of Commons' share will be £9,300.

Tenders are to be invited shortly for the dismantling, storage, maintenance and re-erection of the building for the next four years.

Recycling

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission (1) what percentage of the paper collected for recycling was (a) recycled within the UK and (b) exported for recycling in each of the last three years; [127225]

(2) what percentage of paper collected for recycling was recycled in each of the last three years: and what steps he takes to ensure this happens. [127226]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: The parliamentary waste management contractor mixes waste paper from all sources at his recycling plant and is not able separately to measure the weight from any one source which has gone to UK or overseas paper makers.

All the paper collected for recycling in the Palace and the northern outbuildings has been recycled, unless there were any isolated incidents where the staff of the cleaning contractor misdirected sacks intended for recycling.

Dr. Cable: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission what items can be recycled by hon. and right hon. Members and their staff; and if he will make a statement. [128786]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: Waste paper from Members' offices may be recycled by using the special bins provided and metals may be recycled by using the general office waste bins. Glass may be recycled by leaving it at the waste centres at Peers' Inner Court in the Palace and at 1 Canon Row.

CABINET OFFICE

Civil Contingencies

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what plans there are for civil emergency exercises (a) in London and (b) elsewhere in the next 12 months. [128657]

Mr. Alexander: In London, the London Resilience Partnership of the emergency services, health services, local authorities, utilities and transport agencies have a continuous programme of training and exercises. These comprise tabletop exercises, live exercises and training events.

Elsewhere, a nationwide rolling programme of exercises ensures that we have robust and well-practised contingency plans in place to respond to a whole range of civil emergency incidents. The main activity is carried out at the local and regional level by local authorities and the emergency services. These exercises are based on risk assessments which include natural, technological or man-made crises; for example, exercises cover key facilities such as airports, nuclear power stations and chemical complexes. It is complemented by a cross-governmental programme.

Under the broader cross-governmental programme, on the counter-terrorist side, the Home Office carries out three major exercises per annum plus a number of smaller scale exercises. Other exercises cover the health service response and consequence management of CBRN-related emergencies.

On non-terrorist disruptive challenges, future exercises include the testing of the response to oil pollution, civil nuclear emergency response, foot-and-mouth contingency testing, chemical spills, flood management and a fuel shortage and its impact on the food supply chain.

The UK also plans to participate in exercises with international partners and fora.

Government Vehicles

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office (1) what arrangements there are for the disposal of (a) ministerial and (b) departmental vehicles; and if he will make a statement; [128796]

(2) what the average time is that ministerial cars have been kept in operational service; and if he will make a statement. [128799]

Mr. Alexander: The responsibility for the provision of ministerial cars and drivers has been delegated under the terms of the Framework Document to the Government Car Despatch Agency. I have asked its Chief Executive Mr Nick Matheson to write to the hon. Member. Copies of his letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Public Appointments

Mr. Mike Hall: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what percentage of appointees to UK Government sponsored public bodies are (a) disabled people and (b) people with minority ethnic backgrounds. [128059]

Mr. Alexander: Further to my written statement on 16 July 2003, Official Report, column 49WS, I would like to correct the figure given for the percentages of disabled public appointees to public bodies and those with a minority ethnic background. As at 31 March 2003, 5.3 per cent. of public appointments are held by people with a minority ethnic background and 3.1 per cent. by disabled people. Information about the public bodies sponsored by UK Government Departments, and those appointed to serve on them, is available in Public Bodies 2003, revised copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what progress has been made by the Department in increasing the number of women seeking public appointments since May 2001. [129457]

Mr. Alexander: Each Government Department handles the public appointments process for the non-departmental public bodies for which it is responsible.

I will shortly be publishing the annual report on increasing diversity in public appointments, which will contain a section for each department, on their activity, including progress to date against their individual targets for increasing diversity on the boards of the public bodies for which they are responsible. Copies of the report will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Wherever possible, my Department encourages individuals from under-represented groups to apply for appointments by clear job descriptions and person specifications, which do not contain unnecessary requirements which might discourage or eliminate their applications.

In addition, my Department actively seeks to identify suitable women candidates through approaches to the Women and Equality Unit at the Department of Trade and Industry and the Women's National Commission.

The progress made by my department is shown in the table.

	Total number of appointments	Women (percentage)
2001[1,2]	103	32
2002[1,2]	101	34
2003[2]	94	35

[1] For comparison excludes the Women's National Commission and the Equal Opportunities Commission, which transferred to the Department of Trade and Industry in May 2002.
[2] Information is collected as at 31 March.

E-Envoy

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what plans he has to retain the post of e-Envoy after the termination of the contract of the present office holder. [129127]

Mr. Alexander: The e-Envoy's contract has not been terminated. The current contract runs to April 2004, and succession planning decisions will not be made until closer to that date.

TRANSPORT

Road Haulage Industry (Compensation Claims)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many claims for compensation were submitted to the French authorities after 1 January 1995 in respect of lorry blockades; and how many have been (a) paid in full, (b) paid in part and (c) not paid. [129259]

Mr. Jamieson: Following the lengthy disruption in France in November 1996, the Department offered hauliers assistance in submitting compensation claims to the relevant French authorities. Some 1,200 claims were handled in this way. All claims arising from these lorry blockades have been processed by the French authorities, and payment agreed in the case of all claims eligible under French law. The French authorities dealt directly with the cases and claimants were under no obligation to inform the Department of the outcome of their cases. We are, therefore, unable to provide information about amounts of compensation paid or refused.

A12

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the (a) dates and (b) areas over the last 10 years, that roadworks have taken place for more than two weeks' duration on the A12 between the M25 turnoff and Wivenhoe, Essex. [128824]

Mr. Jamieson: I have asked the Acting Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Stephen Hickey, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Hilary Chipping to Mr. Simon Burns, dated 15 September 2003:

I have been asked by David Jamieson, on behalf of our Acting Chief Executive Stephen Hickey, to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about road works that have taken place on the A12 between the M25 turnoff and Wivenhoe, Essex.

The table below provides information on road works since 1997 that have lasted longer than two weeks. I regret that we do not have details prior to 1997.

A12 section	Timing
Chelmsford Bypass	October 1997 to February 1998
Mountnessing Bypass	January 1999 to February 1999
Boreham Bypass	December 1999 to March 2000
Brentwood Bypass Phase 1	January 2001 to May 2001
Hatfield Peverel Bypass	October 2001 to February 2002
Brentwood Bypass Phase 2	October 2002 to March 2003
Witham Bypass	August 2003 to December 2003

I hope this is helpful.

A27

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the A27 through Worthing will have been improved or replaced. [129416]

Mr. Jamieson: A number of small-scale improvements to ease congestion and improve safety are planned to be implemented by late 2004. In the longer term, following the Secretary of State's announcement on 9 July 2003, the Highways Agency has been asked to work with local authorities and statutory environmental bodies to identify schemes that are less damaging than those recommended by the South Coast Multi-Modal Study and reduce the need for major road construction. The Highways Agency are expected to report back in the middle of 2004, which will enable a decision on the way forward.

A38

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many fatal accidents have occurred on the A38 in Devon between Marsh Mills roundabout, Plymouth and Ivybridge in the past five years. [129704]

Mr. Jamieson: There have been a total of five fatal accidents on the A38 in Devon between Marsh Mills roundabout, Plymouth and Ivybridge, in the past five years. There were two fatal accidents in 2001 and three fatal accidents in 2002.

Air Transport

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take steps to prevent airlines from intentionally overbooking flights; if he will issue guidance to airline companies on appropriate (a) levels of compensation and (b) alternative arrangements for passengers unable to board flights they booked; and if he will make a statement. [129217]

Mr. McNulty: Overbooking is an accepted practice among full-service scheduled airlines. On any particular flight there is likely to be a proportion of passengers, mainly from those holding flexible tickets, who do not check in. On the basis of statistical evidence from previous flights, airlines estimate the probable number of no-shows and overbook accordingly. On the great majority of flights no passengers are denied boarding, and by reducing the number of empty seats overbooking keeps fares lower than they would otherwise be. This practice is widely accepted by passenger organisations and by regulators as being in the best interests of consumers generally.

In the comparatively small proportion of cases where denied boarding occurs, existing Community legislation requires Community air carriers to provide prescribed minimum levels of financial compensation, in addition to offering passengers a choice between re-routing and reimbursement. In December 2001 the European Commission presented a proposal for a regulation to increase levels of compensation to passengers denied boarding, as well as to require the provision of assistance to travellers affected by cancellations for commercial reasons or delays. Political agreement on this proposal was reached at Transport Council in December 2002, and it is currently subject to conciliation procedures involving the Council, the European Parliament and the Commission.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take steps to require signs at airports which are in English to carry equivalent information in other major European languages. [129250]

Mr. McNulty: The International Civil Aviation Organisation recommend that, as far as possible, symbols alone should be used without words and that, where words are found to be essential, the choice of languages should be determined having regard to the particular needs of air travellers and the general public. We consider that airport operators are best placed to judge whether any language other than English would be beneficial in conjunction with particular signs, and that it is not necessary or desirable to impose requirements on them in this respect.

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of the revenues of airports at (a) Luton, (b) Heathrow, (c) Gatwick and (d) Stansted derive from parking charges. [128936]

Dr. Howells: In the case of Luton Airport, in the fiscal year to 31 March 2003 the proportion of car park revenue to total revenue was 21 per cent. For Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted, the proportions were, respectively, 6 per cent., 9 per cent., and 20 per cent.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) pilots and (b) cabin crew have been diagnosed with deep vein thrombosis in each year since 1997. [129797]

Mr. McNulty: Based on an analysis of cases of venous thromboembolism (deep vein thrombosis and pulmonary embolism) between 1990 and 2000, the Civil Aviation Authority (CAA) estimates that there is an incidence in pilots of 0.2 per 1,000 per year. The annual incidence for the northern European population as a whole is 1.6–1.8 per 1,000 per year. Records are not kept by the CAA on the health of cabin crew as this group, unlike professional pilots, are not required to have routine regulatory medical examinations.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what plans he has to implement a public awareness campaign on the risks of travel-related deep vein thrombosis; [129798]

(2) what advice is available to British air travellers on travel health, with particular reference to measures to prevent travel-related deep vein thrombosis; and if he will make a statement. [129799]

Mr. McNulty: Advice on health and travel is widely available to the public in the Department of Health's 'Health advice for Travellers' booklet. The Government issued specific advice on travel-related deep vein thrombosis (DVT) in 2001, which has been made available to the public through NHS Direct, the internet, the airlines and health services. All UK long-haul carriers have produced information for their passengers, in pamphlets, videos or announcements, incorporating material contained in the Government's advice.

The Department of Health has commissioned research, jointly funded with UK airlines, to evaluate the public perception of the risk of DVT and the awareness and use of information sources relating to DVT. One of the tasks of the new Aviation Health Unit that my Department is setting up within the Civil Aviation Authority will be to consider the results of this research as part of its remit to recommend and offer advice to air passengers and crew on aviation health issues.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the possible effects on the health of airport workers if an additional runway were to be built at Gatwick. [128998]

Dr. Howells: Analysis of air quality impact of options included in the consultation "The Future Development of Air Transport in the United Kingdom" is related to community exposure to ambient emission levels. This comparative analysis for strategic purposes is not intended to be exhaustive and no formal assessment has been made for the purposes of the White Paper. Airports, like other employers, are subject to Health and Safety requirements.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what assessment he has made of (a) aircraft crossing runways, (b) wake vortices, (c) high ground, (d) turbulance from flying through a cutting and (e) proximity of the main railway line from building (i) one and (ii) two additional runways at Gatwick; [129000]

(2) what assessment he has made of the risk of wake vortices from the building of a close parallel runway at Gatwick. [129005]

Dr. Howells: All the factors you have mentioned have been appropriately taken into account in the development of the options presented in the consultation. The constraints imposed by each factor vary in relation to each option. For instance, wake vortices are less of a problem where there is greater distance between two runways (i.e. the wide spaced two runway option). In the close parallel option, their potential effects can restrict operations to the dependent segregated mode (resulting in reduced movement capacity).

Further information is contained in the Optioneering report for Gatwick, Stansted and Southampton airports, which was included in the package of SERAS documents made available as part of the consultation (document reference numbers 51 and 66). Although this information relates to options which differ somewhat from those presented in the consultation document, the differences between the options are small in this respect. The information therefore remains valid.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of aircraft using the proposed new wide spaced runway at Gatwick would need to cross the existing runway to reach the terminal buildings. [129001]

Dr. Howells: This information is not available. It would depend on the precise way in which the runways would be operated and the balance of aircraft parking space between and north of the runways.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what impact to the public safety zone related to the proposed new wide spaced runway at Gatwick would have on use of the main London to Brighton railway line. [129002]

Dr. Howells: The impact of the Public Safety Zone (PSZ) for the proposed wide-spaced runway on the use of the London to Brighton railway line is likely to be small. The focus of PSZs is on the risks associated with residential property and places where people congregate for significant time. These risks are greater than for road and rail traffic passing through the zones as the time spent stationery is relatively short.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport by how much the high ground to the west would reduce the runway length available for take-offs in relation to the proposed new wide spaced runway at Gatwick. [129003]

Dr. Howells: Information on how the high ground to the west of the airport would reduce the runway length for take-offs is given in the Optioneering report for Gatwick, Stansted and Southampton airports, and included in the package of SERAS documents made available as part of the consultation (document reference number 51). Page 25 of the report states that the TODA (take-off distance available) would be reduced to about 2,550m. Although this information relates to a slightly different runway location it should be regarded only as an estimate and, therefore, remains broadly valid.

Mr. Ma[illegible] To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what studies he has made of the alternative plans produced by BAA for a close parallel runway at Gatwick; and what asessment he has made of the additional environmental impact of these plans. [129004]

Dr. Howells: As with all alternative options put forward during the consultation, we are considering these carefully.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much earth would need to be removed to make the proposed new north runway at Gatwick level with the rest of the existing airport. [129102]

Dr. Howells: This information is contained in the Optioneering report for Gatwick, Stansted and Southampton airports, and included in the package of SERAS documents made available as part of the consultation (document reference number 51). Page 28 of the report states that an estimated 18 million cubic metres of material would need to be removed to create a platform 1100 million wide. The corresponding draft layout plan for Gatwick with a possible new northern runway is shown in the associated document of figures, also available (document reference number 66, figure 4.4).

Freight Transport

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the rail lines operated for freight purposes only, giving the mileage length of each line identified; and what assessment has been made of the potential use of each line for passenger traffic. [129251]

Mr. McNulty: The information on the first two points is contained in Appendix D of the "Review of Freight Charging Policy: Consultation on Costs", published by the Office of the Rail Regulator in November 2000. A copy of this document is obtainable from the Office of the Rail Regulator.

There is no systematic assessment of the potential use of freight only lines for passenger traffic. Proposals submitted by local stakeholders to the Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) are considered on a case by case basis, with each case being reviewed on its individual merits and against the SRA's planning criteria.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list in percentage terms the movement of freight within the United Kingdom by (a) road, (b) rail and (c) water for each year from 1996 to date. [129262]

Mr. Jamieson: The information is in the following table.

Percentage share of goods moved (tonne kilometres): United Kingdom

	Road	Rail[1]	Water	Pipeline	All modes[2]
1996	66	6	23	5	100
1997	68	7	20	5	100
1998	65	7	23	5	100
1999	64	7	24	5	100
2000	62	7	26	4	100
2001	64	8	24	5	100

[1] Financial year figures.
[2] Figures for some years may not sum to 100 due to rounding.

Harbour Revision Orders

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the laws regarding harbour revision orders; if he proposes to change them; and if he will make a statement. [130210]

Mr. Jamieson: We have no current plans to change the legislation governing harbour revision orders although we are always willing to consider changes either suggested to us or that stem from our own experiences in processing them.

Public Transport

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress he is making on the integration of public transport (a) timetables and (b) ticketing. [129455]

Mr. McNulty: My Department continues to support the traveline service, which offers integrated, multi-modal public transport route and timetable information through a single national telephone number. The service is now also available on the internet.

The Transport Direct service will launch in early 2004. It will provide route, timetable and fare information for all modes of public and private transport and provide for the purchase of tickets. Transport Direct will initially be provided through an internet portal and, ultimately, it is hoped that access will also be possible via digital TV, mobile and WAP phones, other handheld devices and high street kiosks.

Work is also continuing to encourage the PlusBus ticketing scheme that allows the addition of bus validity to national rail tickets. There are currently 102 stations participating in the PlusBus scheme, with a further 33 expected by the end of September 2003. A significant number of additions are expected next year.

Road Deaths

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many traffic accidents resulted in a fatality in Crosby in each of the last five years. [129456]

Mr. Jamieson: Information is not available on the number of fatal traffic accidents in Crosby.

The number of traffic accidents that have resulted in one or more fatalities in the local authority district of Sefton, which includes Crosby, are given in the table.

	Fatal Accidents
1998	7
1999	5
2000	8
2001	6
2002	9

Shipping (Oil and Chemical Transfers)

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what regulations apply (a) within UK waters and (b) beyond the 12 mile limit, for the ship to ship transfer of oil and other chemicals. [129160]

Mr. Jamieson: Regulations specific to ship to ship transfer operations within UK waters, remain in draft form as a Statutory Instrument and Merchant Shipping Notice at this time. No specific regulations apply beyond the 12 mile limit.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what contingency plans are in place for dealing with spillages within and beyond the 12 mile limit from ship to ship oil and chemical transfers in Lyme Bay; and if he will make a statement. [129161]

Mr. Jamieson: Within the 12 mile limit of UK waters, transfers comply with draft legislation and include contingency planning for oil spills, mainly through the mechanism of Ship's Oil Pollution Emergency Plans (SOPEPS). Where cargoes being transferred are of a particularly persistent nature, appropriate oil recovery, collection and containment measures are also required in the form of a recovery vessel on stand-by throughout the operations.

Beyond the 12 mile limit, but within the UK's Pollution Control Zone, which can stretch up to 200 miles off shore, pollution resulting from ship to ship transfers would be treated in the same way as marine pollution from any other source.

Any Maritime and Coastguard Agency (MCA) response would follow the National Contingency Plan for Marine Pollution from Shipping and Offshore Installations and would be tailored to the circumstances of the incident.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many incidents of oil and chemical spillage have been reported as a consequence of ship to ship transfers of oil and chemicals off the UK coast in each of the past five years. [129162]

Mr. Jamieson: There have been no incidents of oil and chemical spills as a consequence of ship to ship transfer operations off the UK coastline in any of the past five years.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many ship to ship transfers of oil and chemicals took place off the UK coastline in each of the last five years (a) in total and (b) broken down by Government office region. [129163]

Mr. Jamieson: A break down of the number of ship to ship transfers off the UK coastline in the last five years is given in the table:

Year	Total	Broken down by Government office region
1999	1	Scottish waters
2000	1	South west
2001	5	4 South west
		1 East
2002	3	2 East
		1 South west
2003 to date	5	3 South west
		2 East

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how his Department monitors the ship to ship transfer of oil and chemicals off the UK coast. [129164]

Mr. Jamieson: There are only two locations outside harbour limits and within UK waters where ship to ship transfers are allowed to take place, namely off Lyme Bay, Dorset and Southwold, Suffolk. The industry has accepted current draft regulations governing these transfers as a common standard.

Agents for ship to ship transfers have to make an application to the Maritime and Coastguard Agency's (MCA) counter pollution branch at least 72 hours prior to the proposed transfer taking place. Permission for the transfer to proceed is only given after thorough assessment and may include limitations or specific requirements. Copies of the draft Statutory Instrument and Merchant Shipping Notice are supplied to the applicant for reference.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how his Department enforces regulations covering the ship to ship transfer of oil and chemicals off the UK coast (a) within the 12 mile limit and (b) beyond the 12 mile limit. [129165]

Mr. Jamieson: The regulations governing ship to ship transfers are currently in draft form through Statutory Instrument, The Merchant Shipping (Ship to Ship Transfers) Regulations 1999 and Merchant Shipping Notice 1739, Ship to Ship Transfers of Dangerous or Polluting Cargoes at Sea. Although these regulations remain in draft form, industry has accepted them as good working practice and their contents are applied when assessing and vetting applications for ship to ship transfers within UK water.

There are no regulations controlling ship to ship transfer activities beyond the 12 mile limit.

Thameslink 2000

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about the future of the Thameslink 2000 project. [129320]

Mr. McNulty: Progress on Thameslink 2000 is dependent on securing approval of the necessary planning and other powers under the Transport and Works Act. The Strategic Rail Authority and Network Rail are currently working to address design deficiencies identified at public inquiry. If a viable and economic solution can be found, a revised proposal will be submitted for consideration in the TWA process.

Traffic Calming

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions his Department has held with each of the emergency services regarding traffic calming schemes; and if he will make a statement. [128793]

Mr. Jamieson: My Department wrote to all local field operatives in the emergency services on 2 September 2003 encouraging them to work with local authorities whenever new traffic calming schemes are proposed. Similar letters were also sent to every local authority reminding them of the legal requirement to consult the emergency services wherever road humps are introduced. This letter also strongly urged local authorities to consult the emergency services when all other traffic calming measures are proposed.

Rail Performance Statistics

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the most recent rail performance indicators from train operating companies. [129068]

Mr. McNulty: The Strategic Rail Authority publishes rail performance statistics in the quarterly National Rail Trends (NRT) and six-monthly On Track publications. Copies of both publications are placed in the Library of the House. The next edition of NRT will be published on 19 September 2003 and provide performance data for the quarter April to June 2003.

DEFENCE

Afghanistan

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on NATO's leadership of the International Security Assistance Force in Afghanistan. [129034]

Mr. Hoon: Since 11 August 2003, NATO has given enhanced support to the International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) in Kabul, including providing the Headquarters for the Force. NATO has made an excellent start in its new role and the Alliance is now looking at ways to make the ISAF still more effective.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on security operations in Afghanistan. [129067]

Mr. Ingram: Coalition operations against remnants of the Taliban and their terrorist supporters continue, especially in the South and East of Afghanistan.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on military support for the government of Afghanistan. [129069]

Mr. Ingram: I have nothing to add to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on 8 September 2003, Official Report, column 10.

Aircraft Carriers

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which aircraft will be used on the new aircraft carriers. [128534]

Mr. Ingram: The primary aircraft for the Future Aircraft Carrier (CVF) will be the Short Take Off Vertical Landing (STOVL) variant of the Lockheed Martin F35 Joint Strike Fighter (JSF). CVF will have the capacity to operate a wide range of aircraft including that selected to provide maritime airborne surveillance and control and helicopters in a wide variety of roles that could include anti-submarine warfare, attack, surveillance and support. As CVF will be built to an innovative and adaptable design, it will be capable of modification to operate future generations of air platforms, such as aircraft requiring a catapult launch and arrested recovery.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the estimated conversion cost is for the Eurofighter Typhoon to operate from the new aircraft carriers. [128536]

Mr. Ingram: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 20 May 2003, Official Report, column 678W.

British Army Training Unit Suffield

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the importance of the Canadian BATSU facility for the British Army. [129491]

Mr. Ingram: The British Army Training Unit Suffield (BATUS) facility fulfils a valuable role in the training of units and formations to bring them to the required readiness state.

Campaign Medals

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the medal for those who served in the Suez Canal Zone between 1951 and 1954 will be available; and what arrangements have been made for its presentation. [129305]

Mr. Caplin: The four medal offices are preparing to issue medals to eligible veterans pending final agreement of the qualifying criteria. Stocks of the Naval General Service Medal 1915–62 and the General Service Medal 1918–62, their associated ribbons and the new clasp are being prepared by the medal offices in anticipation of that approval by Her Majesty. Once eligibility has been confirmed, the medal will be posted to the recipient.

Chatham Dockyard (Radiation Records)

Jonathan Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many former Chatham Dockyard workers have received their radiation dose records. [129735]

Mr. Caplin: 241 workers have received radiation dose record summaries under the Ministry of Defence Radiation Workers Counselling Scheme.

Jonathan Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many former Chatham Dockyard workers have been given estimated radiation dose records. [129736]

Mr. Caplin: It was necessary to enter estimated external doses into the statutory records of those radiation workers likely to receive higher radiation doses (called classified persons) when the film badge issued to these workers was lost or damaged. In such circumstances an estimated dose was entered onto an individual's dose record by entering doses from direct reading dosimeters worn by the individual. On the rare occasions when no dosimeter information was available, a calculation was made based upon time of exposure and radiation dose rates in areas where the individual worked. Since these details were entered onto individual records and there was no requirement to record the number of such events centrally, the numbers could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Compensation (Asbestosis)

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the average compensation per person paid by his Department to claimants suffering from asbestosis was in each of the last three years. [129706]

Mr. Caplin: The amount paid in compensation and the associated legal costs of cases brought against the Ministry of Defence are not in general recorded separately and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost. The average amount paid in compensation and legal costs by the MOD to claimants suffering from asbestos related disease for the last three years was as follows:

	£
2000–01	35,556
2002–02	26,644
2002–03	36,233

Contracts

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many contracts issued by his Department in the last five years have included no UK build. [128538]

Mr. Ingram: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will ensure that all contracts awarded by his Department include a provision that a minimum of 50 per cent. of the work will be carried out in the UK. [128539]

Mr. Ingram: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 13 January 2003, Official Report, columns 405–06W.

Service Personnel (Religious Faith)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the armed forces profess (a) Christianity, (b) Judaism, (c) Islam, (d) Hinduism and (e) other faiths; how many chaplains from each faith are attached to the forces; and if he will make a statement. [129322]

Mr. Caplin: The numbers of armed forces personnel with the following recorded religion are:

Religion	Number
Christianity	191,985
Judaism	65
Islam	280
Hinduism	140
Other	925

Note:
Figures have been rounded to prevent disclosure of sensitive personal data and exclude those with no recorded or declared religion.

There are 295 full-time commissioned chaplains in the armed forces, drawn from the main Christian denominations to which the majority of Service personnel belong. They have a responsibility to offer spiritual, moral and pastoral care to all Service personnel and their families, irrespective of religion or belief. The relatively small number of personnel from faiths other than Christianity, serving in a wide range of units and locations in the United Kingdom and overseas, does not at present justify the appointment of dedicated clergy from those faiths, but the position is kept under review. Leading members of the Buddhist, Hindu, Jewish, Muslim and Sikh faiths have been appointed to act as religious advisers to the armed forces.

Iraq

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate the Department has made of (a) the number of Iraqi ammunition dumps and (b) the quantity of munitions in the British sector. [125699]

Mr. Ingram: As of the 3 September, the following caches of munitions have been found in the United Kingdom Area of Operations:

Number of caches	Size	Estimated quantity unexploded ordnance	Types
111	Small	500–1,000	Various
61	ISO Container	1,000–5,000	Various
8	Multiple ISO Container	5,000–10,000	Various
9	Small Compound	Over 10,000	Various
8	Large Compound	Over 100,000	Various

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British casualties there were (a) during the conflict and (b) since the conflict in Iraq. [127391]

Mr. Ingram: As of 9 September United Kingdom Forces had suffered 49 fatalities, 33 during the conflict and 16 since. One member of the Defence Fire Services had also died after the conflict ended.

Fifty-three personnel had been wounded, 40 during the conflict and 13 since. We only record centrally the number of wounded who received hospital treatment. Those that received local treatment and then returned to duty are not recorded.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his Answer of 17 July 2003, Official Report, column 484W, on Iraq (friendly fire incidents), if he will make the reports and recommendations of these investigations available to hon. Members and the public when inquiries are completed; and if he will make a statement. [128520]

Mr. Ingram: The purpose of the internal Service inquiries being carried out into these incidents is to establish the facts; to discover whether any shortcomings in Service equipment or procedures caused or contributed to the incident; and, where necessary, to make recommendations to prevent a recurrence. To encourage witnesses to come forward freely and speak with the utmost candour, we do not publish reports in their entirety; this has been the policy of successive governments. The reports are, however, made available to HM Coroners to help them determine the cause and circumstances of death.

I am prepared, however, to make a summary of the report's conclusions available to the House in this instance, but only after all other related proceedings such as disciplinary action are entirely complete. To do otherwise would be to risk prejudicing those other proceedings.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans there are to retrieve and render safe cluster bombs and other munitions used by allied forces during the recent military action in Iraq; how much of this work will be carried out by non-governmental organisations; and if he will make a statement. [128527]

Mr. Ingram: The United Kingdom and other Coalition Armed Forces and Non-Governmental Organisation teams have been engaged in Explosive Ordnance Disposal tasks since before the end of the conflict in Iraq. This Unexploded Ordnance includes not only that fired or dropped by Coalition Forces, but also much from the Iraq-Iran war, as well as mines laid, ordnance fired or dropped, and stores of ammunition and other ordnance left by Iraqi military and paramilitary forces.

In the UK's Area of Responsibility, 1,500 tasks involving the destruction of over 146,000 munitions have been completed.

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many coalition forces (a) were killed in the Iraq conflict and (b) were injured in the conflict and are still receiving treatment; and how many of these were from friendly fire. [128942]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 11 September 2003]: As of 9 September 2003, 49 United Kingdom armed forces personnel and one member of the Defence Fire Service had died since the start of coalition military operations against Iraq. 39, all from the armed forces, were killed in action or subsequently died of wounds received and 11 died in non-battle accidents or from natural causes.

Of the fatalities, three have been confirmed as being caused by 'friendly fire' and three others remain under investigation.

We only record centrally the number of wounded who received hospital treatment. Those that received local treatment and returned to duty are not recorded. As of 9 September 2003, UK forces had suffered 53 wounded. We do not hold central records of how many remain under treatment.

We do not hold data on the numbers of fatalities and casualties suffered by coalition partners.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent requests he has received from the United States Government for the use of British military facilities in respect of the military action in Iraq. [129070]

Mr. Ingram: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence received a formal request on 18 November 2002 from the United States Government for assistance in any potential military action against the regime in Iraq. This was one of some 50 requests made by the US to a range of potential coalition partners. Subsequently, the Government have set out to Parliament the nature of their contribution to military action in Iraq on a number of occasions.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many reservists are deployed on operations in Iraq. [129071]

Mr. Caplin: As at 1 September 2003 there were 2,453 reservists deployed on operations in Iraq.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much finance has been allocated to UK-funded operators responsible for cleaning UK unexploded ordnance used in the recent invasion of Iraq. [118021]

Mr. Ingram: Providing a safe, secure and risk free environment for the Iraqi people is a key aspect of restoration activity for the coalition. The responsibility for developing a programme for the removal of landmines rests with the Iraq Mine Action Centre (IMAC) and not the UK military. While the Ministry of Defence has not therefore allocated Defence funds to demining operators for the cleaning of UK unexploded ordnance, we have provided personnel to help the process. The UK and the Iraq Mine Action Centre are in the process of marking and documenting around 400 unexploded ordnance sites.

The UK has made a significant effort to educate the local population in its area of operations about the dangers of mines and unexploded ordnance. We have, with the support of UNICEF and the ICRC, developed a Theatre Mine Risk Education Programme.

A poster and leaflet campaign continues and head teachers in Basrah have been briefed so that they can educate the children. In addition to this, local radio stations are informing the local population about unexploded ordnance and encouraging them not to tamper with anything that has either been marked as or may look like unexploded ordnance.

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress of recovering unexploded ordnance in Iraq. [118325]

Mr. Ingram: The United Kingdom and other coalition explosive ordnance disposal teams in the UK's area of responsibility have completed over 1,500 tasks and destroyed over 146,000 individual munitions. We do not record types of munitions destroyed. 197 caches or storage sites of unexploded ordnance (UXO) have already been identified:

Number of caches	Size	Estimated quantity of unexploded ordnance	Types
111	Small	500–1,000	Various
61	ISO container	1,000–5,000	Various
8	Multiple ISO container	5,000–10,000	Various
9	Small compound	Over 10,000	Various
8	Large compound	Over 100,000	Various

A full survey of sites contaminated with unexploded munitions has been underway since June. The survey has been conducted in concert with other coalition forces, demining companies and with non-Government organisations.

Joint Intelligence Committee

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether (a) secret and (b) top secret material produced by the Joint Intelligence Committee has been shown to any official in his Department who has not been cleared to see material at these levels of classification since 1997. [129649]

Mr. Hoon: The Ministry of Defence controls protectively marked material, including Top Secret and Secret material produced by the Joint Intelligence Committee: material is made available only to individuals who have been appropriately cleared and have a need to know the information. No incidents of unauthorised access to protectively marked Joint Intelligence Committee material by Ministry of Defence officials have been reported.

Military Personnel

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his Department's policy is on releasing names of military service personnel to marketing companies. [129526]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence does not release names of military, or civilian personnel, to marketing companies.

NATO Scientific Programme

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from the Master of St. Edmund's College, Cambridge, on NATO's scientific programme; and if he will make a statement. [128268]

Mr. Ingram: Defence Ministers have not received representations from Professor Sir Brian Heap, Master of St. Edmund's College, Cambridge. Professor Heap has, however, corresponded with my colleagues in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office with regard to NATO's scientific programme.

Overseas Deployments

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list current overseas deployments of Navy, Army and Air Force Institution (NAAFI) units; and how many staff are involved in each. [120738]

Mr. Caplin: Current Navy, Army and Air Force Institutes (NAAFI) locations, and associated personnel numbers, outside the United Kingdom are as follows:

Country	Staff numbers
Germany	980
Kuwait/Iraq	39
Afghanistan	4
Cyprus	3
Kosovo	3
Bosnia	3
Saudi Arabia	2
Kenya	2
Falkland Islands	2
Gibraltar	2
Belize	1
Brunei	1
Ascension Island	1

The list covers permanent NAAFI undertakings in overseas garrisons as well as Expeditionary Forces Institute (EFI) deployments in support of military operations. The personnel figures shown for each location relate to the number of United Kingdom or United Kingdom Based Contract (UKBC) personnel in post and exclude locally paid staff. The figures for Germany exclude 45 UKBC personnel working for NAAFI financial services and 505 with NAAFI support services.

In addition, some 60 NAAFI personnel serve with the Naval Canteen Service (NCS). NCS personnel serve on ships deployed in a range of locations around the United Kingdom as well as elsewhere, including the Gulf.

Army Equipment Purchases

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of Army personnel he estimates purchase their own (a) boots, (b) shirts, (c) vests, (d) jackets, (e) bergens and (f) trousers. [129493]

Mr. Ingram: In common with many individuals, and as a matter of personal choice, some soldiers will purchase work-related items of clothing or equipment but none are advised to do so. Specific records are not maintained, but the subject features in the Army's Continuous Attitude Survey (CAS). The latest CAS indicates the following percentages for Army personnel who purchase their own items of clothing.

Clothing	Percentage
(a) boots	3
(b) shirts	[1]
(c) vests (T-shirts)	1.5
(d) jackets	8.0
(e) bergens	2.3
(f) trousers	1.3

[1] No statistics.

Relocations

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the investment appraisal of the possible relocation sites for (a) the Joint Services Adventurous Training (Gliding) and (b) the RAF Gliding and Soaring Association Centres. [129300]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Ro-ro Vessels

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what status the six ro-ro ships are accorded within the Royal Navy; and if he will make a statement. [128340]

Mr. Ingram: The six Joint Rapid Reaction Force ro-ro are not part of the Royal Navy. They are commercial vessels, sponsored by the Ministry of Defence. They were built and are owned and operated, under a Private Finance Initiative, by AWSR Shipping, a commercial consortium. They are manned by Merchant Navy seafarers, who are members of the Sponsored Reserves List of the Royal Naval Reserve, and are therefore liable for call-up when the situation dictates.

In the same way as for Royal Navy ships, threat assessments are carried out and the appropriate level of protection is provided to the ro-ro, when considered necessary. Such protection may include a United Kingdom Service escort party on-board or accompanying Royal Navy ships.

Rosyth

Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what classification is given to the MOD estate at Rosyth; what this estate consists of in respect of the dockyard and the former naval base; and what plans there are to reclassify the defence estate at Rosyth. [111152]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 6 May 2003]: The Rosyth estate consists of:

The HMS Caledonia Site

Married quarters (retained by the Defence Housing Executive (DHE))

Storage/warehousing properties within the former dockyard port, South Arm Jetty (currently occupied by QinetiQ)

Forthview House complex housing Defence estates and the Pricing and Forecasting Group.

The Rosyth site was classified as a core site in the review that concluded in March. However, core sites classification is not static and therefore subject to change in response to evolving Defence needs. Subject to this, there are currently no plans to reclassify the defence estate at Rosyth.

Security Clearance

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the levels of security clearance to which officials of his Department are subjected before they are allowed to see the different categories of classified material. [129648]

Mr. Hoon: The levels of security clearance that Ministry of Defence officials need in order to be granted access to classified material are those which apply across Government. They are set out in HM Government's statement of vetting policy, as announced to the House on 15 December 1994, Official Report, columns 764–66W.

Women (Front-line Deployment)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the deployment of women into front line positions. [129492]

Mr. Ingram: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement made on 22 May 2002, Official Report, column 363W, by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence. Women are not restricted from deployment into front line positions but, for reasons of combat effectiveness, they are excluded from close combat posts. Further information may be found in the report, "Women in the Armed Forces", which may be found on the Ministry of Defence website at: www.mod.uk/issues/women

PRIME MINISTER

Alastair Campbell

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Prime Minister whether Mr. Alastair Campbell was the subject of the developed vetting procedure. [129774]

The Prime Minister: Information relating to personnel records, including those relating to recruitment, promotion and security vetting, are not disclosed under part 2, exemption 8 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he has had regarding the sovereignty of the Falkland Islands with President Kirchner; what the outcome of those discussions has been; and if he will make a statement. [129907]

The Prime Minister: I last met President Kirchner at the Progressive Governance Summit on 13 to 14 July 2003. We did not enter into discussions concerning the sovereignty of the Falkland Islands. The United Kingdom position on this is well known and remains unchanged; the Falklands will remain British for as long as that is the wish of the Islanders.

Hutton Inquiry

Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list those categories of information that have been provided to the Hutton Inquiry which are not normally made available (a) to Parliamentary Select Committees and (b) in response to Parliamentary Questions; and if he will make a statement on the reasons for the different approaches to information disclosure. [128596]

The Prime Minister: The Government are committed to co-operating fully with the Hutton Inquiry. Relevant papers are being provided to the Inquiry. The decision on which papers to make public is a matter for the Inquiry. In respect of a small number of papers, there may be issues about the need to keep certain information confidential, for instance, because of national security. Where necessary, the papers are provided to the Inquiry on the understanding that certain text will be suitably redacted before being made public.

Information provided in response to PQs and Select Committees will continue to be decided as appropriate in accordance with the Ministerial Code, the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information and Information and Departmental Evidence to Select Committees.

Iraq

Richard Ottaway: To ask the Prime Minister on what dates prior to the recent conflict with Iraq he met the heads of each of the armed forces to discuss the proposed conflict. [129222]

The Prime Minister: I discussed the situation in Iraq with the heads of the armed forces at a meeting on 15 January 2003; the Defence Secretary and the Chief of the Defence staff were also present. Subsequently, the views of the Chiefs of Staff were represented to me by the Chief of the Defence Staff, whom I met regularly prior to the conflict.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Prime Minister which weapons the Prime Minister was referring to in his foreword to the Government's Iraq dossier when he made the statement that military planning allows for some of the weapons of mass destruction to be ready within 45 minutes of an order to use them. [129840]

The Prime Minister: It was judged that the chemical and biological munitions concerned would be deployed with battlefield systems such as artillery, multiple-launch rockets and mortars.

Ministerial Code of Conduct

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister what procedure is in place to handle complaints about the failure of a Prime Minister to adhere to the Ministerial Code of Conduct. [129258]

The Prime Minister: It is for individual Ministers—including the Prime Minister—to account to Parliament for their actions and decisions.

Multi-national Chairman's Group

Dr. Cable: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his recent meeting with the Multi-National Chairman's Group; and if he will place in the Library the minutes and the agenda of the meeting. [129930]

The Prime Minister: I met with the Multi-National Chairman's Group on 2 September 2003 and discussed a range of economic and business environment issues.

Public Inquiries

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Prime Minister what the total cost to the public purse has been of each public inquiry which has exceeded £1 million since 1997. [129712]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for West Derbyshire (Mr. McLoughlin) on 12 June 2003, Official Report, columns 987–88W.

Security Service Advice

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister under what circumstances the security services provide advice to him on ministerial (a) appointments and (b) conduct. [129256]

The Prime Minister: Advice provided by the security services in relation to ministerial appointments and conduct is exempt from disclosure under exemptions 1(a), 2 and 8(a) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

World Trade Talks (Cancun)

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he has had with leading British businesses ahead of the Cancun trade negotiations; and if he will make a statement. [129389]

The Prime Minister: In preparing for the 5th World Trade Organisation Ministerial conference in Cancun, my ministerial colleagues have had regular and extensive discussions with British businesses from those industry and service sectors who have an interest in the Doha Development Agenda.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry will make a statement to the House on the conference on her return from Cancun.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Cathedrals (Financial Support)

26. Mr. Luff: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners what representations the Church Commissioners have made to the Government about the public financial support available to cathedrals. [129577]

Mr. Bell: The Church Heritage Forum, on which the Church Commissioners are represented, aims to forge new partnerships with local, central and regional Government and press the case for greater financial support for the Church's built heritage. Discussions are in hand and the Forum aims to report next summer.

Church Income

27. Miss McIntosh: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners what proportion of the Church's income came from collections in the last five financial years. [129578]

Mr. Bell: I understand from the Archbishops' Council that total giving through standing order, payroll giving and cash, amounting to £282 million in 2001, accounts for roughly one-third of the Church's overall income. This proportion has not changed significantly over the last five years.

Bishops' Emoluments

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners what percentage of the Church Commissioners' total expenditure was spent on bishops' emoluments in each year from 1999. [127220]

Mr. Bell: The Commissioners are responsible for funding the emoluments of all diocesan, suffragan and full-time assistant bishops as part of their support for bishops. Emoluments include the stipend paid to each bishop, employer's national insurance contributions and pension contributions.

The Commissioners' annual spending on bishops' emoluments from 1999 is shown in the table in monetary values and as a proportion of their total expenditure. The Commissioners also fund bishops' office and working costs, and housing and office premises costs for diocesan bishops.

Bishops' emoluments	£ million	As a percentage of Commissioners' total expenditure
1999	3.5	2.2
2000	3.5	2.2
2001	3.8	2.4
2002	4.0	2.4

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners how many and what percentage of bishops had the use of a chauffeur in May (a) 2000, (b) 2001, (c) 2002 and (d) 2003; what the total cost was in current prices in each year; and how many chauffeurs in each year were (i) part-time and (ii) full-time. [127217]

Mr. Bell: The position is as follows:

	Number of bishops with use of a driver	Percentage of bishops	Total cost (calendar years) (£)	Equivalent at May 2003 prices (£)	Number of part-time drivers	Number of full-time drivers
2000	32	28	306,318	325,698	23	9
2001	35	30	336,595	350,700	27	8
2002	34	30	324,145	333,895	27	7
2003	32	28	not yet available	n/a	25	7

Genetically Modified Crops

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners what the Commissioners' policy is in respect of genetically modified crops. [127227]

Mr. Bell: The Church Commissioners do not permit the growing of genetically modified crops on their land. This policy reflects advice offered by the Church of England's Ethical Investment Advisory Group in 2000, endorsed by the Commissioners and available in full on the Church of England's website at http://www.cofe.anglican.org/view/gmos.rtf. The House of Commons Library holds a copy.

The group will keep its advice to the Church Commissioners under review in the light of any new evidence, and scientific peer group commentary upon it, arising from the three-year programme of farm scale trials. The Church Commissioners will consider any new advice offered by the group in due course.

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners what the total annual expenditure on bishops' residences was in each year from 1998. [127221]

Mr. Bell: The Church Commissioners' expenditure on bishops' housing and office premises in each year from 1999 is as follows:

	£ million
1998	3.0
1999	3.3
2000	3.0
2001	3.3
2002	3.4

As is indicated in note 13 to the Commissioners' annual financial statements, these costs cover building maintenance and repairs, external property management costs, staff costs including salaries and pensions, council tax, insurance and other running costs, Lambeth Palace Library running costs, support services, depreciation, rent paid and rental income. Capital expenditure on existing houses or on acquiring replacement houses is not included.

ELECTORAL COMMISSION

Sunday Elections

28. Bob Russell: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission if the commission will evaluate the advantages and disadvantages of holding local and national elections on a Sunday. [129579]

Mr. Viggers: The commission has evaluated a number of local election pilot schemes which featured voting over a period of days—including, in some instances, Sundays. The commission has no plans at present to undertake a wider review of the issues involved.

Disabled Voters

29. Mr. Carmichael: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission if he will make a statement on the rights of disabled voters to vote by proxy. [129580]

Mr. Viggers: This is not a matter for the Speaker's Committee, but I understand that a person who by reason of blindness or other physical incapacity cannot reasonably be expected to go in person to the allotted polling station or to vote unaided there, has a statutory right to vote by proxy for an indefinite or particular period.

The hon. Member will be aware that all voters, disabled or not, are entitled to request a postal vote.

Electronic Voting

30. Michael Fabricant: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what assessment the commission has made of the privacy of data concerning votes cast electronically in elections; and if he will make a statement. [129581]

Mr. Viggers: In its evaluation of the May 2003 electoral pilot schemes, the commission highlighted the importance of ensuring the confidentiality of vote data in electronic voting. The commission concluded that the level of security in the 2003 pilot schemes was sufficient, but recommended further data encryption requirements for future pilot schemes.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Mesopotamia (Antiquities)

13. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assistance has been provided by her Department in protecting the antiquities of Mesopotamia. [129564]

Tessa Jowell: Officials from my Department were among the first civilians sent to Iraq after the war. They worked within the Coalition Provisional Authority to re-establish the Iraqi Culture Ministry. They also worked on clarifying numbers of items missing from the Iraq museum and on implementing measures, to help prevent on-going looting from archaeological sites.

We have also implemented UNSCR 1483 in reaction to the prohibition of the import of trade in unlawfully removed Iraq cultural property.

Subtitled Films

14. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps she is taking to increase the number of subtitled films screened in the UK. [129565]

Estelle Morris: The UK Film Council, charged by the Government to create a sustainable British film industry, has announced a cinema access programme to improve access to cinemas by people with hearing and sight impairments. £500,000 of lottery money has been allocated to this programme, of which £350,000 will be used to supply up to 75 local cinemas across England with subtitling and audio-description equipment, and £60,000 will be used to provide sub-titled and audio-described film prints for use in cinemas.

Olympic Bid

15. Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she expects to announce the name of the chief executive officer of the 2012 London Olympic bid; and if she will make a statement. [129566]

Tessa Jowell: The appointment of the chief executive officer of London 2012 Ltd., the company established to take forward the bid to host the Olympic Games in London in 2012, is a matter for the company itself.

I understand that Barbara Cassani, chair of London 2012, is currently considering candidates for the post.

18. Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the committee structure for London's 2012 Olympic bid. [129569]

Tessa Jowell: The Board of London 2012 Ltd. has been tasked as the bid committee to prepare the bid to host the 2012 Olympics in London. While a number of executive posts to the board remain to be filled, the board members recently announced by London 2012 Ltd. are as follows:

Barbara Cassani—Chairman
Mike Power—Chief Operating Officer
Neale Coleman
Simon Clegg OBE
Mike Brace
Matthew Pinsent CBE
Craig Reedie CBE
Sir Steve Redgrave
HRH The Princess Royal
Mary Reilly
Derrick Anderson
Patrick Carter
Charles Allen
Sir Howard Bernstein
Lord Paul of Marylebone
Dalton Grant

A stakeholder's panel of the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, Mayor of London and Chair of the British Olympic Association has also been established. The stakeholder's panel will have the final right of approval over London's applicant city questionnaire and candidature file.

London 2012 Ltd. will also be establishing a Bid Forum which will allow London 2012 to consult and seek advice from a wider constituency of interested parties from across London and the country.

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the extent to which the Olympic bid will enhance regional sports facilities. [128654]

Tessa Jowell: My Department has assessed that should the UK win the right to host the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games they will provide the opportunity for a lasting legacy for communities through the investment by visiting teams in enhanced sporting facilities for training and preparing for the Games.

In addition I announced in July that during the bidding phase, community facilities across the UK will be improved through further funding of £100 million from the New Opportunities Fund. In England this will be joined with £31 million from Sport England to provide a fund for community sports facilities in each region.

This investment will be used together with the Olympic Bid to galvanise enthusiasm and encourage and sustain increased participation in sport in our communities.

Mr. John Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) how the statement in the Government's response to the Culture, Media and Sport Committee report on A London Olympic Bid, Cm 5867, that special funding streams to meet Olympic costs should be closed by 2013–14, accords with her statement on 15th May, Official Report, column 481, on the length of time that the special London council tax precept will run; [128084]

(2) how long the London council tax precept to contribute to the cost of a London Olympic Games will last; at what level it will be set each year; and what the proceeds will be. [128085]

Tessa Jowell: The Memorandum of Understanding between the Government and the Mayor of London, as published in the response to the Select committee, makes clear that "the Government and Mayor's expectation I that special funding streams to meet Olympic costs should be closed, having provided the necessary amounts, by 2013–14, except that where the Greater London Authority has borrowed to meet capital costs of the Olympics it may be necessary to extend the period during which the Olympic precept is levied to reflect the requirements of the prudential framework for capital finance."

Within that Memorandum, London is required to contribute up to £550 million towards the cost of the staging of the Games, with provision for a further £75 million if needed. The Mayor has said that he will raise this from the London Council Tax from an additional £20 a year charge, or 38p a week, on Council Tax for a band D property, likely to begin in 2006–07 if the bid is successful. On the current tax base it is estimated that this would arise the required £550 million in ten years and a further £75 million within another two years if necessary. However, the Mayor has also advised that during the period from 2006–07 the tax base will increase and so that time period may reduce. In addition, the funding package for the Games allows a £1.2 billion contingency over and above Arup's estimates of required public subsidy for staging the Olympics. The time period for collection of Council Tax would also reduce if all contingencies were not required, and it is the Mayor's expectation that special funding streams should have closed, having provided the necessary amount by 2013–14. In the unlikely event that the full funding package is required, and the GLA has to borrow to meet capital costs of staging the Olympics then the period of special funding may extend beyond that dated as allowed for in the Memorandum.

My statement to the House on 15 May on the length of the time that the special London council tax precept would run presented the Government's assessment of a possible worst-case scenario. The Memorandum of Understanding, as I have explained, makes provision for such an eventuality. However, current expectations are that this will not be the se and that special funding streams should be capable of being closed by 2013–14. The Mayor has also advised that current expectations are that in the unlikely event that the full London contribution were required this could be raised in less than 12 years.

Tourism

16. Diana Organ: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment has been made of the number of (a) domestic and (b) overseas tourists in England this summer. [129567]

Mr. Caborn: The latest figures show that the number of domestic tourist trips in England which include an overnight stay were 31.4 million between April and June 2003.

Figures for overseas tourists visiting England this summer will be available in January 2004. The latest figures for Britain show that, in the three months from May to July 2003, there were 6.9 million visits by overseas residents.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of Stat for Culture, Media and Sport, what arrangements are in place to promote (a) England and (b) Britain overseas as tourist destinations. [129558]

Mr. Caborn: VisitBritain promotes the whole of Britain overseas, including England, as a tourist destination with £35.5 million Government funding this year and additional partnership funding from the industry. Their current campaigns include a campaign in the United States worth approximately £2 million and a £4 million "City Breaks" campaign in Europe launched last week.

19. Mr. Best: To ask the Minister for State and Culture, Media and Sport what discussions her Department has had with regional development agencies on their progress in co-ordinating regional tourism strategies. [129570]

Mr. Caborn: I recently met the new Chair of the South West Regional Development Agency (who leads for the RDAs on tourism) and discussed the strategic role which the RDAs have been given in the reformed arrangements for tourism. I am looking forward to a forthcoming meeting with all the RDA Chairs to discuss progress. We have issued guidance to the RDAs on how tourism should be covered in their Corporate Plans and Regional Economic Strategies, which includes working together with each other within the new national framework for tourism strategy and marketing and have commented on draft Corporate Plans and related strategies in the light of this.

Analogue Television

17. Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what her estimate is of the switch-off date for analogue television; and if she will make a statement. [129568]

Tessa Jowell: The criteria set for switchover are that: everyone who can currently get the main public service broadcasting channels in analogue form must be able to receive them on digital systems; switching to digital is an affordable option for the vast majority of people; and as a target indicator of affordability, 95 per cent. of consumers must have access to digital equipment. The objective of the Digital Television Action Plan Project is to ensure these criteria are met so that we can, if we choose, take the decision to proceed to full switchover by ordering the switching off by 2010 of analogue terrestrial transmissions.

Horseracing Industry

20. Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, if she will make a statement on the Office of Fair Trading's proposals on the British horseracing industry. [129571]

Mr. Caborn: The OFT has made no proposals for the racing industry. It is conducting an enquiry into racing's rules and regulations and has issued a Rule 14 notice. That notice points to those areas that appear to restrict or distort competition. The British Horseracing Board and the Jockey Club have now responded and the process will continue until the OFT hands down a final ruling.

BBC Charter

Mr. Best: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the process for renewal of the BBC's charter. [128891]

Tessa Jowell: The Government will announce how it intends to conduct the Charter Review before the end of the year. I can give a commitment now, however, that the process will be both wide-ranging and thorough, that public debate will form a critical element of the review, and that there will be opportunities for parliamentary scrutiny.

Food Expenditure

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much was spent on food by her Department and by each agency for which it is responsible in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03; what proportion of that food by value was produced in the United Kingdom; what guidance she has issued to encourage the procurement of home-grown food; and if she will make a statement. [129383]

Mr. Caborn: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) does not directly buy food substances. DCMS opened a staff restaurant on 2 April 2001 and employs a catering organisation to provide the required service. The service provider is encouraged by the Department to purchase ethically and environmentally sound goods where this is practical.

Additionally, the Royal Parks Agency does not operate a system of buying food directly.

Television (Foul Language)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will take powers to prevent the use of obscene, abusive and insulting language on television; and if she will make a statement. [129440]

Estelle Morris [holding answer 11 September 2003]: Responsibility for what is broadcast on television rests with the broadcasters and the organisations which regulate broadcasting—the Governors of the BBC, the Independent Television Commission and the Welsh Fourth Channel Authority. They are independent of the Government and responsible for safeguarding the public interest in broadcasting. In carrying out their responsibilities, these authorities have a duty to ensure that programmes contain nothing which offends against good taste and decency or is likely to be offensive to public feeling. They also maintain guidelines for programme-makers on the standards which should be observed. This guidance includes advice on the use of language and timing of programmes and recommends when warning announcements about programmes should be made. In addition, the Broadcasting Standards Commission acts as a forum for public concern.

The Communications Act 2003 establishes a new regulatory framework for broadcasting and the communications industries, including the creation of a single regulatory body for the communications industries, the Office of Communications, which will have similar responsibilities for broadcast content. Viewers who are offended by television programmes should complain to the relevant broadcaster and, in the case of serious breaches of the regulatory codes, to the regulator.

Gatwick Airport Expansion (Listed Buildings)

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many Grade I, II, and II* listed buildings would (a) be left without public access and (b) need to be demolished under each of the different proposals to expand runway capacity at Gatwick airport. [129007]

Mr. Caborn: If a close parallel runway were built three Grade II* and four Grade II buildings would be demolished, rising to five Grade II* and 12 Grade II buildings under the wide-spaced option and 6 Grade II* and 18 Grade II under the two runway option. No Grade I buildings would be affected under any proposed option. We do not hold information about the number of buildings likely to be left without public access.

Private Museums

Mr. George Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what financial support she provides for private museums; and if she will make a statement. [129727]

Estelle Morris: Independent museums with charitable status are eligible to apply for status as a Registered Museum, under Resource's Registration Scheme. This makes them eligible for support under a wide range of initiatives, including the Renaissance in the Regions programme, the Museum Development Fund, and, if its collections are designated as being of 'outstanding importance', the Designation Challenge Fund.

Privately owned collections, however, are not eligible for Registered status and do not receive such financial support.

National Lottery

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on her policy on linking the value and number of National Lottery constituency awards and constituency deprivation. [129830]

Estelle Morris: All parts of the country should have access to Lottery funds. Many areas suffering wider social and economic deprivation need extra support to develop and put in good applications which are more likely to be successful. The fairshare initiative, bringing together funding from the New Opportunities Fund and Community Fund, specifically seeks to target areas of the UK which were most deprived, and which have not received their 'fair share' of Lottery funding. In addition, the Lottery Funding Decision Document, published in July, contains a number of proposals to make it easier for people to apply for Lottery funding, particularly those in disadvantaged communities. These include the creation of a new distributor, which will focus on improving the quality of life in communities by tackling disadvantage and social exclusion.

Sport England

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what criteria Sport England Exchequer uses to allocate grant aid to national governing bodies; and if she will make a statement. [128778]

Mr. Caborn: The process for Exchequer grant allocations to National Governing Bodies of Sport from Sport England is currently under review, the outcome of which is expected towards the end of October.

To date Sport England Exchequer grants are made available to those National Governing Bodies of Sport that are recognised as leading the development of their sport in England. Sport England investment in National Governing Bodies is based on the ability of the National Governing Body to deliver increased numbers of participants in the sport, to retain involvement in the sport either as participant, coach, official or volunteer, and to achieve publicly recognised levels of success.

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the additional level of Exchequer Funds is that has been made available to support the World Class Performance Programme contained in the recommendations of the Cunningham Review for Elite Sports. [130364]

Mr. Caborn: Following the Spending Review 2002, this Department has made available to UK Sport an additional exchequer allocation of £4.7 million in 2004–05 and £4.7 million in 2005–06, to enable them to take forward some of the recommendations of the Elite Sports Funding Review.

Government Art Collection

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much has been spent by the Government in each year since May 1997 on acquiring works of art; and where each work acquired is held. [129281]

Estelle Morris [holding answer 11 September 2003]: In the seven Financial Years since 2 May 1997 the Government Art Collection has spent a total of £1,111,500 from its Programme Vote on the purchase of works of art. This breaks down as follows:

	£
2 May 1997 to 1998	137,000
1998–99	127,000
1999–2000	179,000
2000–01	130,500
2001–02	158,000
2002–03	241,000
1 April to 11 September 2003	139,000

These works of art are currently located in some 55 Government buildings in the UK and around the world, as part of the Collection's remit in promoting British art and culture to visitors to these buildings.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much has been realised by the Government through the sales of works of art in each year since May 1997. [129280]

Estelle Morris [holding answer 11 September 2003]: The Government Art Collection has sold no works of art from its holdings since May 1997.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Meat Imports

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of EU import controls in preventing the import of meat from areas of high risk into the United Kingdom. [128060]

Mr. Bradshaw: European Community law sets out the import conditions which must be met by all meat imported into the community from third countries. These conditions do not permit meat to be imported from areas where veterinary controls cannot guarantee that the meat poses negligible disease risk to human or animal health. Defra veterinary experts and the Food Standards Agency are fully engaged in negotiations to develop Community import conditions. Should the disease situation in an exporting country change, for example if a new outbreak of disease is notified, the European Commission will introduce safeguard measures to control imports so that there is no increased risk of disease as a result. Pending these changes to community rules, in such a situation individual member states are permitted to introduce unilateral provisions to control imports. The Government take such unilateral action whenever the situation demands it.

Community import rules require all meat imported from third countries to enter the community via specified Border Inspection Posts where it is subject to veterinary examination to ensure the import conditions are being observed. The system of veterinary examination is operated by local authorities and is monitored by Defra and the European Commission to ensure effective controls are in place.

The Government have produced an Annual Review of Controls on Imports of Animal Products April 2002–March 2003 which concentrates on the action against illegal imports. This has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Gatwick Airport (Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty)

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty lie within 15 miles of Gatwick airport; and what assessment she has made of the impact on these AONB's from new flight paths to the proposed new runways at Gatwick. [129008]

Alun Michael: Parts of four Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty lie within 15 miles of Gatwick airport. The Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty concerned are the Kent Downs, Sussex Downs, High Weald and Surrey Hills. We have worked closely with the Department for Transport to ensure that the noise impact of the proposed new airport developments is given full consideration. Taking the 57dB contour as the onset of significant community annoyance, the options for a single close parallel or wide parallel runway are likely to have a minimal impact on the surrounding Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty. The option of building two additional runways at Gatwick would have a greater impact on the Surrey Hills and High Weald Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty.

Cattle Passport Scheme

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the operation of the cattle passport scheme. [129065]

Alun Michael: The cattle passport scheme is operated by the British Cattle Movement Service (BCMS) and became part of the Rural Payments Agency on 1 April 2003. The cattle passport scheme has been in operation for over six years and the national cattle database contains the details of the 9.7 million animals that make up the national herd. We are currently investing a further £12 million to upgrade the system and improve its performance.

BCMS operates to ISO 9001:2000 standards, is registered with the British Standards Institute and its operating practices have received the Kite mark. In addition to paper reporting systems, we have provided online facilities via a website for cattle keepers to use. BCMS are constantly striving to improve their service and efficiency.

Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000

Andrew Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to her answer of 13 May 2003, Official Report, column 142W, on the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000, if she will set out the timetable for the implementation of regulations under Part I of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000. [129973]

Alun Michael: The following table records the progress we have already made towards bringing the regulations into force and our timetable for completing the process. As I explained in my answer of 13 May, the precise timing may vary but we are firmly committed to ensuring the necessary regulations are made to allow the new right of public access under the Act to be rolled out as planned. Regulations enabling persons to dedicate land for access came into force on 1 September and I expect to lay regulations relating to the exclusion or restriction of access soon.

Regulation	Section	Consultation commenced (not later than)	Date regulations in force (not later than)
Regulations regarding mapping of access land and consultation on draft maps	Section 11	March 2001 (ended June 2001)	1 November 2001
Regulations regarding issue of provisional maps, appeals, and issue of conclusive maps	Section 11	November 2001 (ended 8 February 2002)	29 July 2002
Regulations regarding the establishment of LAFs and the appointment of members	Section 94 (Part V)	July 2001 (ended October 2001)	7 August 2002
Regulations on correcting minor errors and omissions in provisional and conclusive maps	Section 11(2)(1)	October 2002 (ended 7 November 2002)	21 July 2003
Regulations regarding dedication of land for access	Section 16	January 2002 (ended 15 April 2002)	1 September 2003
Regulations relating to exclusion or restriction of access under Chapter II, including appeals (but not emergencies)	Section 32	December 2001 (ended 22 March 2002)	October 2003
Regulations on removal or relaxation of restrictions on access land	Paragraph 7, Schedule 2	July 2003 (ends October 2003)	December 2003
Regulations to exclude access in emergencies	Section 31	October 2003	February 2004
Regulations on appeals relating to notices	Section 38	October 2003	February 2004
Regulations on references to public places in existing enactments	Section 42	October 2003	February 2004
Regulations regarding review of conclusive maps	Section 11	February 2004	August 2004

Departmental Staff

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) special advisers, (b) press officers, (c) civil servants, (d) advisers to civil servants and (e) permanent staff were working for her Department in each year since 1996. [126481]

Alun Michael: Defra came into being in June 2001 and the following information relates to the period since then.

(a) The Secretary of State has two Special Advisors.

The Department employs an Environmental Advisor, who reports to the Director for Environment Protection Strategy.

Ewen Cameron, who is also Chair of the Countryside Agency, is the Rural Advocate, arguing the case on countryside issues and for rural people at the highest levels in Government and outside. While this role has no formal line of accountability, Sir Ewen works closely with me as Minister of State for Rural Affairs on a range of issues of rural proofing and also has access to the Secretary of State and other senior members of Government.

Dr. Chris Fay holds the title Emissions Trading Champion. Reporting to the Director for Climate, Energy and Environmental Risk, he assisted the Government in recruiting participants to the UK's voluntary Emissions Trading Scheme launched in April 2002, and plays a role in communicating with business on emissions trading issues.

Lord Haskins acted as Rural Recovery Co-ordinator during the latter part of the foot and mouth disease outbreak in 2001. His role was to help local authorities and other agencies plan for the economic recovery of Cumbria, and to consider what lessons were also applicable to other areas affected by the outbreak. Lord Haskins began work on 14 August 2001 and reported to me in October 2001.

(b) When Defra was established in June 2001 there were 19 press officer posts. In March 2002 there were 20, in May 2002 there were 22 and as at September 2003 there are 20 press officer posts. These figures include the post of Head of News but not that of Director of Communications.

(c) and (e) This information is available in Table C of the annual publication Civil Service Statistics, which covers permanent staff numbers in each department and agency from 1996 to 2002. Copies of the publication are laid in the Libraries of both Houses. The latest edition, based on April 2002 data, was published on 24 July 2003. The figures will include press officers, although they are not separately identified. The total number of permanent and casual civil servants on both a head-count and a full-time equivalent basis at 1 April 2002 is available in Table A of Civil Service Statistics. Full-time equivalents are preferred to head-counts when examining trends over time. Also, the number of permanent staff is preferred as a basis when looking at trends as casual staff numbers reflect short-term responses to changes in workloads.

Alternatively, this information is available at the following address on the Cabinet Office's website: http://www.civil-service.gov.uk/statistics/css.htm.

(d) The term "advisers to civil servants" is not one that is recognised.

Export Refunds

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the most recent annual amounts of export refund provided through the EU for the export of (a) fruit, (b) vegetables and (c) sugar; and if she will list the amounts in sterling per pound weight. [128819]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 10 September 2003]: EU expenditure on export refunds in 2001, the latest year for which full information is available, was as follows:

Fresh fruit and vegetables—36.1 million euros

Processed fruit and vegetables—14.8 million euros

The rates of export refund vary by product and over time and the cost per pound weight is not readily available.

Fallen Stock

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effect of a ban on the disposal of fallen stock. [129113]

Alun Michael: The Animal By-Products Regulations 2003 permit hunt kennels to continue collecting fallen stock; however they will be required to upgrade to knackers' yard standards if they wish to collect fallen stock for the purposes of feeding to hounds. The effect of a ban on hunting would depend on decisions made by those who currently offer a service and on choices made by farmers leading to takeup of the national scheme. Most hunts already make a charge and there is no reason why such a service should not continue as a business opportunity when hunting wild mammals with dogs is banned.

Departmental Staff

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many jobs under the remit of her Department in (a) the core department and (b) executive agencies are in (i) Scotland, (ii) England, excluding Greater London, (iii) Greater London, (iv) Wales, (v) Northern Ireland and (vi) overseas, broken down by (A) whole-time equivalent jobs and (B) the percentage per individual department, body or organisation; if she will break down the figures in terms of responsibilities which apply to (1) England, (2) England and Wales and (3) the UK as a whole; and if she will list the non-departmental public bodies and independent statutory bodies for which information is not held centrally. [127308]

Alun Michael: The following table shows the number of permanent staff in Defra and its executive agencies that are located in the regions specified as at 1 April 2003.

	DEFRA		CEFAS		CSL		PSD
	FTE	%	FTE	%	FTE	%	FTE	%
Scotland	77.6	1.17	0.0	0.00	11.0	1.70	0.0	0.00
England, excluding G London	3,707.4	56.14	524.7	100.00	636.9	98.30	174.2	100.00
Greater London	2,680.8	40.59	0.0	0.00	0.0	0.00	0.0	0.00
Wales	135.2	2.05	0.0	0.00	0.0	0.00	0.0	0.00
Northern Ireland	0.0	0.00	0.0	0.00	0.0	0.00	0.0	0.00
Overseas	3.0	0.05	0.0	0.00	0.0	0.00	0.0	0.00
Total	6,603.9	100.00	524.7	100.00	647.9	100.00	174.2	100.00

	RPA		VLA		VMD
	FTE	%	FTE	%	FTE	%
Scotland	0.0	0.00	44.0	3.40	0.0	0.00
England, excluding G London	3,370.9	99.94	1,218.3	94.15	119.3	100.00
Greater London	0.0	0.00	0.0	0.00	0.0	0.00
Wales	0.0	0.00	31.7	2.45	0.0	0.00
Northern Ireland	2.0	0.06	0.0	0.00	0.0	0.00
Overseas	0.0	0.00	0.0	0.00	0.0	0.00
Total	3,372.9	100.00	1,294.0	100.00	119.3	100.00

Due to the complexity of the department and the wide range of business areas that it covers, a break down of these figures in terms of responsibilities that apply to geographical areas could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The following non-departmental public bodies and independent statutory bodies are under the remit of Defra:

Executive

Agricultural Wages Board for England & Wales
Agricultural Wages Committee
Apple and Pear Research Council
British Potato Council
Countryside Agency
English Nature
Environment Agency
Food From Britain Council
Home Grown Cereals Authority
Horticulture Development Council
Horticulture Research International
Joint Nature Conservation Committee
Meat and Livestock Commission
Milk Development Council
National Forest Company
Regional Flood Defence Committee
Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew
Sea Fish Industry Authority
UK Register of Organic Food Standards
Wine Standards Board

Advisory

Advisory Committee on Business and the Environment
Advisory Committee on Consumer Products and the Environment
Advisory Committee on Hazardous Substances
Advisory Committee on Packaging
Advisory Committee on Pesticides
Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment
Agricultural Dwelling House Advisory Committee
Air Quality Expert Group
Committee of Investigation for Great Britain
Committee on Agricultural Valuation
Committee on Products and Processes for use in Public Water Supply

Committee on Radioactive Waste Management
Consumers Committee for Great Britain
Darwin Advisory Committee (the Darwin Initiative)
Expert Group on Cryptosporidium in Water Supplies
Expert Panel on Air Quality Standards
Farm Animal Welfare Council
Government-Industry Forum on non-food uses of crops
Hill Farming Advisory Committee
Integrated Administration and Control System (IACS) Appeals Panel
Independent Scientific Group on Cattle TB
Inland Waterways Amenity Advisory Council
Pesticide Residues Committee
Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee
Royal Commission on Environment Pollution
Science Advisory Council
Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee (SEAC)
Sustainable Development Commission
Sustainable Development Education Panel
Veterinary Products Committee
Veterinary Residues Committee
Water Regulations Advisory Committee
Zoos Forum

Tribunals

Agricultural Land Tribunal
Dairy Produce Quota Tribunal
Plant Varieties and Seeds Tribunal
Commons Commissioners

Public corporation

British Waterways Board
Covent Garden Market Authority

Lantra

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with representatives from Lantra on the delivery of its strategic plan. [130541]

Alun Michael: I have met the Chairman and senior directors of Lantra on several occasions to discuss a range of matters relating to Lantra's activities, including progress towards meeting the organisation's strategic objectives, and I will continue to do so.

Levies

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the levies, expressed in sterling per pound weight, are for (a) fruit, (b) vegetables and (c) sugar. [128821]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 10 September 2003]: EU import duties on fresh fruit and vegetables are set for a range of products on an ad valorem basis. For some products, an additional or minimum sum based on an amount per kilo is payable. The relevant duty rate is applied to the customs value which is normally based on the price actually paid or payable for the goods. However, for certain products, simplified rules are in place which allow a standard unit value to be used as the customs value; these are updated fortnightly. The simplified procedure values in force from 29 August to 11 September are as follows:

Simplified procedure GIF values for certain perishable goods in pounds sterling per 100kg net
Effective period 29/08/2003 to 11/09/2003

SPV Code	Description	Value/ 100kgs (£s)	Value/pence per pound
1.10	New potatoes	0.00	0
1.30	Onions (other than seed)	15.00	6.8
1.40	Garlic	75.25	34.14
1.50	Leeks	28.35	12.86
1.60	Cauliflowers	0.00	0.0
1.70	Brussels sprouts	0.00	0.0
1.80	White cabbages and red cabbages	36.21	16.42
1.90	Sprouting broccoli or calabrese (Brassica oleracea L. convar.botrytis (L) Alef. Var. italica	42.50	19.28
1.100	Chinese cabbage	37.55	17.03
1.110	Cabbage lettuce (head lettuce)	0.00	0.0
1.120	Endives	0.00	0.0
1.130	Carrots	12.56	5.70
1.140	Radishes	63.91	28.99
1.160	Peas (Pisum sativum)	222.41	100.88
1.170	Beans:
1.170.1	Beans (Vigna Spp. Phaseolus spp.)	65.88	29.88
1.170.2	Beans (Phaseolus ssp. Vulgaris var. Compressus Savi)	64.90	29.44
1.180	Broad beans	0.00	0.0
1.190	Globe artichokes	0.00	0.0
1.200	Asparagus
1.200.1	-green	174.04	78.94
1.200.2	-other	150.99	68.49
1.210	Aubergines (eggplants)	54.99	24.94
1.220	Ribbed celery (Apium graveolens L. var dulce (Mill) Pers.)	54.76	24.84
1.230	Chantarelles	503.43	228.35
1.240	Sweet peppers	73.05	33.14
1.250	Fennel	0.00	0.0
1.270	Sweet potatoes, whole, fresh (intended for human consumption)	66.01	29.94
2.10	Chestnuts (Castanea spp.), fresh	0.00	0.0
2.30	Pineapples, fresh	69.60	31.57
2.40	Avocados, fresh	116.74	52.95

Simplified procedure GIF values for certain perishable goods in pounds sterling per 100kg net
Effective period 29/08/2003 to 11/09/2003

SPV Code	Description	Value/ 100kgs (£s)	Value/pence per pound
2.50	Guavas and mangoes, fresh	103.37	46.89
2.60	Sweet oranges, fresh
2.60.1	-Sanguines and semi-sangunes	29.89	13.56
2.60.2	-Navels, Navelines, Navelates, Salustianas, Vernas, Valencia lates, Maltese, Shamoutis, Ovalis, Trovita and Hamlins	32.33	14.66
2.60.3	-Others	29.94	13.58
2.70	Mandarins (including tangerines and satsumas), fresh; clementines, wilkings and similar citrus nybrids, fresh:
2.70.1	-Clementines	57.05	25.88
2.70.2	-Monreales and Satsumas	46.00	20.87
2.70.3	-Mandarins and wilkings	52.41	23.77
2.70.4	-Tangerines and others	47.05	21.34
2.85	Limes (Citrus aurantifolia), fresh	49.40	22.41
2.90	Grapefruit, fresh:
2.90.1	-white	35.49	16.10
2.90.2	-pink	62.00	21.12
2.100	Table grapes	0.00	0.0
2.100	Water melons	16.51	7.49
2.120	Melons (other than water melons):
2.120.1	-Amarillo, Cuper, Honey Dew (including Cantalene), Ontenient, Piel de Sapo (including Verde Liso), Rochet, Tendral, Futoro	85.16	38.63
2.120.2	-other	107.39	48.71
2.140	Pears
2.140.1	Pears—Nashi (Pyrus pyrifolia)	0.00	0.0
2.140.2	Other	0.00	0.0
2.150	Apricots	146.89	66.63
2.160	Cherries	330.01	149.69
2.170	Peaches	0.00	0.0
2.180	Nectarines	0.00	0.0
2.190	Plums	0.00	0.0
2.200	Strawberries	272.15	123.45
2.205	Raspberries	210.99	95.70
2.210	Fruit of the species Vaccinium myrtillus (Bilberries)	285.76	129.62
2.220	Kiwi fruit (Actinidia chinensis Planch)	120.14	54.50
2.230	Pomegranates	216.14	98.04
2.240	Khakis (including Sharon fruit)	236.07	107.08
2.250	Lychees	128.96	58.50

The current import duty on (non-preferential) sugar imported into the EU is 419 euros per tonne. This equivalent to about 13p per pound.

Light Pollution

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps are being taken to deal with light pollution, with particular reference to domestic security equipment not requiring planning permission. [128413]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra considered the control of nuisance caused by security lighting in its recent consultation "Living Places—Powers, Rights, Responsibilities".

The paper sought opinions as to whether the Government should introduce new regulations for the positioning of external lighting (including domestic or security lighting, but excluding street lights); and whether the remit of the statutory nuisance regime should be extended to include such lighting. The consultation period closed on 14 February. A summary of the comments received to this consultation exercise has now been published. Most respondents felt that the statutory nuisance regime would be the most effective option, but issues were highlighted regarding the need to identify a feasible means of assessing external light for enforcement purpose. Copies of the summary report have been placed in both houses, and it is also available at: www.defra.gov.uk/environment/consult/pubspace/index.htm.

The House of Commons Select Committee on Science and Technology recently held an inquiry into light pollution and astronomy. This focused on the effectiveness of measures taken to reduce the impact of light pollution on astronomy and considered what further steps, if any, are required. The outcome of the inquiry will be published in due course and will be made available on the House of Commons' website.

The Government will consider its future course of action taking into consideration any recommendations and conclusions emerging from the Select Committee's inquiry and from Defra's recent consultation exercise.

Sheep Dip

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the extent to which farmers use arable cypermethrin for sheep dip; what the implications of its inappropriate use are in terms of risk to (a) the environment, (b) animal health and (c) human health; and if she will make a statement. [129185]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 11 September 2003]: Cypermethrin is included as an active ingredient in 12 products currently authorised for use as veterinary medicines, including a number of sheep dips. All of these products have been fully assessed against a number of statutory criteria designed to assure their safety, quality and efficacy for this use.

However my officials are currently investigating reports that suggest that a number of farmers may be purchasing an arable form of cypermethrin for use illegally to dip sheep. Although these investigations are at an early stage we have identified a number of sheep farmers in the Ceredigion region of South Wales who do not grow arable crops but who recently have purchased arable cypermethrin products.

The arable product has been assessed for use as a pesticide, not as a sheep dip. It is not possible accurately to quantify the risks to the environment, animal health or human health from the illegal use of arable cypermethrin products as sheep dips as more information is required on how the product has actually been used. We are trying to collect this information and will carry out a risk assessment as soon as we are able. However, from the limited information currently available, our main concern relates to the potential environmental damage that might be caused by the inappropriate use, and disposal, of such products.

Training Opportunities (Countryside)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what training opportunities are available for those working in the countryside. [130588]

Alun Michael: With the exception of schemes targeted at particular industry sectors, such as the Vocational Training Scheme provided under the England Rural Development Programme, people working in the countryside are entitled to the same wide and diverse range of training opportunities as people working elsewhere. The pattern of provision varies from place to place. Issues which are specific to the countryside, such as access to training for people living in remote rural areas, are being examined in the Department's Learning Skills and Knowledge Review.

Urban Commons

Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what types of development are permissible on land designated as urban common under the Law of Property Act 1925; and whether such development requires approval by the Secretary of State; [129436]

(2) under what circumstances the erection of fencing is permitted on land designated as registered urban common under the Law of Property Act 1925. [129437]

Alun Michael: Under the provisions of section 194 of the Law of Property Act 1925, the Secretary of State's consent is required for any works which prevent or impede access to any land which, on 1 January 1926, was subject to rights of common. Such consent is separate from any other consent that might be needed, for example, under planning legislation.

It is not possible to say what types of work might receive the Secretary of State's consent, or in what circumstances such consent might be granted. Each application is treated on its individual merits after full consideration of all relevant factors. Details of any proposed works would have to be advertised in the local press.

Varroa

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research her Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on chemical resistant varroa mites; and what plans she has to contain the spread of varroa mites. [113257]

Mr. Bradshaw: Controlling varroa is still the single most important challenge to UK beekeeping today. The pest is now endemic across much of the UK. Defra (and MAFF before it) has been funding a range of measures applied by the National Bee Unit under the Department's bee health programme, and R&D to better equip beekeepers to manage varroa infestations in their colonies ever since it was first detected in Devon in 1992. These measures include the provision of a free diagnostic and inspection service as well as training and education to enable beekeepers to become self-reliant in controlling the mite through improved bee husbandry.

The Department has not yet commissioned any R&D on resistant mites, although current research investigating biological control methods for varroa is extremely relevant given the presence in England and Wales of varroa mites resistant to Apistan and Bayvarol, until recently the only two varroacides authorised for use in the UK.

As has been demonstrated on the Continent, the varroa mite will develop resistance to most chemicals applied to control it; the spread of resistance is therefore inevitable. However, with foresight, the National Bee Unit began implementing a surveillance programme monitoring apiaries for signs of resistance in early 2000. As a result, the UK has been one of only a few countries that has been able to detect resistance before it has become fully established, thus enabling us to take action to help beekeepers treat affected colonies at an early stage. Although resistance is more widespread this year, the recent introduction on the UK market of a new treatment for varroa is welcome. Unlike Apistan and Bayvarol, the new product, Apiguard, is not based on a pyrethroid active ingredient and beekeepers will be able to use this, along with other controls, in particular Integrated Pest Management, which we are strongly advocating, to combat pyrethroid resistant mites.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Music Piracy

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what assessment she has made of the effect of web music piracy on (a) music sales and (b) the cost of legally purchased music; [128132]

(2) what action she is taking to prevent web music piracy. [128133]

Mr. Timms: We have studied various and somewhat contradictory assessments that have been made by others considering the effect of music piracy on the internet on music sales and the cost of legally purchased music. These suggest that reliable evaluation of the relationship would be difficult. Moreover, my understanding is that much illegal file sharing on the internet is illegal private copying rather than piracy which further adds to the difficulty of an evaluation.

Although UK copyright law already provides strong protection for those who own rights in music, our implementation in the UK of the EU Copyright Directive will clarify these rights and introduce criminal offences for internet music piracy, that is wilful illegal transmission of music on the internet when conducted at least on a commercial scale. The increasing availability of legitimate music tracks on the internet should also assist in encouraging those engaged in illegal private copying to desist and the clarification of the law resulting from the Copyright Directive should enable the music industry to trade online with even greater confidence.

Civil Relationships Registration Scheme

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the rights which a married couple have, but a couple under the proposed civil relationships registration scheme would not have. [129235]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 11 September 2003]: The consultation paper on civil partnership explains the main proposed rights and responsibilities that the Government has identified as important for same-sex couples who choose to register their partnerships. We are currently consulting on whether there are any significant rights and responsibilities not mentioned in the paper that should be addressed.

Coal Investment Aid

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many applications have been received in respect of coal investment aid; from which companies the applications were received; how many applicants have been successful; and what aid was awarded in respect of each application. [129214]

Mr. Timms: 14 applications were received by 31 July 2003. Details are on the DTI website at: www.dt.gov.uk/energy/coal/invest_aid/index They are still being assessed and no aid has yet been awarded.

Corporate Responsibility Bill

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what consultation her Department is holding on the Corporate Responsibility Bill; which companies have been informed of this consultation; and which other stakeholders have been asked for their views. [127967]

Jacqui Smith: The Department is not holding or planning any consultation on the Corporate Responsibility Bill though we have received views from MPs and the public.

Illegal Imports

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the import of products produced in illegal ways in the United Kingdom. [127596]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 8 September 2003]: All imports to the United Kingdom must be in compliance with the controls and conditions laid down in national or European Community legislation.

Langage Power Station

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the time period for commencement of the construction of the gas fired power station at Langage, Plymouth expires; and if she will make a statement. [129705]

Mr. Timms: 14 November 2005. The consent and associated planning permission of 15 November 2000 make clear that development must begin within five years for the permissions to remain valid.

Mineworkers' Compensation

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much money the Government paid to the Union of Democratic Mineworkers for processing vibration white finger and respiratory coal health claims. [129201]

Nigel Griffiths: None.

Ministerial Visits

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the occasions since 1997 when ministers from her Department have accompanied British firms on visits overseas to promote export marketing and sales, indicating the name of the minister and the country visited in each case. [128406]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 9 September 2003]: Ministers take every opportunity to accompany British firms on visits overseas in order to help increase trade and investment opportunities, and boost British exports.

For example, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry led a senior business delegation to India in January 2003. I and my hon Friend, the Under-secretary of State for Small Business also led trade missions to India in November 2002 and February 2003 respectively.

My hon. Friend, the Minister for Trade and Investment, led a senior business delegation to China as part of the Prime Minister's visit in July 2003. His predecessor, my noble Friend Baroness Symons, now the Minister for State for the Middle East led a business delegation to Brazil in March 2002.

My hon. Friend the Member for Cunninghame North the then Minister of State for Energy and Construction, supported the UK presence at the Caspian Oil and Gas show in Azerbaijan in June 2003. He also went to Houston, USA in May 2003 for the Offshore Technology Conference (where over 100 UK companies were exhibiting); to Brazil in September 2002 for the Rio de Janeiro Oil and Gas Show; and to Stavanger, Norway, in August 2002 for the Offshore Northern Seas Exhibition. Full information on all visits is not, however, recorded centrally in the form requested and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Nuclear Safety

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will undertake an assessment of safety at nuclear power stations following the recent heatwave; and if she will make a statement. [128769]

Mr. Timms: No. Assessment of safety of UK nuclear installations is for the operators licensed by the safety regulator, the Health and Safety Executive (HSE). Since all the UK nuclear stations that were operating during the heatwave depend on sea water, not river water for their cooling, the rise in the temperature of the cooling water remained well within the limits allowed by the various plant safety cases. HSE maintained regulatory vigilance during this period and was satisfied that safety case limits were not threatened by the hot weather.

Royal Mail

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions have taken place with Royal Mail representatives regarding the use of railways to transport mail; and what measures have been taken to reduce redundancies. [128243]

Mr. Timms: The Department meets Royal Mail on a regular basis to discuss a range of issues, including progress on the transport review.

Royal Mail envisage that the implementation of the whole transport review will impact on around 2,500 jobs across various parts of its distribution operation, including around 150 in rail.

Royal Mail will seek to achieve any job losses through natural wastage and redeployment of staff within other parts of Royal Mail.

Royal Mail has advised that it has not ruled out the use of rail in the future, and is still talking to a number of rail freight operators who believe they can offer a commercially viable rail solution.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) (what funding the Government provided for the development of partnership working between Royal Mail and trades unions representing employees in its United Kingdom Mails division in (a) 2002–03 and (b) 2003–04; [128530]

(2) what representations her Department has made to the management of Royal Mail on the development of partnership working in Royal Mail; [128531]

(3) what asessment she has made of progress in developing partnership working between the management and trades unions in Royal Mail. [128532]

Mr. Timms: Royal Mail were awarded £50,000 under the Partnership at Work Fund in 2002–03 to introduce partnership working at regional, national and area level with the Communication Workers Union and the Communication Managers' Association.

The Department meets Royal Mail on a regular basis to discuss a range of issues including progress on developing partnership working. Good progress has been made in setting up a Partnership framework since Lord Sawyer's review in 2001, but there is still some way to go and the current process has stalled. The Department, wherever possible, continues to encourage the management and unions to take forward the Partnership approach set out by Lord Sawyer.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the expenditure by Royal Mail on external consultancy services was in (a) 2000–01, (b) 2001–02 and (c) 2002–03. [128533]

Mr. Timms: Expenditure by Royal Mail on external consultancy services is an operational matter for the company. I have, therefore, asked the Chief Executive of Royal Mail to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions has she had with industry stakeholders with regard to Postcomm's proposed terms of access to Royal Mail services. [129195]

Mr. Timms: Ministers regularly receive representations on a range of postal issues. Access pricing policy is, however, a matter for the regulator. The regulator is currently examining the results of its public consultation on this issue, to which a number of industry stakeholders have commented. A full list of respondents and details of representations received are shown on their website: http://www.postcomm.gov.uk

Jeff Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many lorry movements in and out of Royal Mail terminals have taken place in each of the last three years. [129690]

Mr. Timms: This is an operational matter for Royal Mail Group plc. I have therefore asked the Deputy Chairman of Royal Mail to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Science and Engineering (Women Employees)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many women work in the science, engineering and technology industries in the UK and what percentage of all workers in those industries were women in each of the last 10 years. [127658]

Mr. Timms: Data are only available for spring 2001, 2002 and 2003. The information requested is not available in a consistent basis prior to spring 2001, due to a change in the occupation classification used in the Labour Force Survey, from SOC90 to SOC2000.

Women employed in science, engineering and technology occupations—United Kingdom, springs (March to May) 2001, 2002 and 2003

Not seasonally adjusted

March to May	Thousand	Percentage[1]
2001	335	14.1
2002	337	14.6
2003	302	12.8

[1] Women as a percentage of all employed in science, engineering and technology occupations.

Source:
ONS Labour Force Survey.

Telecommunications

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment her Department has made of the number of telecommunications-related jobs that have been lost to overseas competition in the last six years; and if she will make a statement. [129388]

Mr. Timms: The Department of Trade and Industry has not made an assessment of whether any telecoms related jobs have been lost to overseas competition in the last six years. Despite a severe global downturn in the telecoms industry that has resulted in the loss of a number of telecoms related jobs world-wide, official statistics suggest that employment in telecoms in Great Britain has been relatively stable.

Employment in the GB[1] telecommunications industry

	Employment (thousand)
1998	194
1999	209
2000	236
2001	248
2002	[2]236
2003	[3]238

[1] Data for GB do not include Northern Ireland.
[2] Data as at December 2002.
[3] Data as at March 2003.
Sources:
1998 to 2001 figures: Annual Business Inquiry Data, Industry 64.2. Telecommunications 2002 to 2003 Labour Market Trends (Monthly Report) July 2003.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Modern Apprenticeships

Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the percentage of young people in modern apprenticeships who are from (a) one parent families and (b) households in receipt of housing benefit. [129120]

Alan Johnson: The Youth Cohort Study (YCS) for England and Wales provides information on the activities of young people who have completed compulsory education. For the cohort of 16 and 17-year-olds who completed their compulsory education in 2001, the YCS estimates that 20 per cent. of those on Modern Apprenticeships were from lone parent families. The proportion of young people from lone parent families for the cohort as a whole was 22 per cent. The YCS does not collect information about the receipt of housing benefit.

Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average pay of young people on Modern Apprenticeships was in the last year for which figures are available, broken down by job type. [129121]

Alan Johnson: The rate of pay for a Modern Apprentice is agreed by the employer and the individual apprentice. Modern Apprentices are either paid a wage by their employer or receive a training allowance. The minimum training allowance is £40 per week.

The Youth Cohort Study (YCS) for England and Wales provides information on the activities of young people who have completed compulsory education. According to the YCS, for the cohort who completed compulsory education in 2001, the average pay for 16 and 17-year-olds who were either waged or paid a training allowance was £88 per week. For the cohort who completed compulsory education in 1999, the corresponding rate of pay for 18 and 19-year-olds was £133 per week.

The YCS does not collect information by job type for Modern Apprenticeships.

Specialist Teaching (Sign Language)

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools in the UK specialise in teaching those who are hard of hearing; what funding is afforded to them; where sign language is taught in state schools; and if he will make a statement. [128251]

Mr. Miliband: The Department does not hold this information for Scotland, Wales or Northern Ireland. In England, there are 1,088 maintained special schools, of which 13 have hearing impairment as their primary category of need, and three have hearing impairment as their secondary category of need. In addition, there are eight non-maintained special schools which specialise in hearing impairment.

According to a survey conducted by the British Association of Teachers of the Deaf (BATOD) in 2000, of the 25,019 children taught by teachers of the deaf, 67 per cent. were in mainstream schools, 14 per cent. in units attached to mainstream schools, and 19 per cent. in special schools.

In maintained special schools, funding is usually related to a set number of places, with the individual place cost determined by the complexity of learning needs that the school has to address. The average budget share for a pupil in a maintained special school is £10,800. Government support for non-maintained special schools comes primarily from the Devolved Capital Formula, the Standards Fund and School Standards Grant.

The Department does not hold records centrally indicating where sign bilingualism is taught in schools. However, the BATOD survey suggested that sign bilingualism was used by 6 per cent. of children (601 in schools for the deaf and 410 in units attached to mainstream schools).

Adult Non-vocational Courses

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the extent to which provision of adult non-vocational courses meets the needs of the community in West Herts; and what representations he will make on this issue. [129145]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 11 September 2003]: The Learning and Skills Council has responsibility for planning and funding non-vocational adult education provided through local education authorities. The local LSC for Hertfordshire has recently commissioned a Strategic Options Review of West Hertfordshire College, which is due to report at the end of September 2003. Nationally we recently reaffirmed our intention to safeguard such courses and opportunities for all adult learners, 21st Century Skills, Realising Our Potential, July 2003.

Animal Experiments

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps he is taking to enable students studying for science degrees and doctorates to avoid taking part in animal experiments they do not wish to participate in. [129268]

Alan Johnson: Higher education institutions in the UK are independent, autonomous bodies and are responsible for the content and delivery of their own programmes. Students with particular concerns about aspects of course content would need to discuss this with their prospective university before deciding to enrol. However, independent bodies like the Universities Federation for Animal Welfare can offer advice and guidance to universities and individuals on the welfare and ethical use of animals in education and science.

Early Literacy Programme

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to his answer of 25 Jun 2003, Official Report, column 777W, on the Early Literacy Programme, when the 'Go Karts' early literacy support video was withdrawn from use; and for what reasons the video was withdrawn. [128544]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The 'Go Karts' sequence was one of a number included in the Early Literacy Support (ELS) video made available to local authorities in September 2000, as part of the first national training of Reception and Year 1 teachers and teaching assistants. The specific purpose of this sequence was to provide training to Reception teachers about the ELS programme. Revisions were made to the video and training materials that were sent to schools in September 2001, specifically to support the implementation of the programme in Year 1.

Learning and Skills Council

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) whether the Learning and Skills Council National Contracting Service is required to take account of existing contractual agreements and relationships that a local Learning and Skills Council and local providers already have with industry when issuing contracts to national providers; [129417]

(2) at what stage of the process local Learning and Skills Councils and providers will be informed of the intention to issue a contract through the Learning and Skills Council National Contracting Service; [129418]

(3) if he will list by (a) value of contract and (b) region, the contracts that have been issued by the Learning and Skills Council National Contracting Service to fund, or part fund, employer-based learning; [129419]

(4) how many contracts have been issued by the Learning and Skills Council National Contracting Service to offer free training for a qualification; how many of these were in areas where an existing locally-based contract was already present; and if he will make a statement. [129420]

Alan Johnson: These are matters for the Learning and Skills Council. John Harwood, the Council's Chief Executive, will write to my hon. Friend with the information requested and place a copy of his reply in the Library.

Further Education

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills for what reasons (a) further education tuition for adults to Level 2 will be free and (b) tuition to Level 3 will be charged for. [129698]

Alan Johnson: In making decisions about public funds we have to prioritise so that funding is targeted where it will make the most difference. Over 7 million adults in the workforce in England do not possess level 2 or equivalent qualifications. These individuals are more likely to lack the foundation of skills they need for employability, and are less likely to get a secure, well paid job. In contrast, the higher wages paid to people with qualifications above level 2 offer a greater incentive for both individuals and employers to invest in learning. The entitlement to free tuition for individuals studying for a first full level 2 qualification, to which the right hon. Gentleman refers, will enable individuals to achieve a level of educational attainment that will provide them with a with a platform of skills for employability, enable them to improve their position in the labour market and increase their chances of undertaking further learning.

This focus on using public funds to help people reach level 2 should be seen within a wider strategy which encourages up-skilling and re-skilling at all levels. To that end, the Government will provide increased support for individuals developing their skills and qualifications at level 3 in priority sectors and to meet specific regional skills needs. We believe that this is the fairest way to manage participation in further education, and make productivity gains with public investment.

Higher Education

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether, subject to access requirements, universities will be able to charge top-up fees for Foundation Degrees. [129730]

Alan Johnson: Foundation Degrees are, and will be subject to the same funding arrangements as other Higher Education qualifications.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the Office of Fair Access will be empowered to consider the adequacy of (a) financial and (b) pastoral support available to students at higher education institutions. [129763]

Alan Johnson: We said in "Widening Participation in Higher Education" that the role of the Office for Fair Access would be to consider and approve universities' access agreements, where an institution intended to charge variable fees in excess of the standard fee (currently £1,125) for any of their courses. Institutions will draw up their own agreements, which must set out the fee levels they wish to charge and the courses to which higher fees will apply; the outreach work they plan to undertake; the bursaries and other financial support they will make available; and the milestones against which they intend to measure progress towards their widening participation ambitions. These are the features which OFFA will consider.

Student Income and Expenditure Survey

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when he plans to publish the latest Student Income and Expenditure Survey. [129702]

Alan Johnson: The Department has received a draft report of the 2002/03 Student Income and Expenditure Survey from the contractor and is currently considering comments from the steering committee; including representation from the NUS and UUK. The Department will announce a date for publication once a finalised report has been received from the contractor.

Tuition Fees

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what account is taken when assessing levels of tuition fee payments of the number of children within a family intending to go to university that the student's parents will have to support. [129094]

Alan Johnson: Support for dependent students under 25 in higher education is based on a financial assessment of their parents' gross income in the previous financial year. In the academic year 2003/04, parents will not make any contribution to their children's support if their residual income is below £20,970 a year.

Where there is more than one child in higher education, the total parental contribution is limited to the amount that would be assessed if there were only one student child. The parental contribution is then apportioned between the number of children in the family studying a course of higher education. Therefore, where parents have more than one student child, there is no higher assessed parental contribution to make to their student support.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what controls are in place on the level of tuition fees for Masters Degree courses; and whether financial assistance is available for those unable to pay. [129095]

Alan Johnson: The Government do not regulate the levels of fee charged for Masters Degree courses: it is for Higher Education Institutions to decide what level of fee they will charge. The Government do not make available assistance in the form of grants for fees for students undertaking Masters Degrees. The research councils and the Arts and Humanities Research Board provide a number of studentships and research grants each year for postgraduate students, including some on Masters courses depending on the field of study. These are allocated on a competitive basis.

University Entry Criteria

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many United Kingdom universities accept (a) vocational and (b) work-based learning qualifications as entry criteria; and if he will make a statement. [129524]

Alan Johnson: Universities are taking into account an increasingly wide range of evidence when making decisions about a candidate's suitability. The extent to which vocational and work-based learning qualifications are taken into account varies from course to course, but they are particularly relevant for more vocationally orientated courses such as foundation degrees. However, this is a matter for universities and we have no figures on the number of courses for which vocational or work-based qualifications are taken into account in assessing a student's suitability.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Micro-finance

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what action he is taking to increase support for micro-finance through the World Bank. [129859]

Hilary Benn: The Department for International Development provides extensive financial and technical support for the development of microfinance globally. Much of this work involves collaboration with The World Bank. DFID is an active member of The Consultative Group to Assist the Poorest (CGAP), a 29-member organisation of donors and private foundations committed to the spread of best practice and the expansion of microfinance worldwide.

CGAP is based in Washington DC, and is supervised by the World Bank, its largest shareholder. DFID currently chairs CGAP's Executive Committee, and works with the organisation in many developing countries to help commercialise microfinance institutions, extend their outreach to more clients, and diversify the range of financial services they offer poor clients from credit to savings, insurance, leasing and remittances.

DFID also collaborates with World Bank officials in several of its country programmes including Uganda, Bangladesh, and Afghanistan. This involves co-ordinating programmes to develop the financial sector, and to mainstream microfinance into the formal banking system. DFID also supports programmes of the International Finance Corporation (IFC) in the World Bank Group in the Balkans, Africa, South Asia China and the Mekong. These programmes improve the policy and regulatory environment for small enterprise development, and support the expansion of private banks and non-governmental organisations that provide microfinance services.

Afghanistan

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development (1) what improvements have been introduced in Afghanistan to ensure improved heath care for women and children in the last year; [129683]

(2) what assistance the Government have provided towards improved maternity and neonatal care in Afghanistan. [129691]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The Afghanistan Transitional Administration has asked donors to concentrate on a few key areas of the reconstruction effort where they can have most impact. In response to this the UK is concentrating on building the capacity of the Afghan Government, humanitarian aid and programmes to support the development of income generation.

We also fund Afghanistan's reconstruction effort through multi-lateral channels. The UK is the fourth largest donor to UNICEF and provided £44 million overall funding in 2002. We provide 19 per cent. of the European Union's £282 million package of reconstruction support for Afghanistan for 2003–04, of which £17.5 million is programmed for the health sector to help reduce infant and maternal mortality by providing a basic health care package. We are also contributing towards the World bank's Afghanistan Health Sector Emergency Reconstruction and Development Project, which aims to help expand delivery of basic health services and work to ensure equitable access, particularly for women and children.

Since April 2002 the European Commission has worked with the United States to rebuild 72 hospitals, clinics and women's health care centres, revise the national curriculum for midwives and vaccinate 4.3 million children against measles. Over 2003 and 2004, the EC will channel support through the Government to deliver health services to 3 million people and help to reduce the unacceptably high levels of child and maternal mortality.

UNICEF has supported Emergency Obstetric Care services in 20 districts and refurbished Malalai hospital, the largest maternity hospital in Kabul with 15,000 deliveries every year. UNICEF plans to launch other facilities in Kandahar, Herat and Jalalabad to build up the maternal health infrastructure.

Although health is not a key area of our bilateral support, we have funded consultants to the MoH to assist with policy and planning. One of these consultants played a major role in developing the country's interim health strategy.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what recent assessment he has made of the clearing of landmines in Afghanistan. [130298]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: At the end of 2002 an estimated 850 square kilometres of land in Afghanistan were still contaminated with anti-personnel and anti-tank landmines, as well as bombs dropped from aircraft and other explosive devices, such as mortars, which fail to detonate on impact but are still capable of exploding when they are touched or moved. As many as 300 people per month were injured or killed by landmines and unexploded ordnance last year.

The United Nations Mine Action Service (UNMAS) is responsible for co-ordinating 15 non-governmental organisations on behalf of the Government of Afghanistan for the clearing of mines and unexploded ordnance. We have provided £5.3 million funding to UNMAS over the last three years for their clearance operations in Afghanistan.

Since 1989, 754 square kilometres of minefields and former battle areas have been cleared or declared safe. In addition, the programme has overseen services that taught more than 2.4 million people how to identify and avoid mines and unexploded ordnance. In 2002 alone, the programme cleared mines and unexploded ordnance from about 111 square kilometres of land.

The Mine Action Programme for Afghanistan recently announced Afghanistan could be free from the threat of landmines and unexploded ordnance by 2012 if clearance operations continue at current levels and if international donor support is sustained.

Agricultural Produce (EU Reforms)

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what assessment has been made of the impact of EU reform of the (a) sugar, (b) oil, (c) cotton, (d) tobacco and (e) olive oil regimes on trade exports to the United Kingdom from (i) least developed countries covered by the Everything but Arms agreement and (ii) non-least developed countries in sub-Saharan Africa. [128615]

Hilary Benn: The Commission is analysing a number of options for reform of the EU sugar regime although, to date, no formal proposals have been made. DFID has already undertaken its own analysis on the impact on developing countries of the four families of reform options suggested by the Commission earlier this year. In addition, DFID has commissioned a study to explore the potential need for adjustment assistance for ACP countries with preferential access to the EU sugar market that may lose out from a reform of this regime. This analysis includes both least developed and non-least developed countries in sub-Saharan Africa. This study will be presented to the Commission.

As agreed at the Luxembourg Council (June 2003), the Commission is expected to release a second round CAP reform proposal covering olive oil, tobacco and cotton in autumn 2003. The reforms will be based on the approach and objectives of the June 2003 CAP reform. On receipt of these reform proposals, DFID will consider the issue of assessing their implications for developing countries. There have not been any recent changes to the EU oil seeds regime nor are there expected to be.

International Conference on Population and Development

Mrs Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development whether the Government intends to reaffirm its commitment to the International Conference on Population and Development's Programme of Action. [128388]

Hilary Benn: The Government remains firmly committed to the International Conference on Population and Development (ICPD)'s Programme of Action, including the target of achieving access to reproductive health for all by 2015. Reproductive Health continues to be a priority for DFID. We are convinced that reproductive health and rights are vital to making progress to attaining the Millennium Development Goals to combat HIV/AIDS and reduce maternal and child mortality. We also consider it a basic right of women and men to exercise informed and responsible choice in matters relating to their sexual and reproductive health.

The Government will continue to work with the international community to ensure that reproductive health receives the priority it demands. We plan to produce a public policy statement on reproductive health before the end of the year.

Iraq

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what further steps will be taken (a) to provide ongoing development and humanitarian aid for the reconstruction of Iraq and (b) to address the needs of the communities there. [128273]

Hilary Benn: The Department for International Development has now committed £198 million towards humanitarian and reconstruction assistance in Iraq. This money is being used to support essential services such as health care, food supply, electricity, water and sanitation, and to undertake reconstruction and mine clearance work. The aim is to achieve real and rapid improvements to the lives of ordinary Iraqi citizens. Most of the funding is channelled through United Nations agencies, the Red Cross and Red Crescent movement and NGOs, which have the capacity and experience to implement humanitarian and development programmes effectively on the ground. DFID is also financing projects managed by commercial companies. £20 million was recently approved for spare parts, equipment and rehabilitation work to improve service delivery in the power, fuel and water sectors in southern Iraq.

Future allocations will be considered in view of social and economic needs assessments under preparation by the UN, World Bank and IMF.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what measures the Department is taking to rebuild Iraq's seed supply. [128608]

Hilary Benn: The UN Food and Agriculture Organisation (FAO) is focusing its current activities in Iraq on the procurement and distribution of seed and other inputs for the winter planting season, which is the immediate priority for Iraqi farmers. DFID has provided £1,500,000 to FAO to support agriculture in conflict-affected areas of southern Iraq, including the provision of seed. In the longer term, priorities may include the creation of grain banks.

Sierra Leone

Mrs Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what progress is being made towards the alleviation of poverty in Sierra Leone. [129445]

Hilary Benn: There is insufficient data available since the end of the civil war to show trends in poverty reduction. In 2001, The Government of Sierra Leone published an Interim Poverty Reduction Strategy, focused on re-establishment of security and economic recovery. The Government hopes to complete a full Poverty Reduction Strategy by mid-2004. It will be the basis for targeting Government and donor resources on poverty reduction. The preparatory process includes a household expenditure survey and sector studies that will provide information on the extent and depth of poverty, a baseline for future monitoring and poverty reduction measures. We are providing extensive support to the preparation of the strategy.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefit Applications

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what estimate he has made of the average time taken to deal with an application made using the Pension Credit telephone application line; [128745]

(2) what targets he has set for dealing with applications made using the Pension Credit telephone application line. [128746]

Mr. Pond: The average time to complete a Pension Credit application for customers using the telephone application line is currently about 20 minutes. Reliable information on the time taken to process applications is not yet available. However, the Department's published Service Delivery Agreement includes a three-year target to ensure that Pension Credit applications are processed on average within 10 days once the necessary information and evidence has been obtained.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will require the Child Support Agency to provide evidence of its assessment of the financial status of (a) the parent in care and (b) the absent parent to either of the parties concerned if they request it. [127290]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. Brian Jenkins, dated 15 September 2003:

The Secretary of State in replying to your recent Parliamentary question about the Child Support Agency promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You ask if he will require the Child Support Agency to provide evidence of its assessment of the financial status of (a) the parent in care and (b) the absent parent to the parties concerned if they request it.

The Agency is only concerned with the financial status of a parent with care and a non-resident parent to the extent to what this is relevant in meeting their statutory functions.

An award notification is sent to both parties following a new or fresh calculation of maintenance liability. This notice provides information to enable both parties to understand how the amount has been arrived at, including the relevant income information. If either party wants to know more about the decision or they disagree, the notification advises them to contact the Agency who will then explain the decision in detail and answer any questions the client may have.

International Labour Organisations

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what plans the Government have to ratify (a) the International Labour Organisation Seafarers' Welfare Convention 163 (1987) and (b) the International Labour Organisation Seafarers' Welfare Recommendation 173 (1987); and if he will make a statement; [128754]

(2) if he will list International Labour Organisation conventions which the United Kingdom has (a) declined to sign and (b) not yet signed; and if he will make a statement. [128756]

Mr. Pond: The Government have no plans to ratify ILO Convention 163 for the reasons given in the 1989 White Paper (Cm 658), and notes that only 12 member states of the ILO have so far ratified. There is no procedure for ratifying an ILO recommendation. The United Kingdom is addressing the issue of seafarers' welfare by participating actively in ILO discussions aimed at consolidating the existing body of ILO maritime instruments within a new single instrument.

A total of 65 ILO conventions, including all of the 'core' ILO conventions, which cover freedom of association and the right to organise and collective bargaining; the elimination of forced and child labour; and the ending of discrimination in employment, are in force in the UK. We also observe in principle many of the requirements of unratified conventions. The ILO has recognised the need to keep its instruments under review and recently withdrew or shelved 27 out of date conventions, while next year's conference will consider the withdrawal of 16 out of date recommendations. The ILO has also recognised the importance of a coherent approach to labour standards including through the proposed new consolidated maritime instrument and the general discussion at this year's International Labour Conference which for the first time was based on an integrated approach, taking account of all existing ILO instruments in the area of occupational safety and health.

The table shows the ILO conventions which the United Kingdom has not ratified or has ratified and subsequently denounced. In recent years a number of conventions have been denounced automatically due to ratification of new, more up-to-date conventions which subsume the requirements of earlier instruments. We will continue to review unratified conventions.

ILO conventions which UK has not ratified or has ratified and subsequently denounced

Convention number	Date of adoption	Title	Denounced
1	1919	Hours of Work (Industry)
3	1919	Maternity Protection
4	1919	Night Work (women)	25.01.1937
5	1919	Minimum Age (Industry)	07.06.2000
6	1919	Night Work Of Young Persons (Industry)	04.10.1947
7	1920	Minimum Age (Sea)	07.06.2000
9	1920	Placing of Seamen
10	1921	Minimum Age (Agriculture)	07.06.2000
13	1921	White Lead (Painting)
14	1921	Weekly Rest (Industry)
15	1921	Minimum Age (Trimmers and Stokers)	07.06.2000
18	1925	Workmen's Compensation (Occupational Diseases)	29.04.1936
26	1928	Minimum Wage-Fixing Machinery	25.07.1985
27	1929	Marking of Weight (Packages Transported by Vessels)
30	1930	Hours of Work (Commerce and Offices)
33	1932	Minimum Age (Non-Industrial Employment)
41	1934	Night Work (Women) (Revised)	04.10.1947
45	1935	Underground Work (Women)	26.05.1988
47	1935	Forty-Hour Week
52	1936	Holidays with Pay
53	1936	Officers' Competency Certificates
54	1936	Holidays with Pay (Sea)
55	1936	Shipowners' Liability (Sick and Injured Seamen)
57	1936	Hours of Work and Manning (Sea)
58	1936	Minimum Age (Sea) (Revised)
59	1937	Minimum Age (Industry) (Revised)
62	1937	Safety Provisions (Building)
63	1938	Statistics of Wages and Hours of Work	27.05.1987
71	1946	Seafarers' Pensions
72	1946	Paid Vacations (Seafarers)
73	1946	Medical Examination (Seafarers)
75	1946	Accommodation of Crews
76	1946	Wages, Hours of Work and Manning (Sea)
77	1946	Medical Examination of Young Persons (Industry)
78	1946	Medical Examination of Young Persons (Non-Industrial Occupations)
79	1946	Night Work of Young Persons (Non-Industrial Occupations)
88	1948	Employment Service	06.08.1971
89	1948	Night Work (Women) (Revised)
90	1948	Night Work of Young Persons (Industry) (Revised)
93	1949	Wages, Hours of Work and Manning (Sea) (Revised)
94	1949	Labour Clauses (Public Contracts)	20.09.1982

ILO conventions which UK has not ratified or has ratified and subsequently denounced

Convention number	Date of adoption	Title	Denounced
95	1949	Protection of Wages	16.09.1983
96	1949	Fee-Charging Employment Agencies (Revised)
99	1951	Minimum Wage Fixing Machinery (Agriculture)	16.08.1994
101	1952	Holiday with Pay (Agriculture).	16.08.1994
103	1952	Maternity Protection (Revised)
106	1957	Weekly Rest (Commerce and Offices)
107	1957	Indigenous and Tribal Populations
109	1958	Wages, Hours of Work and Manning (Sea) (Revised)
110	1958	Plantations
112	1959	Minimum Age (Fishermen)
113	1959	Medical Examination (Fishermen)
117	1962	Social Policy (Basic Aims and Standards)
118	1962	Equality of Treatment (Social Security
119	1963	Guarding of Machinery
121	1964	Employment Injury Benefits
123	1965	Minimum Age (Underground Work)
125	1966	Fishermen's Competency Certificates
127	1967	Maximum Weight
128	1967	Invalidity, Old-Age and Survivors' Benefits
129	1969	Labour Inspection (Agriculture)
130	1969	Medical Care and Sickness Benefits
131	1970	Minimum Wage Fixing
132	1970	Holidays with Pay (Revised)
134	1970	Prevention of Accidents (Seafarers)
136	1971	Benzene
137	1973	Dock Work
139	1974	Occupational Cancer
143	1975	Migrant Workers (Supplementary Provisions)
145	1976	Continuity of Employment (Seafarers)
146	1976	Seafarers' Annual Leave with Pay
149	1977	Nursing Personnel
152	1979	Occupational Safety and Health (Dock Work)
153	1979	Hours of Work and Rest Periods (Road Transport)
154	1981	Collective Bargaining
155	1981	Occupational Safety and Health
156	1981	Workers with Family Responsibilities
157	1982	Maintenance of Social Security Rights
158	1982	Termination of Employment
159	1983	Vocational Rehabilitation and Employment (Disabled Persons)
161	1985	Occupational Health Services
162	1986	Asbestos Convention
163	1987	Seafarers' Welfare
164	1987	Health Protection and Medical Care (Seafarers)
165	1987	Social Security (Seafarers) (Revised)
166	1987	Repatriation of Seafarers (Revised)
167	1988	Safety and Health in Construction.
168	1988	Employment Promotion and Protection against Unemployment.
169	1989	Indigenous and Tribal Peoples
170	1990	Chemicals
171	1990	Night Work
172	1991	Working Conditions (Hotels and Restaurants)
173	1992	Protection of Workers' Claims (Employer's Insolvency)
174	1993	Prevention of Major Industrial Accidents
175	1994	Part-Time Work
176	1995	Safety and Health in Mines
177	1996	Home Work
179	1996	Recruitment and Placement of Seafarers
181	1997	Private Employment Agencies
183	2000	Maternity Protection
184	2001	Safety and Health in Agriculture
185	2003	Seafarers' Identity Documents

Notes:

1. Conventions 5, 7, 10, and 15 were denounced as a result of ratification of the Minimum Age Convention 138 (1973).
2. Convention 63 was denounced as a result of ratification of the Labour Statistics Convention 160 (1985).
3. Convention 18 was denounced on ratification of the revised Workmen's Compensation (Occupational Diseases) Convention 42 (1934).

Employment (People with Learning Disabilities)

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many adults with a learning disability were in unpaid employment in England for each year since 1997; what percentage this represents of people with a learning disability known to social services; and if he will make a statement. [127125]

Maria Eagle: The information is not available.

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the Government schemes intended to help adults with a learning disability move into paid employment; and if he will make a statement. [127126]

Maria Eagle: Adults with learning disabilities are able to access the full range of services provided by Jobcentre Plus. In addition Jobcentre Plus offers a range of programmes specifically tailored to the needs of disabled customers. These are, Access to Work, Work Preparation, Workstep and New Deal for Disabled People. These programmes are all aimed to help customers with disabilities, including learning disabilities, move into paid employment.

Access to these programmes is through Disability Employment Advisers (DEAs), who are based in Jobcentre and Jobcentre Plus offices. DEAs work closely with employers, employees and disabled people looking for work.

Workstep is the employment programme most suitable for many people with learning disabilities. Workstep provides tailored support for people with disabilities who have more complex barriers to finding and keeping work. It provides the support and opportunity for people to progress to unsupported employment where this is the right option for the individual. Of the 21,500 people accessing support through Workstep, 37 per cent. have a learning disability.

Pensioners (Means-tested Benefits)

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of pensioners were in receipt of means-tested benefits for each year between 1992 and 2002; and if he will make a statement. [128550]

Malcolm Wicks: The answer is in the table.

Pensioner beneficiaries of means-tested benefits[1] as a percentage of the population: Great Britain May 1992 to May 1999

	Beneficiaries aged 60 and over of means-tested benefits	Percentage of the population aged 60 and over
1992	Not available	Not available
1993	4,320,000	36.9
1994	4,180,000	35.8
1995	4,060,000	34.7
1996	3,940,000	33.6
1997	3,810,000	32.5
1998	3,670,000	31.1
1999	3,540,000	29.9
2000	3,420,000	28.7
2001	3,380,000	28.3
2002	3,290,000	27.6

Notes:

1. From 1993 to 1999 means-tested benefits included in the table are Income Support (IS), Jobseekers Allowance (Income Based) (JSA(IB)), Housing Benefit (HB), Community Charge Benefit (CCB)/Council Tax Benefit (CTB), Family Credit (FC) and Disability Working Allowance (DWA).
2. From 2000 to 2002 means-tested benefits included in the table are IS, JSA(IB), HB and CCB/CTB. FC and DWA were replaced by Working Families Tax Credit and Disabled Persons Tax Credit in October 1999 and are therefore not included in the figures for 2000, 2001 and 2002.
3. Overlaps between benefits have been removed.
4. Great Britain HB/CTB figures include estimates for local authorities that have not responded.
5. CTB data excludes Second Adult Rebate cases.
6. HB data excludes any Extended Payment cases.
7. Percentage for population has been calculated using the revised ONS population estimates for age group 60 and over, for 1993 to 2001.
8. Figures (except DWA) are based on 1 per cent. and 5 per cent. samples and therefore subject to sampling variation.
9. Beneficiaries of a benefit unit are the sum of claimants and their partners.

Source:

IAD Information Centre 5 per cent. and 1 per cent. samples

Pension Credit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what targets he has set for converting Minimum Income Guarantee claimants to Pension Credit. [128741]

Mr. Pond: The Department has a Service Delivery Agreement to maximise payments of Pension Credit from October 2003 by, among other measures, converting all existing Minimum Income Guarantee recipients automatically to Pension Credit. The process of conversion is on course to be completed by October 2003.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many operators work on the Pension Credit telephone application line; and what plans he has to increase this number; [128738]

(2) how many call centres deal with Pension Credit telephone applications; and what their locations are; [128739]

(3) whether calls to the Pension Credit telephone application line will be handled by private contractors. [128750]

Mr. Pond: The Pension Credit application line currently has just over 1,100 whole-time equivalent staff, rising to around 1,500 when Pension Credit is implemented in October 2003. The application line is based at four sites in Cardiff, Dearne Valley, Derby and Newcastle. The Pension Service is working in partnership with Ventura, an experienced provider of contact centre services. Ventura is providing expertise in the running of the operation and also providing the staff and facilities to handle calls at the Dearne Valley site.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions who has been awarded the contract for developing the new IT system to deliver Pension Credit; what the estimated contract value is; and on what date he expects the system to become operational. [128747]

Mr. Pond: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 8 July 2003, Official Report, column 762W.

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners he estimates will benefit from the pensioners' credit in Eltham; and what the average gain will be per pensioner (a) in the UK and (b) in Eltham. [129412]

Mr. Pond: The information requested is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

Estimates of Pension Credit entitlement are not available at individual constituency level due to insufficient sample cases in the survey data used. However, around half of all pensioner households nationally will be eligible for Pension Credit, and the average gain per year will be around £400.

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he is taking to encourage pensioners to claim the pensioners' credit. [129413]

Mr. Pond: The Pension Service began writing to pensioner households in April, to explain Pension Credit and to invite advance applications. In addition, around 1.8 million people in receipt of the Minimum Income Guarantee have been told that they will be transferred automatically to Pension Credit ready for payments to be made from October 2003. By June 2004, all pensioner households will have been contacted. These direct mail arrangements are being supported by a national TV and press advertising campaign, which began on 3 September. The Pension Service is also working with partner organisations at national and local level to encourage take-up of the new entitlement. The Pension Credit freephone application line, which became operational on 7 April, enables our trained staff to help pensioners through the application form and complete it for them over the telephone. Friends and family can use the application line and apply on a pensioner's behalf.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Agriculture Training

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many and what percentage of the workforce in agriculture hold vocational qualifications at NVQ Level 3 or higher in Northern Ireland. [128277]

Mr. Pearson: Information is not available on numbers in the total agricultural labour force with vocational qualifications at NVQ Level 3 or higher. The information that is available is summarised as follows.

The social survey of farmers and farm families (excluding hired workers) carried out in 2000–01 indicated that:

7,029 farmers and regular family workers on family farms (18.9 per cent. of total) had general qualifications (excl. apprenticeships) at or above NVQ Level 3 or equivalent—as well as vocational qualifications in all disciplines, this includes "A" Levels and other non-vocational qualifications;

9,347 farmers and regular family workers on family farms (25.1 per cent. of total) had general qualifications (incl. apprenticeships) at or above NVQ Level 3 or equivalent;

2,131 farmers and regular family workers on family farms (5.7 per cent. of total) had agricultural qualifications at or above NVQ Level 3 or equivalent.

In 2000, the EU Farm Structure Survey indicated that 3,888 farmers, family and regular hired workers (6.4 per cent. of workforce) had undertaken a formal agricultural course of less than two years and 2,101 people (3.5 per cent. of workforce) had undertaken a formal agricultural course of more than two years duration. However there was no assessment of level of qualification.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many business development training places for farmers there were in each Northern Ireland constituency in the last year for which figures are available. [R] [128278]

Mr. Pearson: During the 2002–03 financial year a total of 3,617 business development training places were available for farmers on the Good Business Sense training programme.

The management information system operated by the College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise cannot allocate the total places available according to Northern Ireland constituency. The following table illustrates the breakdown according to county.

Number of training places provided per county

	Good business sense
County Antrim	482
County Armagh	420
County Down	900
County Fermanagh	765
County Londonderry	300
County Tyrone	750
Total training places	3,617

Autism Services

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to standardise the services available to sufferers of autism in different parts of Northern Ireland, with particular reference to applied behaviour analysis provision for schoolchildren. [116374]

Jane Kennedy: Children with an Autistic Spectrum Disorder (ASD) represent a continuum of need, ranging from mild impairments, to the more severe. The Education and Library Boards (ELBs) provide specialised support to schools with pupils with ASD and the Department of Education is aware that there is a degree of variation in assessment and provision across the Province. Work is currently under way between the Department and the ELBs in order to standardise practice by producing criteria which will be common across the board areas.

In line with the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety's "Priorities for Action 2003/04" the Health and Social Services Trusts, in consultation with the ELBs, are developing costed proposals to enhance diagnostic, assessment and support services.

Applied Behaviour Analysis (ABA) is one of a range of interventions used in working with children with Autistic Spectrum Disorder and all of the Boards' Educational Psychologists receive training in ABA techniques as part of their degree qualification.

The Report of the Task Group on Autism, published in May 2002 states that:

"The Task Group finds preference for no single approach but concludes that single methods by themselves may not address effectively the triad of impairments associated with ASD. The Group concludes that intervention programmes should be child-centred rather than method-centred, and should address the observed and unique needs of the child and any variation in these which occurs over time and across settings and situations."

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to his answer of 13 May 2003, Official Report, column 194W, on autism, whether the proposed Centre of Excellence for Autism will provide regular respite care for sufferers across the province. [116620]

Jane Kennedy: There are no plans to offer respite care for parents and children with Autism at the proposed Centre of Excellence. The centre is planned as an educational facility.

Beef Exports

David Burnside: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total tonnage of beef exports in Northern Ireland was in each of the last seven years. [115272]

Mr. Pearson: There has been only limited exports of beef from Northern Ireland in each of the last seven years. Exports of 260 and 400 tonnes were made under the Export Certified Herd Scheme in 1998 and 1999 respectively. Northern Ireland companies have either recently been approved, or are at an advanced stage leading to approval, under the Date Based Export Scheme. To date, only an insignificant tonnage of beef has been exported but it is expected that volumes will increase as new contracts are secured and more companies are fully approved in the coming months.

BSE

David Burnside: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps have been taken to achieve separate moderate BSE status for Northern Ireland. [115273]

Mr. Pearson: Until last week the definition of BSE moderate risk status was 100 BSE positive cases per million adult cattle aged over 24 months. Northern Ireland incidence of positive cases of BSE for the period May 2002 to April 2003 is 112 positive cases per million adult cattle aged over 24 months. In view of this incidence level it was not possible for Northern Ireland to seek separate BSE moderate risk status.

At the Annual General Meeting of the World Animal Health Organisation (OIE) in Paris on 18–23 May, the EU proposed and the OIE accepted that, taking into consideration the active BSE monitoring programmes in place, and their efficiency at detecting BSE cases, the definition of "moderate risk status" should be doubled to 200 cases per million adult cattle aged over 24 months .

The current BSE incidence rate in the UK is above the 200 cases per million requirement but on current trends should drop below the 200 cases threshold by the end of the year. Taking Northern Ireland alone, we are already below the 200 threshold.

While the development at OIE is welcome, before the UK or any region can be classified as having moderate risk status, this needs to be recognised in EU legislation. This may not necessarily be straightforward.

Discussions are taking place with the European Commission on how best to present a case that all the criteria for moderate risk status are met. This is being taken forward on a UK basis but I will wish to consider making a separate case for Northern Ireland if progress on the UK case is delayed.

Causeway Health and Social Services Trust

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what payments have been made by the Causeway HSS Trust to former employees of the Trust, by way of settlement for cessation of employment for reasons other than age retirement or retirement on medical grounds; when each payment was made; what the individual amount of each payment was; and for what the payments were made, in financial years (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03. [128345]

Angela Smith: The details requested are set out in the following table:

Date of payment	Amount	Purpose
2001–02
January 2002	22,034	Redundancy
March 2002	4,250	Constructive dismissal settlement
2002–03
February 2003	1,500	Unfair dismissal settlement
March 2003	1,750	Constructive dismissal settlement
February 2003	750	Unfair dismissal settlement

Mature Students (Child Care Support)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Irelands how many mature students are in receipt of child care grants in Northern Ireland. [128279]

Jane Kennedy: In the 2002/03 academic year, 135 mature students aged 25 or over and domiciled in Northern Ireland received the grant in accordance with the Education (Student Support) Regulations (Northern Ireland).

Child Support Agency

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many instances the Child Support Agency in Northern Ireland has recorded of (a) deliberate evasive action to prevent the agency securing maintenance payments through (i) deduction from earnings and (ii) deduction from benefits and (b) preventing court action for enforcement through non-co-operation. [116096]

Mr. Browne: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Northern Ireland Child Support Agency. I have asked the chief executive to respond to the hon. Gentleman's question directly. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the electronic document and electronic record management systems which have been procured by the public authorities listed in Parts I to V of Schedule 1 of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 for which he is responsible. [116395]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The following NI public authorities listed in Parts I to V of Schedule 1 of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 for which I am responsible have procured Electronic Document and Records Management Systems.

The Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment purchased 50 licences for electronic document and record management (EDRM) software from Objective Corporation UK Ltd. in February 2003 to support the implementation of the Department's first major e-business project in Corporate Regulation Branch.

Invest NI, having tendered for supply of an EDRM system, have selected and purchased Meridio release 3.3 from Meridio Ltd. in March 2003.

Entrepreneurship/Education

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken to promote greater integration of entrepreneurship and education in Northern Ireland. [128288]

Mr. Pearson: In March 2003, the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, in partnership with the Department of Education and the Department for Employment and Learning, published "Enterprising Education"—the Entrepreneurship and Education Action Plan.

Fully integrating entrepreneurship and education will take time and concentrated effort by a range of key stakeholders. The primary purpose of Enterprising Education is to establish an initial framework of action to provide a strong foundation for moving forward the integration process. The long-term goal is to ensure that every learner, including life-long learners, is given the opportunity to build the skills and develop the attributes which equip any individual to make a unique, innovative and creative contribution in the world of work.

The Action Plan, which will establish benchmarks, is the first stage in a longer-term process and will inform future decision-making. Progress will be reviewed on an annual basis and each Department will continue to promote the benefits of strengthening business/education links within their respective Departments and the wider circles in which they operate.

A copy of the Action Plan can be viewed or downloaded at www.detini.gov.uk.

Environmental Appraisals

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many of the Department's policies have been screened for their environmental impact since June 2001; how many environmental appraisals have been conducted, and on what policy issues; and what information has been published about these screenings and appraisals. [124715]

Angela Smith: Since June 2001, Northern Ireland Departments have carried out 37 regulatory impact assessments of policies associated with a range of legislative proposals. However, to date, there have been no free standing environmental appraisals of departmental policies.

Sport Funding

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much public funding was allocated to (a) soccer, (b) Gaelic games, (c) rugby and (d) cricket in Northern Ireland in the last five years. [115700]

Angela Smith: The Sports Council for Northern Ireland (SCNI) is responsible for the development of Sport in NI including the distribution of public funding to individual sports.

The following tables provides information from each source of funding distributed by SCNI for the five year period 1998–2003 for the four sports of soccer, Gaelic games, rugby and cricket.

Exchequer funding

£

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03	Total
Soccer	50,000	50,000	50,000	59,000 [1]100,000	52,500 [1]500,000	261,500 600,000
Gaelic games	30,000	30,000	30,000	30,000	45,000	165,000
Rugby	16,000	16,000	16,000	16,000	24,000	88,000
Cricket	20,000	20,000	20,000	20,000	26,330	106,330
Total	116,000	116,000	116,000	225,000	647,830	1,220,830

[1] These figures indicate the funds allocated to Soccer from the Football Development Centre Programme for 2001–02 and 2002–03.

Lottery funding

£

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03	Total
Soccer	677,073	816,616	942,492	642,710	609,131	3,688,022
Gaelic games	2,703,811	1,303,185	1,694,182	1,025,420	689,962	7,416,560
Rugby	155,526	100,784	312,053	144,000	76,860	789,223
Cricket	215,298	212,837	282,500	57,202	16,000	783,837
Total	3,751,708	2,433,422	3,231,227	1,869,332	1,391,953	12,677,642

Safe Sports Grounds

The money provided by the Safe Sports Ground Programme was made available from financial year 2000–01 for the three sports of soccer, Gaelic games and rugby. The following table shows the funding that was allocated for these sports for the three-year period 1 April 2000–31 March 2003.

£

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03	Total
Soccer	—	—	1,206,809	784,003	415,188	2,406,000
Gaelic games	—	—	622,085	350,833	507,082	1,480,000
Rugby	—	—	136,843	140,612	68,536	345,991
Total	—	—	1,965,737	1,275,448	990,806	4,231,991

Department of Finance and Personnel (DFP)

The following table shows the total allocation from EU Structural Funds from 1998 to date across various departments, for the four sports. DFP has worked under the assumption that public funding encapsulates funding through the public purse, including EU structural funds.

£

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03	2003 to date	Total
Soccer	6,325	17,984	—	159,500	—	[1]10,800	194,609
Gaelic games	304,005	10,000	1,000	—	—	—	315,005
Rugby	—	6,500	—	—	—	—	6,500
Cricket	—	25,250	—	—	—	—	25,250
Total	310,330	59,734	1,000	159,500	—	10,800	541,364

[1] This figure of £10,800 reflects the award allocated by DFP for soccer from 2003 to date, this award was made under the Measure 3.2 of the EU Programme for Peace and Reconciliation.

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD)

The following table details DARD's funding for the four sports for five-year period 1998–2003. In addition to the figures provided in the table, DARD has allocated £899 in 1998–99 for sport in general, including soccer and cricket, DARD have been unable to provide a detailed breakdown of this amount in respect of each sport referred to.

£

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03	Total
Soccer	1,270	2,835	—	—	—	4,105
Gaelic games	—	[1]45	8,557	1,885	[1]11,118	21,605
Rugby	[1]606	[2]1,760	—	[1]1,878	—	4,244
Cricket	—	—	4,067	—	—	4,067
Total	1,876	4,640	12,624	3,763	11,118	34,021

[1] This expenditure relates to grants payable under the Woodland Grant Scheme, which encourages the creation of new woodland and the sustainable management of existing woodland.

[2] This amount was allocated to a Gaelic athletic club to help in the promotion of rugby through coaching and exhibition match.

Department of Education

£

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03	Total
Soccer	422.06	857.31	102.00	—	—	1,381.37
Gaelic games	300.00	—	—	—	—	300.00
Total	722.06	857.31	102.00	—	—	1,681.37

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment (DETI)

The following table details the grant payments made by the Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) for each of the four sports for the periods in question.

£

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03	Total
Soccer	6,750	6,400	7,200	8,800	13,500	42,650
Gaelic games	—	—	—	500	—	500
Rugby	680	600	—	—	—	1,280
Cricket	—	1,500	—	2,000	—	3,500
Total	7,430	8,500	7,200	11,300	13,500	47,930

Health

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the percentage uptake rates were of (a) primary immunisation, (b) breast screening and (c) cervical screening in Northern Ireland in each of the last three years. [128282]

Angela Smith: (a) The uptake rates for primary immunisation at 12 months and 24 months in the October/December quarter for each of the last three years were as follows:

	Percentage
At 12 months
October/December 2000	93.88
October/December 2001	94.60
October/December 2002	94.35
At 24 months
October/December 2000	96.18
October/December 2001	95.86
October/December 2002	96.73

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many consultations there were for the mentally ill in the community in each Northern Ireland health trust in each of the last three years. [128284]

Angela Smith: The information requested is not available.

Estimates for the financial year 2001–02 suggest that there were approximately 186,000 contacts with the mentally ill by community psychiatric nurses. In addition, there were approximately 27,500 contacts with the mentally ill by clinical psychologists in either a community or a hospital setting.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) child and (b) adolescent in-patient psychiatric beds there were in each Northern Ireland health trust in each of the last three years. [128285]

Angela Smith: The table shows the average number of available beds open overnight by health trust in the child and adolescent psychiatric specialty. It is not possible to supply data for children and adolescents separately.

Trust	2000–01	2001–02	[1]2002–03
Green Park	20.0	20.0	20.0
South and East Belfast	6.0	6.0	10.5
Northern Ireland Total	26.0	26.0	30.5

[1] Provisional

High Technology/Telecommunications Industries

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action is being taken to support Northern Ireland's (a) existing and (b) new (i) high technology and (ii) telecommunications industry and entrepreneurs; and if he will make a statement. [128294]

Mr. Pearson: Invest NI has focused significant resources in these areas in its overall drive to support existing companies to become more innovative and competitive and to encourage the formation of new, entrepreneurial, business starts. Support for existing hi-tech and telecommunications companies during 2002–03 resulted in companies bringing forward business proposals representing a total investment of almost £109 million, against which Invest NI offered £14.3 million in support. In addition, the Agency assisted the formation of 74 new, potentially high growth companies in these sectors.

In driving forward this work, Invest NI uses a broad range of measures designed to help all companies, both existing and new starts, increase their capability. These include fostering greater innovation, increasing levels of R&D, developing external trade and utilising a variety of other business improvement tools.

During its first year of operation, Invest NI played a key role in establishing the Northern Ireland Science Park and it also provided £26 million to assist the establishment of 17 centres of research excellence, the majority of which are focused on high technology sectors. In addition, Invest NI has drawn up a series of Sector Strategies aimed at maximizing the economic development potential for a range of industrial sectors including hi-tech and telecoms.

This work provides an important demonstration of Invest NI's commitment to engage with companies, higher and further education establishments, centres of research excellence, science parks and other research organisations in developing hi-tech start-up businesses. In addition Invest NI is working closely with the education sector and others to encourage entrepreneurship in Northern Ireland.

Horses

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether horses in Northern Ireland are defined as agricultural animals by Northern Ireland Departments; and if he will make a statement. [R] [128420]

Mr. Pearson: Under NI legislation, the horse is not classified as an agricultural animal. This mirrors the position in the other parts of the UK.

The Report "Vision for the future of the agri-food industry" included a number of recommendations relating to the equine sector. One of these was that the redesignation of the horse as an agricultural animal should be pursued in the longer term. In the Vision Action Plan which I published in November 2002, I highlighted that there were wider issues to consider and that these would be discussed with the industry in due course.

I have recently established an Equine Stakeholder Group, one of whose early tasks will be to advise on a comprehensive study of the equine industry in Northern Ireland. This will run in tandem with a similar study in Great Britain. The designation of the horse will be an aspect of both studies.

The overall rating system in Northern Ireland is currently subject to a major policy review. A Policy paper on existing and potential non-domestic reliefs and exemptions will be published in late autumn. That paper will include consideration of the need for the introduction of any exemption or relief for the equine industry.

Lisburn Health and Social Services Trust

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what further steps will be taken by the (a) Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety and (b) Eastern Health and Social Services Board to address the funding imbalance of the Down Lisburn Health and Social Services Trust; and if he will make a statement. [128311]

Angela Smith: A target has been set, by the Department, in "Priorities for Action 2003–04", that all HSS Boards should have strategies to address locality equity issues prepared by March 2004 and work is ongoing on this. I understand that the Eastern Health and Social Services Board intend to publish their latest assessment of the locality equity position within their area in the autumn. It is their policy, endorsed by the Department, to ensure that existing services are maintained and to address equity issues by levelling up resources through skewing new money to populations that are currently receiving less than their target share. For example the population of the Down Lisburn area gained by some £1.5 million through such a skewing strategy in 2003–04. It should be noted that equity assessments are based on the needs of a population living in an area and not on the funding of any specific Trust.

Locality equity is a priority for the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety but it must be balanced by the need to ensure that existing service provision is not destabilised. This results in change being phased in over a period, usually some 3–4 years.

Literacy/Numeracy

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action is being taken by Northern Ireland Departments to address adult basic literacy and numeracy problems; and if he will make a statement. [128280]

Jane Kennedy: The Department for Employment and Learning (DEL) launched the Essential Skills for Living Strategy and Action Plan in October 2002. The strategy aims to support 25,000 adults to improve their literacy and numeracy skills by 2005.

The Department has established an Essential Skills Committee comprising key stakeholders from Government Departments, business and industry, the further education sector and the voluntary and community sector to take the strategy forward. It has developed also a framework of qualifications through the universities for all levels of essential skills tutors. During 2002–03, Queens University successfully delivered the Certificate in Management and Teaching of Literacy to 70 tutors and a further 66 have enrolled for the course in 2003–04. The Department launched a major promotional campaign in May 2003, with the aim of engaging a wide range of learners to improve their essential skills.

Plans are in place to liaise with the Northern Ireland Departments to ensure essential skills is taken into account in the design and delivery of their policies and programmes. The Department of Finance and Personnel, for example, is developing a strategy and action plan for the delivery of essential skills throughout the Northern Ireland civil service. The Northern Ireland Prison Service has worked with DEL to enhance essential skills provision for prisoners and the Social Security Agency has been actively involved in considering new approaches to encourage benefit claimants to improve their essential skills. Pilot exercises using financial incentives and new essential skills screening tools are planned for January 2004.

Northern Ireland Fishing Task Force

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made by the Northern Ireland Fishing Task Force; and when it intends to publish its overall findings. [113488]

Mr. Pearson: As a response to the December 2002 EU Agriculture and Fisheries Council decision, and the NI fishing community's reaction to it, I set up in January a Taskforce for South Down which is made up of officials from relevant NI Government departments, local councils and representatives of both the fish producers and processors to consider the wider socio-economic effects of the Council decisions and to identify whether there were more steps Government might take to address particular difficulties.

To help inform its work, the Taskforce undertook a consultation exercise with public meetings in Kilkeel, Ardglass and Portavogie. In addition Taskforce representatives have met with the Tri-Council Fisheries Working Group and with the NI Fisheries Harbour Authority. The Taskforce has also received 15 written submissions. A survey of producers and processors is also being undertaken to obtain information and views from the industry.

The Taskforce will be assessing all the information collected and views received with a view to publishing its findings in the summer.

Finally, the Taskforce will also be following closely the work of the Cabinet Office Strategy Unit established by the Prime Minister to look at the medium to long-term issues facing the UK sea fishing industry. I am a member pf the Steering Group for this exercise. Along with the local representatives on the Stakeholder Advisory Group I shall ensure that the Northern Ireland perspective is properly covered in the Strategy Unit's work.

Policing Board/Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made towards negotiating a Memorandum of Understanding between the Policing Board and the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission; and if he will place a copy of the memorandum in the Library. [114149]

Jane Kennedy: The Policing Board is committed to developing and maintaining effective working relationships with all other statutory authorities, including the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission. It is committed to meeting its statutory duty of carrying out all its functions having regard to the need to co-ordinate its activities and co-operate with other statutory authorities.

The Policing Board has not entered into a Memorandum of Understanding with any statutory authority and is content that it can play its part in maintaining working relationships, including with the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission, without the need for a Memorandum of Understanding.

This issue was most recently discussed at a meeting between representatives of the Policing Board and the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission when both parties gave a commitment to follow good practice in sharing relevant documents and research; where appropriate to consult over and above legislative requirements, and to assist one another in the fulfilment of those statutory duties that relate to human rights issues.

Primary Schools

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will increase the proportion of funding to the primary school sector; and if he will make a statement. [116045]

Jane Kennedy: The Government recognises that the current differential in funding between primary and post-primary funding in Northern Ireland is too wide. The Local Management of Schools Common Formula, scheduled to come into operation in April 2004, contains a number of factors by which resources can be more effectively targeted and it is intended to use these over the initial years of the formula to reduce the funding differential.

In recognition of the issue the Budget Addition allocations for 2003–04, given to schools on top of their formula budget, were for the first time weighted in favour of the primary sector. This has resulted in an additional £1 million being provided for primary schools this year.

Road Safety

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many road accident fatalities there were in each of the past 10 years; and how many there were in the UK. [122545]

Angela Smith: The table provides information on the number of road fatalities in Great Britain and Northern Ireland for the past 10 years.

Fatal casualties 1992–2002

	Great Britain	Northern Ireland
1992	4,229	150
1993	3,814	143
1994	3,650	157
1995	3,621	144
1996	3,598	142
1997	3,599	144
1998	3,421	160
1999	3,423	141
2000	3,409	171
2001	3,450	148
2002	3,431	150

School Examinations

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the timetable is for the replacement of the eleven plus examination in Northern Ireland. [112910]

Jane Kennedy: I announced on 24 April 2003 the establishment of a Working Group to provide advice and recommendations on options for future arrangements for post-primary education, including the development of alternative transfer arrangements with a view to the current transfer tests being withdrawn as soon as practicable. The Working Group will report by 31 October 2003.

Pupils currently in P5 and P6 will sit the existing Transfer Tests and decisions about transfer arrangements for subsequent cohorts of pupils will be taken when the advice of the Working Group has been considered. Parents and teachers of pupils currently in P4 will be advised in good time of their transfer arrangements.

Schools Finance

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the difference in funding per pupil is between primary schools and post-primary schools in Northern Ireland; and what recent representations he has received on the difference in funding. [119461]

Jane Kennedy: In 2001–02 financial year the difference in funding per pupil between primary and post-primary schools in Northern Ireland was £934.

Department officials met with a delegation from the Primary Principals' Association of Northern Ireland on 25 March 2003 and a number of letters have also been received from elected representatives, primary schools and parents of primary school pupils.

Social Security Appeal Tribunals

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action he will take to ensure that social security appeal tribunals which have to be re-listed are not delayed because of the non-availability of panel members; and if he will make a statement. [116838]

Mr. Browne: The Appeals Service (NI) is required to re-list all adjourned appeals before the same Tribunal panel following a Direction from the President of Appeal Tribunals. As a result of additional resources being allocated to The Appeals Service (NI) and the appointment of 25 additional Tribunal members the average clearance time for all appeal types has reduced from 22 weeks during April 2002 to 16 weeks during March 2003. The Appeals Service (NI) is currently reviewing the procedures for the re-listing of appeals that have previously been adjourned to further reduce the time taken to reach a final determination and to prioritise appeals that have to be re-listed before the same Tribunal.

Sports Funding

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 9 April 2003, Official Report, column 251W, why funding has not been allocated to the Northern Ireland Cycling Federation in the last three years. [114156]

Angela Smith: The Sports Council for Northern Ireland has not allocated any funding to the Northern Ireland Cycling Federation over the last three years because it is not the recognised governing body of cycling within Northern Ireland.

Stevens Inquiry

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the overview and recommendations of the report by Sir John Stevens on the murder of Mr. Patrick Finucane, published on 17 April. [110861]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Sir John Stevens's report is to the Chief Constable and he will no doubt wish to study it. We will also be examining his findings most carefully.

Sir John has indicated that specific criminal investigations continue and that files will be sent to the Director of Public Prosecutions (NI). The criminal justice process must take its course.

Teachers

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many teaching posts will be lost in the primary sector in the next 12 months. [118017]

Jane Kennedy: The requested information is not yet available. Decisions on staffing levels are taken by the Boards of Governors of individual schools.

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) primary and (b) secondary school teaching posts were lost in each year since 1997 in each education and library board. [118018]

Jane Kennedy: The requested information is only available for the period 1999/2000–2001/02. For completeness the number of posts gained is also given.

Education and Library Board Area	Decrease in number of full time teachers in schools losing posts		Increase in number of full-time equivalent teachers in schools gaining posts		Net change in number of full-time equivalent teachers
	1999/2000–2000/01	2000/01–2001/02	1999/2000–2000/01	2000/01–2001/02	1999/2000–2000/01	2000/01–2001/02
(a) Primary schools
Belfast	67.2	79.2	54.7	40.4	-12.5	-38.8
Western	70.2	70.1	64.5	87.2	-5.7	+17.1
North-Eastern	86.6	65.5	72.4	117.1	-14.2	+51.6
South-Eastern	60.7	61.1	93.7	97.9	+33.0	+36.8
Southern	100.6	101.8	90.5	74.3	-10.1	-27.5
(b) Secondary schools
Belfast	31.0	35.3	68.5	68.5	+37.5	+33.2
Western	22.6	51.1	76.5	29.8	+53.9	-21.3
North-Eastern	37.2	31.6	71.3	69.4	+34.1	+37.8
South-Eastern	21.3	30.6	72.4	60.5	+51.1	+29.9
Southern	27.6	58.1	49.8	40.6	+22.2	+17.5

Ulster Scots Academy

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made in making available support for an Ulster-Scots Academy. [115762]

Angela Smith: Officials are currently considering options for ensuring that the commitment in the Joint Declaration by the British and Irish Governments in April 2003 is fulfilled. Officials will make recommendations to Ministers in due course.

SCOTLAND

Beef Farming

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people are employed in the beef farming industry in Scotland; when he last met representatives of the Scottish beef farming industry; and what his assessment is of its prospects. [127844]

Mrs. McGuire: The Scottish Executive's agricultural census in 2002 recorded 32,608 people working on Scottish farms with beef cattle.

Agriculture policy in Scotland is a devolved matter for the Scottish Executive; representatives of the agriculture sector, including the beef farming industry, regularly meet Scottish Executive Ministers. The reformed Common Agricultural Policy announced on 26 June provides the basis for a sustainable future for the beef industry in Scotland.

Fishing Industry

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many are employed in the fishing industry in Scotland. [128015]

Mrs. McGuire: Fisheries Departments estimate that there were 5,707 full and part-time fishermen working in Scotland at the end of 2002. Estimates of employment in the fish processing industry are produced as part of the economic surveys carried out by the Sea Fish Industry Authority, whose latest estimate is that the processing industry in Scotland supports 7,200 full-time equivalent jobs.

Official Engagements

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many official engagements he has undertaken as Secretary of State for Scotland since his appointment. [128017]

Mr. Darling: I have undertaken a number of official engagements since my appointment as Secretary of State for Scotland and I will continue to do so.

Over-30-months Scheme

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he was consulted by the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs prior to the decision to lift the Over Thirty Month Scheme in 2004. [127845]

Mrs. McGuire: My right hon. Friend and I have regular discussions with ministerial colleagues on a wide range of issues.

Quality Meat Scotland

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the transfer to the Scottish Executive of Quality Meat Scotland; and what payments are outstanding to (a) Quality Meat Scotland and (b) the Scottish Executive in respect of the transfer. [127865]

Mrs. McGuire: These are matters for the Scottish Executive.

Sewel Motions

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many requests for Sewel motions have been exchanged between the Scottish Executive and his Department since 1999; how many have been rejected; when they were rejected; for what reasons; and what plans the Government has to review the procedures for dealing with Sewel motions. [128011]

Mrs. McGuire: Responsibility for tabling and the terms of Sewel motions rests with the Scottish Executive under the Memorandum of Understanding. Discussions with the Scottish Executive on Sewel motions are a normal part of the development of the legislative programme. To date, 43 Sewel motions have been agreed to by the Scottish Parliament since devolution.

The Government keep all procedures in relation to the devolution settlement under review.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Air Weapons

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many (a) deaths and (b) injuries involving air weapons there were in each of the last five years; [128342]

(2) how many criminal offences, broken down by category, involving (a) replica guns and (b) air weapons, there were in each of the last five years. [128343]

Caroline Flint: The latest available numbers of recorded crimes by offence category in which imitation weapons and air weapons were used are given in the tables. A weapon is said to be used in an offence if it is fired, used as a blunt instrument or in a threat.

Number of offences in which imitation weapons were used

	Violence against the person	Robbery	Burglary	Criminal damage	Other offences
1997[1]	268	186	16	3	38
1998–99	354	163	14	2	33
1999–2000	495	228	22	3	65
2000–01	494	227	15	17	34
2001–02	773	277	31	87	33

[1] Calendar year; other years to end of March

Number of offences in which air weapons were used

	Violence against the person	Robbery	Burglary	Criminal damage	Other offences
1997[1]	1,449	99	51	5,798	109
1998–99	1,937	83	81	6,362	202
1999–2000	2,438	91	20	7,330	224
2000–01	2,217	116	32	7,674	188
2001–02	2,366	161	22	9,559	232

[1] Calendar year; other years to end of March

There was a change in counting rules for recorded crime on 1 April 1998, which would have had the effect of increasing the number of offences counted. Similarly, some police forces adopted the principles of the National Crime Recording Standard in advance of its national implementation on 1 April 2002, and this may also have tended to increase the number of crimes counted, particularly in 2001–02.

The number of deaths and injuries resulting from recorded air weapon offences in the last five years are given in the following table:

	Fatal injuries	Serious injuries[1]	Slight injuries
1997	0	129	1,065
1998–99	0	133	1,381
1999–2000	0	171	1,806
2000–01	1	166	1,654
2001–02	2	166	1,741

[1] A serious injury is one which necessitated detention in hospital or involved fractures, concussion, severe general shock, penetration by a projectile or multiple wounds.

Al Mujaharoon

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the action he proposes to take over the planned Magnificent 17 conference organised by Al Mujaharoon. [129328]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 11 September 2003]: Al-Muhajiroun represents neither the British Muslim Community nor its views.

We absolutely reject its offensive statements, as have the vast majority of Muslims living in the UK.

However, we have a long-standing and important tradition of free speech in this country people have a right to air their views, however unpalatable they may be to others. But we also have tough legislative powers to catch those who cross the line from legitimate debate and comment, into inciting violence, or who commit offences motivated by racial or religious hatred. We tightened these powers in the Anti-Terrorism and Security Acts (2001). Police can and do use these powers. Every word and every statement that representatives of Al-Muhajiroun make is closely monitored by the appropriate authorities.

Bailiffs

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases were prosecuted and how many convictions there were in each year since 1997 concerning (a) debts or payments in arrears and (b) abusive and illegal behaviour by bailiffs. [126950]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is not collected centrally by the Home Office.

Asylum Seekers

Clare Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers are being provided with accommodation under Section 4 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999. [125078]

Beverley Hughes: Reliable information on the numbers of cases receiving support under Section 4 of the 1999 Act is currently unavailable, because of the difficulty of ensuring that the information is accurate. We are working with the YMCA to establish more frequent reporting that will enable us to produce accurate figures.

Information on the number of applications for the National Asylum Supports Service (NASS) support and the numbers of asylum seekers currently being supported by NASS can be found on the website http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people from Somalia (a) sought asylum, (b) were granted asylum, (c) were granted exceptional leave to remain, (d) have made applications which are still outstanding and (e) have made applications for asylum which have been refused and have been subsequently removed from the United Kingdom in each of the last five years. [127513]

Beverley Hughes: The tables provide the available information, showing the number of asylum applications, initial decisions and removals of Somalis for the last five years. Initial decisions do not necessarily relate to applications made in the same year. Nor do removals necessarily relate to initial decisions or appeal outcomes in the same year.

Information on asylum applications, by nationality, awaiting an initial decision is unavailable. This could be obtained only at disproportionate cost by examination of individual case records.

Information on the number of asylum applications, initial decisions and removals is published quarterly on the Home Office website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Asylum applications received in the United Kingdom, excluding dependants, initial decisions, removals and voluntary departures, nationals of Somalia, 1998 to 2002[1]

		Initial decisions[2,3]
		Cases considered under normal procedures			Backlog clearance exercise
	Applications received	Total initial decisions	Recognised as a refugee and granted asylum	Not recognised as a refugee but granted exceptional leave	Total refused	Grants of ELR under backlog criteria[4,5]	Non compliance refusals under backlog criteria[4,6]
1998	4,685	2,805	2,330	375	100	—	—
1999[7]	7,495	350	130	55	120	35	5
2000[7,8]	5,020	11,325	5,310	3,575	2,365	55	15
2001[9]	6,420	8,430	2,910	1,995	3,525	—	—
2002[10]	6,540	6,735	2,515	1,405	2,815	—	—

[1] Figures rounded to nearest 5, with "*" = 1 or 2, and "—" = 0.
[2] Information is of initial determination decisions, excluding the outcome of appeals or other subsequent decisions.
[3] The refusal figures for each year do not necessarily relate to the applications received in the same year.
[4] Cases decided under pragmatic measures aimed at reducing the pre '96 asylum backlog.
[5] Includes cases where asylum or exceptional leave has been granted under the backlog criteria.
[6] Includes some cases where the application has been refused on substantive grounds.
[7] May exclude some cases lodged at Local Enforcement Offices between January 1999 and March 2000.
[8] Cases considered under the normal procedures may include some cases decided under the backlog criteria.
[9] Revised figures.
[10] Provisional figures.

Note:
From October 2000, the source for data on decisions changed. The nationality breakdown is therefore not directly comparable with previous months.

The latest available data on removals of Somali nationals who have sought asylum at some stage are given in the table.

Removals and voluntary departures[1] of Somali principal asylum applicants[2,3]

	Number
1998[4]	35
1999	n/a
2000	n/a
2001[4,5]	25
2002[4,6]	50

n/a = Nationality data are not available for 1999 and 2000 due to data quality issues on IS enforcement databases.

[1] Includes persons departing 'voluntarily' after enforcement action had been initiated against them, persons leaving under Assisted Voluntary Return Programmes run by the International Organisation for Migration, and removals on safe third country grounds.

[2] Figures rounded to nearest 5, with "*" = 1 or 2, and "—" = 0.

[3] Figures exclude dependants of asylum seekers removed. Data on dependants have only been collected since April 2001.

[4] Data for 2001 and 2002 have been estimated due to data quality issues.

[5] Figure may include a small number of dependants leaving under Assisted Voluntary Return Programmes.

[6] Provisional figures.

Note:

From October 2000, the source for data on decisions changed. The nationality breakdown is therefore not directly comparable with previous months.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme

Mr. Denis Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many victims of crimes received payments from the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme in each of the last five years; and how much was paid out. [127251]

Paul Goggins: The data in the table have been provided by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority.

	Number of awards	Total value (rounded to nearest £ million)
1998–99	46,240	195
1999–2000	43,495	206
2000–01	39,011	206
2001–02	41,351	233
2002–03	42,688	232

Criminal Records Bureau

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people having passed the Prison Service recruitment selection process are awaiting clearance by the Criminal Records Bureau; and if he will make a statement. [123309]

Paul Goggins: On 2 September 2003, the Criminal Records Bureau had 202 outstanding applications for disclosure of criminal records submitted by Her Majesty's Prison Service. However, it is not possible to identify from the Criminal Records Bureau database how many of these are as a result of recruitment exercises and how many result from internal redeployment and promotion. This information could only be obtained at a disproportionate cost.

The Criminal Records Bureau was set up to assist in the safer recruitment of people working with children and vulnerable adults. It has the capacity to issue 60,000 disclosures a week and is currently meeting its service levels, issuing 90 per cent of standard disclosures within two weeks and 90 per cent of enhanced disclosures within four weeks.

The Prison Service uses the Criminal Records Bureau to obtain an additional check for those working with children under 18 years of age as required by the Protection of Children Act 1999.

Faith Communities

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements are in place to consult faith communities about the work of Government; and if he will make a statement. [128951]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 11 September 2003]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Rhondda (Mr. Bryant) on 30 June 2003, Official Report, column 12W.

The Review of the Government's Interface with the Faith Communities is making good progress and we are due to report at the end of the year.

Internet Grooming

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are being taken to promote awareness and safe internet usage, with particular reference to younger people. [126940]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 8 September 2003]: Over the last two years, the Home Secretary's Task Force on Child Protection on the Internet has run and evaluated two successful national awareness campaigns. The campaigns sought to raise awareness of Internet safety measures, via cinema, television and radio advertising, national newspapers, online advertising on teen websites and chatrooms, and sponsorship activity. The core messages that were conveyed were that: children/young people should not give out their address, email, mobile or other contact details, that they should never attend a face-to-face meeting unaccompanied by an adult, and that people may lie about their identity. The task force also issued a 'Keeping your child safe on the Internet' leaflet and 200,000 copies of the leaflet were distributed via doctors surgeries and as an insert in the Department for Education and Skills magazine Parents + Schools.

The Home Office also runs two websites, thinkuknow.co.uk and wiseuptothenet.co.uk. The former is aimed at children and young people and the latter is aimed at parents. The Department for Education and Skills, Superhighway website and guidance, includes advice on all aspects of Internet safety such as walled gardens, firewalls, user contacts and net smart rules. Their revised guidance also includes advice on e-mails for students, filtering systems, school websites and chatrooms.

Passports

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he has put in place since 1999 to speed up the process of renewing a passport. [128093]

Beverley Hughes: Since 1999, the UK Passport Service (UKPS) has put in place a number of measures which have all contributed to speeding up the process of renewing a passport.

The UKPS has increased capacity by 30 per cent. through increased staffing, and the opening of a seventh passport office in Durham in March 2000. It opened its new London office in June 2000 which provides much improved service to its customers. TheUKPS has extended the working hours of its public counters which open longer on weekdays, and on Saturdays, and introduced a guaranteed one-day and one-week services, available by appointment, for those customers who need an urgent renewal service. The UKPS Service Standard has been set to process 99.5 per cent. of all correctly completed passport applications within 10 days and this is being consistently achieved throughout this year. To encourage renewal customers to apply early at less busy times, the UKPS has introduced a facility whereby customers can be credited on their new passport with the unexpired validity of their old passport, up to a maximum of nine months.

The UKPS has also improved the guidance to customers wishing to renew their passport. Page 1 of the information guide, which accompanies the passport application form, has a separate and clearly highlighted statement on what sections of the form to complete for renewals, and other relevant advice, to make completion of the form and its accurate submission easier. Finally, the UKPS has established a Call Centre, which handles passport inquiries 24 hours a day, seven days a week; and has enhanced its website (www.passport.gov.uk) to enable, among other things, e-mail inquiries, and online renewal application form completion. These measures all help customers to complete their applications accurately and to use the correct application channel to meet their needs.

Probation Service

Mr. Keith Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many probation service staff were employed in the last five years; and how many staff there were in each grade for these years. [126810]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is as follows:

	Number of Probation Staff[1,2]
London	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001
Chief Officer	54	55	53	54	42
Deputy Chief Officer	15	13	13	12	18
Assistant Chief Officer	207	203	201	213	223
Area Manager	40	45	49	49	53
Regional Training Staff	6	24	40	48	37
Senior Practitioner	73	69	85	130	143
Senior Probation Officers	1,020	989	1,023	1,065	1,106
Probation Officers	5,734	5,773	5,532	5,437	4,789
Trainee Probation Officers	—	229	523	564	1,096
Probation Service Officers	1,919	2,027	2,502	2,869	3,366
All Other Staff	4,900	4,585	4,650	4,798	4,716
Total	13,968	14,012	14,671	15,239	15,789

[1] Figures given as full-time equivalents.

[2] Figures as at 31 December 2001, the figures for 2002-03 are currently being processed and analysed and will be available in due course.

Note:

Figures obtained from data collected for RDS Probation Statistics 2001.

Restorative Justice

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to extend the use of restorative justice, with particular reference to (a) mediation and (b) reparation; and if he will make a statement. [126818]

Paul Goggins: The Government's restorative justice strategy, issued on 22 July 2003, sets out proposals to extend the use of restorative justice, including mediation and reparation to victims and the community.

The Government aims to maximise the use of restorative justice in the Criminal Justice System, where we know it works well, to meet victims' needs and to reduce re-offending, and in society at large to resolve disputes and build strong, active communities. The strategy will also encourage more high quality, visible reparation by offenders to the community. The key link between restorative justice and reparation is that both are ways the offender can take responsibility for the harm they have caused and put it right. Both are ways that the Criminal Justice System can bring visible benefits to victims and other ordinary citizens, and be seen to be responsive to their needs. In practice, restorative justice can often lead to the offender making reparation to their victim, or to the wider community.

The launch of this strategy (which can be found on the Home Office website) marks the start of a 12-week consultation process. Officials have been working closely with criminal justice practitioners and the voluntary sector to develop the restorative justice strategy. Comments on the consultation paper are welcome.

West Sussex Safe House Project

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions his Department has had with West Sussex county council over the future of the West Sussex Safe House Project; and if he will make a statement. [129089]

Beverley Hughes: We understand that West Sussex are considering closure of the safe house. It is, of course, for local authorities to decide how best to provide support and services for children in need in its area, including accommodation for children who are the victims of trafficking. There is no current specific earmarked funding for services of this nature. Instead, Government funding is allocated to councils with social services responsibilities on the basis of the needs of their populations. It is, therefore, for councils, working in partnership with relevant local stakeholders, to determine their spending priorities on the basis of local needs. A National Asylum Support Service grant reimburses local authorities for the extra costs incurred for the care of unaccompanied asylum seeking children.

West Sussex recognise that a body of expertise has been built up in the safe house over the last two years. They plan to close the safe house and use this expertise in the form of training and support packages for carers of young people assessed as being at risk of being trafficked. Currently, the safe house caters only for 17 and 18-year-old girls. There are also concerns that its location has become widely known, thus undermining the security of the service provided. West Sussex feel that by closing the safe house they will be able to offer a service to all children at risk from traffickers, including boys and under-16s and address the security concerns that have arisen.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Andrew Wang

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from Taiwan regarding Mr. Andrew Wang. [129762]

Mr. Rammell: It is the Government's policy not to make public announcements on individual extradition requests that may or may not have been received. This is to ensure that any on-going investigations by relevant law enforcement agencies are not jeopardised in any way.

However, the UK is not, at present, able to establish extradition arrangements with the Taiwanese authorities as HMG does not recognise Taiwan as a state.

Arms Promotion (Czech Republic)

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to his answer of 14 July 2003, Official Report, column 48W, on arms promotion activities, if he will list the Ministers carrying out promotion activities in the Czech Republic, the dates on which such conversations took place and the transactions which were discussed; and if he will make a statement. [129510]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 11 September 2003]: I refer the right hon. Member to my previous answer on 9 September 2003, Official Report, column 282W.

I discussed the proposed sale of Gripen fighter aircraft by a UK/Swedish consortium on 25 January 2002 with my then Czech counterpart, Jan Kavan, and informally on other occasions. Ben Bradshaw met the Czech Defence Minister, Stanislav Tvrdik, on 5 March 2002 where they discussed the Gripen proposal. I am not aware of any other meetings during 2002 where Foreign and Commonwealth Office Ministers discussed UK arms exports with Czech colleagues.

Brazil

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Britain's relations with Brazil following the election of President Lula. [129076]

Mr. Rammell: UK-Brazil relations are good and continuing to develop. I visited Brazil in December 2002 to start the formal process of engagement with the new government, and my noble Friend the Leader of the House of Lords (Lord Williams) represented Her Majesty's Government at President Lula's inauguration. The Brazilian Trade Minister, Furlan visited the UK in March. I led the UK delegation at the latest round of bilateral High Level Political Talks in Brasilia in May. President Lula paid a successful first official visit to the UK in July for the Progressive Governance Summit. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister held substantive of bilateral talks with him.

Chechnya

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the situation in (a) Chechnya and (b) the Caucasus Region. [129584]

Mr. Rammell: We continue to monitor the situation in Chechnya and in the Caucasus. We have noted the steps the Russian Government is taking to establish a political process in Chechnya and welcomed the constitutional referendum held in March 2003. We continue to believe that the success of the political process will be dependent on the thorough and consistent implementation of the political and civil rights set out in the new constitution. While recognising the serious threat posed by terrorism in the region, we remain concerned about the security and human rights situation in Chechnya and the surrounding republics. We also note with concern the bombings in recent months throughout the North Caucasus.

Conflicts in and between the countries of the Southern Caucasus pose challenges for regional security and stability and the prospects for regional co-operation. As a member of the Group of Friends of the UN Secretary General on Georgia, the UK is participating in the process to find a political settlement to the Abkhazia dispute. On Nagorno Karabakh our policy is to support any solution acceptable to both parties, and capable of delivering a lasting political settlement. We support the efforts of the OSCE Minsk Group in this regard. Her Majesty's Government's Special Representative for the Caucasus region. Sir Brian Fall, is actively addressing these problems and will work closely with his newly-appointed EU colleague.

Colombia

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the political situation in Colombia. [129077]

Mr. Rammell: After over a year in power, President Uribe continues to receive much support from the Colombian people. His government is still battling guerrilla and paramilitary groups which commit appalling human rights violations funded by illegal drug production, extortion and kidnapping. We support his efforts to tackle these problems and to develop a fully functioning democratic state throughout Colombia based on social and economic reform and sustainable economic development. At the same time we underline the need in so doing to respect the rule of law, human rights and the safety and welfare of its citizens. There is still much to do.

Cyprus

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many residents from the occupied part of Cyprus have been (a) granted and (b) refused a visa to visit the UK in each year since its introduction; and if he will make a statement. [127811]

Mr. Mullin: The information requested is as follows:

Visitor visa applications

	Received	Issued	Refused	Other
1998	7,819	7,286	413	120
1999	7386	6,900	452	34
2000	6,782	5,603	284	895
FY 2001–02	5,831	5,060	135	636
FY 2002–03	6,593	5,400	470	723

The column referring to 'other' may include those unresolved applications which have been deferred pending further inquiries and have been carried over to the following year. Applications may also be withdrawn during processing but still count as an application received. Posts are also required to count all applications received (for example, a mother and her three children on one passport may count as four applications but only one entry clearance may be issued). Not all of the applicants who apply in the "TRNC" are "Turkish Cypriots". From 2001 Posts began reporting statistics by financial rather than calendar year.

European Union

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the rights of national parliaments to (a) hold up and (b) veto proposals from the EU Commission, as contained in the report of the Convention on the Future of Europe. [129129]

Mr. MacShane: The proposal in the draft Constitutional Treaty, to introduce a mechanism to enforce the subsidiarity principle, represents a significant step forward in the role that national parliaments will have in EU business. It provides, for the first time, a Treaty-based power for national parliaments to question EU legislative proposals on the basis of subsidiarity. If more than a third of national parliaments considered a proposal at odds with the principle of subsidiarity, the Commission would have to review it; and would in practice find it very difficult to ignore those parliaments' views.

This proposal will help to ensure that the EU only legislates when it adds value to the actions of the individual Member States.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many visits there have been to the Government's website regarding consultation on the future of the EU; how many have responded with comments; and what percentage have expressed support for an EU constitution. [129130]

Mr. MacShane: The Government's online consultation on the draft EU Constitutional Treaty has received over 2,000 readings and 985 contributions so far. The consultation does not aim to measure support for the draft EU Constitutional Treaty but to enable discussion of the main policy issues we expect the forthcoming Intergovernmental Conference to address.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how far the Government's objectives for the EU of (a) simplification of the Union's instruments and (b) more democracy, transparency and efficiency in the EU have been met by the proposals of the Convention on the Future of Europe. [129132]

Mr. MacShane: The Convention's draft text meets most of the Government's objectives. It succeeds in simplifying the Union's instruments by streamlining them and defining them more clearly.

The Convention's draft also proposes more democracy, transparency and efficiency by, for example: making it clear where the Union can and cannot act; reinforcing the role of national parliaments in policing the principle of subsidiarity; providing for greater openness in the meetings of the Council of Ministers; replacing the Maastricht "three pillars" system with a single Treaty structure: and setting up a Chair of the European Council.

Food Expenditure

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much was spent on food by his Department and by each of the agencies for which it is responsible in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03; what proportion of that food by value was produced in the United Kingdom; what guidance he has issued to encourage the procurement of home-produced food; and if he will make a statement. [129371]

Mr. Rammell: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) expenditure on food consumed in the UK in 2002–03 amounted to approximately £550,000. Information about 2001–02 expenditure and the proportion of food produced in the UK could only be provided at disproportionate cost. It is only in 2002–03 that we have started to centrally compile this data.

FCO purchasing policy is to buy goods and services on the basis of value for money and through competition unless there are compelling reasons to the contrary. We are currently reviewing our arrangements for buying food for UK consumption as part of a review of public sector food procurement which is being led by the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs. That review will include examination of whether UK and small producers are being given a proper chance to win contracts.

British Detainees (Guantanamo Bay)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the US Administration regarding the fate of British nationals detained at Guantanamo Bay; and if he will make a statement. [129626]

Mr. Rammell: My right hon. Friend the Attorney General has recently held a number of rounds of talks with the US Administration. His objective has been to ensure that the British nationals detained at Guantanamo Bay, if prosecuted, are assured of fair trials that meet generally recognised principles, wherever those trials take place, and to make clear our opposition to the death penalty. We are discussing a number of options with the US Government. The possibility of repatriating the detainees' remains under discussion. Further talks are planned for the near future.

Immigration and Asylum

Mr. Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the new EU states about immigration and asylum. [129603]

Mr. MacShane: My right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs and the Home Secretary (who has lead responsibility for asylum and immigration matters), and other government ministers have regular discussions with their counterparts in the new Member States on issues of asylum and immigration. These discussions take place within formal bilaterals as well as in the margins of other meetings.

Iraq

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to his statement of 8 September 2003 on Iraq, with regard to the post-conflict reconstruction effort in that country, how many contracts for reconstruction projects were in place with companies prior to 27 July 2003; how many contracts for reconstruction projects were placed with companies between 27 July and 8 September 2003; how many of the reconstruction projects agreed prior to 27 July 2003 are under way; how many reconstruction projects placed with companies after 27 July 2003 are under way; how many of the reconstruction projects agreed prior to 27 July 2003 are complete; and how many of the reconstruction projects agreed after 27 July 2003 are complete. [129283]

Mr. Straw: 15 contracts for reconstruction projects were in place with companies prior to 27 July 2003; one contract for a reconstruction project was placed between 27 July and 8 September 2003; 12 of the reconstruction projects agreed prior to 27 July 2003 are under way; one reconstruction project placed after 27 July 2003 is under way. These long-term contracts are not yet complete.

This answer relates to primary contracts from the US and British Governments. Several hundred sub-contracts exist.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what countries have promised to provide troops to the coalition force in Iraq; how many were originally promised; and how many are deployed in Iraq from each country. [129745]

Mr. Rammell: In addition to 11,000 UK and 140,000 US forces, over 30 countries are committed to join the Coalition in Iraq. The following countries are already deployed; Italy (3,000), Netherlands (1,100), Denmark (420), Lithuania (88), Czech Republic (330), Romania (510), Norway (140), Bulgaria (480), Dominican Republic (300), Hungary (300), Mongolia (250), Poland (2,300), Slovakia (120), Spain (1,250), Thailand (26), Ukraine, (1,800), Albania (70), Kazakhstan (25), Uzbekistan (135), Georgia (69), Macedonia (25), Azerbaijan (150), Moldova (42), Estonia (43), Latvia (142), Honduras (366), El Salvador (415), Nicaragua (111), South Korea (675) and the Philippines (55).

Portugal will send 130 military police and New Zealand 44 engineers (for humanitarian and reconstruction assistance) later this month to assist the UK area. Tonga are also expected to deploy troops and Thailand and Denmark are committed to send further forces at a later date.

Israel

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact of recent developments in Israel on the peace process. [129061]

Mr. Rammell: The renewal in mid-August of the familiar cycle of violence in Israel and the Occupied Territories has set back the peace process. But the vast majority of Israelis and Palestinians want an end to this violence and a lasting peace. The will of the international community to work for peace remains strong. We must encourage all parties to overcome the current difficulties, implement the roadmap and realise its vision of a two-state solution. To do this, the new Palestinian leadership must act with renewed determination to stop the suicide bombers, and Israel must stop targeted killings.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will press the Israeli Government to stop further seizures of land from Palestinians. [130379]

Mr. Rammell: My right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and Foreign Secretary have raised with the Government of Israel, the UK's concerns about the seizure of Palestinian land. We deplore both continuing settlement activity and land appropriation and the isolation of Palestinian villages for construction of the 'security fence'. Our embassy in Tel Aviv and FCO officials have also raised this matter with Israel and will continue to do so; lasting peace can only be achieved through a negotiated settlement and not unilateral actions.

Pakistan

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions have taken place with representatives from Pakistan regarding the persecution of Christians; and what has been done to encourage the Pakistani administration to stop such activities. [129096]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We remain concerned about the treatment of Christians and misuse of the blasphemy laws in Pakistan. The EU made clear its concerns and raised specific cases with the Pakistan authorities on 7 February 2003 and again on 23 June 2003. We will remain engaged and continue to urge Pakistan to pursue laws and practices to protect Christians and other religious minorities against discrimination, intimidation and attacks.

Peter Bleach

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made with the Government's request to release Mr. Peter Bleach from India; and what action will be taken if Mr. Bleach is released into UK custody by the Indian authorities. [129761]

Mr. Rammell: During his visit to the UK in June, the Indian Deputy Prime Minister, Mr. L K Advani, gave assurances to my right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and the Foreign Secretary that he would take a fresh look at Mr. Bleach's case. Our High Commission in New Delhi continues to make representations to the Government of India about Mr. Bleach's case.

In the event of Mr. Bleach's release, we understand the Indian Ministry of Home Affairs and Ministry of External Affairs will notify our Posts in Kolkata and New Delhi, where consular officers stand ready to make the practical arrangements for Mr. Bleach's return to the UK.

The British Deputy High Commission in Kolkata remains in close contact with Mr. Bleach about his case. Our consular staff in Kolkata will continue to visit Mr. Bleach regularly and do all they properly can to help him, and will let him know immediately of any developments.

Somali People (Entry Clearance)

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arrangements are made at UK diplomatic posts in (a) Kenya and (b) Ethiopia for entry clearance applications to be made by Somali people to travel to the UK. [129743]

Mr. Mullin: Due to a specific threat, our High Commission in Nairobi has introduced security restrictions to those entering the High Commission compound.

As a result, the Visa Section is currently only able to accept applications for entry clearance from those who hold appropriate documentation confirming their nationality and identity.

The documents currently accepted by the High Commission in Nairobi are:

national passports issued by a competent authority of a Government recognised by the British Government;

stateless documents issued by a competent authority of a Government recognised by the British Government; and Kenyan national identity cards.

This requirement applies to all visitors to the High Commission and is not aimed specifically at a particular nationality. However, since the collapse of the central authority in Somalia in 1991, there has been no reliable body authorised to issue marriage or birth certificates, passports or any other form of identification. Therefore, these restrictions affect the majority of Somali nationals who wish to apply at our Visa Section in Nairobi for entry clearance to the UK.

The High Commission is keeping the security situation under close review and the restrictions will be in place no longer than necessary. However, UK visas and the Visa Section in Nairobi are actively reviewing the procedures to try and identify ways for Somali nationals without documentation to submit applications that are compatible with maintaining security.

Our embassy in Addis Ababa does not face the same security issues as our High Commission in Nairobi. The Visa Section in Addis Ababa is able to accept applications from all Somali nationals, even those without documents. Applications can be made in person or through an agent. Applicants are then allocated a date to attend the Visa Section for an interview.

Tibet

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment has been made of the human rights situation in Tibet. [129468]

Mr. Rammell: We remain concerned about the human rights situation in Tibet and encourage China to continue dialogue with the Dalai Lama's representatives.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary raised our concerns with Chinese Foreign Minister Li Zhaoxing on 25 June. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister raised Tibet with the Chinese leadership during his visit to China from 20–22 July.

Embassy officials visited Tibet at the end of August and discussed a range of issues with local government officials.

TREASURY

Audit Requirements

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will bring the audit requirements for industrial and provident societies in line with those of registered companies. [129273]

(2) if he will amend the requirement on industrial and provident societies wanting to publish interim accounts to undertake a full audit. [129274]

Ruth Kelly: The Government is keen to see, where appropriate, a level playing field between industrial and provident societies and companies. We continue to examine the options for taking forward this agenda. However, in order to provide for a strategic, consistent and up-to-date approach between companies and societies, the Government believes that the general modernisation of industrial and provident society legislation in this area should be considered in light of the Department of Trade and Industry's Company Law Review.

Bruemark Ruling

Richard Ottaway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total sum of money deposited with the Bank of England by frustrated liquidations has been since the Bruemark Ruling in June 2001. [129221]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested is not available to the Treasury.

Computer Fraud

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much has been (a) budgeted and (b) spent by his Department since April 2002 on (i) combating computer fraud, (ii) preventing theft of computers and (iii) safeguarding the security of information held on computer; and if he will make a statement. [128801]

John Healey: The risks of computer fraud, computer theft and unauthorised access to information held on computer are taken very seriously by the Chancellor's Departments and they are active in raising awareness of those risks and managing them, though most of the expenditure on doing so forms part of existing budgets for business as usual rather than being separately identified. Therefore the information requested is not available in the form requested.

Corporation Tax

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the revenue raised by the March 1998 Budget decision to abolish advanced corporation tax and introduce quarterly payments of corporation tax, for each year from 1998–99 to 2005–06; and if he will make a statement. [130147]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates of the impact on the Exchequer of the abolition of ACT and introduction of quarterly instalment payments were quoted in the 1998 Budget report.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the cost of the changes to the statutory corporation tax deduction for share schemes announced in the Pre-Budget Report November 2002; what the purpose is of the changes; and if he will make a statement. [130234]

Dawn Primarolo: The provision to introduce a statutory corporation tax relief for employee share acquisition announced in the November 2002 Pre-Budget Report was brought into effect by Schedule 23 of Finance Act 2003. The estimate of exchequer costs to provide the statutory relief is in the Final Regulatory Impact Assessment published on the 10 April 2003 and remain unchanged, growing to around £95 million by 2007–08. The purpose of the statutory relief is to encourage and enable companies to set-up or expand employee share schemes by removing the need for complex arrangements solely to obtain a CT deduction. It levels the playing field between the use of cash and equity as remuneration and provides a modern, simple and fair system. It gives certainty to companies in terms of timing and amount of relief, reduces administration and compliance costs.

Correspondence

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will reply to the letters from the hon. Member for Broxbourne of (a) 16 June, (b) 15 July, (c) 13 August and (d) 9 September relating to her constituent, Mrs. Julia Cuxson-Jones of Cheshunt. [129833]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue replied on behalf of the Chancellor on 15 September 2003.

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will reply to the letters from the hon. Member for Broxbourne of (a) 16 June, (b) 15 July, (c) 13 August and (d) 9 September relating to her constituent, Mrs. Louise Stevens of Cheshunt. [129834]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue replied on behalf of the Chancellor on 15 September 2003.

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will reply to the letters from the hon. Member for Broxbourne of (a) 16 June, (b) 15 July, (c) 13 August and (d) 9 September relating to her constituent, Mr. J.A. Russell of Cheshunt. [129835]

Ruth Kelly: I wrote to the hon. Lady on 10 September.

Developing Countries

Mr. Barry Gardiner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of the extent of (a) illegal property ownership and (b) illegal working patterns in developing countries; and what assessment he has made of the impact in each case on the ability of developing countries meeting their international financial obligations; [129314]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the impact (a) property rights and (b) a formalised system for establishing property ownership has on the ability of developing countries (i) to improve their economic position and (ii) to fulfil their international debt repayment obligations. [129325]

John Healey: There is widespread consensus that weak property rights are a key barrier to private sector development, economic growth and poverty reduction by, for example, deterring foreign investment, discouraging people from investing in their land, and preventing them from using it as collateral for loans.

Almost all of the world's poor are engaged in some form of private sector activity, with most in the informal sector. Private sector policy must therefore support the development of small, medium and micro enterprises in both the formal and informal sectors.

The ability of a country to meet its international financial obligations depends on a range of factors that will support private sector development and economic growth, including sound macroeconomic policies that ensure the level of debt remains sustainable.

There are many other factors that are important to securing greater investment, raising growth rates and reducing poverty including: the quality of governance, the level of corruption, crime and political instability; access to credit and finance; the quality of infrastructure; and the macroeconomic environment. The ability of a country to meet its international financial obligations also depends on sound macroeconomic policies that ensure the level of debt remains sustainable.

The UK Government supports various initiatives to help developing country governments identify and create the right conditions for private investment and growth

Employer-loaned Computers

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the revenue cost each year of the tax relief on employer-loaned computers, as introduced in the 1999 Budget, for each year from 1999–2000 to 2005–06; what assessment he has made of the economic value of this relief; and if he will make a statement. [130143]

Dawn Primarolo: Information on which to base up-to-date estimates of the cost of this exemption is not available.

Employment

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his most recent estimate is of the number of people in Crosby who are in (a) temporary and (b) part-time employment. [129462]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Ms Claire Curtis-Thomas, dated 15 September 2003:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question about part-time and temporary employment in Crosby. I am replying in his absence. (129462)

The Labour Force Survey (LFS) gives estimates of part-time and temporary employment rates, but not the numbers of people, for Parliamentary Constituencies. The latest available estimate, for the twelve month period ending February 2002, is that 24.9 per cent of the employed population resident in Crosby were working part-time. The LFS sample size is too small to give reliable estimates of temporary employment for Crosby.

Enterprise Investment Scheme

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the cost of reducing the minimum holding period for (a) investments under the Enterprise Investment Scheme and (b) for venture capital trusts, as announced in the March 2000 Budget, for each year from 2000–01 to 2005–06; what economic benefits have resulted from these changes; and if he will make a statement. [130127]

Dawn Primarolo: The forecast cost of reducing the minimum holding period for investment in the Enterprise Investment Scheme and Venture Capital Trust scheme was given in the Financial Statement and Budget Report 2003 (HC 500).

In April 2003, the Inland Revenue published research into the EIS and VCT schemes carried out by PACEC and the Centre for Business Research at the University of Cambridge (available at http://home.inrev.gov.uk/inlandrevenue/research/report.pdf). This research concluded that both schemes have met their objectives of encouraging more investment by individuals in smaller, high risk trading companies, which in turn has increased their potential to grow and become successful. The research did not measure the benefits of the holding period change specifically, but found that, of those existing investors that were aware of any changes made to the schemes, up to half would be more likely to invest through the schemes in future as a result.

Enterprise Management Incentives

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what his estimate is of the total revenue cost of introducing enterprise management incentives in the March 2000 Budget to allow smaller high risk companies to issue the tax-advantaged share options to key staff, for each year from 2000–01 to 2005–06; what assessment has been made of the economic benefit of this scheme; and if he will make a statement; [130128]

(2) what the total cost of the Enterprise Management Incentives is for each year from 2001–02 to 2005–06; what assessment has been made of the benefits of this scheme; and if he will make a statement. [130131]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates of the exchequer cost of tax and national insurance relief on options granted under Enterprise Management Incentives (EMI) were published in Budget 2000 for 2000–01 to 2002–03 (Table A.13). The additional costs of subsequent changes to the EMI rules were published in Budget 2001 (Table A.13) and the pre-Budget report 2001 (Table B4). These estimates are of the taxable salary sacrificed in lieu of EMI option grants and no further estimates have been made on this basis.

Each year, estimates of the tax and national insurance relief cost of gains made by employees upon exercise of their EMI options are published in Inland Revenue Statistics on the Revenue's website at www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/emp_share_schemes/menu.htm. Only a very small number of employees exercised their options in the early years of EMI, so the estimated costs were negligible for 2000–01 and 2001–02. These costs will rise as the scheme matures.

As stated in the Full Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA), published in March 2000, a full review of the success of EMI will take place during 2005. In the meantime, the Inland Revenue continues to monitor the administration, take-up, and exchequer costs of the initiative. To date, around 4,000 companies have granted EMI options to around 60,000 employees.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the cost of the expansion of the Enterprise Management Incentives announced in the 2001 Budget for each year from 2000–01 to 2004–05; and if he will make a statement. [130133]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is contained in the Financial Statement and Budget Report 2001.

Household Debt

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to tackle the levels of household debt in the UK. [129935]

Mr. Boateng: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Tamworth (Mr. Jenkins) on 16 June 2003, Official Report, column 40W and 30 June 2003, Official Report, column 52W.

Individual Learning Accounts

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the total cost of tax reliefs on individual learning account contributions for each year from 2000–01 to 2005–06; and if he will make a statement. [130141]

Dawn Primarolo: Information on which to base up-to-date estimates of the cost of these exemptions is not available.

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to make changes to the inheritance tax regime to reflect recent trends in property price inflation, with particular reference to the value of the principal residence of the deceased. [129719]

Dawn Primarolo: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer considers all taxes as part of his annual Budget judgment.

Lung Cancer

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people died as a result of lung cancer in (a) England and (b) Northern Ireland in 2002. [129481]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Mrs. Curtis-Thomas, dated 15 September 2003:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your question concerning lung cancer deaths in (a) England (b) Northern Ireland in 2002. I am replying in his absence. (129481) The latest year for which data are available is 2001, whose figures are shown in the table below.

Mortality for malignant neoplasm of trachea, bronchus or lung[1], (a) England (b) Northern Ireland, 2001[2]

	Northern Ireland	England
Number of deaths	26,894	782
Age-standardised rate[3] per 100,000	40.4	41.4

[1] Selected using code C33-C34 from the International Classification of Diseases Tenth Revision.

[2] Data are for occurrences of death per calendar year for England and registrations of death per calendar year for Northern Ireland.

[3] Directly age-standardised to the European Standard Population.

National Insurance Fund

Paul Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the surplus expected in the National Insurance Fund in March 2004. [129717]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer my hon. Friend to Table 2 on page 7 of the Report by the Government Actuary on the drafts of the Social Security Benefits Up-rating Order 2003 and the Social Security (Contributions) (Re-rating and National Insurance Funds Payments) Order 2003.

North Sea Fiscal Regime

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the cost of abolishing the North Sea royalty for each year from 2003–04 to 2005–06; what the reasons were for this decision; and if he will make a statement. [130235]

Dawn Primarolo: North Sea Royalty was abolished from 1 January 2003 as part of the package of measures introduced by the Chancellor in his 2002 Budget to modernise the North Sea fiscal regime. Along with the other measures in the package its abolition will promote long-term investment in the North Sea, make the tax regime more closely linked to profits and ensure a fairer return for the nation from profits derived from a national resource. The estimated cost of abolition is given in the table A2 of the Financial Statement and Budget Report 2003 [HC 500].

Customs Detector Dogs

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 6 March by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, Official Report, columns 952–53, how many food sniffer dogs are available at (a) airports and (b) seaports. [129143]

John Healey: I refer the hon. Gentlemen to the answer I gave him on 10 September. The additional information requested on the deployment of detector dogs is not available; exemption 4 (Law Enforcement and legal proceedings) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information applies to all such information about Customs anti-smuggling activities.

Premium Bonds

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many unclaimed prizes from premium bonds there are; and what their cumulative value is. [128876]

Ruth Kelly: There are 390,352[1] bonds outstanding that amount to £23 million[1] unclaimed Premium Bond prizes.

[1] Figure correct as of the 1 September 2003.

Regional Pay

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which public sector workers will be affected by his plans on regional pay. [127214]

Mr. Boateng: All departments and agencies across the public sector are expected to consider how regional and local pay flexibilities apply to their workforce, except where an exemption has been specifically allowed, or where responsibility lies with the devolved administrations.

Research and Development Tax Credit

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the cost of the research and development tax credit for each year from 1999–2000 to 2005–06; what assessment he has made of the additional research and development expenditure which has occurred because of this policy; and if he will make a statement. [130145]

Dawn Primarolo: Latest estimates of the cost, on an accruals basis, of the research and development tax credit for each year from 2000–01 to 2002–03 are available on the Inland Revenue's website at http://www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/taxexpenditures/q_t06_1.htm.

Residential Property Sales

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the number of annual residential property sales of (a) under £100,000, (b) under £200,000, (c) under £300,000, (d) under £400,000, (e) under £500,000, (f) under £600,000, (g) under £750,000, (h) under £1 million and (i) over £1 million; and if he will make a statement. [130151]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates of the number of residential property sales in 2002 are given in the table:

Price band (£s)	Number of transactions £000s
Under 100,000	777
100,000—199,999	425
200,000—299,999	160
300,000—399,999	47
400,000—499,999	21
500,000—599,999	6
600,000—749,999	5
750,000—1,000,000	4
Over £1 million	4
Total:	1,450

Source:
Survey of Property Transactions

Savings

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the amount of savings certificates and savings deposits issued through the Post Office which are unlikely to be claimed or cashed. [128877]

Ruth Kelly: We estimate that there is a potential £710 million forgotten or unclaimed funds held in matured Savings Certificates, and £525 million forgotten or unclaimed deposits held in savings accounts (where no transactions have been made in the last five years).

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions between 31 March 2002 and 31 March 2003 (a) departmental and (b) non-departmental special advisors have travelled abroad in an official capacity; what places were visited; and how much each visit cost. [126661]

Ruth Kelly: Between 31 March 2002 and 31 March 2003 special advisers in the Treasury Department travelled abroad on official business on eight occasions, at an average cost of £4,330 per trip. Countries visited are USA on 19–22 April 2002, 30 May to 2 June 2002, 3–5 September 2002, 26–30 September 2002 (×2), 5 March 2003; France on 11 September 2002 and 16 January 2003. All travel by special advisers is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

Tax Credits

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many child tax credit recipients have made an application for reassessment; and of that number how many were on the basis of (a) the award being an overpayment and (b) the award being an underpayment. [122699]

Dawn Primarolo: Awards of child and working tax credits are adjusted if claimants report a change in the circumstances on which the award is based. Claimants may also ask for their award to be adjusted to reflect their expected income for the current tax year.

The tax credits award for 2003–04 is initially based on the family's income for the tax year 2001–02. The final tax credits award will be based on 2003–04 income if it is lower, or more than £2,500 higher, than 2001–02 income. Even if income does rise, the first £2,500 of the rise is ignored in finalising the award. To allow awards to be adjusted to reflect current income, claimants can ask during the year for their tax credits to be based on their expected 2003–04 income, which is checked against actual income after the year end.

Table 6.1 of "Child and Tax Credits Quarterly Statistics. July 2003" shows the number of families with awards who have asked for their awards to be adjusted to reflect their expected 2003–04 income. This publication is available on the Inland Revenue website, at www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/menu.htm.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people who are eligible for each of the new tax credits have yet to apply; and how many (a) applications have been received and (b) eligible people there are in (i) the Teesside region and (ii) the Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency. [128670]

Dawn Primarolo: In total, 6 million families are expected to receive new tax credits. Already, after just 5 months, over 5.8 million families are benefiting, which is over 95 per cent. of those expected to be reached over the entire year.

The available estimates of the number of families in each local authority and constituency receiving child and working tax credit appear in "Child and Working Tax Credit Statistics. Geographical analyses. July 2003". This is on the Inland Revenue website, at www.inlandreveneue.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/menu.htm.

Estimates of the numbers of people expected to receive new tax credits are not available below the regional level.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people are in receipt of (a) child tax credit and (b) working tax credit, in each London constituency; how many claims are outstanding; and if he will make a statement. [128758]

Clive Efford: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many families in Eltham have benefited from the child tax credit; and what the overall amount paid out through the credit to families in Eltham was in the last 12 months; [129430]

(2) what the average gain of families in Eltham has been from the child tax credit; [129431]

(3) how many families he estimates will benefit from the working tax credit in Eltham; and what will be the average gain per family (a) in the UK and (b) in Eltham. [129433]

Adam Price: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in the Carmarthen East and Dinefwr constituency are in receipt of (a) child tax credit and (b) working tax credit; and how many claims are outstanding. [129215]

Dawn Primarolo: The available estimates of the number of families in each local authority and constituency receiving child and working tax credit appear in "Child and Working Tax Credit Statistics. Geographical analyses. July 2003". This is on the Inland Revenue website, at www.inlandreveneue.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/menu.htm.

Any claims outstanding are ones where the Revenue is awaiting for further information, or are being verified. There is no breakdown of such claims by constituency.

Statistics on average awards will be published after the end of the tax year, when awards have been finalised.

Clive Efford: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to encourage families to claim (a) the working tax credit and (b) the child tax credit. [129434]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Northavon (Mr. Webb) on 10 February 2003, Official Report, column 604W, regarding child tax credit. Since that date further publicity has included television, press, radio and online advertising as well as direct mail.

Third World Debt

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on progress with cancellation of Third World debt by, (a) the UK and (b) other countries. [129744]

Mr. Boateng: The UK government have been at the forefront of the international debate on debt relief issues, and continues to press for the rapid and full implementation of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) initiative.

Of the 38 countries that stand to benefit from enhanced HIPC debt relief, there are now 27—23 from Africa and 4 from Latin America—that already benefit from debt relief, which will amount in total to over $70 billion. This is a significant step towards achieving the $100 billion commitment made at the Cologne summit in 1999, and will reduce their debts to below the average for developing countries. For these 27 countries, the UK is providing 100 per cent. relief on their debts. Furthermore, the Chancellor has announced that any payments from countries yet to reach Decision Point would be held in trust for the day they can be returned to fund poverty reduction. Since 1999, the total UK commitment to multilateral institutions such as the World bank, the African Development Bank and the International Monetary Fund (IMF) to support the HIPC initiative has been $474 million.

At their recent Summit in Evian, G8 governments reaffirmed their commitment to the HIPC initiative. They recognised the need to encourage and assist eligible countries in taking the steps necessary to complete the HIPC process. They urged the IMF and World bank to intensify their efforts to secure full participation of all creditors in the initiative, and reaffirmed their objective of ensuring debt sustainability for countries reaching completion point. Following on from discussions at Evian, the Chancellor will be working with other G7 Finance Ministers to agree the methodology for calculating the amount of "topping-up" debt relief available to countries. The UK has been pushing for a change in the rules of HIPC to exclude additional voluntary bilateral debt relief from the calculation of topping-up at Completion Point and the Chancellor will be working with other G8 Finance Ministers to review mechanisms to encourage good governance and the methodology for calculating the amount of topping-up debt relief available to countries—a measure that could provide an estimated $1 billion extra debt relief to HIPCs. In addition, the Treasury and the Department for International Development is seeking international support to establish the International Finance Facility, which could raise $50 billion annually to fund the Millennium Development Goals. This money could be disbursed in the form of concessional loans and grants, including debt relief.

Water Efficient Technologies

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the effects of the introduction of enhanced capital allowances for water-efficient technologies; what assessment has been made by the Treasury of such effects; and if he will make a statement. [130236]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is contained in Table A1 (page 185) of the Financial Statement and Budget Report 2003 [HC 500].

Actual Exchequer cost will depend upon take-up of the qualifying technology products. It is too early to comment on the actual take-up of thepolicy and the related effects.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Immigration Work (Legal Practices)

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many legal practices specialising in immigration work have ceased to offer their services in the last two years citing insufficient income from legal aid as a reason. [127393]

Mr. Lammy: Neither my Department, nor the Legal Services Commission, maintain records on the number of legal practices specialising in immigration work that have ceased to offer their services citing insufficient income from legal aid as a reason. However, the number of organisations with contracts to provide publicly funded immigration and asylum legal services has increased over the last two years from 548 to 644.

Legal Services Commission

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether the Legal Services Commission uses a cost-benefit analysis when deciding whether to grant legal aid. [128813]

Mr. Lammy: The Legal Services Commission assesses applications for Community Legal Service funding (formerly civil legal aid) against a means and a merits assessment under the Funding Code approved by Parliament. The only exceptions are public law Children Act cases and hearings before the Mental Health Review Tribunal, for which funding is available on a non-means, non-merits basis. A cost-benefit test is an important part of this assessment. The Code imposes different types of cost-benefit test according to the nature of the case. Broadly the criteria seek to ensure that public funding is only available in circumstances where a privately paying client would be prepared to litigate.

A cost-benefit test is not used when deciding whether to grant publicly funded legal representation in criminal cases. The only test in determining whether an individual should be publicly funded is whether it is in the interests of justice, as required by article 6 of ECHR.

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what plans the Department has to review the guidelines used by the Legal Services Commission in making decisions on the allocation of legal aid. [128814]

Mr. Lammy: The Legal Services Commission is responsible for granting public funding in civil cases. The merits criteria for the public funding of individual civil claims are contained in the Commission's Funding Code, which is established under the Access to Justice Act 1999. The criteria themselves are supported by detailed decision-making guidance which is regularly reviewed and updated by the Commission.

There are plans to issue a consultation paper later this year to consider whether changes to the Funding Code should be made. Any changes would be implemented on or after April 2004.

Sheriffs

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many (a) Sheriffs and (b) Under Sheriffs are (i) women and (ii) from minority ethnic communities; and if he will make a statement. [129318]

Mr. Leslie: Of the 51 High Sheriffs in England and Wales that the Privy Council is responsible for appointing (that is, excluding Lancashire, Greater Manchester, Merseyside and Cornwall) 16 (31 per cent.) are women. The responsibility for appointing Under Sheriffs lies with High Sheriffs, and the Privy Council has no responsibility for them. Information on the ethnic background of nominees for High Sheriff is not supplied to the Privy Council. Appointment panels have now been set up, in all areas, and they have been asked to ensure that the pool from which nominees are drawn includes people from as wide a variety of backgrounds as possible.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Alconbury Airfield

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he will make a decision on the application by Alconbury Development Ltd. concerning the Alconbury airfield. [129685]

Keith Hill: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister is currently consulting parties about whether material changes have occurred since the inquiry into the appeals, relating to development at Alconbury Airfield, closed. The deadline for responses is 13 October. Any representations made will then be circulated for comment, giving a further period within which final comments may be made. The decisions on the appeals will be made as soon as possible after that. The exact timing will, however, depend on whether any matters arise from the reference back.

Local Authority Housing

Bob Russell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will set out his reasons for refusing to allocate additional funds to those local authorities who choose not to establish arm's length management operations for their council housing. [129306]

Keith Hill: The Sustainable Communities Plan made it clear that there are three options open to local authorities seeking additional investment in their housing stock: Stock transfer, the Private Finance Initiative and the establishment of an Arms Length Management Organisation (ALMO).

The range of options is needed so that the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister can increase the quality of social housing alongside the achievement of other priorities. Additional resources are directed to options that will improve performance and service quality at the same time.

Bob Russell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the local authorities which have conducted ballots amongst their housing tenants for arm's length management operations; and what (a) the turn-out in each case and (b) the percentage votes for and against was. [129307]

Keith Hill: The information requested is tabled as follows:

Percentage

Local authority	Turnout	In favour	Not in favour
ALMO round 1
Derby	48	88	12
Hounslow	35	83	17
Kirklees	47	81	19
Rochdale	46	90	10
Stockton	44	93	7
ALMO round 2
Barnsley	25	57	43
Carrick	61	96	4
Colchester	57	76	24
Leeds—East	35	83	17
Leeds—North East	41	88	12
Leeds—North West	42	89	11

Local authority	Turnout	In favour	Not in favour
			Percentage
Leeds—South	39	91	9
Leeds—South East	40	88	12
Leeds—West	38	90	10
Waltham Forest	49	85	15

Bob Russell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he will allocate additional funds to local authorities whose tenants have voted in favour of the establishment of arm's length management operations. [129308]

Keith Hill: Allocation of funds to a local authority under the Arms Length Management Organisation (ALMO) Programme is subject to two conditions: the council obtaining approval from the Secretary of State under section 27 of the Housing Act 1985 to delegate its housing management functions to an ALMO, for which tenant support is a key criterion; and the ALMO gaining at least a 2* from the Housing Inspectorate. We confirm the allocation of funds when both of these conditions are satisfied.

Census Forms

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many people have been prosecuted for not filling in their census forms in (a) Crosby and (b) the UK. [129452]

Ruth Kelly: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Mrs. Curtis-Thomas:

The National Statistician and Registrar General for England and Wales has been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many people have been prosecuted for not filling in their census forms in (a) Crosby and (b) in the UK. I am replying in his absence.

In England and Wales there were 38 prosecutions for refusal to complete and return a census form. There was one prosecution in the Crosby constituency. Scotland and Northern Ireland conducted their own Censuses and prosecution for refusal to complete and return a census form was the responsibility of the respective Registrars General of these countries.

The Office for National Statistics followed a policy of only prosecuting in cases where it had obtained clear and sufficient documentary evidence of a refusal to return a completed Census form.

Correspondence

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he will reply to the letters from the hon. Member for Broxbourne of (a) 19 June, (b) 15 July, (c) 13 August and (d) 9 September relating to correspondence from Hertfordshire county council. [129832]

Yvette Cooper: I replied to the hon. Member on 11 September.

Disability Grants

Lynne Jones: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make it his policy that no elderly or disabled person should wait more than six months for an assessment of needs, the provision of finance and the execution of works required under disability facilities grant arrangements; and if he will make a statement. [128898]

Yvette Cooper: Disabled Facilities Grants (DFGs) are administered by local authorities who are under a statutory duty to notify an applicant on whether or not their application is approved as soon as is reasonably practicable, but no later than six months after the date of application. The grant is payable on completion of the works. Authorities have a statutory power to delay payment if they are under financial pressure but in these cases this must not be beyond 12 months from the date of grant application.

We have recently consulted on new Office of the Deputy Prime Minister/Department of Health draft guidance on delivering housing adaptations for disabled people, which sets out the Government's view of best practice on service delivery. This includes target times for the complete delivery process including needs assessment, processing of the application and the completion of building works. These target times will depend on the complexity of, and priority attached to, individual cases but the guidance suggests that the maximum target time for the entire process should in any event be no more than 260 working days and only 80 working days in high priority cases.

We are currently considering responses to this consultation and hope to issue final guidance to local housing and social service authorities before the end of this year.

Dispute Resolution

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what developments there have been in the introduction of alternative dispute resolution methods into public sector contracts; and if he will make a statement. [128669]

Phil Hope: On 23 March 2001, the Lord Chancellor published a formal pledge committing Government Departments and agencies to settle disputes by Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR) techniques. As part of that pledge, Departments are committed to including appropriate clauses in their standard procurement contracts on the use of ADR to settle disputes arising under those contracts. The document "Dispute Resolution Guidance" issued by the Office of Government Commerce and available on their website at http://www.ogc.gov.uk/sdtoolkit/reference/ogc_library/generic_guidance/dispute.pdf contains further details on the pledge, and includes at Annex B model clauses relating to ADR.

Fire Sprinklers

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make it a legal requirement for fire sprinklers to be installed in all new dwellings; and if he will make a statement. [129118]

Phil Hope: The Building Regulations apply to most building work undertaken in England and Wales, typically the erection, extension or material alteration of a building. Part B of the Building Regulations sets out the requirements for fire safety and is supported by Approved Document B which provides guidance on measures that will meet these requirements,

A major review of Part B and its supporting Approved Document is due to commence in early 2004. As part of this review it is our intention to consider the potential of extending the existing provisions for sprinkler protection under the Building Regulations to new residential premises, including dwellings. The proposals will be subject to a full public consultation, and will be supported by a Regulatory Impact Assessment.

General Permitted Development Order

Matthew Green: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what changes have been made to Class B under Part 4 of the General Permitted Development Order since September 2001. [128528]

Keith Hill: There have been no changes to Part 4, Class B of Schedule 2 to the General Permitted Development Order (GPDO) since September 2001. In January 2002 the Government published a consultation paper on possible options for change to the temporary use provisions. Due to the high level of public interest in the matter of temporary uses, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister made an interim announcement on 21 August 2002 that there would be no change to existing provisions.

Housing

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assistance he can give to areas with high house prices and low incomes to increase housing affordability; and if he will make a statement. [129156]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister published the "Sustainable Communities: Building for the Future" on 5 February. This set out a range of measures to create conditions in which private house builders can increase supply and to make the best use of the existing housing stock.

In addition funding for the Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme in 2003–04 has been increased to around £1.5 billion—an increase of £500 million on last year—to enable housing associations to provide homes for both rent and low cost home ownership. In all the Government will be providing around £5 billion for investment in affordable housing by 2005–06. Decisions on the allocation of these funds will be based on recommendations from the regional housing boards based on priorities identified in regional housing strategies.

The Sustainable Communities Plan announced that the Home Ownership Task Force would be examining all the various home ownership programmes and the scope for better targeting and design. The task force is due to report in the autumn.

Housing Development (Sewerage Networks)

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what inspections local authority planning officers are required to carry out to ensure that new housing developments are correctly connected to sewerage networks. [129870]

Keith Hill: Planning policy guidance note 23 "Planning and pollution control", which was published in 1994 clearly states that the arrangements for sewage disposal are capable of being a material consideration in planning applications and appeals. It advises that local planning authorities may need to refuse planning permission where they are not satisfied about the adequacy of sewerage infrastructure or they may be able to impose conditions to ensure that suitable arrangements are in place. Examples of the types of conditions are given in Department of the Environment Circular 11/95 "The use of conditions in planning permissions".

The consideration given to sewage disposal when determining planning applications will depend on the circumstances. Local authority planning officers are only responsible for enforcing planning conditions that have been imposed. In many circumstances there will be no need to impose planning conditions related to sewerage arrangements.

However, Part H of the Building Regulations 2000 requires the provision of an adequate system of drainage to carry foul water from appliances within the building to a prioritised list of alternative foul water outfalls (public or private sewer, septic tank or a cesspool). Enforcement of the Building Regulations 2000 is by local authority building control departments or approved inspectors. Where a connection is to be made to a public sewer, under the Water Industry Act 1991, there is a duty to notify the sewerage undertaker and provision for the undertaker to inspect the connection.

Local Rates

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister under what powers local authorities may charge a local rate on new build houses when the roads, drains and play areas have not been adopted by that local authority. [129175]

Keith Hill: Local taxation on domestic property has been in the form of council tax since 1993–94. Currently local authorities have no power to vary council tax across their areas because roads, drains and play areas have not been adopted. However, subject to parliamentary approval, the Local Government Bill will provide a discretionary power for local billing authorities to offer locally determined council tax discounts.

Park Homes

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he expects to consult on measures affecting park homes which require legislation. [129301]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister set up the Park Homes Working Party to consider the need to change existing legislation. The Working Party's we considered recommendations and consulted on in 2001. Options for changes to the law are currently being considered.

Planning

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what sanctions can be used by (a) his Department and

(b) members of the public if a section 106 planning gain for a new primary school is not then taken up by the planning authority. [129177]

Keith Hill: There are no powers for my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister or members of the public to enforce s106 agreements directly.

Planning obligations made under section 106 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 (as amended by section 12 of the Planning and Compensation Act 1991) are either agreements between the local planning authority and persons with an interest in the land or undertakings given by persons with an interest in the land relating to the matters set out in section 106 (1) (a)–(d):

(a) restricting the development or use of the land in any specified way;

(b) requiring specified operations or activities to be carried out in, on, under or over the land;

(c) requiring the land to be used in any specified way; or

(d) requiring a sum or sums to be paid to the authority on a specified date or dates or periodically.

The planning obligation can only be enforced by the local planning authority against the person who entered into the obligation or any person deriving title from the person who entered into the obligation. The relevant powers are set out at section 106 (5) and section 106 (6). There is no power for the Secretary of State or any other person to enforce the obligation.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what powers a local authority has to prevent further buildings by a developer where the houses recently built by the company on that site which have many snags per house still to be resolved. [129178]

Phil Hope: There are no such powers.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many complaints about homes built by Redrow plc (a) in total and (b) on the Meads Estate near Bobbing have been received by NHBC Building Control Services Ltd. [129179]

Phil Hope: NHBC Building Control Services Ltd. is a subsidiary of NHBC (National House-Building Council), an independent company limited by guarantee. Questions regarding complaints made about developers or house builders to NHBC or its subsidiaries should be directed to NHBC.

Regional Assemblies

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what powers existing regional assemblies have in relation to (a) the hiring of permanent staff and (b) the expenditure of public money. [129025]

Mr. Raynsford: Regional chambers (which style themselves assemblies) are voluntary. Some are companies while others are unincorporated bodies. Their arrangements for the hiring of permanent staff, are a matter for them and will vary between chambers, operating within the constraints ordinarily imposed by the law.

Each regional chamber, or its accountable body, receives an annual grant from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and grant conditions in the funding agreement letters determine permitted expenditure.

Regional Assemblies may derive other income through subscriptions from local authorities and other organisations (such as social and economic partners). Conditions that relate to the expenditure of this money is a matter for those funding bodies to decide.

Social Exclusion

John Robertson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what action he is taking to tackle social exclusion among pensioners. [128134]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is working across Government to tackle pensioner poverty and social exclusion. Since 1997, our strategy for tackling poverty has been to target our help on the poorest pensioners through the minimum income guarantee, the new pension credit and winter fuel payments. The poorest third of pensioners households will have gained over £1,600 a year in real terms.

The Social Exclusion Unit is taking forward a programme of work looking at impacts and trends in social exclusion. This will develop a clearer understanding of how Government policies work together to tackle social exclusion for particular groups, including older people. The programme of work includes a review of the evidence about the impact of policies on social exclusion among older people

The Neighbourhood Renewal Unit aims to ensure that older people benefit from regeneration initiatives. The work of Local Strategic Partnerships should be informed by the views of all local groups, including older people. We are making £36 million available through the Community Empowerment Fund to make sure that under-represented groups are better able to have their voices heard at the local level.

Fear of crime can itself be a cause of social exclusion, particularly among some older people. Neighbourhood Warden Schemes are showing early signs of reducing crime and the fear of crime across some of the most deprived neighbourhoods.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister recognises that it needs to know more about those older people who live within the most deprived areas. Following the recent consultation on updating the Indices of Multiple Deprivation, we will be creating an index of income deprivation among older people.

The "Supporting People" programme offers vulnerable members of the community, including older people, the opportunity to improve their quality of life through greater independence, which can help to combat social exclusion. Through this programme we are promoting high quality, strategically planned housing-related support services that will enable older people to remain in their own homes for as long as possible.

Voter Turnouts

Mr. Denis Murphy: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the average voter turnout in the May 2003 local government elections was (a) where only traditional voting methods were used and (b) where postal ballots were piloted. [126451]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not hold the information requested centrally and it could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The Electoral Commission published their evaluation of the 2003 local electoral pilots on 31 July. According to their report, the average voter turnout across all local elections in 2003, including results from elections held on a pilot basis, was 34.9 per cent. The average turnout at elections where all-postal voting pilots were held was 49.4 per cent.

HEALTH

National Treatment Agency for Substance Misuse

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the National Treatment Agency for Substance Misuse plans to locate staff within the Government Office for the north-west during 2003. [128567]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The National Treatment Agency for Substance Misuse (NTA) was originally structured with a regional manager in nine areas across the country. In 2002, a review of the NTA found regional managers had been over stretched and were not always fully engaged, with Government offices.

The board of the NTA, with the agreement of the Department of Health and the Home Office, decided that further resources and staff should be deployed in each of the regions, commensurate with the area and the number of drug action teams covered. Within the north-west, the regional manager has been joined by two deputy regional managers and one other additional member of staff. A third deputy regional manager is also being recruited.

The Board also decided that collocating the NTA teams in the Government Office for the north-west would enable closer working with Government Office colleagues. Collocation of the north-west NTA team took place on 7 July 2003.

Anti-TNF Therapy

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he plans to take to ensure that health care trusts abide by National Institute for Clinical Excellence guidance on anti TNF therapy. [128678]

Dr. Ladyman: Clinicians have to make an independent clinical judgment, taking due account of the National Institute for Clinical Excellence's (NICE) advice and the strength of evidence which lies behind it. They may therefore depart from the advice if, in their view, the circumstances of the individual patient justify doing so. But they will be held accountable, through clinical governance arrangements, for their clinical decisions.

The Commission for Health Improvement (CHI) and NICE have agreed a methodology for CHI to incorporate the monitoring of NICE guidance in its clinical governance reviews. Specifically, CHI now looks to see if national health service trusts have mechanisms in place to implement and comply with NICE guidance. CHI will also support and facilitate clinicians to discuss when NICE guidance is and is not followed on an individual patient basis.

The Commission for Healthcare Audit and Inspection will be the main inspector of NHS services in the future. It will carry out inspection against clear national standards and we expect NICE guidance to be included in those standards.

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to collect centrally information regarding the level of availability of anti-TNF therapy to qualifying patients for each primary care trust. [129135]

Dr. Ladyman: The National Institute of Clinical Excellence (NICE) recommended the use of anti-TNF therapy in March 2002. We have issued directions obliging strategic health authorities and primary care trusts to provide appropriate funding for treatments recommended by NICE. This is in line with our manifesto commitment to ensure that patients receive drugs and treatments recommended by NICE on the national health service if considered appropriate by their clinicians. The Commission for Health Improvement (CHI) and NICE have agreed a methodology for CHI to incorporate the monitoring of NICE guidance in its clinical governance reviews. Specifically, CHI now looks to see if NHS trusts have mechanisms in place to implement and comply with NICE guidance. CHI will also support and facilitate clinicians to discuss when NICE guidance is and is not followed on an individual patient basis.

The Commission for Healthcare Audit and Inspection will be the main inspector of NHS services in the future. It will carry out inspection against clear national standards and we expect NICE guidance to be included in those standards.

Broomfield Hospital (Waiting Times)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time is at the accident and emergency department at Broomfield Hospital, Chelmsford; and what the equivalent figure was 12 months ago. [127438]

Dr. Ladyman: Information on average waiting times in accident and emergency departments is not collected centrally. Information on the proportion of patients who spend four or fewer hours in a major A and E department from arrival to admission, transfer or discharge has been available each quarter since July 2002.

Information for Mid Essex Hospital Services National Health Service Trust, which runs Broomfield Hospital, is shown in the table.

	Quarter	Percentage of patients who spent less than four hours in A and E
2002-03	2	71
2002-03	3	71
2002-03	4	83

Source:
Department of Health form QMAE

Information from Essex Strategic Health Authority indicates that the average waiting time in A and E at the trust for June 2003 was two hours and 22 minutes. The figure for June 2002 was three hours and 20 minutes.

Care Home Beds (London)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the number of care home beds in London. [128765]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of care home places in Greater London as at 31 March 2001 was 47,430, an increase of four per cent. over the 1997 figures. This compares to a one per cent. increase for England over the same period. Figures for later years have been collected by the National Care Standards Commission and will be published this autumn.

Carers

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has to identify family carers; whether he plans to create a family carers list; and what health, financial and other assistance can be granted to family members who care for relatives. [129104]

Dr. Ladyman: There are no proposals either to identify or create a list of family carers.

As with all carers, family carers are entitled to an assessment to determine their needs as carers and eligibility for support. The Carers Grant, worth £100 million this year, provides money for local councils to provide short breaks and services for carers to enable them to continue in their caring role. Carers are also entitled to cash payments for carers' services to enable them to purchase the type of support they require and promote a better quality of life.

Delayed Discharges

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the most recent national delayed discharges figures which are available. [129844]

Dr. Ladyman: The latest figures on delayed discharge (June 2003), which have been placed in the Library, show that around 4,170 patients of all ages were occupying an acute bed with a delayed transfer at the end of the quarter. This is over 1,300 fewer patients than at the same time the previous year.

Disabled Children (Family Support)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many families with (a) severely disabled children and (b) severely learning disabled children have received family support in each year since 1997, broken down by local authority; and if he will make a statement. [125978]

Dr. Ladyman: Responsibility for the area now rests with my hon. Friend, the Minister for Children, at the Department for Education and Skills.

I refer the hon. Member to the response given to him by my hon. Friend, the Minister for Children at the Department for Education and Skills (Margaret Hodge) on Monday 1 September, Official Report, column 716W.

Health Professionals (Suicide)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many deaths from suicide were recorded of (a) doctors and (b) nurses in 2002. [129483]

Ruth Kelly: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Claire Curtis-Thomas, dated 15 September 2003:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question concerning deaths from suicide among (a) doctors and (b) nurses in 2002. I am replying in his absence. (129483)

The latest year for which data are available is 2001. I refer you to the answer given in the Official Report Volume Number 395 of 4 December 2002, column 910, to Evan Harris MP, which gives the information requested for that year.

Health Protection Agency

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether resources for the Health Protection Agency's civil contingency planning will come from the NHS's general budget. [128664]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Health Protection Agency's funding for civil contingency planning like all of its other central funding is from Section F (central and miscellaneous services) of the Department of Health's "Request for Resources 2 (RfR2)". The national health service's "general budget" is in "Request for Resources 1 (RfR1)".

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether stocks of emergency materiel for the Health Protection Agency will be funded from his Department's overall budget. [128665]

Miss Melanie Johnson: It is not a function of the Health Protection Agency to stockpile material for national medical emergencies. Any such material procured centrally by the Department of Health is funded from the resources and moneys voted to it by Parliament in the Central Government Supply Estimates.

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health from what accounts the Health Protection Agency will be funded. [128668]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Health Protection Agency is funded from the resources and moneys voted to the Department of Health by Parliament in the Central Government Supply Estimates. The relevant part is Section F (central health and miscellaneous services) of Request for Resources 2 (RfR2). The Main Estimates for 2003-04 were approved by Parliament on 6 May 2003.

Health Service (Worcestershire)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the capacity of the medical assessment unit and the accident and emergency department at the Worcestershire Royal Hospital. [129310]

Dr. Ladyman: Worcestershire Royal Hospital is currently engaged in Wave 1 of the NHS Modernisation Agency Emergency Services Collaborative programme. Through this, we would expect the collaborative methodology to review and assess the impact and effectiveness of different parts of the emergency service, including any assessment units they may have.

In July 2003, the Department of Health published a checklist for assessment units on the emergency care website at www.doh.gov.uk/emergencycare. This provides advice and recommends good operational practice. The type and size of assessment unit provided depends on the exact model of care adopted which should reflect local needs.

The Department is currently carrying out a voluntary survey of emergency assessment and observation units within acute trusts across England.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the implications for children's health of the reduction in health visiting services in South Worcestershire. [129311]

Dr. Ladyman: It is for local organisations to determine the health visiting work force required to deliver local and national health priorities including child health. The proposals which have been put forward by South Worcestershire Primary Care Trust are based upon the commitment to provide a family-centred health visiting service which will work with individuals, families and communities to improve child health and tackle health inequalities.

The Department of Health is currently funding a range of initiatives to support PCTs in promoting recruitment, retention and return to practice within the primary care nursing and health visiting work force.

Heartburn

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the connection between heartburn and cancer of the gullet. [127450]

Dr. Ladyman: Cancer of the oesophagus affects around 6,000 people a year in England and Wales, the majority of whom are aged 40 or over. Common symptoms of the cancer are heartburn and difficulty in swallowing. Most people also lose weight and about half have anaemia, which causes severe tiredness.

Cancer of the oesophagus or gullet develops as a result of cell changes in the lining of the oesophagus. There are two main types of cancer of the oesophagus: squamous carcinoma, which is more common at the upper end of the gullet; and adenocarcinoma, which is more common at the lower end, particularly around the junction between the gullet and the stomach. There has been a recent increase in the proportion of tumours arising close to the junction of stomach and gullet, but the reasons for this are not yet known.

We know that cancer patients need to be diagnosed and treated as quickly as possible. This is a very stressful and anxious time for them and they want a diagnosis of their condition as quickly as possible. The Government launched the NHS Cancer Plan on 27 September 2000. This sets out the first ever comprehensive strategy to tackle the disease. It is a major programme of action linking prevention, diagnosis, treatment, care and research.

The Cancer Plan sets out new waiting time targets for cancer treatment. A two-week out-patient waiting time standard was introduced for all urgently referred suspected cancer patients in December 2000 and the most recent figures show that over 98 per cent. of all urgent referrals were seen with two weeks.

By 2005, all cancer patients will wait a maximum of one month from diagnosis to treatment and a maximum of two months from urgent general practitioner referral to treatment. The Government's ultimate goal is that no patient should wait longer than one month from an urgent referral for suspected cancer to the beginning of treatment, except for a good clinical reason or through personal choice. It is planned to achieve this by 2008.

However, past decades of under investment mean this goal is not yet within reach. We are making significant extra investment—an extra £570 million a year by 2003–04—the biggest ever single cash investment in cancer equipment, additional doctors and nurses working in new ways and modernisation through the Cancer Services Collaborative, which aims to cut out delays in the patient journey.

Hospital-acquired Infections

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes have taken place in the number of deaths from MRSA in each of the past nine years; and what changes in the number of deaths he expects to occur in the next three years. [129237]

Ruth Kelly: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Paul Flynn, dated 15 September 2003:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question asking what changes have taken place in the number of deaths from MRSA in each of the past nine years; and what changes in the number of deaths are expected to occur in the next three years. I am replying in his absence. (129237)

Information on deaths from MRSA is not routinely available but a recent research study published in the British Medical Journal identified the number of death certificates that mentioned MRSA as the underlying cause of death or as a contributory cause for the years 1993–1998. The table below gives figures from the study for these years.

Number of deaths where MRSA was mentioned as the underlying or a contributory cause of death, England and Wales, 1993–98

	Number of deaths
1993	47
1994	88
1995	187
1996	290
1997	377
1998	398

The Office for National Statistics is currently in the process of updating this study to cover the period 1999–2002. The results of this analysis will be published next year.

It is impossible to put a firm figure to the number of people who die from MRSA because people are often very sick with a number of other conditions so the contribution of MRSA to the outcome in any particular case is uncertain. In addition, the underlying cause of death is most often the disease or injury which led them to be admitted to hospital, rather than the MRSA which may have complicated the course of the illness.

It is not possible to predict what the figures will be for the next three years.

Learning Disability Services

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the net expenditure was on learning disability by the national health service in each year since 1997–98. [126928]

Dr. Ladyman: The gross expenditure in the hospital and community health servicesince 1997–98 is shown in the table.

£ million

	Expenditure on learning disability
1997–98	1,324
1998–99	1,365
1999–2000	1,421
2000–01	1,486

It is not possible to exclude charges and receipts from the figures to produce a net expenditure figure. It is also not possible to determine the amount of primary care expenditure that is purely learning disability.

Lymphoedema

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the treatment of lymphoedema sufferers in (a) England and (b) Gloucestershire. [129028]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 11 September 2003]: The National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) has issued guidance on the use of drugs for non-Hodgkin's lymphoma and chronic myeloid leukaemia, but not on non-cancer related lymphoedema.

NICE has recently updated the "Improving Outcomes in Breast Cancer Guidance", and that guidance made some recommendations about lymphoedema. These include that cancer networks should agree guidelines for identification and management of lymphoedema and that a lymphoedema service, staffed by nurses and physiotherapists who have experience in dealing with this problem, should be available for all patients who experience arm swelling or discomfort.

In Gloucestershire, lymphoedema patients can access support from their general practitioner practice and community nursing staff. Lymphoedema patients with cancer can also access support from a practice-based dedicated specialist nurse.

Medicines and Health Care Products Agency

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the consultants and their projects being used by the Medicines and Health Care Products Agency. [R] [128594]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 8 September 2003]: Consultants currently being used by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency and the projects they are being used on are as follows:

Accenture—Design and build of IT applications.

Accenture—General Practice Research Database (GPRD) Accelerator Project.

Charles Mackenzie—Enhancements to website applications.

Hay Group—Design of Personal Development and Performance Management System.

Oxford Group—Delivery of Management and Leadership Training programme.

RedAnt Design—General Practice Research Database (GPRD) marketing and customer interface.

TK Consultancy—Design and build of medicines enforcement case investigation system.

Turner and Townsend—Post-merger co-location project.

Unipart Advanced Learning systems—enhancements to device adverse incidents tracking system.

Winton Nightingale—Management of staff restaurant contract.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to appoint a Chief Executive to the Medicines and Health Care Products Regulatory Agency. [R] [128595]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 8 September 2003]: Professor Kent Woods, who has been appointed Chief Executive of the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA), will take up the appointment on 1 January 2004.

Waiting Lists/Times Trust

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people had been waiting for inpatient treatment in the Mid Essex Hospital Services Trust area in each of the last three months for which figures are available. [128871]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of patients waiting for elective in-patient admission at Mid Essex Hospital Services National Health Service Trust was 8,710 at the end of May 2003, 8,414 at the end of June 2003 and 8,299 at the end of July 2003.

Source:
Department of Health form KH07.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people had been waiting 13 weeks or more for an outpatient appointment in the Mid Essex Hospital Services Trust area in the last two available quarters. [128872]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of patients still waiting for a first consultant out-patient appointment following general practitioner written referral at Mid Essex Hospital Services National Health Service Trust was 450 at quarter 4 2002–03 and 578 at quarter 1 2003–04.

Source:
Department of Health form QM80.

NHS Dentistry

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many NHS dental practices there were in (a) Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) Tyne & Wear, (d) the North East and (e) the UK (i) in 1980, (ii) in 1990, (iii) in 2000 and (iv) on the latest dates for which figures are available. [128889]

(2) many dental practices there were in (a) Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) Tyne and Wear, (d) the North East and (e) UK (i) in 1980, (ii) in 1990, (iii) in 2000 and (iv) on the latest date for which figures are available. [128897]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The table gives the requested information for the number of general dental service (GDS) practices. The information is available from 1991. Information is given for 1995, 1996 and 2002 because of the changes in health administration areas.

No information is available currently on the number of totally private dental practices. The Office of Fair Trading Report, The private dentistry market in the U.K. states that about 210 practices are totally private (para 3.30).

General Dental Service: Number of Ental Practices

August each year

	1991	1995	1996[1]	2000	2002	2003[2]
England	8,390	8,269	8,298	8,474	8,497	8,596
Northern Region	1,136	1,099	—	—	—	—
Gateshead	36	35	—	—	—	—
Newcastle	68	61	—	—	—	—
North Tyneside	33	30	—	—	—	—
South Tyneside	23	22	—	—	—	—
Sunderland	35	33	—	—	—	—
Northern and Yorkshire Region	—	—	2,201	2,176	2,149	—
Gateshead and South Tyneside HA	—	—	58	58	57	—
Newcastle and North Tyneside HA	—	—	89	95	93	—
Sunderland HA	—	—	33	32	33	—
Northumberland, Tyne and Wear SHA	—	—	—	—	—	230
Gateshead PCT	—	—	—	—	—	32
Newcastle PCT	—	—	—	—	—	61
North Tyneside PCT	—	—	—	—	—	28
South Tyneside PCT	—	—	—	—	—	23
Sunderland Teaching PCT	—	—	—	—	—	36
Jarrow Constituency[3]	12[4]	11	12	12	12	11

[1] Following the move from Family Health Service Authority (FHSAs) to Health Authority (HAs) in 1996, results are available by HA rather than by FHSA.
[2] Following the move from Health Authority (HAs) to Primary Care Trusts (PCTs) in 2001, results are available by Stategic Health Authority (SHA) and PCT rather than by region and HA.
[3] Constituency defined by current boundaries
[4] 1990 figure.

Source:
Dental Practice Board

Care Standards Act

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact on voluntary organisations concerned with the care of the elderly of the registration fee imposed by the Care Standards Act 2000. [130703]

Dr. Ladyman: The fees payable by care providers registered under the Care Standards Act were the subject of a wide-ranging public consultation in 2001. As part of the funding arrangements, we expect the costs associated with regulatory fee increases to be passed on by providers through increased fees to service users and commissioners of services. This would mean, for example, that local authorities would pay higher amounts and their financial settlements from central Government reflect this.

The Government are committed to a review of the framework for regulatory fees in 2004. This review will include further public consultation.

Prosthetic Services

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment his Department has made of the ability of prosthetic services to meet the needs of users; and if he will make a statement. [128320]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is for primary care trusts to assess the ability of their prosthetic services to meet the needs of users, as part of their general duty to determine what level of resources to devote to the treatment of different conditions in their localities. Strategic health authorities are responsible for the performance management of primary care trusts.

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he gives to hospitals with regard to skin colour matching in the provision of prosthetic limbs. [128274]

Ann Winterton: The National Health Service Purchasing and Supply Agency issues guidance on the availability of products, which enables skin colour

matching in the provision of prosthetic limbs. It is for local clinicians and service providers to decide what products to use in individual cases.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding has been made available for silicone cosmesis for prosthetics users in each of the last three years; how much was made available to each of the prosthetics centres in each of the last three years; how many patients were treated; what plans he has for the future funding of this service; and if he will make a statement. [128322]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Baseline allocations of £0.5 million in 2001–02, £1.5 million in 2002–03 and £2.0 million in 2003–04 were expected to be used for the provision of silicone cosmesis for artificial limbs. Spending on silicone cosmesis through the National Health Service Purchasing and Supply Agency, which probably represents most if not all spending on silicone cosmesis, was £81,858 for 2001–02, £410,479 for 2002–03, and £137,502 in the first quarter of 2003–04. Information is not held centrally on the sums made available to individual prosthetics centres, nor on numbers of patients treated with silicone cosmesis. In future years primary care trusts will remain free to determine what amounts from their baseline allocations to use for the provision of silicone cosmesis.

Pulmonary Care

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the provision of pulmonary rehabilitation services in Gloucestershire. [129027]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 11 September 2003]: The National Institute for Clinical Excellence is currently developing a guideline on the management of chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD) in primary and secondary care. It is due to publish the guideline in 2004. In January 2003 the Respiratory Alliance published their guidance, "Bridging the Gap", which aims to help primary care trusts (PCTs) to commission and deliver high quality allergy and respiratory care.

In line with our policy of "Shifting the Balance of Power", it is up to PCTs, in conjunction with strategic health authorities (SHAs) to take this work forward. I have been advised by the Avon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire SHA that in Gloucestershire patients with COPD have access to support within the primary care setting and also secondary care services within the wider hospital respiratory team. The local PCTs in Gloucestershire are jointly funding a project post to look at ways in which delivery of the current service can be improved, and to consider the development of future initiatives including COPD rehabilitation.

Redundant/Empty Hospital Buildings

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost was of maintaining redundant and empty hospital buildings in each region in the last six years. [127335]

Mr. Hutton: Information on the cost of redundant and empty properties held by national health service organisations is not held centrally.

Until these properties are sold they must be maintained both for health and safety reasons and to ensure the best price is obtained for them. Sales of these properties have generated considerable receipts for re-investment in the NHS in recent years, as shown in the table.

£ million

	2001–02	2002–03
Receipts from sales	160	151

Stroke Services

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 5 August 2003, Official Report, column 958W, on stroke services, how many and what percentage of hospitals have had a working specialist stroke unit in each (a) region and (b) strategic health authority in each of the last six years for which figures are available. [129122]

Dr. Ladyman: The most comprehensive source of information is the National Sentinel Stroke Audit, carried out by the Royal College of Physicians. The audit was commissioned by the national health service in 1998 and was last updated in 2002. The results can be found at http://www.rcplondon.ac.uk/pubs/strokeaudit 01–02.pdf.

The 2002 audit shows that 73 per cent. of trusts that participated had a stroke unit, compared to 56 per cent. three years earlier. The audit shows that 80 per cent. of trusts that participated have a consultant physician with specialist knowledge of stroke who is formally recognised as having principal responsibility for stroke services. While it is recognised that some services need to increase their capacity, the audit notes that very significant improvements have already been made.

Our major vehicle for further improving standards for stroke services is through the older people's national service framework (NSF), which sets specific milestones for improvement by 2004 of stroke services in primary care trusts, specialist services and general hospitals that care for people suffering from a stroke. Our document, "Improvement, Expansion and Reform", which sets for the NHS a priorities and planning framework for 2003–06, makes clear that implementation of the older people's NSF is a top priority and that the 2004 milestone around specialist stroke services is a key target.

We monitor progress against the key milestones in the NSF. From the information gathered so far, we know that 83 per cent. of the hospitals which have replied now have plans to have a specialist stroke service in place by April 2004.

Tooth Decay

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures the Department is taking to reduce the number of children with tooth decay. [128895]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Due mainly to the introduction of fluoride toothpaste and the fluoridation of water in some areas of the country, there has, over the last 20 years, been a major improvement in oral health. Nearly 60 per cent. of 5-years-olds now have no experience of tooth decay. However, significant variations remain which, in areas where drinking water is not fluoridated, are strongly associated with economic and social deprivation. The Government are committed to reducing these inequalities and have made provision in the Water Bill, currently before Parliament, to give communities with high levels of tooth decay a real option of having their water fluoridated. We have also established the "Brushing for Life" scheme in areas of poor dental health, whereby families with young children receive free fluoridated toothpaste, toothbrushes and advice on oral hygiene when attending child health developmental checks at aged eight months and 18 months and three years.

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 16 September 2003

HEALTH

Acrylamide

14. Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent guidance the Chief Medical Officer has issued to the public regarding the incidence of acrylamide in baked and fried food. [129962]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Following the discovery of acrylamide in a range of foods, the Food Standards Agency advises that people should continue to eat a balanced diet including moderating their consumption of fried and fatty foods. The Agency continues to review this advice as further information on acrylamide becomes available.

Prostate Cancer

16. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his Department's strategy is for tackling prostate cancer. [129964]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Good progress has been made since we published the Prostate Cancer Programme in September 2000. £4.2 million will be spent on research in 2003–04, the Prostate Cancer Risk Management Programme has been launched, and the Prostate Cancer Advisory Group has been established to take forward policy on prostate cancer.

Nurses

17. Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on retention of nurses. [129965]

Mr. Hutton: The Government are implementing a range of measures to retain more nurses. These include increasing the health care workforce, improving pay and conditions, encouraging the NHS to become a better, more flexible and diverse employer, investing in child care and continuing professional development, tackling violence and creating safe and healthy working environments.

18. Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the recruitment and retention of nurses. [129966]

Mr. Hutton: The Government are implementing a range of measures to recruit more health care professionals. These include improving pay and conditions, encouraging the NHS to become a better, more flexible and diverse employer, increasing training, investing in child care and continuing professional development, attracting back returners and running national and international recruitment campaigns.

Acute Hospitals

19. Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the overall capacity of the acute hospital sector in Worcestershire. [129967]

Dr. Ladyman: Significant investment has been made available nationally to accommodate the required increase in national health service capacity. Primary Care Trust revenue allocations for the three Worcestershire PCTs will rise to £426 million in 2003–04 and will reach £510 million by 2005–06, an overall total increase of 30.4 per cent., for the three years up to 2005–06.

Prior to the completion of the Worcestershire Royal hospital there were 1,035 acute beds in Worcestershire. Since the opening of the new hospital there are 1,044 acute beds available in the county.

Patient Environment Action Team Programme

20. Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the patient environment action team programme. [129968]

Mr. Hutton: We have recently worked with a larger number of NHS colleagues to refine the PEAT process in the light of experience to date. This review confirmed that the system has been a major factor in ensuring that all hospitals meet acceptable standards or better in terms of the patient environment. The NHS is to be congratulated for the progress it has made. The PEAT programme has been extended to include Mental Health and Accident and Emergency units, demonstrating the importance we continue to attach to this, and the need for the NHS to continue to focus on high standards.

Infection Prevention

21. Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action his Department is taking to prevent patients from catching infections in health care settings. [129969]

Miss Melanie Johnson: We already have standards to ensure there is a managed environment which minimises the risk of infection to patients, staff and visitors. Hospitals' performance against these has improved over the last three years. For the first time this year these standards and an MRSA improvement score contributed to the star ratings. The Chief Medical Officer is leading a new initiative to produce a longer-term strategy to reduce health care associated infections.

Locum Consultants

22. Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent on locum consultants in the NHS in the last year for which figures are available. [129970]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Hospital Building Programme

23. James Purnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the hospital building programme. [129971]

Mr. Hutton: Since 2000, 39 hospitals have been opened, and a further 18 are being built. There are 54 hospitals in procurement through the private finance initiative process. This is the biggest hospital building programme in the history of the NHS, replacing old and outmoded buildings with facilities fit for the 21st Century.

Atkinson Morley Hospital

24. Roger Casale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received about the disposal of the Atkinson Morley hospital site in Wimbledon. [129972]

Mr. Hutton: I have received no representations. However, I am aware that St. George's Healthcare NHS Trust has recently submitted a planning application for redevelopment of the Atkinson Morley hospital site, the Firs Nursing Home and a large area of open space, following the reprovision of services at St. George's hospital, Tooting.

The proposed development comprises 149 residential units accessed from Copse Hill and associated car parking.

People with Communication Difficulties

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice the Department has given to (a) Government Departments and (b) others who consult with people who have communication difficulties about how that consultation should be carried out. [123393]

Mr. Hutton: The Department of Health has not issued formal guidance.

NHS Dentistry

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are in place to control the levels of charging for (a) repairing teeth from mottling and (b) other cosmetic dental work by NHS dentists. [129963]

Ms Rosie Winterton: All dental treatment necessary to secure and maintain oral health is available under the national health service, including the facing of upper front teeth with porcelain veneers to correct teeth mottling. Patients liable to pay NHS dental charges will pay 80 per cent. of the NHS fee paid to the dentists for the service.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will discuss trends in the incidence of tuberculosis with the World Health Organisation. [129961]

Dr. Ladyman: Colleagues in the Department and at the Health Protection Agency are regularly invited to speak at and attend World Health Organisation conferences on tuberculosis.

We provide on a regular basis, trends of TB in this country as well as receiving information from the WHO on trends from other countries.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Domestic Violence

Mr. Byers: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps he will take to increase the provision of accommodation available to women victims of domestic violence. [130038]

Yvette Cooper: The Government are committed to increasing the full range of accommodation options for victims of domestic violence including more refuges and better help to support victims to stay in their own homes if appropriate. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is investing £8.9 million this financial year in refuge provision and an additional £9.9 million has been allocated by the Housing Corporation. The money is being used by Registered Social Landlords, in partnership with local refuge providers and local authorities to provide 273 units of accommodation in all regions in England. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has also committed £7 million in each of the next two financial years towards similar projects which will also be administered through the Housing Corporation.

In addition, the Supporting People programme enables local authorities to provide housing related support services for victims of domestic violence. This year £34 million has been allocated to domestic violence schemes including accommodation and non-accommodation based services.

Domestic violence can be a significant cause of homelessness. Under the homelessness legislation, people who are vulnerable as a result of fleeing their home because of violence (including domestic violence) have a priority need for accommodation. Moreover, all local housing authorities in England are now required to have a strategy for preventing homelessness in the district and ensuring that accommodation and any necessary support are available for people who are homeless or at risk of homelessness. All authorities were required to have a homelessness strategy in place by 30 July 2003. The Homelessness Directorate is providing £260 million between 2003–04 and 2005–06 in support of local housing authorities' efforts to tackle homelessness. A number of authorities are using this funding to improve the support available to victims of domestic violence in order to prevent homelessness among this client group.

Home Loss Payments

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much was previously allocated in 2002–03 to home loss payments in compulsory purchase; how much this has been increased as a result of the Government announcement in July; and whether similar changes have been made to farm loss payments. [130199]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not have a central fund allocated for these purposes. Acquiring authorities are liable for the costs incurred arising from compulsory purchase and would be expected to fund this through their respective budgets.

Housing

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he (a) records and (b) acts upon housing affordability data. [129155]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister records a wide variety of data on housing, including affordability issues, which provide an essential underpinning to policy development. Through the Housing Corporation the Government finances housing for those who are unable to purchase their own home. More generally, as part of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's drive to create sustainable communities, we are working to improve the supply of housing in those regions where high demand is causing prices to rise beyond the reach of those on modest incomes. Regional Housing Strategies, produced for the first time this year, which will be considered, are important in highlighting problems of affordability at regional and sub-regional level. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will be taking account of these, in my decisions on the allocation of housing resources, later this year.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Chope: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make it his policy to permit local authorities to limit annual increases in council tax for pensioners to the rate of inflation; and if he will make a statement. [130646]

Mr. Raynsford: Subject to parliamentary approval, the Local Government Bill will allow local billing authorities to introduce locally defined council tax discounts from 2004–05. This power could be used by local billing authorities to create a discount which would have the effect of limiting council tax increases for pensioners.

Playing Fields

Mr. Moss: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what the latest estimate is of the total gross receipts for each year since 1997, from land sold under general consent orders; and what percentage of those receipts relate to the sale of playing fields; [130362]

(2) if he will list each of the playing fields, broken down by local authority, which have been disposed of under general consent orders. [130363]

Keith Hill: The Information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Local authorities are given powers under the Local Government Act 1972 to dispose of land in any manner they wish. The disposal must be for the best consideration reasonably obtainable, unless the Secretary of State consents to the disposal. General consents have been issued so that local authorities can, in certain circumstances, dispose of land for less than the market value without having to apply to the Secretary of State for specific consent. However, the Local Government Act 1972 requires local authorities proposing to dispose of open space that is used for public recreation to advertise their intentions in a local newspaper and consider any objections received.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what his official engagements were for Sunday 9 March. [130010]

The Prime Minister: None.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to his oral Answer of 10 September 2003, Official Report, column 322, on Iraq, on which occasions the Chief of the Defence staff before the outbreak of war expressed concerns about the legality of what the armed forces were being asked to do; and if he will make a statement. [130704]

The Prime Minister: It is part of the Chief of the Defence Staff's duty of care over members of Her Majesty's armed forces that he satisfies himself with the legality of any operation to which they may be committed. As I said to my hon. Friend at Prime Minister's Questions on 10 September 2003, Official Report, column 322, the Chiefs of Staff on no occasion expressed to me any unease. Lord Boyce was entirely content with the legal basis for the recent conflict in Iraq. This was set out by my right hon. and noble Friend the Attorney-General on 17 March 2003, Official Report, House of Lords, columns 2–3WA.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Departmental Computer Security

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much has been (a) budgeted and (b) spent by her Department since April 2002 on (i) combating computer fraud, (ii) preventing theft of computers and (iii) safeguarding the security of information held on computer; and if she will make a statement. [128784]

Alun Michael: The Department manages the security of its information, including information held on its computers systems, in accordance with the guidance given in the Manual of Protective Security, a comprehensive body of policy and interdepartmentally agreed security standards issued by the Cabinet Office. From this guidance, we employ a range of measures to protect physical, computer and information assets. These measures are reviewed according to specific project requirements and as circumstances and technology changes require. All aspects of security (physical, personnel, procedural, information and IT) are inextricably linked and it is therefore not possible to provide a budget breakdown for IT related aspects only.

LANTRA

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the role of LANTRA, with specific reference to how it is encouraging employment opportunities for (a) environmental organisations and (b) the land-based sector. [130589]

Alun Michael: LANTRA's role as the Sector Skills Council for environmental and land-based industries is to support employers and employees in the sector to identify, acquire and use the skills needed to raise productivity and to deliver sustainable development. Sector Skills Councils have a key role in delivering the Government's Skills Strategy set out in the White Paper "21st Century Skills: Realising our Potential" (Cm 5810). LANTRA'S strategic and business plans set out in detail how the organisation will deliver these objectives for the environmental and land-based sector.

Rural Development Fund

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the application procedures for rural development funds. [129637]

Alun Michael: Rural development funds are made available through grant schemes under the England Rural Development Programme, which was launched in October 2000. Application procedures have been kept under continual review, and changes made to benefit applicants and improve administrative efficiency.

Significant further improvements are also in development. In the short term, a fast-track appraisal process was piloted recently for applications seeking less than £15,000 under the Rural Enterprise Scheme. The indications are that such an approach can substantially reduce the time taken to confirm the decision over an award of grant and we hope to introduce new arrangements generally, over the coming months. For the longer term, we are engaged in a major programme to improve ERDP delivery radically, and support the delivery of new agri-environment schemes. These benefits, facilitated in part by a completely new IT system, will begin to come on stream in early 2005.

Rural Payments Agency

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the performance of the Rural Payments Agency; and if she will make a statement. [129790]

Alun Michael: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State agreed to the creation of the Rural Payments Agency on 16 October 2001.

The Rural Payments Agency's second Annual Report and Accounts, which records performance against the Agency's key performance targets, as set by the Secretary of State, will be laid before Parliament shortly.

An Ownership Board chaired by the Permanent Secretary of the Department of Environment, Food and Rural Affairs meets quarterly to monitor the performance of the Agency, on behalf of the Secretary of State. In addition, I receive weekly progress reports, as the Rural Payments Agency is part of my ministerial portfolio. I also monitor the response to issues raised by MPs and discuss relevant issues with the Agency.

Vocational Training

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with representatives of further and higher education on the potential for delivering vocational training in rural areas. [130542]

Alun Michael: I frequently meet people engaged in providing all forms of learning in rural areas in the course of visits and meetings around the country. The Department's Learning Skills and Knowledge Review is looking specifically at the need for vocational training in rural areas and how that need can be met. Representatives of further and higher education are on the steering group for the review.

Water Pollution

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what powers water companies have to stop (a) companies and (b) residential properties discharging pollutants into waterways. [129822]

Mr. Morley: Water companies do not have any powers to stop companies or residential properties discharging pollutants into waterways. Their responsibility, under the Water Industry Act 1991, is to regulate trade effluent discharges made to public sewers.

Responsibility for controlling discharges to waterways belongs to the Environment Agency (the Agency). Under section 85 of the Water Resources Act 1991 (as amended by the Environment Act 1991) it is an offence to cause or knowingly permit polluting matter to enter "controlled waters", that is rivers, estuaries, coastal or groundwaters without permission. This is obtained as a discharge consent granted by the Agency. The Agency sets consent conditions which control volumes and concentrations of particular substances or imposes broader controls on the nature of the effluent. Each consent is based on an objective set by the Agency for the quality of the stretch of water to which the discharge is made as well as taking into account any relevant statutory requirements.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Microsoft (Licensing Fees)

Norman Lamb: To ask the Leader of the House how much was paid to Microsoft in licensing fees by the Office of the Leader of the House in each of the last three years; and how much has been budgeted for (a) 2003–04 and (b) 2004–05. [130674]

Mr. Hain: In the last three years the Office of the Leader of the House paid no licensing fees directly to Microsoft and has made no separate provision for 2003–4 or 2004–5.

The IT service for my Office is provided by the Cabinet Office and charged on a per PC basis. Any costs for licence fees are included in the overall IT charges.

Sitting Hours

Mr. Amess: To ask the Leader of the House what representations he has received in favour of reverting to the sitting hours of the House of Commons of 2002. [130374]

Mr. Hain: A number of Members have raised with me their view on the sitting hours—both for and against the change—by raising it in the Chamber, at Business Questions and Oral Questions to the Leader of the House, by letter and in private discussion. I have had no representations from outside Parliament in favour of the House reverting to its former hours. The House has agreed the change for the remainder of this Parliament and will then need to review the matter.

Written Questions

Norman Baker: To ask the Leader of the House what plans he has to propose measures to allow hon. Members to challenge a refusal by a Minister to provide information requested by means of a written parliamentary question. [129257]

Mr. Hain: Ministers answer questions in accordance with the requirements set out in the Ministerial Code, the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information and guidance on disproportionate cost. As the Ministerial Code makes clear, it is for individual Ministers to account for their decisions and actions. If a Member of Parliament is unhappy with the answer received to a parliamentary question, he or she should raise the matter with the relevant Minister. There are no plans to propose changes to current practice.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Parliamentary Works

Michael Fabricant: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission what the expected cost is of clearing construction equipment and materials from the precincts of the House prior to the two-week sitting in September and reinstating it at the start of the Conference Adjournment. [130289]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: Officials are collating the costs associated with clearing and reinstating construction equipment and materials before and after the September sitting and I will arrange for the hon. Member to receive the figures when they become available.

SCOTLAND

Prohibition Orders

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he plans to amend the powers of the Secretary of State for Scotland to issue prohibition orders in relation to reserved matters; and who will have jurisdiction in determining matters of vires in connection with reserved matters. [126746]

Mrs. McGuire: There are no plans to amend the powers of the Secretary of State under section 35 of the Scotland Act. This gives the Secretary of State the power to make an order prohibiting the Presiding Officer of the Scottish Parliament from submitting a Bill for Royal Assent in certain circumstances.

In terms of section 33 of the Scotland Act the Advocate General, the Lord Advocate or the Attorney General may refer the question of whether a Bill or any provision of a Bill would be within the legislative competence of the Parliament to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council for adjudication. The Government published a consultation paper in July, Constitutional Reform: A Supreme Court for the United Kingdom, which seeks views on the proposition that the new Supreme Court should have jurisdiction over devolution cases presently heard by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

Aircraft Carriers

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what role his Department has played in facilitating contact between BAe systems and the Scottish Executive to discuss training requirements for the carrier project. [127848]

Mrs. McGuire: The Scottish Executive has well established contact with BAe Systems and other shipbuilding interests in Scotland in relation to the Future Aircraft Carriers (CVF) programme.

The Clyde Shipyards Task Force recognised the need to ensure that Scottish shipyards have the necessary skills and infrastructure in place to secure a major role in the CVF programme. Further work to address the training requirements of the shipbuilding industry in Scotland is being taken forward by Scottish Enterprise.

Edinburgh Waverley Station

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he plans to meet (a) Network Rail and (b) the Strategic Rail Authority to discuss the proposed investment at Edinburgh Waverley station. [127868]

Mr. Darling: I meet senior representatives of Network Rail and the Strategic Rail Authority on a regular basis to discuss a wide range of railway matters, and will continue to do so.

Air Tranpsort

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what his policy is on Scotland increasing its international hub status for air transport. [128024]

Mrs. McGuire: The Government will publish an air transport White Paper later this year which will cover a range of key issues, including the development of air traffic at Scottish airports.

Manufacturing

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many are employed in the manufacturing industry in Scotland; how many were employed in 1997; and if he will make a statement on the proposals for the manufacturing industry in Scotland. [128016]

Mrs. McGuire: The manufacturing sector continues to be very important to the economy of Scotland. Figures from the Office for National Statistics indicate that employment in the manufacturing industry in Scotland was 387,000 at the end of the Spring Quarter of 1997, and 301,000 at the end of the Spring Quarter of 2003.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Apprenticeships and Training

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions she has had with the Secretary of State for Education and Skills regarding the level of apprenticeships and work-related training offered to school leavers. [128205]

Mr. Sutcliffe: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry works closely with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, meeting regularly to discuss areas of joint interest.

The recent publication of the Government's national Skills Strategy demonstrates the joint commitment to reforming qualifications and training programmes to meet the needs of employers and to provide clear routes to employability for the learner.

The joint remit being taken forward by the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority with other partners will ensure that learning programmes will enable all young people to develop the skills that employers seek, with programmes of vocational education and training from age 14, and Modern Apprenticeships as the primary vocational option for young people. The Government's target is that by 2004, 28 per cent. of young people will start a Modern Apprenticeship by age 22. The expansion of Foundation Degrees will enable the progression into higher education from vocational programmes. Young people not yet ready to enter a Modern Apprentieeship will be able to join Entry to Employment, to benefit from help in developing basic skills as a means of entering a Modern Apprenticeship or employment.

Asbestos

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many UKAS asbestos surveyors are registered in the UK. [129934]

Nigel Griffiths: The Department for Work and Pensions is responsible for the Health and Safety Executive, which holds the data.

British Energy

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action she intends to take in the event that British Energy is unable to reach agreement with its creditors by 30 September. [129939]

Mr. Timms: British Energy continues to work on implementing its restructuring plan and the announcement on 11 September of its sale of Amergen was a further step in that process. But, British Energy still needs to work hard to implement the plan in full, and, as we have made clear since last year, the Government is prepared for administration should it fail.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what changes in the time deadlines originally set for British Energy to sell off its North American assets in the restructuring plan have been made since the plan was announced; and what the reasons are for those changes. [130306]

Mr. Timms: With regard to British Energy's 50 per cent. interest in its US joint venture, Amergen, I refer my hon. Friend to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, on 3 June 2003, Official Report, column 3WS. British Energy announced on 11 September that it had agreed the sale of its interest in Amergen.

British Energy completed the sale of its interest in Brace Power within the deadline set out in its restructuring plan.

BSkyB

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will instruct the Office of Fair Trading to reopen its investigation into BSkyB's pricing structure for licensed premises; and if she will make a statement. [129036]

Mr. Sutcliffe: For the Office of Fair Trading to launch an investigation into this matter they must have reasonable grounds to suspect that there has been an infringement of the Competition Act 1998. This is entirely a matter for the Office of Fair Trading to determine.

Building Standards

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures are in place to assist people who are victims of poor standards of work by builders; if she will take steps to set up a national list of reputable builders and plumbers; and if she will make a statement. [129152]

Nigel Griffiths: The best protection against cowboy builders is not to give work to casual workers that house holders meet in pubs, but rather to use someone reputable and qualified to carry out the work. The Quality Mark scheme has been established in England to achieve quality, and in Scotland the Construction Licensing executive has developed a new registration scheme.

Company Records

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will allow Companies House to amend publicly available company records if a company is subject to a police investigation. [130243]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Companies Act and not the Secretary of State governs the maintenance of the register of companies. The Companies Act does not allow the registrar to amend publicly available company records if a company is subject to a police investigation.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will require Companies House to amend its website and correspondence material with a disclaimer stating that the reliability of company records cannot be guaranteed. [130244]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Companies House has had a disclaimer on its website for a number of years. However, I can confirm that the website has recently been amended to state that information is accepted by Companies House in good faith, and that the fact that it has been placed on the public record should not be taken to indicate that Companies House has validated it in any way. Companies House issues such a wide range and high volume of correspondence material, that it would not be appropriate to annotate it in this way.

Competition Act

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the occasions when she has used her powers under Chapter 1 of the Competition Act 1998 to amend Schedule 3 to that Act; what her reasons for doing so were in each case; and if she will make a statement. [130654]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The powers under Chapter 1of the Competition Act 1998 to amend Schedule 3 to that Act have not been exercised.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the occasions when she has provided an exemption to Chapter 1 of the Competition Act 1998; what her reasons for doing so were in each case; and if she will make a statement. [130655]

Mr. Sutcliffe: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry provided for an exemption to Chapter I of the Competition Act 1998 for public transport ticketing schemes, under the Competition Act (Public Transport Ticketing Schemes Block Exemption) Order 2001, SI 2001/319, which came into force on 1 March 2001.

The Order was made on the recommendation of the Director General of Fair Trading, that the category of agreements concerned were likely to meet the criteria for exemption under section 9 of the Competition Act 1998.

Competition Commission/ Competition Appeal Tribunal

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when each of the present members of (a) the Competition Commission and (b) the Competition Appeal Tribunal were appointed; and what procedure was used. [130651]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information requested is as follows.

(a) Competition Commission

Name	Date of first appointment
Morris, Sir D	1 October 1991
Freeman, Mr P	6 May 2003
Geroski, Prof PA	2 March 1998
Kingsmill, Mrs. D	14 April 1997
Trelford, Prof D.G.	11 February 1999
Ahmed, Mr. S	4 March 1999
Gibson, Mr. W	4 March 1999
Holbrook, Mr. G.L.	4 March 1999
Christmas, Ms L.I.	11 February 1999
Hopkirk, Mrs. M.J.	4 March 1999
Pollard, Ms E.	4 March 1999
Wilson, Mr. C.M.	11 February 1999
Klemperer, Prof P.	10 September 2001
Hamlin, Prof A.	10 September 2001
Moizer, Prof P.	10 September 2001
Elks, Mr. L.	10 September 2001
Haskel, Prof J.	10 September 2001
Wilks, Prof S.	10 September 2001
Goodall, Mr. C.	10 September 2001
Stoddart, Mr. P.	10 September 2001
Walzer, Mr. S.	10 September 2001
Holroyd, Mr. R.	10 September 2001
Clarke, Mr. C.	10 September 2001
Collings, Dr. J.	10 September 2001
Gregory, Prof A.	10 September 2001
Prof John Baillie	9 January 2002
Peter Hazell	9 January 2002
Turgoose, Mr. R.	1 February 2002
Lyons, Prof B.	1 July 2002
Rawlinson, Mr. R.A.	5 January 1998
Henderson, Mr. C.E.	5 January 1998
Darke, Mr. C.	2 February 1998
Garthwaite, Mr. N[1]	27 March 2000
Hadley, Mr. G.H.[1]	27 March 2000
Parker, Prof D.[1]	27 March 2000
Webster, Mr. M.[1]	27 March 2000
Seddon, Mr. E.J.[1]	27 March 2000
Young, Mr. A.M.[1]	27 March 2000
Graham, Prof C.[1]	27 March 2000
Smallwood, Mr. C.	10 September 2001
Brown, Mrs. S.E.	1 February 1998
Monck, Dr. E.[1]	27 March 2000
Mills, Dame B.	10 September 2001
Coyle, Ms D.	10 September 2001
Waddams, Prof C.	1 November 2001
Guy, Ms D.	1 December 2001
Rickford, Mr. J.	9 December 1997
Stark, Mr. J.D.	2 March 1998
Shovelton, Mrs. H.	11 December 1997
Garthwaite, Mr. N.	1 June 1998
Hadley, Mr. G.H.	1 June 1998
Macdonald, Mr. N.	1 June 1998
Parker, Prof D.	1 June 1998
Young, Mr. A.M.	1 July 1998
Hadfield, Mr. A.	1 July 1998
Seddon, Mr. E.J.	1 July 1998
Graham, Prof C.	31 March 1999
Monck, Dr. E.	31 March 1999
Foster, Mr. T.	1 September 2003

[1] Specialist panel members also appointed to the reporting panel following a limited competition in 2000.

(b) Competition Appeal Tribunal

Name	Date of first appointment
Bellamy, Sir C.	16 December 1999
Prosser, Mr. R.	1 March 2000
Colgate, Mr. B.	1 March 2000
Summers, Mr. D.L.	1 March 2000
Pryor, Dr. A.J.	1 March 2000
Clayton, Mr. P.	1 September 2000
Bain, Prof A.	1 September 2000

(b) Competition Appeal Tribunal

Name	Date of first appointment
Picketing, Prof J.	1 September 2000
Stoneman, Prof P.	1 September 2000
Blair, Mr. M.	1 September 2000
Lewis, Mr. A.	1 September 2000
Zellick, Prof G.	1 September 2000
Hewitt, Mrs. S.F.	1 March 2000
Kelly, Ms A.M.	1 March 2000
Smith-Hillman, Mrs.	1 September 2000
Quigley, Ms P.	1 September 2000
Davey, Mr. M.	1 September 2000
Grant-Hutchison, Mr. P.	1 March 2000
Scott, Mr. A.	1 March 2000
Mather, Mr. G.	1 September 2000
Grinyer, Prof P.	1 September 2000
Rubin, Ms J.	15 September 2003

These appointments were made, under the Competition Act 1998, to the Competition Commission Appeal Tribunals, the forerunner of the Competition Appeal Tribunal created by the Enterprise Act 2000. The members were transferred to the new body on 1 April 2003.

Except as indicated, all appointments to the Competition Commission and the Competition Appeal Tribunal were made by open advertised competition following and, since 1996, in accordance with the guidelines of the Commissioner for Public Appointments.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the duties and responsibilities of (a) the Competition Commission and (b) the Competition Appeal Tribunal are; and if she will make a statement. [130652]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information requested is as follows.

(a) Competition Commission

The Competition Commission is responsible for conducting investigations, after referral by the Office of Fair Trading, the Secretary of State or various regulators into markets, mergers licence modifications and other matters involving competition issues under the following legislation:

Enterprise Act 2002
Fair Trading Act 1973
Water Industry Act 1991
Broadcasting Act 1990
Telecommunications Act 1984
Gas Act 1986
Gas (N. Ireland) Order 1996
Electricity Act 1989
Electricity (N. Ireland) Order 1992
Airports Act 1986
Airports (N. Ireland) Order 1994
Railways Act 1993
Postal Services Act 2000
Transport Act 2000
Financial Services and Markets Act 2000

(b) Competition Appeal Tribunal

The responsibilities of the CAT are:

to hear appeals in respect of decisions made under the Competition Act 1998 by the Office of Fair Trading (OFT) and the regulators in the telecommunications, electricity, gas, water, railways and air traffic services sectors;

to hear actions for damages and other monetary claims under the Competition Act 1998;

to review decisions made by the Secretary of State, OFT and the Competition Commission in respect of merger and market references or possible reference under the Enterprise Act 2002;

to hear appeals in respect of decisions made by the Office of Fair Trading under the EC Competition Law (Articles 84 and 85) Enforcement Regulations 2001 (as amended) in respect of air transport services and international maritime tramp vessel services.

Consumer Credit

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if she will take steps to simplify the formula for calculating APRs on credit cards once the industry adopts an honesty box or summary table of its fees and charges on promotional material; [129871]

(2) what assessment she has made of the benefits of reforming APRs on credit cards so that additional charges are not included in the APR formula. [129872]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I intend to publish a White Paper in the autumn, which will set out the Government's intentions for the reform of the consumer credit regime.

This will be followed by a detailed consultation on a unified method for calculating APRs on credit cards and the information that industry will have to include in promotional material and credit agreements.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions her Department has had with the European Union on section 75 of the Consumer Credit Act 1974. [129881]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Department is working hard in the negotiations, within the European Union, on a revised Consumer Credit Directive to ensure that we maintain the joint and several liability protections that currently govern credit card use in the UK. I am not prepared to see this important and valuable piece of consumer protection removed.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to her answer of 17 July, Official Report, column 507W, on the Consumer Credit Act, when she expects to publish the results of the consultations. [128751]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government will publish a white paper on consumer credit during the autumn. This will include our proposals on the reform of the licensing regime. Shortly after the publication of the white paper we will also publish a summary of the responses to the recent consultation.

Electricity Generation

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much electricity in the UK has been generated through (a) coal, (b) gas, (c) nuclear power, (d) renewable and (e) other sources in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [129942]

Mr. Timms: The available data are shown in the following table.

TWh

	Coal	Gas	Nuclear power	Renewable[1]	Other sources[2]	Total
1998	123.0	117.8	99.5	9.2	13.2	362.7
1999	106.2	142.9	95.1	10.2	13.8	368.2
2000	120.0	148.1	85.1	10.4	13.6	377.1
2001	131.5	142.0	89.9	10.1	11.3	384.7
2002	124.4	152.1	88.0	11.3	11.2	387.1

[1] Includes electricity generated from biofuels, hydro-natural flow, wind, wave and solar photovoltaics.
[2] Includes oil, coke oven gas, blast furnace gas, waste products from chemical processes and hydro-pumped storage.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much (a) coal and (b) gas has been used for the generation of electricity in the UK in each of the last five years for which figures are available; how much of these totals has been imported; and if she will make a statement. [129943]

Mr. Timms: The available information is shown in the following table:

Selected fuels used for electricity generation in the UK

	Coal (million tonnes)	Gas TWh	Imported coal[1] (million tonnes)
1998	48.6	267.8	9.7
1999	41.2	315.5	8.1
2000	46.2	324.6	14.1
2001	50.9	309.8	23.2
2002	47.7	326.3	19.4

[1] These figures show the level of coal imports by electricity generators.
Sources:
Digest of UK Energy Statistics and major power producers.

Although the Department collects information on gas supplied to power stations from dedicated pipelines from indigenous production there is no central record for distinguishing how much of the gas that they take from the National Transmission System has been imported as the origin of gas cannot be distinguished once it has entered the NTS.

Export Credit Guarantees Department

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to her answer of 25 June 2003, Official Report, column 798W, on the Export Credit Guarantees Department, if she will list, for each country, the amounts (a) which relate to military and defence products, contracts or services and (b) which do not. [125930]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The amounts are detailed by country and split between defence and non-defence in the table, which has been placed in the Library, by reference to ECGD's exposure as at 30 June 2003. Given the way ECGD's records are held it is not possible to split claims outstanding for recovery in respect of Account 1 (pre-1992 business) between defence and non-defence nor amounts in respect of moratorium interest accrued on claims paid.

Fossil Fuel Reserves

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate she has made of the remaining reserves of domestic supplies of (a) gas, (b) oil and (c) coal. [129944]

Mr. Timms: The Department of Trade and Industry publishes annually estimates of oil and gas reserves on the UK Continental Shelf. The latest estimates are that, as at the end of 2002, remaining proven and probable discovered recoverable reserves amounted to 920 million tonnes of oil and 1,000 billion cubic metres of gas. A further 425 million tonnes of oil and 330 billion cubic metres of gas are classified as possible reserves in discovered fields. There are a further 90 to 490 million tonnes of oil and 70 to 265 billion cubic metres of gas in potential additional reserves in smaller undeveloped fields. Furthermore, it is also estimated that additional reserves of between 270 and 1,770 million tonnes of oil and between 235 and 1,390 billion cubic metres of gas could exist in fields that had not been yet discovered.

A study carried out by IMC Group Consulting Ltd. for DTI which was published in December 2002 assessed UK coal reserves in the 15 deep mines operating at that time at around 150 million tonnes, with further known mineral potential of around 260 million tonnes, mainly in 7 mine licence areas. The UK opencast reserve is estimated to be around 230 million tonnes.

International Atomic Energy Agency

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals the United Kingdom is putting to the 47th General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency, 15–19 September; how the United Kingdom will be represented at the General Conference; and if she will place in the Library copies of documentation presented to the conference that is relevant to the United Kingdom. [130370]

Nigel Griffiths: The UK will, as usual, be represented at the Agency's General Conference by a team of officials from different Government Departments, led by the UK's Governor to the IAEA. Throughout the week the UK will be negotiating and working with other member states on a wide range of issues relevant to the Agency's activities: these include nuclear safety and security, nuclear verification safeguards, promotion of the peaceful uses of nuclear energy and technology. Copies of the UK's statement to the Plenary and resolutions which have been agreed at the Conference will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Large Combustion Plants Directive

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the expected impact on the UK coal industry of the Large Combustion Plants Directive. [129945]

Mr. Timms: The Government are currently consulting on options before taking the decision on how to implement the Large Combustion Plants Directive for plants first licensed before July 1987. Officials have discussed the potential impact of the alternative implementation routes with representatives of the UK coal industry, who are also expected to respond formally to the consultation paper. Consultation closes on 29 September. The Government will take a decision on the most appropriate implementation approach only after considering all of the responses received by this data.

Mineworkers' Compensation

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on discussions with the surface mineworker claimants solicitors group with regard to the incorporation of surface mineworkers within the framework of the Claims Handling Agreement for respiratory compensation. [129196]

Mr. Timms: I met with members of the co-ordinating group of solicitors at the Coal Health Ministerial Monitoring Group on Wednesday 10 September, I agreed to give them access to British Coal's dust record archives to assist them in identifying specific cases. This exercise will help the parties to determine how best to resolve outstanding cases.

National Federation of Retail Newsagents

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask t he Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions she has had with the National Federation of Retail Newsagents. [129506]

Mr. Sutcliffe: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has not had any recent discussions with the National Federation of Retail Newsagents.

The Office of Fair Trading (OFT) is currently reviewing Code of Practice on newspaper distribution. OFT published a statement of provisional recommendations on 12 December 2002, for public consultation. OFT is now analysing the responses to its public consultation and will make its final report to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry shortly.

Store Cards

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what discussions she has had with the Office of Fair Trading regarding high rates of interest levied on store cards; [128144]

(2) what action she is taking to protect consumers from high rates of interest levied on store cards; [128145]

(3) what action she is taking to ensure that retail customers are aware of the terms and conditions before signing up for a store card. [128146]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Department has had no specific discussions regarding the interest rates levied on, or the terms and conditions associated with, store cards.

My hon. Friend is no doubt aware however, that the DTI is reaching the conclusion of its review of the Consumer Credit Act 1974. Government proposals in this area will be set out in a White Paper planned for publication in the autumn. This will address issues such as the transparency of credit products including how they are sold to consumers, advertising and the form and content of credit agreements.

Through discussions and focus groups, we have been particularly careful to involve key stakeholders from consumer groups, business and enforcement agencies at all stages of the review.

In terms of consumer protection, the objective is to increase transparency and understanding throughout the UK credit market, empowering consumers to make informed financial decisions.

My hon. Friend may also be aware that the Department of Trade and Industry recently appeared to give evidence at a Treasury Committee inquiry into the transparency of credit charges.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Ministerial Visits

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list (a) foreign and (b) UK visits she has made since 1 April; what the cost was to public funds of each trip; who she met; and what gifts were received. [126884]

Tessa Jowell: The Government publish the overall costs of all ministerial overseas travel and a list of all visits overseas by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500 on an annual basis. The list for the period 1 April 2002 to 31 March 2003 was published by the Prime Minister on 16 July 2003, Official Report, column 482W. The next list for the period 1 April 2003 to 31 March 2004 will be published at the end of the financial year.

In respect of gifts received, I refer the right hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 14 March, Official Report, column 482W.

I have taken the following UK trips since 1 April 2003.

£

Date	Destination	Event	Transport	Price
3 April 2003	Bristol	British Empire and Commonwealth Museum and speech at The Building Legible Cities Conference	Train	101.4
4 June 2003	Liverpool	Liverpool city council for Capital of Culture	Train	256
9 June 2003	Aldeburgh	Aldeburgh Festival	Train	67
24 June 2003	Eastbourne	Speech to The Royal College of Physicians	Train	51.4
25 June 2003	Newcastle	IPPR Seminar	Train	238
1 July 2003	Birmingham	Visit to Lichfield Garrick	Train	160

Royal Parks

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) how much peat the Royal Parks purchased in the last two years; and where it was used; [129239]

(2) how many animals and birds were culled in the Royal Parks, broken down by (a) species and (b) culling methods used in the most recent year for which figures are available; [129263]

(3) what (a) pesticides and (b) herbicides the Royal Parks purchased in the last two years, broken down by (i) type and (ii) quantity. [129264]

Mr. Caborn: Responsibility for the subject of this question has been delegated to the Royal Parks Agency and I have asked its Chief Executive, William Weston, to reply.

Letter from William Weston to Norman Baker, dated 16 September 2003:

I have been asked by the Secretary of State to reply to your Parliamentary Questions about the pesticides we purchase, the number of animals we cull and our use of peat, because these are operational matters which have been delegated to me.

We do not use peat in our horticultural and grounds maintenance work, but most bedding plants we purchase are supplied to us in peat. We have been looking into alternatives to peat for bedding plants and will be running a trial next year in which all the plants purchased in one park will be grown in an alternative medium. We will assess the result in terms of quality and cost of the plants involved.

The only cull we carried out last year was the annual deer cull, when 179 deer were shot.

We do not purchase herbicides or pesticides. The horticultural and grounds maintenance functions in the parks are carried out by contractors. Park managers specify what tasks require doing and how they are to be done. Where pesticides and herbicides are required, park managers approve which ones should be used and the information is not, therefore, held centrally. We could only find out which types have been used by asking contractors to obtain the information from each job order they have had from park managers for the past two years. Even that would say what type had been approved but not what quantities had been used.

Royal Parks Constabulary

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what progress has been made in the implementation of the recommendations of the Speed review of the Royal Parks Police; and if she will make a statement. [129784]

Mr. Caborn: All 23 main recommendations of the Speed inspection of the Royal Parks Constabulary (RPC) have been implemented, apart from those relating to the merger with the Metropolitan Police Service (MPS).

Agreement in principle on the merger was reached in July with the MPS and the Metropolitan Police Authority (MPA) to merge the RPC with the MPS to create a separate Royal Parks Operational Command Unit (OCU) within the MPS.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many officers were employed in the Royal Parks Constabulary in each of the last five years. [129785]

Mr. Caborn: The information is as follows.

As at 31 March	Officers
1999	158
2000	154
2001	155
2002	148
2003	146

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent assessment she has made of the morale of the Royal Parks Constabulary. [129786]

Mr. Caborn: A change of this magnitude is bound to cause concern among staff. This is an unusual situation and it takes time to find out exactly what is involved and how it can be achieved. During this period there is not much concrete information we can tell staff and I understand how the lack of information can lead to uncertainty which is bound to affect morale. I can only assure RPC officers that Ministers from this Department and the Home Office are working to resolve outstanding issues so that the details can be made available to them and this unfortunate period of uncertainty brought to an end.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what her policy is on security of tenure of their homes for Officers of the Royal Parks Constabulary, in the event of a merger with the Metropolitan Police. [129787]

Mr. Caborn: The Royal Parks will do what it can to ensure that Royal Parks Constabulary (RPC) officers currently living in Royal Parks accommodation will not be disadvantaged by the merger with the Metropolitan Police Service (MPS).

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she expects the merger of the Metropolitan Police with the Royal Parks Constabulary to take place. [129788]

Mr. Caborn: The aim is that the Royal Parks Occupational Command Unit should start on 1 April 2004 but this is conditional on resolving funding issues and obtaining the necessary enabling legislation.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Bonded Labour

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what further action will be taken at (a) the EU Council of Ministers and (b) G7 meetings to ensure an end to the use of bonded labour in developing countries; and if he will make a statement. [128600]

Hilary Benn: We are not aware of any specific proposals to discuss this issue in the EU Council of Ministers or in G7 or G8 meetings in the near future.

The Government are committed to helping to eliminate all abusive labour practices. These include bonded labour, forced labour and child labour. These abusive practices persist where poverty denies people their rights and a decent livelihood. All the programmes of the Department for International Development

(DFID) are intended to contribute to improving the livelihoods of poor people and helping them realise their rights. We also support projects targeted at particular abusive practices. Examples have included a programme in India to eliminate child labour, including bonded child labour, collaboration with the Asian Development Bank in Pakistan on rural development strategies that include tackling bonded labour and support for Action Aid's Poverty Reduction Project which has been working with bonded labourers in the Kailali district of Nepal to help them achieve secure livelihoods.

The United Kingdom has played a leading role in ensuring that the international framework to promote workers' rights and to tackle abuses of those rights, including bonded labour, is in place, particularly through its work with the International Labour Organisation (ILO), the UN specialised agency responsible for labour rights. The UK fully supports the ILO work to help end forced and bonded labour, which we see as both a cause and result of poverty.

Through DFID's Partnership Framework arrangement with the ILO, the UK provides support for technical assistance designed to eliminate forced labour. DFID is also supporting ILO programmes in West Africa and South East Asia to tackle forced labour and trafficking.

The Government strongly support the ILO's core labour standards and are actively seeking to raise awareness of voluntary codes of conduct based on these for the working of business in developing countries. In particular we helped to set up and fund the Ethical Trading Initiative, which is an alliance of UK retail companies, non-governmental organisations and trade unions that works to improve labour conditions in the supply chain of its corporate members. The employment standards adopted by ETI members come from the Core Conventions of the ILO. The combined annual turnover of the corporate members amounts to over £100 billion and is expected to rise significantly.

We are also supporting Anti-Slavery International to raise awareness of the issue and stimulate action by trade unions, business and other civil society organisations and governments.

Caucasus (Oil Pipelines)

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development if he will place reports which his Department has (a) carried out and (b) commissioned on the Baku-Tbilisi-Ceyhan Oil Pipeline Project in the Library. [130026]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID is currently assessing whether the Environmental and Social Assessement for the Baku-Tbilisi-Ceyhan Pipeline project complies with the policies and procedures of European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD) and the International Finance Corporation of the World Bank Group. I will place that assessment in the Library in due course.

Developing Countries (Property Ownership)

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what assessment his Department has made of the effects on development of the lack of effective systems to establish property ownership in developing countries. [130192]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID recognises that secure rights to land and property are fundamental to poor people's ability to act as citizens and pursue their livelihoods within a democratic society and open economy. The absence of systems to establish property ownership holds back development. In many cases it excludes the poor from accessing basic services and participating in formal markets for land and property, limiting social mobility and economic opportunity. The rights of large numbers of people living in informal settlements (which make up between 30–70 per cent. of populations of urban centres in developing countries) and those of rural people dependent on natural resources are frequently not recognised by the authorities. As a result they are vulnerable to eviction and loss of physical and natural assets. Many developing countries are seeking to address these problems by remodelling their systems of land and property administration, but lack the financial resources and technical capacity to do so effectively.

Iraq

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development if he will make a statement on (a) the humanitarian situation in Iraq and (b) the impact of security on the humanitarian situation. [130351]

Hilary Benn: While significant challenges face the reconstruction effort in Iraq, particularly in the electricity, water supply and oil sectors which have suffered from looting, sabotage and the breakdown of obsolete infrastructure, progress has been made in improving humanitarian conditions for most Iraqis. The public distribution system for food is up and running, most hospitals are in operation, medical supplies are coming into the country, children are being vaccinated and most schools were open by June. Continuing security problems are making the work of humanitarian organisations difficult and often dangerous. The Coalition Provisional Authority is making strenuous efforts to put in place an effective new Iraqi police and justice system, at the same time as coalition forces are being strengthened to help maintain law and order.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development if he will publish the plans the Government have to release money for humanitarian needs in Iraq before the donors conference in October. [130352]

Hilary Benn: DFID spending commitments for Iraq are published regularly in our weekly "Iraq Updates". We have to date committed £198 million of the £210 million currently available to DFID for the Iraq crisis. Additional commitments may be made from this £210 million between now and the Donors' Conference in Madrid in October. Any further significant allocations for assistance to Iraq will be considered by the Government in view of the needs assessments being undertaken by the World Bank, the IMF and the United Nations, which will be presented to the October Donors' Conference.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what recent discussions the Department has had with non-governmental organisations on their continued presence in Iraq. [130353]

Hilary Benn: DFID has regular discussions with NGOs on a range of issues concerning their work in Iraq, including over security and their continued operations in the country. We have told those NGOs whose work we are currently supporting in Iraq that we would be prepared to consider requests for additional financial resources to cover the costs of increased security provisions that they may need to put in place.

CABINET OFFICE

E-Envoy

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office in which month he expects the Annual Report of the e-envoy for 2003 to be published. [129126]

Mr. Alexander: We are committed to publishing an Annual Report each year on the UK online strategy. We intend to publish the 2003 report by the end of the year.

TREASURY

Government Contracts

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what advice is issued to government departments about placing contracts for goods and services with organisations which have been indicted for fraud or are being investigated for fraud [130650]

Mr. Boateng: The EC procurement rules allow contracting authorities to exclude firms from a procurement where they have been convicted of a criminal offence, or have committed an act of grave misconduct related to the conduct of their business or profession. This can include cases involving fraud and corruption.

Air Passenger Duty

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the revenue yield from increasing the level of air passenger duty from £5 to £10 on economy flights within the European Economic Area; and if he will make a statement. [130125]

John Healey: Increasing the reduced rate of air passenger duty from £5 to £10 on flights within the European Economic Area would have raised an estimated £595 million in 2002–03 from this category of passenger.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the revenue yield from raising the level of air passenger duty for club class and first class flights (a) from £10 to £20 for destinations within the European Economic Area and (b) from £40 to £50 for non-EEA destinations. [130126]

John Healey: Increasing the standard rate of air passenger duty (APD) from £10 to £20 on flights within the European Economic Area (EEA) would have raised an estimated £65 million in 2002–03 from this category of passenger. Increasing the standard rate of APD from £40 to £50 on flights outside the EEA would have raised an estimated £135 million in the same financial year from this category of passenger.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the relationship between the level of air passenger duty and petrol duty in terms of the environmental objectives of Government taxation policies; and if he will make a statement. [130554]

John Healey: Levels of all taxes, including air passenger duty and petrol duty, are reviewed on a Budget-by-Budget basis, taking account of a range of social, economic and environmental considerations.

Capital Gains Tax

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what his latest estimate is of the revenue cost of the changes to capital gains tax introduced in the March 2000 Budget for each year from 2000–01 to 2005–06; what assessment has been made of the economic benefits of the reform; and if he will make a statement; [130129]

(2) what his latest estimate is of the cost of changing the capital gains tax business assets taper relief in the November 2001 Pre-Budget Report; and if he will make a statement; [130132]

(3) what his estimate is of the revenue yield from abolishing capital gains tax taper relief for each year from 2000–01 to 2005–06; and if he will make a statement. [130139]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimated yield, on an accrual basis, from abolishing Capital Gains Tax Taper Relief, as currently operating, for 2000–01 and 2001–02 are published in Table A3.1 in the Budget Report 2003. The figures take into account some of the likely effects on yield from changes in taxpayers' behaviour. Figures for later years are not available.

The estimated cost, on an accrual basis, of changes to the Capital Gains Tax Taper Relief announced in Budget 2000 for each year from 2000–01 to 2002–03 are published in Table A. 13 in the Budget Report 2000.

The estimated cost, on an accrual basis, of changes to the Capital Gains Tax Taper Relief outlined in Pre-Budget Report 2001 for each year from 2002–03 to 2004–05 are published in Table A.2 in Budget 2002 report.

The estimates of cost of Budget 2000 and Pre-Budget Report 2001 changes take into account most of the likely effects on yield from changes in taxpayers' behaviour. Figures for later years are not available.

We intend to evaluate taper relief once the system has had time for its effects to become measurable.

Customs and Excise

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his answer of 8 September 2003, Official Report, column 98W, what new technology and extra operational activity at (a) Newhaven, (b) Poole, (c) Isle of Wight, (d) Portsmouth and (e) Southampton, is intended to replace the full-time manning at present; and if he will make a statement. [129846]

John Healey: The Technology will improve existing capacity to detect the illicit importation of radiological material into the UK. It will not replace any existing Customs capability. As to Custom's operational activity, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave him to his earlier question on 8 September 2003, Official Report, column 99W.

Deprivation

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which electoral wards are among the 10 per cent. most deprived in England and Wales. [128899]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

There are 841 wards in England and 865 wards in Wales that are among the 10 per cent. most deprived wards in the two countries. The full list of these most deprived wards is available in the Libraries of the House.

There are separate deprivation measures for England and Wales and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is only responsible for deprivation-related policy in England. Deprivation policy in Wales is the responsibility of the Welsh Assembly.

Film Industry

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the total annual (a) revenue cost and (b) economic benefit of the film industry tax reliefs introduced in and since the July 1997 Budget for each year from 1997–98 to 2005–06; and if he will make a statement. [130013]

Dawn Primarolo: Section 48 of the Finance (No.2) Act 1997 introduced a tax relief for expenditure on the production or acquisition of the master version of a British qualifying film with total production expenditure not exceeding £15 million. This relief is estimated to have cost £440 million for the period 1997–98 to 2001–02 and costs for the further years are estimated as follows:

	£ million
2002–03	300
2003–04	140
2004–05	70
2005–06	50

We are continuing to assess the overall effectiveness of this relief as part of the Budget process.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the yield to the Exchequer from abolishing the film industry tax reliefs; and if he will make a statement. [130014]

Dawn Primarolo: There are three main measures providing enhanced tax relief for expenditure on the production or acquisition of the master version of a film. None of these reliefs has been abolished. However, the relief contained in section 48 of the Finance (No.2) Act 1997 for British qualifying films with total production expenditure not exceeding £15 million applies only to expenditure incurred on or before 2 July 2005. I also refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer which I am today giving to his companion question 130013.

Parliamentary Questions

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many questions directed to him remain unanswered. [130762]

John Healey: 2,483 of the 3,341 (74.3 per cent.) written questions tabled to the Treasury Ministers in the present parliamentary session to date received substantive replies on or before the dates on which answers were due. Answers have not yet been given to 727 questions, but in 131 cases the answers are not overdue.

Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the cost of restricting income tax relief on pensions to the basic rate of income tax; and if he will make a statement. [130565]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimated yield from restricting income tax relief on employee and self-employed pension contributions to the basic rate is £1.9 billion in 2002–03. The yield from restricting employer contributions is £2.8 billion, this estimate assumes that the proportion of total employer contributions relating to higher rate taxpayers is that same as that for employees. The estimates take no account of any behavioural effects which are likely to result from such changes.

Stamp Duty

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will publish (a) the results of the consultation on the reform of stamp duty land tax affecting commercial leases and (b) revisions to the Government's proposals. [130009]

Dawn Primarolo: We expect to publish shortly.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to align the residential and non-residential property upper thresholds for the zero rate stamp duty band. [130556]

Dawn Primarolo: The Chancellor's decision to increase the zero rate stamp duty threshold to £150,000 for non-residential property has been welcomed by business representatives as a boost for small businesses investing in commercial property and will come into effect from 1 December 2003. The level of the thresholds is kept under regular review.

As part of the Government's plans to regenerate the most deprived parts of the UK, in 1,997 Enterprise Areas the purchase of residential property costing up to £150,000 is already exempt from stamp duty.

Tax

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the impact on the tax yield of increasing the top rate of tax to 50 pence in the pound. [129254]

Dawn Primarolo: This estimate can be derived from the Inland Revenue Statistics table T1.6 "Direct effects of illustrative tax change" which is available on the Inland Revenue website. It excludes any behavioural response to the tax change.

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to change the rules relating to non-domicile status for tax purposes. [129255]

Dawn Primarolo: At Budget 2002, the Chancellor announced a review of the residence and domicile rules as they affect the tax liabilities of individuals. That work is continuing. The background paper published on Budget Day 2003 provides a framework for further analysis and discussion.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the annual cost for each year from 2002–03 to 2005–06 of the tax changes made in the March 2002 Budget to (a) research and development tax credit for large companies, (b) exemption for gains on large shareholdings, (c) community investment tax credit, (d) Vaccines Tax Credit, (e) tax relief for community amateur sports clubs, (f) beer duty relief for small brewers, (g) expansion of the scope of the lower rate of air passenger duty and (h) reform of the tax relief on intellectual property; what assessments have been made in each case of the economic benefits of the tax changes made; and if he will make a statement. [130237]

Dawn Primarolo: The available information is shown in Table A1 of the Budget 2002 Financial Statement and Budget Report (pp153–154).

HOME DEPARTMENT

Alcohol Reduction Strategy

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the reasons for the delay in the publication of the National Alcohol Harm Reduction Strategy; and when he expects the strategy to be published. [127147]

Ms Blears: The Government are on course to meet the target in the NHS Plan to implement the National Alcohol Harm Reduction Strategy by 2004. A large scale consultation has been conducted jointly by the Department of Health and the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit. This yielded a large number of responses which have been extremely valuable in informing the development of the strategy. The Strategy Unit is due to publish its interim analysis shortly.

The Strategy Unit's final report, which will set out the cross-governmental alcohol harm reduction strategy, is due for publication during the autumn. There will then be further Government consultation on the details of implementation and the strategy will be implemented according to timetable by 2004.

Antisocial Behaviour

Mrs Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to tackle antisocial behaviour associated with drinking alcohol. [129081]

Ms Blears: The Government have already brought forward a range of legislative measures designed to help tackle anti-social behaviour associated with drinking alcohol. The Licensing (Young Persons) Act 2000 makes it an offence for any person to sell alcohol to a person aged under 18 on licensed premises, or knowingly to allow another person to do so. It also created the offence of buying, or attempting to buy, alcohol on licensed premises on behalf of a person aged under 18.

The Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 provides the police and local authorities with increased powers to tackle under-age drinking. The Act contains measures to make it easier for local authorities to designate areas where restrictions on anti-social drinking will apply. It also created a positive duty on licensees and their staff not to sell alcohol to persons aged under 18s.

Section 155 of the Licensing Act 2003, which came into force on 10 September 2003, extends existing police powers relating to the confiscation of alcohol from people who are drinking and causing a nuisance in public places, so as to allow for the confiscation of sealed containers, in addition to opened containers, in defined circumstances.

In addition, anti-social behaviour orders (ASBOs) have been used to prohibit individuals from consuming alcohol or being under the influence of alcohol in public. Such orders can also be used to prohibit individuals from entering licensed premises or off-licences and buying alcohol. ASBO prohibitions can cover any geographical area up to and including the whole of England and Wales.

For the future, the Home Office is working with the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit on their project to develop a national alcohol harm reduction strategy. The project is looking at the wide range of alcohol harms including alcohol-related crime, anti-social behaviour and community safety. A report setting out the cross-governmental alcohol harm reduction strategy for England is due for publication during autumn 2003.

Sexual Offences

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been cautioned for gross indecency in lavatories at Baker Street tube station since 1995. [128636]

Ms Blears: The information on cautions collected centrally in England and Wales does not enable areas below police force level to be identified.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the use of CCTV cameras in public lavatories to combat the problem of sexual activities. [128639]

Ms Blears: No assessment has been made of the use of CCTV cameras in public lavatories to combat the problem of sexual activities.

Accidents (Emergency Service Vehicles)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) fatal and (b) non-fatal accidents involving (i) police, (ii) ambulance, (iii) fire service and (iv) other emergency service vehicles there were in each year since 1993, in each London borough; and if he will make a statement. [128760]

Ms Blears: The tables attached give the number of accidents in the Metropolitan and City of London police areas involving police vehicles engaged inimmediate/emergency response or pursuit at the time of the accident. The figures are broken down by the severity of injuries sustained by police officers and civilians. Information is not available broken down by London Borough. The Home Office does not collect data on accidents involving ambulance, fire service, or other emergency vehicles.

The Government welcomes the recognition by the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) that they must work to reduce the number of collisions involving police vehicles.

ACPO are working closely with the Police Complaints Authority (PCA) to identify why they occur and how they might be avoided. Useful information can be expected from the increasing use by forces of Automatic Data Recorders (ADR) and Vehicle Accident Data Recorders (VADR). These operate in a similar way to aircraft black boxes, providing data on such issues as speed, gear changes, braking, and the use of blue lights.

Table A: The number of accidents in the Metropolitan (Met) and City of London (CofL) police areas involving police vehicles engaged in immediate/emergency response or pursuit at the time of the accident, broken down by severity of injuries sustained to police officers.

	Fatal		Serious Injury		Slight Injury
Year	Met	CofL	Met	CofL	Met	CofL
1993	2	0	51	0	N/a	N/a
1994–95	2	0	22	0	421	2
1995–96	0	0	23	0	297	4
1996–97	0	0	43	1	352	7
1997–98	0	0	47	3	419	0
1998–99	0	0	45	0	280	6
1999–2000	0	0	11	0	235	0
2000–01	0	0	11	0	235	0
2001–02	0	0	15	0	218	5

Table B: The number of accidents in the Metropolitan (Met) and City of London (CofL) police areas involving police vehicles engaged in immediate/emergency response or pursuit at the time of the accident, broken down by severity of injuries sustained to civilians.

	Fatal		Serious Injury		Slight Injury
Year	Met	CofL	Met	CofL	Met	CofL
1993	10	0	45	1	N/a	N/a
1994–95	11	0	22	1	353	6
1995–96	4	0	25	0	335	2
1996–97	1	0	27	0	189	4
1997–98	1	0	28	0	246	3
1998–99	1	0	25	1	310	3
1999–2000	1	0	24	0	220	0
2000–01	6	0	29	0	393	2
2001–02	2	0	36	1	389	1

Notes:
1. The information is provided by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary, to which forces submit statistical returns
2. All figures are for financial years, except for 1993 (calendar year)
3. Figures for 2002–03 are not yet available
4. Information on fatalities and injuries is only available for accidents involving police vehicles which were engaged in immediate/emergency response or pursuit at the time of the accident.

Airwave Radio

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Home Office expects the airwave radio to be in service in the Thames Valley police area; what the original estimate was for when airwave radios would be introduced into the Thames Valley police area; what changes have been made in the payment of government grant in respect of the airwave radio system in (a) 2002–03 and (b) 2003–04; and if he will make a statement. [129423]

Ms Blears: The Airwave network became available for operational use in the Thames Valley police area on 23 July 2003.The force is expected to be fully operational on the Airwave service by August 2004. The original estimate for the introduction of the Airwave service in Thames Valley was 24 June 2002.

The payment of government grant in respect of Airwave is adjusted in each police force depending on progress of the roll-out. In the case of Thames Valley, the force received payment in 2002–03 to assist with setting-up costs, but no payment was made for the service itself. Payment in 2003–04 will cover the core Airwave service and part of the extra features required by the Thames Valley Police Constabulary to ensure its specific operational needs are met.

Alcohol Restricted Zones

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department under what Act of Parliament anti-social drinking orders are made; and how such orders will be enforced. [128652]

Ms Blears: I believe my hon. Friend is interested in alcohol restricted zones.

Section 13 of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 allows local authorities to introduce designation orders to restrict anti-social public drinking in areas that have experienced alcohol-related disorder or nuisance. The arrangements introduced by the Act replaced a previous Home Office public drinking bylaw.

The police have responsibility for enforcing such designation orders through their discretionary powers to confiscate alcohol if they reasonably believe that a person is, or has been, consuming alcohol in a designated public place. The discretionary powers are set out in section 12 of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001.

Anti-terrorism Legislation

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the use of anti-terrorism legislation against the protesters at the Excel Exhibition Centre in East London on 9 September. [129947]

Mr. Blunkett: I have called for an immediate report, to be with me by 18 September, into the use of Section 44 stop and search powers during the policing of the DSEi exhibition at the Excel Exhibition Centre in London.

It would be inappropriate to comment further until I have had an opportunity to consider the report.

Child Abuse

Mrs Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many England and Wales police forces have been involved in investigations into allegations of child abuse in children's homes and other institutions in the past five years; and how many of these allegations relate to historical abuse. [128348]

Ms Blears: The information requested is not available centrally. The Home Office does not collect information on police investigations into allegations of child abuse in children's homes or similar institutions.

In its report on "The Conduct of Investigations Into Past Cases of Abuse in Children's Homes" in October 2002, the Home Affairs Committee noted that 34 police forces had conducted investigations, and that there had been a total of 226 charges relating to historical abuse. It did not record the number of allegations made.

Mrs Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action has been taken to revise the internal police handbook for senior investigating officers to set out the terms of an initial approach to potential witnesses in a child abuse case. [128350]

Ms Blears: I understand from the Association of Chief Police Officers that the team responsible for writing this handbook has been considering the recommendations of the Home Affairs Committee in its report on "The Conduct of Investigations into Past Cases of Abuse in Children's Homes", and the Government's response, and is expected to reach its conclusions before the end of the year.

Mrs Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will issue a code of practice for the audio and visual recording of police interviews with complainants and other significant witnesses in cases of historical child abuse; [128351]

(2) if the Government will issue guidelines to enforce recording of police interviews of complainant and other significant witnesses in home care abuse cases. [128392]

Ms Blears: There is no current code of practice which directs the police to record (either by audio or video) interviews with complainants or other significant witnesses, and we do not propose to introduce one.

Guidance entitled 'Achieving Best Evidence in Criminal Proceedings' was issued to the police and other agencies involved in criminal proceedings in 2002, superseding the 'Memorandum of Good Practice on Video Recorded Interviews with Child Witnesses for Criminal Proceedings (1992)'. The guidance describes best practice procedures when interviewing vulnerable or intimidated witnesses, whether adults or children, to ensure that they are able to give their best evidence.

There may be clear advantages to both complainant and defendant if greater transparency were built into the process of obtaining evidence in historical abuse cases, and the Government will consider with the Association of Chief Police Officers how to take this forward.

Copies of 'Achieving Best Evidence in Criminal Proceedings' have been placed in the Library.

Child Protection

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what improvements to child protection measures have been instituted by police forces since the publication of the Laming Report. [129332]

Ms Blears [holding answer 11 September 2003]: The Government response to the Victoria Climbié Inquiry Report was published on 8 September as an annex to the Green Paper, "Every Child Matters". The response directly addresses the recommendations made by Lord Laming to the police and the Home Office.

One key improvement we have made is to issue revised guidance to the police on the appropriate use of police protection powers. The Home Office Circular for this purpose was published on 8 September and has been issued to all Chief Constables.

In the National Policing Plan 2003–06, we asked all police forces to address their child protection service as part of local policing plan priorities, and this was reflected in all plans received by the Home Office in March 2003.

In addition, we understand that the Association of Chief Police Officers has prepared draft standards for child protection policing. These will be produced by the National Centre of Policing Excellence by the end of 2003 as part of a manual of guidance.

Child Rescue Alert

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the findings of the pilot scheme into Child Rescue Alert carried out by Sussex Police. [127570]

Ms Blears: The findings of the pilot will not be published. However, they have informed the setting up of a national text messaging service by Police Information Technology Organisation (PITO), which can be used to quickly alert the public in the event of child abductions.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is on individual police forces entering into commercial contracts with private companies providing text messaging services for child abduction warning schemes as envisaged in the Child Rescue Alert Scheme in Sussex. [127571]

Ms Blears: The Vice Chair of the Information Management Communications Group of the Association of Chief Police Officers has written to all Chief Constables and Commissioners of Police advising them to first discuss any intention to enter into such commercial contracts with the E-policing Management Group and Police Information Technology Organisation.

I support the advice given in that letter.

Crime (Merseyside)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the level of recorded crime in Crosby in the last 12 months. [129471]

Ms Blears: Six categories of recorded crime at Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership (CDRP) and police Basic Command Unit (BCU) level have been collected and published for the period from 1 April 1999. These categories are listed in the table, with the number of crimes for the latest available year in the Sefton CDRP and BCU within which Crosby falls.

This data has been published on the Home Office Website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs2/hosb703sup1.xls.

Recorded Crimes in Sefton CDRP/BCU area in year ending March 2003.

Offence category	Number of recorded crimes
Violence against the person	3,016
Sexual Offences	185
Robbery	334
Burglary in a dwelling	2,533
Theft of vehicle	1,542
Theft from vehicle	1,629

Merseyside adopted the National Crime Recording Standard in April 2002, and so this will have affected the 2002/03 figures given above.

Police (Havering)

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent measures have been taken to cut crime rates in Romford by the Metropolitan police. [128376]

Ms Blears: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis informs me that the Borough Commander for Havering and his senior management team continue to police Havering borough using intelligence-led policing, focusing on crime hot spots within the borough. An example of one of these initiatives, which began on 5 September 2003, is an operation which targets street robbery, disorder and assault and involves the co-operation of Havering borough council and the British Transport Police. A further initiative has been introduced whereby one sergeant and seven constables patrol outside nightclubs in Romford on both Friday and Saturday nights to reduce disorder. The Metropolitan police believe that this has helped to reduce disorder and provide reassurance in the town centre.

Since 1 April this year, figures provided by the Metropolitan police indicate that total notifiable offences in Havering borough have been reduced by 4.3 per cent. and burglary has been reduced by 25.4 per cent.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he had with the Metropolitan police in the London borough of Havering in July. [128380]

Ms Blears: While I had no discussions with the Metropolitan police of the London borough of Havering in July, I did meet the Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police Service on 16 July. This meeting was one of a series held throughout the year which focus on the whole of the Metropolitan police area.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the Metropolitan Police in the London Borough of Havering during the past 12 months. [128403]

Ms Blears: I have had no meetings with the Metropolitan Police in the London Borough of Havering during the past 12 months. I have regular bilateral meetings with the Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police Service.

Criminal Trials

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was paid to witnesses in criminal proceedings in each of the last 10 years. [127659]

The Solicitor-General: I have been asked to reply.

The following table shows the amounts paid to prosecution witnesses in each of the last six years. It is not possible to provide figures for the last 10 years as records have only been kept consistently since 1996 following the introduction of a new accounting system. The figures are broken down between expert witness fees, foreign witness expenses and ordinary and professional witness allowances.

Allowances paid to expert witnesses are discretionary. Guidance is provided to staff when paying expert witness fees. Rates of payment for ordinary witness allowances which include loss of earnings, travel and subsistence and, where appropriate, overnight, overnight allowances, are prescribed by the Crown Prosecution Service (Witnesses' allowances) Regulations 1988 which set out maximum rates payable.

All rates are reviewed annually and any increases in the rates set out in the Regulation are approved by HM Treasury.

£

	Expert witness fees	Foreign witness expenses	Ordinary/ professional witness allowances	Total
1997–98	3,482,667	463,670	7,124,681	11,071,018
1998–99	3,790,877	458,976	6,744,345	10,994,198
1999–2000	4,039,521	479,969	6,306,982	10,826,472
2000–01	4,331,570	449,355	6,491,143	11,272,068
2001–02	4,664,002	375,687	6,573,290	11,612,979
2002–03	5,067,840	436,840	6,644,757	12,149,437

Disruptive Youngsters

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to ensure that children under 16 are not on the streets very late at night; and what measures are in place to allow the police to remove disruptive young children from the streets at night. [128096]

Ms Blears: The Anti-social Behaviour Bill currently before Parliament gives the police a power to return young people under 16 who are unsupervised in public places after 9pm to their homes. The power will only be available in areas designated in advance by a senior officer as an area where anti-social behaviour is a significant and persistent problem and where members of the public have been intimidated, harassed, alarmed or distressed by groups.

The local child curfew scheme introduced in the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 allows a local authority or police force (after confirmation by the Secretary of State) to set up a scheme banning children and young people under 16 from being in a public place during specified hours. The police have a power to take home a child found in contravention of a curfew under this scheme.

DNA Profiles

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many UK citizens have their DNA profiles stored in his Department's database; and what the number of additions was in each of the last four months for which figures are available. [129478]

Ms Blears: There were 2,052,018 DNA records relating to individuals at 31 August 2003. Information is not available about the nationality of individuals whose profiles are held.

The number of profiles added each month for the last four months has been as follows: May 36,839; June 34,503; July 42,138; August 35,459.

Domestic Violence

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to monitor the performance of police forces in giving support to victims of domestic violence. [127279]

Ms Blears: The Government are determined that effective action should be taken to deal with domestic violence.

Police performance is currently monitored via the collection of data relating to the percentage of arrests made where an arrestable offence has been committed. For the future, police performance on domestic violence will be monitored through the inclusion of domestic violence as an indicator within the Police Performance Assessment Framework.

In addition HMIC/CPSi are currently undertaking a thematic review of domestic violence which will provide a detailed insight into current police performance on domestic violence. We will consider the recommendations of that review very carefully.

Ellie Baker

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on the progress of the investigation into Detective Chief Superintendent Ellie Baker since 15 July; [129655]

(2) how many complaints were made against Detective Chief Superintendent Ellie Baker by other police officers prior to 1 October 2002; [129656]

(3) if he will make a statement on the support services available to Detective Chief Superintendent Ellie Baker since the commencement of investigations into allegations against her; [129664]

(4) if he will list the allegations made against Detective Chief Superintendent Ellie Baker. [129665]

Ms Blears: [holding answer 15 September 2003]: My officials have requested this information from the West Midlands Police. Once it has been received I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Extradition Treaties

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether (a) membership of the International Court of Justice and (b) compliance with the Human Rights Act are criteria applied in determining with which countries the UK agrees extradition treaties are based; and if he will make a statement. [128036]

Caroline Flint: Membership of the International Court of Justice (ICJ) is not, in itself, a factor that determines if the UK can agree an extradition treaty with another state. The European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR) was incorporated into the Human Rights Act 1998 and underpins all UK extradition legislation.

Any decision to order a fugitive's surrender is taken with full regard to the UK's international obligations.

Forensic Science Laboratory

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police forces in England and Wales contract work to the Forensic Science Laboratory in Chepstow; how many staff are employed at the Forensic Science Laboratory in Chepstow; and what representations he has received in response to his statement of 17 July regarding the future of the Forensic Science Service from (a) trade unions, (b) police forces and (c) other bodies. [129337]

Ms Blears: Chepstow Forensic Science Laboratory provides services to the police forces in its region, which are Avon and Somerset; Devon and Cornwall; Dorset; Dyfed Powys; Gloucestershire; Gwent; Hampshire; South Wales; Thames Valley and Wiltshire.

These services are based on Service Level Agreements and not legally binding contracts. Some forces in the area (Dorset for example) use services supplied by other forensic providers; these may be managed through legally binding contracts.

There are currently 226 individuals employed at Chepstow Forensic Science Laboratory.

Representations in response to my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary's statement of 17 July about the future of the Forensic Science Service have been received from two trade unions Prospect and PCS, and from Brendan Barber, General Secretary of the TUC.

Illegal Camping

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent progress has been made in controlling illegal camping. [129066]

Ms Blears: The Anti-Social Behaviour Bill currently before Parliament includes a new eviction power to deal with unauthorised encampments. This new power will allow the police to take firm action against unauthorised encampments, without having to satisfy the pre-conditions found in the current legislation, where there are places available on local authority sites.

Immigration Control

Mrs Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost is to his Department per person per day of detaining a person subject to immigration control in (a) a prison and (b) a removal centre. [128517]

Beverley Hughes: The Prison Service categorises establishments by their main role only and it is not possible to say what the cost is of detaining a person subject to mmigration control in a prison.

The average cost per place per day of detention in removal centres contracted out to the private sector is £97. The average cost of detention in Dover and Haslar, the two establishments operated by the Prison Service wholly as removal centres is £66.56.

Intelligent Pedestrian Pilot

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the Minister of State's letter (ref M 3759/3) of 20 August, when he expects to receive the outcome of Intelligent Pedestrian Surveillance Pilot schemes; and if he will make a statement. [128270]

Ms Blears: The Intelligent Pedestrian Surveillance pilot is a collaboration between Kingston University, University College London, London Underground and Sollatek. It is not sponsored by the Home Office. However, I await the outcome of the pilot with interest.

Mobile Phones

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many crime numbers were issued by the police for (a) lost and (b) stolen mobile phones in the last 24 months for which figures are available. [127826]

Ms Blears: The Home Office collects statistics on the basis of recorded crime figures, not crime numbers issued by the police.

The Home Office does not centrally collect or collate national statistics on the numbers of mobile phone thefts as mobile phone theft is not a separate crime category. Mobile phone theft crime figures are included within the crime categories of robbery, snatch theft and theft from person.

The Home Office collects four-weekly figures from the 10 street crime police force areas on the numbers of robberies, snatch thefts and thefts from person involving a mobile phone and for nine of the 10 areas these are broken down into those involving a mobile phone only. The data are for internal management and monitoring purposes and are unpublished.

Home Office Research (Mobile Phone Theft, HORS 235) published in January 2002 looked at the scale of the mobile phone theft problem. Its best estimate of the number of mobile phones stolen in the UK in 2000–01, including unreported offences, was 710,000. This estimate was based on findings from police recording, British Crime Survey, MORI schools survey and the On Track schools survey.

Police Complaints Authority

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints under investigation by the Police Complaints Authority are (a) less than one year old, (b) one to three years old, (c) three to five years old and (d) over five years old; and if he will make a statement. [128762]

Ms Blears: Information is not available in the form requested. The Police Complaints Authority (PCA) has provided the following table in response.

Total outstanding cases for the PCA at 8 September 2003

Year received[1]	Misconduct Cases only[2]	Misconduct cases that were supervised[3]	Supervised investigations[4]	Total
1999	1	4	2	7
2000	1	11	5	17
2001	4	19	32	55
2002	30	41	97	168
2003	727	5	225	957
Total	763	80	361	1,204

Note:
It is important to note the following:
The PCA does not "investigate" any cases itself; the police forces undertake all investigations;
Of the above cases, the PCA undertakes a supervisory role for the second and third columns of the table only;
There are some cases that have been supervised and where the Section 75 is to be issued that are not included in these figures.

[1] Year received for the column "Misconduct Cases Only" relates to the year the case arrived at the PCA after the investigation had been completed by a police force. The PCA has no control over the time a complaint was made (though legislation dictates it should be within 12 months of the date of incident) or the length of the police investigation.

[2] These are cases received by the PCA after the investigation has been completed by a police force where a review of the file is required. This includes "Dispensation" cases (those where the complaint is not followed through for any reason).

[3] These are cases where the PCA has previously supervised an investigation and where a review of the file is now taking place.

[4] These are cases where the PCA is supervising the investigation.

Police Conduct

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what steps he takes to assess whether appropriate disciplinary action is taken against police officers whose conduct while not on duty is found to be improper; [127286]

(2) what action he is taking to ensure that complaints by the public relating to a police officer's conduct while not on duty are investigated; [127287]

(3) what action he is taking to ensure that the Police Complaints Authority has access to all necessary evidence while conducting investigations into improper conduct by police officers when not on duty; [127288]

(4) what steps he takes to assess the extent to which police forces release information regarding the outcome of a complaint to those that make the complaint, when release of such information is not prohibited by data protection legislation. [127291]

Ms Blears: The Police (Conduct) Regulations 1999 set out at Schedule 1 a Code of Conduct, the principles of which guide police officers' behaviour. The Code applies to the conduct of police officers in all ranks while on duty, or while off duty, if the conduct is serious enough to indicate that an officer is not fit to be a police officer.

Any breach of the principles in the Code may result in an officer facing misconduct proceedings under the Police (Conduct) Regulations 1999. Chief officers are responsible for applying the Regulations to their own forces.

The investigation of complaints by the public relating to the conduct of a police officer falls under Chapter I, Part IV, of the Police Act 1996 (the Act). Under those provisions the police authority is the appropriate authority for handling complaints against senior officers (those above the rank of chief superintendent) and the chief officer of the force is the appropriate authority for recording and investigating complaints in respect of all other ranks.

The Secretary of State for the Home Department does not have the power to intervene in either the recording or investigation of individual complaints, whether they concern on or off duty conduct, or in any disciplinary proceedings.

Under Section 72 of the Act, the Police Complaints Authority (PCA) will supervise the investigation of certain types of complaints and it is within that process of supervision that it will have access to all the necessary evidence, primarily by way of the Investigating Officer's report. In such cases, the PCA may also impose such additional reasonable requirements as to the conduct of the investigation as appear to them necessary.

There is currently no statutory requirement for a force to disclose information to a complainant. The Secretary of State for the Home Department does not assess the extent to which police forces release information to a complainant regarding the outcome of a complaint.

A new police complaints system will be introduced from April 2004 under provisions in the Police Reform Act 2002. This new system will operate under the guardianship of the Independent Police Complaints Commission (IPCC).

The new system will not change the Secretary of State for the Home Department's role in regard to the handling of complaints or disciplinary proceedings taken against police officers. Similarly, although it does not change the handling with regard to supervised complaints, it does provide for a managed investigation by the IPCC and for an independent investigation by the IPCC. As these two new types of investigation will put the IPCC in full control of the investigation, they will have unrestricted access to all the necessary evidence. Finally, with regards to the disclosure of information, the new complaints system places a clear duty on the police to keep the complainant properly informed during, and at the end of, an investigation, subject to a sensitivity test.

Police Notebooks

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Metropolitan police officers have been subject to an internal disciplinary process for tearing a page or pages from their police notebook in the last five years; and if he will list the sanctions imposed. [127068]

Ms Blears: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis informs me that in the last five years one officer has been subject to disciplinary proceedings for removing a page from a pocket book. The officer received a caution.

Police Procedures

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent steps the Government has taken to (a) simplify police procedures, (b) reduce procedural and administrative burdens on the police, (c) save police resources and (d) speed up the process of justice. [128621]

Ms Blears: The report of the Joint Home Office/ Cabinet Office Review of the Police and Criminal Evidence (PACE) Act 1984 set the above criteria as the basis for identifying potential changes to PACE.

The Government's current legislative programme takes forward the findings of the review in areas such as provision for extending the powers of stop and search; the execution of warrants; street bail; review of police detention; limits on periods of detention without charge; property of detained persons; taking fingerprints before charge; and the process of revising or introducing PACE Codes of Practice. The remaining findings are being taken forward administratively or through future legislative opportunities.

Public Sector Employees

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what protection is afforded to public sector employees from violence in the workplace; and what plans he has to introduce a specific offence for assaulting public sector workers. [128110]

Ms Blears: The Government take a very serious view of violence in the workplace and are pursuing a range of action to combat it.

In March 2000 the Health and Safety Commission (HSC) embarked on a three-year programme to help employers, including those in the public sector, to tackle assaults on staff, with the aim of reducing the number of incidents of violence at work. So far the programme has resulted in the publication of new guidance specifically aimed at small businesses, the development of new National Occupational Standards on work-related violence, a programme of inspections in the health care sector, and new research to establish good practice for lone workers, including those in the public sector.

Health and Safety Executive officials are now evaluating the programme and will be submitting written proposals to the HSC on the next stage (2003 06) later this year.

Assaulting a public sector worker in the course of his or her duty is an extremely serious matter, as reflected in guidelines issued by the Magistrates' Association in September 2000 (and amended in July 2001). The guidelines already make it clear that, if the assault is against an individual serving the public, this should be considered as an aggravating factor.

We have no current plans to introduce a specific offence of assaulting a public sector worker.

Secondments

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many UK police officers are seconded to police (a) forces and (b) agencies overseas; which countries are involved; from which forces the officers have been seconded; and what plans there are to send further offices to overseas countries in addition to Iraq. [128318]

Ms Blears: Each police force keeps its own records on overseas secondments and comprehensive figures are not held centrally. Figures are available on the number of United Kingdom police officers participating in international peacekeeping and crisis management operations overseas. Contributions to peacekeeping missions and crisis management operations account for the overwhelming majority of police officers seconded from English and Welsh forces to police forces and agencies overseas. On 5 September 2003, the United Kingdom had 195 serving police officers working in peacekeeping missions in Bosnia, Croatia, Macedonia, Kosovo, East Timor, Sierra Leone, Serbia and Montenegro and Iraq.

Of these 195 police officers, 92 are from English and Welsh police forces and the National Criminal Intelligence Service. All English and Welsh police forces currently have at least one police officer on secondment to overseas peacekeeping missions with the exception of the City of London Police, Cumbria Constabulary, Gwent Police, Hertfordshire Constabulary, Leicestershire Constabulary, Norfolk Constabulary, Nottinghamshire Police, Staffordshire Police, Thames Valley Police and West Mercia Constabulary. The largest number of secondees from any one force in England and Wales is seven.

Contributions from the Ministry of Defence Police, the Police Service of Northern Ireland and Scottish police forces make up the remaining numbers of UK police officers serving on international peacekeeping missions.

Any plans to send police officers from English and Welsh forces to new peacekeeping missions in addition to Iraq will be initiated through a formal request to the Home Office from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. I have received no such requests.

Stolen Art

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures are in place to provide a national database of stolen art and artefacts; and if he will make a statement. [129512]

Ms Blears: The Home Office continues to work closely with the Department for Culture, Media and Sport on the issue of developing a national cultural property database. We are currently in the process of re-assessing various options available to us.

Street Crime

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what change there has been in the level of street crime in each of the 10 hot spot areas during the year 2002–03 [128863]

Ms Blears: The table compares recorded robbery in 2002–03 with 2001–02 in the 10 police force areas involved in the Street Grime Initiative (SCI). The figures are not adjusted for National Crime Recording Standard (NCRS). The NCRS effect in 2002–03 on recorded robbery figures in England and Wales was to inflate those by three per cent.

Force	2001–02	2002–03	Percentage change
Metropolitan Police	53,547	42,496	-21
West Midlands	13,322	10,249	-23
Greater Manchester	11,027	10,745	-3
West Yorkshire	5,674	4,947	-13
Avon & Somerset	4,889	3,504	-28
Merseyside	3,155	2,994	-5
Thames Valley	2,894	2,406	-17
Nottinghamshire	2,726	2,799	3
South Yorkshire	1,952	2,112	8
Lancashire	1,608	1,409	-12
Total for 10 SCI forces	100,794	83,661	-17

Underage Drinkers

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment he has made of the impact on effective policing of the removal of the power to confiscate sealed containers of alcohol from underage drinkers in public places; [127129]

(2) in what plans he has to extend the power to confiscate alcohol from young people drinking in public places to sealed containers. [127133]

Ms Blears: Police powers to confiscate alcohol and alcohol containers from under-age drinkers are provided by the Confiscation of Alcohol (Young Persons) Act 1997. That Act was amended by section 29 of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 with the effect that the police were able to confiscate alcohol in opened containers from young people in public places, but not alcohol in sealed containers.

Following representations from the police and others to strengthen these powers to include sealed containers, we brought section 155 of the Licensing Act 2003 into force on 10 September 2003. This extends police confiscation powers in respect of under-age drinkers in public places to include alcohol in sealed containers where the officer believes that the young person is, has been or intends to drink the alcohol in any public place.

Video Surveillance

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the use of video surveillance in public areas; what effect this has had on crime in those areas; and what plans there are to expand video surveillance. [127990]

Ms Blears: Under the Crime Reduction Programme CCTV Initiative, around £170 million has been spent on 684 CCTV schemes across England and Wales, covering town centres, car parks, residential and rural areas. Of these schemes, 675 are already operational with the remaining schemes due to go live later this year. The Initiative is now closed and there are no plans for a new CCTV-specific funding round in the near future.

Police operational experience and various other research studies show that CCTV has considerable crime reduction and detection potential, particularly when used as part of a wider strategy.

To help ensure maximum impact and sustainability of CCTV, a 1.5 million Home Office funded national evaluation programme is being carried out by the Scarman Centre, University of Leicester, on 15 approved CCTV Initiative schemes.

The final evaluation report will not be published until 2004, but interim reports will be available before then. The first—providing guidance for practitioners on implementation of CCTV schemes—is available on the crime reduction website (www.crimereduction.gov.uk).

Opportunities for funding of further CCTV schemes in England and Wales currently exist through the Building Safer Communities Fund. Under this fund, £72.3 million has been made available to Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships in 2003–04 for tackling local problems of crime and disorder. In addition, a special £50 million Basic Command Unit (BCU) fund has been distributed to local police commanders to help tackle the problems that matter most in their communities. Police will be able to target the extra resources at local level problems, like anti-social behaviour and drugs, deploying CCTV where appropriate.

The Scottish Parliament has responsibility for CCTV funding in Scotland.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

International Student Visas

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how long it takes for an international student visa to be issued. [129425]

Mr. Mullin: Visa sections at our overseas posts aim to resolve student applications for entry clearance within 24 hours.

However, if the applicant requires an interview, this can delay the resolution of the application. We normally aim to offer an interview within 10 days. However, applicants may face longer queues in some individual posts where security or other factors mean that we are unable to offer the level of service that we would like.

Afghanistan

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the changes in quantities of opium produced in Afghanistan since the overthrow of the Taliban. [127172]

Mr. Rammell: The United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) conducts an annual survey into the level of opium poppy cultivation and production in Afghanistan. These two sets of figures need to be read together to provide full information about trends in poppy production. It has reported levels of cultivation and production over the past 5 years as follows:

Year	Hectares	Tonnes
1998	64,000	2,700
1999	91,000	4,600
2000	82,000	3,300
2001	8,000	185
2002	74,000	3,400

The UNODC figures for 1998, 1999, 2000 and 2001 were all recorded under the Taliban regime. The figures in 1999 are the highest UNODC have recorded in Afghanistan. The low level of cultivation and low production figure in 2001 reflect the Taliban ban on opium cultivation; the ban did not however address the underlying causes of poppy cultivation in Afghanistan and was enforced with mix of threat and bribery.

The UNODC is in the process of preparing the report of the 2003 survey on behalf of the Afghan government. It will be published in the autumn.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place with NATO members in the Committee on the Challenges of Modern Society regarding the monitoring of chemical leaks from chemical weapons stocks dumped in the Baltic after the second world war. [129098]

Mr. Ingram: I have been asked to reply.

Following a Norwegian-led NATO Committee on the Challenges of Modern Society (CCMS) Pilot Study on Cross Border Environmental Problems Emanating from Defence Related Installations and Activities, the Russian Government approached NATO in 1997 regarding possible cooperation in the monitoring and prevention of leakage of chemicals from German chemical weapons stocks sunk in the Baltic and Skagerrak after World War Two. A CCMS expert meeting on chemical weapons dumped in the Baltic Sea and Skagerrak took place in Oslo in 1997. A member of the British embassy in Oslo attended the meeting.

At that meeting, the Russian delegation gave preliminary information on recent environmental expeditions to the Baltic and Skagerrak. The Russian delegation proposed that a further CCMS expert meeting should be held before the end of 1997 to consider the full findings from the expeditions; and that a joint NATO- Russia expedition should be organised for 1998.

CHADWYCK-HEALEY

HOUSE OF COMMONS PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES (HANSARD) ● 2002-03

Vol. 410 (Part 2) cols. W675 - 866

8 Sept - 6 Oct 2003

It was the Ministry of Defence's understanding that CCMS was continuing to lead on this issue. However, we have now been advised that the Russian proposals were forwarded to the NATO Political Committee in 1997. That Committee rejected the proposals, stating that the results of the Russian expeditions and any plans for future expeditions should be conducted through, or as part of, the Helsinki Convention on the Protection of the Marine Environment of the Baltic Sea.

Cyprus

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to reduce the barriers to obtaining a visa to visit the UK for residents of the occupied part of Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [127810]

Mr. Mullin: The visa regime on the "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus" ("TRNC") stems from the fact that the United Kingdom requires holders of non-national travel documents to obtain visas to enter the UK. The "TRNC" travel document is considered to be a non-national travel document as it is issued by an authority which is not recognised by HMG. This will remain the case after the entry of the Republic of Cyprus into the EU in May 2004, unless a comprehensive political settlement is achieved first.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

Mr. Doug Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the situation in the Democratic Republic of the Congo. [129583]

Mr. Mullin: The transitional process in Kinshasa is now making encouraging progress. The new Transitional National Government (TNG) should provide a real opportunity for the Democratic Republic of the Congo to put an end to the cycle of conflict and human rights abuses and start on the path to democracy and development. We are looking actively at ways in which we can provide support—bilaterally, with EU and other partners, and through the UN.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo regarding human rights abuses in that country; and if he will make a statement. [129827]

Mr. Mullin: Before the Transitional National Government (TNG) was installed in Kinshasa at the end of July our ambassador made regular representations to the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo about human rights abuses in the territory they then controlled. During the same period the Government supported international efforts to raise human rights awareness in rebel-held areas and, with the EU, condemned abuses in those territories.

Since installation of the TNG, we have continued to make our views known, both bilaterally and with our international partners. We will support the work of relevant institutions such as the National Human Rights Observatoire.

Iraq

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many officials the Coalition Provisional Administration has in the British-controlled sector of Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [128795]

Mr. Rammell: The number of Coalition Provisional Authority (CPA) officials in the British-controlled sector is approximately 90. These officials are of various nationalities, and include military and civilians (who might be government secondees, consultants, or contractors). This excludes (a) people and organisations that support CPA with services e.g. security, (b) contractors who are implementing projects but not in any strict sense involved in administration and (c) military who are doing related jobs and are part of the coalition forces but not of CPA.

The 90 currently includes 27 British civilian staff members with the Coalition Provisional Authority South in the British-controlled sector of Iraq. These include three police and 14 from the Department for International Development. In addition, there are 39 uniformed personnel. It is expected that at least 34 more additional posts will be filled in the near future.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on which dates the UNSCOM inspectors visited presidential sites in Iraq before 1999; and what facilities were inspected on each date. [129282]

Mr. MacShane [holding answer 15 September 2003]: A special team of inspectors, with 20 senior diplomats acting as observers, was established in March 1998 to carry out inspections at eight presidential sites. The inspection mission, UNSCOM 243, visited the sites on the following dates: Radwaniya on 26 and 27 March; Tikrit on 28 March; Mosul and Jabal Makhul on 29 March; Tharthar and Basrah on 30 March; and the Republican Palace and Sijood sites in Baghdad on 1 and 2 April. The inspectors' report was subsequently published as a United Nations document (S/1 998/326), which can be found on the UN internet website at www.un.org/Depts/unscom/s98-326.htm.

There were no further visits to any of these sites.

Liberia

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in Liberia. [129826]

Mr. Mullin: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Gloucester (Mr. Dhanda) on 8 September 2003, Official Report, column 63W.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the members of ECOWAS about (a) UK, (b) EU and (c) UN assistance in Liberia; when these discussions took place; what the outcome of these discussions has been; and if he will make a statement. [129975]

Mr. Mullin: The UK is committed to working closely with the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) to ensure that the present Multi-National Force, and the UN Mission planned for Liberia, are successful in restoring peace and security to Liberia. We have been in close and regular contact with members of ECOWAS, especially Nigeria, over assistance in Liberia.

We have had discussions within the European Union to ensure adequate funding for Liberia. We have also had discussions within the UN to ensure that the UN Mission is fully equipped to do its job. We have committed £1 million to the ECOWAS Multi-National Force, and have seconded a military adviser to the ECOWAS Secretariat. We have also offered military advisers to the UN planning mission and head quarters.

Moldova

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government are taking to assist with the control of proliferation of (a) weapons and (b) nuclear materials in Transnistria in Moldova. [130184]

Mr. MacShane: We are not aware of any dangerous nuclear materials in the breakaway region of Transnistria. Along with EU partners and allies, we are assisting Russia with the destruction/removal of arms from Transnistria. We are also focusing closely on the political settlement negotiations between Moldova and Transnistria. Resolution of this "frozen conflict" is essential for extending the rule of law throughout the entire territory, an element of which is improved control of arms proliferation. The UK joined with EU partners in imposing targeted sanctions on the Transnistrian leadership in February this year to put pressure on them to negotiate with the Moldovan authorities. I urged the Ukrainian government to take action with the Moldovan authorities to deal with the Transnistria problem in talks in Kiev on 15 September.

Nepal

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what instructions have been issued to officials at the High Commission in Kathmandu regarding applications from the wives of Gurkhas, serving in this country, for visitor visas in cases where the soldiers have six months or less to serve. [130181]

Mr. Mullin: No specific instructions are issued to the British Embassy in Kathmandu in respect of visit visa applications from the dependants of Gurkha soldiers. Applications for all visitor visas are considered on their own merits in accordance with the United Kingdom Immigration Rules, and no special arrangements are in place for the dependants of Gurkha soldiers.

However, entry clearance staff in Kathmandu are aware that any Gurkha whose family wish to visit him in the United Kingdom has to follow British Army standing regulations.

A Gurkha soldier is required to submit to his Commanding Officer a request for members of his family to visit him in the United Kingdom. If the visit is agreed the Army issues a "certificate—Visit by Gurkha Family to Husband's/Father's duty station in the UK"

An entry clearance application is then made in the normal way. Entry clearance staff in Kathmandu would expect the above-mentioned certificate to be included with other supporting documentation.

Overseas Students

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received on the level of charges for visas and leave to remain for overseas students; and if he will make a statement. [129981]

Mr. Mullin: I have received few representations regarding the level of visa fees for students. Visa fees are set at a level to ensure that the full cost of providing the entry clearance service worldwide is met from fee income and that the UK taxpayer does not have to meet any of the costs. From 1 July 2002, the visa fee for students has been set at £36. Student visas are issued for the duration of their course regardless of its length. Charges for leave to remain are administered by the Home Office and I have therefore not received representations on this matter.

Uganda

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement concerning the human rights situation in Northern Uganda. [129323]

Mr. Mullin: We deplore the actions of the rebel group, the Lord's Resistance Army, in northern Uganda. In their 17 year war against the Government of Uganda they have been responsible for the abduction of over 20,000 children, many of whom become child soldiers, and massacres of thousands of local civilians. We are also concerned about reports that the Ugandan Army has been involved in recruitment of child soldiers, arbitrary arrests and mistreatment of detainees and have failed to protect the local population. The conflict has resulted in over one million displaced persons now living in refugee camps. We have raised these issues with the Ugandan government. The UK has responded to the worsening humanitarian situation by working with the international donor community and the World Food Programme (WFP) to bring relief to the affected region. Total UK support was £2.5 million in 2002–03.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the UN Security Council concerning the situation in Northern Uganda; and if he will make a statement. [129324]

Mr. Mullin: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not raised the situation in northern Uganda with the UN Security Council. While we recognise the Government of Uganda's need for a security response to the Lord's Resistance Army insurgency, we are concerned about the deteriorating humanitarian situation in the region caused by the fighting. We have raised our concerns with the Ugandan

Government and have encouraged them to consider other solutions to a military one. The UK is also liaising with EU partners and members of the donor community to consider how to help the Government of Uganda resolve the conflict.

UN Arms Embargoes

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Government has responded to the requests by the United Nations Security Council for information on violations of arms embargoes in Rwanda by UK companies discussed in the United Security Council document Third Report of the International Commission of Inquiry (Rwanda) (S/1997/1010). [129880]

Mr. Mullin: The Government takes seriously its responsibilities to ensure UK companies respect arms embargoes. Document S/1997/1010 mentions two requests for information: one to HM Customs and Excise (paragraph 64) and one to the Ministry of Defence (MOD) (paragraph 65). The MOD letter was answered, although the International Commission of Inquiry did not have enough time to follow up on it. The letter to HM Customs and Excise was unanswered at the time of the report, but it is very unlikely that any information about alleged criminal activity or any investigation could be made available. The report did not refer to any unanswered letters addressed to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact of traditional tribal demarcations and affinities in developing countries on the effectiveness of UN arms embargoes. [130183]

Mr. Rammell: No formal study of the impact of traditional tribal demarcations and affinities in developing countries on the effectiveness of UN arms embargoes has been made by Her Majesty's Government.

UN Peacekeeping Operations

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the United Nations on the use of reputable transport suppliers for UN peacekeepers. [130193]

Mr. Rammell: The Government maintains an on-going dialogue with the United Nations about all aspects of UN peacekeeping missions, including logistics.

Western Sahara

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects a UN authorised referendum to be held on the future of Western Sahara; and if he will make a statement. [130022]

Mr. Rammell: The United Kingdom supports fully the efforts of the UN Secretary General and his Personal Envoy, James Baker III, to find a just, lasting and mutually acceptable solution to the Western Sahara dispute that provides for self-determination for the people of Western Sahara.

In July this year the Security Council called upon the parties to the dispute to work with the United Nations and with each other towards acceptance and implementation of James Baker's Peace Plan which provides for a UN organised referendum after a transitional period. We are encouraging the parties and states of the region to cooperate fully with the Secretary-General and his personal envoy to this end.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Broadband

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of (a) secondary and (b) primary schools in rural areas have a broadband connection. [129359]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information is not yet held in the format requested but feedback from Regional Broadband Consortia currently indicates that a significant number of rural schools are already connected to broadband using a range of technologies including radio and satellite. The Department has requested specific information from Regional Broadband Consortia and local education authorities, which, when compiled by November 2003, will give the percentage of rural schools connected.

In England, 91 per cent. of secondary schools are connected at a minimum of 2 megabits per second, as are 26 per cent. of primary schools.

The Department is supporting the Government's Broadband Aggregation Project launched in July 2003, which will see the formation of nine Regional Aggregation Bodies tasked with aggregating demand and procuring broadband across the public sector. The project's two key aims are to ensure best value for the public sector's 1 billion investment in broadband and to help stimulate supply in areas where very little broadband is available. The Regional Aggregation Bodies and the Broadband Aggregation Project should significantly improve access to broadband by rural schools.

Circulars

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the circular documents that were sent by his Department to (a) primary and (b) secondary schools between 1 July and 31 August; and how many pages each document contained. [129722]

Mr. Miliband: We did not send any documents automatically to either primary schools or to secondary schools in the period, 1 July 2003 to 31 August 2003. The last mailing of documents to schools occurred in June 2003.

Correspondence

David Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when he will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Walsall, North of 5 August regarding a constituent, ref: 2003 0050920. [129734]

Mr. Miliband: I replied to my hon. Friend's letter of 5 August on 10 September.

Crosby

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the projects to which his Department has allocated funding in Crosby in each year since 1997. [129458]

Mr. Miliband: The table shows the total recurrent and capital funding allocated to Sefton local education authority between 1997–98 and 2003–04. Separate figures for Crosby are not available.

£ million

Pupils aged 3–19	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04
Education Formula Spending—general funding for schools and LEAs	116.5	122.2	128.2	132.0	129.6	143.0
Standards Fund—is paid to LEAs and schools to support national education priorities, focussing on key strategies for reform and improving standards.	1.6	3.2	6.0	9.4	11.6	13.9
3yo Nursery Education Grant—to assist LEAs to reach universal (participation) provision of all 3 year olds.		0.1	0.8	1.1	1.2
4yo Nursery Education Grant—to assist LEAs to reach universal (participation) provision for all 4 year olds.	0.4	0.4	0.3
Class Size Reduction—to assist schools to reduce class size in ks1 and 2.		0.4	1.1	1.2	1.0
Teacher Green Paper Grants—the main grants in this category are Teacher Threshold payments and Performance pay			1.9	3.4	4.0	N a
Schools Standard Grant—to help schools improve standards and is allocated based on the number, size and type school in each authority.			1.8	3.8	3.9	4.8
Learning and Skills Council—is responsible for planning and funding education and training of 6th form school provision.					9.1	9.8
School Budget Support—paid to LEAs in a particular year to cope with particular school budgetary pressures.			0.3
Education Budget Support—paid to LEAs in a particular year to additional education budget support.				0.9
Post 16 Budget Support—paid in order assist the transition of post 16 funding to the LSC.					0.6
Capital Funding—to improve school buildings.	0.7	1.5	3.3	7.6	8.1	9.1
Total	119.2	127.8	143.7	159.3	169.1	n a

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many classroom assistants were employed in Crosby in each year since 1997. [129459]

Mr. Miliband: The information requested is shown in the following table.

Maintained nursery, primary, middle and secondary schools and pupil referral

Units: Full-time equivalent number of teaching assistants

Crosby Parliamentary Constituency—
Position at January each year

	FTE teaching assistants[1]
1997	89
1998	92
1999	103
2000	123
2001	145
2002[2]	131
2003	157

[1] Includes teaching assistants, special needs support staff and minority ethnic pupil support staff

[2] Changes in the collection of support staff data in 2002 may have altered the distribution of staff between "teaching assistants" and "other staff" categories, affecting, comparisons with other years.

Source:

Annual Schools' Census

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many times he has visited Crosby in his official capacity; and what the purpose was of each visit. [129461]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I have not visited Crosby in an official capacity since taking up post as Secretary of State for Education and Skills.

Departmental Computer Security

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much has been (a) budgeted and (b) spent by his Department since April 2002 on (i) combating computer fraud, (ii) preventing theft of computers and (iii) safeguarding the security of information held on computer; and if he will make a statement. [128772]

Mr. Charles Clarke: This Department manages the security of its information, including information held on its computer systems, in accordance with the guidance given in the Manual of Protective Security; a comprehensive body of policy and interdepartmentally agreed security standards that is issued by the Cabinet Office.

The Department has an experienced IT security officer and deputy who advise how IT systems should be designed to minimise risk.

Portable IT equipment In London, at particular risk, is electronically tagged to prevent unauthorised removal and this has contributed to a reduction in the level of theft. The maintenance cost of the tagging system is £15,000 a year.

All external links to the Department are protected against unauthorised access by firewalls. Anti-virus software protects the Department's systems against malicious software at an annual cost of £45,000.

Deprivation

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures are being taken to raise the aspirations of young pupils in deprived areas; and what progress has been made in encouraging them to attain higher standards. [129091]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We are currently investing over £500 million pounds a year in revenue funding to raise the aspirations and achievements of young pupils in deprived areas through the Excellence in Cities programme. The programme covers 58 authorities as well as Excellence Clusters which tackle smaller pockets of deprivation. It includes some 1,000 secondary schools and over 1,000 primaries. In addition to providing Learning Mentors Learning Support Units enhanced opportunities for Gifted and Talented pupils and EiC Action Zones and City Learning Centres, the funding also provides for the delivery of Behaviour Improvement Plans, Leadership Incentive Grant and Aim Higher which is specifically designed to raise aspirations and widen access to Higher Education.

OFSTED's recent report on Excellence In Cities found that: schools and teachers had been helped to meet the needs of disaffected and vulnerable pupils more effectively; exclusions are being reduced; attendance is improving at a faster rate in the schools involved in the programme; and the introduction of the programme has been associated with a faster rise in standards in secondary schools in EiC areas than nationally .

As well as the additional support provided through the Governments targeted initiatives we are aiming to raise the aspirations and educational performance of pupils in deprived areas through mainstream programmes. The mainstream Primary and KS3 National Strategies are built on the principle that all children are capable of attaining high standards.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills in what circumstances children in deprived areas are paid to attend (a) school, (b) sixth form college, (c) further education colleges; and what guidance he has issued on how much is granted on a weekly basis. [129092]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Education Maintenance Allowance (EMA) is currently running as a pilot scheme in 56 Local Education Authority (LEA) areas in England. The pilots have tested eight variants of payment arrangements for EMA, two of which concentrate on the costs of transport. The maximum weekly payments vary from £20 to £40 assessed on income levels up to £30,000. Guidance on the pilot arrangements is made available through the LEAs.

From September 2004 EMAs will be made available across England, offering a weekly payment of up to £30, paid directly to young people who stay on in further education after they reach statutory leaving age. Young people may also receive bonuses if they remain on their course and make good progress with their learning. A leaflet explaining the national EMA scheme was published in August this year and copies are available in the House of Commons Library.

For young people with specific needs there is financial support available through the Learner Support Funds, providing help towards transport costs, books and equipment, residential allowances and help with childcare.

The support arrangements for school leavers in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland are a matter for the devolved administrations.

Gifted Pupils

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils attended the National Academy for Gifted and Talented Youth in 2003; how many places were available; and what proportion of the pupils attended non-specialist, non-selective maintained schools. [129166]

Mr. Miliband: 522 students took part in the 2003 summer schools provided by the Academy, against a planning assumption of 900 places. 82 per cent. were from non-selective, maintained schools. Data was not collected on numbers from specialist schools.

The Academy provides a range of services and support to its members in addition to the summer schools, including on-line communities, research material and outreach events. 621 Academy members took part in such outreach events during the pilot year. In the 2003–04 academic year, the Academy is planning over 200 events reaching a potential 6,000 participants. Membership of the Academy currently stands at 2,022 with applications arriving at a rate of 75 each week.

Gurkhas (Children's Education)

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the children of Gurkha soldiers, stationed in this country attending British schools are classified as (a) home and (b) overseas students for the purposes of university fees. [130178]

Alan Johnson: Universities and higher education colleges decide whether to classify students as "home" or "overseas" for tuition fee purposes using the Education (Fees and Awards) Regulations 1997, as amended. To qualify for home fee status under these regulations, students at higher education institutions normally need to have been resident in the UK for three years before the start of their course, and have "settled status" under the Immigration Act 1971.

Implementation Review Unit

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what role school governors will play in (a) the new Implementation Review Unit and (b) the Monitoring Group; and if he will make a statement. [125427]

Mr. Miliband [holding answer 14 July 2003]: We are proposing to set up termly meetings between the panel of the new Implementation Review Unit (IRU) and governor organisations The IRU is also keen to hear from individual school governors on particular workload burdens they would most like tackled and any constructive time-saving examples from their school that could be used more widely. Governors will be notified of IRU contact details in the September "Governors" newsletter.

Earlier this year I met with representatives of the National Governors' Council and the National Association of Governors and Managers to discuss how best to ensure that school governing bodies are fully involved in the implementation of the National Agreement and the work of the Workforce Agreement Monitoring Group (WAMG).

Following these discussions, my Department has set up a regular forum between governors' representatives and the WAMG. The first took place on 27 June; a further one-day seminar was held on 21 July. One of the outcomes will be the development and distribution of specific materials for school governors to help them contribute to workforce reform.

Learning and Skills Council

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on redundancies likely to be involved in restructuring of the Learning and Skills Council and its local councils. [129703]

Alan Johnson: The Learning and Skills Council is undertaking a reshaping exercise which is designed to build on its existing strengths, to enhance its capacity to work with partners to develop and to implement the strategies necessary to achieve national targets for skills and learning, while streamlining routine administrative arrangements. At the end of its reshaping the LSC will have significantly fewer staff. The LSC intends to manage these reductions through a process of voluntary severance as far as possible.

John Harwood, the Council's Chief Executive, will write to the hon. Gentleman with more information about the reshaping exercise and place a copy of his reply in the Library.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the budget of the Learning and Skills Council was for each of the last three years; and what the predicted budget is in each of the next three years. [129792]

Alan Johnson: The Learning and Skills Council (LSC) assumed many of its responsibilities under the Learning and Skills Act 2000 from 1 April 2001 and for funding of school sixth forms from 1 April 2002. The amounts of its budgets for each financial year from 2001–02, as notified in the relevant Grant Letters to the LSC are as follows:

	£ million
2001–02	5,536.000
2002–03	7,310.890
2003–04	8,095.374
2004–05	8,618.254
2005–06	9,200.308

The LSC's budget for 2006–07 is dependent on the outcome of the 2004 Spending Review.

Level 2 Qualification

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what local discretion he will allow to (a) further education colleges and (b) local learning and skills councils in determining entitlement to free study for a Level 2 qualification. [129696]

Alan Johnson: The eligibility criteria for the new entitlement to free learning at Level 2, announced in the Skills Strategy White Paper, will be determined nationally. Our intention is to encourage those not already qualified at full Level 2 to achieve at that level. However, further education colleges will continue to have the discretion to waive fees for learners studying at Level 2 who are not covered by the national entitlement.

Modern Apprenticeships

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the success rates for modern apprenticeships as set out in Statistical First Release ISR/SFR 25 issued on 24 July; what plans he has to improve these rates; and if he will make a statement. [129523]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The success rates for Modern Apprenticeships (MA) published in July were issued for the first time in this form. The rates vary widely between sectors and some will need to improve markedly if we are to achieve our ambition to revitalise and expand apprenticeship programmes. However, the latest figures we have do show that overall MA success rates have increased to 39 per cent. in the year to January 2003. While this improvement is significant and sustained we and the Learning and Skills Council are not complacent. We need to do more.

We have asked the Modern Apprenticeship Task Force, chaired by Sir Roy Gardner, to focus on this issue. They and the LSC are doing so sector by sector.

In addition as part of the 'Success for All' programme the LSC has introduced minimum performance levels from 2003/04 for all providers, including those of MAs. These should be achieved by 2005/06. The LSC will rigorously monitor and review progress with each of its providers against these targets. Where performance is not satisfactory the LSC will take decisive action with the provider concerned up to and including the withdrawal of contracts.

Older Workers

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make it his policy (a) to monitor the participation levels of various age cohorts of adults and (b) to set targets to reduce the drop-off of learning from age 40 onwards. [129040]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Department and partner bodies do already monitor participation levels, and other factors such as attitudes and experiences of learning, through a number of sources including the Labour Force Survey, the Learning and Skills Council's Individualised Learner Record, the National Adult Learning Survey and NIACE surveys. Age of learner is an important factor in all of these sources and the Department regularly undertakes analyses based on age. Many of the publications based on these sources do contain breakdowns by age. Results from the 2002 NIACE survey on adult participation showed that the proportion of 35 to 44-year-olds who were current/recent learners had increased from 43 per cent. in 1996 to 49 per cent. in 2002. Participation among 45 to 54-year-olds increased from 36 per cent. to 44 per cent. over the same period. These increases are greater than for younger age groups.

The Government recognises the importance of encouraging all people, regardless of age, to participate in learning and increase their skills and is committed to safeguard the provision of a wide range of earning for adults for culture, leisure community and personal fulfilment purposes with a better choice of opportunities to encourage adults back into learning. Through our Success for All reforms we will raise standards, increase participation and improve outcomes for learners and employers. We have introduced targets for learner numbers and learner success rates, including new national floor targets which set out the minimum acceptable levels of performance for colleges and other providers to be met or exceeded by 2006. These are aimed at improving the responsiveness and quality of provision to meet the needs of learners at all ages. The recently published Skills Strategy includes the new guarantee of free tuition for any adult without a good foundation of employability skills to get the training that they need to achieve such a qualification, known as a Level 2 qualification—explicitly noting that a higher than average proportion of older workers do not possess a Level 2 qualification.

The Government has set itself stretching targets to increase the basic skill levels of 1.5 million adults by 2007 and to reduce by 40 per cent. the number of adults without a qualification at NVQ level 2 or its equivalent by 2010. These targets will only be achieved if those over the age of 40 increase their participation and attainment in learning. Government believes that targets focused on ensuring all individuals achieve minimum levels of skill are the most appropriate for meeting the needs of the economy and society.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the implications of extending modern apprenticeships to all age groups. [129041]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Our Skills Strategy, "21st Century Skills—Realising Our Potential", explained that we are committed to removing the age cap on Modern Apprenticeships in response to industry's concern that it constitutes a barrier to meeting their skill needs. As a first step, we have changed the rules so that, from 1 August 2003, young people who start their Modern Apprenticeship at any point up to their 25th birthday can complete it. Beyond that, we will invite the Sector Skills Councils (SSCs) to put forward their proposals to design and implement a Modern Apprenticeship programme for adults in their sector as part of the new Sector Skills Agreements. It will be for individual SSCs, the Sector Skills Development Agency (SSDA) and key partners including employers to assess the implications of this change for particular sectors. They will do so taking account of the need to maintain high standards; current budget limitations; and forthcoming European age discrimination legislation.

Pupil Exclusions

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) primary schools, (b) city technology colleges, (c) other secondary schools and (d) special schools have been fined for excluding pupils in each year since 1998; if he will list each school; and what the size was of the fine for each individual school affected. [127897]

Mr. Miliband: Schools have never been fined for excluding pupils. Between 1999 and 2003 they received more than £350 million in specific funding for preventive work with pupils at risk of exclusion in addition to the normal delegated funding for those pupils. If a pupil was excluded LEAs were able to recover between £2,000 and £6,000 from schools to help pay for alternative provision. LEAs were not required to give the Department details of such recoveries. Funding for preventive work and provision for permanently excluded pupils is now mainstreamed so LEAs and schools determine resourcing arrangements locally.

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent correspondence he has had with the teacher unions on the exclusion of pupils from schools; and if he will place that correspondence in the Library. [127898]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has had no recent correspondence with the teacher unions on the exclusion of pupils from schools.

Teachers

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the life expectancy of (a) male and (b) female teachers in post aged (i) 50 to 55 and (ii) 55 to 60; and whether he has compared his estimates with those for other professionals in the same age groups. [129101]

Mr. Miliband: Based on the Government Actuary's recent valuation of the Teachers' Pension Scheme, average life expectancy for teachers in each of the age groups is:

	Years
Males
Aged 50–55	33
Aged 55–60	28
Females
Aged 50–55	36
Aged 55–60	31

In carrying out the valuation, the Government Actuary did not make any direct comparisons of life expectancy with other professions.

Training Initiatives

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which publicly funded training initiatives are open to (a) EU nationals of other member states resident in the UK and (b) asylum seekers. [129778]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: European Union (EU) nationals and their dependants resident in the UK or elsewhere in the European Economic Area for the previous three years are eligible for further education (FE). EU nationals are also eligible for work based learning for young people, which consists of the Entry to Employment and Modern Apprenticeship initiatives, and are eligible for local authority organised adult education.

Asylum seekers and their dependants who are supported by the National Asylum Support Service or similar, are eligible for FE. Unaccompanied asylum seekers aged 16–18 in the care of social services are also eligible for FE. Asylum seekers are not eligible for Modern Apprenticeships but may be accepted on to Entry to Employment courses. Eligibility for access to local authority organised adult education is generally in line with that for FE but local authorities have discretion to set their own criteria and might make provision available to additional categories of asylum seekers.

TRANSPORT

Air Terrorism (Electronic Countermeasures)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 7 January 2003, Official Report, column 98W, (1) on commercial aircraft terrorism, if he will make a statement about progress made in seeking specialist advice on fitting electronic countermeasures to UK civil aviation fleets over and above Goodrich Video Surveillance apparatus; [130286]

(2) what recent discussions he has had with UK commercial aircraft operators about fitting electronic counter measures to UK civil aviation fleets. [130287]

Mr. McNulty: The Department is engaged in continuing work with a number of parties on measures, including on-board electronic systems, for countering the threat from shoulder-launched weapons. Those parties include UK aircraft operators. It would not be appropriate on security grounds to disclose the progress of this work.

Aircraft Security

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent assessment he has made of the security risks posed by (a) glass bottles and (b) minor household items, with particular reference to nail files, aboard aircraft. [128736]

Mr. McNulty: As part of the heightened security measures introduced in September 2001, airports and airlines are required not to allow into an airport's Restricted Zone, or into the cabin of an aircraft, any item which could potentially be used as a weapon. The list of prohibited items, which was provided, is not exhaustive, and includes a requirement to remove from passengers any other article which the airport or airline reasonably consider might be used, or adapted, for causing injury. All of the measures in the National Aviation Security Programme are kept under permanent review.

Biofuels

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he intends to implement the EU guidelines for biofuel use in road transport of 2 per cent. use by the end of 2005 and 5.75 per cent. use by the end of 2010. [130423]

Dr. Howells: The Government intend to consult with key stakeholders on UK implementation of this legislation early next year. This consultation will cover the level of indicative targets for both 2005 and 2010.

Road Transport Fuels

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what percentage by weight of road transport fuel LPG/CNG has provided over the last 12 months; [129922]

(2) what incentives are in place for motorists to use LPG/CNG; and how long these have been in place; [129923]

(3) what percentage by weight of UK road transport fuel is expected to be biofuels by the end of (a) 2005 and (b) 2010; [129924]

(4) what incentives are in place for motorists to use biodiesel and bioethanol; and how long these have been in place. [129925]

Mr. Jamieson: Figures supplied by HM Customs and Excise indicate that the percentage of all road transport fuel, by volume, of road fuel gases provided between July 2002 and June 2003 was 0.39 per cent.

The Government support the take-up of LPG and natural gas vehicles through both the fuel duty incentives for road fuel gases, which have been in place since 1995, and the grants, which have been available since, towards the purchase of LPG and natural gas vehicles, which are available through the PowerShift programme. In addition, discounts apply to alternatively fuelled cars under the carbon dioxide emissions based company car tax and graduated Vehicle Excise Duty regimes. As announced in Budget 2003, the Government have been consulting stakeholders on how best to ensure that future support for road fuel gases continues to reflect environmental and other policy objectives, with a view to announcing decisions in the 2003 Pre-Budget Report.

We recognise that biofuels also have a role to play in reducing the environmental impact of road transport. In recognition of these benefits, the Government have introduced a reduced rate of duty for biodiesel of 20p/l below that for conventional ULSD. Since introduction of this rate in July 2002, production of biodiesel has increased more than 10 fold to over two million litres a month. A similar incentive 20p/l in the rate for bioethanol is due to be introduced on 1 January 2005.

The Government intend to consult with all key stakeholders on UK implementation of the Biofuels Directive, which requires the UK to set indicative targets for the use of biofuels in road transport for both 2005 and 2010. Publication of the consultation paper is due in the first half of next year.

Highways Authority

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he intends to take to amend or remove Highways Authority Performance Indicators BVPI 100 and BVPI 96. [129749]

Mr. Jamieson: BVPI 96 measures the condition of the carriageway on principal roads. BVPI 100 measures the duration of temporary traffic controls on traffic sensitive roads. A road may be defined as traffic sensitive at certain times of day only. Although temporary traffic controls or road closure may be necessary to carry out road repairs, BVPI 100 encourages authorities to plan these measures to take place outside traffic sensitive times, thereby minimising disruption to traffic.

Low Emission Zones

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will consult hon. Members before he authorises the introduction of traffic low emission zones. [130190]

Dr. Howells: My Department is currently undertaking a public consultation exercise on proposals to change the regulations concerning Traffic Regulation Conditions (TRC) that the Traffic Commissioner can apply to registered local bus services in a particular area (outside London). This will cover, among other things, the power to specify minimum emission limits that vehicles affected by a TRC would have to meet.

The consultation document can be found on my Department's website at: http://www.dft.gov.uk/stellent/groups/dft_localtrans/documents/page/dft_localtra_023519.hcsp. The consultation period ends on 3 October.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what (a) discussions and (b) representations he has had on the introduction of low emission zones; who was involved; and if he will make a statement on what was agreed. [130191]

Dr. Howells: We are aware of the consideration of Low Emission Zones (LEZ), as one way of reducing emissions in areas where there are air quality problems. The National Society for Clean Air (NSCA), together with the Association for London Government (ALG) and the Greater London Authority (GLA) are jointly investigating the possibility of introducing a London-wide LEZ. The London Low Emission Zone Feasibility Study Phase II Final report has been published in July this year (available on website www.london-lez.org) and I understand that the findings of the study are being considered for further action. The NSCA consulted on a recommended standard for National Low Emission Zones in May. However I understand that further research will be necessary before an agreed standard may be announced.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the sites of special scientific interest in the ownership of his Department or its agencies. [129345]

Mr. McNulty: The Maritime and Coastguard Agency is the owner of one site designated as being SSSI. This site is at Prawle Point in Devon.

The Highways Agency is the owner/part owner of 43 sites within the operational estate and two sites within the non-operational estate, designated as being SSSIs. The sites are as follows:

Operational estate:

Severn Estuary
Kennet and Lambourn Floodplain
River Kennet
River Lambourn
Aston Rowant
Devil's Dyke
Tebay Road Cuttings
Ashburton Road Cuttings
Buckland-in-the-Moor
Slop Bog and Uddens Heath
Epping Forest
Purfleet Road, Aveley
River Wye
River Test
The New Forest
Hurcott and Podmore Pools
River Lugg
River Wye, Hereford and Worcester
Wilton Bluff, Ross
Ashwell Springs
Northaw Great Wood
Sherrards Park Wood
Therfield Heath
Castlethorpe Tufas
Humber Flats and Marshes: Upper Humber
Folkestone Warren
Ant Broads and Marshes
Potter and Scarning Fens
Southfield Farm Marsh
River Coquet and Coquet Valley Woodlands
Aston Rowant Cutting
Sugworth
River Severn at Montford
Doxey and Tillington Marshes
Orwell Estuary
Thursley, Hankley and Frensham Commons
Titsey Woods
Griff Hill Quarry
River Blythe
Stockton Railway Cutting and Quarry
Ufton Fields
Bingley South Bog
Hook Moor

Non-operational estate:

Plot 1 – Bescott Viaduct, Walsall, West Midlands
Land adjoining M3 and River Itchen, Itchen Abbas, Hampshire

To the best of our knowledge these are the only SSSI on the DfT estate.

Station Facilities

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action the Strategic Rail Authority is taking to ensure that train operating companies improve (a) train station facilities and (b) access for disabled people. [129582]

Mr. McNulty: Those bidding for new and replacement franchises will be asked to price various options, including improved station facilities, which the Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) could consider taking forward at any time during the life of the franchise. On 27 August 2003, the SRA announced a programme of investment of £25 million in Modern Facilities at Stations. This will provide enhanced facilities at 68 stations. The SRA's Code of Practice on Train and Station Services for Disabled Passengers sets out standards on accessibility. Train and station operators have been asked to review their Disabled Peoples Protection Policies to identify and prioritise accessibility improvements.

US Warship Disposal

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the Health and Safety Executive has granted an exemption from the Asbestos (Prohibitions) Regulations to former US naval ships seeking passage to Teesside for demolition. [130017]

Mr. Jamieson: HSE issued an exemption certificate to the Asbestos (Prohibitions) Regulations to Able UK Ltd. on 5 September 2003. This allows the importation of 13 ships from the US Government reserve fleet into Teesside for decommissioning and recycling and disposal of the asbestos subject to conditions.

A copy of the exemption certificate including those conditions will be placed in the House Libraries and on the HSE asbestos website.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Older Workers

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what plans he has to introduce incentives for people to work beyond the age of 60; and if he will make a statement; [129037]

(2) what plans he has to abolish normal retirement ages; if he will make it his policy (a) to increase the state pension and (b) to devise incentives for those who continue in work; and if he will make a statement. [129042]

Mr. Pond: The Government's Green Paper—"Simplicity, Security and Choice: Working and saving for retirement", (CM5677) issued in December 2002, outlined a number of incentives to help people continue in work up to and over state pension age.

From 2003, we will introduce a package of intensive back to work help for people aged 50 and over including extending the support available through new deal 50 plus. The working tax credit now includes additional elements for eligible people aged 50 or over who move into work for 16 hours a week or more.

From 2005, we will be looking at changes to the tax rules to allow people to continue working for the sponsoring employer while drawing their occupational pension and consulting on best practice to ensure that occupational pension rules do not discourage flexible working.

The Government's Green Paper also recognised that the state pension has a role to play in encouraging flexible retirement. We therefore published proposals to improve the reward for deferring state pension from 2006 by increasing the rate at which weekly increments can be earned, and offering an alternative to increments in the form of a taxable lump sum payment. We will be announcing our plans on this proposal in due course.

In October 2006, we will implement anti-age discrimination legislation covering employment and vocational training. This will include making compulsory retirement ages unlawful except in those cases where employers can show they are objectively justified.

And from 2010, as state pension ages start to equalise, as well as looking at policies to treat men and women aged between 60 and women's new state pension age as active labour market participants, we also propose to raise the earliest age that a pension may be taken from age 50, to age 55, to further promote the benefits of extending working life for both employee and employer.

Alongside the implementation of these policies, we will continue to work to change employers' attitudes through our Age Positive campaign, and through the development of good practice guidance materials with employer organisations and other external partners. This work will help ensure opportunity for all and remove discriminatory practices, which encourage involuntary withdrawal from the labour market and early retirement.

The Government are currently consulting on options for outlawing age discrimination in employment and vocational training under the European Employment Directive. The Age Matters consultation document launched on 2 July includes proposals for tackling employers' mandatory retirement ages—that is, the ages employers set for the compulsory retirement of their employees. Under the directive, compulsory retirement ages will be unlawful unless they can be objectively justified. The Government will decide how to tackle this once it has analysed and considered the responses to the consultation. Age Matters also explains that we shall take advantage of the directive's provisions that allow occupational pension schemes to set ages for admission or entitlement to retirement benefits. Such normal pension ages are necessary for the operation of defined benefit schemes.

Operation Gangmaster

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what representations Operation Gangmaster has (a) sought and (b) received from (i) local authorities, (ii) primary care trusts, (iii) chambers of commerce and (iv) locally based government agencies. [129779]

Mr. Pond: Operation Gangmaster has neither sought nor received representations from local authorities, primary care trusts or chambers of commerce. However, we have involved the following organisations on a regional basis as partners in Operation Gangmaster:

Department for Work and Pensions
Inland Revenue
H M Customs and Excise
Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs
Department of Trade and Industry
Health and Safety Executive
U.K. Immigration Service
National Asylum Support Service
Uniform and Plain Clothes Police Officers
National Criminal Intelligence Service
Scottish Executive
Social Services

Child Support

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment his Department has made of progress in the implementation of the new child support system; when the full transfer of child support cases onto the new system will take place; and if he will make a statement. [129974]

Mr. Pond: A report on progress in the implementation of the new child support scheme was placed in the Library on 14 July 2003. We have made it clear that we shall only make a decision on the transfer of old scheme cases once we are sure that the new scheme is working well.

Employment Statistics

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what assessment he has made of the most recent employment statistics; [129500]

(2) what the change in the level of unemployment in the Crosby constituency has been since 1997. [129502]

Mr. Browne: Latest statistics show that employment is at record levels and that the number of people in work continues to grow. Employment has risen by 63,000 in the last quarter, 224,000 over the last year and by more than 1.5 million since 1997.

The improvement in the labour market has been spread right across the country. Since 1997, unemployment rates have fallen fastest in the areas with the highest unemployment. In Crosby, claimant unemployment has nearly halved since 1997, while the number of long-term unemployed claimants has fallen by 70 per cent.

Incapacity Benefit

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many recipients of Incapacity Benefit there are; and how many there were in each of the last 10 years. [130025]

Maria Eagle: The information is in the table.

	Number of recipients of Incapacity Benefit and its predecessors
2 April 1994	1,809,000
12 April 1995	1,894,000
29 February 1996	1,813,000
28 February 1997	1,749,000
28 February 1998	1,671,000
28 February 1999	1,557,000
29 February 2000	1,504,000
28 February 2001	1,515,000
28 February 2002	1,497,000
28 February 2003	1,506,000

Notes:

1. Figures rounded to the nearest thousand.
2. Incapacity Benefit replaced Sickness and Invalidity Benefits from 13 April 1995.
3. Figures for 1994 and 1995 are taken from a 1 per cent. sample of claims to benefit.
4. From February 1996 onwards figures are based on a 5 per cent. sample of the benefit computer system and will exclude a small number of clerically held cases.
5. Figures include a small number of people resident overseas.

Source:

IAD Information Centre, 1 per cent. and 5 per cent. samples.

Minimum Income Guarantee

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the number of pensioners (a) entitled to Minimum Income Guarantee and (b) who were not claiming it in each of the last five years. [129758]

Mr. Pond: Estimates of the number of recipients and entitled non-recipients of Minimum Income Guarantee can be found in editions of the annual DWP and DSS statistical report "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take-Up"—copies of which are available in the Library. Estimates for 2000–01, the latest year for which information is available, incorporate results of research which improved the quality of statistics relating to the Minimum Income Guarantee. Estimates for 2000–01 are, therefore, not on a fully consistent basis with past figures.

Notes:

1. Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take-Up published annually by DSS and DWP contains estimates of both the number of MIG (and formerly pensioner Income Support) recipients and the number of pensioners that appeared to be entitled to but not in receipt of the benefit. The vast majority of the count of recipients will be entitled but the estimates will also include a small unquantifiable proportion that are not.
2. Annual changes in MIG rates and improvements in the approach to estimating take-up can affect estimates of MIG entitled non-recipients. Past estimates of take-up are not reworked to reflect these changes and therefore results are not strictly comparable over time. Estimates for 1997–98, 1998–99 and 1999–2000 employ the same methodology. Results relating to 2000–01 have benefited from research and the latest estimates are therefore on a different basis to previous years.

New Deal

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent representations he has received from (a) employers and (b) participants on the New Deal; and if he will make a statement. [124551]

Mr. Browne: We receive representations on behalf of employers through the National Employer Panel which is an employer-led body providing independent advice to Ministers on the design, delivery and performance of the UK Government's labour market policies and programmes. Its remit encompasses all the New Deals and other welfare to work activities delivered by the Department for Work and Pensions, Jobcentre Plus and partner organisations at the national and local levels. The Panel reports on a regular basis to my right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions and the Chancellor of the Exchequer. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State also receives advice from the 10 employer coalitions throughout the country who work with Jobcentre Plus districts to engage local businesses and open job opportunities for people disadvantaged in the labour market.

We also receive many representations from participants in the New Deal. These are dealt with on an individual basis with regard to the circumstances of each case.

Pension Credit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many calls have been made to the Pension

Credit telephone application line; and of that number how many have resulted in (a) successful claims and (b) unsuccessful claims. [128740]

Mr. Pond: The Pension Credit application line received a total of approximately 413,000 calls between 7 April 2003, when it became operational, and 31 August. As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State said in his written statement on progress on 14 July 2003, Official Report, columns 6–7WS, there are over 1.1 million pensioner households already on our systems ready to be paid Pension Credit from October. We intend from November to publish monthly reports on the progress of Pension Credit take-on, which will include information on the number of applications.

Pension Reform

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on his plans for pension reform. [129501]

Mr. Pond: We have recognised the need to reform the pension system of the UK. Our approach has been, in the first instance, to focus additional spending on the poorest pensioners. This means achieving a balance between providing a solid foundation of support for all while targeting support at those who need it most. Pension Credit will, from October guarantee everyone (who applies and qualifies) aged 60 and over an income of at least £102.10 a week for single pensioners, (£155.80 for couples). These amounts will be more if pensioners have caring responsibilities, are severely disabled or have housing costs.

For the first time, Pension Credit will reward people aged 65 with modest savings or income. In the past, those who had managed to save a little were left no better off than those who had not saved at all. People who had capital of £12,000 or more could get no help however low their income.

Pension Credit will change this by giving new money to those 65 and over who have saved. This will be worth up to £14.79 for single pensioners, £19.20 for couples.

Pension Credit is radically different from the Minimum Income Guarantee in that pound for pound deductions will be scrapped. And the credit will reward those over 65 with total weekly incomes up to £139 for single pensioners, £203 for couples. Around half of all pensioner households will be eligible and stand to gain around £400 a year on average.

The basic State Pension will remain the foundation of income in retirement on which to build. Between April 2000 and April 2003 the basic State Pension has increased by almost £10 a week for a single pensioner and £16 a week for a couple. This represents an increase of over 7 per cent. in real terms. We will continue to uprate by either 2.5 per cent. or RPI, whichever is higher for the remainder of this Parliament.

We have recognised the importance of a good second pension by reforming SERPS. From April 2002, 20 million people—2.5 million carers, 2.5 million long-term disabled people and 15 million low to moderate earners—begin to benefit by building up a State Second Pension.

The Government also introduced Winter Fuel Payments (WFP) for people aged 60 and over. The WFP is £200 a year for qualifying households and will continue to be paid at this rate throughout this Parliament.

People aged 80 or over who are entitled to a Winter Fuel Payment will get an extra £100 per household. This is the 80+ annual payment which will be paid as part of the Winter Fuel Payment, to those who are aged 80 or over in the qualifying week (15–21 September this year).

The Government have also introduced free TV licences for the over 75s and there have been increases above the rate of inflation to the Pensioners' Tax Allowances.

In 2003–04, the Government will be spending around £8 billion extra a year on pensioners as a result of policies introduced since 1997. This includes £3.75 billion more on the poorest third of pensioners. This is almost six times more than an earnings link to the basic State Pension since 1998 would have provided.

We have also recognised that there is a need to address reform of private pension provision. Our Green Paper 'Simplicity, security and choice: Working and saving for retirement' set out our proposals to radically simplify the pensions system including reducing eight tax regimes into one, ensure that individuals have access to the right information to make informed pensions savings choices and ensure that older workers can access the employment opportunities they deserve and balance this with flexible retirement choices.

To build on this, after the largest consultation on pensions ever, we published 'Working and Saving for retirement: Action on occupational pensions' in June which introduced a balanced package of measures to assist employers in providing occupational pension schemes while ensuring protection for pension scheme members. We will set up a Pension Protection Fund, the first ever protection scheme for defined benefit pensions, bring in measures to ensure that where a solvent company chooses to wind up its scheme it will fully buy-out members benefits and establish a pensions regulator that will target badly run and high risk schemes in order to put consumers first.

There is a need to engage with employers to re-invigorate the pensions partnership and that is why we have set up the Employer Task Force to identify and promote employer lead solutions. We also have accepted that there is a need to consider the voluntarist system in the longer term and to monitor progress independently. Therefore we have set up the Pensions Commission to monitor and keep under review the system of private pensions and long-term savings.

There is also a need to make individuals aware of their pension provision—both from the State and private saving. That is why we are extending combined state and private pensions forecasts through a concerted and targeted campaign. We will continue to develop a web-based retirement planner and will pilot a scheme for employer-based information. All these measures will seek to enable individuals to make the right pensions choices from a more knowledgeable position.

We have recognised the need for pension reform from both a State and private perspective and will continue to press ahead with our proposals of targeting resources and expanding provision.

Pensioners

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners in Eltham have benefited from the minimum income guarantee; and what the overall amount paid out through the guarantee to pensioners in Eltham was in the last 12 months. [129409]

Mr. Pond: The number of pensioners to have benefited from the minimum income guarantee in Eltham during the last 12 months is 2,200. The average annual payment to each pensioner household was £2,400.

Notes:
1. The overall amount is based on the 12 month period ending February, 2003.
2. Figures are based on a 5 per cent. sample and are therefore subject to a degree of sampling variation.
3. Caseload figures have been rounded to the nearest 100.
4. Parliamentary constituencies have been assigned by matching postcodes against the relevant ONS postcode.
5. £2,400 is rounded to the nearest £50, and figures at a local level are subject to greater margins of error than national figures.

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average gain of pensioners in Eltham has been from the Minimum Income Guarantee. [129410]

Mr. Pond: The average weekly amount of Minimum Income Guarantee received by pension age households in Eltham at February 2003 was £46.30.

Notes:
1. The source of the data is the IAD Information Centre.
2. The figure is based on a 5 per cent. sample and is therefore subject to a degree of sampling variation.
3. The average weekly amount figure has been rounded to the nearest 1p.
4. Parliamentary constituencies have been assigned by matching postcodes against the relevant ONS postcode directory.
5. Pension age is defined as men aged 65 and over and women aged 60 and over.

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total paid out since May 1997 to increase pensioner incomes has been; and what has been the average gain per pensioner (a) in the UK and (b) in Eltham. [129411]

Mr. Pond: The information requested is not available at constituency level, but the total paid out since May 1997 to increase pensioner incomes for the UK is shown in the table.

£ billion

	Total DWP
	Expenditure on pensioners	Discretionary spending on pensioners
1998–99	56.5	0.2
1999–2000	58.6	1.4
2000–01	60.5	2.8
2001–02	63.6	5.1
2002–03	65.1	6.4
2003–04	66.8	8.0

Following the introduction of the pension credit the average pensioner household will be £1,250 per year, or £24 per week, better off than in 1997 due to the Government's personal tax and benefit changes.

Notes:
(a) The information shown is based upon the Family Resources Survey.
(b) Discretionary spending refers to additional spending as a result of changes to pension policy since 1997. This is a subset of total spending.
(c) Figures are in £ billion rounded to the nearest £0.1 billion, in 2003–04 price terms.
(d) Figures include expenditure on all benefits.

Post Office Card Accounts

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his answer of 15 July 2003, Official Report, column 160W, what the current indication of the final number of Post Office card accounts is, rounded to the nearest 100,000; on what data his statement that the final number would be significantly above 3 million was based; if he will place the data in the Library; and if he will make a statement. [127584]

Mr. Pond: It is impossible to predict accurately how many customers will eventually choose to open a Post Office card account as this will be based on customer choice. But based on current take-up, with around a million having said they want to open a Post Office card account, the card account is proving very popular and we now expect the total number of card accounts to exceed our operating assumption of 3 million.

Winter Fuel Payment

Kevin Brennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in (a) Wales, (b) Cardiff and (c) Cardiff, West will be eligible for Winter Fuel Payments in 2003–04. [129522]

Mr. Pond: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is shown in the table.

The number of people who received a 2002–03 Winter Fuel Payment was:

	All	Men	Women
Wales	629,025	279,860	349,170
Cardiff West Constituency	14,135	6,135	8,000
Cardiff Local Authority	54,115	23,555	30,560

Notes:
1. Figures are rounded to the nearest five.
2. Figures taken from the Matching Intelligence Data Analysis Service Winter Fuels
Payment 2002–03 exercise.
Source:
IAD Information Centre, 100 per cent. sample.

We would expect the figures for 2003–04 to be similar.

DEFENCE

Aircraft Carriers

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress on the CVF programme; and how work will be shared between Thales and BAe Systems. [127121]

Mr. Ingram: The CVF Programme is still in the Assessment Phase and we expect to award the Demonstration and Manufacture (D&M) contract in spring 2004, as planned. Discussions on how work will be shared between the companies are progressing well as part of the negotiations on the alliance arrangements. Final arrangements will be confirmed with the award of the D&M contract next year.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions with the defence manufacturers have taken place on reducing the (a) size of the aircraft carriers and (b) number of aircraft carried; and if he will make a statement on how such changes affect power projection. [128075]

Mr. Ingram: Regular discussions occur between the future carrier (CVF) project team, BAeSystems and Thales United Kingdom as part of the routine business of the Assessment Phase. This phase is intended to reduce risk in emerging design solutions and balance the key parameters of performance, time and cost in order to best meet our developing capability requirements, both in terms of the ships themselves and in the aircraft they will operate. Power projection is a fundamental part of this capability requirement.

The CVF programme is currently midway through this assessment phase. The key specifications in capability terms will be determined prior to the award of the Demonstration and Manufacture contract, currently planned for spring 2004.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy that the full sized carriers will be procured for the Royal Navy as originally intended; and what plans he has to ensure that the in-service date is kept. [128076]

Mr. Ingram: In the Strategic Defence Review published in 1998, it was envisaged that the two new Future Aircraft Carriers would be in the order of 30,000 to 40,000 tonnes and be capable of carrying up to 50 fixed-wing aircraft and helicopters. The intention, as with any other new equipment project, has always been to refine the design during the Assessment Phase in order to best meet our developing capability requirements. The Carrier programme is currently in this assessment phase. The key specifications in capability terms will be determined prior to the award of the Demonstration and Manufacture (D&M) contract, currently planned for spring 2004.

Our target in-service dates for the two carriers remain 2012 and 2015 respectively.

Army Personnel (Self-Harm)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 9 September 2003, ref. 127070, if he will make it his policy to collate data centrally concerning incidents of self harm in army barracks; and if he will make a statement. [130223]

Mr. Caplin: I take the issue of self-harm in the armed forces extremely seriously. The collation of data in this area is complex, due to the number of agencies involved and the sensitivity of the information. However, I have commissioned work to trial the collection and analysis of the existing information for the Army. This work is due to report back later this year.

Bosnia and Herzegovina

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made in the arrangements for the EU to assume the NATO peacekeeping mandate in Bosnia; and whether (a) NATO and (b) the United States has accepted the EU decision of December 2002. [130030]

Mr. Hoon: At its meeting in December 2002 the European Council indicated the European Union's willingness to lead a military operation in Bosnia following the NATO SFOR mission. No decisions have been taken, however, on the end date of the SFOR operation or on the arrangements for any follow-on mission. Discussions continue and no decision will be taken without full consultation between all interested parties.

Charmaine Maeer

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what investigations his Department carried out into the allegations made by Charmaine Maeer; on what basis she was discharged from the Army; what pension or benefit she received as a result of her discharge; and if he will make a statement. [128809]

Mr. Caplin: No investigation has been carried out as no complaint has been received. I am unable to make public any personal details concerning Charmaine Maeer's discharge and pension without her explicit written consent.

Chatham Dockyard (Radiation Records)

Jonathan Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many former Chatham Dockyard workers who received estimated radiation dose records were advised that their estimated records were (a) above and (b) below the recommended level of exposure. [130314]

Mr. Caplin: There was no statutory or MOD requirement to record numbers of former Chatham Dockyard workers for whom estimated doses were entered in their radiation dose records and therefore it is not possible to supply the numbers requested. However, those individuals who were involved in incidents at the dockyard, such as exceeding a statutory dose limit, would have been involved in the investigation and therefore would have been aware of the outcome.

Deepcut and Catterick Barracks

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will order a public inquiry into the way that unnatural deaths at (a) Deepcut and (b) Catterick barracks have been investigated; [128810]

(2) if he will order an inquiry into the way that unnatural deaths at Deepcut Barracks have been investigated. [128811]

Mr. Ingram: The civilian police have primacy in investigating such deaths within the armed forces. Given that investigations are yet to conclude, calls for a public or other inquiry into the way that unnatural deaths have been investigated are premature.

Defence Fire Service

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the Defence Fire Service. [129073]

Mr. Ingram: The Defence Fire Service continues to provide excellent support to the Ministry of Defence.

Over the last year in addition to its normal duties, the Service successfully provided vital assistance during the fire fighters dispute, including training those members of the armed forces deployed on emergency fire fighting duties. Members of the Defence Fire Service were also deployed to the Gulf in February this year and continue to be engaged in support of operations in Iraq.

Destroyers

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to change the number of type 42 destroyers in service; and if he will make a statement. [127276]

Mr. Ingram: There are at present no plans to change the number of Royal Navy type 42 destroyers in service.

Export Controls

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department made of the impact of the proposed secondary orders for the Export Control Act 2002 on the security of UK military personnel deployed abroad. [130189]

Mr. Ingram: Proposals are being considered on measures to ensure that the efficiency of our armed forces is maintained when the Act is implemented.

Intangible Assets

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what specific assets are contained in the line item Intangible Assets on the MOD balance sheet for 31 March 2002. [129909]

Mr. Ingram: The specific assets included in Intangible Assets at 31 March 2002 can be classified into the following main headings:

(i) Development expenditure incurred in respect of fighting equipment and other tangible fixed assets which are in use

(ii) Development expenditure incurred in respect of fighting equipment and other tangible fixed assets which are in the course of construction

(iii) Other intangible non-financial assets comprising mainly intellectual property rights.

The development costs, which mainly represent costs incurred prior to the commencement of production of the asset, are capitalised in the accounts in accordance with the HM Treasury Resource Accounting Manual. The Department's accounting policy on capitalisation and amortisation of the development expenditure is stated in the Departmental Resource Accounts 2001–02.

The detailed analysis of tangible and intangible fixed assets is produced every three years in the form of the National Asset Register, the current publication being in respect of 1999–2000. This publication does not require the break down of the development expenditure in respect of assets in use by individual assets, but the range and type of assets in use by the Department are identified. At 31 March 2002, development expenditure for fixed assets in use amounted to £11.4 billion. Similarly, development expenditure relating to assets in course of construction is not analysed by asset type, but the main projects under construction are identified in the 1999–2000 National Asset Register under Assets In Course of Construction. At 31 March 2002, this development expenditure totalled £8 billion. Other intangible assets amounted to some £80 million as at 31 March 2002.

Iraq

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of British unexploded munitions in Iraq have been cleared; and when this work will be completed. [125698]

Mr. Ingram: United Kingdom and other coalition armed forces and non-Governmental organisation teams have been engaged in explosive ordnance disposal tasks since before the end of the conflict in Iraq. It is not yet possible to say either what percentage of British unexploded munitions have been cleared or when all the work will be completed. To date, UK and other coalition explosive ordnance disposal teams in the UK area of operation have completed over 1,500 tasks and destroyed over 500,000 individual munitions. Those munitions include not only those dropped or fired by coalition forces, but also many from the Iraq-Iran war as well as mines laid, ordnance fired or dropped, and stores of ammunition and other ordnance left by Iraqi military and paramilitary forces.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how much ordnance was released by British aircraft over Iraq in (a) February and (b) 1 to 20 March; on how many occasions during these periods coalition aircraft were responding in self-defence; and if he will make a statement; [129147]

(2) how much ordnance has been released in each month by coalition aircraft over Iraq since 21 March; and if he will make a statement. [129148]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 11 September 2003]: During February, five weapons were released by United Kingdom aircraft over Iraq. A further four weapons were released in the period 1–19 March. All of these weapons were released in self-defence. Warfighting commenced on 20 March. In the period 20–31 March, United Kingdom aircraft released 518 weapons over Iraq. A further 396 weapons were released from 1–30 April. UK aircraft dropped no ordnance after 30 April. Weapons released by other coalition partners' aircraft during the warfighting is a matter for them.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the duties of Dr. David Kelly were. [130515]

Mr. Hoon: Dr. Kelly was a special adviser to the Director of Counter Proliferation and Arms Control within the Ministry of Defence. Dr. Kelly's duties have been described in both written and oral evidence to the Hutton Inquiry which has been published on its website at www.the-hutton-inquiry.org.uk.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 7 May, Official Report, column 724W, what the current usage of British medical assets in Iraq is. [119216]

Mr. Caplin: As at 1 September, 23 beds were occupied at MND (SE) field hospital by United Kingdom personnel and two beds were occupied at the UK medical facility in Al Amarah.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the role of the Navy, Army and Air Force Institution in Iraq (a) during the recent conflict and (b) post-conflict. [120741]

Mr. Ingram: The NAAFI has played an important role both during, and after, the recent conflict in Iraq. The organisation entered Iraq soon after the fighting started, offering a range of products from mobile containers. Now, NAAFI stores are located in more permanent facilities, which will continue to be upgraded over time.

Joint Strike Fighter

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many joint strike fighter aircraft have been ordered. [128535]

Mr. Ingram: None. Our current planning assumption is for 150 of the Short Take Off and Vertical Landing variant of the Joint Strike Fighter (JSF) aircraft to meet our requirement for a Future Joint Combat Aircraft. In order to align with the US acquisition cycle, we do not expect to place orders for JSF aircraft before 2006.

Land Rovers

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many armoured Land Rovers have been sold off as surplus since May 2003. [128807]

Mr. Ingram: No surplus armoured Land Rovers have been sold by the Ministry of Defence since May 2003.

Manning Control Review

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many soldiers subject to Manning Control review have been (a) discharged and (b) re-engaged in the last 12 months. [130003]

Mr. Caplin: No individuals have been discharged under Queens Regulations for the Army paragraph 9.413, 'Not required for a full Army career', in the last 12 months.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether soldiers in Army units are being warned that they could be subject to Manning Control review after (a) nine and (b) 12 years. [130004]

Mr. Caplin: Each potential soldier, and the parent or guardian of a recruit under the age of 18, is given a copy of the Notice Paper, a statutory document which gives details of the soldier's Terms of Service. Within this paper it states that a soldier's future employability will be reviewed after six, nine and 12 years' Colour service and he or she may be discharged if their service is no longer required.

Additionally, soldiers being considered for discharge by Manning Control points are sent a letter up to 18 months beforehand. They are asked to sign a certificate to agree that they have been warned about this.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans there are to allow soldiers who were subject to Manning Control and then changed to S/Type contract, to sign back onto the open engagement. [130005]

Mr. Caplin: There are no plans to allow soldiers who were subject to Manning Control Point discharge, and subsequently employed on a Short Service Type S Engagement, to be engaged on the Open Engagement.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many soldiers who were subject to Manning Control and were discharged or signed on to the S/Type contract and subsequently discharged since 1994 have been called up for service in UK operational deployments in the last seven years. [130006]

Mr. Caplin: Twelve individuals who had been subject to Manning Control since 1994 and then were discharged under Queen's Regulations for the Army 1975 Paragraph 9.413—'Not required for a full Army Career' or were signed on to an 'S'-Type engagement and subsequently discharged, have been called out for, and accepted into, military service in the last seven years.

MARS Project

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if all vessels for the MARS Project will be classed as warships; and if he will make a statement. [127761]

Mr. Ingram: The Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability (MARS) project is in its initial stages. Decisions have yet to be taken on the scope of the capability sought and on how best to deliver that requirement.

Offshore Patrol Vessels

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for (a) modernising the Royal Navy fishing protection fleet and (b) ordering further Tyne class offshore patrol vessels; for what reasons plans to transfer Anglesey, Lindisfarne and Guernsey have been delayed; and if he will make a statement. [127255]

Mr. Ingram: A programme of modernisation of the Royal Navy fishery protection fleet is currently under way. The capability provided by the five Island Class vessels is being replaced with three modern and more capable River Class Offshore Patrol Vessels (OPVs). The first two, HMS Tyne and HMS Severn, have now entered service. The third, HMS Mersey, is currently scheduled to enter service early next year. Unsolicited proposals have been received from two companies; however, the Ministry of Defence currently has no plans to order additional OPVs.

The five surplus Island Class vessels have been sold to Bangladesh. Angelsey's transfer has been delayed by about two weeks due to problems with her gearbox. There has been no delay to the planned transfer of Lindisfarne and Guernsey.

Service Personnel (NHS Treatment)

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his policy is on service personnel getting priority NHS treatment; what budget is available for private treatment for service personnel; and whether all service personnel are eligible for prompt medical treatment. [123571]

Mr. Caplin [holding answer 4 July 2003]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Fareham (Mr. Hoban) on 1 September 2003, Official Report, columns 897–98W.

Territorial Army

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes there have been in the strength of the Territorial Army in the last six months. [129072]

Mr. Caplin: Available information is shown in the table.

2003	Strength
1 March	39,210
1 April	38,140
1 May	38,370
1 June	38,040
1 July	37,650
1 August	37,360

Note:
Data have been rounded to the nearest 10.

Type 23 Frigate

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for New Forest, East (Dr. Lewis), of 10 February 2003, Official Report, column 516W, on Type 23 frigates, if he will name the second six Type 23 frigates to be fitted with Sonar 2087; what plans there are for the remaining four frigates; and if he will make a statement. [128557]

Mr. Ingram: It is not currently planned to select for another year or so the second six Type 23 Frigates likely to be fitted with Sonar 2087. The remaining four Frigates will continue to contribute to Royal Naval operations until the end of their scheduled service life, around the middle of the next decade, from which point they will be progressively withdrawn.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Ambulance Response Times

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average ambulance response time was in each year since 1997 in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) North Down; and if he will make a statement. [121926]

Angela Smith: The Northern Ireland Ambulance Service does not report average ambulance response times on a Northern Ireland or parliamentary constituency basis. Ambulance performance is assessed against national response time standards. In Northern Ireland these are applied as follows:

ambulance at the scene of 50 per cent. of 999 calls in 8 minutes

ambulance at the scene of 95 per cent. of 999 calls in 18 minutes (eastern area); or 21 minutes (northern, southern and western areas).

The results for each area are as follows:

Percentage of calls at scene within 8 minutes

	Northern	Southern	Eastern	Western
1998–99	48	47	55	62
1999–2000	46	45	59	56
2000–01	47	42	63	56
2001–02	47	41	57	53
2002–03	47	41	57	53

Percentage of calls at scene within 18–21 minutes

	Northern	Southern	Eastern	Western
1998–99	95	94	96	95
1999–2000	95	93	97	94
2000–01	94	92	97	94
2001–02	93	92	96	94
2002–03	93	92	96	94

Bangor Community Hospital

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what funds have been made available to Bangor Community hospital (a) in 2001, (b) in 2002 and (c) since January. [120887]

Angela Smith: The information sought is not centrally available. The Bangor Community hospital, as part of the Ulster Community hospitals trust, derives the bulk of its income from the Eastern Health and Social Services Board. The trust accounts do not, however, distinguish between the income received by the Bangor Community hospital and that received by the rest of the trust.

Belfast City Airport

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with residents' groups regarding the possible introduction of late-night flights at Belfast City airport. [129837]

Angela Smith: I have had no discussions with residents' groups regarding the possible introduction of late night flights at Belfast City airport. The Department of the Environment's Planning Service has not received any request from Belfast City airport to alter the terms of the existing planning agreement governing flight times to and from the airport, nor has Belfast City airport indicated that they intend to make such a request.

Brain Banks

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many brain banks (a) exist and (b) have existed in Northern Ireland; and where. [121606]

Angela Smith: One brain bank currently exists in Northern Ireland. This is held within the Neuropathology Department of the Royal Group of Hospitals. No other brain banks have previously existed in Northern Ireland Trusts.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what relationship with mainland (a) hospitals and (b) research facilities brain banks in Northern Ireland have had. [121611]

Angela Smith: A brain tissue bank exists in the Neuropathology Department of the Royal group of hospitals. The Royal have been involved in joint research or diagnostic projects, involving the transfer of tissue samples, with the following facilities:-

National MS Brain Bank, London;

Schizophrenia Research, Oxford Medical School, Oxford University;

National Unit for Research into CJD, Edinburgh;

National Parkinson's Disease Society, London;

Netherlands Brain Bank, Holland and

MS Research Project, Dublin.

All organs and tissue samples involved have been consented for use in research.

No other brain banks exist in Northern Ireland Trusts.

Broadband

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to provide broadband internet access in areas of Northern Ireland where there is no broadband provision; and if he will make a statement. [129847]

Mr. Pearson: The Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment (DETI) has developed a range of complementary initiatives designed to progressively develop telecommunications infrastructure in Northern Ireland, stimulate demand for broadband, and develop broadband applications to both support its innovation driven economy and to ensure everyone has the opportunity to use computers to enhance their daily life.

The Government's aim in Northern Ireland is to have 100 per cent. coverage of broadband services. To progress this aim, DETI published in the European Journal on 7 May 2003, a Prior Information Notice indicating its intention to issue a tender for the provision of broadband services. The tender was issued on 22 July 2003 and a total of 27 organisations and consortia have responded to the call to assist us to advance the Government's telecommunications agenda. I expect to announce the winner of the tender before the end of 2003.

Care Homes

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the progress being made by the inter-departmental working group established to examine the issue of free personal care for people in residential homes. [122355]

Angela Smith: The Northern Ireland Executive commissioned work on free personal care and a report was forwarded to the First Minister and Deputy First Minister on 8 August 2002. Following discussion at the Executive on 12 August, Ministers asked for further work to be undertaken. The inter-departmental group has reviewed a number of costed options that will be adjusted to current levels of provision at the time a further report is made to a new devolved Administration.

It is not possible at this stage to give any indication about the timing or subsequent handling of the report, since this is a matter which should be determined by the Northern Ireland Executive.

Child Maintenance

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of those paying child maintenance in Northern Ireland have yet to be incorporated into the new system for calculating child maintenance introduced in April 2002; what steps he is taking to reduce this figure; and if he will make a statement. [130402]

Mr. Spellar: The Government sought to reform the child support system to provide prompt, accurate maintenance calculations and quick, reliable maintenance payments. The introduction of the new scheme was delayed from April 2002, to allow further testing of the new IT system, and was introduced on 3 March 2003.

It was always intended that the new scheme would be introduced initially for new cases only. Existing child support cases would transfer at a later date, when Ministers were satisfied that the new scheme, supported by the new IT, was working well. The exception to this is where an existing case is linked to a new application. In such circumstances the existing case is reassessed under the new scheme.

A decision on the date when the remainder of existing child support cases will transfer to the new scheme has not yet been made.

Civil Service

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken to implement the Senior Civil Service Review. [120108]

Mr. Pearson: Following Lord Ouseley's report on the Review of Appointment and Promotion Procedures in the Senior Civil Service in Northern Ireland, the devolved Administration issued a consultation paper. This sought views on two key recommendations—the recommendations on recruitment in the open market and on work-life balance—and on an action plan covering the remainder of the 25 recommendations made, excepting two which were outside the responsibility of the devolved government. The recommendations have naturally required particularly careful consideration in the light of suspension, but I anticipate that we shall be in a position to make an announcement shortly.

Community Police Officers

David Burnside: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many community police officers are in full-time service with the Police Service of Northern Ireland; and how many served in (a) 2000, (b) 2001 and (c) 2002. [130420]

Jane Kennedy: The Police Service of Northern Ireland currently record officers engaged in community policing duties under the title neighbourhood police. The table sets out the actual number of regular and full-time reserve neighbourhood police in service for the period 2000 to 2002.

	Regular	Full-time reserve
4 September 2000	367	103
3 September 2001	288	97
4 September 2002	415	147
4 September 2003	482	161

Congestion Charges

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to introduce congestion charges for cities and towns in Northern Ireland. [114547]

Angela Smith: The Chief Executive of the Roads Service has written to the hon. Gentleman. A copy of the letter has been placed in the Library.

Crime

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures have been taken since 1997 to tackle (a) organised crime, (b) smuggling and (c) drug crime. [121135]

Jane Kennedy: The Organised Crime Task Force which I chair was established in September 2000 to set the strategic direction for a multi-agency approach to tackling smuggling, drug crime and indeed organised crime in all its forms.

While the law enforcement agencies have always worked well together at an operational level, and both PSNI and Customs had undertaken tremendous work to tackle all areas of organised criminality prior to September 2000, the Task Force has co-ordinated and focused their efforts to increased effect.

Crime (International Co-operation) Bill

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with the Chief Constable of the Police Service of Northern Ireland about the Crime (International Co-operation) Bill. [116369]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I have had no specific discussions with the Chief Constable on the Crime (International Co-operation) Bill. However, the PSNI have been involved in the consultation process throughout the various stages of the Bill.

Cross-border Health Care

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many patients from the Republic of Ireland have been treated in hospitals in Northern Ireland in each of the past five years; and if he will make a statement. [129817]

Angela Smith: The total number admissions classified as an in-patient, day case or regular day/night admission at hospitals in Northern Ireland where the patient was recorded as a resident in the Republic of Ireland is given in the table. Patients may have been admitted on more than one occasion.

The number of deaths and discharges[1] in NI hospitals recorded as residents of the Republic of Ireland for the years 1998–99 to 2002–03[2]

	In-patient	Day cases	Regular day admission	Regular night admission	Total
1998–99	946	340	0	0	1,286
1999–2000	1,000	377	559	0	1,936
2000–01	1,070	604	995	0	2,669
2001–02	1,037	554	850	1	2,442
2002–03[2]	1,170	504	650	0	2,324

[1] Deaths and discharges are used as an approximation for admissions.
[2] Provisional.
Source:
Hospital Inpatients System

Figures for the number of patients treated as out-patients or at accident and emergency departments are not available.

Residents of countries within the European Union are entitled to treatment if they are taken ill while visiting another European Union state. Patients may also be transferred to another country under formal contractual arrangements between individual hospitals or health boards if the treatment required is not available locally. Consequently residents from the Republic of Ireland are sometimes treated in Northern Ireland and vice versa.

Departmental Under-spending

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures have been introduced in each Northern Ireland department to reduce budget under spend. [128295]

Mr. Pearson: Northern Ireland departments have introduced a number of measures to reduce the level of budget under spend. These include enhanced information and monitoring systems, improved arrangements to monitor the progress of expenditure on capital investment projects, providing additional training for budget managers and reviewing, on an on-going basis, profiled expenditure against actual expenditure.

At a more strategic level, the revised spending plans for 2003–04 to 2005–06, which I announced on 11 December 2002, included arrangements to set spending plans at a level which exceeded the total spending power available by building in under spend assumptions. Full details are set out in Section 2 of the Budget Document ("Building on Progress: Budget 2003–06").

Environmental Protection

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when sheep grazing will be permitted in the Inner Mourne mountains. [111537]

Angela Smith: The Chief Executive of the Water Service has written to the hon. Lady. A copy of the letter has been placed in the Library.

EU Regulations

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many regulations originating from the EU have been implemented by his Department over each of the last five years. [120823]

Mr. Pearson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Europe on 30 June 2003, Official Report, column 64W.

Euro Roadshow

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the events he plans to attend as part of the Government's euro roadshow. [121399]

Mr. Pearson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary to the Treasury on 20 June 2003, Official Report, column 459W.

First-time Buyers

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he has taken to assist first-time buyers in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [121729]

Mr. Spellar: A number of steps have been taken to assist first time buyers in Northern Ireland. The housing executive's house sales scheme has enabled over 100,000 tenants to become home owners and sales of housing executive homes currently account for over one third of all first time buyer transactions in Northern Ireland. The Department for Social Development also provides funding for the Northern Ireland Co-Ownership Housing Association which, through its equity sharing scheme, gives those on low incomes an opportunity to gain a foothold on the home ownership ladder and has, since its inception in 1978, helped over 17,500 participants to become home owners on an equity sharing basis, with over 13,000 of these eventually moving to full home ownership.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to introduce a purchaser's pack for potential first-time house buyers and sellers in Northern Ireland. [121731]

Mr. Spellar: I have no plans at present to introduce a purchaser's pack in Northern Ireland.

The proposal to impose a condition on house vendors to produce a home information pack for prospective purchasers is aimed at addressing specific problems in England and Wales by speeding up the home buying and selling process and making it more transparent and certain. Such problems are not prevalent in Northern Ireland, where many measures aimed at speeding up the process have already been implemented and further proposals continue to be developed. I will, however, continue to monitor developments as regards the home information pack with a view to determining whether there may be merit, at some time in the future, in introducing similar measures in Northern Ireland.

Growth Hormone Research

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether Northern Ireland has a facility to deal with growth hormone research. [121608]

Angela Smith: Growth Hormone Research is carried out at the Growth Centre at the Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children and at the Regional Endocrinology and Diabetes Centre at the Royal Victoria Hospital.

Hare Coursing

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, what estimate he has made of the number of hares (a) coursed and (b) killed by coursing in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [129535]

Angela Smith: No estimate has been made of the number of hares (a) coursed and (b) killed by coursing, in either organised events or informal coursing.

Health Staff

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to increase the number of operating department practitioners in Northern Ireland. [121315]

Angela Smith: The recruitment of staff, including operating department practitioners, is a matter for individual Health and Social Services Trusts taking into account factors such as service needs and available resources. However, the Department has a role in ensuring that sufficient suitably qualified and trained staff are available to meet the needs of the health and personal social services. The supply of support staff, such as operating department practitioners, will be addressed through the Department's work force planning mechanisms.

Health Trusts

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much each health trust has spent on security measures in the last three years. [130254]

Angela Smith: Information in the form requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Hospital Procedures

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to his answer of 9 June 2003, Official Report, column 700W, on hospital procedures, if he will estimate the cost to the national health service of the in-patient admissions of residents of the Republic of Ireland. [121011]

Angela Smith: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Housing

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many houses were sold through the Northern Ireland Co-Ownership Scheme in each of the last five years. [121728]

Mr. Spellar: The information is as follows:

Financial year	Number of new Co-ownership participants	Number of participants moving to full home ownership
1998–99	578	539
1999–2000	587	666
2000–01	510	585
2001–02	645	567
2002–03	801	621

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the budgetary allocation to the Northern Ireland Co-ownership Scheme was in each of the last five years; what plans he has to improve the scheme's budgetary position; and if he will make a statement. [121732]

Mr. Spellar: The funding available to the Northern Ireland Co-ownership Scheme in each of the last five years is as follows:

£ million

Financial year	Housing Association Grants	Recycled receipts	Total
1998–99	3.60	7.40	11.00
1999–2000	3.60	8.60	12.20
2000–01	6.24	6.43	12.67
2001–02	9.90	9.51	19.41
2002–03	12.94	12.98	25.92

The scheme operates on the basis of grant aid from the Department for Social Development, in the form of Housing Association Grant, and recycled receipts from surpluses made on the sale of equity tranches to participants.

Because of other demands on the housing budget it is becoming difficult to sustain funding from the Department for the scheme at the levels which have been seen in recent years. I will however continue to do everything possible to secure an adequate level of funding to allow the scheme to assist as many participants as possible.

Human Organs

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland with whom responsibility lies for giving permission for (a) the removal of organs from deceased individuals and (b) the disposal of such organs. [123259]

Angela Smith: Before a hospital post mortem examination, which is carried out at the request of the doctor or family, the next of kin is asked to make a choice: whether to limit the post mortem or organs taken for further examination; whether to donate some or all of the organs and tissue samples for medical education and ethically approved research; whether to allow the hospital to respectfully and lawfully dispose of them; or, whether to have them returned for burial or cremation after investigations are complete.

A coroner's post mortem examination, which is required by law, does not require the consent of the next of kin, although the family will be informed about it. When the post mortem examination has been ordered by a coroner, the next of kin will be told what organs have been retained. Once the post mortem report has been completed the next of kin will be contacted again by the coroner and asked how they wish these to be disposed of.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many recommendations of the Human Organs Inquiry have been implemented by hospitals in Northern Ireland. [123261]

Angela Smith: Work is ongoing to implement all 20 of the recommendations contained in the Report of the Human Organs Inquiry. The primary responsibility for implementing many of the recommendations does not rest with hospitals but with the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety. Trusts have been co-operating fully in implementing those aspects of the recommendations that fall directly to them.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the procedure is for the return of organs to the families of the deceased. [123264]

Angela Smith: Relatives wishing to make enquiries about reclaiming organs that have been kept following either hospital or coroners' post mortem examinations before 2001, should contact the DHSSPS Human Organs Enquiry Line at telephone number 0808 800 8810. Coroners' cases are dealt with on an individual basis and the decision whether or not organs will be released is a matter for the coroner. The trained enquiry line staff can provide information, discuss relatives' concerns and advise about the support that is available. In line with the recommendations contained in the Human Organs Inquiry Report, this telephone enquiry line and the opportunity to reclaim organs and tissue samples currently in storage will no longer be available after November 2004.

Further information about the enquiry line is available on the DHSSPS web site, which can be found at http://www. dhsspsni.gov.uk/hss/HOI/index.html. A DHSSPS public information leaflet entitled "Post Mortem Examinations and theHuman Organs Inquiry" is being distributed to every home in Northern Ireland over the summer. This leaflet can also be viewed on the above web page and explains how relatives can seek the return of organs and tissue samples.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the publication of the Isaacs Report and its implications for Northern Ireland. [121605]

Angela Smith: The Isaacs Report was commissioned from HM Inspector of Anatomy by the Secretary of State for Health and applies to England only. The implications for Northern Ireland of the recommendations of the Isaacs Report; will be considered by the steering group currently working on implementing the recommendations contained in the Report of the Human Organs Inquiry.

In Northern Ireland, the Chief Medical Officer has issued an Interim Statement on 9 May 2003 on the use of human organs and tissue pending the introduction of new legislation. Since November 2002 a telephone inquiry line operated by the Parents Advice Centre on behalf of the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety has provided a central point of information for public inquiries about post mortem examinations and has helped with requests for the retention of organs and tissue kept after post mortem examinations. It has also dealt with a small number of enquiries resulting from the Isaacs Report.

The Chief Medical Officer has sought assurances from Trust Chief Executives and University Vice Chancellors that no additional or undeclared material has been retained following coroners' post mortems.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will initiate an investigation by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Anatomy into missing organs in Northern Ireland. [121609]

Angela Smith: In May 2001 the Chief Medical Officer reported on the result of her investigation into retained organs in Northern Ireland hospitals. This revealed the continued retention of organs from 1,167 cases. Queen's University conducted a further audit in 2002, which revealed additional material held by the University, which was then declared. There is no evidence to suggest that there is a need for further investigation.

Organs kept from coroners' post mortem examinations can only be disposed of once the investigations are complete or when the material is no longer required for evidential purposes.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland under what circumstances the organs of deceased individuals on the UK organ donor register are prevented from being given to other patients. [120982]

Angela Smith: Organ donation may not be carried out if there are medical contra-indications, if the deceased does not die on a life support machine, or if the deceased is not on the organ donor register and relatives are unsure of the individual's wishes.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the locations in Northern Ireland, apart from Queen's University, Belfast, where banks of retained brains and hearts are stored. [128991]

Angela Smith: There are no heart banks in Northern Ireland.

All retained organs were declared in the Chief Medical Officer's report on Organ Retention, May 2001.

In relation to brain banks, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave her on 25 June 2003. (121606).

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the medical practice of removing and retaining additional organs from individuals who have agreed to donate particular organs on their death. [128992]

Angela Smith: During the organ donation procedure no additional organs or tissues have been removed other than those to which the families have stated their lack of objection on the UK Transplant form entitled "Statement of Lack of Objection to Organ/Tissue Donation".

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will provide help and support to relatives of deceased people whose organs have been retained improperly. [128994]

Angela Smith: The Department funds the Relatives Reference Group, chaired by Mrs. Pip Jaffa, OBE. The Relatives Reference Group provides help and support to relatives and also acts as a contact point between relatives and the DHSSPS, Queen's University, the Northern Ireland Office and the NI court service.

The DHSSPS Human Organs Inquiry Line, set up by the Department on 20 November 2002, provides a central point of contact for inquiries about post mortem examinations and organs and tissue that may have been kept as a result. It can provide information to relatives, discuss their concerns in confidence and advise them of the support that is available.

The Parents Advice Centre, of which Mrs. Jaffa is the chief executive, is currently running a support group for people affected by organ retention issues. The Parents Advice Centre can also provide a counselling service for relatives through its project workers. Counselling is also available through the Health and Personal Social Services.

The DHSSPS is currently engaged in a multimedia public information campaign as recommended by the Human Organs Inquiry report. A public information leaflet entitled "Post Mortem Examinations and The Human Organs Inquiry," which includes information on organ retention and organ reclamation, is being delivered to every home in Northern Ireland. The leaflet contains details of organisations that can provide help and support to relatives.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken to identify the deceased and their relatives in the cases of unidentified brains in storage at Queen's University, Belfast. [128995]

Angela Smith: No brains that are being held in storage by Queen's University can be identified as belonging to an individual or family. The brains that are being held are for purposes of medical education and are either those obtained from bodies donated under the Anatomy Order or those that have been anonymised and cannot now be traced back to any individual or family.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the export of brains from Northern Ireland during the 1990s followed Government guidelines on the risks attributed to CJD. [128996]

Angela Smith: During the 1990's the guidelines from the National CJD Unit in Edinburgh were followed when brain tissue was being exported. These national guidelines continue to be followed when brain tissue is being exported.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland where Queen's University will source the brains they need each year for medical and scientific research. [128997]

Angela Smith: Such material is obtained from individuals who donate bodies or organs for medical research under the Anatomy Order, or from post mortems where consent has been properly obtained. In addition, consented material may be acquired from officially sanctioned brain banks in the UK or elsewhere.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what (a) medical and (b) scientific reasons there are for removing and retaining spinal cords from deceased individuals. [129022]

Angela Smith: Spinal cords are retained for diagnostic purposes in relevant cases when it is neurologically or neurosurgically suspected that spinal cord disease may be present. It is also retained in cases of spinal cord injury to determine the type and extent of injury.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many transfers (a) out of and (b) into Northern Ireland of retained brains and brain tissue have taken place in the last 12 months; and whether transfers have taken place outside the United Kingdom. [121610]

Angela Smith: Information in the form requested is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether payment is made for the transfer of organs, tissue and other materials between hospitals. [121607]

Angela Smith: No payment is made for the transfer of organs, tissue and other materials between hospitals.

Irish Hares

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, what assessment he has made of whether the Biodiversity Species Action Plan to double the number of Irish Hares by 2010 is likely to be achieved. [129533]

Angela Smith: The target to double the population by 2010 is one of three challenging targets contained in the Species Action Plan for the Irish Hare published in 2000.

The Plan is based primarily on the need to increase the extent, and improve the quality, of habitats favoured by the Irish Hare. While there are specific plans in place for these habitats, demonstrable effects on hare numbers cannot be expected for several years.

At this stage it is not possible to predict whether the target to double the population by 2010 will be achieved. Estimates of the Irish Hare population were made in 1997 and 2002 and suggested that the population remained stable between those dates. Further estimates will be made as the Plan progresses, but it should be recognised that the margin of uncertainty associated with these estimates is high, and the detection of population trends is therefore difficult.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, whether he has received the report on the status of the Irish Hare for the review of the Wildlife (Northern Ireland) Order 1985; and if he will make a statement. [129534]

Angela Smith: My Department has commissioned a study of changes needed to the Wildlife (Northern Ireland) Order 1985. The study is being carried out to complement aspects of the Northern Ireland Biodiversity Strategy and local Species Action Plans. One of its objectives is to examine the case for changes in the legal status of certain species, including the Irish Hare.

A draft report was received by the Department of the Environment on 30 June. It puts forward a number of legislative options in relation to the status of the Irish Hare. The final report is expected to make specific proposals. Before I consider whether to take these proposals forward, I will seek the advice of the Northern Ireland Biodiversity Group and the Department's statutory advisory committee, the Council for Nature Conservation and the Countryside.

Irish Language

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what changes have been made to the policy on the use of the Irish language in (a) the Department of Health and (b) the Department of Education in Northern Ireland since suspension of the devolved Assembly. [121088]

Jane Kennedy: There has been no change in either Department's policy on the use of Irish since the suspension of the Assembly. This is in line with the Secretary of State's decision on 9 December 2002 that Departments should maintain their existing practices with regard to the use of Irish and Ulster Scots. The position was reviewed subsequently and the Secretary of State agreed on 19 March that existing practices should continue for a further period subject to another review in September 2003.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what costs have been incurred by the Department of (a) Health, Social Services and Public Safety and (b) Education as a result of their Irish language policy in each of the last five years. [120977]

Jane Kennedy: The costs incurred by the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety in the last five years are as follows.

	£
1998–99	nil
1999–2000	17,604
2000–01	61,261
2001–02	119,823
2002–03	107,500

The costs incurred by the Department of Education in the last five years are as follows:

	£
1998–99	Nil
1999–2000	2,928
2000–01	10,461
2001–02	18,074
2002–03	16,339

Multiple Sclerosis

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to his answer of 11 June 2003, Official Report, column 966W, on multiple sclerosis, how many sufferers of multiple sclerosis have commenced (a) beta interferon and (b) glatiramer treatment in Northern Ireland since 1 January. [122344]

Angela Smith: Since 1 January 2003 20 patients have commenced treatment with (a) beta interferon and one patient has commenced treatment with (b) glatiramer.

Neurosurgery

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on Early Day Motion 1382 (Neurosurgery in Northern Ireland). [121405]

Angela Smith: Pressures on the neurosurgery service have arisen mainly as a result of a need for more theatre time, and shortages in experienced nursing staff. This is not a problem unique to Northern Ireland—there are similar problems with this service throughout the NHS.

The Royal Group of Hospitals, in liaison with the four boards, has been working hard to improve the situation, both in the short-term, and with regard to the longer-term development of the service.

A task force was established by the trust to lead the effort in addressing the problems faced by the service;

Extra theatre lists have been introduced;

A twin-track approach to enhance the recruitment and retention of nurses has been implemented to restore nursing levels and enable more beds to be opened. This has involved:

the appointment of a 'clinical educator' to enhance training opportunities and to support and increase the number of nurses in training; and the recruitment of additional nurses, allowing the phased opening of beds from June 2003, with all beds re-opening by January 2004.

A clinical careers framework for nurses has also been launched to improve opportunities for personal development and career pathways;

In addition, treatment has been provided for some suitable patients in units outside Northern Ireland.

These measures should make a significant contribution to addressing the problems in this service. I have asked my Department, in liaison with the boards and the trust, to keep me apprised of progress.

Nurse Recruitment

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many nurses have been recruited in Northern Ireland in each year since 1997. [123806]

Angela Smith: Figures are provided in the tables.

Bank nurses [1] who have been recruited to work in trusts in Northern Ireland in each year since 1997 (headcount figures given only)

Trust	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002
South and East Belfast HSS Trust	1	19	0	5	3	9
Armagh and Dungannon HSS Trust	2	5	3	8	7	14
Southern Board HQ	0	0	0	0	0	0
Homefirst Community HSS Trust			Unable to provide
Belfast City Hospital HSS Trust	1	20	16	7	37	41
Sperrin/Lakeland HSS Trust	26	37	35	22	33	26
Blood Transfusion Service	0	0	1	0	0	0
Altnagelvin Group HSS Trust	26	31	35	45	23	21
Craigavon and Banbridge Community HSS Trust	11	11	7	9	8	8
Craigavon Area Hospital Group HSS Trust	6	8	17	34	17	38
Ulster Community and Hospitals Group HSS Trust	20	10	32	32	29	29
Down Lisburn HSS Trust	33	23	22	32	55	39
Regional Medical Physics Agency			Not applicable
Foyle Community HSS Trust	27	53	45	24	14	27
Royal Hospitals	12	3	32	31	19	22
Green Park Healthcare HSS Trust	14	12	21	9	14	9
North and West Belfast HSS Trust	4	13	3	7	15	18
Newry and Mourne HSS Trust	0	0	0	0	14	72
Causeway HSS Trust	27	25	22	8	14	14
Mater Infirmorum Hospital HSS Trust	4	0	3	1	2	4
United Hospitals HSS Trust	15	9	15	32	15	14
Total	229	279	309	306	319	405

[1] Bank nurses are staff who cover for staffing shortfalls and fluctuating workloads in order to maintain service delivery

Non-bank nurses[1] who have been recruited to work in trusts in Northern Ireland in each year since 1997 (headcount figures given only)

Trust	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002
South and East Belfast HSS Trust	26	44	41	18	48	59
Armagh and Dungannon HSS Trust	5	11	10	10	14	25
Southern Board HQ	0	0	1	1	0	1
Homefirst Community HSS Trust	144	114	195	225	141	312
Belfast City Hospital HSS Trust	30	165	81	115	144	191
Sperrin/Lakeland HSS Trust	47	75	54	58	34	77
Blood Transfusion Service	1	0	0	0	1	1
Altnagelvin Group HSS Trust	96	86	72	80	81	63
Craigavon and Banbridge Community HSS Trust	22	23	35	28	34	22
Craigavon Area Hospital Group HSS Trust	20	37	98	82	46	110
Ulster Community and Hospitals Group HSS Trust	81	71	150	189	248	333
Down Lisburn HSS Trust	39	62	59	57	105	102
Regional Medical Physics Agency	0	0	0	0	0	1
Foyle Community HSS Trust	40	26	46	42	60	36
Royal Hospitals	160	191	253	281	289	341
Green Park Healthcare HSS Trust	74	111	71	39	63	92
North and West Belfast HSS Trust	25	19	22	16	51	30
Newry and Mourne HSS Trust	26	27	18	30	38	47
Causeway HSS Trust	84	61	85	66	72	84
Mater Infirmorum Hospital HSS Trust	13	24	36	21	48	85
United Hospitals HSS Trust	107	103	93	120	74	82
Total	1,040	1,250	1,420	1,478	1,591	2,094

[1] Bank nurses have been excluded from these figures—they cover for staffing shortfalls and fluctuating workloads in order to maintain service delivery

Organised Crime Taskforce

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much funding has been made available to the Organised Crime Taskforce since its introduction in September 2000. [129816]

Jane Kennedy: With the exception of an annual publicity budget of £50,000 to meet the cost of publishing the annual Organised Crime Task Force (OCTF) Threat Assessment and Strategy Documents and to promote the role of the OCTF, no specific funding has been allocated to the Organised Crime Task Force. Costs for administering the OCTF are met from the overall resources allocated to the Security Policy and Operations Division of the Northern Ireland Office. Individual constituent members of the OCTF are responsible for funding their involvement from within their overall organisational budgets.

Police Recruitment

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the 50:50 recruitment procedure to the Police Service of Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement on police recruitment. [129838]

Jane Kennedy: The Police Service of Northern Ireland continues to attract a very high number of applicants: over 27,500 have applied over the course of the five competitions held since the 50:50 recruitment procedures began. As a direct result of 50:50 recruitment, the proportion of Catholics in the PSNI has increased from 8 per cent. at the time of the Patten Report to 13.3 per cent. as of 1 September this year.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to increase the representation of (a) females, (b) ethnic minorities and (c) those with disabilities on district policing partnerships; and if he will make a statement. [129839]

Jane Kennedy: Schedule 3 to the Police (Northern Ireland) Act 2000 sets out how the appointments of political and independent members to District Policing Partnerships (DPPs) are to be made. District councils are responsible for the appointment of political (elected) members. Councils were required to ensure that the political members of the DPP reflected the balance of the parties prevailing among the members of the council, immediately after the last local government election.

The responsibility for the appointment of independent members lies with the Policing Board. A widespread advertising campaign and public information evenings were used by the Policing Board to encourage applications.

In addition, approaches were made to several thousand community groups to promote the interest from potentially under-represented sections of the community including females, ethnic minorities and people with disabilities. To facilitate those with disabilities, the application form was produced in Braille, audio and large print.

David Burnside: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many and what percentage of (a) Roman Catholics and (b) Protestants have been unsuccessful in their applications since the 50:50 recruitment policy started for the Police Service of Northern Ireland. [130419]

Jane Kennedy: Details of the number of unsuccessful applicants to the Police Service of Northern Ireland since the introduction of 50:50 recruitment are as follows:

	Number	Percentage
Catholic applications	9,823	35.6
Catholic applicants unsuccessful	9,342	95.1
Non Catholic applications	17,727	64.4
Non Catholic applicants unsuccessful	17,284	97.5

The figures are based on the total number of applications received in the five competitions held so far i.e. they will include more than one application from some individuals. As not all of the competitions have been completed there may be some minor changes to the numbers over time.

Police Reserve

David Burnside: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many officers are serving in the Police Service of Northern Ireland full time reserve; what their expected future length of service is; and if he will make a statement. [130422]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Unfortunately it has not been possible to collate the information requested in the requested time-scale. I will reply to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Police Service

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will make a statement on the impact of the Force Order issued by the Police Service of Northern Ireland on 25th March on access to police exercise facilities for retired police officers; [120973]

(2) who has responsibility for day to day security management at police exercise facilities across Northern Ireland; and whether retired police officers will have to be vetted in order to gain access to such facilities; [120974]

(3) what action the Chief Constable of the Police Service of Northern Ireland has taken with regard to retired police officers having access to police exercise facilities in Northern Ireland; [120975]

(4) if he will make a statement on why retired police officers in Northern Ireland have no access to police exercise facilities in Northern Ireland; and if he will take action to remedy this. [120976]

Jane Kennedy: The General Order referred to seeks to regulate access to exercise facilities in PSNI establishments for both security and health and safety considerations. The Order outlines the separate circumstances and procedures applicable for 'Employee' and 'Guest' access to such facilities. Retired Police Officers fall into the category of 'Guests' and as such will be required to apply for 'Guest Status' as outlined in the General Order.

The Chief Constable has responsibility for security at Police establishments. Any individuals who fall into the 'Guest' category will require security clearance. No exceptions are made to this vetting process. Retired Police Officers with 'Guest Status' will have access to police exercise facilities at eight major sites listed in the PSNI General Order.

Primary/Secondary Education

David Burnside: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 30 June 2003, Official Report, column 100W, what the publicly declared positions are of each member of the working group on a form of selection in the transfer procedure for pupils from primary to secondary education. [123981]

Jane Kennedy: I am not aware of any publicly declared positions of members of the Working Group in favour or against a form of selection in the transfer procedure for pupils from primary to secondary education.

Prisons

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many self-inflicted (a) injuries and (b) deaths there have been in Northern Ireland prisons in each of the past five years; and what action the Government is taking to reduce these figures. [129829]

Jane Kennedy: The information is as follows:

(a) Self-inflicted injuries

	Number of self-inflicted injuries
1998–99	89
1999–2000	70
2000–01	90
2001–02	98
2002–03	146
2003 to date	53

(b) Self-inflicted deaths

	Number of self-inflicted deaths
1998–99	1
1999–2000	3
2000–01	3
2001–02	Nil
2002–03	[1]
2003 to date	[2]

[1] Two deaths in custody awaiting Coroner's inquest.
[2] One death in custody awaiting Coroner's inquest.

Action Government taking to reduce these figures

A review of policy and practices for dealing with prisoners at risk has recently been completed by the Northern Ireland Prison Service. This takes a holistic approach to providing the necessary support and care to prevent the individual harming him or herself. It includes an initial assessment on reception to prison, Samaritan services, listener schemes, an anti-bullying policy and improved structures, systems and procedures. This will include a multi-disciplinary case conference being held, leading to the development of a care plan for those at risk. This policy is due to be implemented by December 2003.

Recycling

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to introduce a doorstep recycling service in Northern Ireland. [129809]

Angela Smith: The Northern Ireland Waste Management Strategy, published by the Department of the Environment in March 2000, provides a framework for developing waste management practices to increase recycling rates and reduce the amount of waste going to landfill. A key element of the Strategy is the preparation of Waste Management Plans by District Councils. Plans covering all of Northern Ireland are currently being implemented and are geared towards achieving a primary target set out in the Strategy of recovering 25 per cent. of household waste by 2005.

The Plans were adopted following extensive public consultation throughout each district council area. They set out the full range of activities and facilities to be put in place to provide a recycling service, taking account of the needs and circumstances of individual councils areas. These activities and facilities to be put in place include a mix of kerbside collection for individual households, home composting schemes and the development of new and enhanced civic amenity sites and recycling centres. Under its Waste Management Grant Scheme, the Department provides significant financial assistance to district councils to assist with the cost of implementing the Plans. The Scheme commenced in April 2001 and up to March 2003 some 20 Councils used the assistance for the purchase of bins to enable householders to segregate waste for recycling.

Remicade

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the availability of Remicade to NHS patients in Northern Ireland. [129810]

Angela Smith: The medicine Remicade has been prescribed in Northern Ireland since November 1999 for a number of health service patients with severe rheumatoid arthritis who have failed to respond to existing drug therapies. The use of Remicade for the treatment of an individual patient is a matter for clinical judgment and is the individual responsibility of the prescriber. The decision is taken by a hospital consultant in collaboration with the patient, having discussed with him or her, the risks and benefits of treatment.

An extra £3.1 million for the provision of specialist drugs, including those for the treatment of rheumatoid arthritis, was allocated to Health and Social Services Boards in the last financial year. This has now been uplifted for inflation and has been provided on a recurrent basis, All four Health and Social Services Boards have made a commitment to ensure an equitable approach to the management and reduction of waiting lists for expensive specialist medicines for arthritis and other conditions as one of the Priorities for Action 2003–04.

Road Resurfacing (Killeen, Newry)

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what the final cost was of the recent work to resurface the section of the Newry/Dundalk Road at Killeen, Newry; [116960]

(2) whether the contract for the resurfacing of the section of the main Newry/Dundalk Road at Killeen, Newry was awarded to the lowest tender; [116961]

(3) what the lowest tendered price was for the recent resurfacing of the section of the main Newry/Dundalk Road at Killeen, Newry. [116962]

Angela Smith: The Chief Executive of the Roads Service has written to the hon. Gentleman. A copy of the letter has been placed in the Library.

School Exclusions

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children were excluded from school in 2001–02. [123791]

Jane Kennedy: During the 2001–02 school year, 61 pupils were expelled and 5,096 pupils were suspended.

Sexual Offences

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will take steps to make male against male rape an offence in Northern Ireland. [115046]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Article 18 of the Criminal Justice (Northern Ireland) Order 2003 makes it possible for rape victims to be men and boys.

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will abolish the penalty for consensual heterosexual anal intercourse in Northern Ireland. [115045]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Article 19 of the Criminal Justice (Northern Ireland) Order 2003 provides that anal intercourse is not an offence if it takes place in private and both parties are 17 years or over.

Sports Funding

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in what circumstances (a) Exchequer and (b) Lottery funding may be granted to prepare competitors in (i) hockey, (ii) athletics, (iii) cycling, (iv) swimming and (v) equestrianism to compete for Ireland against British teams or individuals at Olympic Games or World Championships. [109541]

Angela Smith: No Exchequer funding is allocated to help prepare competitors for specific international events. Exchequer funding is solely designed to provide for a range of general sports development needs.

The only Lottery funding designed to assist Northern Ireland's leading sportspeople to prepare for competition at international level is through the Sports Council's Talented Athlete' programmes.

All athletes granted Talented Athlete Lottery funding for Hockey, Swimming and Equestrianism, if selected for major international competition, would compete for Ireland. This is because the local provincial clubs are affiliated to All-Ireland Governing Bodies. However, those in receipt of Talented Athlete Funding, who compete in Athletics orCycling, given the make-up of their governing bodies may compete for either Ireland or Great Britain if selected for international competition.

Telecommunications Masts

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consultation has taken place on new legislation in respect of telecommunication masts [120155]

Angela Smith: Following the publication of the Stewart Report, the Department of the Environment issued a consultation paper in November 2000 on the subject of planning control for telecommunications development. The consultation paper proposed various options for changing the existing telecommunications planning regime, and put forward a draft Planning Policy Statement for consideration.

As a result of that consultation process, the then Minister of the Environment brought forward legislation which introduced a requirement for full planning permission for all new telecommunications development, including alterations and extensions. This process also led to the Department's new Planning Policy Statement 10: Telecommunications, which was published in April 2002, and takes full account of the precautionary approach advocated in the Stewart Report.

Traffic Cones

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what the cost of placing and retrieving traffic cones on Northern Ireland roads and motorways was in each of the last three years; [110578]

(2) what proposals his Department has to improve the safety of placing and retrieving traffic cones on Northern Ireland roads and motorways; [110562]

(3) how many people have been (a) injured and (b) killed, placing and retrieving traffic cones on Northern Ireland roads and motorways in each of the last three years. [110577]

Angela Smith: The Chief Executive of the Roads Service has written to the hon. Gentleman. A copy of the letter has been placed in the Library.

Health Service (Taxi Costs)

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been paid to private hire taxi companies by each trust board in each of the last four financial years; and what the criteria are for the use of private hire taxis by trust boards. [122376]

Angela Smith: The information required for the years 1999–2000 to 2002–03 is as follows:

£

Trust	1999–2000	2000–2001	2001–02	2002–03
Altnagelvin	7,809	9,877	13,137	23,804
Armagh and Dungannon	n/a	n/a	[1]100,000	[1]104,000
Belfast City Hospital	155,674	92,632	146,800	146,800
Causeway	29,506	42,356	[1]124,342	[1]124,342
Craigavon and Banbridge Community	94,267	124,599	116,000	118,000
Craigavon Area Hospitals	132.80	172.20	4,846	5,008
Down Lisburn	253,618.07	313,841.07	314,049.49	370,826.97
Foyle	141,887	150,200	146,800	146,800
Green Park	3,657.58	7,153.45	5,675.15	7,474.95
Homefirst	222,596	240,996	[1]265,000	[1]265,000
Mater Hospital	7,079.88	10,404.72	9,992.25	16,027.61
Newry and Mourne	111,609	116,091	107,921.75	134,990.72
Ambulance Service	0.00	0.00	0.00	[2]4,282
North and West Belfast	140,814	166,030	[1]176,794	[1]233,460
Royal Group of Hospitals	14,366.86	21,681.57	228	1,086
South and East Belfast	150,358	181,820	186,216	201,368
Sperrin Lakeland	91,962	156,619	211,923	217,824
Ulster Community and Hospitals	44,005	55,020	55,738	74,599
United Hospitals	64,396	73,129	84,241	94,980

n/a = Not available
[1] Estimated
[2] Renal dialysis patients

A Regional Transport Manual for the HPSS was produced and issued by the Department in June 1998. In relation to the use of taxis it states clearly that their use should be strictly controlled in order to minimise costs. Trusts have to ensure that when taxis are used to support fleet operation for regular or ad hoc work, that there are proper management protocols and monitoring arrangements in place.

Trusts must have mechanisms in place to ensure relevant directors are notified of expenditure on taxis. Also taxi services obtained from commercial taxi companies are subject to a process of tender through Regional Supplies Services.

Unsolved Murders

Mr. David Burnside: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on progress with the investigations of unsolved murders of the Royal Ulster Constabulary and army personnel in the County of Londonderry in 1972. [130471]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I understand from the PSNI that a Major Crime Review Group is being established to address the issue of unsolved murders. Inquiries regarding its progress are a matter for the PSNI.

Water Service

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many Hippo Bags have been issued in Northern Ireland; and how many have been installed in domestic and commercial premises in each of the last 12 months; [111054]

(2) what assessment he has made of (a) the savings possible from water leakage and water efficiency measures and (b) the capital spending required by the Department of Regional Development and its Water Service for new water capacity; [111056]

(3) if he will list, for each of the last 12 months, the progress made by the Department of Regional Development's Water Service in reaching its water efficiency and leakage reduction targets; [111052]

(4) if he will undertake a review into how the Water Service manages leakages in Northern Ireland; and if he will make an assessment of how far a stronger and more robust programme for energy efficiency in domestic and commercial premises would reduce wastage; [111051]

(5) what the (a) rainfall in Northern Ireland and (b) the capacity of each of the reservoirs was in each of the last 12 months; what the capital building programme for water was in each month; and if he will make a statement; [111055]

(6) what recent measures have been undertaken by the Water Service in Northern Ireland (a) to reduce domestic water leakages and (b) to improve domestic water efficiency. [111053]

Angela Smith: The Chief Executive of the Water Service has written to the hon. Gentleman. A copy of the letter has been placed in the Library.

Welcome Signs

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many signs welcoming people to Northern Ireland there are (a) along the border with the Republic of Ireland and (b) on other main roads; and what estimate he has made of the cost of these signs. [109543]

Angela Smith: The Chief Executive of the Roads Service has written to the hon. Lady. A copy of the letter has been placed in the Library.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 17 September 2003

WALES

Tourism

10. Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the tourist industry in Wales on promotion abroad of tourism in Wales. [129545]

Mr. Touhig: My right hon. Friend and I work very closely with the First Minister of the Welsh Assembly Government. Tourism is a major focus of our discussions. The tourist industry contributes more than £2.5 billion a year to the Welsh economy and provides employment for around 100,000 people.

Coal Industry (Compensation Schemes)

11. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent information the Welsh subgroup of the coal health claims monitoring group has received on payments made to retired miners or their families under the respiratory disease and vibration white finger compensation schemes. [129546]

Mr. Touhig: The latest available figures for Wales indicate that at the end of August under the respiratory disease scheme we had settled over 21,000 claims and paid £258.5 million and under the VWF scheme we had settled nearly 10,500 claims and paid £96.4 million.

Affordable Housing

12. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with (a) Cabinet colleagues and (b) National Assembly for Wales Secretaries about the provision of affordable housing in Wales. [129547]

Mr. Hain: This year, Welsh Assembly Government is making available £56.4 million in Social Housing Grant to assist the provision of affordable housing. Together with private funding this will generate investment of over £90 million and provide around 1,000 additional homes for rent and low cost ownership.

Economic Growth

13. Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the prospects for economic growth in Wales in the next 12 months. [129548]

Mr. Hain: Most recent economic indicators show that the Welsh economy is performing more strongly now than for a generation, with unemployment continuing to fall, and employment and economic activity rising.

Friction Dynamex Ltd.

14. Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent discussions he has had with the Department of Trade and Industry and the Welsh Assembly Government regarding the closure of Friction Dynamex Ltd. [129549]

Mr. Touhig: My right hon. Friend has discussed this issue with colleagues at the Department of Trade and Industry and the National Assembly for Wales. We are all anxious that those workers treated so badly receive their due.

Community Support Officers

15. Mr. David: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the Home Office on community support officers in Wales. [129550]

Mr. Touhig: My hon. Friend and I have regular discussions with ministerial colleagues about matters affecting Wales.

All four Welsh police forces now have funding for Community Support Officers. In July I met a group of CSOs based in my own constituency who are already coming to be recognised as a valuable part of the local policing team.

Departmental Food Expenditure

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much was spent on food by his Department in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03; what proportion of that food by value was produced in the United Kingdom; what guidance he has issued to encourage the procurement of home-grown food; and if he will make a statement. [129384]

Mr. Touhig: The Wales Office has a complement of 55 and does not provide a catering service for staff.

It is not possible to determine how much of the hospitality budget was spent on food; we always ask catering companies to use Welsh produce where possible.

Health and Social Care

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which of the four options to reduce bed blocking outlined in the Review of Health and Social Care in Wales advised by Derek Wanless would require primary legislation to implement. [129674]

Mr. Touhig: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 17 July 2003, Official Report, column 447W.

The Assembly are currently considering all the options outlined in the Review of Health and Social Care in Wales as part of their detailed report and action plan, which is now due for publication in November. It would therefore be inappropriate to comment on the likely need for legislation that may be identified by the Assembly in order to support any proposals detailed in their implementation plan.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Deprivation

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his policy is to assist areas with (a) low average wages, (b) low average incomes and (c) both low average wages and low average incomes. [129157]

Yvette Cooper: The National Strategy for Neighbourhood Renewal is designed to narrow the gap between the most deprived neighbourhoods and the rest of the country. Low income is a key indicator in the Indices of Multiple Deprivation 2000 used to target resources and focus activity on those areas in greatest need. Policies for neighbourhood renewal include the New Deal for Communities partnerships, the Neighbourhood Renewal Fund, Floor targets and the development of local partnerships and community networks.

Government Funding (North-west)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the Government Office for the North West financial programmes for (a) UK Online, (b) small retailers in deprived areas and (c) CCTV. [128570]

Yvette Cooper: These programmes received the following funding allocations:

	£ million
(a) 2000–03	25
(b) 2001–04	2.8
(c) 2001–04	14.4

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which wards and programmes within Sefton have benefited from the Government Office for the North West funding programmes for (a) capital investment in housing, (b) major repairs allowance, (c) disabled facilities grants, (d) Neighbourhood Renewal Fund, (e) Community Empowerment Fund, (f) Community Chest and Community Learning Chests, (g) the Objective 1 Programme, (h) the Objective 2 Programme, (i) the Objective 3 Programme, (j) the Community Champions Fund, (k) Pathfinder Young Community Champions Fund, (l) UK Online, (m) Connexions, (n) Connexions Summer Plus, (o) Transforming Youth Work Development Fund, (p) drug and alcohol training, (q) Lifelong Learning Partnerships, (r) Sustainable Development Regional Promotional Budget, (s) renewable energy, (t) Mersey Basin Campaign, (u) building safer communities, (v) Wardens Scheme, (w) small retailer in deprived areas, (x) partnership development, (y) Partnership Support Programme, (z) CCTV, (aa) Target Policing Initiative, (bb) prostitution and (cc) violence against women. [128569]

Yvette Cooper: Due to the nature of the grants it is not possible to provide specific details of allocated funds at ward level. The following are programmes that have received funding in Sefton:

(a) £4.852 million (2003–04)—Capital Investment in Housing.

(b) £7.37 million (2002–03) £7.191 million (2003–04)—Major Repairs Allowance.

(c) £713,000 (2002–03) £720,000 (2003–04)—Disabled Facilities Grants.

All the above can be borough wide. Major repairs allowance is only for use on local authority stock.

(d) £12.671 million (2001–04) £16,893 million (2004–06)—Neighbourhood Renewal Fund is not prescribed but intended for spend in the most deprived wards.

(e) £435,423 (2001–04) £290,282 (2004–06)—Community Empowerment Fund for use to set up a borough wide community network.

(f) £651,015 (2001–04) £657,050 (2004–06)—Community Chest. £128,996 (2001–04) £154,796 (2004–06)—Community Learning Chests.

(g) The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not hold information on levels of European funding at ward level. Also as the Objective One programme is Merseyside-wide in scope, a substantial amount of programme-funded activity will be delivered by organisations that have a pan-Merseyside remit. A project based in one particular area (often at the organisations head office) will therefore draw beneficiaries, or have benefits, and spend money outside its immediate locality. However, Sefton will benefit from the £160 million invested through Objective One in Merseyside in 2002.

(h) Areas that receive Objective 1 monies are not eligible for either Objective Two or Objective Three funding.

(i) Objective 3—see h.

(j) There are seven Community Champions receiving a total of £7,257.

Current Community Champions include:

Colette Sheerin Oscroft, No. 35—£416; Tony Roberts, No. 63—£1000; Ian Mackinson, No. 65—£180 Margi Robinson, No. 73—£1,209; Mary French, No. 74—£457; John Cunningham, No. 76—£2,000; Eileen Green, No. 100—£1,993.77.

(k) Sefton does not receive Pathfinder Young Community Champions Fund as Sefton is not an eligible area. DfES ran a national competitive bidding process which Sefton did not enter.

(l) £261,813 for three UK Online Centres.

(m) £17.4 million (2003–04) for Greater Merseyside Connexions Partnership. It is not possible to provide specific figures for Sefton as the Merseyside Connexions is Merseyside-wide in scope.

(n) £333,000 (2003–04)—Positive Activities for Young People (formally Connexions Summer Plus).

(o) £49,000 (2003–04)—Transforming Youth Work Development Fund.

(p) £22,000 (2003–04) allocation for Greater Merseyside Connexions Partnership-drug and alcohol training.

(q) £75,000 (2003–04) for Lifelong Learning Partnerships.

(r) £500 in 2000 to help the local authority with Local Agenda 21 issues.

(s) Between 1998–2002 Government Office for the North West employed an energy and environmental adviser who visited 87 businesses in the Sefton area promoting environmental management and resource efficiency. This cost GONW approx £9,000.

(t) Details on funding for Sefton are not held by the Mersey Basin Campaign.

(u) Sefton has been awarded £298.5k (2003–04). The initiatives under the Building Safer Communities programme are also being funded in conjunction with £196,745 allocated to Sefton Division under the Basic Command Unit Fund.

(v) There are no Wardens Schemes being managed by GONW in Sefton at present.

(w) £21,000 (2001–02), £29,000 2002–03, £29,000 2003–04 Small Retailers in Deprived Areas. Match funding has also been obtained for all three years from the South Sefton Partnership and all South Sefton wards have benefited.

(x) £50,000 awarded between 2001–03—Partnership Development.

(y) Allocated on a regional level for 2002–03—Partnership Support Programme awarded six days consultancy to Sefton CDRP to develop a partnership—Training Needs.

(z) £636,000 has been awarded between 2001–03 for CCTV schemes in Crosby Town Centre, Bootle Town Centre, Southport Town Centre and South Road, Waterloo.

(aa) No projects were directly supported in the Sefton area from the Targeting Police Initiative.

(bb) No projects were directly supported in the Sefton area from the prostitution initiative.

(cc) No projects were directly supported in the Sefton area from the Violence against women initiative.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which census figures will be used for the 2004–05 formula funding share. [129852]

Mr. Raynsford: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister intends to use mid-2002 population estimates for the 2004–05 Local Government Settlement.

The formulae used to distribute grant to local authorities in England make use of various sets of data from the Census, apart from the population estimates that are updated each year. Officials of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister have been discussing with local authority representatives the use of 2001 Census data other than population in the 2004–05 Settlement. Unfortunately, the late availability of some of the 2001 Census data has limited the options for using it in this years settlement. Therefore the 1991 Census data will be used for the 2004–05 Settlement.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is announcing this now in order to remove any uncertainty felt by local authorities regarding the data that will be used for the settlement.

Officials of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will continue to discuss with local authority representatives the use of the 2001 Census data in future Local Government Finance settlements.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the budgetary impact on social services in the London boroughs named in the Laming Inquiry if the 1991 census figures are used to calculate the 2004–05 formula funding share. [129853]

Mr. Raynsford: None. The 1991 census data were used to calculate the 2003–04 formula spending shares. Continuing to use these to calculate the 2004–05 formula spending shares should therefore have little impact on any authority's grant allocation relative to 2003–04. The level at which a local authority sets its budget is a matter for that authority, depending on its local priorities.

Homeless People

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much has been spent on providing temporary accommodation for families claiming to be homeless in (a) the Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) the north east and (d) England, in each year since 1997. [128710]

Yvette Cooper: Information annually reported to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister by local authorities identifies expenditure incurred in respect of bed and breakfast, private sector leasing and all other forms of temporary accommodation used by homeless households. This includes associated costs, such as the provision of furniture, property maintenance/refurbishment, rent guarantees, nomination fees and administrative costs, chargeable to the General Fund Services Revenue Account, along with any specific capital charges. Information is not available below local authority level, and that reported by South Tyneside MBC, and all councils comprising the north east region and nationally is shown in the following table.

Local authority revenue expenditure on homelessness

£000

	Total	Net	Capital charges
South Tyneside
1997–98	33	33	n/a
1998–99	35	35	n/a
1999–2000	25	25	n/a
2000–01	29	29	0
2001–02	39	39	0
GONE
1997–98	2,235	1,497	n/a
1998–99	2,577	1,631	n/a
1999–2000	2,737	1,768	n/a
2000–01	2,645	1,885	39
2001–02	4,277	3,634	1,100
England
1997–98	214,802	122,669	n/a
1998–99	278,474	150,299	n/a
1999–2000	334,853	171,492	n/a
2000–01	372,424	201,321	2,769
2001–02	429,376	189,426	4,366

Note:
Data on capital charges were not collected prior to 2000/01
Source:
ODPM RO6 financial returns

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what measures are in place to help to reduce the number of homeless people; [128712]

(2) what further support he plans to offer to help the homeless. [128709]

Yvette Cooper: The March 2002 report, "More than a roof", set out the Government's approach to tackling and preventing homelessness. Specific measures included investment of £125 million in 2002–03 to support local authorities and the voluntary agencies working with them to support new approaches for tackling and preventing homelessness. The Homelessness Directorate within the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has a revenue budget of £70 million and £23.5 million capital allocation for 2003–04. These resources will help to support the Government's commitment that by March 2004 no homeless family with children should be placed in a bed and breakfast hotel other than in an emergency, and even then for no more than six weeks.

Funding will also support new approaches that help people tackle the problems that are making and keeping them homeless and help to sustain the Prime Minister's target to reduce rough sleeping by two thirds of 1998 levels. The number of people sleeping rough on any one night in England has reduced from a baseline figure of 1,850 in June 1998 to the lowest recorded level of 504 in June 2003.

Other measures include:

the Homelessness Act 2002, which required local authorities to undertake a review of homelessness in their area and put a strategy in place by end of July 2003 to ensure that support and accommodation is available within their districts for homeless people, and those at risk of homelessness;

a widening of the groups of people with priority need for accommodation under the homelessness legislation, ensuring that more vulnerable people get the help they need;

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has invested £6 million in 2002–03 and are investing £11 million in 2003–04 on a special initiative to make 500 homes available for homeless families with children living in bed and breakfast (B&B) hotels in London;

new advice to housing authorities on arrangements to ensure that all babies and children placed in temporary accommodation receive their health and developmental tests;

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister launched a three month consultation in May 2003 on legislation and statutory guidance to limit the use of B&B accommodation for families with children, raise standards in all forms of temporary accommodation—particularly B&Bs—and ensure that households in B&B hotels have access to support from health, education and social services. We are currently considering responses to take forward proposals by end of 2003 to help reinforce achievement of B&B target;

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is working to improve access to services and information on services for households in England experiencing domestic violence or the threat of it. The Homelessness Directorate will invest £23 million of capital funding over the next three years to provide additional safe refuge bedspaces for those fleeing violence and their families where this is supported by local authorities as part of their homelessness duties.

Housing

Bob Russell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many of the proposed new dwellings in the Thames Gateway area he estimates will be council houses. [129309]

Keith Hill: Provision of affordable housing to meet the needs of Gateway communities and secure sustainable and balanced growth, is an important element of the Gateway strategy. Decisions on central Government funding to support this, which will be allocated through the Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme (ADP), will be made by Ministers of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister in the light of recommendations from the East of England, London and South-East Regional Housing Boards. ADP funding is not available for local authorities but they can provide housing through their own capital programme where this a priority and represents good value for money.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what conclusions have been drawn from the effectiveness of differing schemes to aid key workers onto the housing ladder. [130041]

Keith Hill: Around 4,100 key workers have so far been helped under the Starter Home Initiative to buy homes they would otherwise have been unable to afford. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister receives regular monitoring data from the Housing Corporation on activity under the Starter Home Initiative and, in addition, will be commissioning an evaluation of the effectiveness of the programme. This study is expected to start towards the end of the year and will report during 2004.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is currently discussing with key worker sponsor departments how key worker housing assistance can best be targeted in future to meet recruitment and retention needs. These discussions include the type of properties and tenure required and take into account views expressed by employers, key workers and others about the operation of the Starter Home Initiative, and also key worker housing preferences. Regional Housing Boards are also advising on the allocation of funding for key worker schemes in their areas. Bids for key worker housing schemes will be invited in the Autumn.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what research his Department has (a) undertaken and (b) sponsored into the effectiveness of those local authorities that have transferred their housing stock through large-scale voluntary transfer. [130521]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has funded two studies which explore issues connected with the local authority role after the stock has transferred. They are (i) "Large Scale Voluntary Transfers: Staff impacts and implications" published in August 2003 which explores the impact of the transfer programme on employees in both the local authority and the registered social landlord sectors and considers the role of staff who remain in the local authority post transfer. (ii) "Housing Functions and stock transfer" will be published in late 2003 which will set out the key issues that housing authorities need to consider when deciding whether to retain or contract out the delivery of their statutory housing functions.

The Audit Commission Housing Inspectorate is responsible for inspecting and reporting on local authority housing services, including those retained when stock is transferred. The Office contributed to the Audit Commission report "Housing After Transfer—The Local Authority Role" which was published in December 2002 and which drew upon previous housing inspection reports.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) if he will ensure the arguments for and against a large scale voluntary transfer of council housing are made available to tenants in advance of their ballot; [130526]

(2) if he will take steps to ensure that councils opting for large-scale voluntary transfers provide equal (a) financial assistance to the parties involved and (b) opportunity for them to distribute campaign material to all tenants. [130628]

Keith Hill: The "Delivering Decent Homes Option Appraisal—Guidance for Local Authorities" published by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister in June this year sets out how tenants should be central to the appraisal of options for delivering decent social housing within their authority. Where the choice emerging from the option appraisal is to pursue housing transfer, we then expect authorities to further explain the transfer proposals to tenants and to provide them with the facts surrounding housing transfer in accordance with the Code of Recommended Practice on Local Authority Publicity. The code allows authorities to refute any misleading arguments put to tenants by those opposed to transfer.

To enable tenants to make an informed choice the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister expects accurate information on the housing association sector to be provided to them by authorities and Independent Tenants' Advisors. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister would also expect the individual housing associations working with tenants with a view to becoming their new landlord to provide tenants with accurate information on their policies and operations.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will ask the Housing Corporation to report on the performance of housing associations taking over council housing stock in respect of (a) promised improvements, (b) rent and service charge increases, particularly after the five year moratorium and (c) evictions. [130527]

Keith Hill: The information is as follows:

(a) Promised improvements: The National Audit Office (NAO) carried out a study in 2002, "Improving Social Housing Through Transfer". This showed that transfer associations had met their promises to improve houses, or were on schedule to do so. The Housing Corporation has a role in monitoring the performance of all registered associations to ensure that they meet the Government's Decent Homes Standard by 2010.

(b) Rent and service charge increases: The Housing Corporation collects details of average rents and service charges for all registered social landlords. These are published annually in a sector study. For the last three years for which data are available, the increase for all whole stock transfers are:

	Percentage
2000	4.4
2001	2.9
2002	4.8

It is possible to analyse the increase for each association post transfer guarantees, and I will write with further details to my hon. Friend the Member for Great Grimsby.

(c) Evictions: The number of evictions for all large scale voluntary transfer landlords recorded by the Corporation's Continuous Recording of Lettings (CORE) survey over the last three years is:

	Number
2000–01	1,640
2001–02	2,095
2002–03	2,664

Unpublished research commissioned by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister shows that evictions as a percentage of stock for all housing associations and local authorities is:

	Housing association	Local authority
	Percentage
2001–02	0.63	0.63
2002–03	0.64	0.65

The number of evictions as a percentage of stock transferred is less than half of 1 per cent.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 18 June 2003, Official Report, column 341, to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Attercliffe (Mr. Betts), on council housing, what proposals he has to provide adequate funding for those council tenants who wish to stay with local authorities after tenants' ballots on council housing transfers. [130624]

Keith Hill: Some local authorities will be able to meet the decent homes target using mainstream housing funds and their own resources, e.g. capital receipts, particularly since mainstream housing funds have been increased since the Government came to Office.

However, alternative options have been provided. The Sustainable Communities Plan made it clear that local authorities seeking additional investment in their housing stock are able to choose from three options; set up a high performing Arm's Length Housing Management Organisation (ALMO); pursue a Private Finance Initiative (PFI) scheme; and stock transfer. Only stock transfer results in a change of ownership of the stock.

The Sustainable Communities Plan also made it clear that authorities that do not pursue any of the three alternative options cannot expect increased investment above that provided for in the Housing Investment Programme.

The option appraisal process is designed to ensure that tenants are at the heart of the decisions about the future management of their homes. This process should make a negative vote on the chosen option less likely. However, in the event of a negative ballot the local authority and the tenants will need to revisit the options that will deliver decent homes by 2010.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister by when local authorities were required to submit their proposals on the future of their council housing stock; and what proposals he has for encouraging early applications. [130626]

Keith Hill: As announced in the Sustainable Communities Plan all authorities with housing stock have to produce objective and rigorous option appraisals for Government sign-off by July 2005.

To ensure that we reach the 2010 target Government Offices for the Regions and the Community Housing Task Force are working with individual local authorities on creating an action plan that will ensure that all local authorities have an option appraisal signed off as soon as possible.

Local authorities wishing to take advantage of future Arm's Length Housing Management Organisation (ALMO), stock transfer or Private Finance Initiative (PFI) schemes will not be granted a place on a programme unless their option appraisal has been signed off by the relevant Government Office.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many local authorities have submitted proposals on bringing their council housing stock up to the decent homes standard; how many have chosen between the Government's three options of large-scale voluntary transfer, private finance initiative and arms length management organisation; and how many have not yet notified their intentions. [130627]

Keith Hill: The Sustainable Communities Plan made it clear that all stock owning local authorities must undertake a formal options appraisal process for Government sign-off by July 2005. Guidance on the process was issued by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister in June 2003. No options appraisals have yet been signed off.

However since April 2001, when there were 246 local authorities that owned housing stock, the following schemes have been put in place:

22 local authorities have transferred all of their stock to a registered social landlord.

Seven have undertaken partial transfers,

18 local authorities are on the 2002 and 2003 programmes for whole stock transfer pending a ballot

Seven more are proposing partial transfers pending a ballot

34 local authorities have secured places on the Arm's Length Management Organisation (ALMO) programme, 12 of which have already set up their ALMO and secured additional funding after gaining a 2* or 3* rating from the Housing Inspectorate.

Nine local authorities have been given permission to let Private Finance Initiative (PFI) contracts for the management of some of their housing stock. Two of these contracts have now been signed.

In total 74 local authorities are on programmes which account for the whole of their stock. That leaves 172 local authorities that have yet to formally agree an approach.

Operation Gangmaster

Mr. Luff: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what role his Department has played in Operation Gangmaster in relation to (a) planning, (b) housing, (c) housing benefit, (d) council tax benefit and (e) community cohesion responsibilities of local authorities. [130202]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is not one of the Government Departments directly involved in Operation Gangmaster.

South Sefton Partnership

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps the South Sefton Partnership have taken to improve access to (a) job and training opportunities and (b) affordable childcare. [128878]

Yvette Cooper: This is one of South Sefton Partnership's four key objectives. The Partnership has recently prepared a small booklet "South Sefton Partnership—The Story So Far" which aims to illustrate steps taken to date on these four key objectives.

The steps taken in respect of this objective are as follows:

Establishing an Intermediate Labour Market scheme to act as a 'bridge' back to work for long-term unemployed residents.

Developing the Sefton@Work project which will help unemployed South Sefton residents gain access to jobs and training through advice, guidance and placement services and encouraging local firms to recruit local people.

Improving educational opportunities for South Sefton residents through an adult community learning programme in local schools.

Helping 12 local people to find work as teacher's assistants within South Sefton Education Action Zone schools.

Supporting the Bootle-based Independence Initiative which helps ex-substance abusers to access training and work.

Funding the Seaforth Older Children's Service (SOCS) which provides childcare in school holidays allowing local people to retain jobs that might otherwise be at risk.

Providing laptop computers for looked-after children in the area to help to improve their hitherto below-average levels of success in GCSE exams.

Supporting Sefton council's IMPACT project which provides vocational experiences for pupils who find traditional school subjects are not for them.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps have been taken by the South Sefton Partnership to create safe, healthy, and managed neighbourhoods. [128879]

Yvette Cooper: This is one of South Sefton Partnership's four key objectives. The Partnership has recently prepared a small booklet "South Sefton Partnership—The Story So Far" which aims to illustrate steps taken to date on these four key objectives.

The steps taken in respect of this objective are as follows:

Establishing the Green It Clean It Mean It environment fund which provided each Neighbourhood Action Group with 10,000 to undertake local 'green' improvements.

Supporting the new-build premises of the successful Feelgood Factory health initiative which will provide advice on healthy living, training courses, alternative therapies and a crèche.

Employing an Active Communities Co-ordinator to give South Sefton residents improved access to sports opportunities.

Funding a new mobile police station for the area to improve relationships with local communities, provide a more visible police presence. A new community safety officer post has been created.

Funding an Environmental Hit Squad in the Linacre/Derby area to improve the physical appearance and cleanliness of the neighbourhood and look at ways to reduce the rat population.

Working with Sefton Council Housing Market Renewal on a £500,000 alleygating initiative to improve the local environment and reduce crime in terraced street across South Sefton.

Creating the post of a Co-ordinator to work with the Neighbourhood Action Groups on developing and implementing community safety projects.

Funding important feasibility studies into the restoration of Bootle Derby Park and upgrading the local stretch of the Leeds-Liverpool Canal.

Written Ministerial Statements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many Written Ministerial Statements have been made by the Department since 29 October 2002. [126613]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has made 130 Written Ministerial Statements since 29 October 2002.

PRIME MINISTER

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Prime Minister when he intends to reply to the letter dated 12 August 2003 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to a new post office for Rusholme. [130456]

The Prime Minister: I replied to my right hon. Friend on 12 September 2003.

Director of Public Prosecutions

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what contact took place between 10 Downing street and (a) the members of the panel which selected Mr. Ken Macdonald QC as Director of Public Prosecutions and (b) Mr. Ken Macdonald QC during the process of the decision-making on the appointment; [129241]

(2) if he will list the (a) dates and (b) attendees of meetings which took place between 10 Downing street (i) officials and (ii) civil servants with members of the selection panel which appointed Mr. Ken Macdonald QC as Director of Public Prosecutions. [129240]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. and learned Friend the Solicitor-General gave to him today.

Iraq

Adam Price: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of his pre-war assessment of the challenges of post-Saddam Iraq. [130715]

The Prime Minister: The scale of the reconstruction task in Iraq caused by decades of neglect and misrule was greater than expected. But good progress in Iraq is being made despite security setbacks, and Saddam's appalling legacy. The Iraqi Governing Council has appointed Ministers, work is under way on preparing a new constitution, institutions are being rebuilt, the international financial community is engaging, children are receiving better health care and education, and work is in hand to improve the infrastructure deficiencies. We are also giving urgent priority to building up the Police Force, Civil Defence Corps and New Iraqi Army, so that Iraqis assume greater responsibility for their own security.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister when he next plans to visit Southend, West. [130959]

The Prime Minister: I have no plans to visit in the near future.

Security Clearance

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 8 September 2003, Official Report, column 18W, on Security Clearance, what further clearance is required for Downing street staff in order to see (a) secret and (b) top secret Joint Intelligence Committee material, once they have been positively vetted. [130397]

The Prime Minister: The levels of security clearance that staff need in order to be granted access to classified material are those which apply across Government. They are set out in HM Government's statement of vetting policy, as announced to the House on 15 December 1994, Official Report, columns 764–66.

DEFENCE

Aircraft Carriers

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what increase in cost for the proposed two new aircraft carriers has been communicated to him; what reasons were given; what his response has been; and if he will make a statement. [127152]

Mr. Ingram: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 1 September, Official Report, column 894W, to the hon. Member for New Forest, East (Dr. Lewis).

Apache Helicopter

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to upgrade and replace the night-vision system on the Apache helicopter. [129490]

Mr. Ingram: An upgrade of Apache's night vision system has been identified as one of a range of possible enhancements to the helicopter during its service life. However, no decision has yet been made on this specific element.

Asbestos

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 26 June 2003, Official Report, column 944W, on asbestos, if he will list the buildings identified as containing asbestos. [130943]

Mr. Caplin: There is no central register of buildings in which asbestos is known to be present. Such a register or list could be compiled only at disproportionate cost.

Battle Group Thermal Imaging System

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress is being made in the procurement of the Battle Group Thermal Imaging System; on which platforms it will be deployed; when it is likely to come into service; and what capability it will bring. [129191]

Mr. Ingram: A contract to supply and support the Battle Group Thermal Imaging System was placed with Thales Optronics Ltd. in 2001. The system is on track to meet its approved in-service date in 2004. It will be deployed on Warrior armoured fighting vehicles and Scimitar combat reconnaissance vehicles and will further improve the effectiveness of armoured combat formations at night and in bad weather.

Defence Exhibition

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) civilian security personnel and (b) armed services personnel his Department assigned to the Defence Systems Equipment International Exhibition in London; and if he will make a statement. [129692]

Mr. Ingram: The security arrangements for Defence Systems Equipment International, including the assignment of civilian security personnel, were the responsibility of the exhibition organisers (Spearhead Exhibitions Ltd.). 31 Ministry of Defence Police (MDP) officers were deployed to the exhibition site, with an additional small marine unit of 12 MDP officers being present at the request of the Metropolitan police.

Ministry of Defence civilian and armed forces personnel attended the event in an official capacity, but details are not held centrally.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for which foreign delegations attending the Defence Systems and Equipment International exhibition in September the Government paid for (a) travel, (b) accommodation and (c) hospitality; and if he will make a statement. [129775]

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the country delegations (a) invited to and (b) attending the Defence Systems Equipment International Exhibition in London; what role his Department had in formulating the list of invited countries; and if he will make a statement. [129693]

Mr. Ingram: Most of the funding for the attendance of official overseas defence delegations at the Defence Systems and Equipment International exhibition was provided by the exhibition organisers and defence companies.

However, in addition, the official overseas delegations that attended the exhibition as guests of Her Majesty's Government accepted some contribution from the Ministry of Defence towards their visit for travel, accommodation and/or hospitality.

The MOD Defence Export Services Organisation prepares a list of countries to receive official invitations to the exhibition, taking into consideration current marketing campaigns and longer-term prospects for business with the countries concerned. The list is then passed to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office for consideration. Throughout the process, political issues, arms embargoes and current international relations imperatives are also considered, as is the cost involved in hosting the delegations.

Of the 62 countries invited to attend the exhibition as guests of HMG, 56 accepted. The list of countries invited to attend is as listed, with the countries that declined highlighted in italic.

Algeria
Australia
Austria
Bahrain
Belgium
Botswana
Brazil
Brunei
Bulgaria
Canada
Chile
Colombia
PRC (China)
Czech Republic
Denmark
Egypt
Finland
France
Germany
Ghana
Greece
Hungary
India
Republic of Ireland
Italy
Japan
Jordan
Kazakhstan
Kenya
Republic of Korea
Kuwait
Malaysia
Mexico
Netherlands
New Zealand
Nigeria
Norway
Oman
Pakistan
Peru
Philippines
Poland
Portugal
Qatar
Romania
Russia
Saudi Arabia
Singapore
Slovakia
Slovenia
South Africa
Spain
Sweden
Switzerland[1]
Syria
Thailand
Trinidad & Tobago
Turkey
UAE
USA
Vietnam
Venezuela

[1] The official overseas delegation from Switzerland was unable to attend.

The exhibition organisers, Spearhead Exhibitions Ltd. have also invited country delegations. Their invitees are military/Government personnel who are below ministerial or chief of staff level, as well as industrial visitors, and invitations are extended to reflect the requirements made by exhibitors as well as London based embassies, in consultation with United Kingdom defence attaches based overseas.

At the outset of the invitation process Spearhead may take advice from MOD about the attendance of particular countries or exhibitors. However, provided they act responsibly and within the law, Spearhead is not obliged to take that advice. Requests for release of information on the delegations invited by the organisers should be directed to the company.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost to his Department was of the Defence Systems and Equipment International Exhibition at the Excel Centre on 9 to 12 September; how many departmental staff were present; and if he will make a statement on the purpose of hosting arms sales fairs. [130293]

Mr. Ingram: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Islington, North (Jeremy Corbyn) on 20 May 2003, Official Report, columns 677–78W. The final cost remains to be established, but we do not expect it to exceed the estimated figure.

Ministry of Defence staff attended the Defence Systems and Equipment International (DSEi) exhibition as part of their normal duties and to gain greater understanding of defence industrial capabilities around the world. This was at the discretion of line managers and no central record of attendance is held.

The purpose of defence exhibitions is to bring together purchasers and suppliers of defence equipment and services. DSEi enables the United Kingdom defence industry to demonstrate its capabilities to potential overseas customers and provides an opportunity for those responsible for the defence of their countries to see the range of equipment and services available to meet their legitimate requirements. Formal invitations to DSEi do not imply that Her Majesty's Government would be prepared to issue export licences for the supply of all or any of the equipment displayed, and all export licence applications would be considered on a case-by-case basis in line with the Consolidated EU and National Arms Export Licensing Criteria.

Export Controls

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions his Department has had with the US State Department on (a) the use of extraterritorial export control legislation and (b) the need to have strict end-user controls on arms shipments, to reduce threats to military personnel. [130182]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 16 September 2003]: A range of issues have been discussed with the United States Government in the context of the negotiations, concluded earlier this year, on a text for an unclassified waiver from the US International Traffic in Arms Regulations. These have included consideration of extraterritorial control in relation to the export of strategically controlled goods, but not specifically of end-user controls. The national security of the United Kingdom and its allies is considered at the time an application for a licence to export is made, under the Consolidated EU and National Arms Export Licensing Criteria.

Iraq

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate (a) the length of time in training that British army units require before deployment in Iraq and (b) the ratio of deployed personnel to total personnel absorbed by operations in Iraq. [130278]

Mr. Ingram: The duration of pre-deployment training for military forces deploying on operations depends on two factors: firstly, the existing level of training, which is closely aligned to readiness, and, secondly, the operational task the force is required to undertake. The amount of pre-deployment training required is therefore dictated by the extent to which the troops need to raise their military capability, and it is not meaningful to specify set periods of time.

As at 11 September there were approximately 10,000 British servicemen and women in the Gulf region. Following the deployment of the balance of the forces announced by the Secretary of State on 8 September this figure will shortly rise to approximately 10,500. Beyond this it is not possible to quantify accurately the total number of people within the Department whose work touches on current operations in Iraq. This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps are being taken by the Government to ensure that an effective trial-or-release system for Iraqi prisoners is operating in Iraq. [130347]

Mr. Hoon: The Coalition is working with the Iraqi people to establish a fair and just legal system, and estimates that some 100 courts are now in operation across the country.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the results of the inquiry into the al Majarr al Kabir incident will be published; and if he will make a statement. [123420]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 4 July 2003]: The Ministry of Defence is determined to do all we can to establish the facts, and to bring to account those responsible for the deaths of the six RMP soldiers killed so tragically in Iraq in June. It is not possible to say how long this investigation will take.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 8 September 2003, Official Report, column 46W, on civil servants working in Iraq, if he will report on a weekly basis how many civil servants are searching for weapons of mass destruction. [130770]

Mr. Ingram: The number of civilian staff working for the Iraq Survey Group on a weekly basis is as follows:

Week ending	Number of staff
2003
13 June	2
20 June	6
27 June	7
4 July	7
11 July	7
18 July	15
25 July	15

Week ending	Number of staff
1 August	15
8 August	15
15 August	18
22 August	19
29 August	19
5 September	19
12 September	19

Naval Procurement

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made in establishing the Maritime Afloat Reach and Sustainability Project; what will new design ships will be procured; what capabilities this will bring; and if he will make a statement on how they will improve flexibility and responsiveness. [128120]

Mr. Ingram: The Military Afloat Reach and Sustain (MARS) project is now reaching the end of its Concept Phase, in which the Support Requirement is defined and a plan for procuring it in the most cost-effective and efficient way is established. It is anticipated that the project will progress to its Assessment phase before the end of this year. During the Assessment phase the project team will invite industry to provide solutions to this requirement, including ship designs, and will establish how new technologies, vessel designs and logistics concepts can deliver the increases in flexibility and responsiveness our future forces will require.

The afloat support capability provided by the MARS programme is essential if the United Kingdom is to maintain the ability to deploy joint forces worldwide to engage in operations where Host Nation Support cannot be guaranteed. As an enabling capability, its effectiveness will be measured by its ability to support our future forces and concepts of operation.

Recruitment

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people were recruited to the armed forces since January for (a) each of the recruitment posts in Scotland, (b) England, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [129220]

Mr. Caplin: Statistics for officer recruitment are not broken down by region. The numbers of other rank enlistments for all three Services in each month since January 2003 are detailed in the following table.

	January	February	March	April	May	June	July	August	September[1]	Total
RN/RM
Scotland:
Aberdeen	5	4	8	0	9	5	8	2	0	41
Dundee	10	10	21	10	14	19	7	4	0	95
Edinburgh	11	12	25	6	11	15	8	9	0	97
Glasgow	11	10	19	4	11	19	12	4	0	90
Inverness	4	5	7	0	2	2	4	0	0	24
England	459	423	469	150	355	428	282	164	0	2,730
Wales	29	26	21	6	21	26	16	10	0	155
Northern Ireland	9	9	8	6	9	5	3	10	0	59
Army
Scotland:
Aberdeen	20	14	3	4	4	1	6	11	11	74
Dundee	69	20	15	19	13	7	20	40	37	240
Edinburgh	51	19	13	14	16	8	14	28	26	189
Glasgow	153	86	49	49	44	21	58	68	95	623
Inverness	20	12	5	10	8	2	8	10	17	92
England	2,178	925	817	714	767	687	779	1,045	1,382	9,294
Wales	178	80	61	70	66	50	38	66	105	714
Northern Ireland	53	19	24	13	12	12	8	28	11	180
RAF
Scotland:
Aberdeen	0	2	5	4	3	1	4	5	4	28
Dundee	6	8	10	13	6	7	3	8	3	64
Edinburgh	7	7	9	4	9	1	9	5	3	54
Glasgow	10	18	9	14	9	9	12	10	4	95
Inverness	2	5	7	9	5	2	5	2	3	40
England	140	332	305	273	250	172	279	201	83	2,035
Wales	13	28	29	44	36	12	42	20	17	241
Northern Ireland	1	5	9	4	2	2	6	3	1	33

[1] Figures give the position as at 12 September 2003. No figures available for RN/RM.

War Pensions Agency

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the proposal to redefine the eligibility criteria for disablement through the War Pensions Agency. [130518]

Mr. Caplin: There are no plans to change the eligibility criteria used for decisions under the War Pensions Scheme. I refer my hon. Friend to the details of my statement to the House of 15 September 2003, Official Report, columns 39–40WS. I can confirm that there will be no effect on existing war pensioners. Decisions on whether a condition was caused or significantly aggravated by service will be evidence-based, using a 'balance of probabilities' standard of proof. This is in line with the approach of the civil courts and other modern compensation arrangements. All decisions will be appealable to a fully independent tribunal.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Civil Compensation Cases

Mrs Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many civil compensation actions have been brought against the employer of the abusing child carer in the UK in each of the past five years. [128397]

Mr. Leslie: The information requested is not collected centrally and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Community Legal Service

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what proportion of the population living in (a) rural and (b) urban areas has access to services provided by Community Legal Service Partnerships. [129360]

Mr. Lammy: To date, Community Legal Service Partnerships cover over 99 per cent. of the population of England and Wales and so include nearly all rural and urban areas. Although the provision of services within the Community Legal Service (CLS) falls to individually contracted providers, each CLS partnership has responsibility for advising on the co-ordination and planning of local service delivery. Data produced by the CLS partnerships, particularly in relation to priority legal needs, helps to inform the allocation of CLS resources through the contracting system. Along with policy developments, such as the Partnership Initiative Budget (PIB) and the Method of Delivery Pilots, the Legal Services Commission ensures that there is both adequate and improving service provision across all regions in England and Wales.

Court Attire

Lady Hermon: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many responses were received to the Court Working Dress Consultation Paper; and if he will make a statement on the responses received. [129828]

Mr. Leslie: The consultation period for comments closed on 14 August and 3,406 responses were received.

The responses are currently being analysed and the Government will make a statement in due course.

Mental Incapacity Bill

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what representations he has received regarding the length of the consultation for the draft Mental Incapacity Bill. [129630]

Mr. Lammy: My Department has received four letters to Ministers about the length of the consultation period set up by the Pre-legislative Committee which is examining the draft Mental Incapacity Bill.

Sheriffs

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many claims for negligence, errors or omissions have been made against under sheriffs in each of the last three years; what was (a) the highest claim, (b) the average claim and (c) the total value of claims; what was the total paid in settlement of claims for each of the last three years; what plans he has to indemnify sheriffs against liability for claims against under sheriffs; and if he will make a statement. [129317]

Mr. Lammy: The information requested is not available. The courts do not maintain statistics on the identity or role of defendants; nor does the Department employ or have direct responsibility for under sheriffs.

We do, however, consider the responsibility for enforcement of High Court writs as an onerous one for sheriffs to undertake, as their position is a voluntary one, and that responsibility extends for up to six years following their term of office. Therefore we are relieving them of this responsibility through measures contained in the Courts Bill. Present insurance arrangements made by under sheriffs cover the possibility of litigation for the duration of a high sheriffs responsibility. The matter of continuing cover once new measures are brought in is under careful consideration by the representatives of those who undertake this work and wish to continue to do so as well as those who represent under sheriffs and high sheriffs. We have no plans to indemnify sheriffs from public funds.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the duties of the office of sheriff consist of (a) formally and (b) informally; and if he will make a statement. [129319]

Mr. Leslie: High sheriffs are technically responsible for the enforcement of High Court writs, but this is, in practice, carried out on their behalf by under sheriffs, and this duty will be removed from high sheriffs by legislation currently before Parliament. The traditional role of the high sheriff is to escort to court and offer hospitality to High Court judges who visit their area. Informal duties are entirely a matter for individual sheriffs, who also have an informal representational role for their county. The office is unpaid, and the expenses are borne personally by the incumbent. High sheriffs receive no public funds, other than a small allowance for days when they attend judges in court.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have appealed disability living allowance decisions in each year since 1997; what proportion were successful in an appeal; and what reasons people give for appealing initial decisions. [128103]

Maria Eagle: This is a matter for Christina Townsend, Chief Executive of the Appeals Service. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Christina Townsend to Mr. James Wray, dated 17 September 2003:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question regarding the number of people who have appealed Disability Living Allowance decisions in each year since 1997, what proportion were successful in an appeal and what reasons people gave for appealing the initial decisions.

We do not have information on the total number of appeals against Disability Living Allowance decisions nor the reasons why initial decisions were appealed. The attached table shows the number of appeals relating to Disability Living Allowance decisions which were received by the Appeals Service; the number cleared with or without a hearing; the number found in favour of the appellant and the percentage found in favour of the appellant for each year since 1998. We began collecting information for the first full year in 1998 and therefore no information is available for 1997.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Disability Living Allowance appeals received by the Appeals Service, cleared at hearing or without a hearing, found in favour of the appellant at hearing and the percentage found in favour of the appellant each year since 1998.

Number

	Caseload	Received at the Appeals Service	Non hearing clearances	Cleared at hearing	Found in favour	Percentage found in favour
1998	1,980,200	62,925	2,255	42,950	20,330	47.3
1999	2,042,300	40,260	7,165	51,680	25,170	48.7
2000	2,110,200	95,160	18,270	63,050	31,065	49.3
2001	2,210,600	87,295	22,610	86,285	45,165	52.3
2002	2,322,800	82,345	20,880	72,815	39,490	54.2
January 2003 to July 2003	2,468,900	46,940	11,715	41,655	22,470	53.9

Notes:
All figures are subject to change as more up-to-date data becomes available. Figures for the latest months will rise significantly as information feeds through to the Appeals Service. Figures are rounded to the nearest 5 and percentages to 1 decimal place.
Source:
IAD Information Centre, 100% sample.
Caseload notes:
1. Cases where payment of benefit has been suspended are excluded
2. Taken from a 5 per cent. sample therefore figures may be subject to sampling variation.
3. Caseload as at February each year rounded to the nearest 100.
Source::
IAD Information Centre, 5 per cent. sample

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proposals he has to speed up the appeals process for disability living allowance. [128104]

Maria Eagle: This is a matter for Christina Townsend Chief Executive of the Appeals Service. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Christina Townsend to Mr. James Wray, dated 17 September 2003:

The Secretary of State has asked me to respond to your question regarding the proposals that are in place to speed up the appeals process for Disability Living Allowance.

The Appeals Service Agency is committed to a twin strategy of reducing waiting times and clearing the backlog of older cases that accrue. We have made a determined effort to tackle older cases based on the policy of "first in first out". Wherever possible cases are cleared at first hearing. The average time from a Disability Living Allowance appeal being received by the Appeals Service to being cleared has reduced from 31.1 weeks, in 1998, to 15.1 weeks for the period January 2003–July 2003.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Disability Handbook

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans the Government have to update the 1998 Disability Handbook to include a guide on the needs of adults with autistic spectrum disorders. [129900]

Maria Eagle: The Department intends to improve and update the medical guidance currently provided to decision-makers. This will be based on information technology that will enable the guidance to be more comprehensive and easier to access. The guidance on all conditions contained in the Disability Handbook, including autistic spectrum disorder in children and adults, will be revised as part of this initiative. A programme for this work is being developed.

Disabled Employees

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what measures are in place to ensure that companies provide the necessary access improvements and assistance for disabled employees; and what financial support can be made available for companies to make the changes. [129105]

Maria Eagle: The Disability Discrimination Act (DDA) requires that employers consider making a 'reasonable adjustment' to premises, working practices, or other aspects of a job, if a disabled employee or job applicant would otherwise be at a disadvantage compared to someone else. Improved access, or the provision of various types of personal or technological assistance might constitute reasonable adjustments. The Disability Rights Commission (DRC) advises employees, employers and the general public on the law.

Redress for failure to make reasonable adjustments is via Employment Tribunals.

The Access to Work programme provides a grant towards the additional employment costs resulting from disability. Help available can include adaptations to premises, special aids and equipment, help with travel to work, and personal support in the workplace.

Access to Work pays 100 per cent. of the approved costs where an individual is starting a new job, or has been in their job for less than six weeks. It also pays full costs for people in self-employment and where assistance with travel to work, support workers or communicators for job interviews is required.

In all other cases Access to Work meets up to 80 per cent. of costs above a threshold of 300 and below a ceiling of £10,000 and 100 per cent. of costs above £10,000, over a three year period.

Forestry

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will meet the Association of British Insurers to discuss the level of employers' compulsory liability insurance premiums in the forestry industry. [130426]

Mr. Browne: Ministers will meet the Association of British Insurers (ABI) and insurers to discuss the level of Employers' Liability Compulsory Insurance premiums and their impacts on businesses in general. The Department is undertaking a review of Employers' Liability Compulsory Insurance and has already had a number of meetings with the Association of British Insurers and other organisations. We will report progress and next steps arising out of this second stage of the review, in autumn.

Jobcentre Advisers

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average number of days wait is before an unemployed person's initial appointment with a jobcentre adviser; what research his Department has conducted into the particular problems faced in waiting for appointments by agency workers who become unemployed for short periods of time on a regular basis; and if he will make a statement. [124020]

Mr. Browne: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive, David Anderson. I have asked him to reply to the hon. Member.

Letter from David Anderson to Mr. Oliver Heald, dated 16 July 2003:

As Jobcentre Plus is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning the average number of days an unemployed person has to wait for their initial appointment with a Jobcentre Plus advisor and the particular problems faced by agency workers who become unemployed for short periods of time on a regular basis. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

We want to give everyone who needs our help the best possible service, including providing them with prompt appointments when they are needed. Our Customer Charter, which details the level of service customers can expect from Jobcentre Plus, states our aim to make sure interviews, including initial interviews at the beginning of a claim, are undertaken within four working days of the customer making initial contact. This aim applies to all our customers, including agency workers.

We do not collect data about the number of days unemployed people have to wait for an initial interview with a Jobcentre Plus adviser. However, we do have a target for the end to end processing of new claims which includes the time leading up to the initial interview. Our target is to make the first payment within 12 days of initial contact about a claim and I am pleased to say that the average clearance time for Jobseeker's Allowance is currently only 10.5 days.

I hope this is helpful and assures you of our intent to provide people with the best possible service.

Targeting Fraud Website

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many hits the Targeting Fraud website has received; how many cases of suspected fraud have been reported to the website; how many of these suspected cases have been investigated; how many of them have led to a successful prosecution; and how many of them have led to a custodial sentence. [126563]

Mr. Pond: Information is not collated centrally on sentences imposed by the courts where successful prosecutions have resulted from the Targeting Fraud Website. The available information is in the table.

Targeting fraud website

	Number of hits	Number of 'report a cheat' forms submitted	Number of cases accepted for investigation	Number of successful prosecutions
2000–01[1]	1,431,093	3,808	319	0
2001–02	222,421	8,453	1,067	4
2002–03	123,575	8,309	1,201	20

[1] The 'report a cheat' online form was introduced in May 2000.

TRANSPORT

Counter-terrorism

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the purpose was of the counter-terrorism exercise held on 7 September. [R] [129631]

Mr. McNulty: The exercise held at Bank tube station on Sunday 7 September was designed to test the co-ordinated response of the emergency services to a chemical release on a train on the London Underground. The exercise involved rescue and decontamination both at the scene and at a hospital. It also tested the use of new equipment and procedures for the emergency services.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the cost was of holding the simulated terrorist attack at the Bank underground station and its surrounds on 7 September; what lessons were learned from the exercise; and whether the exercise dealt with the requirements of decontamination of the site of the simulated dirty radioactive bomb. [130292]

Mr. McNulty: As with other exercises designed to test the preparedness of the emergency services, the costs are being borne by the participating organisations, whose budgets naturally include general funding for training and exercising.

Our early view is that the elements we planned to test in this exercise worked well. A full assessment is currently being carried out. There will of course be lessons to learn for all those involved.

The exercise was based on a simulated release of a chemical agent on a train stuck in the London underground and was designed to test new equipment and procedures for rescuing and decontaminating people trapped on the train. The exercise was not designed to test site decontamination or the response to a dirty radioactive bomb.

Cyprus Turkish Airlines

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many complaints (a) he and (b) the Civil Aviation Authority have received about cancellations and delays affecting flights operated by Cyprus Turkish Airlines; and if he will make a statement. [130357]

Mr. McNulty: No complaints have been made to the Department for Transport relating to the cancellation and delays affecting flights by Cyprus Turkish Airlines. The Air Transport Users Council, which was set up by the Civil Aviation Authority, has received four written complaints and two by telephone since April this year.

Devolution (Transport Services)

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 9 September 2003, ref 127778, which (a) Minister and (b) devolved Administration is responsible for (i) ferry services and (ii) air services between (A) England and Northern Ireland, (B) Wales and Northern Ireland, (C) Scotland and Northern Ireland and (D) Scotland and Wales. [130288]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 16 September 2003]: Ferry and air services between different parts of the UK are generally reserved matters, and the Secretary of State for Transport has policy responsibility. Explicit provision was made last year for the devolved Administrations in Scotland and Northern Ireland to take responsibility for financial support for a possible ferry service between Campbeltown and Ballycastle.

East Midlands Airport

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made with the decision on whether to open a second runway at East Midlands airport. [130947]

Mr. McNulty: We are currently considering the responses to the airports' consultation. These will inform our final conclusions on airport capacity which will be published in an Air Transport White Paper later this year.

Flight Cancellations

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what statutory duty of care airlines have towards passengers whose flights have been cancelled. [130257]

Mr. McNulty: UK airlines currently have no statutory duty of care to passengers with regard to cancelled flights. However, all the significant "full-service" UK airlines (both scheduled and charter) have signed up to the Airline Voluntary Commitments on Air Passenger Rights, developed in 2001 under the guidance of the European Commission and the European Civil Aviation Conference. These commitments contain non-legally binding agreements to deliver defined standards of service to air travellers in a number of key areas, including the prompt notification of known delays, cancellations and diversions.

At the Transport Council in December 2002 the European Community reached political agreement on a proposal from the European Commission for a regulation establishing common rules on compensation and assistance to air passengers in the event of denied boarding and of cancellation or long delays of flights. We expect this regulation, which is currently under discussion between the Council, the European Parliament and the Commission to become law during 2004.

Green Transport

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which green transport initiatives the Government have supported in the Merseyside PTA area in (a) 2001–02, (b) 2002–03 and (c) 2003–04. [130433]

Mr. McNulty: The Government expect local authorities to reflect the principles of sustainable development in their Local Transport Plans (LTPs). They are, for example, required to show how their LTPs will reduce CO_2 emissions from transport sources, how they would contribute to tackling air quality problems, and how they would minimise noise impacts. The Government, through their funding of LTPs, aim to deliver better environmental outcomes across the whole range of Local Transport Plan schemes and initiatives. It would therefore be misleading to identify "green transport initiatives" separately—environmental issues are fully integrated into wider local transport policy.

The Merseyside local authorities have reported in detail on their delivery of schemes and initiatives in LTP Annual Progress Reports, covering 2001–02 and 2002–03.

Parliamentary Questions

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many questions directed to him remain unanswered. [130755]

Mr. McNulty: The effective handling of parliamentary questions is an issue to which I, and ministerial colleagues, attach great importance. At 15 September 2003, my Department had 43 unanswered parliamentary questions. Of these, eight were named day questions for answer on 16 September 2003 and 35 were ordinary written questions which by convention are answered within one working week of appearing in the Order Book.

Sky Marshals

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) who will cover the employment costs of sky marshals; [129223]

(2) how many sky marshals are available for duty on (a) UK airlines and (b) airlines flying into and out of the UK; [129224]

(3) how many sky marshals are being trained; and how long their training lasts; [129225]

(4) what the expected establishment of sky marshals will be; [129226]

(5) whether sky marshals are authorised to carry (a) firearms and (b) other weapons; [129227]

(6) whether (a) UK airlines and (b) foreign airlines are required (i) to opt in and (ii) to opt out of using sky marshals; and if he will list the airlines that have (A) opted in and (B) opted out. [129228]

Mr. McNulty: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport made a written statement on 19 December last year on the capability which has been developed to place specially trained armed police officers aboard UK civil aircraft. Security reasons preclude making public operational details of that capability. Other countries, with an equivalent capability in respect of flights by their own airlines, have adopted a similar approach.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many special marshals he has appointed; and from which budget funding for special marshals will come; [130951]

(2) what powers special marshals will have if a person refuses to hand over (a) alcohol and (b) cigarettes. [130952]

Mr. McNulty: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today to the hon. Member for Carshalton & Wallington (Mr. Brake).

Transport Projects (Warrington)

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many projects his Department has supported in Warrington since 1997; and how much funding was allocated to each project. [129926]

Mr. McNulty: In April 1998 Warrington became a unitary authority; prior to that they were part of Cheshire. The funding figures for 1997 and 1998 are not readily available.

The Department for Transport has provided Warrington with funding £11.342 million over the last two financial years. The Department has accepted the urban traffic management control major project, and has provisionally accepted two other major projects, Bridgefoot environmental enhancement and Warrington town centre bus interchange.

Details of the schemes and spend can be found in Warrington's annual progress report.

TravelSafe Scheme

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how he has measured the success of the TravelSafe scheme; and what the cost of the scheme has been to date. [130953]

Mr. Jamieson: TravelSafe is a local partnership initiative, led by the Merseytravel Passenger Transport Executive to deal with crime on public transport in their area. My Department has taken an interest in this and other anti-transport crime initiatives throughout the country as part of its on-going work commitment to reduce crime and the fear of crime wherever it occurs on the transport system. In February 2003, Merseytravel reported to the Government's Safer Travel on Buses and Coaches Panel on the successes of the initiative. The Department for Transport has not funded this initiative and we hold no information on its cost to date.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Public Appointments

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Minister for Women what progress she has made in increasing the proportion of women appointed to public bodies. [129453]

Ms Hewitt: The percentage of women on the boards of public bodies at 31 March 2003 was 35.7 per cent., up from 34 per cent. in March 2002. The Government remain committed to the aim that by the end of 2005, and for the majority of departments, women should hold 45–50 per cent. of the appointments to the bodies they sponsor.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

EU Enlargement

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations she has received from EU non-applicant states bordering the enlarged EU on access to the Single Market after enlargement. [128175]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, met with the Russian Deputy Prime Minister Mr. Kudrin on 26 June this year, and also in October 2002. During both these meetings the issue of current and future Russian access to EU markets was raised.

Computer Viruses

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has for reducing the threat from computer viruses. [130197]

Mr. Timms: Malicious software—including viruses—is a global phenomenon. No one Government can eliminate the development and spread of malicious software but the Government are playing their part in a range of activities to minimise the impact on users. We are talking to vendors about improving the identification of vulnerabilities in software and the underlying protocols. We are working with industry to disseminate advice about the availability of solutions to the problems which are identified and how to deal with the difficulties posed by events, such as viruses, which exploit those vulnerabilities. The Department has taken a prominent role in the promotion of good information security management and has developed promotional material aimed at helping smaller companies understand and deal with common security problems. The detection and prosecution of those who create malicious software is the responsibility of the Home Office and Section 3 of the Computer Misuse Act already criminalises the unauthorised modification of the contents of any computer, which includes modifications caused by viruses. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary is, however, reviewing the effectiveness of the Act and, as part of this process, will consider whether any further legislation is required to further deter those who write or knowingly disseminate computer viruses.

Departmental Computer Security

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much has been (a) budgeted and (b) spent by her Department since April 2002 on (i) combating computer fraud, (ii) preventing theft of computers and (iii) safeguarding the security of information held on computer; and if she will make a statement. [128782]

Ms Hewitt: It is not possible to separately identify the budgets and costs requested as they are spread across a number of areas including:

The overall IT service cost from our outsourced IT services provider;

Individual project development and system operating costs;

Overall physical and building security costs;

IT systems and network (including firewall) management costs;

Overall Internal Audit effort;

Staff recruitment and training costs.

Electricity Generation

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much electricity has been used in the UK in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and how much has been used in this year so far. [129941]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 16 September 2003]: The available information is shown in the following table.

Electricity used in the UK

	TWh
1998	345.4
1999	352.5
2000	360.1
2001	363.1
2002	364.7
2003[1]	189.8

[1] First half

Source:
DTI Energy Trends

EU Tariffs

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the EU tariffs on textiles and clothing imports from (a) India, (b) Sri Lanka and (c) the United States; and if she will make a statement. [129167]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: There are over 1,000 individual EU tariff lines covering imports of textiles and clothing so it is not possible to list them individually. These duties are applicable to all countries including USA, India and Sri Lanka and range from 0 per cent. to 12.2 per cent. Both India and Sri Lanka benefit from preferential arrangements with the EU that give lower duties for textile and clothing products.

Everything but Arms Agreement

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to her answer of 14 June, Official Report, column 17W, on the Everything but Arms Agreement, what proportion of total trade exports to the United Kingdom are represented by (a) sugar, (b) oil, (c) tobacco, (d) cotton and (e) olive oil regimes for (i) least developed countries and (ii) non-least developed countries in sub-Saharan Africa. [128558]

Ms Hewitt: To obtain such information would require extracting information on a large number of commodity codes for 51 countries and therefore could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Export Control

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the feasibility of using (a) mutual and (b) multilateral legal assistance treaties to allow the UK Government to develop effective end-user controls of arms shipments from the UK. [129849]

Mr. MacShane: I have been asked to reply.

The Government have a system for the post-export monitoring of UK-origin arms. Where there is a case of diversion or fraud by a private individual, we look to co-operate with the authorities of friendly countries to bring the perpetrators to justice. Legal assistance treaties are of little use in cases of alleged misuse by Governments.

Export Licences

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the export licences that have been granted to Royal Ordnance for the export of TNT to the USA in the past three years. [129284]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 15 September 2003]: A list of all UK export licences is published in the Annual Report on Strategic Export Controls. However, details of export licence applications from particular companies are normally commercially confidential and exempt from disclosure under categories 13 and 14 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Gangmasters

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to introduce a system of registration for gangmasters to ensure minimum standards of health and safety training for the staff they provide. [124890]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have been asked to reply.

The Government are working with organisations and businesses in the food chain to draw up a code of practice for gangmasters in the agriculture and fresh produce sectors and to devise a system of accreditation gangmasters who abide by this standard. The aim is to test whether a voluntary accreditation scheme combined with a readiness by businesses in the food chain to use accredited labour can achieve an improvement in employment practices in the sector. The option of a statutory registration requirement has not been ruled out if the accreditation approach proves insufficient. The proposed code of practice and the standard it will set would be a key element in either approach.

Higgs Review

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps her Department has taken to implement the findings of the Higgs review of the role and effectiveness of non-executive directors. [129916]

Jacqui Smith: The Government warmly welcomed the Higgs Review. The majority of the recommendations of the Review were for changes to the Combined Code. The Code is the responsibility of the Financial Reporting Council, which published a revised Code on 23 July this year. The Government believe that this will provide a clear and robust framework to improve the performance of boards and increase investor confidence.

Following the Higgs Review, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State asked Professor Laura Tyson, Dean of the London Business School, to consider how a broader range of non-executives might be identified and recruited in order to improve board effectiveness. Laura Tyson's report was published on 19 June. The Department of Trade and Industry s currently engaging with various stakeholders in order to take forward Professor Tyson's recommendations.

The Higgs Review also recommended the development of guidance on directors' and officers' insurance. The Institute of Chartered Secretaries and Administrators are currently developing this.

IT Security

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps she has taken to review the security of the Department's IT system; and how many digital attacks there were on the Department's system in the last six months. [129507]

Ms Hewitt: All DTI IT systems are designed in accordance with HMG IT security policy.

The core Department's internal IT system undergoes a regular cycle of security testing in line with its security policy. In addition, the processes and procedures of those parts of the Department responsible for overseeing its IT services are subjected to six monthly independent audit as part of our certification of compliance with BS 7799 Part 2.

During the past six months, one attempted digital attack was identified which failed.

Nanotechnology

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assistance is given to companies researching nanotechnology; what proposals she has to increase its use in British industry; and if she will make a statement on (a) its future and (b) the improvements it can bring. [129153]

Ms Hewitt: Support for nanotechnology research and training in excess of £125 million over the last six years has been provided by OST, via the Research Councils, to UK universities. This has laid a solid foundation for future commercial investment and exploitation. The SBS "Smart" Scheme has helped many small companies, including university spin-outs, to develop their ideas from this technology. Other initiatives, for example the LINK Basic Technologies for Industrial Applications R&D programme, and other LINK programmes in the electronics, IT, chemicals, materials, and biotechnology sectors; although not dedicated to nanotechnology, have also supported projects that enable UK companies to collaborate with universities and commercially exploit this technology.

On 2 July my noble Friend the Minister of State for Science and Innovation announced a £90 million programme over the next six years to help industry harness the commercial opportunities offered by nanotechnology. My Department is partnering with the Regional Development Agencies and Devolved Administrations to facilitate regional investment in facilities.

Ofgem

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions she has had with Ofgem following their announcement of the possible shortfall in the Roc fund; what measures (a) are being taken and (b) are planned to avoid a shortfall; and what assessment she has made of the impact of this announcement upon the renewables industry. [128870]

Mr. Timms: My officials are discussing the possible shortfall with Ofgem, and with representatives from the renewables industry. Since the extent of any possible shortfall will not be clear until 1 October, it is too early at this stage to assess the impact on the renewables market or to propose measures to address the possible shortfall or to avoid the problem recurring in the future.

In the interim, Ofgem are in communication with the administrators over compliance with the Renewables Obligation.

Productivity Gap

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action she is taking to close the productivity gap with other European Union countries. [128204]

Ms Hewitt: Today my Department publishes its strategy, setting out our priorities for the next five years to narrow the productivity gap with our competitors, including those in the EU. A copy of the strategy has been placed in the Libraries of the House, along with a companion paper setting out the analysis on which the strategy has been built.

The Strategy focuses on practical action where the Department can have the greatest impact:

helping business to access the knowledge and ideas it needs to innovate;

encouraging employers and employees to improve their skills and create more productive, high performing workplaces;

ensuring the right frameworks exist so that markets are open and fair at home and overseas;

ensuring that all regions are able to fulfil their economic potential.

DTI will work in close partnership with its stakeholders, customers and other policy makers to achieve these aims.

Red Tape

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment her Department has made of the number of jobs that have been lost to the British economy as a result of regulations on business introduced since May 1997; and if she will make a statement. [129390]

Ms Hewitt: Since 1997 over 1.5 million jobs have been created within the British economy and the number of people in employment is currently at 27.92 million, the highest since records began in 1984. The claimant count rate of unemployment benefits is the lowest for 27 years.

A Regulatory Impact Assessment is produced for all regulations that have a cost to or benefit for business as part of the policy development process. These are prepared in consultation with industry and the Small Business Service.

Safeway

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she will make an announcement on the proposed takeover bids for the Safeway chain of supermarkets. [129394]

Ms Hewitt: I will announce my decision on the proposed acquisition of Safeway alongside publication of the Competition Commission report. The administrative target for publication of this report is within 30 working days of its receipt from the Competition Commission. As the report was received on 18 August 2003, our aim is to publish by 30 September 2003.

Skills Shortages

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate her Department has made of the annual cost to British businesses, in terms of extra training and lost productivity, of basic skills shortages in the workforce. [129391]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I have been asked to reply.

There is robust evidence that poor literacy and numeracy skills have adverse effects on the earnings and employment prospects of individuals.

However there is limited evidence on the cost to British businesses of basic skill shortages in the workforce.

One 1992 study that attempted to quantify the costs to employers of poor basic skills suggested that they were costing companies employing over 50 workers an average of £165,000 a year and for the largest companies (with over 1,000 employees) the costs could be as high as £500,000 per year (equivalent to £208,000 and £626,000 in 2002 prices).

Based on this evidence, the total cost to UK businesses (employing over 50 workers) of poor basic skill levels was estimated to be in the region of £4.8 billion pounds per annum (£6 billion in 2002 prices).

These costs are likely to be underestimated, as they do not account for costs associated with lost future business, the need for additional training because staff may be unable to cope with written material, the cost of work that needs to be re-done or the costs incurred by firms with 50 or fewer employees.

The influential report "Improving Literacy and Numeracy: A Fresh Start" by Sir Claus Moser highlighted further analysis based on this 1992 research study. It suggested that the impact of poor basic skills on the UK economy as a whole could be as high as £10 billion per annum (in 1999 prices).

Stock Exchanges

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the potential establishment of regional and local stock exchange bourses for small and medium sized enterprises. [129392]

Nigel Griffiths: Proposals were published by the independent Centre for the Study of Financial Innovation in 2000. I understand that Advantage West Midlands have been developing these ideas, and I have asked for a copy of their proposal.

I am determined to ensure that all UK companies have access to the finance they need to expand with viable products and services, and the DTI has a number of programmes to assist with this.

World Trade Organisation

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which (a) Ministers and (b) civil servants will be attending the Cancun conference in September; and if she will make a statement. [128781]

Ms Hewitt: My right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, and the Secretary of State for International Development, and my hon. Friend the Minister of State for International Trade, Investment and Foreign Affairs and myself attended the Cancun conference.

We were supported by a total of 32 civil servants from Department of Trade and Industry, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, Department for International Development and Her Majesty's Treasury. Each Department was able to deploy its expertise during discussions on the various trade and development issues contained in the Doha Development Agenda.

I refer the hon. Gentleman to my oral statement to the House earlier today.

Tom Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions she is having with member states of the European Union on the trade policies that will be presented at the World Trade Organisation conference in Mexico in September; and if she will make a statement. [127166]

Ms Hewitt: I hold regular discussions with European Union member states on issues relating to the current World Trade Organisation Round. These continued during the conference itself.

I refer the hon. Gentleman to my oral statement to the House earlier today.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions she has had with (a) ministerial colleagues, (b) NGOs and (c) member states of the European Union on (i) policies and (ii) objectives to be presented at the World Trade Organisation conference in Mexico; and if she will make a statement. [128779]

Ms Hewitt: I have had regular discussions with my ministerial colleagues, NGOs and member states of the European Union on our objectives for the 5th World Trade Organisational Ministerial conference in Cancun. These discussions continued during the conference.

I refer the hon. Gentleman to my oral statement to the House earlier today.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the Government's objectives for the Fifth WTO Ministerial Conference in Cancún. [127598]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 8 September 2003]: Our main objective for Cancun was to work for a successful outcome to the current round of world trade negotiations that benefits industrialised and developing countries alike. In particular to: (i) secure an ambitious framework for an agreement on agriculture, where the EU has shown its commitment to the Round in agreeing historic changes to the CAP; (ii) press for progress on reducing non-agricultural tariffs, increasing services liberalisation and agreeing special and differential treatment for developing countries. I refer the hon. Gentleman to my oral statement to the House earlier today.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Duty of Care

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what action her Department is taking to assist small businesses with the implementation of the Duty of Care Regulations; and if she will make a statement. [128692]

Mr. Morley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has issued a code of practice under section 34(7) of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. The purpose of the code of practice is to provide practical guidance to those subject to the duty of care, including small businesses, on how to discharge their obligations under the duty. The code of practice and an explanatory leaflet are available on the Department's website at: http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/waste/management/doc/index.htm

Radioactive Material

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many sites in the United Kingdom specialise in the disposal of radioactive materials. [128106]

Mr. Morley: Disposal of radioactive waste in the UK is regulated by the Environment Agency in England and Wales, the Environment and Heritage Service of the Department of the Environment in Northern Ireland and the Scottish Environment Protection Agency in Scotland.

BNFL's Drigg site in Cumbria specialises in the disposal of low-level solid radioactive waste from Sellafield and other UK sites. Around 850 sites in England and Wales are authorised to dispose of low and very low-level radioactive waste under the Radioactive Substances Act 1993.

Abandoned Vehicles

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what initiatives her Department has introduced since 1997 to tackle the problems of abandoned cars. [129695]

Mr. Morley: Since its creation in June 2001, Defra introduced on 9 April 2002 regulations reducing the statutory notice periods after which local authorities can remove abandoned vehicles from the highway. Local authorities can now remove those vehicles that they consider merit destruction from the highway after the expiry of a 24 hour notice placed on them.

Defra is consulting on a proposal to reduce the statutory notice period whereby a landowner can object to the removal of a vehicle(s) abandoned on their land. The consultation closes on 24 October. We aim to introduce a Regulation in the new year to amend the Removal and Disposal of Vehicles Regulations 1986.

Animal Movements

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has received on the proposed amendments to the EU maximum hours for movement of animals. [128387]

Mr. Bradshaw: The European Commission published proposals for new rules on animal welfare during transport on 16 July. On 17 July Defra launched a public consultation asking for the views of interested organisations. The consultation period ends on 8 October, after which copies of the responses will be made publicly available in accordance with Defra's policy of openness. Meetings will be held with interested organisations as part of the consultation process.

Bovine TB

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on levels of cases of bovine TB. [129496]

Mr. Bradshaw: In the period January to July 2003, there were just over 2,100[1] new bovine tuberculosis (TB) incidents in Great Britain. This represents an increase of approximately 2 per cent. over the same period in 2002 when 2,065 new incidents were recorded. To date, just over 1,000[1] of the new incidents recorded in 2003 have been confirmed, 840[1] are unconfirmed and just under 260[1] remain unclassified pending the results of tissue culture tests.

Defra is working hard to address the problem of bovine TB, and last year we spent £72 million on a programme of public health protection measures, cattle testing, cattle controls and extensive research. In February this year, we announced a review of the current TB control regime. We expect to consult on proposals for a long-term TB strategy for GB, and on short-term policy options, later this year.

[1] Provisional figures - subject to change as outstanding TB test and culture results become available.

Notes:

The TB testing and control programme was severely disrupted during the foot and mouth disease (FMD) outbreak in 2001. Since testing resumed in 2002, resources have been concentrated on herds with overdue tests which would have had a longer period in which to contract the disease. Also, the proportion of high risk herds being tested post-FMD is greater than that prior to the outbreak. As result, the number of TB breakdowns being recorded post-FMD is not comparable to that prior to the FMD outbreak.

Carbon Savings

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether she estimates that the Government are on target to achieve carbon savings of 5 million tonnes by 2010. [129850]

Mr. Morley: The UK's target under the Kyoto Protocol is to reduce emissions of a basket of six greenhouse gases by 12.5 per cent. below base year levels by 2008–12. We estimate that this will equate to a reduction in emissions of around 26 MtC (million tonnes of carbon equivalent) by 2008–12. The UK's domestic target, to reduce emissions of carbon dioxide by 20 per cent. below 1990 levels by 2010, is estimated to equate to a reduction of about 33 MtC by 2010.

Data for emissions of the basket of six greenhouse gases for 2001, submitted to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC) in April 2003, show that emissions fell by 12.3 per cent., or 26 MtC, between the base year and 2001. Emissions of carbon dioxide fell by 5.3 per cent., or 9 MtC. Provisional data for 2002 show that total emissions fell by 14–15 per cent. between the base year and 2002, and carbon dioxide emissions fell by 8–9 per cent.

Progress that we have made to date and our latest projections to 2010 contained in the UK's Third National Communication to the UNFCCC indicate that we are well on course to meet our Kyoto commitment. This conclusion is supported by a recent independent assessment by the UNFCCC.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Department's strategy for combined heat and power will be finalised. [129851]

Mr. Morley: In keeping with the commitment made in the Energy White Paper published in February 2003, the Government will issue the final version of the Combined Heat and Power Strategy later this year. The Strategy will detail the measures we believe will help us achieve our challenging target of 10,000 MW of installed Good Quality CHP by 2010, incorporating the new support measures for CHP announced in the Energy White Paper.

Committee on Radioactive Waste Management

Dr. Jack Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what method she has adopted to determine membership of the Committee on Radioactive Waste Management; how many appointments have been made; if she will list those people already confirmed as members of the committee; and if she will make a statement. [129530]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 15 September 2003]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State in a reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Dunfermline, West (Rachel Squire), on 16 July 2003, Official Report, columns 318–19W, stated we had advertised in March for Members of the Committee on Radioactive Waste Management, had received over 400 applications, and had appointed Katharine Bryan as Chair; Mrs. Bryan would help select the remaining members. We have since carried out interviews for the remaining posts and we shall make an announcement once the appointments have been agreed with the Devolved Administrations. Our method is to select candidates according to the criteria we published in March and following the Code of Practice of the Office for the Commissioner of Public Appointments, including the use of an independent assessor on the selection panel.

Conservation Sites

Paddy Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what discussions have taken place with the Countryside Agency about the assessment of European sites designated under the Conservation (Natural Habitats Act etc) Regulations 1994; and whether sites in the south-east and central southern regions will be assessed before the commencement of access arising from the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 in the summer of 2004; [130427]

(2) what information the Countryside Agency has received from English Nature to enable it to make appropriate assessments of European sites in the south-east and central southern regions of England under the Conservation (Natural Habitats Act etc) Regulations 1994; when the information was received; and when the assessments will be completed. [130428]

Alun Michael: The Countryside Agency has worked closely with English Nature to adopt an agreed approach in relation to nature conservation and access land. This is embodied in a heads of agreement signed between the agency and English Nature on 10 July 2000, in which both organisations agreed to work together to facilitate improved access and safeguard nature conservation interests.

The agency and English Nature have agreed a detailed process to assess European sites designated under the Conservation (Natural Habitats Act etc.) Regulations 1994.

English Nature has undertaken audits of all European sites designated under these regulations in the south-east and central southern mapping areas and has provided advice to the agency, in July 2001 and February 2003, on 99 sites which contain features that are potentially vulnerable to public access under the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000.

The agency will complete the assessments for these sites before access commences in these two mapping areas.

Correspondence

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will reply to the letters from the hon. Member for Broxbourne of (a) 18 June, (b) 15 July, (c) 13 August and (d) 9 September relating to the contents of an article in the Sunday Telegraph dated 15 June, raised by one of her constituents. [129831]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 15 September 2003]: I replied to the hon. Member's letters of 18 June and 13 August on 9 September.

Unfortunately, the Department has no record of receiving the hon. Member's letters of 15 July or 9 September. If the hon. Member will supply me with copies of her letters I shall ensure that they are dealt with speedily.

EU Legislation

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what further statutory responsibilities for collection and disposal will be placed upon local authorities as part of the implementation of the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive. [128371]

Mr. Morley: The Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment (WEEE) Directive does not place direct responsibilities on local authorities for the collection and disposal of WEEE, but on producers and distributors. The Government are preparing the UK implementation of the Directive and are discussing with local authorities how best to involve them in maximising use of the existing waste collection infrastructure. Options for implementation will be presented in the next round of consultation, due to be published in the late autumn.

Fishing Fleets

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to compensate for any virement of moneys under the Objective One fisheries programme transferring financial aid for decommissioning to other sectors of the programme following her earlier announcement denying access to the English Decommissioning Scheme for vessels outside of the North Sea; and if she will make a statement. [129415]

Mr. Bradshaw: Whether decommissioning grant for fishing vessels is available in Cornwall under the EU structural fund for fisheries (FIFO) is determined by the Cornish Objective One programme monitoring committee. I understand that on the advice of the programme's fisheries representatives the decision has been taken not to plan for expenditure on decommissioning for the remainder of the 2000 06 structural funds programme, in order to provide funding for strategic projects to which they give priority.

The Government have made no decision to make other funds available for the decommissioning of vessels in the south-west fleet.

Flood Prevention

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress has been made with regard to pre-feasibility studies to identify options for the alleviation of flooding in Medmenham and Marlow. [128952]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 11 September 2003]: As part of a more extensive study in Medmenham, consultants to the Environment Agency are currently modelling various different options for reducing flood risk. This has taken longer than anticipated due to problems with the modelling, however, the pre-feasibility report will be concluded by the end of October 2003.

The Environment Agency is undertaking two pre-feasibility studies that are considering possible flood alleviation options for the Pound Lane and Firview Close areas of Marlow. The first study is due to be completed by the end of September and the second is due for completion in October 2003.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment has taken place of each area along the River Thames that has been designated as (a) flood plain and (b) at a high risk of flooding; and if she will make a statement. [128783]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency's Indicative Floodplain Map provides a general overview of areas of land in natural floodplains and, therefore, that are potentially at risk of flooding from rivers or the sea. The maps are created using the best available information, and are based on historical flood records and computer models. The Agency's Thames Region is able to answer queries relating to the source of the floodplain outline in a particular area. Data are available for the River Thames and all other main river catchments.

The Department's Flood Management High Level Target 5 requires operating authorities to make an overall assessment of the risk of flooding. The Environment Agency's Risk Assessment for Strategic Planning (RASP), combines information on the defence system, the Indicative Floodplain Map and the topography, to give an indication of the category of flood risk in a local area. The data are to be used by the Agency for national monitoring of risk from flooding; strategic prioritisation of investment in defence improvements or other flood management options (e.g. increased storage or diversion); targeting flood warning and emergency response; and highlighting priorities for monitoring and maintenance. The RASP outputs have been supplied to the Association of British Insurers and can be made available to individuals on request. The Agency is planning on being able to put this information on their website by September 2004.

Fluoridation

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research her Department has conducted into the effects of adding fluoride to water supplies; what recent meetings she has had with colleagues and others on the issue; and if she will make a statement. [128677]

Mr. Morley: The Government's public health advisers are the Department of Health who are responsible for water fluoridation policy. The national health service Centre for Reviews and Dissemination at the University of York published its Report, "A Systematic Review of Water Fluoridation", in September 2000. In keeping with comments in the Report that there was a need for more good quality research, the Department of Health commissioned the Medical Research Centre (MRC) to advise on how the evidence base might be strengthened. Its Report was published in September 2002. The Chief Medical Officer and the Chief Dental Officer were asked to examine these recent recommendations and to report on the implications for Government policy. Their Report is expected during the autumn. DoH have also commissioned a research study on the bio-availability (absorption) of fluoride.

There has been regular inter-departmental liaison between Defra and Department of Health Ministers and officials about amendments that have been included in the Water Bill to the water fluoridation provisions in the Water Industry Act 1991. The amendments were considered by Committee of the whole House of Lords on 9 July and we anticipate that water fluoridation will be considered in Committee in the House of Commons on 21 October. On the Government side there will be a free vote.

Gangmasters (Code of Practice)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she plans to publish a code of practice for gangmasters; what subjects it will cover; what legal status it will have; and which bodies will be consulted on it prior to publication. [129771]

Mr. Bradshaw: Work is currently going on to draw up a code of practice for gangmasters operating in the agriculture and fresh produce sectors, covering best practice in employing people and supplying labour to other businesses. The intention is that it should cover a range of issues relevant to employment and labour supply, such as health and safety, minimum wages, working hours, entitlement to work and VAT registration. Plans are being prepared to trial the draft code of practice on a voluntary basis with a number of gangmasters and businesses using gang labour during the autumn. Decisions on publication of the code and on its legal status will be taken in the light of this trial. A range of bodies and individual businesses, representing farmers, farm workers, packhouses, retailers and gangmasters, and the Ethical Trading Initiative are working in partnership with Government to develop and pilot the Code of Practice. Further bodies will be consulted once a draft version of the Code is available.

GM Birdseed

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what evidence she has that GM birdseed has been released into the UK environment and on what scale; what procedures are in place or planned to separate out GM lines in (a) canary seed, (b) linseed, (c) millet and (d) rape seed mixes that are imported; and what action she is taking to prosecute those who illegally contaminate the UK environment. [129757]

Mr. Morley: I have no evidence that any GM seeds are being sold as bird-seed in the UK.

The seeds of canary-grass, linseed, millet and oilseed rape are frequently sold as food for wild birds. However at the present time no GM varieties of these plants are permitted for this use. It is the responsibility of the supplier to comply with regulations on marketing of genetically modified organisms. One type of GM rape seed has authorisation for import into the European Union as grain, however it must be crushed and processed so cannot be used as whole grain in bird seed mixes.

We understand that oilseed rape used in UK bird seed mixes is typically sourced in the UK where no GM varieties are permitted for commercial cultivation.

If we were to become aware through existing inspection procedures that an importer was in breach of the law, we would consider prosecution.

GM Foods

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her discussions with the chief executive officers of ASDA, Tesco, Sainsbury and Safeway on 16 July regarding GM foods; and what plans she has to meet the chief executive officers of Marks and Spencer and Waitrose on this issue. [128868]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 11 September 2003]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State met with the CEOs of ASDA, Tesco, Sainsbury and Safeway, the four largest supermarket chains, in a listening capacity, in particular to hear their views as part of the public dialogue on GM issues. During the course of discussion, she emphasised the Government's support for proportional and workable measures for the mandatory traceability and labelling of GM foods and crops.

The interests of other retailers, including those of Marks and Spencer and Waitrose, were represented at the meeting by the Director General of the British Retail Consortium.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions her Department has had with the European Commission to ensure that GM foods are labelled and traceable. [130096]

Mr. Morley: The Department, working closely with the Food Standards Agency, has had regular discussions with the Commission and other EU partners on this issue, both at official and ministerial level. Most recently these discussions have taken place in the context of negotiating the new EC Regulation on the traceability and labelling of GM products that was agreed in July 2003.

LANTRA

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list those industries which constitute the representative role of LANTRA; and what plans there are to include additional industries. [130591]

Alun Michael: Lantra represents the following 17 industries:

agricultural crops;
agricultural livestock;
animal care;
animal technology;
acquaculture;
environmental conservation;
equine;
farriery;
fencing;
fisheries management;
floristry;
game conservation;
land-based engineering;
landscaping;
production horticulture;
trees and timber; and veterinary nursing.

Any proposals to extend coverage would be for discussion between Lantra and the Sector Skills Development Agency. Lantra has assured Ministers that it fully appreciates the importance to link to the work of other similar agencies to make sure that the needs of the diverse rural economy and communities are met. Discussions are currently taking place between Lantra, the Sector Skills Development Agency and this Department about a role for Lantra in coordinating the work of Sector Skills Councils with significant interests in rural areas.

Livestock Disposal

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effects of the on-farm burial ban; and if she will make a statement. [129789]

Mr. Bradshaw: No formal assessment has been made, although clearly the ban will have an impact on those farmers who had previously buried fallen stock on farm. That is why the Government have announced they are setting up a low cost voluntary national fallen stock scheme in conjunction with the livestock industry to assist farmers in adapting to the new requirements for disposal of fallen stock.

In the interim, the Fallen Stock helpline on 0845 8507070 can give advice to farmers on collection services in their area to enable them to dispose of their fallen stock now.

Royal Mail Deliveries

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate the Government have made of the change in CO_2 emissions arising from Royal Mail's decision to move mail from rail to road. [124150]

Mr. Morley: The Government have made no estimate of the impact on CO_2 emissions of Royal Mail's decision, which is a commercial and economic one for the Royal Mail to make. The Government encourage all businesses to adopt strategies that reduce emissions overall.

Rural Development Fund

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects to propose detailed provisions on rural development fund payments and their application to tenant farmers. [R] [129635]

Alun Michael: The England Rural Development Programme was established in 2000 and measures under it are available to all farmers, including tenant farmers, on the same terms. Because the Government were keen to ensure that tenants are not disadvantaged in applying for farm diversification or agri-environment schemes, we asked the Tenancy Reform Industry Group to consider this issue. This group, which included representatives from all key industry stakeholder organisations, published its report in June 2003. TRIG has proposed a comprehensive package of legislative, fiscal and other changes that are intended to ensure both landlord and tenant have more flexibility to deal with the long-term nature of rural land management. These recommendations have the support of all TRIG members.

TRIG did not find sufficient evidence to warrant recommending a change to agricultural tenancy legislation to give tenants a greater ability to diversify or participate in agri-environment schemes. However, they have proposed that a new Code of Good Practice should be drawn up to help avoid disputes between landlords and tenants on consent for diversification into non-agricultural activities. The Group also recommended that if, after a period of years the Code of Good Practice was not seen to be working and there is evidence to show that the legislation is acting as a barrier to diversification, legislative change should be considered.

The Government's formal response to the Group's report has not yet been published. However we have asked TRIG to take work on a Code of Good Practice forward and a small working group will be working on this over the autumn.

Softwood

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what controls

there are on the import of softwoods into the United Kingdom to ensure that they originate from sustainable forests. [129661]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 15 September 2003]: The UK Government support sustainable forest management and are committed to tackling illegal logging and its associated trade.

Under EU law, import controls on illegally logged timber, can only be imposed at EU level. We are therefore working actively within the EU, where this is now being considered. The Government have shown leadership in their strong encouragement of the European Forest Law Enforcement, Governance and Trade (FLEGT) process. The European Commission published a proposed FLEGT action plan on 21 May 2003. The plan includes a proposal to draft a new EU regulation to address imports of illegally logged timber in a way that is consistent with EU obligations to the World Trade Organisation.

The FLEGT action plan deals only with legality. The EU's wider objective is to encourage sustainable forest management. Since in many countries forest legislation is based on the premise of sustainable forest management, better law enforcement will in general lead to more sustainable forest management. Where this is not the case, the Commission propose that the EU should encourage a review of the legal framework.

The UK Government are working with other member states to ensure favourable Council conclusions inviting the Commission to proceed with this work as soon as possible.

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what records the Government have of United Kingdom softwood timber prices in (a) 1999, (b) 2000, (c) 2001 and (d) 2002. [129663]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 15 September 2003]: Average prices for softwood standing sales in Great Britain are presented in the table.

Financial year	Average price per cubic metre (£)
1999–2000	8.72
2000–01	8.15
2001–02	7.52
2002–03	5.74

Note:
The figures are taken from sales of standing timber on Forestry Commission land.

Waste Disposal

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the choice of waste disposal method by (a) waste disposal authorities and (b) businesses in the event of the introduction of an incinerator tax on the same basis as the landfill tax. [129253]

Mr. Morley: No assessment has been made. In this year's Budget, the Chancellor stated that a review of the environmental and health effects of all waste management and disposal options had been commissioned. The review has yet to be completed but we aim to report on its findings later in the year. The case for using economic instruments for incineration will be considered in light of this work, and in consultation with other stakeholders.

Water Pollution

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the problems caused by delays in enforcement action being taken against (a) companies and (b) households discharging pollutants into waterways. [129869]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency (the Agency) has powers to ensure that preventative or remedial action is taken to protect the environment or to secure compliance with relevant legislation such as the Water Resources Act 1991 (as amended by the Environment Act 1995), which makes provision regarding discharges to controlled waters. The enforcement action taken by the Agency will be proportionate to the risks posed to the environment and to the seriousness of any breach of the law. The Agency's powers for prosecution are used when it is satisfied that there is sufficient, admissible and reliable evidence that the offence has been committed and that there is a realistic prospect of conviction.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Criminal Justice and Trial Units

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Solicitor-General what percentage of (a) magistrates' court cases and (b) Crown Court cases were dealt with by joint police and Crown Prosecution Service criminal justice units and trials units in 2002–03. [128715]

The Solicitor-General: By the end of 2002–03, 43.4 per cent. of the Crown Prosecution Service's magistrates' court caseload and 27.6 per cent. of its Crown Court caseload were dealt with in collocated Criminal Justice Units and Trial Units.

Crown Prosecution Service

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Solicitor-General in what ways the CPS is contributing to the CJS Case Preparation Project to reform case management in (a) magistrates' courts and (b) the Crown Court. [128725]

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) is actively supporting this Project, and has been closely involved in its development. At a local level, CPS practitioners are playing a key role in local implementation teams at each of the five pilot sites, and on the Local Criminal Justice Boards responsible for overseeing the delivery of the pilots. At a national level, the CPS has two senior representatives on the project board, and others on the national stakeholder machinery. The CPS has also seconded a senior prosecutor to the project team who is leading the 'production' strand of the project.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Solicitor-General what targets were set by the CPS in 2002–03 on (a) the presentation in court of prosecution cases, (b) the testing of defence cases and (c) complying with the duties of disclosure; and what the performance results are of these targets. [128718]

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) set a target in 2002–03 for Higher Court Advocates (HCAs) to undertake a minimum amount of advocacy in the Crown Court. The total national requirement was for HCAs to undertake 8,620 sessions; the outturn was 7,217 sessions or 83.7 per cent. No other targets were set in relation to the presentation of prosecution cases in court.

The CPS did not set any target in relation to testing the defence case.

The CPS does not set a target for compliance with disclosure requirements, but performance is monitored by Her Majesty's CPS Inspectorate (HMCPSI) as part of their regular cycle of inspections. The latest published annual data from HMCPSI, for 2001–02, shows that the percentage of cases where primary disclosure was handled properly was 80.4 per cent. and for secondary disclosure it was 75.3 per cent. From 1 April 2003, the CPS has been undertaking formal monitoring of performance on disclosure as part its internal Casework Quality Assurance programme.

Director of Public Prosecutions

Norman Baker: To ask the Solicitor-General (1) if she will list the (a) Ministers, (b) civil servants and (c) members of the judiciary consulted as part of the selection process which resulted in the appointment of Mr. Ken Macdonald QC as Director of Public Prosecutions. [129242]

(2) if she will make a statement on the appointment of Mr. Ken Macdonald QC as Director of Public Prosecutions; [129244]

(3) if he will list the members of the panels which (a) interviewed and (b) selected Mr. Ken Macdonald QC for the position of Director of Public Prosecutions. [129243]

The Solicitor-General: The appointment of Mr. Ken Macdonald QC as Director of Public Prosecutions was made following a process of fair and open competition.

Advertisements were placed in the national media and legal journals and, as part of the search process, a number of civil servants and members of the judiciary were approached in order to identify suitable candidates.

The selection panel was chaired by the independent First Civil Service Commissioner Baroness Prashar. The other members of the selection panel were Sir Hayden Phillips, Permanent Secretary at the Department for Constitutional Affairs, Sir David Omand, Permanent Secretary, Cabinet Office; and Sir Robin Auld, Lord Justice of Appeal. Ken Macdonald QC was recommended for appointment by the panel to the Attorney-General. No other Ministers, civil servants or members of the judiciary, apart from a referee nominated on a confidential basis by Mr. Macdonald, were consulted as part of this process.

In line with normal practice, the Attorney-General informed the Prime Minister's office that he intended to appoint Ken Macdonald.

Sports Events

Nick Harvey: To ask the Solicitor-General how many (a) prosecutions and (b) resulting convictions there have been arising from circumstances at British sports events in each of the last 10 years, broken down by type of (i) sport and (ii) offence. [129686]

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) does not keep data on prosecutions or convictions arising out of incidents at British sports events. Any data that might be kept by operational units at the CPS could be obtained only by examination of live and concluded case files at disproportionate cost.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Advertising (Children)

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what figures her Department has collated on the (a) proportion of advertising during children's television scheduling that involves marketing of food products and (b) proportion of food advertising during children's television scheduling that involves promotion of food of low nutritional value. [129645]

Estelle Morris: The Department has not undertaken research on food advertising during children's television scheduling. However, figures relating to this issue have been provided to the Department by my hon. Friend the Member for Stourbridge and others.

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions her Department has had in the last 12 months with the Department of Health on the issue of food and drink advertising to children. [129646]

Estelle Morris: The Department has had limited discussions with the Department of Health regarding this issue over the last 12 months, in the context of broadcast advertising, but will be represented at the forthcoming meeting of the Department of Health's Food and Health Action Plan Steering Group. The Department is fully supportive of Government initiatives to tackle the problem of child obesity and is working closely with the Department of Health and the Department for Education and Skills on these as well as developing its own health initiatives relating to increased physical activity, particularly in children.

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations she has received in the last 12 months on the issue of food and drink advertising to children from (a) the advertising industry, (b) the food and drink industry and (c) organisations concerned with providing public health. [129647]

Estelle Morris: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not received any formal representations from the advertising industry on the issue of food and drink advertising to children, but is aware of the industry's views. The Department has also had informal discussions with the food and drink industry regarding the European Commission's consideration of proposals on broadcast advertising. In May 2003, the Secretary of State met my hon. Friend the Member for Stourbridge and representatives of several public health promotion organisations to discuss this matter.

Films (North-east England)

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps her Department is taking to promote film tourism in the North East of England. [130390]

Mr. Caborn: VisitBritain is funded by the Department to market Britain overseas and England to the domestic market. VisitBritain's movie map campaign and website have run continuously since 1996. Three sites in the North East where scenes from Elizabeth were filmed are featured: Alnwick Castle and Bamburgh Beach in Northumberland and Durham Cathedral. The map also features Newcastle where the films Purely Belter and The One and Only were set, Hulne Priory in Northumberland which appears in Robin Hood—Prince of Thieves, and Easington where Billy Elliott was filmed. Alnwick Castle, and the wealth of other attractions in its vicinity, is also featured in VisitBritain's 'The Magic of Britain' campaign which promotes Britain through the Harry Potter series of films. Future plans include building on the new Russell Crowe film Master and Commander in VisitBritain's 'SeaBritain 2005' campaign which, among other nautical and maritime locations, will feature HMS Trincomalee in Hartlepool.

Parliamentary Questions

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many Questions directed to her remain unanswered. [130761]

Mr. Caborn: 24 written parliamentary questions tabled to the Department for Culture, Media and Sport for answer up to and including Monday 15 September 2003 remain unanswered. This includes 21 ordinary written questions tabled to the Department between 9–12 September.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Burma

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the relationship between his Department and the Burmese Government; and what recent discussions they have had about (a) the arrest of Aung San Suu Kyi and (b) human rights abuses against minority groups. [130300]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The UK has made numerous representations to the Burmese authorities concerning the arrest of Daw Aung San Suu Kyi. I personally have spoken to the Burmese Deputy Foreign Minister and most recently the Burmese ambassador on 1 September, to register the UK's grave concern over the unacceptable violence and repression that has been inspired, organised and carried out by the military regime. This has been supplemented by representations by the British embassy in Rangoon who have been instrumental in pressing for and supporting demarches to the Burmese regime, including on human rights abuses against the ethnic groups.

International Student Visas

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many international student visas are issued each year. [129424]

Mr. Mullin: The table shows the number of student visas issued worldwide each year since 1998. Since 2001, statistics have been collated by financial year (1 April to 31 March) rather than calendar year.

	Student visas issued
1998	69,607
1999	75,607
2000	99,559
FY 2001–02	121,466
FY 2002–03	120,888

Afghanistan

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many ministerial visits have been made to Afghanistan in the last six months. [129464]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: There have been two ministerial visits to Afghanistan in the last six months. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary visited between 30 June and 1 July, followed by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Mr. Rammell) between 22 and 27 July.

Algeria

Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the European Parliament concerning human rights violations in Algeria under the European Union Algeria Association Agreement; and what plans he has to introduce measures to increase the level of aid to that country. [130616]

Mr. MacShane: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has not discussed with the European Parliament human rights violations in Algeria under the EU/Algeria Association Agreement. The Agreement was signed on 22 April 2002, but is not yet in force. Member states, the European Community and Algeria must all ratify the Agreement before it can come into force. When the Agreement does enter into force the EU will be in a position to monitor closely Algeria's adherence to the human rights principles laid out in the Association Agreement.

The European Parliament debated the conclusion of the EU/Algerian Association Agreement on 10 October 2002. The Parliament welcomed the plan to conclude the Agreement and hoped that the Agreement would give decisive impetus to the political and economic reforms required to improve the economic and social situation in Algeria. The European Parliament also highlighted its concerns over Algeria's human rights record.

The UK's bilateral development programme is focused on the poorest countries, particularly those of sub-Saharan Africa and South Asia. The Government have no plans to reintroduce a bilateral development programme in Algeria, which is a middle income country. Nor do we intend to press the EC to expand its development programme in the country.

Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the ratification of the EU-Algeria Association Agreement. [130617]

Mr. MacShane: The Government have initiated the process for UK ratification of the EU/Algeria Association Agreement, the text of which is contained in Command Paper 5804, laid before Parliament on 9 May 2003. I anticipate that the agreement will be debated in Parliament in this session, and that the UK's ratification procedures will be completed by February 2004. The agreement will enter into force when all parties—EU member states, the European Community and Algeria—have ratified.

China

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the treatment of Pastor Gong Shengliang, held in Jingzhou prison, Hubei Province, China. [130569]

Mr. Rammell: We have been concerned about reports that Pastor Gong Shengliang has suffered ill treatment in Jingzhou prison, Hubei Province. We supported an EU demarche on this subject in Beijing on 18 July. The Chinese authorities said that the allegations of torture and ill-treatment were untrue and that Pastor Gong was in good health.

We have also raised Pastor Gong's case directly with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. On 31 July the Chinese authorities told us that Pastor Gong had had stomach problems before he was imprisoned and that following treatment the problems had stabilised. His relatives have visited him four times.

Cyprus

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made about the provision of education for Greek children recently in the Turkish-occupied part of Cyprus. [129917]

Mr. MacShane: The British Government take the welfare of the Greek Cypriot community in the north of Cyprus seriously. Through our High Commission in Cyprus, and with the Turkish Cypriot authorities, the UN and the Government of Cyprus, we do what we can to ameliorate the situation.

Our High Commission is keeping a close eye on the situation concerning those students who have recently finished their primary education and are due to move to secondary education.

Nevertheless, this remains one of the many examples of the fact that Cypriots on both sides of the island suffer because of the lack so far of a comprehensive settlement in Cyprus. We are urging the parties to resume negotiations on the basis of the UN Plan, in time to allow a reunited island to accede to the EU on 1 May next year.

European Union

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many amendments were tabled by the right hon. Member for Neath (Mr. Hain) at the Convention on the Future of Europe: and how many were agreed to. [129131]

Mr. MacShane: We estimate that, excluding the reiterations of amendments tabled more than once, the UK delegation submitted 154 amendments. Many of these were technical or legal drafting amendments. Even when not accepting amendments verbatim, the Convention frequently agreed on language which met our underlying concerns in whole or in part.

For that reason, it is not possible to put a precise figure on the number of UK proposals that were agreed to. The Convention's final draft text met the majority of the UK's objectives. As the Thessaloniki Council agreed it is 'a good starting point' for the discussions between 25 European nation states which will agree the next EU constitutional treaty.

Framework Convention on Tobacco Control

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action his Department is taking, in conjunction with the Department of Health, to encourage the ratification of the Framework Convention on Tobacco Control by all EU member states. [130044]

Mr. MacShane: The UK signed the Framework Convention on Tobacco Control in June and is currently preparing to ratify the Treaty. We will be aiming to encourage early ratification by other Member States too. The ratification timetable is likely to be discussed at the Council on 1–2 December.

Iraq

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what timetable is planned for elections in Iraq. [129613]

Mr. Rammell: We believe that it should be for the Iraqi people to determine the timetable for their elections, with appropriate international help as required. A Constitutional Preparatory Committee is due to report by mid-September with recommendations on drafting a constitution, a process which we hope will reach fruition by mid-2004, with the aim that national elections would be held shortly thereafter.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made since July regarding the involvement of other international bodies in Iraq. [130042]

Mr. Rammell: The Government remain committed to a vital role for the UN in Iraq, as provided for by Security Council Resolution 1483. The Security Council is currently considering a draft resolution which would encourage further participation by the UN and the international community in assisting Iraq, including in the political processes leading to the formation of a representative government. The Secretary-General's report of 17 July (of which a copy has been placed in the Library of the House) identified further areas in which the UN could contribute to the initial effort in Iraq. The Government would support an increased UN contribution in these areas. Following the terrorist attack on the United Nations Headquarters in Baghdad on 19 August, the UN's efforts in Iraq have inevitably been scaled back. We are in discussion with the UN on the security measures needed to ensure that the UN is able to resume and expand its role in Iraq.

Since July, the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund have been active in Iraq producing first needs assessments for the reconstruction of Iraq. This in-country work was cut short by the outrage against the UN headquarters on 19 August, but finalisation of the assessments continues.

It is vital for Iraq that international NGOs continue their work on the ground. It is hoped that, as the security situation in Iraq improves, these organisations will continue with their humanitarian efforts. The Madrid Donors' Conference next month should give a significant boost to Iraq's reconstruction process.

ISAF

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with representatives of allied countries on extending the mandate of the International Security Assistance Force in Afghanistan; and if he will make a statement. [129075]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The UK has regular discussions with international partners at all levels on all matters relating to Afghanistan, including the International Security Assistance Force (ISAF). NATO took over leadership of ISAF in August 2003 and is currently engaged in a review of ISAF's role. It would be inappropriate for us to second-guess the outcome of this review and any possible effect it might have on the ISAF mandate. But any change to ISAF's role would also require amendment of its mandate through the UN.

Microsoft (Licensing Fees)

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much was paid to Microsoft in licensing fees by his Department and its agencies in each of the last three years; and how much has been budgeted for (a) 2003–04 and (b) 2004–05. [130684]

Mr. Rammell: The amounts paid by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office for Microsoft software licences over the past three years were: £0.12 million in 2000–01; £0.61 million in 2001–02; and £0.45 million in 2002–03. Projected spend for 2003–04 is £0.15 million. There is no specific budget for Microsoft software licences in 2004–05, although the overall software budget is £2.3 million.

Nepal

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in Nepal. [129465]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The collapse of the ceasefire and peace talks between the Government of Nepal and the Maoists is a very disappointing development. It heightens the risk of renewed violence and suffering in Nepal which will benefit no-one.

It remains the firm belief of the UK Government that no military solution to the conflict is possible, and we welcome the Nepalese Government's expressed willingness to continue to pursue a peaceful solution. We strongly urge all parties to return to the negotiation table, and work together to find a lasting solution.

The UK Government stand ready to provide support for a renewed peace process. UK assistance to Nepal has included a £6 million Global Conflict Prevention Pool package this year to help tackle the root causes of the conflict. The Department for International Development is providing £22 million of development assistance this financial year.

Terrorism

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what studies have been received by the United Nations Security Council Counter Terrorism Committee from (a) academic sources, (b) think-tanks and (c) experts on terrorism; and what the policy is on the availability to the general public of submissions by the United Kingdom to the UNSCCTC. [130359]

Mr. Rammell: We are not aware that any reports from academic sources, think-tanks or experts on terrorism have been formally submitted to the UN's Counter-Terrorism Committee (CTC). However, the CTC has an established body of experts advising it. In the course of their work, the Experts draw on all available sources of information to provide the most up-to-date and effective guidance to the Committee. The CTC makes available to the public all reports from member states by posting them on its official website www.un.org/sc/ctc. This includes the three reports that the United Kingdom has submitted to the CTC to date.

Uganda

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are taken at the British High Commission in Uganda to ensure fair access to the High Commission for those wishing to obtain visas for entry to the UK. [129639]

Mr. Mullin: Since October 2002, the Visa Section in Kampala has operated a same day service despite an unprecedented level of demand for visas. UK visas have allocated two extra Entry Clearance Officers to deal with this demand.

[redacted] aware of problems with the current queuing system. Applications are considered on a first come first served basis but applicants with medical conditions can make pre-arranged appointments to visit the Visa Section. The elderly, children and the infirm are also given priority.

To improve the situation, from December all applications will be submitted on paper via an outsourced courier service. Applicants will therefore not be required to visit the Visa Section to submit their applications in person.

UN Arms Embargoes

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response his Department made to the UN Panel of Experts Fowler Report on its recommendations for secondary sanctions against states that have been complicit in breaching UN arms embargoes. [129864]

Mr. Rammell: The UK supported the recommendation by the Fowler Report to place secondary sanctions against countries complicit in breaching the UN arms embargo against Angola (UNITA) (UNSCR 864(1993). But the UK recognised that there were a number of practical difficulties to overcome, not least gaining consensus amongst Security Council members that there would be sufficient proof to declare a State guilty of deliberate sanctions busting. Initially the issue was kept alive by UNSCR 1295(2000), passed subsequent to the Fowler Report on 18 April 2000. Paragraph 5 of the resolution expressed

> "its readiness . . . to consider appropriate action in accordance with the Charter in relation to States it determines to have violated the measures contained in those [ie sanctions] resolutions, and establishes 18 November 2000 as the deadline for an initial decision in this regard".

But when the Security Council considered the Monitoring Mechanism's (delayed) report in February 2001, Canada called for the Security Council to focus on imposing secondary sanctions, and did so again in November 2001; each time without success due to a lack of consensus.

United Nations Security Council

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has during the United Kingdom presidency of the United Nations Security Council to increase the transparency of the Council's activities; and whether he plans to increase public knowledge of the content and implications of UNSC resolutions. [130369]

Mr. Rammell: I presented the Government's programme of work for the UK Presidency of the UN Security Council (UNSC) during the debate on the UN held in Westminster Hall on 11 September. The Programme of Work can be viewed on the website of the UK Mission to the UN in New York www.ukun.org. Wherever possible, UNSC activities are transparent, and the UK's Presidency includes a number of open meetings. For example, there have been Open Briefings on the Middle East and on Liberia, and there will be an Open Meeting on Sierra Leone and an Open Debate on Justice and the Rule of Law.

Press statements, Presidential statements and all UNSC Resolutions are available to the public, most readily on the UN's official website www.un.org. I also refer my hon. Friend to the United Kingdom in the United Nations Command Paper (Cm 5898).

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Access to Learning Fund

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the (a) use, (b) development and (c) cost of the Access to Learning Fund. [129988]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Access to Learning Fund (ALF) is a new non-repayable discretionary Fund administered by institutions with HE students and aimed at providing additional support for those who need extra financial help to access or remain in Higher Education. Priority groups for assistance include: students with children (especially lone-parents); mature students; students from low income families; disabled students; care leavers and students from Foyers or who are homeless.

The ALF is being introduced following consultation with institutions' and students' representatives to ensure that awards are made on a consistent and transparent basis. The ALF is currently being piloted in approximately 50 institutions and subject to evaluation it is intended to be rolled out in all institutions from 2004–05.

In 2004–05 £65.5 million will be available through the Access to Learning Fund.

Adult Qualifications

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people aged (a) 19–30 and (b) over 30 in the working population have not achieved (i) a Level 2 qualification and (ii) a Level 3 qualification. [130719]

Alan Johnson: The following table shows analysis of the working population (i.e. economically active) for those aged (a) 19–30 and (b) over 30 who lack a Level 2 and Level 3 qualification. Data come from the Labour Force Survey in spring 2003 and cover England only.

	Age band 19 to 30	Percentage	Age band Over 30[1]	Percentage
Below Level 2	1,294,000	22	5,646,000	32
Below Level 3	2,629,000	44	9,234,000	53
Total work force	5,921,000	—	17,568,000	—

[1] This age band covers economically active males aged 31–64 and economically active females aged 31–59.

Apprenticeships

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the (a) current participation and (b) latest annual completion rates are for (i) foundation and (ii) advanced modern apprenticeships, broken down by proposed sector skills council areas. [129985]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Learning and Skills Council (LSC) publish work based learning participation numbers and success rates by area of learning rather than by sector. The 14 areas of learning are used by the LSC, the Adult Learning Inspectorate and Ofsted. Numbers participating on advanced modern apprenticeships (AMA) and foundation modern apprenticeships (FMA) as at 1 November 2002 by area of learning are shown in the following table.

Learners on 1 November 2002 by area of learning

000s

Area of Learning	AMA	FMA
Business administration, Management and Professional	12.1	17.9
Construction	11.3	18.1
Engineering, Technology and Manufacturing	46.9	13
English, Languages and Communication	—	—
Foundation programmes	—	—
Hairdressing and Beauty Therapy	5.2	13.9
Health, Social Care and Public Services	11.1	12.5
Hospitality, Sports, Leisure and Travel	8.9	15
Humanities	—	—
Information and Communication Technology	4.1	4.1
Land based provision	1.6	3.2
Retailing, Customer Service and Transportation	10.2	22.1
Science and Mathematics	0.2	0.1
Visual and Performing Arts and Media	0.7	0.2
Unspecified area of learning	0.9	0.8
Total	113.3	120.8

Source:
Individualised Learner Record 2002/03

Success rates by area of learning for those who left a modern apprenticeship in 2001/02 were published on 24 July, 2003 by the LSC in the Statistical First Release ISR/SFR25. These are shown in the following table.

Success rates by area of learning and programme type 2001/02

	Framework (X per cent.)	NVQ Only (Y per cent.)	Framework or NVQ (X plus y per cent.)	Total leavers numbers
Advanced Modern Apprenticeships
Business Administration Management and Professional	25	12	37	10,400
Construction	33	14	46	8,700
Engineering, Technology and Manufacturing	38	9	47	13,000
English, Languages and Communications	—	—	—	—
Hairdressing and Beauty Therapy	22	8	30	3,900
Health, Social Care and Public Services	22	13	35	7,400
Hospitality, Sports Leisure and Travel	19	6	26	8,400
Humanities	—	—	—	—
Information and Communication technology	31	9	40	1,800
Land-based provision	24	10	34	900
Other Foundation Programmes	—	—	—	—
Retailing, Customer Service and Transportation	16	9	24	10,400
Science and Maths	36	2	39	100
Visual & Performing Arts & Media	31	17	48	400
Unspecified AOL	11	11	22	100
Total	26	10	36	65,400
Foundation Modern Apprenticeships
Business Administration Management and Professional	26	11	38	15,100
Construction	24	12	36	7,100
Engineering, Technology and Manufacturing	19	13	32	6,900
English, Languages and Communications	—	—	—	—
Hairdressing and Beauty Therapy	26	11	36	7,500
Health, Social Care and Public Services	15	13	28	9,000
Hospitality, Sports Leisure and Travel	19	12	31	13,900
Humanities	—	—	—	—
Information and Communication technology	46	8	54	4,200
Land-based provision	26	15	41	2,500
Other Foundation Programmes	—	—	—	—
Retailing, Customer Service and Transportation	19	11	30	25,000
Science and Maths	—	—	—	—
Visual & Performing Arts & Media	22	15	37	100
Unspecified AOL	0	2	2	500
Total	22	11	34	91,800

Source:
Individualised Learner Record 2001/02

Data Protection

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills under what powers a county council may keep a person's P45 details on file after they have been used as part of a student loan application; and for what length of time such details may be kept. [129628]

Alan Johnson: The basis for the county council processing the P45 derives from s. 22(2)(a) of the Teaching and Higher Education Act 1998, and the relevant provision of the applicable Student Support Regulations (e.g. reg 6(3) of the Education (Student Support) (No. 2) Regulations 2002 which states:

"An applicant shall demonstrate his eligibility for support by providing such evidence as the Secretary of State may require.")

The basis for keeping a person's P45 details on file is firstly that this is a National Audit Office requirement and as such the NAO is entitled to audit the assessment and payment of loans and can request supporting documentation relating to main ledger financial transactions for a period of up to six years after after the end of the financial year in which the transaction took place. Secondly, the Limitation Act 1980, which applies to proceedings by and against the Crown, and has the effect that proceedings to recover money must be instituted within six years of the money becoming due. Evidence used for the assessment is therefore required to be retained to support or defend any such action.

1. The four main acts of parliament from which the Comptroller and Auditor General and the NAO derive their authority are:

(a) The Government Resources and Accounts Act 2000

(b) National Audit Act 1983

(c) Exchequer and Audit Departments Act 1921

(d) Exchequer and Audit Departments Act 1866

Education Funding (Buckinghamshire)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the impact of the area cost adjustment on education funding in (a) Chesham and Amersham and (b) Buckinghamshire. [129888]

Mr. Miliband: The Area Cost Adjustment provides funding top-ups for areas where it costs more to recruit and retain staff. It uses the New Earnings Survey to calculate earnings differentials between different areas in the country. A threshold is set below which all authorities are given the same area cost adjustment factor. The area cost adjustment factor for Buckinghamshire is 1.0943. It is for Buckinghamshire local education authority to decide on the distribution of funding within Buckinghamshire, in consultation with its schools.

Individual Learning Accounts

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much money has been set aside for Individual Learning Accounts for (a) 2003–04, (b) 2004–05 and (c) 2005–06. [130721]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In order to meet remaining commitments under the original ILA Programme, a budget of £8.013 million has been set aside for 2003–04. The remaining funding originally set aside for Individual Learning Accounts has been re-deployed to support the implementation of proposals set out in the White Paper '21 Century Skills: Realising our Potential' published on 9 July 2003.

Key Stage 2 (Buckinghamshire)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of 11-year-olds in (a) the Chesham and Amersham constituency and (b) Buckinghamshire have achieved Key Stage 2 in each year since 1997 in (i) maths and (ii) English. [129885]

Mr. Miliband: The percentage of pupils achieving Level 4 or above at Key Stage 2 in (a) the Chesham and Amersham constituency and (b) Buckinghamshire local education authority (LEA) from 1997 to 2003:

	Chesham and Amersham constituency	Buckinghamshire LEA	England
English
2003[1]	85	80	75
2002	86	79	75
2001	86	82	75
2000	85	81	75
1999	83	77	71
1998	78	73	65
1997	80	73	63
Mathematics
2003[1]	81	77	73
2002	82	76	73
2001	81	76	71
2000	82	76	72
1999	81	73	69
1998	72	64	59
1997	75	69	62

[1] Provisional

Older Workers

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the level of career advice available to workers over 50; what plans he has to improve the profile of the service; and if he will make a statement. [129039]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: During 2002 my officials instigated a project to gauge the career advice needs of the over 45 age group. The findings from this project are being used to improve services and to inform policy for the reform of the information, advice and guidance (IAG) service for adults. A copy of the report has been lodged in the Library. Part of the reform will be to improve the accessibility and visibility of services through development of an overarching identity for IAG services for adults.

Pupil Exclusions

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what powers he has to overturn the decision to (a) exclude a pupil and (b) reinstate an excluded pupil; and what effect legislation enacted since 1997 has had on the powers of his office in this respect. [127890]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Secretary of State has no powers to overturn the decision to exclude a pupil or to reinstate an excluded pupil. No legislation enacted since 1997 has had any effect on his powers in these respects.

School Exclusions and Suspensions (North Tyneside)

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many school (a) exclusions and (b) suspensions there were in North Tyneside in 2001–02. [130385]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In 2001–02 there were 56 permanent exclusions from maintained primary, secondary and all special schools in North Tyneside. The table shows how the number and percentage of excluded pupils in North Tyneside compares with regional and national figures.

Number of permanent exclusions by type of school 2001–2002 (provisional)

	Primary[1]		Secondary[1]		Special[2]		Total
	Number of permanent exclusions	Percentage of the school population[3]	Number of permanent exclusions	Percentage of the school population[3]	Number of permanent exclusions	Percentage of the school population[3]	Number of permanent exclusions	Percentage of the school population[3]
England	1,451	0.03	7,741	0.24	343	0.36	9,535	0.12
North East	62	0.03	409	0.23	16	0.27	487	0.12
North Tyneside	5	0.03	49	0.35	2	0.30	56	0.18

[1] Includes middle schools as deemed.
[2] Includes Maintained and Non-Maintained Special Schools.
[3] The number of permanent exclusions expressed as a percentage of the number (headcount) pupils in Primary, Secondary and Special schools, excluding dualy registered pupils in special schools in January 2002.

The Department has recently started to collect information from Local Education Authorities on both fixed term and permanent exclusions on a termly basis. However, reliable findings from this data collection exercise are not expected to be available until next year.

Skills Acquisition and Accreditation

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what action he is taking to support local technical agreements on skills acquisition and accreditation between employers and further education colleges below national Sector Skills Council requirements. [129983]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The aim of our recently published skills strategy, "21st Century Skills—Realising Our Potential", is to ensure that employers have the right skills to support the success of their businesses, and individuals have the skills they need to be both employable and personally fulfilled. As with "Success for All", the Department's strategy for the reform of further education, a key part of the strategy is to ensure that colleges and training providers are more responsive to the needs of employers, and those of individual learners. Sector Skills Councils (SSCs) will lead the drive to increase productivity and develop the required skills within their industry sectors. Through sector skills agreements they will work with their employers and with planning and funding agencies like the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) to agree an action plan for addressing priority skills needs. However, further education colleges will continue to determine the specific range and volume of courses they offer and will need to continue to be responsive to their local employers, providing bespoke training based on local agreements as appropriate. The pattern of provision will continue to be agreed in discussion with the local LSC, reflecting national and regional priorities as well of those of the locality.

Student Finance

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what information he collates on differences in the recovery of outstanding student loans from graduates who are (a) based in the United Kingdom and (b) resident abroad. [129731]

Alan Johnson: Student loans are available to students domiciled in the United Kingdom. Data are collected on the payment and repayment of student loans, separately for income contingent loans (which were introduced in September 1998 as part of the new student support arrangements) and mortgage style loans (mostly applying to those who entered higher education before academic year 1998/99). These data are split according to the domicile of the borrower at the point of entering HE.

Data on the current residence of the mortgage style loan borrowers are not available in the Department. The recovery regime for these loans is the same for all borrowers whether resident in or outside of the UK. These loans are repayable on a mortgage style basis over five or seven years, depending on the number of loans taken out. Borrowers may apply to defer repayments for up to a year at a time if their income is below the current deferment threshold, otherwise repayments will be collected, whether the borrower is overseas or not.

Repayments of income contingent loans from borrowers resident in the UK are reported at the time when the Student Loans Company are notified of the repayments by the Inland Revenue, which may be one or more years after the tax year they relate to. Due to the time lag in collecting the information from the Inland Revenue it is too early in the scheme to have robust data for either comparison or trend purposes.

The Student Loans Company operates a separate recovery regime for income contingent loan borrowers who are outside of the UK tax system. The mechanism for collecting repayments requires borrowers to declare their total annual income to the SLC who calculate the repayment due, mirroring the rules applying to borrowers within the tax system. Sufficient robust data are not yet available.

Teacher Workloads

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what meetings he has had with (a) the Secondary Heads Association, (b) the Local Government Association, (c) the National Union of Teachers, (d) National Association of Schoolmasters/Union of Women Teachers and (e) National Association of Head Teachers with regard to the teachers workload agreement since January. [127878]

Mr. Miliband: I have chaired several of the regular meetings of the Workforce Agreement Monitoring Group, which comprises representatives from the signatories to the Agreement. The group includes SHA, NAHT, NASUWT and the LGA.

The NUT chose not to sign the National Agreement and have therefore excluded themselves from those meetings. However, I recently met a delegation from the NUT to discuss their response to the statutory consultation on implementing the National Agreement.

which included changes to the School Teachers' Pay and Conditions Document, draft regulations to be made under section 133 of the Education Act 2002 and accompanying guidance.

Vocational Qualifications

Rob Marris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to improve the collection of data on the number of people who enter higher education on the basis of (a) vocational and (b) work-based learning qualifications. [129525]

Alan Johnson: The main source of data on the entry qualifications of HE students is the Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA) student record. This already identifies students with vocational qualifications and non-academic qualifications (such as accreditation of prior learning). The student record is reviewed regularly to ensure that it collects data which are relevant and fit for purpose, for instance the 2002/03 return has been enhanced to identify students funded by the University for Industry.

CABINET OFFICE

Information Technology

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how much the Cabinet Office spent on IT licences in 2002–03. [124425]

Mr. Alexander: The Cabinet Office spent £3,569,807 on IT licences in 2002–03.

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how much the Cabinet Office spent on (a) IT hardware, (b) software and (c) maintenance in 2002–03. [124432]

Mr. Alexander: The Cabinet Office spent £4,094,292 on IT hardware, £1,800,331 on software and £11,249,997 on maintenance in 2002–03.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Counter-terrorism

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will conduct counter-terrorism exercises with respect to (a) aviation and (b) shipping. [R] [129632]

Mr. Blunkett: Our current counter-terrorism exercise programme involves both aviation and maritime scenarios.

Acting Chief Constable Richard Thomas

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost was of the investigation into the alleged conduct of the acting Chief Constable Richard Thomas of Gwent police. [129868]

Ms Blears: Gwent police informs me that the West Mercia police conducted the investigation. The total of all invoices received and paid by Gwent police amounts to £20,476.66.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people in his Department deal with immigration and asylum issues, broken down by section; and what the function of each section is. [128755]

Beverley Hughes: The number of full-time equivalent staff in the Immigration and Nationality Directorate by business area, at 30 June 2003 was:

	Number
Immigration Service (including border controls and removals)	6,500
Asylum support, asylum casework and appeals	2,830
Managed Migration (applications for leave to remain, nationality and work permits)	1,690
Non-operational (includes policy development and corporate services)	1,880

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assistance is given to successful asylum applicants to help them integrate within their new community. [129108]

Beverley Hughes: Our strategy "Full and Equal Citizens", which we will be reviewing shortly, sets out the Government's cross-departmental strategy for the integration of refugees. It is monitored by the National Refugee Integration Forum, which I chair. In addition to the work of other Departments as set out in the strategy, the Home Office itself helps fund a number of community development programmes being taken forward by the leading national and regional refugee organisations. In addition, we fund small community groups working with refugees through the Refugee Community Development Fund. The Challenge Fund and the European Refugee Fund have also been established on the basis of providing a carefully evaluated programme of projects to identify what does work in integration.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many children have been (a) refused and (b) granted asylum since March 2003. [129473]

Beverley Hughes: The table shows the outcomes of initial decisions made on applicants aged under-18 at the time of their decision. These figures exclude dependants, and are based on the claimed age of applicants. The figures will overstate the true number of initial decisions since some applicants aged 18 or over claim to be younger than that in their application. Initial decisions may relate to applications made in earlier periods.

Initial decisions outcomes for asylum applicants claiming to be aged under-18 at time of initial decision[1,2,3,4]

Principal applicants (cases)	2002	Q1 2003 (January to March)	Q2 2003 (April to June)
Total initial decisions	11,200	3,085	1,690
Granted asylum	960	210	85
Granted exceptional leave	6,620	1,835	n/a

Initial decisions outcomes for asylum applicants claiming to be aged under-18 at time of initial decision[1,2,3,4]

Principal applicants (cases)	2002	Q1 2003 (January to March)	Q2 2003 (April to June)
Granted humanitarian protection	n/a	n/a	10
Granted discretionary leave	n/a	n/a	925
Refused	3,625	1,040	670

[1] Figures are rounded to the nearest 5.
[2] Excluding the outcome of appeals or other subsequent decisions.
[3] Figures may overstate because some applicants aged 18 or over may claim to be younger on leaving their country of origin.
[4] Data are provisional.

Information on the number and outcomes of initial decisions is published quarterly on the Home Office website at: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Turkish citizens applied for asylum in the UK in 2001; and how many were successful in their application. [129479]

Beverley Hughes: 3,695 nationals of Turkey applied for asylum in the United Kingdom in 2001 (excluding dependants). In 2001, there were 7,825 initial decisions made on asylum applications from Turkish nationals, 210 grants of asylum, 275 grants of exceptional leave to remain (ELR), and 7,340 refusals. Data on initial decisions in 2001 may relate to applications made in earlier years.

During 2001, 1,840 appeals against Home Office decisions on Turkish asylum claims were determined by adjudicators of the Immigration Appellate Authority (IAA). Of these, 485 were allowed, 1,295 were dismissed and 60 cases were withdrawn. Appeal outcomes in 2001 may relate to initial decisions made in earlier years. The figures exclude any further appeals (Immigration Appeals Tribunal, Court of Appeal, judicial review, House of Lords).

Information on the number of asylum applications and initial decisions is published quarterly on the Home Office website at: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html

Charities

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the organisations that responded, and how they responded, to the idea of self-regulation contained within "Charities and Not-For-Profits: A Modern Legal Framework", giving the type of respondent. [129154]

Fiona Mactaggart: The recommendations on self-regulation in fundraising were made by the Strategy Unit in its review of charity law and regulation ("Private Action, Public Benefit", published September 2002).

In its response to the review ("Charities and Not-for-Profits: a Modern Legal Framework", published 16 July 2003) the Government supported the idea that self-regulation should be the first resort in improving fundraising standards.

The following people and organisations commented on the recommendations on self-regulation in fundraising:

Action on Disability and Development
Action for Street Kids
Agents for Change
Allen and Overy solicitors
Alzheimer's Society
Archbishops Council
Association of Charitable Foundations
Association of Charity Independent Examiners
Association of Charity Officers
Association of Charity Shops
Association of Chief Executives of Voluntary Organisations
Association of Corporate Trustees
Association of Fundraising Consultants
Association of Preservation Trusts
Baker Tilly accountants
Barnardo's
Bates, Wells and Braithwaite solicitors
Birmingham Voluntary Service Council
Birmingham Charities Council
Birmingham City Council
Black Training and Enterprise Group
Blandford Forum Town Council
Blue Cross
Bristol City Council
British Association of Settlements and Social Action Centres
British Heart Foundation
British Limbless Ex-Servicemen's Association
British Overseas Aid Group
British Red Cross
British Trust for Conservation Volunteers
Campaign for Protection of Rural Wales
Cancer Research UK
Caring Together
Catholic Agency for Overseas Development
Chantrey Vellacott DFK accountants
Charities Aid Foundation
Charity Check
Charity Commission
Charity Law Association
Charles Russell solicitors
Chartered Institute of Water and Environmental Management
Chesterfield and North-East Derbyshire Council for Voluntary Service
Children's Society
Christian Aid
Church in Wales
Community Matters
Consumers' Association
Countryside Agency
Craigmyle
Crossroads Association

Denbighshire Voluntary Services Council
Derby Mountain Rescue Team
Development Trusts Association
Dicky Tickers Heart Support Group
Diocese of St. Asaph, Church in Wales
Directory of Social Change
Disabilities Trust
Duke of Edinburgh's Award
Dyson Bell solicitors
Ethical Investment Research Service
Evelina Family Trust
Exeter Council for Voluntary Service
Fairbridge
Fifth Estate
Friends of the Earth and Friends of the Earth Charitable Trust
Fruitful Fundraising
Grant Thornton accountants
Great Ormond Street Hospital Children's Charity
Growing Place
Guideposts Trust
Guy's and St. Thomas' Charitable Foundation
Help the Aged
WH Henderson
Home Farm Trust
Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales
Institute of Chartered Secretaries and Administrators
Institute of Fundraising
Jordans
Kingston Smith accountants
Law Society
Leonard Cheshire Foundation
Lichfield and District Council for Voluntary Service
LionHeart
Local Government Association
London Play
London Voluntary Service Council
RJA Lonsdale
Macmillan Cancer Relief
Marie Curie Cancer Care
Mazars accountants
Middle Temple Charitable Trusts
Roger Morton
Motability
Multiple Sclerosis Society
Muscular Dystrophy Campaign
National Association of Independent Schools and Non-Maintained Special Schools
National Confederation of Parent Teacher Associations
National Council for Voluntary Organisations
National Library for the Blind
National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children
National Trust
Northamptonshire ACRE
Northern Ireland Council for Voluntary Action
Northern Ireland Federation of Housing Associations
Oxfam
People's Dispensary for Sick Animals
PricewaterhouseCoopers
Public Fundraising Regulatory Association
Purbeck District Council
Raise
Regional Action West Midlands
Reigate and Banstead Borough Council rethink
Rose Road Association
Royal British Legion
Royal College of General Practitioners
Royal National Institute of the Blind
Royal National Institute for Deaf People
Royal National Lifeboat Institute
Royal Society for the Protection of Birds
Runnymede Borough Council
Salvation Army
Emma Sambrook
St. Martins Housing Trust
St. Oswald's Hospice, Newcastle
Andrew Scadding and Adele Shaw
School Library Association
Scope
SPARKS
SSAFA Forces Help
Staffordshire Moorlands Council for Voluntary Service
Surrey Care Trust
Swindon Borough Council
University Hospital Birmingham Charities
Voluntary Action Camden
Voluntary Organisations' Network North East
War on Want
Warwick District Council for Voluntary Service
Welsh Assembly Government
Wessex Medical Trust
West Midlands Charity Trustees Forum
West Somerset District Council
Woking Borough Council
Women's Aid
Women's Royal Voluntary Service
Woodland Trust
Marnie Woodward
WWF-UK
Wychavon District Council
Julia Wylie solicitor
YMCA England
Yorkshire Rural Community Council

Levels of support by these respondents for the Strategy Unit's recommendations for self-regulation in fundraising, broken down by type of respondent, are shown in the table:

Type of respondent	Clear support	Some support	Non-committal	Some opposition	Clear opposition
Small charities	—	—	—	—	1
Independent schools	—	—	—	—	—
Large charities	17	28	1	5	2
Medium charities	7	3	—	—	1
Umbrella bodies	13	5	—	2	1
Others	—	—	—	—	—
Charity workers	3	2	—	1	1
Professional advisers	3	11	1	1	2
Special interest bodies	2	5	2	—	1
Government	—	4	1	3	6
Umbrella bodies for small charities	5	3	1	1	—
Voluntary organisations	3	—	—	—	—
Social enterprises	—	—	—	—	—
Professional bodies	—	4	—	—	—
Academics	—	—	—	—	—
Total	53	65	6	13	15

Child Trafficking

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment his Department has made of recommendations put forward in the UNICEF report, "Stop the Traffic", to assist victims of child trafficking in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [129086]

Beverley Hughes: The Government welcome the UNICEF report drawing attention to the heinous crime of trafficking. Work is already in hand to develop a better understanding of the scale of child trafficking, and the Home Office has sponsored research by the International Organisation for Migration that will be presented to a major EU conference later this month.

Work to develop intelligence and co-ordinate operations against trafficking is the responsibility of Reflex, the multi-agency response to organised immigration crime. Reflex has supported Operation Paladin Child which is profiling unaccompanied children arriving at Heathrow, as well as similar exercises at Gatwick and Dover.

The Sexual Offences Bill, currently before Parliament, introduces wide ranging criminal sanctions covering trafficking and sexual exploitation of children. We are committed to introducing legislation covering trafficking for other purposes when parliamentary time permits.

Responsibility for child protection falls to Social Services under the Children Act 1989. There are wide ranging proposals for changes to the child protection arrangements contained in the Green Paper, "Every Child Matters", published recently. In particular, co-ordination arrangements between social services and the police will be enhanced through greater clarity over the responsibilities of Area Child Protection Committees. The Home Office has developed a Trafficking Toolkit, published earlier this year, with practical advice around identifying and supporting victims of trafficking that is available to police and social services.

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans his Department has to introduce a system whereby victims of child trafficking are given leave to stay in the UK for a period of reflection of up to six months; and if he will make a statement. [129087]

Beverley Hughes: There are no plans to introduce a blanket reflection period for the victims of trafficking, children or adults. Rather, each case is considered on its individual merits.

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what resources his Department will make available to provide for specialist training for immigration officers and social workers in order to (a) help them identify cases of child trafficking and (b) provide them with the necessary skills to assist victims of child trafficking; and if he will make a statement. [129088]

Beverley Hughes: The Government are committed to protecting trafficked children, and have recently announced a Children's Commissioner for England and other measures to protect vulnerable children in the wake of the recommendations from the Laming Inquiry into the tragic death of Victoria Climbié.

All immigration officers are already trained to a high standard in interviewing skills. In addition to this, the Immigration Service is shortly to deliver specialist training to around 600 operational members of staff nation-wide. Central to the theme of the course will be that children arriving in the UK may be here as a result of coercion or criminal activity, including trafficking.

Immigration officers also receive regular intelligence bulletins and inter-agency briefings that highlight issues and trends in respect of trafficking so that they may make informed decisions. All UK immigration officers at ports of entry have been issued with a profile of potential child trafficking victims.

The Home Office has also recently published a 'trafficking toolkit', providing guidance for immigration officers on how to recognise a victim of trafficking and what to do if such a victim is encountered. A vice team consisting of specially selected immigration officers has also been established in London. The team is fully aware of the procedures for the identification of trafficked children.

It is for local councils to decide training priorities for social workers. However, the Government have made £6 million available in the Training Support Programme grant for post-qualification specialist training for social workers, with a target of 7,000 social workers awarded the Child Care Post-qualifying Award by 2006.

There is also new post-qualifying funding for social workers in the Human Resources Development Strategy grant at £0.5 million this year, rising to £13 million by 2005–06.

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans his Department has to provide central funding for specialist care and protection for the victims of child trafficking in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [129090]

Beverley Hughes: Child victims of trafficking are referred to social services to receive assistance and support based on their particular needs. Social services have a duty under the Children Act 1989 to safeguard and promote the welfare of children who are in need by providing a range and level of services appropriate to those children's needs or, where appropriate, by arranging for the provision of services from other agencies. Child victims of trafficking are likely to be in need of welfare services and—in many cases—protection under the Children Act 1989.

There is no current specific earmarked funding for services of this nature. Instead, Government funding is allocated to councils with social services responsibilities on the basis of the needs of their populations. A weighted capitation formula is used to determine each body's target fair share of available resources. It is, therefore, for councils, working in partnership with relevant stakeholders, to determine their spending priorities on the basis of local needs.

Entitlement Card Scheme

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria he has set to evaluate the success of his Department's pilot entitlement card scheme. [128276]

Beverley Hughes: The Government have not announced that they will be piloting an entitlement card scheme. My hon. Friend is probably referring to press reports of a proposed UK Passport Service project to pilot the recording of facial recognition, fingerprint and iris image biometric information for passports and the proposed passport card. Discussions with short-listed suppliers are still continuing.

Fixed Penalty Notices

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many motorists who were served with a fixed penalty notice for speeding in 2002–03 as a result of information recorded on speed cameras were subsequently informed that a mistake had been made and that no prosecution would result. [129770]

Ms Blears: This information is not collected centrally.

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements are in place for ensuring that motorists are not served with fixed penalty notices for speeding when the details of their vehicle are incorrectly recorded. [129782]

Ms Blears: Before the issue of a fixed penalty notice, officers analysing offences caught on film check the registration of the car against the DVLA record and the police national computer. A further check is made on the vehicle model and colour. Plans by a number of police forces to introduce in the near future automated viewing technology into the system should further reduce errors. Where an error is identified, the notice is withdrawn and the situation investigated to see whether further operative training or other remedial action is required.

The most likely reason for an innocent person to be sent a fixed penalty notice is that the vehicle detected had been stolen and given the registration of another registered vehicle to disguise it. The police take this type of criminal activity very seriously and investigate each case thoroughly. To help counter the problem, it has been a requirement since January to show proof of entitlement when buying a number plate; number plate suppliers have to be registered with DVLA and maintain records of transactions. DVLA are currently conducting a consultation exercise on the possible incorporation on number plates of additional features which would make it more difficult to display them on vehicles for which they were not intended.

Foreign Travel Documents

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the policy of the Passport Office is on advising members of the public about the travel documents required for foreign travel. [130245]

Beverley Hughes: The UK Passport Service (UKPS) has a comprehensive marketing and communications strategy that includes a range of initiatives to advise members of the public about the passport requirements for foreign travel. UKPS works closely with the travel trade and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) to ensure that timely and relevant information is conveyed. UKPS advises travellers to check with relevant embassies about visa requirements and length of passport validity which must remain to travel to each country as these are matters for them to determine. UKPS also distributes its literature to a range of organisations including the Citizens' Advice Bureau and Registrars offices throughout England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Media campaigns are normally planned to take place in early January and autumn each year to remind customers to think about their passport requirements and act as early as possible. Most recently UKPS and the FCO worked together to publicise the new requirements for travel to USA, about which there are ongoing discussions between the FCO and US.

The UKPS has a range of information channels, which it utilises to convey its messages. These include:

an established 24 x 7 Passport Adviceline on 0870 521 0410;

a comprehensive website at www.passport.gov.uk; and a network of high street partners which include the Post Office and Worldchoice travel agents.

All these contact details are shown in media advertising.

The UKPS also produces contact cards, which are available via its website, to businesses, voluntary organisations etc. who wish to provide their clients with contact details for the UK Passport Service.

Forensic Science Service

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received regarding the proposed privatisation of the Forensic Science Service; and if he will make a statement. [129627]

Ms Blears: In his statement of 17 July 2003, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary explained the reasons for the proposal that the Forensic Science Service should become a public private partnership. To date, representations about the future status of the organisation have been received from two trade unions, Prospect and PCS, from Brendan Barber, General Secretary of the TUC, and from 71 hon. Members.

Graffiti

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what initiatives his Department has introduced since 1997 to tackle the problems of graffiti. [129694]

Ms Blears: Graffiti and abandoned vehicles spoil our enjoyment of public places, and can increase fear of crime and produce an environment where crime and anti-social behaviour can thrive. They are a burden on businesses and the local authorities that are left to clean up graffiti on property and remove abandoned vehicles. The annual cost of graffiti clean up in London alone is £23 million.

We are introducing a package of measures to prevent graffiti and to ensure that it is removed swiftly when it does occur:

The Anti-Social Behaviour Bill contains proposals to give local authorities new powers to clean graffiti from certain types of private property, including cable boxes, post boxes, phone booths, and property associated with public transport.

The Bill also contains proposals to ban the sale of spray paints to under 19s. The sale of aerosols will be controlled in much the same way that the sale of glue and solvent are currently controlled. The bill also proposes to give local authorities power to issue Fixed Penalty Notices for graffiti and fly posting. Offenders would have to pay a £50 penalty or be prosecuted through the courts. Councils already use these powers to tackle littering.

The Criminal Justice Bill contains measures to close the loophole which prevents the police from searching for items which they suspect may be intended for use in causing criminal damage, such as spray paints.

It is estimated that 238,000 vehicles were abandoned in 2000–01. These nuisance vehicles become a magnet for arson and anti-social behaviour. Measures introduced to tackle this problem include:

In 2002 the period of notice that local authorities and the DVLA need to give before removing and disposing of nuisance vehicles was reduced. Local authorities now only need to give 24 hours notice of their intention to remove an abandoned vehicle of value. Abandoned vehicles of no value can be removed to a pound immediately—and local authorities now only need to wait seven days before disposing of them. We also made it possible for local authorities to take on DVLA powers to tackle unlicensed vehicles.

Continuous registration comes into to force from January 2004. From then, the keeper of a vehicle will be responsible for licensing it until DVLA is informed of its disposal. This will enable more rigorous enforcement action against those dumping vehicles.

There is a lot of good practice already taking place. The "Operation Cubit" model brings together agencies such as the police, local authorities and the DVLA to take action in an area blighted by nuisance vehicles. We will be looking in the coming months at how best to rollout these successes, in the context of our anti-social behaviour agenda.

International Student Visas

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what annual income his Department expects to gain from introducing charges for international student visas. [129427]

Beverley Hughes: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary announced in February 2002 in his White Paper: Secure Borders, Safe Haven: Integration with Diversity in Modern Britain, that he would be introducing charges in order to fund the modernisation of Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND). The regulations were laid on 10 July. IND already charges fee in respect of Nationality applications, for Travel Documents, and since 1 April this year for work permits.

We continue to welcome the many foreign nationals, who choose to study, work and live in the UK—they boost our economy and add to our thriving cosmopolitan society. Many apply to extend their stay each year, and it is right that they should meet the costs of that.

The Government have made significant investment in recent years to improve all aspects of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate, including the standard of service people receive when they submit applications. Charging will help us to continue to improve the efficiency and the speed with which we process these applications, leading to ever-higher levels of customer service.

The estimated revenue from the introduction of charging for leave to remain applications is £90 million.

The estimated revenue from international students is approximately £21 million per annum.

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will monitor charges for international student visas to see whether they have a deterrent effect. [129428]

Beverley Hughes: The fees are set under Treasury rules to recover the full administrative cost entailed in considering applications and no more. This is calculated by taking the overall costs of processing applications divided by the number of decisions we expect to make.

Treasury rules require us to undertake an annual fee review at which point we will monitor the level of applications that we have received.

However, there are many factors which affect the level of intake of applications so it would not be right to conclude without detailed analysis that any perceived decrease was solely due to the introduction of charging.

Leicestershire Police

Mr. Dorrell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many vacancies there are for uniformed officers in the Leicestershire Police Service; and what proportion this represents of the approved establishment in Leicestershire. [127273]

Ms Blears: The establishment figures for the end of 2003 was 2,127 officers. Leicestershire police estimate that they will take approximately 207 recruits in 2003–04; which they estimate will bring establishment up to 2,235 by the end of 2003–04. There are currently around 174 vacancies for new applicants (September figures) and recruitment is healthy. This represents approximately eight per cent. of expected establishment. These vacancies will vary on a day to day basis.

The Home Office does not set establishment figures for police forces and no central record is kept of vacancies. Decisions about the use of resources, including decisions about the number and deployment of police officers are matters for the police authority and the Chief Constable.

Open Prisons

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his strategy to minimise the number of prisoners who abscond from open prisons. [125809]

Paul Goggins: The Prison Service strategy to minimise the number of prisoners who abscond from open prisons contains a number of strands:

a thorough risk assessment process aimed at identifying prisoners suitable for the particular regime and nature of the open estate, including better collation of intelligence data and improved reception procedures;

physical security upgrades at individual establishments, subject to their own risk assessment process, including better lighting and patrols;

regular monitoring, on a monthly basis of abscond rates nationally, reported to the director of operations for onward dissemination to area managers;

analysis of trends, including the impact of population increases which will be fed into the current review of categorisation.

Organ Donors

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance his Department has given to electoral registration officers about allowing the annual registration process to be used as means of increasing organ donors; and if he will make a statement. [130203]

Mr. Leslie: I have been asked to reply.

My Department has issued no recent guidance to electoral registration officers (EROs) on this subject. I am aware, however, that the independent Electoral Commission issued advice to EROs on 22 July 2003 which, while recognising the independence and responsibility of individual EROs, set out the Commission's view that additional material unrelated to electoral issues should not be included with registration forms.

Police Standards Unit

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how performance will be measured for the Head of the Police Standards Unit in assessing his performance related pay. [130023]

Ms Blears [holding answer 16 July 2003]: In common with the principles in place for a number of members of the senior civil service across Government, the Head of the Police Standards Unit will be entitled to an annual bonus, of up to 15 per cent. of his basic salary, subject to his performance against a set of specific objectives and targets to be agreed at the start of each reporting period between himself and the Permanent Secretary, Crime, Policing, Counter-Terrorism and Delivery in the Home Office.

Publicly Funded Investigations

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will seek powers to ensure that the conclusions of all publicly funded investigations into the conduct of senior police officers are made public. [129718]

Ms Blears: The Secretary of State has no plans to do so.

The investigation into allegations against senior officers is a matter for the relevant police authority or where the senior officer has left the force and a criminal investigation takes place, the chief officer. They own the report into the investigation and are acquainted with the facts of the case and any decision on disclosure is a matter for them.

However, the new complaints system which is due to be introduced from April 2004, under provisions in the Police Reform Act 2002, will place a clear duty on those responsible for an investigation to keep the complainant properly informed during, and at the end of, an investigation. The presumption will be on openness, specifically allowing for the disclosure of the investigation report, subject to a sensitivity test.

Secondments (Iraq)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many British police officers are to be sent to Iraq; for how long they will remain there; how their pay and conditions will vary from that in the UK; on what criteria the selection is made; what risk assessment has been carried out; what assessment the Department has made of the effect on crime (a) prevention and (b) detection in the UK of sending officers to Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [128319]

Ms Blears: I have agreed to a request from my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary (Jack Straw) to ask the Association of Chief Police Officers to seek up to 200 volunteers to create a pool of United Kingdom police officers for potential deployment to Iraq. The pool is intended to sustain the deployment of up to 100 United Kingdom officers at any one time. Some may be deployed to a third country to assist in the out of country training of the Iraqi police service.

If UK police officers are required they will be deployed for six to 12 month periods. The terms and conditions of service of police officers from English and Welsh police forces will be protected under section 26 of the Police Act 1996. Officers will be recruited according to experience and the skills required for the post. The preliminary selection procedure is a matter for each force. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office will conduct the final selection process following recommendations on applicants' suitability from forces.

Every effort will be made to ensure police officers' safety while on mission. Officers will be deployed only when conditions are right. The security position will be reviewed regularly. The advice of the two secondees from the Association of Chief Police Officers presently serving in Iraq will continue to inform any decision on the timing of a deployment of United Kingdom police officers to Iraq. When we judge that conditions are right for deployment, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office will approach the Home Office with proposals to draw on the pool.

I have considered the demands on domestic policing resources. The deployment of 100 UK police officers to assist Iraq is within the contingency plans for overall police contributions to peacekeeping missions that have been agreed between the Government and the Association of Chief Police Officers. Chief constables and police authorities will take account of local policing requirements before deciding whether to release officers.

Security (Royal Family)

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to ensure that the security arrangements in place for members of the Royal Family (a) while travelling and (b) while in residence are appropriate; and what plans he has to review these. [129608]

Mr. Blunkett: Security arrangements for the Royal Family while travelling or in residence are subject to continual review.

It is policy not to comment in detail on such security measures, as to do so may compromise the safety of those for whom such measures have been taken.

Sexual Assaults

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Government will adopt the recommendations of the Home Affairs Committee on the liability of employers for sexual assaults committed by their employees. [128398]

Mr. Lammy: The Home Affairs Committee recommended that legislation should be introduced to overturn the House of Lords decision in Lister v Hesley Hall Ltd. in relation to the vicarious liability of an employer for sexual assaults by an employee. The Government do not propose to change the law in this area. The law on vicarious liability is wholly common law based, and has been developed by the courts over many years. It is not desirable or practicable to replace it by statute in one particular set of circumstances in which vicarious liability may be held to apply. It is preferable that the courts should continue to have the flexibility to consider all the circumstances of an individual case.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the sites of special scientific interest in the ownership of his Department or its agencies. [129346]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Home Office has seven establishments, which incorporate Sites of Special Scientific Interest. They are:

HMP Dartmoor;

HMP Frankland;

HMP Hewell Grange;

HMP and YOI Hollesley Bay;

HMP Leyhill;

HMP North Sea Camp; and

HMP and YOI Prescoed.

UK Passport and Records Agency

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people are employed by the UK Passport and Records Agency; and what the figure was in each of the last three years. [130493]

Beverley Hughes: The number of employees within the UK Passport Service throughout the year varies to match the seasonal pattern of demand. August is traditionally a period when employment levels are at there highest. As at 31 August 2003 the UK Passport Service employed 2,429 full time equivalent employees.

In the last three financial years the average number of employees at the Passport Service has been:

2002-03—2,384

2001-02—2,426

2000-01—2,238

Work Permits

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list all applications of Football League clubs for work permits for foreign players which have been refused in the last 18 months; what the grounds for issuing work permits to overseas footballers are; whether different criteria apply when considering applications from other professions; and if he will make a statement. [129109]

Beverley Hughes: The tables provide detail of the numbers of applications received from Premier and Football League Clubs in England and Scotland for overseas players. The information is broken down by season and includes, where applicable, the outcomes of any review panels held. It is not possible to provide detail of the individual applications refused for reasons of confidentiality.

Work permits are issued to international footballers of the highest calibre who are able to make a significant contribution to the development of the UK game at the highest level. A player must have played for his country in at least 75 per cent. of its competitive 'A' team matches for which he was available for selection during the two years preceding the date of the application. Additionally, the player's country must be at or above 70th place in the official FIFA world rankings when averaged over the preceding two years. Where an application does not meet these criteria, the club may seek a review of this decision by an independent review panel of football experts.

The criteria for work permit applications for sportspeople are agreed, sport by sport, in consultation with the respective governing bodies and are reviewed on an annual basis. The criteria which apply to any given sport reflect the stage of development of that sport in the UK and are made public via the Work Permits (UK) website.

Professional football applications for 2002–03 season—summary

	Number
Applications received (England and Scotland)	61
Applications approved	35
Applications refused	25
Applications withdrawn	1
Reviews received	21
Successful reviews	13
Unsuccessful reviews	7
Reviews withdrawn	1
Total approvals	48
Total refusals	12
Total withdrawn	1

Professional football applications for 2003–04 season to 1 September 2003—summary*

	Number
Applications received (England and Scotland)	40
Applications approved	23
Applications refused	16
Applications withdrawn	1
Reviews received	14
Successful reviews	11
Unsuccessful reviews	3
Reviews withdrawn
Total approvals	34
Total refusals	5
Total withdrawn	1

Note:
No applications were received from League of Wales or Northern Ireland

NORTHERN IRELAND

Autistic Spectrum Disorder

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what guidance he gives on the extent to which pre-school children with Autistic Spectrum Disorder (ASD) can benefit from appropriate pre-school education; whether the current main-stream nursery education classes are resourced to deal with children with ASD; and if he will make a statement about plans to provide specialist pre-school education for children with ASD. [118759]

Jane Kennedy: The Department of Education's Code of Practice on the Identification and Assessment of Special Educational Needs (SEN) gives clear guidance to Education and Library Boards (ELBs) and schools (including mainstream nursery schools) on meeting the needs of children with special educational needs, including Autistic Spectrum Disorders (ASD).

The ELBs are resourced to support children with ASD in mainstream nursery schools in a variety of ways. Provision may include classroom assistance, or support from ASD Advisory Officers or peripatetic teachers. The boards also provide training in aspects of Special Educational Needs, including ASD.

The Northern Task Group Report on Autism endorsed early intervention for children with ASD. The Department of Education is working closely with the ELBs and the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to prioritise the recommendations of the report, with a view to improving collaborative working and available provision.

Through existing Special Needs legislation ELBs have a qualified duty to secure education for children with SEN in a mainstream placement. The proposed Special Educational Needs and Disability legislation will strengthen the presumption to inclusion. However, the level and type of provision is assessed by the boards on an individual basis and ELBs continue to make specialist provision for children with ASD based on identified needs. The Department of Education and the ELBs are taking work forward to consider how best to enhance SEN provision in the pre-school sector.

Belfast Regeneration Office

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his policy is on an Action Plan round for the Belfast Regeneration Office in the financial year 2004–05. [130211]

Mr. Spellar: With the launch of the Neighbourhood Renewal Strategy Government has begun to explore the possibility of reallocating Action Plan moneys towards neighbourhood renewal as Action Plan has suffered from sizeable under-spends in recent years. Until decisions have been taken on this issue however it is not clear whether there will be future calls for applications under the Action Plan.

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Belfast Regeneration Office teams have issued letters indicating that they are now closed for applications; which teams issued such letters; and when they were issued. [130212]

Mr. Spellar: The four Belfast Regeneration Office Area Teams, including Inner West, Outer West, North and South & East Teams issued a letter on 29 July 2003, to all community groups on the BRO database. This letter indicated that each BRO Team would not be open to new applications from 1 August 2003, as Area Team budgets would shortly be fully committed for the 2003–04 financial year.

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the budget for each of the Belfast Regeneration Office teams is in the current financial year; and how much of each team's budget (a) was spent, (b) was committed and (c) remained uncommitted when they closed for applications. [130213]

Mr. Spellar: The table shows the budget for each Belfast Regeneration Office (BRO) Team for 2003–04, in addition to (a) amount spent, (b) amount committed and (c) amount uncommitted at 29 July 2003, when the Teams indicated that they were closing to applications. It should be noted that although each Team had moneys uncommitted at 29 July, there existed applications in the system which had not yet been processed. Column (d) on the table shows the potential value of the applications currently under assessment.

£

BRO team	Team budget 2003–04 (b + c)	(a) Amount spent	(b) Amount committed	(c) Amount uncommitted	(d) Potential value of applications currently under assessment
Inner West	1,284,500.00	253,456.79	801,175.68	483,324.32	1,171,202.25
Outer West	1,045,500.00	128,529.99	300,554.22	744,945.78	1,560,711.35
South & East	978,500.00	166,922.56	501,222.46	477,277.54	942,216.38
North	1,207,000.00	116,252.00	356,833.00	850,166.00	1,400,000.00

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Belfast Regeneration Office Strategy will be launched. [130220]

Mr. Spellar: The Government's Strategy for the regeneration of Belfast will be articulated in two documents, namely:

The Neighbourhood Renewal Implementation Plan for Belfast which will be published in April 2004. This will follow consultation on the draft implementation plan which we will issue shortly.

The Belfast City Centre Policy Framework document which was the subject of consultation ending on 12 September 2003.

Belfast/London Flights

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received about the number of flights between Belfast and London. [124363]

Mr. Spellar: None. I understand any such representations have mainly been directed towards the airline operators.

Cross-border Health Care

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total cost of providing health care within Northern Ireland for residents of the Republic of Ireland was over the last 12 months. [124693]

Angela Smith: The information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Budgets

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will publish the complete needs and effectiveness evaluations in respect of departmental budgetary matters. [123960]

Mr. Pearson: The Northern Ireland Executive initiated work on the needs and effectiveness evaluations in 2001. The main findings from the effectiveness report on financial assistance to industry have already been released on the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment's website. Further release of the effectiveness studies will be made subject to agreement with appropriate Ministers. As far as needs assessment is concerned the Government have no plans to review the Barnett formula.

Departmental Reform Plans

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what reform plans have been produced by each Government Department; what assessment he has made of those plans; what Departments have not produced such plans; and if he will make a statement. [123959]

Mr. Pearson: All Departments have produced reform plans as part of their service delivery agreements (SDAs) which are available on departmental websites and can be accessed through the Northern Ireland administration website, www.northernireland.gov.uk. In addition, copies of each SDA have been placed in the Library. The reform plans constitute initial departmental responses to the Reform Agenda and reflect the importance of reform of public services to the work of both this Administration and the Northern Ireland Executive.

Departmental Under Spending

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken to address the underspending of Government Departments through more co-ordinated financial planning; and if he will make a statement. [123958]

Mr. Pearson: On the basis of underspends in previous years an action plan to address this issue was set out in a Statement to the Assembly on 1 July 2002 by the then Minister of Finance and Personnel. This included setting spending plans at a level which exceeded the actual spending power available by building in underspend assumptions, and the revised spending plans for 2003–04 to 2005–06, announced on 11 December 2002, built on that approach. Full details are set out in Section 2 of the Budget Document ("Building on Progress: Budget 2003–2006").

Disabled Housing Adaptations

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the waiting time for an assessment by an occupational therapist in respect of disabled housing adaptations is; and if he will make a statement. [126052]

Angela Smith: Information is not available on the current waiting time for an assessment by an occupational therapist in respect of disabled housing adaptations, as an assessment for housing adaptation can only be designated as such when the assessment is completed. In addition, waiting time varies according to the complexity of the case and the availability of resources to carry out the assessment. The amount of time waited for assessment to commence is, however, recorded in respect of all persons assessed by community occupational therapists, according to time band. Figures for priority and non-priority cases are shown in the table and refer to assessments which commenced in the quarter ending 31 March 2003, the latest date for which such information is available.

Number of assessments commenced, by time waited for assessment, quarter ending 31 March 2003

Time waited	Number
(a) Priority cases
Under 2 weeks	3,758
2 weeks—under 1 month	774
1 month and over	982
Total assessments commenced	5,514
(b) Non-priority cases
Under 3 months	2,850
3—under 6 months	505
6 months and over	1,431
Total assessments commenced	4,786

Implementation of the recommendations of the joint Housing Executive/Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety review of the housing adaptations service, carried out in 2000–01, together with the additional 20 occupational therapy posts funded by the Department in 2001–02, is improving the efficiency of the service. Health and Social Services Trusts continue to strive to further improve the service.

Equality Commission

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will involve the Equality Commission in the review of the operation of section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 2000 envisaged by paragraph 10 of Annex 3 to the Joint Declaration. [125921]

Mr. Spellar: The structure of the review is currently under consideration with the details to be announced by September 2003. The Equality Commission is an important stakeholder and we intend, as envisaged in the Joint Declaration, that it should be directly involved throughout the process.

Fishing

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when, and for what year, the last annual report of the Foyle Fisheries Commission was published; when the outstanding annual reports will be published; when the outstanding annual reports of the Loughs Agency relating to fisheries will be published; and what has been the reason for the delay in producing these reports. [121422]

Mr. Pearson: It was normal practice for the Foyle Fisheries Commission to publish the Annual Report of its operations together with its financial statements for the period in question. The last Annual report with Statement of Accounts for the Foyle Fisheries Commission was for the year 1996.

The Report and Statement of Accounts for the Foyle Fisheries Commission for the periods 1997–99 will be published in July this year.

During 1997, the Department of Finance and Personnel (NI) introduced new standards for the format and information to be presented in the accounts for Non Departmental Public Bodies, which caused significant technical difficulties for the Foyle Fisheries Commission in its completion of Financial Statements. This in turn resulted in significant delays during audit of the accounts for this period. The accounts and report for this period have since been finalised and are now ready for publication.

The operational report of the Loughs Agency for 2000 was provided and noted by the North South Ministerial Council (NSMC) on 22 June, as required by the North South Co-operation (Implementation Bodies) (NI) Order, 1999. This report will be published later this year when the financial statements for that period have been certified by the Comptroller and Auditor General for Northern Ireland and the Irish Comptroller and Auditor General.

The reports for 2001 and 2002 will be published upon the completion of the audit of the financial statements for those periods. These financial statements are currently with the Northern Ireland Audit Office who anticipate their completion by this autumn. The Annual Report and Accounts will be submitted to the NSMC and published following completion of the audit.

Gap Funding

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many successful gap funding applications there have been in each constituency in Northern Ireland. [123794]

Mr. Pearson: The number of successful Gap Funding applications by Parliamentary constituency in Northern Ireland is set out in the following table.

Table: Number of successful gap funding applications by Parliamentary Constituency in Northern Ireland

Constituency	Successful gap funding applications (peace)	Successful gap funding applications (BSP)
Belfast East	32	—
Belfast North	93	2
Belfast South	61	—
Belfast West	83	3
East Antrim	22	—
East Londonderry	19	2
Fermanagh and South Tyrone	29	1
Foyle	72	10
Lagan Valley	17	—
Mid Ulster	28	5
Newry and Armagh	33	1
North Antrim	23	1
North Down	6	—
South Antrim	7	1
South Down	20	—
Strangford	14	1
Upper Bann	22	3
West Tyrone	37	—
Unclassified	13	63
Total	631	93

Note:

Unclassified successful Gap funding Applications are those that clearly benefited two or more Parliamentary Constituencies, and therefore cannot be classified within any specific Parliamentary Constituency.

Health

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the death rates were from coronary heart disease in each Northern Ireland constituency in each of the last five years. [128283]

Mr. Pearson: The ischaemic heart disease death rate per 1,000 population is shown in the following table, for each Northern Ireland constituency and year between 1998 and 2002. The number of deaths due to ischaemic heart disease for each constituency and year is also shown. Areas with older populations generally have higher death rates and this will explain some of the differences shown as follows.

Ischaemic heart disease death rate per 1,000 population and number of deaths due to ischaemic heart disease by constituency and year (1998–2002)

	1998		1999		2000
Parliamentary constituency	Death rate	Deaths	Death rate	Deaths	Death rate	Deaths
Belfast, East	2.7	215	2.6	208	2.6	210
Belfast, North	2.7	243	2.9	261	2.4	210
Belfast, South	2.0	186	2.2	210	1.9	181
Belfast, West	1.8	165	1.6	148	1.8	164
East Antrim	2.3	189	2.0	165	2.1	176
East Londonderry	2.2	193	2.1	187	2.1	181
Fermanagh and South Tyrone	2.3	211	2.5	228	2.3	204
Foyle	1.8	189	1.4	146	1.3	141
Lagan Valley	2.1	208	2.1	209	1.9	195
Mid-Ulster	2.0	171	1.6	140	1.9	167
Newry and Armagh	2.3	228	1.7	171	1.8	182
North Antrim	2.4	236	2.6	259	2.1	212
North Down	2.4	208	2.4	201	2.4	204
South Antrim	1.8	178	1.7	166	1.4	138
South Down	2.0	210	2.0	205	1.4	148
Strangford	2.0	188	2.0	190	1.7	164
Upper Bann	2.1	213	2.3	234	1.8	188
West Tyrone	2.2	187	2.3	201	1.7	146
Unallocated[1]	—	36	—	39	—	23
Northern Ireland	2.2	3,654	2.1	3,568	1.9	3,234

	2001		2002
Parliamentary constituency	Death rate	Deaths	Death rate	Deaths
Belfast, East	2.5	202	2.4	187
Belfast, North	2.1	184	2.4	199
Belfast, South	1.8	173	1.4	131
Belfast, West	1.6	143	1.6	140
East Antrim	1.7	145	1.6	138
East Londonderry	2.0	177	1.6	141
Fermanagh and South Tyrone	2.3	210	1.9	177
Foyle	1.4	151	1.2	132
Lagan Valley	1.6	160	1.8	181
Mid-Ulster	1.7	149	1.6	143
Newry and Armagh	1.8	187	1.7	169
North Antrim	2.0	203	1.6	166
North Down	2.1	178	2.0	170
South Antrim	1.3	132	1.6	158
South Down	1.7	180	1.6	172
Strangford	1.7	172	1.6	154
Upper Bann	1.8	187	1.8	183
West Tyrone	2.1	179	2.0	172
Unallocated[1]	—	36	—	35
Northern Ireland	1.9	3,148	1.7	2,948

[1] Each year a small number of deaths cannot be allocated to a parliamentary constituency within Northern Ireland—these deaths have been included in the Northern Ireland total.

Hospital Admissions

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many hospital admissions there were on average per week in Northern Ireland during each of the last four quarters. [124689]

Angela Smith: The table sets out the average number of in-patients (ordinary admissions and day cases) admitted to hospital per week in the last four quarters.

Quarter	Average number of inpatient admissions per week
1 April 2002–30 June 2002	9,273
1 July 2002–30 September 2002	9,110
1 October 2002–31 December 2002	9,542
1 January 2003–31 March 2003	9,614

Note:

Data for 2002–03 are provisional and may change.

Source:

Hospital Inpatient's System.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many individuals were admitted to Northern Ireland hospitals in the last year who were not residents of the province. [124690]

Angela Smith: In 2002–03, a total of 3,992 patients whose address was outside of Northern Ireland were admitted to hospitals in Northern Ireland (ordinary admissions and day cases). The source of this information is the Hospital In-patient's System. Data for 2002–03 are provisional and may change.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average cost was of hospital admissions in Northern Ireland in (a) 1982, (b) 1992 and (c) 2002. [130253]

Angela Smith: The information requested is provided as follows:

Average cost of hospital admissions
(In-patients including day cases)

£

	Average cost of an admission
Year ended 31 March	Actual price	Adjusted to 2002–03 prices
1982	630	1,490
1992	918	1,223
2002[1]	1,126	1,159

[1] There may be small definitional differences between the year ended 31 March 2002 and earlier years due to differences in available sources of information.

Notes:

1. The figures provided exclude expenditure and activity information in relation to long stay and specialist hospitals.
2. It should be noted that a straight forward comparison of costs over a 20 year period is difficult, given the substantial changes in the range and nature of procedures undertaken in hospitals. In addition the lengths of stay and therefore costs will vary dramatically within one year, depending on the speciality and the patient's condition.

Housing Adaptations

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he plans to abolish the means test for housing adaptations in families with disabled children. [130268]

Mr. Spellar: The review group that was set up to look at the issue has just recently sent its report to me. I will write to the hon. Member for Strangford once I have had the opportunity to consider its recommendations.

Mental Health

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many elderly mentally infirm unit places there are in Northern Ireland. [130258]

Angela Smith: Information on the number of elderly mentally infirm unit places is not available. However, at 31 March 2003, there were approximately 700 elderly mentally infirm persons in residential homes and approximately 1,000 elderly mentally infirm persons in nursing homes, whose care was funded by Health and Social Services Trusts.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many individuals aged 18 and younger are receiving (a) antidepressants, (b) antipsychotics and (c) amphetamines in each health trust in Northern Ireland. [130265]

Angela Smith: The information requested is not available.

MOT Tests

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action he intends to take to address the backlog of MOT appointments at the Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency. [124558]

Angela Smith: The principal causes of the current waiting time difficulties have been a significant increase in demand and the temporary closure of test centres for the installation of new test equipment.

The programme of refurbishment will be completed in September this year. In the meantime, a number of steps are being taken to alleviate the position. These include: continuing efforts to recruit additional staff; increased overtime working; the introduction of extended day working into additional centres to increase capacity; diverting technical staff from other duties to testing; working with the equipment supplier to secure higher levels of productivity; better public information and awareness, so that customers have the option of choosing centres with a lower waiting time; and relocating staff in order to match capacity and demand as closely as possible.

Physiotherapy

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the recruitment of physiotherapists. [130251]

Angela Smith: The recruitment of staff, including physiotherapists, is a matter for individual Health and Social Services Trusts taking into account factors such as service needs and available resources. The Department however has a role in ensuring that sufficient suitably qualified staff are available to meet the needs of the service throughout the health and personal social services.

The Department has looked at ways of improving regional workforce planning mechanisms and in August 2001 a series of comprehensive workforce reviews was launched. These reviews are across the main HPSS professional groups and the physiotherapy staff group is included in this initiative. The first report on the review of the physiotherapy workforce has been completed and its findings indicated that there are currently sufficient physiotherapists in training to meet the needs of the service.

The position however is being kept under review, particularly in light of probable increasing demand that will result from developments in physiotherapy services

Planning

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many enforcement notices were issued by each of the planning divisions in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years; how many were issued between 1 April and 9 May; how many are still in operation; and what the timescale is for the act of enforcement to be implemented. [116832]

Angela Smith: Although statistical records maintained by the Planning Service have historically taken account of enforcement procedures, it is only since 1999 that separate data specifically relating to enforcement action has been recorded. It is not possible to provide a breakdown of enforcement statistics by Division.

Presented in the table is the total number of enforcement notices issued for each year since 1999. These figures are published in the Agency Annual Report and Accounts for the years 1999–2002.

	Number
1999–2000	82
2000–01	54
2001–02	50
2002–03	40
1 April to 9 May 2003	8

Note:
The enforcement notices issued since 1 April 2003 remain in effect. Under Article 68(8) of the Planning (Northern Ireland) Order 1991, each enforcement notice should specify the period for compliance. The period allowed for compliance depends on the circumstances of each case.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what financial resources were allocated to the implementation of planning enforcement cases in each of the planning divisions in each of the last five years; how many officers are employed to undertake enforcement work in each of the planning divisions in Northern Ireland; and how many there were in 1997. [116833]

Angela Smith: The Department of the Environment's Planning Service's annual expenditure on salaries for officers employed in enforcement work, during the last five financial years, was:

	£
1998–99	338,100
1999–2000	353,300
2000–01	369,200
2001–02	385,800
2002–03	403,200

There are currently 20 officers devoted to enforcement work. These officers are deployed by Divisional Planning Office as follows:

	Number
Belfast Division	3
Ballymena Division	3
Craigavon Division	3
Downpatrick Division	3
Londonderry Division	4
Omagh Division	4

The additional officers in the Londonderry and Omagh Divisions are based in the Coleraine and Enniskillen sub-offices.

This dedicated staffing complement was put in place in 1998. Prior to this, enforcement work was taken forward as an integral part of development control casework and it is therefore not possible to provide comparison figures for 1997.

A number of measures to enhance enforcement powers were included in the Planning (Amendment) (Northern Ireland) Order 2003, to simplify, streamline and strengthen the Department's existing enforcement powers.

Planning Service is also reviewing the resources dedicated to enforcement as part of the Modernising Planning Processes Implementation Plan, and is seeking substantial additional resources to address enforcement and other priority areas. Views on whether the costs of enforcement action should be recovered from planning fees will also be sought in a consultation paper on planning fees, which is due to be published shortly.

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his policy is towards third party appeals in relation to planning applications in Northern Ireland. [130216]

Angela Smith: I am conscious of the potential implications that the introduction of third party appeals would have for the operation of Northern Ireland's planning system and economy. That is why I have commissioned a Regulatory Impact Assessment of the impact that third party appeals would have, if introduced. When complete, I will wish to give that assessment the most careful consideration before making a decision on how to deal with this important issue.

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what criteria are applied in determining planning applications in areas of townscape character; [130217]

(2) what steps he has taken to ensure compliance with development guidance notes in relation to planning applications in areas of townscape character; [130218]

(3) if he will take steps to ensure that planning applications in areas of townscape character are carefully monitored pending the determination of policy on third party appeals. [130219]

Angela Smith: The Department of the Environment is obliged by law to have regard to the Development Plan, so far as it is material, and to any other material considerations in determining planning applications. In relation to Areas of Townscape Character, other material considerations includes the Regional Development Strategy, Planning Policy Statements in particular PPS1, PPS6 and PPS7 and advice in the form of supplementary planning guidance.

All proposals in Areas of Townscape Character are carefully assessed to ensure compliance with published policy and guidance taking account of any other relevant matters. As with all planning applications, proposals in Areas of Townscape Character are processed in an open and transparent manner. This allows an opportunity for the receipt of public representations and involves consultation with the relevant district council and other statutory bodies.

To afford additional protection for Areas of Townscape Character, I intend later this year to introduce control over demolition within these areas. When the relevant statutory provisions are concerned, I will publish an addendum to Planning Policy Statement 6, which will set out my Department's policy for the control of development in Areas of Townscape Character.

Police HQ, Armagh

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how extensive the asbestos contamination was at the regional police headquarters in Armagh; when the contamination occurred; and what the cause was of the contamination; [120307]

(2) what documents and how many case files were contaminated by asbestos at the regional police headquarters in Armagh; what percentage of these papers were destroyed; at what rank this decision was taken; what options were available for copying files; and from what bodies professional advice was sought; [120308]

(3) how many criminal prosecutions were dropped as a result of asbestos contamination at the regional police headquarters in Armagh; how many civil actions were affected; and what cost was incurred in meeting claims for damages as a result of failing to produce evidence. [120309]

Jane Kennedy: I have written to my hon. Friend, a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

Police Property (Meetings)

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the policy is on the RUC GC Association and Welfare Associations meeting in police property across Northern Ireland; and if he will ensure that these facilities remain open to them as long as they are required. [123465]

Jane Kennedy: This is a matter for the Chief Constable. I understand that he has provided assurances that organisations such as the RUC GC Associations and Welfare Associations will continue to be granted the use of police premises. Any person or persons wishing to gain admission to any police establishment would be required to comply with any policies established by the organisation.

Police Service of Northern Ireland

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) whether there is a right of appeal for serving or former members of the Police Service of Northern Ireland when a request to use convalescent facilities on the mainland is refused by the Benevolent Fund Committee; and if he will make a statement; [130055]

(2) whether there is a ceiling on the number of times a serving or former member of the Police Service of Northern Ireland can use convalescent homes for respite purposes on the mainland. [130056]

Jane Kennedy: Each case made to the Benevolent Fund Committee is considered on its own merits. There is no ceiling on the number of times an officer or retired officer can use the benevolent fund facilities. However, all instances where a request is made for a third visit are referred to the Management Committee for approval. An applicant who has had their request refused can ask to have their case reviewed and may submit additional information or material to be considered as part of that review.

Radiographers

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many radiographers are employed in full-time posts in the NHS in Northern Ireland; how many vacancies exist; and what estimate he has made of how many will be required in total in 2006. [124673]

Angela Smith: The information is as follows:

(a) A breakdown of radiographers as at 31 March 2003 by employment status is shown in the following table:

Radiographers as at 31 March 2003 by employment status[1]

Employment status	Headcount	WTE[2]
Full-time	399	399.0
Part-time	159	89.50
Total	558	488.5

[1] Bank staff who cover for staffing shortfalls and fluctuating workloads in order to maintain service delivery have been removed from these figures.
[2] Whole-time equivalent.

(b) As at 30 September 2002 there were Radiography vacancies amounting to a whole-time equivalent of 26.5. Radiography vacancies detailed by trust are given in the following table:

Radiography vacancies detailed by trust as at 30 September 2002

Health and Social Services (HSS) Trust	WTE[1]
Sperrin Lakeland HSS Trust	1.0
United Hospitals Group HSS Trust	4.0
Altnagelvin Group HSS Trust	1.0
Royal Group of Hospitals HSS Trust	1.0
Craigavon Area Hospital Group HSS Trust	6.5
Green Park Healthcare HSS Trust	4.0
Down and Lisburn HSS Trust	6.0
Belfast City Hospital HSS Trust	2.0
Ulster Community and Hospitals Group HSS Trust	1.0
Total	26.5

[1] Whole-time equivalent

(c) The total required number of Radiographers in 2006 equates to 738 headcount when supply is profiled against the Demand Levels 1 and 2, as identified within the Comprehensive Review of the Radiography Workforce, April 2002.

Radiology

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many vacancies there are in Northern Ireland for (a) radiologists and (b) radiographers. [130001]

Angela Smith: The information is as follows:

(a) As at 30 September there were Consultant Radiologists' vacancies amounting to a whole-time equivalent of 8.0. Consultant Radiologists' vacancies detailed by Trust are given in the following table. The number of staff in post at this same date was 73 (68.25 WTE).

Consultant radiologists' vacancies detailed by trust as at 30 September 2002

Health and Social Services (HSS) Trust	WTE[1]
Sperrin Lakeland HSS Trust	2.0
United Hospitals Group HSS Trust	3.0
Belfast City Hospitals HSS Trust	1.0
Ulster Community and Hospitals HSS Trust	1.0
Craigavon Area Hospital Group HSS Trust	1.0

[1] Whole-time equivalent

As at 30 September 2002 there were Radiography vacancies amounting to a whole-time equivalent of 26.5. Radiography vacancies detailed by trust are given in the following table. The number of staff in post at this same date was 566 (496.3 WTE).

Radiography vacancies detailed by trust as at 30 September 2002

Health and Social Services (HSS) Trust	WTE[1]
Sperrin Lakeland HSS Trust	1.0
United Hospitals Group HSS Trust	4.0
Altnagelvin Group HSS Trust	1.0
Royal Group of Hospitals HSS Trust	1.0
Craigavon Area Hospital Group HSS Trust	6.5
Green Park Healthcare HSS Trust	4.0
Down and Lisburn HSS Trust	6.0
Belfast City Hospital HSS Trust	2.0
Ulster Community and Hospitals Group HSS Trust	1.0
Total	26.5

[1] Whole-time equivalent

Regional Cancer Centre

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on recruitment of staff for Northern Ireland's new regional Cancer Centre. [124686]

Angela Smith: The Belfast City Hospital Trust developed a workforce plan for the new Cancer Centre as part of the submission of the Outline Business Case. The Trust is keeping the plan under review. The Regional Medical Services Consortium is currently considering a substantial additional revenue investment of approx £1.6 million per annum to enable a phased build-up in staff numbers towards the opening of the new Centre.

Respite Care

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many respite care beds there are in each health board area in the Province for (a) young adults older than 18 and (b) those aged 18 and younger. [130266]

Angela Smith: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Road Tax

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action has been taken to reduce the number of vehicles being driven on Northern Ireland's roads without road tax; and how many prosecutions have resulted in the past 12 months as a result of enforcement action. [124186]

Angela Smith: A range of measures is in place to tackle Vehicle Excise Duty (road tax) evasion in Northern Ireland, including ongoing detection by the police and traffic wardens, wheel clamping; Automated Number Plate Reading cameras; Statutory Off Road Notification (SORN); and special joint exercises by DVLNI, PSNI and Her Majesty's Customs and Excise.

The most recent period for which enforcement information is available is the year from 1 June 2002 to 31 May 2003. In that year enforcement action was taken against 15,171 offenders. 13,281 settled out of court and 1,890 were prosecuted in court.

Roadworks

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which contractors working for the Roads Service had their contracts terminated in each year since 1999; and what the reasons were in each case. [119468]

Angela Smith: I have asked the Chief Executive of Roads Service to write to you in response to your question. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total length broken down by classification of road is in each council area in Northern Ireland. [123925]

Mr. Spellar: I have asked the Chief Executive of Roads Service to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost was of repairing public (a) roads and (b) footpaths in Northern Ireland following work carried out by (i) electricity and (ii) gas companies in each year since 1997. [119462]

Angela Smith: I have asked the Chief Executive of Roads Service to write to you in response to your question. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many surgical operations were performed in 2002 at the Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children. [130270]

Angela Smith: There were 4,260 surgical operations performed in the Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children during 2002–03.

Schools

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many temporary classrooms there were in each Education and Library Board area in each of the last three years. [128286]

Jane Kennedy: The number of temporary classrooms in controlled schools[1] in each Education and Library Board area in each of the last three years is as follows:

Education and Library Board	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03
Belfast	119	119	103
Western	172	177	172
North-Eastern	325	343	358
South-Eastern	509	452	394
Southern	262	252	240

[1] Information on temporary classrooms in other sectors is not currently available. However, the Department of Education will be carrying out a survey of maintained, voluntary grammar and grant maintained integrated schools before the end of the financial year to ascertain the exact number of temporary classrooms in these sectors. This information will be supplied to you when the results of the survey are available.

The increased investment in new schools, together with a £25 million programme specifically to remove temporary classrooms, spanning the financial years 2002–03 to 2005–06, should result in a substantial reduction in these classrooms over the next 3 years.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many schools requiring (a) high priority maintenance work and (b) major works there were in each Education and Library Board area in each of the last three years. [128287]

Jane Kennedy: The information requested is as follows:

(a) Number of schools requiring high priority maintenance work[1]

Education and Library Board Area	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03
Belfast	156	155	163
Western	238	215	188
North-Eastern	139	157	127
South-Eastern	222	207	184
Southern	240	262	234

[1] Figures cover controlled, maintained and Irish-medium schools. Maintenance work in voluntary grammar grant maintained integrated schools is met by the schools themselves from their annual LMS budgets. Data is held centrally by the Department on the extent of the maintenance requirements in these schools.

(b) Number of schools requiring major works[2]

Education and Library Board Area	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03
Belfast	16	15	28
Western	22	20	29
North-Eastern	26	28	37
South-Eastern	14	13	14
Southern	29	32	30

[2] Figures cover all schools included in the Department's Schools' Capital Priorities list as published on its website.

Senior Citizens (Concessionary Travel)

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have been issued with senior citizen smart passes for free travel on public transport, broken down by post code area. [125839]

Mr. Spellar: Translink advise that the information is not readily available in exactly the form requested. However, the table shows the total number of Smartpasses in issue by Northern Ireland postcode area as at 16 July 2003. Over 160,000 of the 164,596 Smartpasses in circulation are Senior Smartpasses, the remainder being made up of Smartpasses for those registered blind and the war disabled. Translink do not have the postcodes for 1,080 pass holders.

Postcode	Count
BT1	41
BT2	76
BT3	6
BT4	3,511
BT5	5,774
BT6	4,476
BT7	1,358
BT8	3,078
BT9	2,759
BT10	1,520
BT11	3,453
BT12	2,635
BT13	3,313
BT14	3,667
BT15	3,550
BT16	1,936
BT17	2,170
BT18	1,815
BT19	4,023
BT20	4,210
BT21	1,115
BT22	1,795
BT23	4,879
BT24	1,292
BT25	986
BT26	877
BT27	2,650
BT28	3,451
BT29	624
BT30	2,627
BT31	524
BT32	2,001
BT33	1,292
BT34	4,420
BT35	2,994
BT36	4,751
BT37	3,421
BT38	4,187
BT39	2,112
BT40	3,138
BT41	2,901
BT42	3,322
BT43	2,196
BT44	1,528
BT45	2,078
BT46	591
BT47	4,438
BT48	3,827
BT49	1,465
BT51	2,221
BT52	1,671
BT53	1,945
BT54	629
BT55	1,097
BT56	863
BT57	462
BT60	2,098
BT61	1,345
BT62	2,933
BT63	1,970
BT64	45
BT65	371
BT66	3,064
BT67	1,575
BT68	70
BT69	187
BT70	1,250
BT71	2,688
BT74	1,568
BT75	292
BT76	128
BT77	80
BT78	2,044
BT79	1,572

Postcode	Count
BT80	1,396
BT81	527
BT82	1,979
BT84	6
BT92	929
BT93	692
BT94	963
BT95	1
BT96	1
BT98	1
No postcode available	1,080
Total	164,596

Strategic Investment Body

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are on the Board of the Strategic Investment Body; and how many are women. [125909]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Strategic Investment Board has five directors, none of whom is a woman.

Teachers

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on teacher recruitment in Northern Ireland. [129824]

Jane Kennedy: The level of intakes to teacher education courses is determined annually by the Department of Education, with the aim of maintaining a reasonable match between the numbers being trained and the projected numbers of teaching vacancies. Currently these courses are oversubscribed with around five applications for each available place.

Research has been commissioned by the Department to test the proposition that there is or will be a shortfall in the recruitment of teachers in any subject area in post-primary schools in Northern Ireland. The research findings are expected in October.

Teachers

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many teaching vacancies there are in North Belfast in (a) the primary and (b) the secondary sector. [126498]

Jane Kennedy: The number of vacancies, as indicated by the employing authorities in all school sectors in the North Belfast area at the beginning of the new school year, is seven in the primary sector and nine in the secondary sector as set out in the following.

Responses from employing authorities and North Belfast voluntary grammar and integrated schools on teaching vacancies as they apply at the beginning of the new school year 2003–04.

1. Belfast Education and Library Board
Currently the Board is not aware of any vacancies in the primary or secondary controlled sectors in North Belfast.

2. Council for Catholic Maintained Schools
Seven vacancies and nine secondary vacancies are expected to be filled in the near future.

3. Integrated Primary Schools
Hazlewood Integrated Primary School, 242 Whitewell Road—no teaching vacancies.

4. Voluntary Grammar and Integrated Secondary Schools
Belfast Royal Academy—no teaching vacancies.

Dominician College, 38 Fort William Park—no teaching vacancies.

Hazelwood Integrated College, 70 Whitewell Road—no teaching vacancies.

St. Malachy's College, 36 Antrim Road—no teaching vacancies.

Transport

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the quality bus corridor on the Newtownards Roads is likely to open. [122367]

Mr. Spellar: I have asked the Chief Executive of Roads Service to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the plans to upgrade the Westlink. [122370]

Mr. Spellar: I have asked the Chief Executive of Roads Service to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the status is of each road scheme in the Road Service Major Works preparation. [122372]

Mr. Spellar: I have asked the Chief Executive of Roads Service to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

Transport Infrastructure

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been invested in improving the (a) roads and (b) transport infrastructure in (i) North Belfast and (ii) Northern Ireland in each year since 1997. [119466]

Angela Smith: I have asked the Chief Executive of Roads Service to write to you in response to your question. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

Unadopted Main Sewers

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many households in East Belfast have unadopted main sewers. [122550]

Mr. Spellar: I have asked the Chief Executive of Water Service to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

Vehicle Licensing

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Transport about extending to Northern Ireland measures to improve vehicle licensing in line with those announced by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport in the written ministerial statement of 22 May 2003, Official Report, columns 45–46WS. [116807]

Angela Smith: I can confirm that the proposals announced by the Minister for Transport will apply in Northern Ireland. My officials in Driver and Vehicle Licensing Northern Ireland are working with their counterparts in DVLA and DfT on the operational details.

Waiting Times/Lists

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many patients in the Province are waiting for (a) CT scans, (b) MRI scans and (c) X-rays; and what the longest time is that a patient has had to wait for each of these appointments. [130250]

Angela Smith: The information requested is not routinely collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Water and Sewerage

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been invested in improving the (a) water and (b) sewerage infrastructure in North Belfast in each year since 1997. [119467]

Angela Smith: I have asked the Chief Executive of Water Service to write to the hon. Lady in response to this question. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

Water Bill

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with Department for Environment Food and Rural Affairs Ministers to extend the Water Bill to Northern Ireland. [130400]

Angela Smith: I have had no discussions with Defra Ministers about extending the Water Bill to Northern Ireland. The Water Bill applies only to England and Wales and, as such, its proposed measures relate largely to the privatised water industry which does not reflect the arrangements currently in place in Northern Ireland. However, my officials have been monitoring the progress of the Bill through its various stages to consider what, if any, implications there are for future policy development in Northern Ireland.

Water Services

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) households and (b) public sector offices in Northern Ireland have been fitted with hippo bags; and if he will make a statement on the estimated savings made by their introduction. [121934]

Mr. Spellar: I have asked the Chief Executive of Water Service to write to the hon. Lady in response to this question. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the Water Service met its targets in respect of domestic water efficiency in (a) 2001, (b) 2002 and (c) since January. [121932]

Mr. Spellar: I have asked the Chief Executive of Water Service to write to the hon. Lady in response to this question. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last met the EAGA Partnership to discuss water efficiency proposals; and if he will make a statement. [121933]

Mr. Spellar: I have asked the Chief Executive of Water Service to write to the hon. Lady in response to this question. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what comparative studies have been undertaken by the Water Service in Northern Ireland with water authorities in (a) England, (b) Scotland and (c) Wales regarding water efficiency by (i) domestic premises, (ii) small businesses and (iii) public sector offices; and if he will make a statement on the results. [121935]

Mr. Spellar: I have asked the Chief Executive of Water Service to write to the hon. Lady in response to this question. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what evaluation has been made by the Water Service regarding the distribution of hippo bags in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement on the results. [121936]

Mr. Spellar: I have asked the Chief Executive of Water Service to write to the hon. Lady in response to this question. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on his plans to improve water efficiency in (a) low income households, (b) small businesses and (c) public sector offices. [121937]

Mr. Spellar: I have asked the Chief Executive of Water Service to write to the hon. Lady in response to this question. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library.

HEALTH

Abortions

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans he has to reduce the number of abortions in the London borough of Havering; [129048]

(2) how many abortions were performed in the London borough of Havering in each year from 1997 to 2002. [129051]

Mr. Hutton: The Government are taking a number of steps through the National Strategy for Sexual Health and HIV and the Teenage Pregnancy Strategy to help reduce the number of abortions. We are also working to improve access to contraceptive services and the range of methods of contraception that are available and will be making £1 million available this year to support this. We are also working with the Department for Education and Skills to improve sex and relationships education.

The number of abortions performed on residents of Havering local authority is shown in the table. The data are not available by local authority prior to 1995 and have therefore been shown by health authority, district health authority, and health district which includes data for residents of neighbouring local authority areas. Data for 2002 will be available from autumn 2003.

Numbers of abortions to residents of Havering local authority, 1995–2001[1,2]

Year	Number
2001	862
2000	828
1999	838
1998	815
1997	757
1996	737
1995	691
1994	[3]1,288
1993	[3]1,350
1992	[4]1,557
1991	[4]1,703
1990	[4]1,777
1989	[4]1,839
1988	[4]1,750
1987	[4]1,618
1986	[4]1,435
1985	[4]1,477
1984	[4]1,435
1983	[4]1,308
1982	[5]769
1981	[5]708
1980	[3]1,220
1979	[3]1,245
1978	[3]1,029
1977	[3]989
1976	[3]933

[1] Prior to 1995 records were allocated by postcode to ward and then stored by health authority or district health authority. Data for 2002 will be available from autumn 2003.
[2] The information provided for 1976–94 is for areas that include abortions performed on residents of Havering local authority.
[3] Barking, Havering and Brentwood district health authority.
[4] Barking and Havering health authority.
[5] Havering health district.

Accident and Emergency Treatment

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines he has issued on the target for no patient to be waiting for more than four hours in accident and emergency, with special reference to patients with a clinical need to remain for over four hours. [129682]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The NHS Plan established the target that by December 2004 accident and emergency (A&E) patients should wait no more than four hours between arrival and discharge, admission to hospital, or transfer to another facility.

There are exceptional circumstances in which an A&E department remains the safest clinical environment for a patient even though four hours have elapsed. The Department of Health has been engaged in constructive discussions with the British Association for A&E Medicine, the Faculty of A&E Medicine and the Royal College of Nursing about how these cases should be defined and monitored.

The product of these discussions is a paper that was published for wider consultation on 11 September. The paper is available on the Department's website, at www.doh.gov.uk/emergencycare/clinical-exceptions.htm. The consultation period runs until 31 October 2003. After consultation we will publish the final version of the paper and develop a process for excluding these patients from the monitoring of NHS trusts' performance against the A&E target.

Acute Hospitals (Performance)

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to support NHS managers in improving performance following the recent Audit Commission reports into acute hospitals. [127729]

Mr. Hutton: The Government have a range of measures in place to support national health service managers in improving performance:

we have invested significant additional resources in the five-year period 2003–04 to 2007–08. Over this period the average real terms increase will be 7.4 per cent. a year over and above inflation;

we have set up the NHS Modernisation Agency to support NHS organisations and their front-line staff to improve services for patients; and we have put in place a range of recruitment and retention initiatives.

For the first time, health communities have developed comprehensive local programmes with action across health partnerships to improve health, tackle inequalities and modernise NHS. Alongside the significant increase in funding, these will help the NHS and social services plan for the future with confidence.

Further details of the Government's support to the NHS in improving performance are detailed in my letter to the hon. Member, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

Advocacy Scheme

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how the funding for mental health advocacy announced in the White Paper 'Valuing People' has been spent; and how much underspend there is from this fund (a) in England and (b) in each region. [128933]

(2) how many volunteer advocates have joined the mental health advocacy scheme announced in the White Paper 'Valuing People' (a) in England and (b) in each region. [128934]

(3) what progress has been made towards the target set out in the White Paper 'Valuing People' for one citizen advocacy group in each local authority area; and which local authorities do not yet have a citizen advocacy group. [128935]

Dr. Ladyman: The importance of advocacy for people with learning disabilities is a theme running throughout the White Paper "Valuing People: A New Strategy for Learning Disability for the 21st Century" (Cm 5086)

published in March 2001 which sets out our proposals for improving services for people with learning disabilities, their families and carers.

"Valuing People" announced the creation of two new funds, the Implementation Support Fund and the Learning Disability Development Fund, to support key aspects of its proposals. Two organisations, Values Into Action (VIA) and the British Institute of Learning Disabilities (BILD), are distributing money from the Implementation Support Fund to support the development and expansion of self- and citizen advocacy respectively. By the end of the third year of the funding programme in March 2004, £3 million will have been distributed to advocacy organisations. That figure includes the additional £140,000 which my hon. Friend, the Member for Redditch, announced in February 2002 was being made available from April that year following representations from the Learning Disability Task Force and self advocates. There has been no underspend in the first two years, and funding for the third year has already been allocated.

Our most recent information is that 449 volunteers have been recruited to citizen advocacy schemes; as a result 394 people with learning disabilities now have advocates who otherwise would not.

Information on the geographical distribution of citizen advocacy schemes is not available in the form requested, as many schemes cover more than one local authority area. In 2002–03, the first full year of the funding programme, advocacy schemes in twenty four new geographical areas received support.

The Government's report on learning disability, "Making Change Happen" (HC514), published in April 2003, announced that the Implementation Support Fund would continue until March 2006 and that the Learning Disability Task Force would be consulted on its use.

The draft Mental Health Bill published for consultation in June 2002 included the proposal for a statutory duty on the Secretary of State to provide for specialist mental health advocates to be available for every patient treated under the formal powers of the Bill and their nominated person.

At the request of the Department of Health, Durham University has undertaken a study of current mental health advocacy services to assist the Department in developing this new specialist advocacy service. A separate report on mental health advocacy was also published for consultation in June 2002. It contained a number of recommendations for good practice. The responses from both consultation exercises are being carefully evaluated and will be taken into account in developing plans for implementing the new specialist service, including the funding arrangements.

Autism

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will implement the recommendations of the Charter for Persons with Autism adopted as a written declaration by the European Parliament on 9 May 1996. [129443]

Dr. Ladyman: The rights of all citizens of the United Kingdom, including those who have autism, are set out in the Human Rights Act 1998. We are making sure that human rights principles are kept at the heart of services and policies, in particular through national standards, performance assessment and quality management and in taking forward, for example, the social services modernisation agenda and the implementation of the NHS Plan. We will continue to put human rights at the heart of health and social care policy and the delivery of services for everyone, including people with autism.

Brent and Harrow Health Authority

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS dentists there are in the Brent and Harrow Health Authority area; what steps he is taking to increase the number of NHS dentists in the Brent and Harrow Health Authority area; and if he will make a statement. [128753]

Mr. Hutton: Brent and Harrow Health Authority dissolved on 1 April 2002 and North West London Strategic Health Authority is now the local headquarters of the national health service. However the latest available figures show that there were 221 general dental services dentists whose main work was in Brent and Harrow HA at 30 September 2002.

The proposals in the Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Bill, currently before Parliament, will underpin a modernised high-quality primary dental service provided through contracts between primary care trusts and dental practices properly integrated with the rest of the NHS.

North West London SHA will ensure that as new primary care centres are developed locally, dentistry will be part of the consideration of which services can be brought together for the convenience of patients.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the prescribing budget was for the Brent and Harrow Health Authority for the financial years (a) 2000–01, (b) 2001–02 and (c) 2002–03; and if he will make a statement. [128759]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not held centrally. Information from North West London Strategic Health Authority is shown in the following tables. Brent and Harrow Health Authority was dissolved on 1 April 2002 and Brent Primary Care Trust and Harrow PCT now have responsibility for setting prescribing budgets in Brent and Harrow respectively.

Prescribing budget for Brent and Harrow Health Authority

£000

	Actual	Budget
2000–01	45,702	45,344
2001–02	49,960	49,538

Combined prescribing budget for Brent PCT and Harrow PCT

£000

	Actual	Budget
2002–03	58,722	56,055

Each year the Department of Health issues guidance to the national health service containing advice about factors that should be taken into account in setting prescribing budgets. However it is for individual primary care trusts to set their prescribing budgets.

Bureaucracy

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many bureaucracy-busting champions have been appointed as part of the Government's anti-bureaucracy drive; and where they are located. [129588]

Mr. Hutton: No new appointments have been made as a result of this initiative. Each strategic health authority has identified an existing senior member of staff who will be responsible for ensuring that action is taken locally to reduce the burden placed on front-line national health service staff. This will complement the action already being taken by the Department.

Child Protection

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the NHS trusts which have not yet appointed a designated nurse for child protection. [127011]

Dr. Ladyman: According 10 the child protection sell-audit returns submitted to the Commission for Health improvement, by the end of May 2003, the following National Health Service trusts, including primary care trusts, acute trusts, and mental health trusts, did not have a named nurse in post when they made their return.

Tendring Primary Care Trust
Blackwater Valley and Hart Primary Care Trust
Colchester Primary Care Trust
Dudley South Primary Care Trust
Dudley Bencon and Castle Primary Care trust
Knowsley Primary Care Trust
Cheimslord Primary Care Trust
Waveney Primary Care Trust
Brent Primary Care Trust
Witham, Bramiree and Halstead Care NHS Trust
Cardiothoracic Centre Liverpool NHS Trust (The)
Walton Centre 1or Neurology & Neurosurgery NHS Trust
East Lancashire Hospitals NHS Trust
Rotherham General Hospitals NHS Trust
West Middlesex University Hospital NHS Trust
Whittington Hospital NHS Trust
Five Boroughs Partnership NHS Trust
Avon and Wiltshire Mental Health Partnerships NHS Trust
Calderstones NHS Trust
Cambridgeshire and Peterborough Mental Health Partnership NHS Trust
East London and The City Mental Health NHS Trust
Lincolnshire Partnership NHS Trust
North Cumbria Mental Health and Learning Disabilities NHS Trust
North East London Mental Health NHS Trust
Tavistock and Portman NHS Trust
Worcestershire Mental Health Partnership NHS Trust

However, 13 of these 26 trusts noted in their return that they were in the process of recruiting a named nurse, or that recruitment would start shortly, and a further four said that they had made alternative arrangements such as access to specialist advice Irom another trust or organisation, a shared team across the whole county, or a combined designated/named nurse post.

The following primary care trusts did not have a designated nurse in post at the time that they made their return:

Hensmere Primary Care Trust
West Cumbria Primary Care Trust
Rugby Primary Care Trust
Wafiord and Three Rivers Primary Care Trust
Tower Hamlets Primary Care Trust
Redbridge Primary Care Trust

However, three of these trusts noted in their return that they were in the process of recruiting a designated nurse, and another noted that it had made alternative arrangements for staff to access specialist advice.

Community Health Councils

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff, previously employed by the community health councils, have left their jobs in the last six months. [127518]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Figures on Community Health Council (CHC) staff leavers, which have been available since February 2003 when clearing houses were introduced, indicate that to end of June 2003, 100 CHC staff have left their jobs.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he estimates the last community health council will cease to function. [130319]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I refer the hon. Member to the Written Ministerial Statement made by my hon. Friend, the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State (Mr. Lammy) on Wednesday 4 June 2003, Official Report, columns 22–23WS. It is still our intention to abolish community health councils on 1 December 2003.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the staffing levels of community health councils; and what estimate he has made of their likely staff levels on 1 November. [130711]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 16 September 2003]: The Department is working closely with the employing authorities of community health council (CHC) staff and is regularly monitoring the staffing level of CHCs in the run up to the abolition date of 1 December. It is estimated that on 1 November there will be approximately 380 CHC staff.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements are being put in place to ensure that those community health councils which have to move from their premises prior to 1 December remain fully operational. [130712]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 16 September 2003]: Each community health council (CHC) has an exit strategy. In the case of those CHCs who have to move premises prior to 1 December the CHC lead will consult and discuss fully with the chair, members and staff the arrangements that will be in place for the operation of that CHC.

Dental Work

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are in place to ensure that unnecessary dental work is not carried out on patients by dentists for profit. [127984]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Dentists providing general dental services under the national health service are remunerated through fees set out in the Statement of Dental Remuneration. The fees are uprated annually in the light of recommendations from the Doctors and Dentists Remuneration Body. For treatments not listed on the Statement of Dental Remuneration and for courses of treatment where total gross lees are above a specified limit set out in regulations dentists are required to obtain prior approval from the Dental Practice Board.

The board continuously monitors treatments provided under the General Dental Service (GDS) to identify outlying prescribing patterns. The dental reference service of the Dental Practice Board undertakes random patient examinations of proposed treatment plans and completed treatments provided under the GDS to ensure that these meet patients clinical needs and are provided to appropriate standards. When providing general dental services a dentist's terms of service require that he or she "shall not provide care and treatment in excess of that which is necessary to secure and maintain oral health". A breach of these terms of service can result in a financial withholding.

Under the provisions of the Health and Social Care Bill currently before Parliament, Primary Care Trusts will commission dental services from April 2005 and will be given the resources to do so. Dentists who contract with a PCT will have a secure income in return for making a longer-term commitment to the NHS.

In response to the Office of Fair Trading report on private dentistry the Government has published an action plan. This is available at www.dti.gov.uk/topics2/dentists.htm. The plan commits the Government to support the development of evidence based clinical care pathways in the NHS to aid dental professionals in improving clinical and cost effective treatment planning of appropriate patient care. The Department of Health will explore with the General Dental Council how clinical pathways can inform its 'Maintaining Standards' guidance and thus be extended to private dentistry.

Diabetes

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures the Department has taken to reduce the number of people with diabetes. [128893]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Some risk factors for developing diabetes, such as family history, increasing age or ethnic origin cannot be modified. However it is possible to reduce other risk factors, such as being overweight, having an adverse distribution of body weight or being physically inactive. The Government have a range of actions under way to tackle these risk factors.

Two new initiatives will be key in fostering healthier lifestyles. The Department of Health is leading on the development of a cross-government food and health action plan. The Plan will pull together all the issues that influence what we eat and will address food production, manufacture and preparation, access to healthier food choices and providing information for consumers about healthy eating and nutrition. This is complemented by wide ranging action to increase mass participation in physical activity and sport, which will be progressed by a cross-government activity co-ordination team, jointly led by the Department of Health and the Department of Culture, Media and Sport.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people had diabetes in (a) Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) Tyne and Wear and (d) the UK (a) in 1980, (b) in 1990, (c) in 2000 and (d) on the latest date for which figures are available. [128892]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information is not available in the form requested. However, based on information from the Health Survey for England, the following figures may be estimated.

	Number of people with diabetes in the United Kingdom
1994	1,378,707
1998	1,684,111

Dialysis Treatment

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are receiving dialysis treatment in (a) Crosby, (b) the North West of England and (c) England. [129482]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The latest figures are from the 1998 Renal Survey commissioned by the Department of Health. This shows there were 13,405 patients in England receiving dialysis in 1998 of these 1,586 were being treated in the North West. Equivalent figures for the Crosby area are not available from this source.

Drug Addiction

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to increase the training available to GPs in the treatment of drug dependency. [129142]

Mr. Hutton: The Government do not specify the content of the General Practitioner training curriculum. This is the job of the Joint Committee on Postgraduate Training for General Practice (JCPTGP), which is the competent authority for general practice training in the United Kingdom. The JCPTGP is an independent professional body, and it is required by section 9(3) of the Vocational Training Regulations 1997 to determine and publish the curriculum to be followed by a GP registrar (for example a trainee GP).

The Regulations do specify seven competencies which must be tested, and which the curriculum must therefore teach:

factual medical knowledge sufficient to enable the doctor to perform the duties of a GP;

the ability to apply factual medical knowledge to the management of problems presented by patients in general practice;

effective communication, both orally and in writing;

the ability to consult satisfactorily with general practice patients;

the ability to review and critically analyse the practitioner's own working practices and to manage any necessary changes appropriately;

clinical skills; and the ability to synthesise all the above competencies and apply them appropriately in a general practice setting.

GPs are expected therefore to be trained in the skills needed to deal with all their patients.

Failing Hospitals

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which organisations are included on the Department's list of possible franchisees for the management of failing hospitals; and which organisations have been awarded franchises for running failing hospitals. [129746]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 15 September 2003]: The National Health Service Franchising Register of Expertise was published in December 2002. All current three star NHS organisations are on the register along with Trent strategic health authority and eight private sector organisations who are:

BMI Healthcare, BUPA Hospitals Ltd., Capio Healthcare UK Ltd., Hospitalia activHealth gmbh, Interhealth Canada Ltd., Quo Health, Secta Group Ltd. and Serco Health.

Prior 10 December 2002, six NHS trusts were franchised as a result of their performance in 2000–01, and recruited new chief executives who were already working in the NHS.

Good Hope Hospital NHS Trust was given a zero star rating for their performance in 2001–02. Following a rigorous competitive tender, Secta won the franchise to run the trust. The new chief executive started on 1 September 2003.

Falls

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what percentage of admissions to care homes of people over the age of (a) 50 years and (b) 65 years in each of the last five years for which figures are available were as a result of a fall. [127349]

Dr. Ladyman: Information on the reason for admission to care homes is not collected centrally.

The number of admissions to care homes supported wholly or in part by local authorities is provided in the table for the years 1997–98 to 2001–02.

Number of admissions to care homes 1997–98 to 2001–02

	All ages	18–64	65+
1997–98	402,025	133,000	269,025
1998–99	403,110	133,555	269,555
1999–2000	397,905	135,765	262,140
2000–01	367,350	130,075	237,275
2001–02	374,925	133,140	241,785

Note:
Data includes permanent and temporary admissions.
Source:
SR1, Table S2

Fertility Treatment (Havering)

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many individuals resident in the London borough of Havering are on a waiting list for fertility treatment. [129049]

Mr. Hutton: This information is not collected centrally. Information from the North East London Strategic Health Authority is that there are currently 30 Havering residents waiting for national health service funded in-vitro fertilisation treatment at Bart's and the London NHS Trust. This does not include those patients that are funding their treatment privately either at a NHS trust or through a private clinic.

GP Lists

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 1 September 2003, Official Report, column 936W, on GP lists, what the average list size was in each year since 1992. [129720]

Mr. Hutton: Data on the number of general practitioners and patients are published annually. The latest edition, Statistics for General Medical Practitioners in England: 1992–2002, is available at http://www.doh.gov.uk/public/sb0303.pdf

The table shows the average GP list size from 1992–2002.

The average list size continues to fall and is 4 per cent. lower in 2002 than it was in 1992.

Unrestricted Principals and Equivalents (UPEs)[1] average list size 1992–2002

England — Numbers (headcount)

	UPEs	Average list size
1992	25,968	1,922
1993	26,280	1,902
1994	26,567	1,900
1995	26702	1,887
1996	26,855	1,885
1997	27,099	1,878
1998	27,392	1,866
1999	27,591	1,845
2000	27,704	1,853
2001	27,843	1,841
2002	28,031	1,838

[1] UPEs include GMS Unrestricted Principals, PMS Contracted GPs and PMS Salaried GPs.
Note:
Data as at 1 October 1992–99 and 30 September 2000–02.
Source:
Department of Health General and Personal Medical Services Statistics

GP Recruitment

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many GPs have been recruited through the (a) GP Returner scheme and (b) Golden Hello scheme; and how many GPs have delayed their retirement through the Delayed Retirement scheme. [128917]

Mr. Hutton: The flexible careers scheme has received 198 applications from doctors wishing to return to general practice. 59 of these are already back in general practice and a further 139 are being processed.

Application forms received by the Department indicate that over 2,900 general practitioners have received the golden hello payment.

No information is held centrally on those doctors who delay their retirement.

Health Organisations (Romford)

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with health organisations in Romford during the past 12 months. [129045]

Mr. Hutton: I met with the North East London Strategic Health Authority on 5 February 2003.

Histopathology

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his policy is on assisting NHS trusts to recruit histopathology consultants. [129111]

Mr. Hutton: The Department ot Health has a number of national initiatives in place to assist National Health Service trusts to recruit consultants, including histopathologists.

Under the Department International Fellowship programme, twenty Histopathologists have been recruited and accepted others of employment from NHS trusts. A further nine have been recruited under the global scheme.

In addition, we are taking forward a programme of work to address key issues of concern to the medical profession as part of the Improving Working Lives initiative. The Flexible Careers Scheme, which is partially centrally funded, allows consultants to strike a better balance between work and other aspects of their life outside work. The scheme enables consultants to work flexibly such as working round the school holidays and job-sharing.

Hospital Patients (Homeless People)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients whose address was listed as no fixed abode were admitted to NHS hospitals between January and June. [129489]

Mr. Hutton: Data are not yet available for January to June, 2002 or 2003. Information shown in the table is for January to June 2001. Due to the nature of homelessness, it may not always be possible to accurately record information. The figures quoted in the response are likely to significantly undercount the 'true' values. This is because in many cases people of no fixed abode may be admitted from temporary accommodation such as a hostel or be sleeping at a friend's home and are coded accordingly.

Finished Admissions into NHS hospitals where place of residence is listed as no fixed abode

	Number
January 2001 to June 2001	3,267

Notes:
Data in this table are ungrossed
Data exclude all healthy newborn babies.
Source:
Hospital Episode Statistics (HES), Department of Health

Hospital Trust Deficits

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the underlying deficit was in 2002–03 of each of the hospital trusts which he has authorised to proceed with application for foundation status. [129299]

Mr. Hutton: Audited financial information in respect of the 2002–03 year for all national health service trusts is published in their individual annual accounts. This information will not be available centrally until the end of October 2003.

Hospital Waiting Lists/Times

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to cut waiting lists in the London borough of Havering. [129050]

Mr. Hutton: The national health service is working to reduce waiting times so that by the end of March 2004, the maximum waiting time for in-patient treatment will be cut to nine months and the maximum waiting time for an out-patient appointment will be cut to 17 weeks.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) cancer, (b) heart disease, (c) hip replacement and (d) liver complaint patients resident in the London borough of Havering are on a waiting list for treatment. [129052]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not collected in the requested format.

Hospital Wards

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many mixed-sex wards have been divided into single-sex bays at (a) Darent Valley Hospital, Dartford and (b) West Middlesex Hospital, London since 1 January 2002; and if he will make a statement. [128768]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information is not available in the format requested. Ward level data are not collected centrally.

The Department of Health set three objectives to support the elimination of mixed-sex accommodation with a deadline of December 2002, designed to deliver separate sleeping areas, separate toilet and washing facilities and safe facilities for the mentally ill. Compliance is measured at trust level, and both Dartford and Gravesham National Health Service Trust and West Middlesex University Hospital NHS Trust are meeting these objectives.

Infection Transmission

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are being taken to minimise the risk of transmission of infection via ambulances. [130313]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In 2000, the Department of Health issued advice on the management and control of hospital infection (Health Service Circular 2000/02). All national health service trusts, including ambulance trusts were required to take action to:

strengthen prevention and control of infection;

secure appropriate health care services for patients with infection; and improve surveillance of infection.

Measures taken on infection control are a matter for individual trusts. Each trust will have an infection control policy which should comply with current best practice and have access to local advice.

Medical Students

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total intake of United Kingdom medical schools was in each year since 1990. [128930]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the table.

United Kingdom Medical School Intake per Academic Year between 1990 and 2002

1990–91	4,311
1991–92	4,320
1992–93	4,449
1993–94	4,531
1994–95	4,778
1995–96	4,699
1996–97	4,833
1997–98	5,062
1998–99	5,069
1999–2000	5,302
2000–01	5,610
2001–02	6,115
2002–03[1]	6,740

[1] Figures are provisional until November 2003 when a final figure will be reported.

Source:
HEFCE

Note:
By 2005, UK medical school intakes are planned to be around 7,300

Mental Health Services for Deaf People

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many graduate primary care mental health workers there are in each NHS region. [129488]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The NHS Plan set out that one thousand new graduate primary care workers trained in brief therapy techniques of proven effectiveness will be recruited to help general practitioners manage and treat mental common mental health problems. The target date set for local services through priorities and planning guidance is December 2004; training courses have just been established and arrangements to monitor recruitment are currently in hand. This means that the information requested about the employment by specialised trusts of new graduate workers is not yet available.

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps the Government are taking to improve mental health services for deaf people; and when he expects to see the results from these improvements; [130031]

(2) what action the Government are taking with regard to the consultation document, "A Sign of the Times"; [130032]

(3) what steps he plans to take to implement the proposals in the consultation document, "A Sign of the Times"; and how he plans to measure the effectiveness of the changes; [130033]

(4) what steps the Government are taking to monitor the impact of the National Services Framework for mental health services on deaf and hard of hearing patients; and what the results are. [130035]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 16 September 2003]: The Government's strategy for mental health services in England is set out in the "National Service Framework for Mental Health" which specifies seven standards that people should be able to expect from services. The National Service Framework standards apply to all people of working age who have mental health problems including those who are deaf or hard of hearing.

"A Sign of the Times", a consultation document on modernising mental health services for people who are deaf, sought the views of all stakeholders on a number of proposals to improve services for deaf and deafblind users of mental health services through a consultation exercise which ended in April. The Department will publish implementation guidance later in the year that will take all responses to "A Sign of the Times" into account.

It is envisaged that the implementation guidance will set out comprehensive arrangements for performance management of the implementation process.

Methylphenidate

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children have been prescribed methylphenidate in the last year. [127098]

Dr. Ladyman: Information is not available in the form requested. However the figures in the following table show the total number of prescription items of Methylphenidate Hydrochloride dispensed in the community in England in each of the last five years. The majority of prescription items of Methylphenidate Hydrochloride are for the brand Ritalin.

Number of prescription items of Methylphenidate Hydrochloride dispensed in the community in England, 1998 to 2002

Prescription items (thousand)

	Total
1998	126.6
1999	158.0
2000	186.2
2001	208.5
2001	254.0

Source:
Prescription Cost Analysis data from the Prescription Pricing Authority

In 2002, around 91 per cent. of the 254,000 prescription items were dispensed in the community to children (children under 16 and young people aged 16 to 18 in full time education). An estimated 1 per cent. of the items were dispensed to people aged 60 and over with the remainder being dispensed to other adults. These proportions have been similar in recent years.

Negligence Claims

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was paid to cover professional negligence claims on London hospitals in each year since 1992–93; what proportion each sum represented of those hospital budgets; and if he will make a statement. [128764]

Mr. Hutton: Information on the amounts paid to cover professional negligence claims is not collected centrally.

NHS (Public Health)

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) public health tutors and (b) regulatory affairs managers are employed by the NHS. [128678]

Mr. Hutton: Information on the number of public health tutors and regulatory affairs managers employed by the National Health Service is not collected centrally.

NHS Dentistry

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were waiting to be registered by NHS dentists in (a) Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) Tyne and Wear, (d) the North East and (e) England in each year since 1997. [128888]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not held centrally. Registrations remain broadly stable in these areas and are shown in the following table.

General Dental Service: Number of registrations with a GDS dentist since 1997

Health Authority/Primary Care Trust	1997[1,2]	1998[2]	1999[2]	2000[2]	2001[2]	2002[3]	2002[4]	2003[4]
England (million)	26.8	23.5	23.5	23.7	23.6	23.5	23.5	23.4
Northern and Yorkshire Region (thousand)	3,850.6	3,451.9	3,447.8	3,486.1	3,484.3	3,439.1	—	—
Gateshead and South Tyneside HA (thousand)	213.2	188.6	191.4	190.5	193.6	190.2	—	—
Newcastle and North Tyneside HA (thousand)	278.8	241.5	245.5	245.0	239.5	239.3	—	—
Sunderland HA (thousand)	169.8	147.0	147.0	148.8	150.8	152.3	—	—
Northumberland, Tyne and Wear SHA (thousand)	—	—	—	—	—	—	743.1	751.6
Newcastle PCT (thousand)	—	—	—	—	—	—	139.2	140.6
Gateshead PCT (thousand)	—	—	—	—	—	—	101.1	99.1
South Tyneside PCT (thousand)	—	—	—	—	—	—	84.3	86.1
North Tyneside PCT (thousand)	—	—	—	—	—	—	101.8	103.3
Sunderland Teaching PCT (thousand)	—	—	—	—	—	—	150.3	153.1

[1] Registration numbers are not consistent with numbers for later dates because the 1997 numbers partly reflect the previous 24 months registration period (now 15 months).
[2] September
[3] August
[4] Responsibilities were transferred from HAs to PCTs from 1 October 2003.
Source:
Dental Practice Board

NHS Staff (E-mail Access)

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what targets have been set for NHS staff to have access to email; what the baseline was for the target; in which document the target was published; and what progress has been made towards the target. [128910]

Mr. Hutton: The Government's strategy document "Building the Information Core—Implementing the NHS Plan" published in 2000 set the target of March 2003 for all National Health Service staff to have access to email. This target is now reflected in the National Programme for Information Technology in the NHS that provides a new approach to delivering IT in the NHS.

At 31 March 2003 NHS trusts reported via the information for health tracking database that 79 per cent. of all NHS staff (822,000 of a total of 1,037,000) had access to email and web browsing. Priority had been given to staff directly involved in the patient care process, so that 98 per cent. of consultants (28,600 of 28,700) and 82 per cent. of clinical staff (602,000 of 732,000, including consultants) had connectivity by that date.

The new centrally provided NHS national email service is now available to all staff, although take-up is a matter for local priorities. The NHS Directory (electronic address book) is one of the largest in the world and today holds 930,000 entries. The simple mail transfer protocol relay service through which internal NHS messaging, including e-mail, is handled, carried over 30 million messages in August 2003.

Nurses

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses have been recruited by the NHS from South Africa in each of the last five years. [130037]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 16 September 2003]: The information requested is not collected by the Department. Information about the number of nurses admitted to the Nursing and Midwifery Council register is published by the Nursing and Midwifery Council (www.nmc-uk.org).

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS nurses were (a) suspended and (b) on gardening or special leave, at the latest date for which figures are available; for how long they were suspended; what the total cost was to the NHS; and if he will make a statement. [128932]

Mr. Hutton: The Department of Health does not collect any information centrally on the numbers of National Health Service nurses that are suspended or on special leave.

Stephen Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses are in training; and how many were in training in 1997. [130543]

Mr. Hutton: In 1997–98 there were 38,412 nurses and midwives in pre-registration training. In 2002–03 there were 60,189 nurses in pre-registration training, an increase of 57 per cent.

Obesity Reduction

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps have been taken in the last two years in (a) the London borough of Richmond upon Thames, (b) Inner London and (c) Greater London to reduce obesity; and if he will make a statement. [128774]

Mr. Hutton: Local strategies on reducing obesity are being developed as part of the national service framework for coronary heart disease and national service framework for diabetes. These programmes include a range of initiatives aimed at promoting healthy eating and increasing levels of physical activity. As part of the national school fruit scheme, over 300,000 children in London are receiving a piece of free fruit every school day. 32 schools in the London borough of Richmond upon Thames (primary and secondary) are part of the healthy schools scheme (launched nationally in 1999 as the national healthy school standard). In addition Richmond and Twickenham Primary Care Trust has delivered two healthy eating support programmes to tackle obesity and related diseases.

Ongoing initiatives have a role in obesity prevention including the reform of the welfare food scheme, various school based initiatives such as the national school fruit scheme, the five-a-day community programme and the local exercise action pilots.

Activity to tackle obesity in London is being delivered by a wide range of organisations and initiatives through a variety of funding sources, examples of these are:

approximately 15 healthy living centres situated within communities with high levels of deprivation and health needs, have a focus on tackling obesity;

nine five-a-day projects in London have been established in the most 20 per cent. deprived of primary care trusts;

the national school fruit scheme has 90 per cent. coverage in London in all local education authority maintained primary and infant schools;

a school sport co-ordinators programme that aims to promote physical activity in out of school hours learning is also in place across London.

Overseas Nurses

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what efforts his Department is making to enforce the ban on the recruitment of nurses from developing countries. [129116]

Mr. Hutton: The code of practice for national health service employers involved in the international recruitment of health care professionals was published in October 2001.

The code states that developing countries should not be targeted for recruitment, nor should NHS employers contract with agencies, which do not comply with the code. Workforce development confederations are working closely with NHS employers in their area to ensure their compliance.

The Department has established a list of recruitment agencies that are operating in line with the code. The list appears on the Department website www.doh.gov.uk/international-recruitment.

Overseas Visitors (NHS Treatment)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on treatment on the NHS for overseas visitors who are fully or partially exempt from the National Health Service (Charges to Overseas Visitors) Regulations 1989, in each of the last five years. [128702]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 15 September 2003]: This information is not available centrally. Once it has been established that an overseas visitor is exempt from charges, they are dealt with in the same way as any other patient and national health service trusts are not required to keep a separate record of the cost of their treatment.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many named day written parliamentary questions tabled to him between 1 February and 1 July received (a) a substantive answer on the named day and (b) a holding answer; [127498]

(2) how many named day written Parliamentary questions were tabled to him between 1 February and 1 July; and how many of those which received a holding answer were given a substantive answer (a) within three days, (b) within seven days, (c) within 14 days, (d) within 28 days and (e) over 28 days. [127511]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department received 549 named day written Parliamentary Questions between 1 February and 1 July 2003. Of these, 146 were answered on the day named, and 403 received substantive replies after being given a holding answer. The breakdown of days within which answers were given is shown in the table.

Interval (calendar days after the holding answer) within which a substantive answer was given	Number of PQs
1–3	150
4–7	117
8–14	66
15–28	53
Over 28	17
Total	403

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many written Parliamentary Questions he received in each Parliamentary year since May 1997; how many received no answer due to the information not being collected or held centrally; and what proportion of the total number of written questions received this represented in each year. [127506]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Using Table Office information for previous years, the number of parliamentary Questions received in each Parliamentary year since 1997 is shown in the table:

	Number
1997–98	4,316
1998–99	2,769
1999–2000	3,864
2000–01	1,798
2001–02	9,314
2002–03	[1]6,970

[1] To 1 July 2003

Information is not collected centrally on the number of PQs that received no answer and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Written Questions

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many ordinary written Parliamentary questions were tabled to him between 15 October 2002 and 1 July 2003; [127517]

(2) how many ordinary written questions that were tabled between 15 October 2002 and 1 July 2003 received a substantive answer (a) within three days, (b) within seven days, (c) within fourteen days, (d) within 28 days and (e) over 28 days. [127436]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A total of 5,637 ordinary written Parliamentary Questions were tabled between 15 October 2002 and 1 July 2003.

The breakdown by days within which answers were given, based on a 10 per cent. sample of the total, is shown in the table.

Interval (calendar days) after the question's due date in which an answer was given	Number of PQs
0–3	80
4–7	201
8–14	165
15–28	116
Over 28	46
Total	608

Patient Readmissions

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of discharged patients were readmitted within one month as emergencies in each quarter of the past five years. [130327]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department of Health collects quarterly monitoring information on emergency readmissions within 28 days of discharge for patients of all ages. This information has been collected since 2002–03 and the information is set out in table 1.

Prior to 2002–03, the target for emergency readmissions related only to those patients aged 75 and over. Table 2 also includes the quarterly information for patients aged 75 and over prior to 2002–03.

Table 1

Financial year	Quarter	Number of people of all ages discharged from hospital	Number of people of all ages readmitted as an emergency within 28 days of discharge	Rate of 28 day emergency readmission for people of all ages (percentage)
2003–04	Q1	2,402,573	135,153	5.6
2002–03	Q4	2,501,481	138,742	5.5
2002–03	Q3	2,429,606	131,704	5.4
2002–03	Q2	2,334,696	124,176	5.3
2002–03	Q1	2,313,818	125,085	5.4

Table 2

Financial year	Quarter	Number of people aged 75 and over discharged from hospital	Number of people aged 75 and over readmitted as an emergency within 28 days of discharge	Rate of 28 day emergency readmission for people aged over 75 (percentage)
2001–02	Q4	437,034	31,493	7.2
2001–02	Q3	429,124	31,427	7.3
2001–02	Q2	422,143	30,083	7.1
2001–02	Q1	408,817	29,878	7.3
2000–01	Q4	409,335	31,538	7.7
2000–01	Q3	411,137	29,896	7.3
2000–01	Q2	406,761	28,820	7.1
2000–01	Q1	390,010	28,735	7.4
1999–2000	Q4	377,277	28,611	7.6
1999–2000	Q3	368,244	26,523	7.2
1999–2000	Q2	368,329	26,758	7.3
1999–2000	Q1	346,079	26,702	7.7
1998–99	Q4	365,801	29,933	8.2
1998–99	Q3	361,266	29,110	8.1
1998–99	Q2	357,275	28,839	8.1
1998–99	Q1	342,787	29,213	8.5
1997–98	Q4	343,170	24,435	7.1
1997–98	Q3	335,188	23,771	7.1
1997–98	Q2	333,781	22,385	6.7
1997–98	Q1	326,996	23,557	7.2
1996–97	Q4	339,389	23,625	7.0

Patients Forums

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of patient forums will be fully (a) operational and (b) staffed by 1 December. [130714]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 16 September 2003]: All patients' forums will be in place and fully operational by 1 December 2003. Staff support for all patients' forums has been in place since 1 September 2003.

Post-operative Death Rates

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on post-operative death rates at the Queen Alexandra Hospital, Portsmouth. [129667]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 16 September 2003]: In the 2003 Performance Ratings, covering patients treated in the calendar year 2002, Portsmouth Hospitals national health service trust was assessed as having a 28 day post-surgical mortality rate that was not statistically different from the England average. In earlier years' performance assessments, Portsmouth has always done as well as or better than the England average.

Prescribing Budget

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) 2002–2003 prescribing budget as notified to the Prescriptions Pricing Authority, (b) most recent forecast out-turn of prescribing expenditure for 2002–03, (c) projected (i) overspend and (ii) underspend, and (d) projected (i) overspend and (ii) underspend as a percentage of the prescribing budget were. [103767]

Mr. Hutton: Information on the prescribing budgets notified to the Prescription Pricing Authority (PPA) by each Primary Care Trust has been placed in the Library. They are practice level prescribing budgets. They do not necessarily reflect the total resource set aside locally for prescribing as Primary Care Trusts may hold contingency reserves. Information is now available for the entire financial year (up to and including March 2003) so the outturn and overspend figures are actual figures, not forecasted ones.

Prescriptions

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many prescriptions have been issued by GPs in each of the last five years; and what steps have been taken to modernise the system. [128703]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 15 September 2003]: Information on the number of prescriptions dispensed in the community in each of the last five years is shown in the table.

In June 2002, three pilot exercises commissioned by the Department of Health commenced to examine the electronic transmission of prescriptions (ETP). The pilots explained options for linking computerised general practitioner practices to local community pharmacies and the Prescription Pricing Authority using the NHSnet. The pilots, which formally closed at the end of June 2003, were independently evaluated and have helped to identify the benefits, risks and costs associated with ETP. These findings will be used to inform the development of a sustainable, national prescription service which is an integral part of the national health service information technology strategy.

Number of prescription items[1], forms[1], and average items per form of all drugs dispensed in the community in England, 1998–2002

	Total items[1]	Forms[1]	Average items per form
Number of prescription items and forms[1], excluding dispensing doctors
1998	467.1	268	1.74
1999	481.9	270.9	1.78
2000	500.5	276.2	1.81
2001	533.1	290.4	1.84
2002	560.7	299.8	1.87

Number of prescription items[1], forms[1], and average items per form of all drugs dispensed in the community in England, 1998–2002

	Total items[1]	Forms[1]	Average items per form
Number of prescription items and forms[1], including dispensing doctors
2001	597.4	319.3	1.87
2002	617	325.5	1.9

[1] Millions

Notes:

1. The data are based on all prescription items dispensed in the community in England, i.e. by community pharmacists and appliance contractors, dispensing doctors, and prescriptions submitted by prescribing doctors for items personally administered in England.
2. The data do not cover drugs dispensed in hospital or private prescriptions.
3. Prior to 2001, items dispensed by dispensing doctors and personal administration prescriptions are excluded.
4. Each single item written on the form is counted as a prescription item.

Source:

Prescription Cost Analysis (PCA) data from the Prescription Pricing Authority

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance has been given in the last year to primary care trusts regarding the time limits for prescriptions. [130024]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 16 September 2003]: We have not issued guidance on the time limits for, or duration of, prescriptions. However, it is common practice nowadays for general practitioner prescriptions to be issued for one month or 28 days at a time.

Suicide

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many deaf people have committed suicide in each of the last five years. [130034]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 16 September 2003]: This information is not collected centrally.

Tooth Decay

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the incidence of tooth decay in children was in (a) Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) Tyne and Wear and (d) the UK (i) in 1980, (ii) in 1990, (iii) in 2000 and (iv) the latest date for which figures are available. [128894]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information shown in the table on the average number of decayed, missing and filled teeth in children aged five has been extracted from reports of surveys conducted by the British Association for the Study of Community Dentistry.

BASCD Survey of the dental caries experience of 5-year-old children

(Mean number of decayed, missing or filled teeth)

	Year of study
	1985–86[1]	1987–88[1]	1989–90[1]	1991–92[1]	1993–94[1]
United Kingdom	—	—	—	—	1.96
Great Britain	—	1.88	1.80	1.86	1.92
England and Wales	—	—	—	—	—
England	—	1.73	1.62	1.66	1.74

BASCD Survey of the dental caries experience of 5-year-old children

(Mean number of decayed, missing or filled teeth)

	Year of study
	1985–86[1]	1987–88[1]	1989–90[1]	1991–92[1]	1993–94[1]
Northern Region	1.97	1.60	1.69	1.71	1.99
Gateshead	1.70	1.62	1.09	1.32	2.31
Newcastle	—	1.20	1.28	1.37	1.47
North Tyneside	2.11	1.04	1.46	1.35	1.40
South Tyneside	2.23	2.03	1.80	1.87	2.42
Sunderland	2.28	1.64	1.98	1.90	2.13
Northern and Yorkshire Region	—	—	—	—	—
Gateshead and South Tyneside HA	—	—	—	—	—
Newcastle and North Tyneside HA	—	—	—	—	—
Sunderland HA	—	—	—	—	—
Northumberland, Tyne and Wear SHA	—	—	—	—	—
Gateshead PCT	—	—	—	—	—
Newcastle PCT	—	—	—	—	—
North Tyneside PCT	—	—	—	—	—
South Tyneside PCT	—	—	—	—	—
Sunderland Teaching PCT	—	—	—	—	—

	Year of study
	1995–96[2]	1997–98[2]	1999–2000[1,2]	2001–02[1,3]
United Kingdom	1.84	1.68	—	—
Great Britain	1.79	1.64	1.57	—
England and Wales	1.68	1.53	1.47	1.52
England	1.63	1.47	1.43	1.47
Northern Region	2.08	—	—	—
Gateshead	1.85	—	—	—
Newcastle	1.52	—	—	—
North Tyneside	1.13	—	—	—
South Tyneside	2.30	—	—	—
Sunderland	2.84	—	—	—
Northern and Yorkshire Region	2.12	1.90	1.80	—
Gateshead and South Tyneside HA	2.05	1.32	1.23	—
Newcastle and North Tyneside HA	1.35	1.35	1.20	—
Sunderland HA	2.84	2.14	1.93	—
Northumberland, Tyne and Wear SHA	—	—	—	1.68
Gateshead PCT	—	—	—	1.31
Newcastle PCT	—	—	—	1.60
North Tyneside PCT	—	—	—	1.17
South Tyneside PCT	—	—	—	2.05
Sunderland Teaching PCT	—	—	—	2.05

[1] The survey was not carried out for Northern Ireland in 1985–86, 1989–90, 1991–92, 1999–2000 or 2001–02. The survey was not carried out for Scotland in 1985–86 or 2001–02. The survey did not cover all of England in 1985–86. The combined results for England and Wales were not published from 1985–86 to 1993–94.

[2] Following the transfer from Family Health Service Authorities (FHSAs) to Health Authorities (HAs) in 1996, the results from the surveys from 1995–96 onwards were published by HA rather than by FHSA.

[3] Following the transfer from Health Authorities (HAs) to Primary Care Trusts (PCTs) in 2002, the 2001–02 survey results were published by Strategic Health Authority (SHA) and PCT rather than by region and HA.

Urology/Gastrointestinal Surgery (Children)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what level of support is routinely offered to children discharged from hospital after complex urology and gastrointestinal surgery received in primary care; [129292]

(2) if he will make a statement on the current situation whereby acute unit nurses are travelling from regional centres to primary care trusts in order to support children who have had urology and gastrointestinal surgery. [129294]

Dr. Ladyman: The successful transition of care for a child in these circumstances is reliant on preparations made by the regional centre in close liaison with local primary health care staff and the community nursing team. Levels of support will accord with the child's degree of dependency and transitional arrangements will include input from the regional centre appropriate to the child's recovery.

A national service framework (NSF) for children is currently under development. This will set standards aimed at raising the quality of the health and social care services that children receive. The first part of the NSF, relating to hospital standards, was published in April. Successive parts of the NSF will be published next year, and will include consideration of the best means to support children post-discharge following complex surgery.

Vehicles (London)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) frontline ambulances, (b) patient transport vehicles, (c) fast response cars, (d) medical motorbikes, (e) medical cycles and (f) special baby care units are available for London; and if he will make a statement. [128767]

Mr. Hutton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 8 September 2003, Official Report, column 185W.

TREASURY

Air Passenger Duty

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the total cost of the changes to air passenger duty announced in the March 2000 Budget for each year from 2000–01 to 2005–06; and if he will make a statement. [130124]

John Healey: The estimated cost to the Exchequer of the changes made to the air passenger duty at Budget 2000 are published in Table 1.2 of that year's FSBR (HC346) as:

	£ million
2000–01	5
2001–02	80
2002–03	90

No estimates have been made for other years.

All-employee Share Plan

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the total annual cost of the all-employee share plan introduced in the March 2000 Budget for each year from 2000–01 to 2005–06; and if he will make a statement. [130135]

Ruth Kelly: Estimates of the cost of Share Incentive Plan (SIP) are published annually in Inland Revenue Statistics and the Tax Ready Reckoner. The latest estimates are:

			£ million
	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03
Income tax	10	45	150
National insurance	5	30	90
Total	15	75	240

No estimates have yet been made for subsequent tax years.

Capital Gains Tax

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what his estimate is of the revenue yield from abolishing capital gains tax and taxing capital gains at the marginal rate of income tax; and if he will make a statement; [130140]

(2) what his latest estimate is of the cost of capital gains tax exemptions, excluding that relating to the disposal of the only or main residence, broken down in cash terms by each income decile; [130550]

(3) what his estimate is of the effect on the revenue yield from capital gains tax of simultaneously abolishing the (a) taper relief, (b) annual exempt amount and (c) gains accrued but unrealised at death, in each year from 2003–04 to 2005–06, broken down to show the cash effects on each income decile; and if he will make a statement. [130551]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates of the cost, on an accrual basis, of capital gains tax exemptions and reliefs for 2001–02 and 2002–03 are published in Table A3.1 in the Budget Report 2003.

There are no estimates of the revenue yield from abolishing capital gains tax and taxing capital gains at the marginal rate of tax, except at a disproportionate cost.

There are no estimates on the revenue yield of a simultaneous abolition of taper relief, annual exempt amount and gains accrued but unrealised at death, except at a disproportionate cost. The total cost of these reliefs and exceptions in Table A3.1, referred to above, does not take account of any interaction between the abolition of one relief or exemption and subsequent changes in the cost of the others.

Figures for later years are not available; breakdown of reliefs/exemptions by income decile is only available at a disproportionate cost.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what his estimate is of the revenue yield of (a) abolishing the capital gains tax annual exempt amount for (i) individuals and (ii) trustees and (b) reducing to £2,000 per annum the capital gains tax annual exempt amount for (A) individuals and (B) trustees; and if he will make a statement; [130149]

(2) what his estimate is of the revenue which would be raised by reducing the capital gains tax exempt amount to the level of the personal income tax allowance for (a) 2003–04 and (b) 2004–05; and if he will make a statement. [130233]

Dawn Primarolo: The total estimated yield on an accruals basis from abolishing capital gains tax annual exempt amount for individuals and trusts in 2001–02 and 2002–03 is published in Table A3.1 in the Budget Report 2003. They exclude any behavioural response to the tax change.

The total estimated yield on an accruals basis from reducing individuals capital gains tax annual exempt amount to £2,000 or setting it to the personal income tax allowance in 2003–04 and 2004–05 is set out in the following table,

Yield, £ millions	2003–04	2004–05
Individuals AEA set to £2,000 per annum (Trust AEA = £1,000)	190	240
Individuals AEA set to Personal Income Tax Allowance (Trust AEA = half the Personal Allowance)	70	90

The figures are consistent with the assumptions made in the Budget 2003 on future asset prices, and take into account the likely taxpayer behavioural responses to the tax change. The Annual Exempt Amount for Trusts is assumed to be half that of individuals.

The model used to cost CGT changes of this type links the AEA for individuals and trusts according to current practice. It is not possible to separately model the Annual Exempt Amount for individuals and trusts.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he is taking to prevent avoidance activities in relation to capital gains tax; and if he will make a statement. [130555]

Dawn Primarolo: This Government are committed to tackling avoidance of tax and have introduced a number of anti-avoidance measures relating to capital gains tax. We continue to monitor the position and shall not hesitate to introduce further legislation to protect the tax base when it is necessary to do so.

Changing Jobs

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to assist those for whom a move to new employment would impose cash flow problems. [129858]

John Healey: The Government recognise that the transition from welfare to work can be difficult for many. Consequently it has developed a range of measures to ease the move to new employment. The Job Grant offers £100 to longer-term benefit claimants who move into work. From October 2004 eligibility for the Job Grant will be extended and a new higher rate of £250 for households with children will be introduced.

These enhanced arrangements will replace the Back to Work Bonus and the lone parent Income Support run-on.

They will also be complemented by further changes to additional support. From April 2003, access to the Adviser Discretion Fund (ADF) has been extended to all those who have been claiming benefits for six months or more to meet essential costs of moving into work. In addition, from April 2004 a series of measures to simplify the administration of Housing Benefit will be introduced. These will include ending the requirement for claimants to submit a new claim each time they return to work. Instead they will only need to report their change in circumstances, making the move into work easier and smoother.

Further details of all these measures can be found in the 2002 Pre-Budget Report and 2003 Budget Report.

Child Trust Fund

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will publish the proposals for the Child Trust Fund. [130746]

Ruth Kelly: The Child Trust Fund is intended to encourage parents and children to develop the savings habit. It will ensure that every child, whatever their family background, will have access at the age of 18 when they begin their adult life, to a stock of assets which they can invest in their future.

It will also help children and their parents to understand the benefits of saving and investment and how to engage with financial institutions.

Detailed proposals covering the nature of the Child Trust Fund, how it will operate and the information and guidance that will be provided will be published shortly.

Corporation Tax

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the cost of abolishing the small companies rate of corporation tax and the main rate of corporation tax and replacing them with a single rate of 25 per cent. levied above the starting rate threshold. [130547]

Dawn Primarolo: This is not an option that the Government have considered, so no thorough analysis of the potential cost is available. All taxes are kept under review and decisions on tax rates are made as part of the normal Budget process. I refer the hon. Member to the Tax Ready Reckoner for indicative figures on the direct effects of illustrative tax changes.

Delays (Travellers)

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to reduce delays caused to bona fide travellers at customs entry points in the United Kingdom. [129605]

John Healey: The great majority of people entering the UK at ports and airports are not physically stopped by Customs. Customs use intelligence information and risk-profiling techniques to try to ensure that their checks inconvenience as few legitimate travellers as possible.

When Customs do undertake physical checks, their aim is always to take no longer than necessary to fulfil their anti-smuggling responsibilities.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has held with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on encouraging greater use of energy-saving practices in homes. [129751]

John Healey: Treasury Ministers and officials hold regular discussions with Defra on all policies including domestic energy efficiency.

In August this year, the Treasury and Defra launched a joint consultation document, "Economic Instruments to Improve Household Energy Efficiency: Consultation Document on Specific Measures".

Income Tax Rates

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people paid (a) income tax, (b) income tax at the lower rate of 10 per cent, (c) income tax at the basic rate and (d) income tax at the upper rate in each year from 1990–91 to 2003–04; and if he will make a statement. [130558]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to National Statistics table 2.1 on the Inland Revenue's website:

http://www.inlandrevenue.aov.uk/stats/income tax/it t01 l.htm.

Life Insurance

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will receive a reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for Tonbridge and Malling of 7 March 2003 to the Financial Secretary to the Treasury on the provision of life insurance against loss of life through acts of terrorism. [129755]

Ruth Kelly: I have done so.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the cost of the March 1999 Budget decision to remove the income tax charge on mobile phones for each year from 1999–2000 to 2004–05; and if he will make a statement. [130136]

Dawn Primarolo: Latest figures for the income tax liability on private use of employer provided mobile phones for the two years before the charge was removed are £30 million for 1997–98 rising to £40 million for 1998–99. These figures are based on information supplied by employers on P11D returns after the end of those years. With effect from 1999–2000, when the charge was removed, employers no longer had to report this information and so no updated estimates, following those given in the 1999 Financial Statement and Budget Report, have been made.

Pension Provision

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what his estimate is of the revenue effect of introducing an earnings cap on the earnings for which pension provision may be made with income tax relief of £50,000 per annum; and if he will make a statement; [130137]

(2) what his estimate is of the revenue effect of introducing a maximum level of earnings for which pension provision may be made with income tax relief of (a) £40,000, (b) £50,000, (c) £60,000, (d) £70,000, (e) £80,000, (f) £90,000, (g) £100,000 and (h) £150,000; and if he will make a statement. [130559]

Ruth Kelly: Due to the uncertainty of the behavioural effects resulting from such changes, estimates are not available.

Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the cost of income tax relief on approved pension schemes, in cash terms, broken down by each income decile; and if he will make a statement. [130549]

Ruth Kelly: Available estimates of the cost of tax relief on private pensions are contained in table T7.9 of Inland Revenue Statistics. The latest version is on the Inland Revenue website; http://www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/pensions/p_t09_l.htm. It is not possible to break these estimates down by income decile.

Recovering Money (Court Action)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what evaluation his Department has carried out of (a) the effectiveness of court action in recovering money owed to private finance companies and (b) the value for money of bringing proceedings in such cases. [130049]

John Healey: The Government keep all aspects of procurement policy under review in order to ensure that high quality public services are delivered on the basis of value for money.

Stamp Duty

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what his estimate is of the cost of the Pre-Budget Report 2000 decision to abolish stamp duty on property transactions in deprived areas for each year from 2000–01 to 2005–06; what assessment has been made of the effects of this policy on urban regeneration; and if he will make a statement; [130134]

(2) what his estimate is of the total annual cost of the stamp duty exemption on commercial property in deprived areas; what assessment has been made of the economic benefits of this relief; and if he will make a statement. [130238]

John Healey: The cost of abolishing stamp duty on property transactions under £150,000 in deprived areas from 30 November 2001 was £10 million in 2001–02 and £70 million in 2002–03. Estimates for later years are not yet available. The annual cost of exempting commercial properties prior to Budget 2003, included in the above amounts, was under £1 million.

The estimate of the additional cost from lifting the £150,000 cap for commercial property in deprived areas, as published in table A1.1 of this year's Financial Statement and Budget Report [HC 500], was £90 million in 2003–04 and £50 million thereafter.

This measure creates an incentive for purchasers of residential and non-residential property to invest in areas that they might not previously have considered. The social and physical benefits that follow when such areas are occupied by residents and businesses will provide a boost to the regeneration of these areas. We are committed to ensuring the effectiveness of the measure and are currently considering a range of options to evaluate the measure in time for the first report to the European Commission in 2004.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the revenue cost of restructuring stamp duty on residential property sales so as to charge marginal rates of (a) 0 per cent. on property sales of £100,000 or less, (b) 2 per cent. on sales revenue of between £100,000 and £200,000, (c) 3 per cent. on sales revenue of between £200,000 and £400,000, (d) 4 per cent. on sales revenue of between £400,000 and £750,000 and (e) 5 per cent. on sales revenue of over £750,000; and if he will make a statement. [130150]

Ruth Kelly: The revenue cost of restructuring stamp duty on residential property sales according to the scheme described above is estimated to be £1.1 billion in 2004–05. This does not include any allowance for behavioural changes.

Tax Credits

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assistance is available to help low income families with their tax credit claims. [125353]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 15 July 2003]: A range of measures is available.

Personal callers to Inland Revenue offices can make a claim to tax credits, as well as getting face-to-face help and advice, from any inland revenue inquiry centre. Jobcentre Plus customers can also get help, advice and make claims through Jobcentre Plus offices.

For those customers who prefer to make a paper claim, there is a single simple form for claiming both working tax credit and child tax credit supplemented by comprehensive—plain language—guidance.

A telephone helpline (GB: 0845 300 3900; NI: 0845 603 2000) is available 8am to 8pm every day (except Christmas Day, Boxing Day, New Years Day and Easter Sunday). A dedicated helpline is available for those with hearing or speech difficulties.

A range of explanatory leaflets is available covering the tax credits scheme in general, other help that may be available and further information about help with child care costs. These leaflets—and the paper claim form and guidance are available in large print and Braille versions as well as in a number of languages other than English.

By visiting the Inland Revenue website (www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/taxcredits), families—whatever their income or circumstances—can quickly establish whether they qualify for tax credits and obtain an indication of the amount of any potential award. Claims, and subsequent changes of circumstances, can be submitted online and answers to a wide range of frequently asked questions are also available on the site.

The Inland Revenue is also piloting new ways of working with intermediary organisations and local community groups to provide assistance with claims. At the same time, Jobcentre Plus offices are making sure their customers are aware of the help they can get, through the working tax credit, as they move into work.

Tax Credits Computer

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions since January 2003 the tax credits computer system has stopped working. [125404]

Dawn Primarolo: IT system supporting the new tax credits did not work initially as well as we expected and there was unscheduled down time as a result. The Inland Revenue worked urgently with their IT partners to improve the system's availability, speed and stability, and it has been performing much better for a number of months.

Unpaid Taxes

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the annual revenue cost of removing the Crown's preferential right to recover unpaid taxes, in each year from 2001–02 to 2005–06; and if he will make a statement. [130122]

Dawn Primarolo: The latest estimate of the annual revenue cost of removing the Crown's preferential rights in respects of taxes etc in insolvencies is:

	£ million
2001–02	nil
2002–03	10
2003–04	65
2004–05	70
2005–06	70

Removal of Crown preference was one of a number of measures introduced in the Enterprise Act 2002 to make the insolvency regime more supportive of enterprise, and is designed to bring real benefits to unsecured creditors, including many small firms.

VAT (Historic Buildings)

Lady Hermon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to exempt the cost of restoring historic buildings from VAT; and if he will make a statement. [129836]

John Healey [holding answer 15 September 2003]: Our long-standing formal agreements with out European partners allow us to keep our zero rates as they currently stand, but do not allow us to extend them or to introduce new ones.

The Government are particularly concerned about the position of listed places of worship. That is why we asked the European Commission to bring forward proposals to extend the categories of permitted reduced VAT rates to include their repair, maintenance and improvement. We are continuing to press this case during the current EU review of reduced rates and have, in the meantime, introduced the Listed Places of Worship Grant Scheme to provide an equivalent reduction in the cost of these repair projects.

HOUSE OF COMMONS PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES (HANSARD) ● 2002-03

CHADWYCK-HEALEY Vol. 410 (Part 2) cols. W867 - 1054 8 Sept - 6 Oct 2003

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 18 September 2003

PRIME MINISTER

Appointments

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Prime Minister when he expects to announce new appointments to the Committee on Standards in Public Life; and if he will make a statement. [131638]

The Prime Minister: I am pleased to announce that I have appointed four new members to the committee.

Sir Alistair Graham and Professor Hazel Genn will take up appointment from 1 October 2003 in succession to Ann Abraham, who stood down from the committee on appointment as the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration and Health Service Commissioner for England, and Professor Alice Brown, who resigned from the committee on appointment as the Scottish Public Services Ombudsman.

Patricia Hodgson and Brian Woods-Scawen will take up appointment from 1 January 2004 in succession to Frances Heaton and Sir Anthony Cleaver, who will both step down from the committee at the end of this year, on completion of their second terms of office.

All four appointments are for three years in the first instance, and were made fully in line with the Guidance of the Commissioner for Public Appointments.

I am very grateful to Ann Abraham, Alice Brown, Frances Heaton and Sir Anthony for their work on the committee and for the significant contribution they have made to standards in public life.

Engagements

Keith Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to meet the Prime Minister of Sweden. [130879]

The Prime Minister: I expect to next meet Prime Minister Persson at the opening of the EU Intergovernmental Conference in Rome on 4 October.

EU Reform

Keith Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister what progress has been made on the Reform Agenda in the EU. [130880]

The Prime Minister: Reforms which will be discussed in the forthcoming Intergovernmental Conference include the creation of a full-time Chair for the European Council and streamlining of the Union's structure and decision making. The European Council agreed in Seville last year to reform the way it works so it can better set the EU's strategic agenda. Progress, albeit not yet enough, has been achieved in the economic reform agenda agreed at Lisbon. Significant reforms of the Common Agricultural Policy were made in June this year. Alongside these, the EU is implementing the changes agreed in the Treaty of Nice in order to incorporate 10 new members in May next year.

Iraq

Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister when the Iraq Communications Group has met since 1 September 2002; who the members of the group are; who chairs the group; and from which budget its resources are drawn. [128598]

The Prime Minister: The Iraq Communications Group was formalised on 5 December 2002 and met on a weekly basis thereafter. Prior to that, its members met on an ad hoc basis. Meetings have become less frequent since the end of the conflict in Iraq. There have been approximately 19 meetings in total.

Membership varies, but it would normally include the FCO, MOD, Cabinet Office and DfID. Alastair Campbell chaired the ICG, but chairmanship has now passed to the FCO. There were no specific resources allocated to the ICG.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister whether he communicated with all members of the Intelligence and Security Committee about the content of the September 2002 dossier on Iraq. [130731]

The Prime Minister: The chairman of the Joint Intelligence Committee, with my approval, accepted an invitation from the Intelligence and Security Committee to brief all members on the content of the September dossier at their meeting on the morning of 24 September 2002.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister what his reasons were for communicating with the chairman of only the Intelligence and Security Committee rather than Select Committees about the content of the September 2002 dossier on Iraq. [130732]

The Prime Minister: In addition to the chairman of the Intelligence and Security Committee, the chairman of the Joint Intelligence Committee, with my approval, briefed the chairmen of the Defence and Foreign Affairs Select Committees on the content of the September dossier. All three briefings took place on 19 September 2002. The leaders of the two main Opposition parties were briefed on the previous day.

Tony Wright: To ask the Prime Minister if he will publish the intelligence assessment contained in the Joint Intelligence Committee report, "International Terrorism: War with Iraq", of 10 February. [130992]

The Prime Minister: Joint Intelligence Committee intelligence assessments are exempt from disclosure under exemption 1(a) and 1(c) of Part 2 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

David Winnick: To ask the Prime Minister what the Government's policy is on a Security Council resolution that would give a political involvement in Iraq's future to the Security Council. [131041]

The Prime Minister: The Government believe that it is for the Iraqi people to determine their own political future. This view is shared by other members of the Security Council and was stated in Security Council Resolution 1483.

Joint Intelligence Committee

Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister what official channels exist for members of the security services to flag up concerns over the interpretation of raw intelligence data to the chairman of the Joint Intelligence Committee. [128805]

The Prime Minister: There are established procedures by which the views of members of the intelligence and security agencies are relayed to the JIC. Before a paper is taken by the JIC, it is discussed at working level and then considered more formally during inter-departmental meetings (called Current Intelligence Groups or CIGS) at which representatives reflect the agreed views of their agencies and Departments. If outstanding issues remain, staff are expected to raise the matter with their representative on the JIC who will bring it to the attention of the committee when appropriate. Additionally, staff in the security and intelligence agencies are able to take any concerns or grievances they have, and which they have been unable to resolve within their internal management chain, to the staff counsellor who acts as an independent adviser.

Mongolia

Mr. Gray: To ask the Prime Minister if he will receive an official visit from the Prime Minister of Mongolia. [131179]

The Prime Minister: The Mongolian Prime Minister, Mr. Nambaryn Enkhbayar, will visit the UK as a guest of Her Majesty's Government from 23–25 October this year.

Sweden (Euro Referendum)

Keith Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he has had with the Prime Minister of Sweden on the result of the Swedish euro referendum; and if he will make a statement. [130878]

The Prime Minister: I am in regular touch with Prime Minister Persson on a range of issues. We spoke most recently on 12 September.

We respect the decision made by the people of Sweden on 14 September. The UK policy remains as before as I set out in my answers to the right hon. Member for Chingford and Woodford Green (Mr. Duncan Smith) at Prime Minister's Questions on 17 September 2003, Official Report, columns 851–52.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Female Entrepreneurs

20. Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Minister for Women what steps the Government are taking to encourage more women to start up small and medium-sized enterprises. [130838]

Jacqui Smith: The Government are committed to creating an environment and a culture that encourages more women to start or grow businesses and provides the necessary help and support. This is why we launched a national Strategic Framework for Women's Enterprise in May this year to provide a co-ordinated and long-term approach to the development of women's enterprise.

We are now working with our partners nationally and in the regions to take forward the recommendations of the Framework.

We are, for example, already engaged with regional development agencies, the Business Link Network and women's enterprise networks to ensure that the need of enterprising women everywhere are properly met.

Information and Communications Technology

21. David Taylor: To ask the Minister for Women what discussions she has had with the Secretary of State for Education and Skills on strategies to increase the number of women entering the information and communications technology profession; and if she will make a statement. [130839]

Ms Hewitt: The DTI and DfES are working together to reverse the under-representation of women in ICT. I announced in April a new strategy to improve the participation of women in science, engineering and technology careers. The Government Skills Strategy is creating new opportunities for women to develop the skills they need.

Women's Refuges

22. Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Minister for Women what plans she has to increase funding to women's refuges. [130840]

Jacqui Smith: The Government are committed to increasing the full range of accommodation options for victims of domestic violence, including more refuges and better help to support victims to stay in their own homes if appropriate. The Government is investing through the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister £8.9 million this financial year in refuges provision and the Housing Corporation has allocated an additional £9.9 million.

Parliamentary Questions

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Minister for Women how many questions directed to her remain unanswered. [130768]

Ms Hewitt: Of those questions tabled for answer up to and including 17 September 2003, there is one question remaining unanswered.

Public Appointments

Vera Baird: To ask the Minister for Women what steps she is taking to encourage more women to apply for public appointments. [130834]

Jacqui Smith: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has set a target of between 45 to 50 per cent. women in public appointments made by our Department. This target is supported by a number of initiatives my right hon. Friend has led over the past two years; for example, a national outreach campaign targeted at over 2,000 women from diverse backgrounds. These women are well represented at local and regional level, and have many skills needed to be successful when applying for national appointments.

Our Department also produced a practical guide to enable others to carry on this outreach work and over 3,000 have been distributed. As part of the outreach programme, we have also commissioned research to learn more about what barriers women face when applying for public appointments.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Manufacturing Output

12. Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent reports she has received on the impact of trends in manufacturing output in the UK upon the economy in the south-east. [130828]

Mr. Sutcliffe: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State receives regular reports from a variety of sources on manufacturing output at both the national and regional level.

Coal Industry Investment Aid Scheme

13. Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she expects the first payments to be made under the Coal Industry Investment Aid Scheme. [130829]

Mr. Timms: Applications for first period aid are being assessed at the moment. First payments to successful projects will be made as soon as possible after the decisions have been made.

Small Businesses

14. Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions she has had with the Inland Revenue on the taxation position of small businesses run by married couples. [130830]

Nigel Griffiths: The DTI has regular contact with the Inland Revenue on the taxation of small businesses generally including those run by married couples.

Advertising

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what further measures she is planning to prevent the publication of misleading advertising; and if she will list those advertisers issued with court orders in each year since 2000 to prevent the continued publication of misleading advertising. [129937]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Non-broadcast advertising is controlled mainly by self-regulation under which the Advertising Standards Authority is responsible for ensuring compliance with the British Code of Advertising, Sales Promotion and Direct Marketing. Providing legislative backing to the Code is the Control of Misleading Advertising Regulations 1988, which empowers the Office of Fair Trading to investigate complaints about misleading advertisements, and where necessary, to seek injunctions against further publication. OFT also have powers under the Enterprise Act (previously under the Stop Now Orders (EC Directive) Regulations 2001) to take action against misleading advertising that harms the collective interests of consumers. These powers are shared by Trading Standards Services. I have no plans to introduce any further measures in relation to misleading advertising.

During the period 2002–03, OFT obtained written assurances/undertakings in 25 cases. OFT obtained no Court Orders in 2000 or 2001. Court Orders obtained during 2002–03 were as follows:

	Court Order	Advertiser
6 March 2002	Interim Injunction CMARS	Planet Telecom plc 192enquiries.com Ltd. Peter Hutcheon John Tonge
30 May 2002	Final Injunction CMARS	Data Protection Agency Services Ltd. Michael Sullivan
25 June 2002	Interim Injunction CMARS	DPARS Ltd. Gary McNeish (both also trading as Data Protection Act Registration Service)
10 July 2002	Court Order (Stop Now Orders (EC Directive) Regulations 2001)	John Christopher Ineson Blake Hamilton Ltd. Property Associates (UK) Ltd.
22 July 2002	Final Injunction CMARS	Planet Telecom plc Peter Hutcheon John Tonge
12 November 2002	Final Injunction CMARS	DPARS Ltd. Gary McNeish (both trading as Data Protection Act Registration Service)
7 August 2003	Interim Injunction CMARS	Christopher Yewdall

Manufacturing Advisory Service

15. Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what analysis has been conducted of the effect of the Manufacturing Advisory Service on small and medium-sized companies. [130832]

Ms Hewitt: We receive regular reports of the impact of the Manufacturing Advisory Service on the companies it helps, most of whom are SMEs. These reports are very impressive. We are seeing substantial improvements in the productivity of companies that are taking advantage of its in-depth consultancy service.

Broadband

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the latest figures are for coverage by broadband in (a) urban and (b) rural areas. [130568]

Mr. Timms: Some 80 per cent. of UK households have access to a mass-market broadband solution targeted at residential or small business customers. The most recent statistics giving the breakdown for urban and rural areas are from June 2003. At that point national coverage was 76 per cent., urban and suburban areas, 92 per cent. and rural areas, 28 per cent.

Chemical Exports

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry under what circumstances chemicals banned for use in the UK can be manufactured in this country and exported outside the EU. [126693]

Mr. Browne: I have been asked to reply.

There is no absolute prohibition on the export to non-EU countries of chemicals banned for use in the UK.

However, arrangements to ensure that recipient countries are aware of the potential hazards of imported chemicals are provided by EC Regulation 304/2003 (copy in the Library). This regulation implements the Rotterdam Convention on Prior Informed Consent (PIC) for certain hazardous chemicals and pesticides in international trade. The PIC procedure gives importing countries the opportunity to refuse, or apply conditions to, imports of certain dangerous chemicals.

Company Contracts

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information her Department gathers on the placement of contracts with United Kingdom companies by (a) US and (b) US/UK business partnerships; and if she will make a statement. [130406]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: This information is not collected in this form.

Consumer Credit Legislation

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will set out her timetable for reforming consumer credit legislation. [131256]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I intend to publish a White Paper on consumer credit this autumn. This will include the timetable for reforming consumer credit legislation.

Copyright

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the extent of infringement of copyright in the downloading of music from the internet; and what further action she proposes to prevent it. [130196]

Ms Hewitt: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Anniesland (John Robertson), on 15 September 2003, Official Report, columns 538–39.

Customs and Excise

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans her Department has in cases where Her Majesty's Customs and Excise seize imported goods for inspection to limit recovery of their costs to businesses which are subsequently found to be importing counterfeit and illegal goods. [129386]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Department has no plans to seek changes to the EC Regulation applying to seizure of counterfeit and pirate goods at the border which governs activity in this area. The policy in and operation of this Regulation is for Her Majesty's Customs and Excise, which in turn, is the responsibility of my colleagues in the Treasury.

Debt Management

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many licensed debt collectors operate in the UK; how many complaints have been received regarding the conduct of debt collectors, in each year since 2000; how many complaints have been upheld in each year since 2000; how many debt collectors have been banned from practising in each year since 2000; and if she will place in the Library a list of banned debt collectors. [129938]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Office of Fair Trading is responsible for licensing and investigating complaints regarding debt collectors and other bodies involved in the consumer credit market.

The current consumer credit licence categories do not distinguish between debt collection and certain other forms of licensed lending. However, a recent survey by the Credit Services Association, a major trade body for the sector, suggests there are approximately 400 debt collection businesses in the UK, 206 of whom are its members.

Separate debt collection complaint data have not been recorded over the full period in question.

In January 2003, the OFT set up a specialist team to deal with complaints regarding debt collection; issuing debt collection guidance in July 2003, which sets out practices affecting fitness to hold a consumer credit licence. There are currently 82 complaints under investigation.

In 2000, the OFT issued 20 debt collectors with notices that it was minded to revoke, refuse or vary licences; 10 in 2001 and five in 2002 to March 2003.

Data on adverse determinations have not been recorded over the period in question by industry type, and it is not possible to provide a comprehensive list of debt collectors that have had their licence refused or revoked at this time.

Where there is insufficient evidence to recommend formal action, the OFT also issues warning letters to companies. This activity helps to secure compliance and enables prompt action if future evidence of breaches is received.

Data on how many debt collectors have been banned in each year since 2000 have not been collated and this could be done only at disproportionate cost. The Consumer Credit Public Register includes details of everyone holding a licence, everyone who has applied for one, or had one revoked, suspended or varied. It is held by the Office of Fair Trading, and the public can search the public register by telephone or visit in person.

Electricity Supply (Subsidies)

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what public subsidies have been made available to electricity suppliers in each year since 1983. [128301]

Mr. Timms: There have been no public subsidies to electricity suppliers since privatisation. I am not aware of any subsidies before privatisation, but confirmation of this could be made only at disproportionate cost.

The Government have, of course, made a credit facility available to British Energy while the company agrees and implements its restructuring plan.

Singapore Issues

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent assessment she has made of the attitude of the developing countries to the EU's Singapore issues. [131253]

Ms Hewitt: The EU does not have exclusive ownership of the Singapore issues, all WTO Members agreed to include it as part of the Doha Development Agenda in 2001.

Although we have supported the EU in its mandate on the Singapore issues, we have always made clear that concerns of developing countries need to be taken into account—especially in respect of negotiating capacity. I myself have for some time made it clear, both publicly and privately, that while I strongly support more foreign direct investment going to developing countries, it is not a priority of this government to launch negotiations on an investment agreement.

At Cancun, the Commission were made aware of developing country concerns on the proposed WTO agreements on investment and competition. On the final day of the Ministerial Conference, Commissioner Lamy, with the backing of the EU delegations, offered to drop the proposal to start negotiations on WTO investment and competition agreements completely.

Foreign Workers

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures her Department is taking to prevent the exploitation of foreign workers on low wages by (a) British companies and (b) foreign companies doing business in the United Kingdom. [129393]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The minimum wage was introduced to help prevent the exploitation of workers. It applies to nearly all workers with contracts in the UK, regardless of their nationality or that of their employers, and it is enforced by the Inland Revenue on this basis.

In addition, where the DTI becomes aware of a potential problem in connection with an employment agency, steps are taken to address it. For example, when DTI became aware of allegations about the mistreatment by agencies of Portuguese agricultural workers in the UK, contact was made immediately with the Portuguese Government to offer help in ensuring Portuguese agricultural workers en route to the UK are fully aware of their rights under EU and British law and know where to go to present any evidence of improper practice or abuse. UK and Portuguese officials and the Citizens Advice Bureau are currently working together on the production and distribution in the UK and Portugal of a leaflet in Portuguese giving guidance on employment rights under UK and EU law, and advising of sources of support and advice for workers.

Holiday Companies

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures are in place to ensure that holiday companies provide accurate information about the holidays they provide; and if she will make a statement. [129151]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Package tour organisers or retailers are required under The Package Travel, Package Holidays and Package Tours Regulations 1992 to provide specific information on various elements of a package holiday. Failure to provide such information is a criminal offence. Tour operators who provide misleading information in their brochures may also be prosecuted under the Trade Descriptions Act 1968.

In addition, members of the Association of British Travel Agents (ABTA) are required to meet certain standards, which are specified in the ABTA Code of Conduct.

Iraq

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 17 June 2003, Official Report, column 127W, on Iraq, if she will press the European Commission to include goods from Iraq in the Generalised System of Preferences as soon as possible. [129780]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The UK has made representation to the European Commission on Iraq's eligibility under the Generalised System of Preferences (GSP), conveying the UK Government's wish to re-instate GSP in Iraq as soon as possible.

A key requirement for GSP to be re-instated in Iraq is for administrative co-operation to be restored in the country. The situation with respect to authorities in Iraq continues to be unclear. The UK Government will continue its dialogue with the commission to move this matter forward.

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many contracts have been secured by British companies in connection with the reconstruction of Iraq; and what their approximate value is. [128945]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 11 September 2003]: According to the latest information we have from the Coalition Provisional Authority (CPA) in Iraq, British companies have so far secured 18 per cent. of sub-contracts awarded by Bechtel, worth approximately £10 million. UK companies have also secured contracts from other organisations funding reconstruction projects in Iraq but we do not have details of the value of these contracts.

Manufacturing Industry

Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action she is taking to improve the skills base of manufacturing industry. [130825]

Jacqui Smith: My Department published a manufacturing strategy in May 2002; it sets out seven areas of activity for manufacturing success of which one was raising skills and education levels.

My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Trade and Industry and for Education and Skills have since set out in the Governments Skills Strategy launched in July 2003 how we are putting employers centre stage, ensuring they have the right skills to support their businesses and organisations.

This Skills Strategy applies to the manufacturing industry as to other industries and all areas of UK business.

OFCOM

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions she has had with the Cabinet Office on updating Schedule 2 of the Parliamentary Commissioner Act 1967 to make OFCOM subject to the jurisdiction of the Parliamentary Commissioner; and when an appropriate order will be made to amend Schedule 2 of the Act. [127200]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 8 September 2003]: The intention was to make an order by the date on which the Communications Act received Royal Assent. In the event, however, the process could not be completed before the summer recess, owing to the need for various interested parties to be consulted on certain points of detail that arose during drafting. Arrangements are now in hand to make an order in good time to ensure that OFCOM is within the Parliamentary Commissioner's jurisdiction before it acquires its new functions.

Office for Civil Nuclear Security

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many requests for information on the Office for Civil Nuclear Security were received from the media between April 2002 and March 2003; how many requests were refused; what the reasons for refusal were in each case; and if she will make a statement. [123656]

Mr. Timms: The Department does not keep this information.

Oil Pipelines (Caucasus)

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she discussed with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs the environmental impacts of the Baku Tbilisi Ceyhan Oil Pipeline Project; and if she will make a statement. [130027]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 16 September 2003]: My officials are in regular contact with DEFRA officials regarding the ETC project.

Cover will only be provided if ECGD are satisfied that the relevant environmental, social and human rights impacts have been addressed and that the financial and project risks are acceptable.

Omega Site (Warrington)

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the future impact on employment in Warrington of the development of the Omega site; and if she will make a statement. [129927]

Ms Hewitt: Omega South is one of the North West Development Agency's strategic regional sites. It has the potential to create some 12,000 jobs and it is essential that a development of this scale and significance is consistent with both national and regional planning policies.

Parliamentary Questions

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many questions directed to her remain unanswered. [130752]

Ms Hewitt: Of those questions tabled for answer up to and including 17 September, there are 90 questions remaining unanswered.

Personnel Administration

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff were employed in personnel administration within the Department in each year since 1997. [130815]

Nigel Griffiths: Given the changes to the structure and organisation of the Department since 1997, I am unable to provide comparative figures immediately. I will write to the hon. Member giving her what information we have available.

Postal Services

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the closure of the post office at Priors Park, Tewkesbury. [129527]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 15 September 2003]: Consultation on a proposal to close Priors Park post office was announced by Post Office Ltd. on 4 July. Their decision to proceed with closure was notified on 22 August, and I understand that the office is due to close on 29 September.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on post office closures in the south-east. [130375]

Mr. Timms: Post office closures are an operational matter for Post Office Ltd. I understand from them that in the year to end March 2003, there were net closures of 39 post-offices in south-east England, of which 19 were under the urban reinvention programme. In the quarter to end June 2003, there were 56 net closures of which 50 were under the urban reinvention programme.

Property Ownership Rights

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment her Department has made of the impact of delays in establishing property ownership rights in developing countries upon British companies trading in such countries. [129429]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We have not made an assessment in these terms.

Renewable Obligation Certificates

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to reform the arrangements for renewable obligation certificate trading, with specific reference to the protection of traders affected by losses caused by a supplier going out of business. [130585]

Mr. Timms: I am aware of the concerns of traders likely to affected by the potential shortfall in the Renewables Buy-Out Fund, as a consequence of TXU's going into administration.

However since the extent of any possible shortfall will not be clear until 1 October, it is too early at this stage to assess the impact on the renewables market or to assess whether there is a need to make any changes to the renewables obligation.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to ensure compliance under arrangements for renewable obligation certificate trading. [130586]

Mr. Timms: Under the Renewables Obligation Order 2002, Ofgem have responsibility for monitoring compliance with the Renewables Obligation. Licensed electricity suppliers must demonstrate compliance to Ofgem by 1 October either through redeeming Renewable Obligation Certificates or paying the buy-out price.

Thorp

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the value of investments in Thorp. [129396]

Mr. Timms: An assessment of the economics of Thorp was published in 1993 as part of the public consultation process concerning operation of the plant. This assessment may be found in the Library of the House. It states that the costs associated with constructing Thorp amounted to £5.5 billion. It also explains that the contracts for the baseload period of the plant's operation provide for recovery of full capital costs as well as the on-going operating costs and provide for the operator, BNFL, to make a profit. Details of BNFL's financial performance—including the performance of its spent fuel management business—are provided in the company's annual reports which are also in the Libraries of the House.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations she has received from the Irish Minister for the Environment on projected closure dates for the Thorp nuclear plant at Sellafield. [128808]

Mr. Timms: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry received a letter dated 26 August from Ireland's Minister for the Environment, Heritage and Local Government which seeks information about the future operation of Thorp in the light of extensive recent media reports on this matter in Ireland.

Unsecured Loans

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what powers there are to restrict young adults in borrowing large amounts of money in unsecured loans; and what plans she has for further action to limit the amount of money young adults are allowed to borrow in unsecured loans; [129752]

(2) whether financial services companies are required to assess a young adult client's ability to repay loans before allowing a loan; [129753]

(3) how many people under 25 are being prosecuted for non-payment of loans. [129754]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 17 September 2003]: There are currently no powers to restrict the access of any individual over the age of 18 to credit.

Lenders, who have signed up to voluntary codes of practice such as the British Banking Code or the Finance and Leasing Association Code, provide the majority of credit. These require them to assess a consumer's ability to repay any credit they are seeking to borrow. I intend to publish a White Paper on consumer credit this autumn, which will include proposals to require all lenders lend responsibly.

Figures are not collated centrally for how many individuals are prosecuted for non-payment of loans and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

World Trade Negotiations

Mr. MacDougall: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action she is taking to promote the interests of developing countries in world trade negotiations; and if she will make a statement. [130821]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry made a statement to the House on Wednesday 17 September 2003, Official Report, columns 861 63 and I refer the hon. Member to that statement.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations she will make at Cancun with respect to improving property ownership structures and recognition in developing countries. [130036]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 16 September 2003]: The Government have always made clear that the Doha Development Agenda (DDA) should provide real benefits for developing countries. We took the opportunity of the World Trade Organisation Ministerial talks in Cancun to press for progress in the various trade and development issues contained in the DDA.

I refer my hon. Friend to the oral statement made in the House on 17 September.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether (a) the EU Commissioner and (b) she asked the Chairman to reconsider the closure of the WTO meeting at Cancun. [131246]

Ms Hewitt: I and a number of EU colleagues asked Commissioner Lamy at a meeting of the EU Council on Sunday to urge the Chairman to reconsider the closure of the conference. The EU along with other WTO members felt that with more time, it would have been possible to reach an agreement which would have benefited both developing and developed countries.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the United Kingdom tried to change the EU policy at the Cancun Summit in the light of the views of developing countries. [131247]

Ms Hewitt: The UK played a major role in supporting the EU's negotiating mandate at Cancun. We were able to use our particular links with Commonwealth countries and others to understand their concerns and to explain to them the EU position and vice versa. We and others were able to relay to the Commission the concerns which some developing countries had on some issues e.g. the Singapore issues. I myself have for some time made it clear publicly and privately that, while I strongly support developing countries receiving more foreign direct investment, it is not a priority of this government to launch negotiations on an investment agreement.

It was Commissioner Lamy who took the decision, with agreement of all EU members states to drop the proposal to launch negotiations on the WTO agreements on investment and competition.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the United Kingdom delegation to the Cancun Summit departed from the EU line during the plenary sessions. [131248]

Ms Hewitt: No. We fully supported the EU position during the plenary sessions at Cancun.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions she had with the EU Trade Commissioner during the course of the Cancun Summit. [131249]

Ms Hewitt: I met Commissioner Lamy at two European Councils. I also had informal discussions with him.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate she has made of the cost to the UK economy of the recent collapse of the talks at the World Trade Organisation Fifth Ministerial in Cancun. [131254]

Ms Hewitt: The lack of progress at Cancun was disappointing, but it does not mean that the Doha Development Round of trade liberalisation is over.

The benefits to developing and developed world economies from a successful round which achieves real liberalisation are considerable.

A number of studies have attempted to quantify these gains. The size of the estimated gains vary significantly depending on, among other things, the scale of liberalisation assumed to be implemented, the timing of liberalisation and the range of benefits taken into account.

These studies do not separately identify the effects on the UK economy, but they do suggest that the EU as a whole would benefit from trade liberalisation. A study by the European Commission[1], for example, estimated the gains to the EU from a global 50 per cent. cut in protection would be in the region of $92 billion. A reasonable assumption is that the gains to the UK would be roughly proportional to our share of EU GDP and external trade (around 17 per cent.). This would imply annual income gains in the region of $16 billion. Another study by Michigan University[2] suggests that global elimination of trade barriers could increase EU incomes by as much as $500 billion. Again, assuming the UK gains proportionately, this could mean an annual boost to UK incomes of over $70 billion. The benefits would feed through gradually as liberalisation is implemented in many scenarios taking over a decade.

In addition, a successful round of trade liberalisation is likely to have a more immediate effect by providing a boost to global economic confidence. The scale of this benefit is impossible to predict but would certainly be considerable.

[1] The Millennium Round: An economic appraisal by Nigel Nagarajan 1999.
[2] "CGE Modelling and Analysis of Multilateral and Regional Negotiating Options" Drusilla Brown, Alan Deardoff and Robert Stern Michigan Discussion Paper number 468 2001.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on her attendance at the Fifth World Trade Organisation Ministerial held recently in Cancun. [131255]

Ms Hewitt: I made a full statement to the House, on my attendance at the recent 5th World Trade Organisation Ministerial Conference held in Cancun, on Wednesday 17 September.

TRANSPORT

Airport Consultation

Jonathan Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what reports he has received on prospective promoters in respect of (a) the Cliffe airport proposal and (b) other North Kent estuarial airport proposals. [130995]

Mr. McNulty: In response to "The Future Development of Air Transport in the United Kingdom: South East" consultation, a number of proposals for new airport capacity that are alternatives to, or variants of, options set out in the Government's consultation document, have been submitted. These include two sites in North Kent and the Marinair proposal for an airport on an island in the Thames estuary.

Jonathan Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the identification and recommendation of airport sites for further development in the air transport White Paper will be based on (a) commercial viability and (b) availability of private sector funding to meet the full cost. [130996]

Mr. McNulty: We are currently analysing the many thousands of responses received to "the Future Development of Air Transport in the United Kingdom" consultation. Ministers will take decisions based on the factual appraisal and views expressed by interested parties, which will help Ministers come to a view on what weight they should attach to different considerations, and how to balance these. Commercial and financial viability are considerations specified in the published SERAS appraisal methodology.

The Government intends to publish its conclusions in a White Paper later this year.

Biofuels

Mrs. Shephard: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport by what date under the EU Directive 2003/30/EC Article 4 he is required to set a target for biofuel use in the UK by the end of 2005. [130869]

Mr. Jamieson: The Directive must be implemented in full by 31 December 2004, but the European Commission has asked member states in advance of this to submit targets for biofuel use in 2005 by July 2004. We will be consulting stakeholders on possible UK targets in early 2004, before deciding on the UK targets.

Commercial Flights

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many commercial flights were made from British airports in each of the last five years; and what percentage were (a) four hours or longer and (b) four hours or less. [129800]

Mr. McNulty: The available information is as follows:

Commercial air transport movements[1]: United Kingdom

		Percentage
	Number (thousand)	Short haul[2]	Long haul
1998	1,504	88.6	11.4
1999	1,580	88.6	11.4
2000	1,663	88.7	11.3
2001	1,690	89.0	11.0
2002	1,683	89.2	10.8

[1] Landings and take-offs of aircraft engaged in commercial air transport. Includes all scheduled movements (loaded or empty) and loaded charter movements, but excludes empty positioning flights.

[2] Domestic flights, flights between the UK and Europe or North Africa, and flights to/from oil rigs.

Source:
Civil Aviation Authority

Deep Vein Thrombosis

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will seek amendments to the Warsaw Convention to permit claims for compensation by air travellers who suffer deep vein thrombosis. [130975]

Mr. McNulty: The Warsaw Convention will be subject to no further amendment or reform. The 1999 Montreal Convention, which is due to come into force internationally later this year, will consolidate, update and eventually replace all previous international agreements on air carrier liability, including the 1929 Warsaw Convention.

The purpose of the Warsaw Convention is to cover risks inherent to travelling by air, not damage occurring co-incidentally while in flight. For this reason, claimants must show that an "accident" had occurred. This question has been considered by the English High Court within the context of Deep Vein Thrombosis (DVT) and it concluded that such an occurrence does not fall within the accepted understanding of an "accident". I believe the legal framework for establishing liability to be satisfactory and that it is for the courts to decide specific cases within that framework.

London Underground

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he last travelled by London Underground on official business. [130948]

Mr. Darling: I last travelled by London Underground on official business on 17 September 2003.

M6

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what reports he has received from the Highways Agency about the options for widening the M6 motorway between junctions 11 and 20; and what arrangements he intends to make for public consultation on his plans for this widening. [130978]

Mr. Jamieson: The Highways Agency is currently examining options for widening the M6 motorway. This has raised some complex issues and the Agency expects to bring forward further detailed advice early in 2004. Once a scheme has been approved for inclusion in the Targeted Programme of Improvements there would be further statutory and non-statutory procedures including consultation. In the meantime the Highways Agency has been liasing with both affected local authorities and with the Statutory Environmental Bodies in progressing their work.

Mayor of London

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he last met the Mayor of London. [130949]

Mr. McNulty: Ministers have regular meetings with the Mayor at which a wide range of transport matters are discussed. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport last met the Mayor on 7 September at the Osiris II exercise at Bank station.

Microsoft

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was paid to Microsoft in licensing fees by his Department and its agencies in each of the last three years; and how much has been budgeted for (a) 2003–04 and (b) 2004–05. [130682]

Mr. McNulty: Since 2000 there have been two Machinery of Government changes affecting what is now the Department of Transport. As a result the number of staff has changed considerably. It is not possible to analyse the total cost of licensing to identify where the costs were incurred on behalf of what is now DfT. Therefore the figures given for DfT(c) reflect spend by the Department as it was at the time.

The amount paid to Microsoft for the last three years is:

Spend (£)

Organisation	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03
Centre of the Department
DETR	171,300
DTLR		198,400
DfT			307,500

Organisation	2000-01	2001-02	2002-03
	Spend (£)
Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency	n/a	459,900	489,400
Driving Standards Agency	7,900 over two years		81,000
Highways Agency	640,000	580,000	175,000
Maritime and Coastguard Agency	0	0	291,000
Vehicle Certification Agency	3,170	3,260	9,380
Vehicle and Operator Services Agency (Previously Vehicle Inspectorate and Traffic Area Network)	100,000	100,000	136,400

Budgets for spend in the current year, 2003–04, and future years are withheld on the grounds of commercial confidentiality.

Motorways

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many motorway service areas there are in England; and, of these, how many have CCTV cameras installed in public parking areas to guard against thefts of, and from, vehicles. [130976]

Mr. Jamieson: There are 69 motorway service areas (MSAs) in England.

Close Circuit Television coverage of the public parking areas is provided at 14 MSAs. Most MSA operators offer full CCTV coverage of the commercial areas of their sites. In instances where MSA operators are aware of a problem of theft from parked vehicles, particularly within the lorry compounds, they have taken separate action.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it a condition of all future licences to operate motorway service areas that CCTV cameras be installed in public parking areas. [130977]

Mr. Jamieson: Motorway service areas (MSAs) are private sector enterprises, subject to the normal planning processes. It is for them to decide on the most appropriate form of security measures at each site. The Government do require certain minimum requirements as a condition of their signing and access from the motorway. It would be inappropriate for these to include a stipulation on how security at each site should be provided.

Redhill Aerodrome

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what analysis he has made of the air safety aspects of plans to develop Redhill Aerodrome, with special reference to provisions for missed approach procedures; and if he will make a statement; [130691]

(2) what estimate he has made of the height above the M23 of incoming aircraft if the proposal to develop Redhill Aerodrome were to proceed. [130692]

Mr. McNulty: In response to "The Future Development of Air Transport in the United Kingdom: South East" consultation, a proposal for the development of Redhill aerodrome has been submitted. This proposal is being considered in the on-going analysis of responses to the consultation.

Transport Infrastructure

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much transport infrastructure maintenance cost the Government in each year from 1990 to 2003. [130455]

Mr. McNulty: Transport infrastructure maintenance is taken to encompass maintenance on Road and Rail only, and is detailed as follows.

Table 1 shows the cost of maintenance from 1991–2002 road maintenance. Numbers are as detailed in the National Road Maintenance Condition Survey (NRMCS) annual report. These numbers are also given as cash prices.

Rail figures are detailed in Table 1 for the years 1996–2003, and have been taken from the Railtrack 2001 Network Management Statement (2001), and the 2003 Network Rail Annual Return. These have also been shown in cash prices. It is important to note that these figures also may include non-Government expenditure, but it is not possible to disaggregate this out.

Rail figures prior to 1996 are not immediately accessible and to obtain these numbers would present a disproportionate cost.

	Rail maintenance		Road maintenance
			2001-02 prices[2]		Cash prices[2]
	2001-02 prices[1]	Cash prices[1]	Non-trunk roads	Trunk roads[3]	Non-trunk roads	Trunk roads[3]
1991–92	—	—	2,401	741	1,803	556
1992–93	—	—	2,379	796	1,844	617
1993–94	—	—	2,409	838	1,913	665
1994–95	—	—	2,387	841	1,921	677
1995–96	—	—	2,225	665	1,842	550
1996–97	840	739	1,970	595	1,683	508
1997–98	780	707	1,793	648	1,578	571
1998–99	747	696	1,742	655	1,575	592
1999–2000	702	670	1,834	716	1,699	664
2000–01	725	698	1,907	757	1,807	717
2001–02	—	950	2,168	668	2,105	649
2002–03	—	1,184	—	—	2,515	741

[1] 1996–97 to 2000–01 taken from Railtrack 2001 Network Management Statement. 2000–01 to 2002–03 Cash prices taken from Network Rail 2003 Annual Return.
[2] 2001–02 prices taken from the National Road Maintenance Condition Survey (NRMCS) for road maintenance.
[3] Including motorways.

US Warship Disposal

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the environmental impact of towing former US naval ships off the North East coast on their way to be broken up. [130727]

Mr. Jamieson: The Maritime and Coastguard Agency (MCA) are aware of proposals to bring ships from the US reserve fleet to the UK for dismantling at a facility in Teesside.

Accessible pollutants will be removed from the ships before transit, as required by the Basel Convention on the control of Transboundary Movements of Hazardous Wastes. The MCA monitors the standards of vessels entering UK waters and co-ordinates any response to pollution outside of harbour areas via the National Contingency Plan for Pollution from Shipping and Offshore Installations. It is empowered to take action should any pollution incident occur within the UK Pollution Control Zone.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether UK agreement to a passage plan for the proposed tow of former US naval ships to the UK is required in advance of the vessels leaving the US. [130728]

Mr. Jamieson: The Maritime and Coastguard Agency (MCA) is in close liaison with the US Government and the companies involved with these ships. A formal passage plan will be agreed prior to the ships leaving the US and will also be agreed with the French and Belgian Governments.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he intends to extend reduced rates of vehicle excise duty to cars converted to LPG/autogas that were registered before March 2001; and if he will extend the powershift programme of grants to cars that are more than five years old. [130726]

Mr. Jamieson: Rates and structure of vehicle excise duty are a matter for the Chancellor in his budget. In deciding these rates he weighs a large number of social, economic, environmental and other factors.

The Chancellor announced in Budget 2003 that the Government would be consulting stakeholders on how best to ensure that future support for road fuel gases continued to reflect environmental and other policy objectives, with a view to announcing decisions on future duty rates and other forms of support in the 2003 Pre-budget Report. A joint Department for Transport, Treasury and Customs and Excise consultation document "Road fuel gases and their contribution to clean low-carbon transport: Establishing a consistent and durable framework of Government support" discussed the issues and invited comments by 17 September. The Government are now considering the responses received.

Working Time Directive

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress he has made with implementing the 48 hour working week for workers in the transport sector. [130973]

Mr. McNulty: On 1 August 2003, the Department of Trade and Industry implemented "The Working Time (Amendment) Regulations 2003". These apply the 48 hour average working week to non-mobile workers in the transport sector and drivers of vehicles subject to domestic drivers' hours rules in the road transport sector.

Mobile workers who are affected by the EU drivers' hours rules, will be subject to the average 48 hour week from March 2005, under the sector specific road transport directive (2002/15/EC). The Department for Transport has consulted and received comments from key stakeholders in the road transport industry. We will also publish a partial regulatory impact assessment and consultation document shortly, on our plans to implement the directive into UK law.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Afghanistan

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what the Government are doing to equip hospitals in Afghanistan. [129446]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The Afghanistan Transitional Administration (ATA) has asked donors to concentrate on a few key areas of the reconstruction effort where they can have most impact. In response to this and after consultation with the ATA and other donors, the UK is concentrating on building the capacity of the Afghan Government, humanitarian aid and programmes to support the development of income generation.

Healthcare is not currently one of DFID's focus areas in Afghanistan, and we are therefore not involved in equipping hospitals. Nevertheless, we have funded a consultant that has worked with the Ministry of Health on hospital management.

We also fund Afghanistan's reconstruction effort through multi-lateral channels. The UK is the fourth largest donor to UNICEF and provided £44 million overall funding in 2002. We provide 19 per cent. of the European Union's £282 million package of reconstruction support for Afghanistan for 2003–04, of which £17.5 million is programmed for the health sector to help reduce infant and maternal mortality by providing a basic healthcare package. We are also contributing towards the World Bank's Afghanistan Health Sector Emergency Reconstruction and Development Project, which aims to help expand delivery of basic health services and works to ensure equitable access, particularly for women and children.

Since April 2002, the European Commission has worked with the United States to rebuild 72 hospitals, clinics and women's healthcare centres, revise the national curriculum for midwives and vaccinate £4.3 million children against measles. Over 2003 and 2004, the EC will channel support through the Government to deliver health services to three million people and help to reduce the unacceptably high levels of child and maternal mortality.

UNICEF has supported Emergency Obstetric Care services in 20 districts and refurbished Malalai hospital, the largest maternity hospital in Kabul, with 15,000 deliveries every year. UNICEF plans to launch other facilities in Kandahar, Herat and Jalalabad to build up the maternal health infrastructure.

AIDS/HIV

Mrs Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what the Government is doing to help those suffering from AIDS and HIV in the developing world. [129059]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The Department for International Development (DFID) recognises that the HIV/AIDS epidemic is one of the most important development challenges. In recognition of this DFID has increased HIV/AIDS related bilateral expenditure from £38 million in 1997–98 to over £270 million in 2002–03.

Intensive bi-lateral action on HIV/AIDS is under way including in Ghana, Kenya, Malawi, Mozambique, Nigeria, South Africa, Uganda, Zambia and Zimbabwe. At a global level, the UK Government makes significant contributions to support HIV/AIDS programmes of multilateral organisations, including the World Health Organisation (WHO), the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS), United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), and non-governmental organisations (NGOs) and civil society organisations in a coherent effort to combat this disease.

The UK has pledged US$280 million to the Global Fund to fight AIDS, TB and Malaria, up to the year 2008 and has committed £14 million to the International AIDS Vaccine Initiative and £16 million to the Medical Research Council's Microbicides Development Programme.

Arms Proliferation

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development whether there is a consensus among European partners on the proliferation of small arms in developing countries. [129854]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: Over the last five years European states, through the European Union and its accession countries, have consistently demonstrated a commitment to support efforts to tackle the proliferation of small arms in developing countries through [illegible]uing EU programmes. Currently these programmes are enacted as part of the Joint Action on the European Union's contribution to combating the destabilising accumulation and uncontrolled spread of Small Arms and Light Weapons (SALW), adopted on 12 July 2002 by the European Council.

The EU aims to strengthen the efforts to reduce the availability and supply of SALW to areas of conflict or potential conflict, to contribute to the development of a range of international measures to limit the demand for SALW in such areas, and to help governments to cope with the problems these weapons cause.

The EU currently supports programmes in Cambodia, in central America through the UN Regional Centre in Lima and in conjunction with UNDP in south eastern Europe (the South Eastern Europe Clearinghouse on Small Arms in Belgrade). EU supported projects in South Ossetia and Albania have recently been completed. In the last three years, the EU has committed around €7.5million to these programmes, through the Common Foreign and Security Policy Budget.

In June 2003, EU member states agreed a Joint Position on brokering activities which requires members states to enact legislation to regulate activities of brokers, including brokering of small arms and light weapons.

Baku-Tbilisi-Ceyhan Pipeline

Adam Price: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what representations the Department has received about human rights violations relating to the construction of the Baku-Tblisi-Ceyhan pipeline. [129199]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID and other Government Departments have received representations from several international and local NGOs about the human rights implications of the Baku-Tbilisi-Ceyhan (BTC) pipeline. Officials have held meetings to discuss this issue with NGOs. We have also received correspondence from Members of Parliament and members of the public.

Adam Price: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development if he will make a statement on the latest discussions with regard to the use of public money via the (a) World Bank, (b) European Bank for Reconstruction and Development and (c) Export Credits Guarantee Department for the Baku-Tbilisi-Ceyhan oil pipeline. [129200]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID's interest in the Baku-Tbilisi-Ceyhan (BTC) project is as a shareholder in the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD) and the World Bank Group. As a shareholder, DFID has a responsibility to ensure that these institutions have properly assessed this project, including possible social and environmental impacts. EBRD and the International Finance Corporation of the World Bank Group are currently carrying out their normal thorough screening and safeguards procedures on the project. Once these procedures are completed, it is anticipated that they will present formal project proposals to their Executive Boards for discussion. As is standard procedure, DFID will make its decision on how to vote on the BTC project once it has received these formal proposals.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, is responsible for the Export Credits Guarantee Department (ECGD). ECGD is currently undertaking its due diligence process for the BTC project. The project sponsors are seeking cover from ECGD for the supply of UK goods and services, and for UK investments related to the project. Cover would only be given if the Department were satisfied that the relevant environmental, social and human rights impacts had been properly addressed, and that the financial and project risks were acceptable.

Central Africa

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development how much assistance he gave to (a) Rwanda, (b) Uganda and (c) Angola in each of the last five years, broken down by subject under which the assistance was allocated; and if he will make a statement. [130659]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID has a policy of focusing its resources in Africa. Rwanda and Uganda are both countries where we have strong development partnerships. We are currently developing our plans for Angola now that the war has ended there.

	£
Rwanda
2002–03
Direct Budget Support	22,032,000
Technical Co-operation	6,723,000
Grants & Aid in Kind	1,423,000
Project or Sector Aid	2,348,000
	32,526,000

	£
Rwanda
2001–02
Direct Budget Support	18,586,000
Technical Co-operation	6,373,000
Project or Sector Aid	1,488,000
Grants & Aid in Kind	741,000
	27,189,000
2000–01
Direct Budget Support	25,400,000
Technical Co-operation	5,589,000
Project or Sector Aid	1,052,000
Grants & Aid in Kind	837,000
	32,878,000
1999–2000
Direct Budget Support	10,000,000
Technical Co-operation	2,440,000
Humanitarian Assistance	1,170,000
Grants & Aid in Kind	784,000
	14,394,000
1998–99
Direct Budget Support	10,000,000
Technical Co-operation	1,356,000
Grants & Aid in Kind	1,281,000
Humanitarian Assistance	1,005,000
	13,642,000
Uganda
2002–03
Direct Budget Support	17,500,000
Technical Cooperation	15,537,000
Project or Sector Aid	13,846,000
Grants & Aid in Kind	5,736,000
	55,142,000
2001–02
Direct Budget Support	35,000,000
Technical Co-operation	14,679,000
Project or Sector Aid	13,974,000
Grants & Aid in Kind	4,563,000
	68,476,000
2000–01
Direct Budget Support	45,000,000
Project or Sector Aid	17,856,000
Technical Co-operation	15,844,000
Grants & Aid in Kind	7,323,000
	86,342,000
1999–2000
Project or Sector Aid	41,467,000
Direct Budget Support	16,000,000
Technical Cooperation	17,287,000
Grants & Aid in Kind	5,910,000
	81,206,000
1998–99
Direct Budget Support	17,000,000
Technical Co-operation	11,928,000
Grants & Aid in Kind	5,500,000
Project or Sector Aid	17,785,000
	52,574,000
Angola
2002–03
Technical Co-operation	3,970,000
Grants & Other Aid in Kind	184,000
Humanitarian Assistance	5,734,000
	9,888,000
2001–02
Technical Co-operation	1,[illegible]93,000
Grants & Other Aid in Kind	5[illegible],000
Humanitarian Assistance	1,825,000
	3,754,000
2000–01
Technical Co-operation	1,827,000
Grants & Other Aid in Kind	371,000
Humanitarian Assistance	2,240,000
	4,438,000

	£
Rwanda
1999–2000
Technical Co-operation	1,243,000
Grants & Other Aid in Kind	625,000
Humanitarian Assistance	3,236,000
	5,104,000
1998–99
Technical Co-operation	623,000
Grants & Other Aid in Kind	1,185,000
Humanitarian Assistance	2,500,000
	4,308,000

Economic Activity Development

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what assessment the Department has made of (a) the extent of extra-legal activity in developing countries and (b) the impact of extra-legal activity on economic development in these countries; and what assistance the Government are offering to increase legal economic activity in developing countries. [129313]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: We are not aware of any comprehensive assessment of the scale of extra-legal activity in developing countries. The impact of crime, in particular corruption, transnational organised crime and money laundering, is undoubtedly profound.

The Department provides a wide range of support to developing countries to help them address these areas. These include developing strong enforcement action against corruption and money laundering, such as strong and effective anti-corruption agencies and financial intelligence units, and establishing the full range of necessary preventive measures, such as strengthening capacity for public sector budgetary and financial management, procurement, accounting and audit; reforming civil service management, enhancing public oversight through strengthened parliamentary committees, developing measures to reduce judicial corruption and supporting civil society to promote transparency and accountability in public life. Helping countries to develop sustained improvements in the climate for productive domestic and foreign investment and facilitating greater private sector development also forms an important part of the Department's work.

We are pleased that negotiations for the United Nations Convention Against Corruption are nearing completion. This instrument will reflect a global consensus on the importance of tackling corruption and improving international co-operation, including the return of corruptly-acquired assets to the country of origin. The UK has played an active role in these negotiations.

Export Control Act

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development pursuant to his answer of 18 June 2003, Official Report, column 241W, on the Export Control Act, whether the Department made an assessment of how the secondary legislation on export controls would (a) affect demands on departmentally-funded projects and (b) affect stability in developing countries. [129803]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: A specific separate assessment was not undertaken but clearly a strengthening of controls on the trade in arms will reduce the availability of arms, which fuel conflicts, erode security and stability and undermine sustainable development, thereby making it easier for development goals to be reached.

Immunisation Programmes

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what recent discussions the Department has had with the World Health Organisation regarding the availability of vaccinations for immunisation programmes in developing countries. [129447]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The Department of International Development (DFID) works closely with the World Health Organisation (WHO) across a wide range of health issues. This includes working with WHO on the generic issues of improving access to health commodities and to supporting specific programme needs. DFID was also until recently a Board member of the Global Alliance for Vaccines and Immunisation (GAVI). GAVI is a public-private partnership focused on increasing children's access to vaccines in poor countries and discussions focus on issues around the availability of vaccinations in developing countries. The World Health Organisation (WHO) and UNICEF also participate in that Board. The UK contribution to GAVI lasts till 2005 and amounts to £35 million.

Iraq

Adam Price: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what assessment the Department has made of the conditions of the temporary prison outside Baghdad International Airport run by the coalition forces. [130345]

Hilary Benn: DFID has made no such assessment.

Adam Price: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development how many Iraqi children the Department estimates have been detained at the temporary prison outside Baghdad International Airport run by coalition forces. [130346]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID does not hold such information.

Kosovo

Adam Price: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what recent humanitarian assessment the Department has made of the aftermath of the Kosovo conflict in 1999. [130349]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID has aimed to assess the post-conflict situation in Kosovo in partnership with other international agencies, and with the Kosovo authorities. In December 2001, we worked with the World Bank, the United Nations Development Programme, the UN Food and Agriculture Organisation, the International Organisation for Migration, the Dutch Government and the Statistical Office of Kosovo to produce Kosovo's first comprehensive poverty assessment. This showed that approximately 50 per cent. of Kosovo's population was living in poverty, with 12 per cent. in extreme poverty. The assessment has since been used to assist the design and monitoring of social services and benefits.

Since then, we have focused on building the capacity of the Kosovo institutions to monitor social service delivery and poverty outcomes. We remain in discussion with other agencies on possible implementation of a second poverty assessment, and on the support needed by the Kosovo authorities to enable them to monitor poverty and deliver services effectively.

Pakistan

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what recent initiatives have been taken to help fund and encourage the education of girls in Pakistan. [129060]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: All of DFID's education projects in Pakistan have a strong equity focus.

At the national level, DFID is supporting improvements to education management information systems so as to better monitor girl's education, through for example:

the Northern Areas Education Project (£6 million) supports increased female enrolment and participation in management and delivery through improved sector management and the development of community schools. Girls' enrolment in the Northern Areas at primary level has increased from 29,438 in 1996–97 to 52,538 in 2002–03 (an increase of 78 per cent.);

the North West Frontier Province Education Project (£6.5 million) includes support for public-private-community partnerships which are shown to increase the participation of girls; and the planned Azad Jammu and Kashmir community education project (£650,000) aims to sustain improvements in access to and the quality of schooling, particularly for girls.

The EC is also supporting education sector reform with a programme of €59 million over the period 2002–06. The UK contributes approximately 19 per cent. of the EC programme resource.

Poverty (Middle East)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what recent assessment he has made of how many people are living in poverty in (a) the West Bank, (b) Gaza and (c) East Jerusalem. [129057]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: Poverty in the Palestinian Occupied Territories has increased dramatically since the intifada started in September 2000. According to the most recent World Bank assessment, 60 per cent. of Palestinians, 1.9 million people, are living on less than $2 a day. In the Gaza Strip, the level is as high as 75 per cent.

Property Ownership Rights

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what support the Department gives to developing countries to improve the systems they operate to establish property ownership rights. [129302]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: Over the last five years, DFID has supported developing countries to establish effective and equitable policies in relation to land and property, together with fair and efficient systems to establish and administer property rights, especially in Africa. Since this is invariably costly and long term, we seek to do this in partnership with others such as the international and regional development banks and the European Union. In Ghana and Malawi we are working alongside the World Bank and others to help establish practical, low-cost, and locally managed systems for land administration. In Uganda, Tanzania and Rwanda we have supported inclusive processes of debate and consultation leading to new policies and laws on land and property and implementation plans. We are about to embark on a similar process in Kenya and are in the process of identifying how best to assist in South Africa. In India and Bangladesh we have sponsored the development of new alliances and partnerships to secure the tenure of vulnerable groups, the regularisation and improvement of informal low-income urban settlements, assistance to low-income households in accessing land, and the piloting of a community led finance facility for poor communities to manage upgrading, resettlement and infrastructure projects in partnership with local authorities and the banking sector. In Guyana we are about to complete a project for and the establishment of the regularisation of a new Lands and Surveys Commission and the associated regularisation of tenure rights.

Globally, DFID supports efforts by the World Bank to establish and implement coherent and inclusive policies to secure and administer property rights in the developing world, and the Department is supporting UN-Habitat in the development of its monitoring system for MDG Target 11 'Improving the lives of 100 million slum dwellers by 2020', for which one indicator is secure tenure.

My Department is also funding research into the promotion of intermediate forms of tenure in urban areas, effective systems for the management of common property, and the improvement of administrative procedures so as to reduce the costs of legal and appropriate shelter for the urban poor.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what assessment the Department has made of the ability of poor people in developing countries to realise the value of property which they own; and what assessment the Department has made of the impact that property ownership regulations and systems in their country have on the ability of poor people in developing countries to release the capital in their property. [129303]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: has found that in many developing countries poor people cannot realise the value of property they own. Their property rights are often informal and there are legal, administrative and financial barriers to poor people securing formal rights to land and property. However the department has also found that the promotion of property and private land titling and universal markets in land, as practised in developed countries, is not always appropriate. In many cases property ownership systems fail to recognise legitimate customary rights established over generations including those held by community groups. Standard models for titling land and property can sometimes marginalise the rights of the poor while favouring the better off.

The links between property rights and the ability to access credit and financial services are complex and context-specific. The department has found that the ability of the poor to accumulate assets, maintain their homes and make investments may not be greatly affected by their tenure status, depending primarily on their income earning and employment opportunities. As a result, whilst there may be good justification for extending formal property rights and simplifying property systems, financial service mechanisms need to be put in place that do not depend on the availability of titled property as collateral.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what assessment the Department has made of the time it takes to establish property ownership rights in developing countries and what impact this has on economic development in these countries. [129316]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: has found that property ownership rights in developed countries have been established as a result of economic and social change over long periods. The establishment of systems to administer and regulate property rights has also been a long-term process, although in many circumstances legitimate rights may exist on the ground. In practice, formal procedures established in law for registering and transacting in property rights can be lengthy, complex, costly and inaccessible to the poor. The result is that informal rights and transactions are not recognised, reducing economic opportunities and increasing disputes.

The department has assessed the strengths and limitations of intermediary forms of tenure and the opportunities to regulate land rights at local and community levels—both of which are procedurally and politically quicker, more practical and less costly than ambitious programmes to establish universal land titles. The department accepts that establishment of appropriate systems of property rights requires the pursuit of coherent objectives by governments over many years.

South Africa

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what recent assessment he has made of the impact of HIV/AIDS on the humanitarian situation in South Africa. [129056]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: All agencies active in responding to the humanitarian crisis in Southern Africa recognise that the high HIV/AIDS infection rates there are both affecting the crisis and being affected by it. In countries such as Zimbabwe, where one in four adults is HIV-positive, current rates of malnutrition and mortality are closely related to the underlying AIDS pandemic. An estimated 2,500 deaths per week in Zimbabwe are due to AIDS.

We are still learning how HIV/AIDS affects the crisis, including recovery. Evidence from Malawi, Zambia and Zimbabwe shows that households affected by chronic illness plant fewer crops and can afford fewer inputs like fertiliser. In some cases, households are shifting production to less labour intensive but also less nutritious crops. In addition, governments' capacity to respond to the crisis is undermined by the loss of public sector workers due to AIDS and other factors.

DFID is taking steps to integrate HIV/AIDS in its humanitarian programmes. Regionally, DFID is working to ensure that HIV prevention is integrated with food distribution, and that AIDS affected households receive food and care. We are also working closely with Governments, UN and non-governmental agencies to ensure that there is better understanding of the impact of HIV/AIDS on hunger and vulnerability. We are exploring how best to support longer-term safety nets for households affected by chronic illness. We also have a substantial programme of support for HIV/AIDS prevention and care, working with national AIDS councils and others to ensure appropriate multi-sectoral responses to the epidemic.

UN Aid Target

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development when he expects the Government to meet the UN target of 0.7 per cent. of gross national product in their contribution to overseas aid. [129249]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The Government remain firmly committed to the 0.7 per cent. target. Although there is no timetable for reaching the target, the trend in the UK oda/GNI ratio has been upward since 1997, when it was 0.26 per cent. By 2006, the ratio will be 0.4 per cent., the highest since 1981. The rate of progress thereafter will depend on decisions to be taken in the next Spending Review.

US Overseas Development Assistance

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what representations he has made to the US Administration calling for them to raise overseas development assistance to 0.7 per cent.of GNI. [129448]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The US Government does not accept the 0.7 per cent. target. However, it has subscribed to the Monterrey Consensus on increasing assistance to developing countries and before Monterrey announced increases in ODA worth $5 billion over three years, followed more recently by President Bush's announcement of significant new funds for HIV/AIDS. It is the world's largest donor in terms of volume.

The UK continues to press all donors to increase their contributions to developing countries in line with the Monterrey Consensus and has recently proposed an International Finance Facility (IFF) which would allow donors, including the US, to mobilise increased resources for international development.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Health and Safety

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the health and safety environment within which fruit and vegetable packhouse operators and growers operate; and what regulations apply to these sectors to take account of the particular needs of the casual and foreign labour they use. [129777]

Mr. Browne: The potential hazards at fruit and vegetable packhouses and growers typically include: transport; machinery; manual handling; noise; slips, trips and falls; and dermatitis. These hazards are common across a range of industries.

The Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 requires all employers to ensure, so far as is reasonably practicable, the health, safety and welfare of all their employees. The Management of Health and Safety at Work Regulations 1999 require employers to assess the risks to the health and safety of their employees, and to provide them with information on the risks and measures introduced to protect them.

The risk assessment should identify those employees that may be particularly at risk because they do not speak, read or understand English. Employers should make special arrangements to safeguard the health and safety of these employees. This may include providing translations, using interpreters or replacing written health and safety notices with clearly understood symbols or diagrams. An increased level of supervision and monitoring of work activities may also be appropriate.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Health and Safety Executive full-time inspectors there are; and how many there were in each of the previous three years [130576]

Mr. Browne: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer given to the hon. Member for Tunbridge Wells (Mr. Norman) on 7 March 2003, Official Report, column 1269W.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what reasons underlie the policy of the Health and Safety Executive (a) to allocate further staff to accident investigations and (b) not to allocate staff to preventative work. [130577]

Mr. Browne: The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) has not adopted a policy of allocating further staff to accident investigations, at the expense of staff allocated to preventative work.

HSE has recently reviewed the balance of resource applied to preventive inspections and investigation of incidents and complaints. HSE has decided to realign its resource to focus more on preventive work; allocating more staff time to preventive inspections, while concentrating the resource applied to investigation on the most serious incidents and complaints. This approach will enable more effective delivery of its mission to ensure that risks to people's health and safety from work related activities are properly controlled. This is in response to the fact that more cases of ill health caused by work are occurring and there has been a levelling off in the incidence of serious and fatal injuries.

The policy of selecting a proportion of accidents and complaints for investigation, with the most serious being investigated, to ensure lessons are learnt to prevent recurrences has not changed. Accidents and complaints are selected for investigation using criteria set out in its incident selection and complaints procedures.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the Health and Safety Executive's annual budget was in each year since 1997. [130910]

Mr. Browne: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Worcester (Mr. Foster) on 14 July, Official Report, column 75W.

Workplace Stress

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what guidance the Government have issued to employers on combating stress in the workplace. [130107]

Mr. Browne: The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) has published a range of guidance on tackling work-related stress. Further guidance is due to be published over the coming year.

"Tackling Work-Related Stress—a Manager's Guide to Improving and Maintaining Employee Health and Well-Being", was published on 25 June 2001. It sets out a risk assessment approach to tackling stress in the workplace. It clearly outlines possible hazards and risks, and offers practical advice to managers.

"Work-Related Stress—a short guide", was published in November 2001. This guide offers similar information but is aimed at small and medium-sized enterprises. HSE has developed new guidance in response to informal consultation that identified the need for further help for organisations in developing solutions to problems with stress. The new guidance, to be launched by HSE in October, is based on case studies of successful solutions employed in a range of organisations. The case studies have been derived from an extensive range of HSE-commissioned research into good practice in stress prevention. HSE plans to launch the new guidance at a conference on 30 October 2003. It will help employers work with employees to develop solutions in response to issues identified by their risk assessments.

HSE also publishes information on stress on its website (www.hse.gov.uk/stress). This includes resources to help employers begin to tackle stress and provides access to further sources of help.

Advertising

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what (a) TV advertising and (b) other costs are involved in the promotion of new arrangements for state pensions, benefits and tax credits to be paid directly into the bank accounts of claimants. [130029]

Mr. Pond: A budget of up to £25 million is available for the Direct Payment campaign, spread over a three-year period (2002–03 to 2004–05). The campaign raises awareness of all account options for Direct Payment; including bank, building society and Post Office accounts.

TV advertising media costs from the start of the campaign to date total £1,799,000.

Other costs total £4,932,000. This figure breaks down as follows:

	£
Radio media	1,239,000
National press media	1,111,000
Regional press media	1,257,000
Magazines	322,000
Ambient media	189,000
Production across all media	814,000

Note:

Figures exclude VAT and apply to the campaign in England, Scotland and Wales only.

Benefit Applications

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many staff (a) from his Department and (b) not from his Department are available to undertake home visits to deal with (i) pension credit applications and (ii) all benefit applications. [128744]

Malcolm Wicks: Latest data show that there are 1,867 (whole time equivalent) field staff in The Pension Service local service who are available to undertake home visits. They handle applications for all benefits relating to older people, including pension credit. There are varying numbers of staff from organisations with whom we have partnering arrangements who are able to provide information about pension credit and other benefits.

Benefit Repayments

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the amount of money that is not repaid as a result of benefits sent to people who have subsequently died; and what steps he is taking to reform the system. [128704]

Mr. Pond [holding answer 15 September 2003]: As part of our modernisation programme, measures are underway to provide greater focus and specialisation in benefit debt management through the establishment of dedicated benefit debt centres. We are already seeing improvements in increased debt recovery and reduction in outstanding debt.

At 31 March 2003, the total outstanding overpaid benefit paid for a period following the death of a benefit recipient was estimated to be £7.73 million. We normally seek to recover this type of overpayment, but where recovery is not possible, the overpayment is written off.

Source:

Department for Work and Pensions Debt Management System

Benefits Agency

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will establish individual e-mail addresses for each benefit office so that MI12 forms can be e-mailed to the Benefits Agency. [129874]

Mr. Pond: All benefit offices do have e-mail addresses. However, due to the insecure nature of normal e-mail and the need to guarantee the security of personal data we cannot use this method to exchange information relating to individual benefit claims.

Business Insurance

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he will publish the follow up report on Business Insurance. [130929]

Mr. Browne: In the Autumn.

The First Stage Report on Employers' Liability insurance was published by the Department in June. Action in relation to Employers' Liability includes both immediate initiatives and longer-term policy choices. In the timing of our further report, we have to strike a balance between a desire to report immediate action quickly and allowing time to reflect longer-term developments.

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will work more closely with trade bodies representing the insurance and construction trades on issues relating to insurance. [130930]

Mr. Browne: As part of our work on Employers Liability insurance, Ministers and officials have met a range of insurance and construction industry interests. These have included: the Association of British Insurers, individual insurance companies, the British Insurance Brokers Association, the Federation of Master Builders, the Construction Confederation, the Federation of Small Builders, Scottish Building, and the National Federation of Roofing Contractors. Further meetings are planned.

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what action his Department plans to take as a result of his assessment of the effect on small and medium-sized enterprises of large increases in insurance premiums. [130931]

Mr. Browne: The First Stage Report into Employers' Liability Insurance published by my Department in June identified a number of areas for further consideration and action. These included: renewals and risk-related premiums; long-tail occupational disease; the cost of resolving claims; rehabilitation; and enforcement. Both the Government and stakeholders have continued to work on these issues and the Government will report in the autumn on the progress that is being made and any further steps we intend to take. We continue to work closely with the Small Business Service and representatives of small and medium-sized businesses on these issues.

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will bring forward the planned publication date of the Department's report on business insurance by the construction industry. [130932]

Mr. Browne: Davis Langdon Consultancy undertook a scoping study for the Construction Sector Unit of the Department for Trade and Industry looking at the difficulties construction contractors face in obtaining insurance. This report was published in January 2003.

The aim of the study was to provide DTI with a clear understanding of the nature and extent of the difficulties facing contractors in obtaining and maintaining adequate insurance. The report aimed to provide perspective on construction specific aspects of the issue and to add value to the work of other studies in this area such as the DWP Employers' liability review.

We are not currently undertaking any further construction specific reports. However, the Government will be reporting in the autumn on the progress that has been made more generally on Employers Liability insurance (in which there is a keen construction sector interest) and on the further steps it intends to take.

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the effect of long-tail insurance on the levels of employers' liability compulsory insurance. [130933]

Mr. Browne: The issue of 'long-tail' risks was considered as part of the First Stage Report into Employers' Liability insurance published by the Department in June. The report found that concerns about long-tail risks were clearly keenly felt by insurers and might have an impact on decisions about capital provision but it was not able to translate these concerns into quantifiable impacts on pricing. Recent price increases appear to relate most closely to accident risk.

We understand that the Association of British Insurers has separately commissioned work that will attempt to quantify the impacts of long-tail risks on the market. They expect to complete this study later this year. The Government will consider this with interest.

Claimant Data Files

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many departmental files holding data on claimants went missing (a) temporarily and (b) permanently from filestores managed (i) by his Department and (ii) by private sector contractors in each year since 1995. [127187]

Mr. Browne: The Department do not hold the information in the manner requested.

The available data relating to files lost or temporarily missing in the Department for Work and Pensions cannot be used to establish a national picture of the numbers lost or missing in the Department's file-stores.

There is no consistent counting of files lost in file-stores. Some stores, including the central store at Heywood managed by Iron Mountain, keep records of the numbers of files that cannot be traced. In these cases there is no way of distinguishing files actually missing in store, from those that could not be traced because they were never held in the store, or are in transit, or are held elsewhere in the organisation.

Contracted-out Rebates

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his answer of 17 July 2003, Official Report, column 531W, to the hon. Member for Havant (Mr. Willetts), on contracted-out rebates, to what causes he ascribes the assumed reduction in the number of people receiving contracted-out rebates from 2001-02 to 2051-52. [131058]

Mr. Pond: The projection reflects two main assumptions:

1. A reduction in the membership of contracted-out personal pension schemes, as a result of the introduction of age-related rebates in April 1997; and

2. Changing membership of contracted-out occupational persion schemes, reflecting among other things, changing patterns of pension provision.

As the Green Paper and earlier answers made clear these are only illustrative assumptions made for the purpose of long-term financial projections and not firm predictions of future experience. The appropriateness of the assumptions will be reviewed as increased data on the number of individuals contracted-out become available.

Source:
Government Actuary's Department

Death Registration

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the (a) operation of and (b) level of compliance with the White Form arrangements linked to the registration of death. [129978]

Malcolm Wicks: The Registrar of Births, Deaths and Marriages completes a "White Form" (form BD8 the free death certificate) which is handed to the person registering the death.

If the BD8 is forwarded to the Department, and payment is still being made, arrangements will be made to cancel payment. The Registrar also notifies the Department automatically.

There are no statistics available to show level of compliance.

Deprived Areas

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the support his Department gives to (a) areas suffering from high levels of unemployment and (b) areas suffering from low average wages. [129158]

Mr. Browne: The level of employment has reached record levels, up by over 1.5 million since 1997. The underlying trend remains upwards and recent unemployment figures are the best since the 1970s. The improvement in the labour market has been spread right across the country, and since 1997, unemployment rates have fallen fastest in the areas with the highest unemployment.

Jobcentre Plus provides everyone of working age with advice and guidance on the full range of support available to help them move into work, including programmes such as our New Deals. In areas of the country with higher levels of worklessness and concentrations of people who are disadvantaged in the labour market, we have introduced specialist programmes such as Action Teams for Jobs and Employment Zones. By the end of July 2003, they had been successful in helping more than 116,000 people into work. The Government have also introduced measures to help make work pay such as the national minimum wage and tax credits.

From April 2004, we are also introducing a programme of intensive support in neighbourhoods with very high concentrations of worklessness. Local worklessness pilots will operate in 12 of the most deprived neighbourhoods and will run for two years. The pilots will test a new approach to offering intensive support to local residents to help them overcome barriers to employment.

Disability Living Allowance

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many fraudulent cases have been discovered by the Disability Living Allowance Periodic Enquiry process since June 1999; and if he will make a statement. [127127]

Mr. Pond: Periodic Enquiry was not designed as a fraud prevention measure. The information requested is not available.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether he intends to extend the threshold for disability living allowance to people of pensionable age and over. [130725]

Maria Eagle: There are no plans to change the rules governing the upper age limit for claims to disability living allowance.

Employer Documentation

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the documentation issued by his Department that an employer must complete when he or she takes on his or her first employee, in order to be fully compliant; and if he will make a statement. [128688]

Mr. Browne: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary for Employment Relations, Competition and Consumers on 11 September 2003, Official Report, column 388W.

Employers' Liability Insurance

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what information his Department has collated on the number of small and middle-sized enterprises which have stopped trading in the past 12 months as a result of increases in employers' compulsory liability insurance premiums. [130901]

Mr. Browne: While we have received representations about businesses being forced to close as a direct result of increases in their employers' liability insurance premiums, conclusive or comprehensive evidence has proved very difficult to obtain. A particular obstacle is the difficulty of disaggregating premium increases as a cause from other factors. For vulnerable companies with low profit margins or debt problems, premium costs might well have been another contributory factor to business failure, but no definitive figures exist.

Forestry

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what representations he has received from representatives of (a) the Forestry Commission and (b) private operators in the forestry industry about the level of employers' compulsory liability insurance premiums. [130425]

Mr. Browne [holding answer 17 September 2003]: The Department has received representations about the level of employers' liability compulsory insurance premiums from:

the Aboricultural Association;

the United Kingdom Forest Products Association; and a private operator in the forestry industry.

We have discussed the representations with officials in the Forestry Commission.

The representations will inform the second stage of the review of employers' liability compulsory insurance, which is due to report in autumn.

Holidays (Benefit Recipients)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to make it easier for those drawing benefit to take a holiday; and what research his Department has undertaken into the number of families that do not take holidays because of poverty. [130575]

Mr. Pond: We have taken action to raise the incomes of families, especially for those on the lowest incomes. To help children out of poverty, we have provided more support than ever before to enable parents to work, and to ensure that they are better off in work. As a result of our personal tax and benefit reforms since 1997, from April 2003, families with children are, on average, £1,200 a year better off, while those in the poorest fifth of the population are, on average, £2,500 a year better off in real terms.

There are different rules and regulations for each of the various benefits, for example, relating to the length of the holiday and whether the holiday is taken within the UK or abroad. Some information is provided in leaflet GL29 "Going abroad and social security benefits", a copy of which is available in the Library.

The Family and Children Study provides research into this specific area. Further details can be found in Vegeris S. & Perry J., Family and Children 2001: Living Standards and the Children, DWP Research Report 190, available in the House of Commons Library. In addition, my Department recently published Farrell C. & O'Connor W., 2003, Low Income families and household spending, DWP Research Report 192, also available in the House of Commons Library, that includes some analysis of the affordability of holidays for people in receipt of benefit.

Income Support

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many complaints the Benefits Agency has received about the application process for income support benefits available for home improvement. [129873]

Mr. Pond: Representations are dealt with by Jobcentre Plus and The Pensions Service on an individual basis with regard to the circumstance of each case. It is not possible to identify how many are specifically about the application process for income support benefits for home improvement.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what steps he is taking to improve the response time to applications for income support contributions for home improvements. [129875]

(2) what targets have been set for the processing of MI12 forms in the Benefits Agency; and what penalties there are if the Agency does not meet these. [129876]

Mr. Pond: We have not set specific, separate targets for the clearance of MI12 forms. As form MI12 is actioned after the initial claim to benefit has been processed it is treated as a change of circumstance. As part of the Key Management Indicators for Jobseeker's Allowance and Income Support clearance targets for changes of circumstances are currently set at four days.

Iron Mountain

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what criteria led him to award a contract for the management and storage of departmental records to Iron Mountain; and if he will make a statement. [127185]

Mr. Browne: The Department for Work and Pensions has not awarded a contract for the management and storage of departmental records to Iron Mountain. DWP has a contract with Hays IMS for the storage and retrieval of some departmental records. Iron Mountain acquired Hays IMS in August 2003 and the DWP contract with Hays IMS is being novated to Iron Mountain accordingly.

Learning Disability

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many adults with a learning disability were (a) in paid employment in England and (b) known to social services in England in each year since 1997; what percentage of adults with a learning disability known to social services were in paid employment; and if he will make a statement. [127124]

Maria Eagle: The available information is in the tables.

The Department of Health collects limited information from individual councils with Social Services Responsibilities (CSSR) on the number of their clients with learning disabilities who are in paid employment. This is based on those known to the CSSR as part of a care package following a community care assessment. It is not possible to use this data to produce a robust estimate for the whole of England of the percentage of adults with a learning disability known to social services who were in paid employment.

Number of adults in England with a learning disability who are in employment

Year	Number
1998	30,000
1999	40,000
2000	40,000
2001	30,000
2002	50,000
2003	60,000

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest 10,000 and are subject to sampling error.
2. "People with a learning disability" are all persons in employment and all other men aged 16–64 and women aged 16–59 who said that health or disability problems limit the kind of paid work they can do whose main health problem was a severe or specific learning problem.
3. Paid Employment includes employees and self-employed who were paid for at least one hours work in the survey reference week for people of working age (16-years-old to state pension age). It does not include those on Government employment and training programmes as not all people on these schemes are paid.

Source:

Labour Force Survey, Spring Datasets.

Estimated number of clients with learning disabilities receiving services following assessment

	2000–01	2001–02
All ages	110,000	115,000
18–64	101,000	101,000
65+	8,000	14,000

Notes:

1. The data are England estimates grossed up to the nearest thousand to allow for missing data and refer to the reporting year 1 April to 31 March.
2. Adults in this context are people aged 18 and over.
3. The "All ages" totals for 2000–2001 include the number of clients whose age was not known.
4. Figures may not add up because of rounding.

Source:

Department of Health, Referrals, Assessments and Packages of Care (RAP) returns for 2000–01 and 2001–02.

Low Incomes

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) if he will introduce a system of short-term loans for those on low incomes when they change jobs; [129856]

(2) what research his Department has conducted on the disincentives caused to those on low incomes when they change jobs; [129857]

(3) pursuant to his answer of 15 July 2003, Official Report, column 245W, on employment assistance, whether similar incentives are available for those in low paying jobs seeking a move to a similar position. [131175]

Mr. Browne: This Department has not conducted research into disincentives caused to low income households when people change jobs. We are, however, committed to making work pay for all those who are able to work, and to supporting households, including low-income households, in sustaining employment.

Most people moving from one job to another will be able to manage until they receive payment from their new job, as wages are paid in arrears. For those in receipt of Working Tax Credit, continuity of payment will be maintained when people move from one job to another, as long as the gap between jobs is no more than seven days. The new Working Tax Credit has been extended to people aged 25 and over without children. If people receive the Child Tax Credit, this continues to be paid direct to the main carer throughout any changes in employment. People in low paid employment may also be entitled to Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit.

People who are unable to manage whilst waiting for payment of wages, leading to a serious risk to their or their family's health or safety, may be able to get an interest free Crisis Loan. Repayment of a Crisis Loan does not start until the period of crisis is over and the rate of repayment takes account of a person's income and other commitments to avoid hardship.

New Deal

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much the New Deal for Young People has cost in each year, broken down into expenditure on (a) subsidies to employers, (b) payments to external providers, (c) payments to participants (d) employment service costs and (e) other economic categories. [114555]

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of New Deal expenditure was spent on (a) subsidies to employers, (b) payments to external providers, (c) payments to participants, (d) Jobcentre Plus costs and (e) other costs, broken down by programme, in each year since the programme began; and if he will make a statement. [122468]

Mr. Browne: The information is in the tables.

New Deal for Young People

Spend (£ million)

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03
Subsidies to employers	—	19	27	16	14	14
Payments to external providers	[1]12	98	174	214	159	166
Payments to participants	—	45	81	63	46	69
Departmental administrative costs	31	98	88	119	89	90

New Deal 25 Plus

Spend (£ million)

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03
Subsidies to employers	0	5	42	14	12	13
Payments to external providers	0	12	28	24	99	123
Payments to participants	0	0	2	5	28	45
Departmental administrative costs	0	17	26	18	73	73

New Deal 50 Plus

Spend (£ million)

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03
Subsidies to employers	0	0	0	0	0	0
Payments to external providers	0	0	0	2	2	2
Payments to participants	0	0	1	43	80	99
Departmental administrative costs	0	0	2	11	5	5

New Deal for Lone Parents

Spend (£ million)

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03
Subsidies to employers	0	0	0	0	0	0
Payments to external providers	0	0	2	3	1	4
Payments to participants	0	1	9	12	8	15
Departmental administrative costs	0	17	27	29	37	61

New Deal for Disabled People

Spend (£ million)

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03
Subsidies to employers	0	0	0	0	0	0
Payments to external providers	0	0	15	6	1	14
Payments to participants	0	0	0	0	3	0
Departmental administrative costs	0	1	7	7	6	12

New Deal for Partners

Spend (£ million)

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03
Subsidies to employers	0	0	0	0	0	0
Payments to external providers	0	0	0	1	1	0
Payments to participants	0	0	0	0	0	0
Departmental administrative costs	0	1	5	10	6	6

[1] Information is not available on the breakdown of spend across these categories.

Notes:

1. Due to rounding differences, and changes in allocation, figures provided may not sum to previous figures given.
2. No money was allocated to other economic categories.

Source:

Jobcentre Plus.

Operation Gangmaster

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what costs have been incurred since the inception of (a) Operation Gangmaster and (b) the Gangmaster Working Group; what funds remain unallocated in each case; and if he will make a statement. [128785]

Mr. Pond: It is not possible to identify separately how much is spent on Operation Gangmaster activity.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment has been undertaken of Operation Gangmaster; and what plans there are to make an assessment. [128787]

Mr. Pond: A hearing on gangmasters by the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs Select Committee took place before the summer recess. The report was published on 18 September 2003. Operation Gangmaster will be reviewed in the light of the Committee's recommendations.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his answer of 17 July 2003, Official Report, column 554W, on Operation Gangmaster, if he will list the members of the west Midlands forum under the Operation Gangmaster initiative. [129783]

Mr. Pond: When Operation Gangmaster began in 1998, forums were set up at Walsall and Cambridge to cover the west and east Midlands respectively. In September 2002 these forums were amalgamated into one forum, which sits at Peterborough.

The organisations represented at the forum are listed.

Department for Work and Pensions (Chair and Secretariat)
Inland Revenue
United Kingdom Immigration Service
National Asylum Support Service
H.M Customs and Excise
Uniform and plain clothes police officers
Department for Environment, Rural Affairs and Agriculture
Department for Trade and Industry
Health and Safety Executive

Pension Forecasts

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many retirement pension forecasts have been distributed to the self-employed, and at what cost; and what is the average entitlement that is forecast. [128748]

Malcolm Wicks: The total number of state pension forecasts issued to the self-employed to date (5 September 2003) is 397, 409.

The cost of the exercise to date is £2.72 million; this includes both staff and non-staff costs.

The figures for the average cash amount for each component that makes up the forecast for the self-employed are as follows:

	£	Information
Average amount of Basic Pension	73.61	Forecasted Basic Pension at State Pension Age
Average amount of payable Additional Pension	6.49	This figure is based on contributions paid and is the actual amount to be paid, this is unlikely to change unless the self-employed recipient reverts to employed status.
Average amount of Graduated Retirement Benefit	1.20	—
Average amount per forecast letter	81.29	[1] —

[1] The discrepancy of 1p is due to rounding.

Parliamentary Questions

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many questions directed to him remain unanswered. [130765]

Maria Eagle: As at the rising of the House for the conference recess, 24 questions for answer today or earlier have not yet been answered.

Pension Investment

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what assessment he has made of the effects of the propensity for those aged 25 to 34 to view property rather than other savings products as a vehicle for pension investments; [131126]

(2) what assessment he has made of the likely effects of increased use of equity release as a savings vehicle for retirement. [131125]

Malcolm Wicks: Individuals of all ages have different preferences and it is right that people are free to choose to save for retirement in a variety of different ways. However, the Government believes that the best way to provide a secure income in retirement—in excess of that provided by the state—is through saving in a private pension during an individual's working life. In general, buying a house and putting money into a pension should not be seen as substitutes for each other. By saving in a pension individuals benefit from risk pooling and diversification, favourable tax treatment and over the longer term can expect strong returns to private pension investment. Furthermore, at the point of retirement, housing wealth is generally much more illiquid than any accrued private pension benefits and the market for equity release products is relatively small and trading down incurs high transaction costs.

People will want to take account of the relative risks of investing in different savings vehicles, particularly if these savings are for the long term. Above all, the Government are committed to seeking to provide individuals with information so that they can make informed choices about how and when to save to achieve the level of income in retirement that they expect.

Pensioner Benefits

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners in Monmouthshire benefited from (a) the winter fuel allowance, (b) the £100 allowance for the over 80s and (c) free TV licences in the last year for which figures are available. [130368]

Malcolm Wicks: The number of people in Monmouthshire who received a winter fuel payment for winter 2002–03 was 19,625. Of that figure 3,970 were over age 80 and would be entitled to an additional amount of winter fuel payment from the winter of 2003–04. The extra amount will depend on the composition of the household, but generally most households will receive an extra £100.

The information in respect of people in receipt of free TV licence in Monmouthshire is not available. However, the number of people in Monmouthshire aged 75 or over receiving a social security benefit as at 30 November 2002 was 7,700. These people would be eligible to receive a free TV licence.

Notes:

1. Figures taken from the Matching Intelligence Data Analysis Service winter fuels payment 2002–03 exercise and the Pensions Strategy Computer System: 30 September 2002.
2. 100 sample figures are rounded to the nearest five.
3. Figures based on 5 per cent. data taken from the Client Group Analysis of the population over state pension age as at 30 November 2002, and are therefore subject to a degree of sampling variation. These figures are expressed in thousands and rounded to the nearest hundred
4. Social security benefits are attendance allowance, disability living allowance, severe disablement allowance, incapacity benefit, minimum income guarantee and state pension.
5. As only one TV licence is required per household, the number of free TV licences issued may be lower than the number of people entitled to one. Some households may contain more than one person aged 75 and over and not all households with a person aged 75 and over will have a television.

Source:

IAD Information Centre 100 per cent. sample and 5 per cent. sample.

Pensions

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will assess the benefits to consumer financial education of including figures showing average healthy life expectancy in government pension statements. [129855]

Malcolm Wicks: Previous customer research conducted on the information contained in state pension forecasts has not highlighted the need to include information on average healthy life expectancy.

The inclusion of such information will be assessed in future customer research conducted into pensions education material.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many retirement pensions in payment continue after the death of the beneficiary; what the cost to public funds was in the last year for which figures are available; and what proportion of these payments was recovered. [129979]

Malcolm Wicks: In 2002–03, 48,946 cases were identified with a value of £9.848 million for State Pension paid after death. £1.606 million of this was recovered. The balance is in the process of recovery. In addition, a further £5.928 million was recovered in 2002–03 against debts identified in previous years.

Source:

Central Debt Management System

Sign Language

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 17 July 2003, Official Report, column 527W (1) what progress the British Sign Language working group has made towards distributing the money his Department has allocated to the recognition of British Sign Language; and if he will make a statement on how this programme of initiatives will increase access to services and the number of BSL interpreters; [130769]

(2) if he will make a statement on his Department's continued support for the implementation of the recognition of British Sign Language further to the money allocated on 18 March. [130723]

Maria Eagle: The British Sign Language working group, which is an advisory group, has met twice to consider priorities for allocating the additional £1 million we have made available, and to consider draft specifications for initiatives which would best support the 18 March statement. We have received the working group's recommendations which involve action to promote access for BSL users through awareness raising, and action which will contribute to establishing a framework to support BSL tutors. Over time this will result in an increase in the number of BSL interpreters. Officials will shortly start a formal tendering exercise.

The working group will also be doing some longer-term strategic thinking and we will receive their advice in due course on policies and initiatives which would, over time, further increase access for deaf people who use BSL.

Social Security Funding

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much social security funding was distributed to (a) local authority welfare rights units, (b) Citizens Advice Bureaux and (c) other voluntary or private agencies in each local authority in England in each of the last 10 years. [130415]

Malcolm Wicks: Direct funding of outside bodies by the Department for Work and Pensions is confined to a small number of grants, the details of which can be obtained from the Department's annual Accounts, copies of which are available in the Library. The grants enable the voluntary sector to work with the Department in: helping people with disabilities to live more independently in the community; providing mobility related assistance; and free help and advice to members of the public regarding their company, stakeholder or personal pension scheme.

However, the voluntary sector is a key partner of the Department's and a number of organisations receive funding under contract to the Department for the delivery of specific services. For example, assisting in the Department's efforts to help people back into work, particularly those facing the greatest disadvantages, by delivery of a range of employment and training programmes, including elements of the New Deal.

Unclaimed Benefits

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate the Department has made of the amount of unclaimed benefits, broken down by type of benefit, in each of the last 10 years. [130050]

Mr. Pond: Estimates of the amount of additional income-related benefits payable if everyone entitled took-up their entitlement for the full period, broken down by benefit, can be found in the statistical report "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take-Up", which is published annually by the Department. Copies of the publications are available in the Library.

Winter Heating Allowance

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his estimate is of the total value of the winter heating allowance for each year from 1998–99 to 2005–06; and if he will make a statement. [130142]

Malcolm Wicks: The information in respect of winter fuel payments, which were introduced in 1997, is in the table.

£ million

	Winter fuel payments
Expenditure
1997–98	191
1998–99	194
1999–2000	759
2000–01	1,749
2001–02	1,692
Estimated expenditure
2002–03	1,712
Forecast expenditure
2003–04	1,891
2004–05	1,911
2005–06	1,933

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Abattoirs

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she plans to publish the action plan to support small and medium-sized abattoirs and slaughterhouses. [128331]

Mr. Bradshaw: The steps we are taking to help ensure there is a network of abattoirs and meat cutting plants complement our wider "Strategy for Sustainable Farming and Food" which was published on 12 December 2002. Currently, in co-operation with the Meat and Livestock Commission and the Meat Hygiene Service, we are compiling data on the slaughtering and meat supply industry to help us develop a strategic approach. Compilation and analysis is expected to be complete by mid October and data suitable for the public domain will be published thereafter.

Bluetongue Disease

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the risk of an outbreak of bluetongue disease in the United Kingdom; and what discussions she has had with her colleagues in the Northern Ireland Office to prevent the spread of this disease to Northern Ireland. [130404]

Mr. Bradshaw: My officials have consulted experts at the Institute of Animal Health on the risk of an outbreak of Bluetongue in the UK. The Institute of Animal Health is both the National and European Union reference laboratory for the disease. At present the risk is considered to be very low.

Bluetongue is active in countries around the Mediterranean basin. It is transmitted by midges of Culicoides species. However, the disease has recently spread a little further north and the possible causes of this move are being investigated. The main vector of disease (Culicoides imicola) has not been found in the UK.

A Bluetongue Control Strategy for the United Kingdom is already in place and is available on the Defra website at http://www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/diseases/notifiable/disease/bluetongue_control_strategy.PDF Defra staff have worked closely with the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development Northern Ireland (DARDNI) on the preparation of contingency plans as required under Directive 2000/75/EC. These Contingency Plans can be obtained from:

Defra—

via the Defra website—

http.V/www:defra.gov.uk/animaih/diseases/notifiable/disease/bluecontin.PDF and a copyhas been placed in themain Defra library.

DARDNI—

from the Animal Disease Control Branch, Dundonald House, Belfast.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress has been made in reforming the Common Agricultural Policy during the last six months. [129495]

Mr. Bradshaw: On 26 June EU Agriculture Ministers agreed an historic reform of the Common Agricultural Policy which will provide a more sustainable basis for European agriculture, as well as reducing some of the damaging impacts of the CAP on developing countries.

The agreement breaks the link between farm subsidies and production in order to reconnect farmers to their markets, reduce damaging environmental impacts and reduce bureaucracy, this is at the heart of our approach to sustainable food and farming. Subsidies will also be dependent on farmers meeting standards in areas like environmental protection, and animal health and welfare. For the first time there will be an EU wide switch of money from production subsidies to environmental and rural development objectives, and there is a new financial discipline which will trigger action to reduce subsidies if CAP expenditure is in danger of exceeding the agreed budget ceilings.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the latest estimate is of the cost to the average family of the Common Agricultural Policy through higher consumer prices and levels of taxation. [129439]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 11 September 2003]: The consumer cost of the CAP can be estimated by examining the difference between UK and world prices for agricultural food products. The notional taxpayer contribution to CAP expenditure can also be estimated though, in practice, UK taxpayers contribute to the whole EU budget rather than to specific components. Our latest provisional estimates for 2002 show a cost of the CAP to a notional family of four from higher consumer prices and levels of taxation of approximately £8 to £9 a week.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many claimants received a direct grant or subsidy under the Common Agricultural Policy in the latest year for which information is available; and of the payments made, how many were (a) under £1,000, (b) between £1,000 and £2,500, (c) between £2,500 and £5,000, (d) between £5,000 and £10,000, (e) between £10,000 and £100,000, (f) between £100,000 and £500,000, (g) between £500,000 and £1 million and (h) in excess of £1 million. [129441]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 11 September 2003]: The number of claimants who received direct grants or subsidies under the Common Agricultural Policy in England was 93,542 in the 12 month period to 31 August 2003. This is broken down into the requested payment bands in the following table. We are unable to identify the total payments received by any individual or business making applications using more than one name. The payment of direct grants and subsidies in that period in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland was the responsibility of the devolved authorities in Scotland and Wales and the Northern Ireland Administration.

Direct subsidy payments in the 12 month period to 31 August 2003

Band	Total value of payments in period	Number of claimants
(a)	Under £1,000	22,740
(b)	Between £1,000 and £2,500	12,578
(c)	Between £2,500 and £5,000	11,226
(d)	Between £5,000 and £10,000	12,048
(e)	Between £10,000 and £100,000	32,884
(f)	Between £100,000 and £500,000	2,027
(g)	Between £500,000 and £1,000,000	28
(h)	In excess of £1,000,000	11
Total number of claimants		93,542

Commercial Whaling

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with representatives of the Icelandic Government to try to prevent them from resuming commercial whaling. [130567]

Mr. Bradshaw: When Iceland rejoined the IWC in October 2002, its application for renewed membership contained a declaration in which Iceland undertook (under certain conditions) not to resume commercial whaling until 2006 at the earliest.

When the Icelandic Ambassador to London called on me on 3 September, I stressed that the Government (and the UK public) was highly critical of Iceland's unjustified and unnecessary plan to kill 38 minke whales this year, (and possibly larger numbers of minke, sei and fin whales next year).

On 10 September the British Ambassador to Reykjavik delivered a demarche on behalf of the Governments of the UK and 22 other countries, urging the Icelandic Government to rescind its decision to start so-called "scientific" whaling.

Construction Industry (Magnesium Carbonate)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the letter from the former Minister of State for Environment of 16 September 2002 (171977/JW), what action has been taken since April 2003 on the use of magnesium carbonate in the construction industry. [128414]

Mr. Morley: BRE (formerly known as the Building Research Establishment) submitted a successful bid in the 2002 DTI Partners in Innovation competition round to carry out an independent assessment of the potential benefits, including those of carbon sequestration and low embodied energy, reported for novel cements such as magnesium carbonate. The research work is due to commence shortly with a completion date of March 2006. The outcome will be a report assessing the technical and environmental performance of novel cements, their cost competitiveness compared to conventional cements, and, if appropriate, their potential use in the UK construction industry.

EU Enlargement

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the impact of enlargement of the European Union and the rights of nationals of the applicant countries to work in other member states on English farming and horticulture. [129772]

Mr. Bradshaw: After accession on 1 May 2004 nationals from the new member states and members of their families will have the right to work in the United Kingdom on the same basis as those from existing member states. While this will significantly increase the potential pool of workers able to work in English farming and horticulture, a number of independent studies looking at the scale of migration flows into the EU after enlargement suggest that there are likely to be only relatively small inflows into the UK. Predictions of migration flows are difficult to make, even at national level, so the impact on a particular sector such as farming and horticulture is even more uncertain.

Farm Incomes

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average income of individual farms and farm businesses was for those in the top and the bottom deciles in the past 12 months; and what the average percentage of total income subsidies represented in both groups. [129867]

Mr. Bradshaw: The average net farm income, output and subsidies received by farms in the top and bottom deciles in England in 2001–02 is given in the table:

£ per farm

	Bottom decile	Top decile
Net farm income	-37,600	98,500
Total farm output	212,800	476,500
Total subsidies	37,300	42,500
Subsidies as a percentage of output	18	9

Note:
These data refer to farms not subject to compulsory cull of livestock during the Foot and Mouth Disease crisis in 2001.
Source:
Farm Business Survey.

The table provides data only for farms with an economic size of at least eight European Size Units (ESUs), the minimum considered necessary to occupy a full time farmer. Although nearly half the farms in England fall below this size threshold, they account for only 2 per cent. of agricultural output.

Net farm income is defined as the return to the principal farmer and spouse for their labour and on the tenant-type capital of the business.

Farming Industry

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research her Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the effect on the various sectors of the UK farming industry of (i) the legislative burden and (ii) the exchange rate of continental European competitors; and if she will make a statement. [130206]

Mr. Bradshaw: No specific research has been commissioned or evaluated by the Department which compares the total level of legislative burden on the farming industry in the UK with the rest of the European Union. However, as set out in the "Strategy for Sustainable Farming and Food" the Government are committed to better regulation. This means legislating only where necessary, doing so in a light touch way and deregulating and simplifying existing legislation wherever possible. While some regulation is unavoidable if the Government are to safeguard public and animal health, environmental matters or public funds, modern regulations must not only be effective and efficient, but must also deliver improvements in ways which minimise the burden of compliance on the industry.

The euro-sterling exchange rate is an important determiner of UK farm incomes. A provisional assessment of the impact of the recent recovery in the euro and medium term prospects for UK farm incomes if this is sustained is published on the Defra website (http://statistics.defra.gov.uk/esg/reports/repfi.pdf).

Fisheries

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress has been made in dealing with diseases among fish living in restricted cage accommodation. [128820]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 10 September 2003]: Most farming of fin fish in cages takes place in the Scottish marine environment. The health status of farmed fish in the UK including those held in caged systems is closely monitored by the Fish Health Inspectorates reporting to the different administrations in the UK to ensure full compliance with the EU fish health regime as laid down in Council Directives 91/67/EEC and 93/53/EEC and implementing national legislation. The UK has a high fish health status and is currently free from the most serious fish diseases, Infectious Salmon Anaemia (ISA), Viral Haemorrhagic Septicaemia (VMS) and Infectious Haematopoietic Necrosis (IHN). Stringent control programmes operate to maintain freedom from these diseases and to control other serious diseases which may be present in some farmed fish populations such as Infectious Pancreatic Necrosis (IPN) and Bacterial Kidney Disease (BKD).

In March this year the Scottish Executive published "A Strategic Framework for Scottish Aquaculture" which outlines a range of issues which are being addressed to help protect the health and welfare of fish farmed in caged and other systems including better management techniques to help reduce the incidence of sea lice infestation.

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will grant a full aid package for the South West Fishing Fleet and a decommissioning programme following the proposal by the European Commission for a recovery programme for the northern hake stock including associated stocks of megrim and anglerfish; and if she will make a statement. [129414]

Mr. Bradshaw: Grant aid for the fishing industry in south-west England is available under the EU FIFG structural fund programme. The current decommissioning scheme for fishing vessels in England is targeted to the sectors of the fleet which are subject to limits on their time at sea under the interim EU requirements for effort control to conserve cod.

The Government will consider whether there is a need for additional funds to be made available to the south-west fleet in the light of the outcome of EU negotiations on the Commission's proposal for a recovery plan for Northern hake.

Food Consumption

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the percentage of food consumed in the United Kingdom that was sourced in the United Kingdom in the last five years, broken down by sector. [128247]

Mr. Bradshaw: The following table shows the level of UK self-sufficiency in specified commodities for each of the last five years (1998–2002).

Production as percentage of total new supply for use in UK

Commodity	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002
Total Cereals	115	109	113	97	99
Oilseed rape	97	97	83	66	86
Sugar	72	71	71	67	63
Potatoes	88	90	89	84	87
Vegetables	71	72	71	66	66
Fruit	9	12	10	10	9
Beef and veal (home fed)	83	80	79	72	72
Mutton and lamb (home fed)	101	104	100	78	84
Pork (Home fed)	112	100	92	73	76
Poultrymeat	93	90	89	91	91
Processed Liquid Milk[1]	99	100	100	100	100
Butter	78	71	64	63	69
Cheese	64	63	63	66	68
Cream	151	146	137	134	148
Hen eggs	97	93	91	88	87

[1] Processed liquid milk is the product following separation and treatment suitable for the drinking milk market.

Note:
2002 data are provisional and subject to amendment.
Source:
Agriculture in the United Kingdom 2002—Data prepared by Statistics (Commodities and Food) Accounts and Trade, ESD, DEFRA.

Illegal Meat Imports

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her Department's progress in preventing illegal meat from entering the United Kingdom. [129494]

Mr. Bradshaw: Progress against the Government's Action Plan on illegal imports in the financial year 2002–03 is reported in the Annual Review of Controls on Imports of Animal Products. Copies have been placed in the House Libraries.

The 2003–04 Action Plan is appended to the Review, and we are working with HM Customs and other responsible parties to implement it. Progress will be reported in the next Annual Review to be published after the end of this financial year.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many spot checks have been carried out on illegal meat imports at each designated port of entry into the UK since December 2002. [129498]

John Healey: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Hancock) on 8 September 2003, Official Report, column 99W. Customs carry out their anti-smuggling controls on the basis of risk assessment and intelligence.

Lantra

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list research projects that Lantra has undertaken over the last two years. [130590]

Alun Michael: I understand that Lantra carries out projects on behalf of a range of clients, and so comprehensive information is not available within the Department. As an example of work commissioned by my Department, Lantra recently completed a study of the training and development needs of rural businesses to inform Defra's Learning Skills and Knowledge Review.

Milk

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much milk was produced surplus to requirements by UK farmers; and how much milk was imported in each of the last 10 years. [128259]

Mr. Bradshaw: It is difficult to determine how much milk is produced that is "surplus to requirements". This will depend on whether one considers the requirements of UK processors and food manufacturers, both for products intended for domestic consumption or export, or the requirements of UK consumers. Nevertheless, I hope the data tabulated as follows on UK imports, exports, production, domestic use and self-sufficiency for the major milk products since 1991 gives an indication of the position.

	1991	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996
UK imports[1]
Unprocessed liquid milk[2]					186	114
Processed liquid milk[3]	37	67	54	68	89	65
Butter	103	129	110	121	114	114
Cheese	192	232	189	212	210	239
Cream	3	3	2	3	4	6
Condensed milk	10	13	10	13	12	10
Milk powder (full cream)	3	5	6	7	8	10
Skimmed milk powder	8	26	13	12	14	13

	1991	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996
UK exports[1]
Unprocessed liquid milk[2]	72	70	92	133	191	178
Processed liquid milk[3]	3	3	3	4	5	5
Butter	39	51	52	53	53	51
Cheese	51	48	57	59	55	59
Cream	38	41	69	84	79	96
Condensed milk	47	57	50	52	65	58
Milk powder (full cream)	67	84	57	65	77	75
Skimmed milk powder	71	45	55	61	56	20
UK production[1]
Unprocessed liquid milk[2]	14,778	14,679	14,742	14,981	14,683	14,680
Processed liquid milk[3]	6,903	6,980	7,008	6,966	7,128	7,041
Butter	132	127	141	148	133	130
Cheese	309	332	338	341	362	377
Cream	254	240	255	274	281	281
Condensed milk	198	206	191	196	181	206
Milk powder (full cream)	79	84	71	83	90	83
Skimmed milk powder	143	106	132	142	117	108
UK domestic use (disappearances)[1]
Unprocessed liquid milk[2]	14,706	14,610	14,650	14,848	14,678	14,616
Processed liquid milk[3]	6,937	7,044	7,059	7,030	7,212	7,101
Butter	206	207	228	231	201	189
Cheese	458	512	466	500	522	557
Cream	220	202	187	194	207	191
Condensed milk	164	160	151	155	130	160
Milk powder (full cream)	14	7	19	26	20	19
Skimmed milk powder	86	91	88	89	82	75
UK self sufficiency[4]
Unprocessed liquid milk[2]	100	100	101	101	100	100
Processed liquid milk[3]	100	99	99	99	99	99
Butter	67	62	71	69	69	68
Cheese	69	64	72	69	70	68
Cream	116	119	136	142	136	148
Condensed milk	123	128	127	125	141	130
Milk powder (full cream)[5]
Skimmed milk powder[6]	179	121	148	152	157	107

	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002 (provisional)
UK imports[1]
Unprocessed liquid milk[2]	132	133	115	108	65	74
Processed liquid milk[3]	63	57	38	36	31	26
Butter	111	105	114	118	115	101
Cheese	240	257	277	255	273	267
Cream	11	11	8	10	18	12
Condensed milk	13	13	14	14	14	11
Milk powder (full cream)	10	10	10	11	8	10
Skimmed milk powder	13	11	14	13	23	14
UK exports[1]
Unprocessed liquid milk[2]	299	384	479	458	426	433
Processed liquid milk[3]	6	5	7	7	3	4
Butter	74	65	56	45	41	37
Cheese	53	55	62	58	68	77
Cream	92	101	96	82	84	95
Condensed milk	63	64	51	31	22	30
Milk powder (full cream)	106	106	92	102	86	113
Skimmed milk powder	45	34	60	112	30	23
UK production[1]
Unprocessed liquid milk[2]	14,848	14,640	15,020	14,496	14,715	14,906
Processed liquid milk[3]	6,949	6,939	7,056	6,969	6,961	6,956
Butter	139	137	141	132	126	141
Cheese	377	366	368	340	395	396
Cream	268	266	275	270	263	257
Condensed milk	214	192	177	162	161	149
Milk powder (full cream)	96	97	102	105	83	105
Skimmed milk powder	109	107	102	83	71	71

	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002 (provisional)
UK domestic use (disappearances)[1]
Unprocessed liquid milk[2]	14,681	14,388	14,656	14,146	14,335	14,547
Processed liquid milk[3]	7,006	6,991	7,087	6,998	6,989	6,978
Butter	182	172	187	209	200	196
Cheese	561	577	583	536	596	584
Cream	187	176	188	198	197	174
Condensed milk	166	141	138	146	150	131
Milk powder (full cream)	—	1	20	15	2	3
Skimmed milk powder	59	57	68	50	56	45
UK self sufficiency[4]
Unprocessed liquid milk[2]	101	102	102	102	103	102
Processed liquid milk[3]	99	99	100	100	100	100
Butter	79	78	71	64	63	64
Cheese	67	64	63	63	66	65
Cream	144	151	146	137	134	140
Condensed milk	130	136	127	111	105	114
Milk powder (full cream)[5]
Skimmed milk powder[6]	141	127	180	-527	111	115

[1] Thousand tonnes except figures for liquid milk, which are expressed in million litres.
[2] Unprocessed liquid milk is milk in its natural state prior to any form of separation or processing and may be destined for either the drinking or manufacture market.
[3] Processed liquid milk is the product following separation and treatment suitable for the drinking milk market.
[4] Production as percentage of total new supply.
[5] As the UK only makes negligible use of full cream milk powders the self sufficiency calculation is meaningless.
[6] Self sufficiency rate for 2000 is not representative of other years because of the sale of intervention stocks of skimmed milk powder.
Source:
Agriculture in the United Kingdom (2002).

Organic Farmers

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what grants are available to organic farmers from her Department. [130102]

Mr. Bradshaw: Support for farmers converting to organic farming, as well as on-going post-conversion aid to encourage the continued management of the land in an environmentally beneficial way, is available under the Organic Farming Scheme (OFS), which is part of the England Rural Development Programme (ERDP). The rates of aid under the OFS are as follows:

	Year 1	Year 2	Year 3	Year 4	Year 5	Total
Conversion option
Land eligible for Arable Area Payment Scheme and land in permanent crops (except top fruit orchards)	225	135	30	30	30	450
Top Fruit orchards (cherries, pears, plums and apples—other than cider apples)	600	600	600	30	30	1,860
Other improved land	175	105	23	23	23	349
Unimproved grassland, rough grazing and "managed land"	25	10	5	5	5	50
Maintenance option
Land eligible for Arable Area Payment Scheme and land in permanent crops (except top fruit orchards)	30	30	30	30	30	150
Top Fruit orchards (cherries, pears, plums and apples—other than cider apples)	30	30	30	30	30	150
Other improved land	23	23	23	23	23	115
Unimproved grassland, rough grazing and "managed land"	5	5	5	5	5	25

The Department also provides free advice to prospective organic farmers through the Organic Information Conversion Service (OCIS) and the Department's R&D programme includes a large component dealing with research on organic farming.

Parliamentary Questions

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many Questions directed to her remain unanswered. [130757]

Alun Michael: I and my ministerial colleagues attach great importance to answering hon. Members' questions promptly. I am afraid that it is not always possible to do so, if questions, for example, ask for historical or detailed information.

At 16 September, hon. Members had tabled 4,059 parliamentary questions to my Department; 313 questions were either transferred to another Department or withdrawn by Members.

Of the remaining 3,746 questions, 57 are in the process of being drafted.

Phytophthora Ramorum

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many enforcement notices have been issued to destroy trees or shrubs infected by phytophthora ramorum. [130537]

Mr. Bradshaw: As at 16 September 2003, Enforcement notices have been issued for the destruction of trees and shrubs in respect of 305 confirmed outbreaks of phytophthora ramorum in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many inspectors are employed to prevent the import of (a) trees and (b) shrubs infected with phytophthora ramorum. [130609]

Mr. Bradshaw: 76 inspectors from Defra's Plant Health and Seeds Inspectorate continue to monitor trees and shrubs imported from other member states or from third countries to ensure they meet import requirements and are not carrying the disease. This work forms part of their other duties including the survey work for this disease and a wide range of activities related to other plant pests and diseases. Similar action is being taken by the devolved Authorities and the Forestry Commission.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many cases of infection by phytophthora ramorum have been identified in national parks. [130615]

Mr. Bradshaw: Seven cases of infection by phytophthora ramorum have been identified at garden centres and nurseries located within the national parks.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many cases of infection by phytophthora ramorum have been identified in trees or shrubs on Forestry Commission land. [130618]

Mr. Bradshaw: No cases of infection by phytophthora ramorum have been identified in trees and shrubs on Forestry Commission land.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many laboratory tests have been carried out in the last three months on plant material suspected of being infected with the phytophthora ramorum fungus; and what proportion has proved positive. [130643]

Mr. Bradshaw: During June, July and August 2003, 2,192 individual laboratory tests have been carried out on samples of plant material suspected of being infected with phytophthora ramorum fungus in the United Kingdom. 11.8 per cent. of these samples were confirmed as being infected with this pathogen.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) if she will place in the Library a list of the (a) parks, (b) gardens and (c) other premises in England in respect of which enforcement notices have been issued to destroy trees or shrubs infected with phytophthora ramorum; [130644]

(2) if she will take steps to ensure that the public is aware of the identity of the premises of (a) wholesalers and (b) retailers of plants and shrubs where infections of phytophthora ramorum have been discovered. [130645]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 16 September 2003]: The Government believe the public should have as much information as possible about this disease and is happy to meet all reasonable requests for information. However, the information obtained specifically in relation to individual premises, has been gathered in pursuance of the Plant Health and Seeds Inspectorate's statutory powers and on the basis of this information, where necessary, enforcement notices are issued to ensure compliance. In the absence of a statutory obligation to publish details identifying individual premises, to publish such details without consent could seriously jeopardise our ability to work with business in relation to the reporting and control of phytophthora ramorum.

Sea Defences (Tendring)

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the total investment in sea defences along the coast of the Tendring Peninsula was (a) from 1992 to 1997 and (b) since 1997. [129560]

Mr. Morley: Operational responsibility for coastal defences (against erosion and flooding from the sea) along the Tendring Peninsula rests with Tendring District Council and the Environment Agency. Spending by those bodies on capital improvements and maintenance of coastal defences was (a) 9.6 million from 1992–93 to 1996–97 and (b) 15.1 million from 1997–98 to 2002–03. Much of the expenditure has been supported by Central Government funding through Defra grants on capital works and Revenue Support Grant from ODPM.

Softwood

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what volume of softwood was imported into the United Kingdom originating from (a) the EU, (b) Norway, (c) the Baltic countries and (d) Russia in (i) 1999, (ii) 2000, (iii) 2001 and (iv) 2002. [129659]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 15 September 2003]: The figures for softwood imports are presented in the following tables.

Thousand m³ underbark

	1999	2000	2001	2002
Roundwood
EU	73	85	165	273
Norway	4	4	2	0
Baltic countries[1]	50	29	27	38
Russia	2	25	54	52

Thousand m³

	1999	2000	2001	2002
Sawn wood
EU	3,566	3,804	3,937	4,082
Norway	115	106	104	87
Baltic countries[1]	1,989	2,347	2,298	2,441
Russia	404	499	583	701

[1] Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what volume of softwoods was imported in (a) 1999, (b) 2000, (c) 2001 and (d) 2002. [129660]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 15 September 2003]: The figures for softwood imports are presented in the following table.

	Roundwood (Thousand m³ underbark)	Sawn Wood (Thousand m³)
1999	165	6,642
2000	190	7,338
2001	256	7,221
2002	366	7,585

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what volume of softwoods was harvested in the United Kingdom in (a) 1999, (b) 2000, (c) 2001 and (d) 2002. [129662]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 15 September 2003]: The figures are presented in the following table:

	Thousand m³ underbark
1999	6,867
2000	6,926
2001	6,997
2002	6,832

Note:
The figures are based on delivery volumes to wood processing industries.

Sudden Oak Death Disease

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs in what species of plant sudden oak death disease has been identified in the UK within the last year. [130612]

Mr. Bradshaw: As at 16 September 2003, phytophthora ramorum (the cause of the syndrome sudden oak death in the USA) has been confirmed in the following species:

Family	Species
Caprifoliaceae	Viburnum davidii
	Viburnum farreri (syn. Viburnum fragrans)
	Viburnum lantana
	Viburnum opulus
	Viburnum plicatum
	Viburnum tinus
	Viburnum x bodnantense (Viburnum farrerii x Viburnum grandiflorum)
	Viburnum x burkwoodii (Viburnum carlesii x Viburnum utile)
	Viburnum x carlcephalum x Viburnum, utile
	Viburnum x pragnense (Viburnum rhytidophyllum x Viburnum utile)
Ericaceae	Kalmia latifolia
	Leucothoe fontanesiana
	Pieris formosa var. forrestii
	Pieris formosa var. forrestii x Pieris japonica
	Pieris japonica
	Rhododendron augustinii
	Rhododendron balfourianum
	Rhododendron brachycarpum
	Rhododendron ferrugineum
	Rhododendron ponticum
	Rhododendron hybrids—hybrids found infected have been derived from crosses involving Rhododendron arboreum, Rhododendron campylocarpum, Rhododendron catawbiense, Rhododendron campylocapum, Rhododendron caucasicum, Rhododendron dichroanthum, Rhododendron facetum, Rhododendron forresti, Rhododendron fortunei, Rhododendron galactinum, Rhododendron geraldii, Rhododendron grande, Rhododendron griffithianum, Rhododendron griersonianum, Rhododendron mscimum, Rhododendron ponyivum, Rhododendron dmitnoeii, Rhododendron strigillosum. Rhododendron viscidifolium, Rhododendron wardii, Rhododendron yakushimanum and possibly other species
Oleaceae	Syringa vulgaris
Taxaceae	Taxus baccata
Theaceae	Camellia japonica, Camellia reticulata, Camellia x williamsii (Camellia saluenensis x Camellia japonica)

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people are being employed by her Department (a) directly and (b) on a sub-contractual basis to survey gardens and nurseries for sudden oak death disease; and at what cost. [130613]

Mr. Bradshaw: About 85 inspectors from Defra's Plant Health and Seeds Inspectorate, the Horticultural Marketing Inspectorate and the Central Science Laboratory are employed directly to survey gardens and nurseries for phytophthora ramorum in England and Wales.

Five people from outside the Department have been employed on a contractual basis for the period July to October 2003.

The cost of employing staff working directly on survey work and of those employed on a contractual basis since 1 January 2003 is estimated at about £400,000.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many cases of sudden oak death disease have been reported to her Department in the last year. [130614]

Mr. Bradshaw: Nine confirmed reports from private nurseries and other independent consultants have been received by the Department in the last year.

Sugar

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent representations she has received on the proposed reform of the sugar regime [129636]

Mr. Bradshaw: Although the European Commission have said that they are considering the future of the EU sugar regime, no specific proposals for reform have so far been tabled.

We have, however, received representations from a range of interests within the UK industry including beet growers, beet processors, cane refiners and companies who use sugar in the manufacture of their products, as well as from our traditional overseas cane sugar suppliers and organisations concerned with developing country issues.

There appears to be a general consensus that the current sugar regime is unsustainable, although there are differing views on the best way forward. We shall take account of all the views expressed to us as discussions proceed.

Sustainable Development

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she has taken to make available to the general public information on the work of the United Nations Commission on Sustainable Development. [130358]

Mr. Morley: The work of the United Nations Commission on Sustainable Development (UNCSD) is communicated comprehensively through the United Nations1 own website http://www.un.org/esa/sustdev/index.html and wider communications programme. Our own UK Government Sustainable development website http://www.sustainable-development.gov.uk/ contains a link to this site. Non-governmental stakeholders are consulted by HMG officials prior to the UK's attendance at these meetings, and are usually represented on the Government delegation. CSD's work is also included in Command Paper 5898 "The United Kingdom in the United Nations" published this month http://www.fco.gov.uk/Files/kfile/Cm5898.pdf, copies of which were deposited in the HoC Library on Friday 5 September.

Varroa Mites

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to combat the spread of Varroa mites; and if she will make a statement. [130356]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra funds a range of measures to assist the beekeeping sector in England through its bee health programme, which is delivered by the National Bee Unit (NBU), part of the Central Science Laboratory. In 2003–04, the programme will cost £1.235 million Under these measures, the NBU provides a free diagnostic and inspection service to beekeepers for varroa as well as training and technical advice to help them become more self-reliant in controlling the pest through improved bee husbandry. The NBU is also carrying out routine screening throughout England for varroa mites that are resistant to authorised pyrethroid-based treatments, having first detected them in August 2001. This year Defra also expects to spend around £248,000 on research and development to support our bee health work. This includes a three-year project that extends an earlier MAFF-funded investigation by Horticulture Research International on the use of entomopathogenic fungi as a biological control of varroa.

Arrangements for bee health matters in Scotland and Wales are the responsibility of the Scottish Executive and Welsh Assembly respectively.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Antisocial Behaviour Orders

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of offenders subject to an antisocial behaviour order have subsequently been arrested (a) once, (b) one to five times and (c) more than five times. [129099]

Ms Blears: Information on the number of persons who have been issued with an antisocial behaviour order and have subsequently been arrested is not collected centrally.

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of individuals in the age groups (a) 12 to 14, (b) 15 to 17, (c) 18 to 21 and (d) 21 plus, who have been found guilty of breaching an antisocial behaviour order received (i) a custodial sentence and (ii) a detention and training order; and if he will make a statement. [129114]

Ms Blears: The available information, relating to England and Wales for the years 1999, 2000 and 2001 is contained in the table.

Data for 2002 will be available in December 2003.

Persons found guilty of breaching an Anti-Social Behaviour Order and the percentage given custodial sentences, England and Wales, 2000 and 2001

Year and age group	Total found guilty	Percentage receiving detention and training order	Percentage receiving other forms of immediate custody[1]
2000
Age 12–14	10	40	10
Age 15–17	21	38	—
Age 18–21	5	—	20
Age 21 plus	30	—	70

Persons found guilty of breaching an Anti-Social Behaviour Order and the percentage given custodial sentences, England and Wales, 2000 and 2001

Year and age group	Total found guilty	Percentage receiving detention and training order	Percentage receiving other forms of immediate custody[1]
2001
Age 12–14	34	29	—
Age 15–17	92	43	—
Age 18–21	42	—	43
Age 21 plus	90	—	51

[1] Includes secure training order, young offender institution and immediate imprisonment.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convictions there have been in the last six months for breach of an antisocial behaviour order in the north-west of England. [129470]

Ms Blears: Statistics of court proceedings for 2003 will be published in the autumn of 2004.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many unaccompanied minors sought asylum in the UK in each of the last three years. [127863]

Beverley Hughes: The information requested is given in the table. The data relate to applicants aged 17 or under. The data for 2002 are from new, more reliable, electronic sources, and are not fully comparable with data for previous years obtained from manual counts.

Unaccompanied children[1,2,3] aged 17 or under, applying for asylum in the United Kingdom, 2000 to 2002

	Total	Applied at Port	Applied in Country
2000[4]	2,735	1,395	1,340
2001[4]	3,470	1,645	1,820
2002[5,6]	6,200	1,240	4,955

[1] Figures are rounded to the nearest 5.

[2] Unaccompanied at point of arrival, aged (or if no proof) determined to be 17 or under and not known to be joining a relative or a guardian in the UK

[3] Figures exclude age dispute cases.

[4] May exclude some cases fodged at Local Enforcement Office and postal applications.

[5] Figures not comparable with manual counts data prior to 2002.

[6] Provisional figures.

Information on asylum applications from unaccompanied asylum seeking children is published annually in the statistical bulletin "Asylum Statistics United Kingdom", a copy of which is available in the Library, and from the RDS web site:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what support and advice he is giving to refugee and asylum support organisations to assist asylum seekers with travel to Croydon to lodge an asylum application; [128201]

(2) what support he is giving to asylum seekers to enable them to travel to Croydon to lodge an asylum application. [128202]

Beverley Hughes: Those seeking asylum should claim on arrival in the United Kingdom or as soon as practicable thereafter. If their claim is post arrival it should be made at an Asylum Screening Unit (ASU). The three ASUs are in Croydon, Liverpool and Solihull.

There is no provision to fund the travel of those seeking to lodge an application for asylum.

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the operation of section 55 of the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002. [128203]

Beverley Hughes: Section 55, which came into force on 8 January 2003, is one of a package of robust Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act measures to restore credibility to the UK asylum system.Since February 2003, a number of test cases have been before the Courts. The most recent Court of Appeal hearing was on 27 August and the judgement is expected shortly. Statistics on the operation of section 55 have been published in the Home Office Asylum Statistics for the first and second quarters of 2003. We will continue to monitor its impact closely.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on how the European legislation on immigration will affect the amount of money the Government spends on financial aid for asylum seekers. [128682]

Beverley Hughes: As part of the package of measures designed to establish minimum standards on asylum foreseen by the 1999 Tampere European Council, the Council Directive laying down minimum standards for the reception of asylum seekers (2003/9/EC) contains provisions for financial aid for asylum seekers. This lays down minimum standards for the material reception conditions of asylum seekers and their dependants.

Member states are required to transpose the Directive by the 6 February 2005 and work to take this forward is continuing. This will have a limited effect as the UK already meets the directives' provisions relating to financial allowances for asylum seekers.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to ensure that asylum seekers who come to the United Kingdom as children do not stay for a period longer than that to which they are permitted once they turn 18 years of age. [128683]

Beverley Hughes: Unaccompanied asylum seeking children who are permitted to stay solely because of a lack of reception and accommodation arrangements in their country are not granted leave beyond their 18th birthday. Once they turn 18 they must leave or apply for an extension of their leave. If that application is refused, or they do not submit any such application, their details are passed to the relevant local enforcement office for removal action. Removal action in these cases is undertaken as a matter of priority.

Mr. Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum applications were (a) accepted and (b) rejected in (i) 2002 and (ii) 1997. [128727]

(2) what percentage of asylum applications were rejected in each year since 1997. [128728]

Beverley Hughes: The table shows the outcomes of initial decisions made by the Home Office since 1997. These statistics relate to initial decisions only and exclude the outcome of appeals or other subsequent decisions. Initial decisions in any given year may relate to applications made in earlier years.

Overall, it is estimated that 42 per cent. of the applications in 2002 resulted in grants of asylum (10 per cent.) or of exceptional leave to remain (23 per cent.), or in allowed appeals (10 per cent.). Comparable data are not available for 1997, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost by examination of individual case files. Exceptional leave to remain has now been replaced by Humanitarian Protection or Discretionary Leave with a much tighter set of criteria.

Information on the number of asylum applications and initial decisions is published quarterly on the Home Office website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Initial decisions[1,2] on applications received for asylum in the United Kingdom, excluding dependants, 1997 to 2002

	Initial Decisions[3]
	Cases considered under normal procedures								Backlog clearance exercise
Year	Total decisions		Recognised as refugee and granted asylum		Not recognised as refugee but granted exceptional leave		Total Refused		Granted asylum or exceptional leave under backlog criteria[5,6]		Refused under backlog criteria[5,7]
		[4]		[4]		[4]		[4]		[4]		[4]
1997	36,045	(100)	3,985	(11)	3,115	(9)	28,945	(80)	n/a	n/a	n/a	n/a
1998	31,570	(100)	5,345	(17)	3,910	(12)	22,315	(71)	n/a	n/a	n/a	n/a
1999	33,720	(100)	7,815	(36)	2,465	(12)	11,025	(52)	11,140	(90)	1,275	(10)
2000	109,205	(100)	10,375	(11)	11,495	(12)	75,680	(78)	10,325	(89)	1,335	(11)
2001(R)	120,950	(100)	11,450	(9)	20,190	(17)	89,310	(74)	n/a	n/a	n/a	n/a
2002(P)	83,540	(100)	8,270	(10)	20,135	(24)	55,130	(66)	n/a	n/a	n/a	n/a

[1] Decisions do not necessarily relate to applications received in the same period.
[2] Figures (other than percentages) rounded to the nearest 5.
[3] Information is of initial decisions, excluding the outcome of appeals or other subsequent decisions.
[4] Percentages for cases considered under normal procedures and those within the backlog clearance exercise are calculated separately.
[5] Cases decided under measures aimed at reducing the pre 1996 asylum application backlog.
[6] Includes cases where asylum or exceptional leave has been granted under the backlog criteria.
[7] Includes some cases where the application has been refused on substantive grounds.
(P) Provisional figures.
(R) Revised figures.
n/a Not available.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will outline the procedure used in deciding where to place asylum seekers. [128734]

Beverley Hughes: The National Asylum Support Service (NASS) is responsible for accommodating and supporting destitute asylum seekers and their dependants. Asylum seekers who request that accommodation be provided to them will be dispersed on a "no-choice" basis to one of the cluster areas around the UK. Cluster areas are ideally based in towns and cities where suitable accommodation is available and where there is potential to provide a link with existing multi-cultural communities and where the support of local voluntary and community groups is available.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much individual asylum cases cost (a) central and (b) local government in each year from 1997 to 2002. [128735]

Beverley Hughes: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate within the Home Office assumed responsibility for the direct costs of supporting asylum seekers from April 1999. The average costs per week for the years 1999–2000 to 2001–02 are as follows.

	Singles	Families
1999–2000 (estimated)	150	220
2000–01	134	287
2001–02	122	278

The costs include payments made to local authorities for accommodation, as well as those made to the private sector. Further information on any other costs to local or central government, specifically related to asylum seekers, is not currently available.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his plans to provide transport to allow asylum seekers held at the proposed Bicester centre to travel to Aylesbury and other towns; and what his estimate is of the cost of such a service to public funds. [129397]

Beverley Hughes: As a requirement of planning approval the operating contractor of the accommodation centre at Bicester will run a minibus service, principally for the use of staff and visitors, to provide an alternative means of travel to the private car. The service will operate between the accommodation centre and the towns from which it is anticipated that the centre's employees will be drawn; these are expected to be Bicester, Oxford,

Aylesbury and Banbury. Asylum seekers supported at the accommodation centre will be allowed to use the minibus service subject to capacity, as well as compliance with reporting and residence requirements.

We are in the process of appointing a contractor to design, build and operate the accommodation centre. Therefore the estimated cost of the minibus service is commercially confidential.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers are detained under immigration law; and of these how many are awaiting removal from the UK. [130018]

Beverley Hughes: As at 28 June 2003 (the latest date for which information is available) there were 1,355 asylum seekers detained solely under the Immigration Act. Information on the number of these who were awaiting removal would be available only by examination of individual case-files at disproportionate cost.

Information on the number of asylum applicants detained solely under the Immigration Act is published quarterly on the Home Office website: www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html. Data for those detained at the end of September 2003 will be published at the end of November.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many children of asylum seekers have been held in detention in each of the last 12 months; and what the average length of time is for which each child is held. [130019]

Beverley Hughes: Information on the number of children of asylum seekers detained in each of the last 12 months and the length of time for which they were held could be collated only at disproportionate cost. However, we are reviewing the quality of data on all immigration detainees to assess whether more data can appropriately be published and, if so, how.

Cigarette Lighters

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the Cigarette Lighter Refill Gas Regulations; what plans he has for (a) increasing the age limit and (b) introducing a licensing system; and if he will make a statement. [128344]

Caroline Flint: The Cigarette Lighter Refill (Safety) Regulations 1999 prohibit the sale or supply of such refills to anyone under 18 years. The Regulations came into force on 1 October 1999 and are enforced by local authority trading standards officers. Local Trading Standards departments have a key public protection role, carrying out surveys within their areas to find out whether shops are selling lighter refills to under age persons, and investigating possible legal breaches.

Although the number of deaths resulting from the abuse of butane gas refills and other volatile substances has remained fairly stable since 1991, the Government remain very concerned about any young person who dies in this way. We do not believe, however, that increasing the age limit to which the Regulations apply would help to any significant degree. Nor do we think a licensing system would add significantly to the controls which are already in place.

In partnership with other Government Departments including DfES, Home Office and DTI, the Department of Health is putting together a comprehensive action plan, within the context of wider substance misuse policy, covering key areas such as prevention, manufacturing, research and legislation. A first draft should be available in autumn 2003.

Country Policy and Information Unit

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the (a) content and (b) use made of the country information produced by the Country Policy and Information Unit. [129766]

Beverley Hughes: The Home Office published research "Country of Origin Information: A User and Content Evaluation" on 1 September 2003. The full text of the research is available at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs2/r211.pdf.

The research was commissioned by the Country Information and Policy Unit and conducted by the Research Development and Statistics Directorate (RDS) in 2001. The findings of the research relate to the position at that time and many of the report's recommendations have since been addressed.

In particular, the Nationality Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 provided for an independent Advisory Panel on Country Information to be established to provide recommendations on the content of Home Office country information, to help ensure the content of Home Office country information, to help ensure that it is as objective as possible. The advisory panel will also meet the report's recommendations that an expert panel of topic and country specialists should be set up to review CIPU's material and that steps should be taken to improve consultation with external stakeholders.

The Home Secretary is satisfied that the country of origin information produced by the Home Office is accurate and objective and the expert input of the advisory panel can only serve to enhance the quality of CIPU's material.

The advisory panel is chaired by Professor Stephen Castles, Director of the Refugee Studies Centre at the University of Oxford and held its first meeting on 2 September 2003. The minutes of the panel's meetings will be published in due course.

Depleted Uranium

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the dangers to those who come into close proximity to depleted uranium stolen from a site in Thurrock during July; and if he will make a statement. [126315]

Mr. Browne: I have been asked to reply.

A container made from depleted uranium was in a van stolen from inside a warehouse on 7 July 2003. The container was part of the normal emergency equipment carried in case there should be a problem with a source of ionising radiation that had not yet been loaded into the van. The Health and Safety Executive investigated the incident and concluded that the container would be safe to approach and handle. Even if it was mistreated, such as by fire or explosion, only very extreme conditions would result in the possibility of airborne radioactivity that could lead to low level internal exposure.

There is no reason to believe that the theft of the van was other than opportunistic.

Domestic Violence

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to extend the introduction of the one year period of reflection rule in cases of domestic violence to asylum seeking women, and to women and children who are victims of trafficking for sexual purposes. [127281]

Beverley Hughes: There is provision in the Immigration Rules to assist those who have sought leave to enter based upon marriage, whose marriage subsequently breaks down during the probationary period as a result of domestic violence, to settle in the UK, providing they meet certain criteria. There are no plans at the moment to extend this provision to asylum seeking women, or to women and children who are victims of trafficking for sexual purposes. We believe there are already adequate safeguards in the system for their protection, and that decisions on each case should be made on the basis of individual circumstances.

Essex Police Force

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the approved strength of the Essex police force is; and how many vacancies there are. [129666]

Ms Blears: The Home Office does not set approved strengths for police forces. Essex police had 2,995 police officers on 31 December 2002, a record number. The force employed 1,571 police staff on 31 March 2002, the latest date for which figures are available.

I understand that the force intends to take on 105 officers during the remainder of 2003–04.

Experience Corps Scheme

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the Experience Corps Scheme. [130722]

Fiona Mactaggart: The experience corps has been a useful project, which has enabled us to learn a number of lessons about attracting older volunteers. The experience corps were recently evaluated and the findings suggest that there were concerns surrounding their figures on volunteer recruitment. While they have attracted a significant number of volunteers, they are likely to fall short of their target.

Our current funding agreement with the experience corps comes to an end in March 2004. We have decided not to continue to fund the experience corps beyond that date. We are still, however, committed to encouraging older people to volunteer.

Hoax Telephone Calls

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals suspected of making hoax calls to the emergency services have (a) been arrested and (b) had their telephones disconnected in the last two months for which figures are available. [129480]

Ms Blears: Information on the number of persons arrested for making false calls in order to cause annoyance is not collected centrally.

Immigrants (Scotland)

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from the Scottish Executive on attracting immigrants to Scotland. [127209]

Beverley Hughes: Discussions between Home Office and Scottish Executive Ministers take place regularly on a number of issues, and these have included the Scottish Executive's interest in UK managed migration policies.

Immigration and Nationality Directorate

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff there were in each office of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate in the last year for which figures are available; and what the remit of each office is. [127206]

Beverley Hughes: The number of full-time equivalent staff in the Immigration and Nationality Directorate by business area, at 30 June 2003 was:

	Number
Immigration Service—(including border controls and removals)	6,500
Asylum support, asylum casework and appeals	2,830
Managed Migration (applications for leave to remain, nationality and work permits)	1,690
Non-operational (includes policy development and corporate services)	1,880

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set up an Immigration and Nationality Directorate office in Scotland. [127210]

Beverley Hughes: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) has a Public Enquiry Office (PEO) in Glasgow. In May 2003, responsibility for this office transferred from UK Immigration service to the IND. Since this transfer, the Glasgow office has expanded their services and now deal with all types of straightforward applications for leave to remain and settlement. Applicants are required to make an appointment prior to attending. There are no plans for any further offices to be opened in Scotland.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many items (a) deposited at and (b) posted to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate have been (i) lost at and (ii) stolen from each office in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [128770]

Beverley Hughes: Information dating back to 1993 for each of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate's buildings is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. I would refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 12 June 2003, Official Report, column 1053W, and would add that as at 4 September this year, 2,872 requests for the return of documents had been received and 571 lost passport letters issued. A range of measures including the setting up of secure handling areas and the early return of sponsors' passports are currently being put in place to improve significantly IND's ability to find and return documents at the time of request.

Immigration

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 11 July, Official Report, column 1068W, on immigration, how long it takes on average to perform the checks to which he refers. [128518]

Beverley Hughes: When the decision is taken by an immigration officer to release a person on temporary admission the number of checks undertaken depend upon the individual circumstances of the case.

The average time taken to perform the checks varies in view of this. However, given that some checks, such as the computerised Warnings Index, involve using information readily to hand to the Immigration Service they can be carried out immediately. Where the information has to be obtained from an outside agency, such as the police national computer or electoral registrar, the checks can take longer, but should still ordinarily be completed within a matter of hours.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce British citizenship tests for immigrants; how long they would take to complete; who will oversee the testing; and if those who fail will be deported. [129106]

Beverley Hughes: The Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act received Royal Assent on 7 November 2002. Section One, which relates to these requirements, will come into force by Commencement Order once its new requirements have been finalised.

The "Life in the UK" advisory group, appointed by my right hon. friend the Home Secretary to look at the content, conduct and implementation of programmes of study, published its final report on 3 September. A copy has been placed in the Library. The Government are considering their recommendations and no firm conclusions have yet been made about the nature of tests and who will oversee them.

Naturalisation applicants must have indefinite leave to remain in the United Kingdom. They will not therefore be liable to removal solely on the basis of their lack of language skills or knowledge of life in the UK. As now, naturalisation applicants will be able to re-apply if they are unsuccessful.

Independent Documentation Centre

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what the outcome was of the consultation in 1998 on the establishment of an independent documentation centre to provide country of origin information in assessing the cases of asylum seekers; [129767]

(2) if he will make it his policy to establish an independent documentation centre. [129768]

Beverley Hughes: The Consultative Group on Country Information reported in December 1998. It recommended, inter alia, that an independent documentation centre should be established to provide country of origin information for use in the asylum process.

Home Office Ministers considered this recommendation, but at that time IND's priority was to support the recovery of asylum decision output through the expansion and improvement of advice to caseworkers, including implementing other Consultative Group recommendations about the format and content of country of origin information material produced by the Home Office's Country Information and Policy Unit (CIPU).

In 2001, the Home Office commissioned research into the production and use of its country of origin information material. By this time, the CIPU had established a track record for accurate research, with its reports being widely used as source documents by other countries and for material produced by non-governmental organisations. It was therefore decided to await the outcome of the research before proceeding with a feasibility study on the Independent Documentation Centre proposal.

The research, which was published on 1 September 2003 in a report entitled "Country of Origin Information: a user and content evaluation", noted the on-going debate about whether an independent documentation would be the best way to assure the objectivity of the country of origin material used in the asylum process. The report suggested that if it was decided not to proceed with the independent documentation centre, measures should be taken to ensure country of origin information produced by CIPU was impartial and objective. The full text of the research is available at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs2/r211.pdf

Rather than establishing an independent documentation centre, it was decided to build upon CIPU's existing structures and strengths, and introduce measures to ensure the quality and accuracy of the country information products used in the asylum process. The Nationality Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 provided for an independent Advisory Panel on Country Information to be established to provide recommendations on the content of Home Office country information and help to ensure that it is as objective as possible. The Advisory Panel will also meet the report's recommendations that an expert panel of topic and country specialists should be set up to review CIPU's material and that steps should be taken to improve consultation with external stakeholders.

The Advisory Panel is chaired by Professor Stephen Castles, Director of the Refugee Studies Centre at the University of Oxford and held its first meeting on 2 September 2003. The minutes of the panel's meetings will be published in due course.

Iraq

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with (a) the Secretary of State for Defence and (b) the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth

Affairs on allowing British police officers to volunteer to go to Iraq to help train the Iraqi Police Force; and if he will make a statement. [129326]

Ms Blears: I have agreed to a request from my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to ask the Association of Chief Police Officers to seek up to 200 volunteers to create a pool of United Kingdom police officers for potential deployment to Iraq to assist in the reform of the Iraqi Police Service. The pool is intended to sustain the deployment of up to 100 United Kingdom officers at any one time.

Officers will be deployed only when conditions are right. The security position will be reviewed regularly.

Leave to Remain

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what basis the figures of (a) £155 and (b) £250 were set for charges for in-country applicants wishing to extend their stay in the UK. [127102]

Beverley Hughes: Fees are set under Treasury rules to recover the full administrative cost entailed in considering applications and no more. This is calculated by taking the overall costs of processing applications divided by the number of decisions we expect to make.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the estimated revenue per year is from the introduction of charges for in-country applicants wishing to extend their stay in the UK; what estimate he has made of the impact in the UK; and if he will consider applications for the fee to be waived. [127106]

Beverley Hughes: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary announced in February 2002 in his White Paper "Secure Borders, Safe Haven: Integration with Diversity in Modern Britain", that he would be introducing charges in order to fund the modernisation of IND. The regulations were laid on 10 July. IND already charges fees in respect of Nationality applications and for Travel Documents, and since 1 April 2003 for Work Permits.

We continue to welcome the many foreign nationals who choose to study, work and live in the UK—they boost our economy and add to our thriving cosmopolitan society. Many apply to extend their stay each year, and it is right that they should meet the costs of that. The Government have made significant investment in recent years to improve all aspects of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate, including the standard of service people receive when they submit applications. Charging will help us to continue to improve the efficiency and speed with which we process these applications, leading to ever higher levels of customer service.

I have decided that all those who can legally be charged will be. Therefore, the only exemptions to this are EU nationals (and third country nationals who are their dependants); those making a claim for asylum or for protection under Article 3 of the ECHR; people applying for Indefinite Leave to Remain on the grounds of domestic violence where, at the time of making of the application, the applicants appear to be destitute; and those exempt from immigration control.

Any further exemptions would leave an unfair burden on the general taxpayer or threaten the much needed service improvements which will be facilitated by charging.

The estimated revenue for introducing charging for leave to remain applications is £90 million.

Merseyside Police Force

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) police officers and (b) civilian support staff were employed by Merseyside Police in (i) 2000, (ii) 2001 and (iii) 2002. [129472]

Ms Blears: The information is given in the table.

Merseyside Police[1]

	Police officers	Police staff
31 March 2000	4,085	1,458
31 March 2001	4,081	1,418
31 March 2002	4,125	1,532
31 December 2002	4,180	—

[1] Figures are full time equivalents

Source:
Home Office Statistics

National Crack Plan

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the impact of the National Crack Plan. [130492]

Caroline Flint: The National Crack Plan, which was published in December 2002, recognises the particular harm done by the supply and use of crack cocaine. It requires action under all four aims of the Updated Drug Strategy and focused particularly on the 37 areas that have been identified as high crack areas.

Examples of resulting activity include; the introduction of legislation to fast track the closure of crack houses; the introduction, in collaboration with overseas Governments, of measures to reduce the supply of cocaine from the Caribbean; the piloting and evaluation of crack treatment services to expand provision and determine what works best, and the extension of diversionary activity programmes for young people to 31 high crack areas.

There is still much to do to combat the harm caused by crack cocaine, but we are determined, through the National Crack Plan, to make a difference.

Operation Ulysses

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what financial and administrative support his Department provides to Operation Ulysses concerning control of migration to Europe. [130020]

Beverley Hughes: The Government have provided no direct financial support to Operation Ulysses. Contributions have instead been made in kind to both phases of the operation.

The UK adopts a multi-agency approach to combating illegal immigration. For the first phase, HM Customs and Excise committed a Cutter vessel; and for the second phase the Ministry of Defence provided a Nimrod aircraft for surveillance purposes. All the travel and subsistence costs incurred by the crews involved will be reimbursed through European Community funding. Additionally, the Home Office and the British embassy in Spain have provided administrative assistance.

Passports

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he is taking to protect the United Kingdom from the use of illicit passports. [128663]

Beverley Hughes: The United Kingdom has a range of measures aimed at preventing people using forged or improperly obtained documents entering the country. These include a network of Airline Liaison Officers overseas, a comprehensive visa strategy, international co-operation, development of expertise within the Immigration Service and special exercises.

In the UK, the lead is taken by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate National Forgery Unit (NFU) who have links with other agencies including the police. The NFU provides equipment, training and intelligence to immigration officers in the UK, and to those serving abroad, including Airline Liaison Officers. Immigration officers, specially trained in forgery detection work, are based at all UK ports. 9,664 fraudulent documents were detected at UK ports in 2002, an increase of 46 per cent. over 2001.

The NFU organises regular exercises targeting specific documents, which show a high rate of recorded abuse, and these have proven particularly effective. NFU also have a permanent presence at IND's main offices in Croydon, where they examine documents submitted in support of applications for leave to remain. In 2002, a total of 461 fraudulent documents was detected there.

As part of its external borders policy, the UK maintains a network of 25 Airline Liaison Officers at key locations abroad. They offer advice, training and expertise to airlines, to help prevent the carriage of inadequately documented passengers to the UK. British immigration officers are now working alongside their French counterparts in Calais, offering advice on the validity of travel documents. The UK also works closely with the EU and G8 states, exchanging information and expertise to combat passport abuse.

Visa Requirements

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will lift the visa requirement on Slovak citizens for entry into the United Kingdom. [129435]

Beverley Hughes: I would refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, the hon. Member for Harlow (Mr. Rammell) on 13 May 2003, Official Report, column 160W.

Work Permits

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many work permits have been granted to people seeking to work in the British information technology industry in each of the past five years. [128313]

Beverley Hughes: The number of work permit approvals in respectof the computer services industry in each of the past five years is as follows:

	Number
1998	5,786
1999	7,266
2000	17,288
2001	23,203
2002	19,877

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons the India Business Group was asked to join the Work Permits Panel; and if he will make a statement on the balance of its membership (a) inside and (b) outside the UK. [128314]

Beverley Hughes: Work Permits (UK) seeks to ensure that the membership of the Information Technology, Communications and Electronic Sector Advisory Panel is balanced and represents all those stakeholders which have a direct interest in the operation of the work permit arrangements in this area and which are able to provide WPUK with advice on labour market conditions in this area. The membership of the panel comprises employer and employee groups, as well as other Government Departments and non-governmental organisations. The India Business Group was invited to join the Panel on the basis that it represents businesses located in the United Kingdom which are users of the work permit arrangements.

Yarlswood

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will widen the terms of reference of the inquiry by Mr. Stephen Shaw into the Yarlswood fire to include the conduct of Group 4 (a) in the period leading up to 14 February 2002 and (b) on the night of 14 February 2002. [129675]

Beverley Hughes: There is no need to do so. Stephen Shaw's terms of reference are such as to allow him to consider matters leading up to the events on 14 and 15 February last year.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will urge Mr. Stephen Shaw to take evidence in public during the inquiry into the events surrounding the fire at the Yarlswood Removal Centre on 14 February 2002. [129676]

Beverley Hughes: No. In view of the interest shown in the events at Yarlswood last February, we concluded that it would be preferable for the outcome of the investigation to be fully independent. Stephen Shaw was asked to take overall responsibility for the investigation. A full public inquiry would not be appropriate.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the report presented to him in September 2002 by Mr. Stephen Moore about events leading up to, and including, the fire at Yarlswood on 14 February 2002. [129681]

Beverley Hughes: No. The material gathered by Stephen Moore must be regarded as work in progress, which Stephen Shaw will draw on as part of his inquiry.

DEFENCE

Afghanistan

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 8 September 2003, ref.128526, on Afghanistan, if he will make a statement on (a) the strategic importance of the Afghan National Army in promoting stability in Afghanistan and (b) the development of the Afghan National Army. [130695]

Mr. Ingram: The Bonn Agreement of 5 December 2001 acknowledges that responsibility for security in Afghanistan lies with the Afghans themselves, but seeks international assistance in establishing and training new security forces. The creation of an effective and representative Afghan National Army is therefore an essential component in ensuring the future security and stability of Afghanistan. Development of the Afghan National Army continues.

Aircraft Carriers

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how the revised costing for the carrier programme will be accommodated within his Department's budget; and if he will make a statement. [128341]

Mr. Ingram: As announced by the Secretary of State for Defence in January this year, our estimate of the cost of the Demonstration and Manufacture (D and M) of the future carriers is around £3 billion. This estimate will be refined further during the remainder of the Assessment phase prior to establishing D and M contracting arrangements currently planned for Spring 2004.

Funding for this project has been already been set aside within the defence budget and is allocated to the Equipment Plan as is the case with all defence equipment projects.

Commissioned Ship Logs

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions in the last 10 years logs of commissioned ships have been lost overboard. [130941]

Mr. Ingram: Ships logs, which are produced by all units on a monthly basis, are occasionally lost. This may be for a variety of reasons. There is however, no central record which could provide details of missing or lost logs. That information could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

Defence Exhibition

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total cost of holding the Defence Systems and Equipment International exhibition in September was to (a) the Ministry of Defence, (b) the Department of Trade and Industry, (c) Trade Partners UK and (d) other government departments and agencies; and if he will make a statement. [129776]

Mr. Ingram: In reply to the hon. Member for Islington, North (Jeremy Corbyn) on 20 May 2003, Official Report, columns 677–78 W, I provided an estimate of the direct cost of the exhibition to the Ministry of Defence. The final cost remains to be established, but we do not expect it to exceed the estimated figure.

The Metropolitan police estimate a total of £1.48 million in additional pay and other costs associated with policing the event. British Transport Police estimate their cost of policing the event as £250,000. As above, the final cost remains to be established.

Neither the Department of Trade and Industry nor Trade Partners UK incurred costs.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the incidents involving Argentinian military personnel and (a) British troops and (b) Falkland Islands residents in the past six years. [129906]

Mr. Ingram: The armed forces of the United Kingdom and Argentina participate in a range of joint activities as part of a bilateral defence relations programme. We are unaware of any significant incidents between Argentinian military personnel and our own armed forces or residents of the Falkland Islands.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) fisheries protection vessels and (b) maritime patrol aircraft have been operational in the Falkland Islands in each of the past six years. [129908]

Mr. Ingram: Fisheries Protection Vessels are provided by the Falklands Islands Government. In addition, the Falkland Islands Patrol Vessel is permanently stationed in the Falkland Islands, with the exception of short absences for visits and maintenance periods in South America. Maritime air patrol tasks are undertaken by assets permanently stationed in the Falkland Islands (currently a C-130 and a VC-10), and on various occasions over the past six years specialist maritime patrol aircraft have also been deployed to the Falkland Islands.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the strength of (a) the Army, (b) the Royal Navy and (c) the Royal Air Force in the Falkland Islands has been in each of the last six years. [129910]

Mr. Ingram: Force level in the Falkland Islands for each of the past six years, broken down by service, are shown in the following table. All figures are rounded to the nearest 10, and, due to rounding methods used, totals may not equal the sum of the individual components.

	April 1997	April 1998	April 1999	April 2000	April 2001	April 2002	October 2002
Naval Service	260	100	50	270	40	40	40
Army	620	600	640	580	680	640	480
RAF	900	850	860	770	740	670	670
Total	1,790	1,550	1,550	1,620	1,460	1,350	1,200

Force Readiness

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the (a) Army, (b) Naval service and (c) RAF units, required to be rapidly available, are at (i) very high, (ii) high and (iii) medium states of readiness. [125605]

Mr. Ingram: Data on forces at very high, high and medium states of readiness were collected in support of the Spending Review 2000 Public Service Agreement (PSA) target that by 2005 a minimum of 90 per cent. of rapidly available military units (described as those held at very high, high or medium readiness) should be at the required states of readiness. Information against this PSA target was last collected for the quarter ending 31 March 2003. Performance for that quarter was:

Percentage of Rapidly Available Elements at Required Readiness States (quarter ending 31 March 2003)

Service	Proportion at very high, high and medium readiness (%)
Royal Navy and Royal Marines	91
Army	[1]29
Royal Air Force	91

[1] Army data excludes forces deployed in the Gulf or recovering from emergency fire-fighting activities as these were not rapidly available for alternative tasks.

In order to provide a more comprehensive view of military preparedness, performance against Spending Review 2002 PSA Target 3 is assessed on the basis of the readiness state of all forces. Details of the basis for the assessment are set out in the Technical Note to the 2002 PSA targets, available on the Department's website http://www.mod.uk. At the end of the first quarter of financial year 2003–04, the first time when performance was measured against Spending Review 2002 targets, 77 per cent. of force elements were assessed as meeting their readiness requirement with no critical weakness. These figures reflect the impact of both Operation FRESCO and Operation TELIC.

I am withholding more detailed information about the readiness of our armed forces under Exemption 1 the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information (1997).

Future Rapid Effects System

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will incorporate TRACER technology in Future Rapid Effects System; and what assessment he has made of the possibility of incorporating TRACER technology in Future Rapid Effects System under an open international competition for Future Rapid Effects System development and manufacture. [130625]

Mr. Ingram: The Future Rapid Effect System project is currently in the Concept Phase. We are reviewing procurement options and no decision has yet been made on how to take the programme forward. It is too early to state what technologies might be incorporated in the eventual solution but where possible we shall look to exploit past development activity.

HMS Sheffield

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answers of 9 September 2003, ref 127274 and to the hon. Member for Hereford (Mr. Keetch) of 4 February 2003, Official Report, column 174W, on HMS Sheffield, what the reasons are for the difference between the cost of operating HMS Sheffield in 2001–02 and the cost of operating ships in the same class in the same year; and if he will make a statement. [130315]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave on 4 February 2003, Official Report, column 174W. There was a misprint in Hansard and the figure for HMS Sheffield's annual operating costs should have read £35 million. The average annual operating costs for Batch 3 Type 22 Frigates I gave in my answer of 9 September 2003, ref 127274 was £11.9 million.

The apparent discrepancy arose because the cost for HMS Sheffield included an element for depreciation and cost of capital, but excluded annual maintenance, while the costs provided for Batch 3 Type 22 Frigates included maintenance but excluded depreciation and cost of capital.

When compared on a "like-for-like" basis, the average annual operating costs, based on direct costs charged to FY01-02, including costs for manpower, fuel, stores and other costs (such as port visits) were £8.1 million for HMS Sheffield and £8.3 million for Batch 3 Type 22 Frigates.

Iraq

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the source was for the allegation at Paragraph 2, Page 19, of the dossier on Iraq's weapons of mass destruction of September 2002, that the Iraqi military were able to deploy chemical or biological weapons within 45 minutes of an order to do so; what attempts were made to verify the source of this information prior to deciding to include it in the dossier; on what date this information became available to British intelligence sources; whether details were passed on to the intelligence agencies of the United States and other allies for comment prior to publication; and whether protection has been offered or provided to the source since receipt of the information. [128519]

Mr. Rammell: I have been asked to reply.

As the ISC has reported, based on the evidence of the Chief of SIS, the source of the report was a senior military officer in a position to comment on the deployment of chemical and biological weapons. The source was regarded as reliable. The report was issued on 30 August 2002. The dossier which included the information about the 45-minute claim was passed for comment to the US Government. It has been the practice of successive Governments not to comment on issues relating to the validation or protection of intelligence sources. The security and intelligence agencies are not within the scope of the Code of Practice to Government Information.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the basis for the assertion made by the Director of the Joint US-UK Iraq Survey Team, that Saddam Hussein had given orders for his commanders to fire chemical shells at forces invading Iraq. [128806]

Mr. Ingram: It is not the Department's policy to comment on remarks allegedly made in a classified briefing to United States Congressional Committees. Coalition forces continue actively to pursue intelligence leads, documentation and individuals connected with Iraq's WMD programmes through the Iraq Survey Group.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what total additional amount has been spent by his Department on operations in Iraq in each month since 1 January; [130282]

(2) what the cost was of deployment of troops to Iraq's neighbouring countries in the build up to the invasion of Iraq; [130281]

(3) if he will estimate the total additional monthly cost of British operations in Iraq; [130280]

(4) if he will estimate the extra monthly cost of one member of personnel in the occupation force in Iraq. [130277]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence identifies the costs of Operations in terms of the net additional costs it has incurred. The costs which the MOD would have incurred had the operation not been undertaken—expenditure on wages and salaries or on conducting training exercises, for example—are deducted from the total costs of the operation.

Calculating all the costs of military action will take some time since they will include the cost of ammunition, bombs and guided weapons consumed in excess of peacetime levels and the cost of repairing and replacing equipment destroyed and damaged. We do however estimate the cost of preparatory activities in 2002–03 at around £700 million, less than the £1 billion set aside at Spring Supplementary Estimates 2002–03. This estimate includes the procurement or modification of equipment, increased maintenance and stock consumption, civil sea and air charter and provision of infrastructure in-theatre. A figure for total costs in 2002–03 including the cost of operations up to 31 March 2003 will be published in the Ministry of Defence's Resource Accounts.

It is too early to estimate the costs likely to arise in 2003–04. Once these are known, additional funding will be sought in the normal way through Supplementary Estimates.

Accounting records and costs are not maintained on a daily basis while force levels have fluctuated considerably during 2003–04. As a result, to provide daily or per person average costs would be misleading.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of how long it will take to clear unexploded ordnance in Iraq. [129863]

Mr. Ingram: The United Kingdom and other Coalition Armed Forces and Non-Governmental Organisation teams have been engaged in Explosive Ordnance Disposal tasks since before the end of the conflict in Iraq. To date, UK and other Coalition Explosive Ordnance Disposal Teams in the UK Area of Operation have completed over 1,500 tasks and destroyed over 500,000 individual munitions. Those munitions include not only those dropped or fired by Coalition Forces, but also many from the Iraq-Iran war as well as mines laid, ordnance fired or dropped, and stores of ammunition and other ordnance left by Iraqi military and paramilitary forces. It is not yet possible to say either what percentage of unexploded munitions have been cleared nor when all the work will be completed.

Logistical Support

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what effects he expects the changes proposed in the Government's review of logistic support to the armed forces to have on the jobs of those employed in providing this logistical support. [130785]

Mr. Ingram: The review team recently reported on the delivery of logistic support and made recommendations for improved effectiveness and efficiency. The proposed changes will have implications for Service and civilian personnel, but it is too early to say what the effects will be. These will be addressed in detail during the next phase of work, where some of the review's recommendations will be piloted and trialled. Any changes with significant investment or civilian employment implications will be subjected to thorough investment appraisals and trades union consultation before decisions are made. Personnel who are potentially affected will be kept closely in touch with developments. No changes will be made until we are confident that they can deliver better and more cost-effective logistic support to the front line.

Manning Control Review

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many soldiers since 1997 who were subject to Manning Control (a) submitted a redress to the Army Board and were still dismissed and (b) had their redress rejected by the Board, but were retained. [130007]

Mr. Caplin: None.

Medical Personnel

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) main battle tanks and (b) other armoured fighting vehicles, broken down by type, were deployed to Iraq for the purposes of military operations there; what proportions of each of these (i) were destroyed or seriously damaged in action, (ii) were rendered unserviceable through other causes and (iii) were operationally available at the conclusion of the fighting. [112088]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested is as follows.

116 Challenger 2 Main Battle Tanks (CR2) were deployed to theatre.

982 other armoured fighting vehicles were deployed on OP TELIC broken down as follows:

Vehicle type	Number
Challenger Armoured Recovery Vehicles (CRARRV)	26
WARRIOR—Medium Armoured Fighting Vehicles	239
CVR(T)—Light Armoured Fighting Vehicles	212
FV 430—Light Armoured Fighting Vehicles	430
AS90—155mm Artillery Piece	32
AVLB—Armoured Vehicle Launching Bridge	12
AVRE—Armoured Vehicle Royal Engineer	12
CET—Combat Engineer Tractor	19

Of the vehicles listed in the previous table, five were destroyed as follows:

Vehicle type	How destroyed
CR2	Tank Battle
CVR(T) SCIMITAR	Air Land Battle
CVR(T) SCIMITAR	Air Land Battle
CVR(T) SCIMITAR	Rolled Vehicle
CVR(T) SULTAN	Drowned Vehicle

Availability of armoured vehicle types fit for combat between the beginning of the deployment and the conclusion of decisive combat operations on 30 April varied as shown:

Vehicle type	% Availability
CR2	73–97
CRARRV	81–100
WARRIOR	74–96
CVR(T)	78–100
FV430	75–98
AS90	88–100
AVLB	75–100
AVRE	67–100
CET	11–83

Availability of armoured vehicles fit for combat at the conclusion of decisive combat operations is listed.

Vehicle type	% Availability
CR2	73
CRARRV	95
WARRIOR	78
CVR(T)	80
FV430	84
AS90	100
AVLB	100
AVRE	100
CET	53

These figures were compiled under operational conditions and may therefore be subject to further revision.

Project Isolus

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to select the final short-list for Project Isolus; what the extent of (a) public and (b) local authority consultation will be; and if he will make a statement. [130525]

Mr. Ingram: We expect to short-list those companies to be invited to undertake more detailed negotiations with the Ministry of Defence on Project Isolus by spring 2004. The public consultation, which will inform our evaluation of outline proposals to determine this short-list, will comprise a number of focus groups in areas near to proposed sites. A citizen's panel, made up of random members of the public and representatives from the areas affected, will also be convened. In addition, the dedicated project website will be refreshed with unclassified versions of the proposals and will provide a discussion forum for the public to express their views.

Consultation with local authorities affected by the outline proposals will be carried out and a stakeholder's group, to include representatives from local authorities and NGOs, will be convened. Lancaster University, who are running the consultation process on our behalf, are also contacting the local authorities to arrange a series of local access events such as drop-in centres or public meetings.

It is expected that detailed negotiations with short-listed companies will take up to three years to complete, and that a preferred bidder, solution and location will be selected in 2006. There will be further public consultation during this time.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consents would be required by a private company wishing to use a site in Scotland for (a) breaking up decommissioned nuclear submarines and (b) storing nuclear waste. [130993]

Mr. Ingram: Any private company involved in breaking up or storing the radioactive waste from decommissioned nuclear submarines on sites in Scotland would be subject to regulation by the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate, and would require consent from the Department of Transport if the radioactive waste were to be moved by land. The break-up site would also be subject to regulation by the Chairman of the Naval Nuclear Regulatory Panel who follows the principles laid down in the Nuclear Reactors (Environmental Impact Assessment for Decommissioning) Regulations 1999. With regard to radioactive waste management, both regulation and policy are devolved and, as such, are matters for the Scottish Environment Protection Agency and the Scottish Executive respectively. Planning consents are similarly devolved.

Low-Flying

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what his policy is in respect to low-flying RAF aircraft over tourism-dependent towns in coastal areas; [130458]

(2) whether the RAF training sorties are instructed to avoid coastlines. [130462]

Mr. Caplin: RAF Flying training sorties are not instructed to avoid coastlines as flying in such areas can be considered a normal part of training. However, in order to reduce the danger of bird strikes from concentrations of seabirds or waterfowl, pilots are advised as a general rule to cross coastlines obliquely, and at a minimum altitude of 500 feet. In addition they are advised to avoid crossing the coast over resorts and holiday beaches. It is not possible to completely avoid all tourist-dependent towns as to do so would increase the impact of low-flying on other nearby areas.

Rosyth Dockyard

Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on the role of Rosyth dockyard in the (a) construction and (b) equipping of the (i) Type 45 and (ii) new aircraft carrier; [130664]

(2) whether Rosyth dockyard will be (a) the whole ship integration yard for the new aircraft carrier and (b) involved in the block construction of the new aircraft carrier. [130665]

Mr. Ingram: As the Secretary of State for Defence announced on 30 January, our view at this stage of the assessment process is that the future aircraft carriers should be built by a combination of four UK shipyards. In addition to the Babcock BES facility at Rosyth, we would envisage construction work being carried out by: BAe Systems Naval Ships yard at Govan; Vosper Thornycroft at Portsmouth; and Swan Hunter on Tyneside. The involvement of other United Kingdom shipyards has not, however, been ruled out. No final decisions on the allocation of work—including the construction of blocks and final assembly site—will be made until the Demonstration and Manufacture contract is let in Spring 2004.

We envisage no involvement for Rosyth dockyard in either the construction or the equipping of the Type 45 Destroyer.

Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the role of Rosyth dockyard as a strategic asset for the Naval Fleet. [130666]

Mr. Ingram: Capacity within United Kingdom industry is kept under review to ensure that the requirements of the Navy for surface warship refit and repair work can be met. Rosyth dockyard has provided a significant element of that capacity for many years, both before and since privatisation, and should continue to do so as we move towards increased competition. In addition, Rosyth dockyard is one of four yards named earlier this year as having the potential for involvement in the construction and assembly of the new future aircraft carriers.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Departmental Costs

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the cost was to her Department for (a) ministerial cars and drivers, (b) taxis, (c) train travel, (d) the use of helicopters, (e) airline tickets and (f) chartered aeroplanes in each year since 1997. [123085]

Mr. Caborn: With regard to the cost of ministerial cars and drivers and the cost of planes chartered for ministerial travel, the Chief Executive of the Government Car and Despatch Agency (Mr. Nick Matheson) wrote to the hon. Member with the information yesterday, 17 September 2003. Copies of the letter have been placed in the Libraries of the House. The following table shows Departmental expenditure on travel by (a) taxis and (b) train and air combined. An analysis of expenditure on travel by train and various modes of air travel is not recorded on the Department's accounting system and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

All official travel is undertaken in accordance with the rules contained in the Department's staff handbook and all ministerial travel is undertaken fully in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

£

Financial year	Taxis	Rail and Air travel
2002–03[1]	16,109.08	518,549.28
2001–02	20,811.56	433,910.61
2000–01	26,414.81	456,909.51
1999–2000	21,685.66	421,189.86
1998–99	15,890.53	317,802.36
1997–98	12,967.23	289,035.97

[1] Costs shown in 2002–03 are provisional pending finalisation of the Department's annual accounts.

Digital Satellite Television

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will take steps to seek to ensure that ITV, Channel 4 and Channel 5 can continue to be received free of charge by digital satellite television. [130011]

Estelle Morris [holding answer 16 September 2003]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has written to the chief executives of ITV, Channel Four and Five to ask them how they intend to solve this very serious issue. Their responses indicate they are considering various options. We are very closely monitoring their discussions, which I understand are making progress, and while it will not be appropriate to comment on current commercial negotiations, I will place details of their outcome on our website www.digitaltelevision.gov.uk.

Films (North East England)

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what financial support her Department has given to film making in the North East of England in each of the last five years. [130391]

Estelle Morris: The following table shows the level of Government and National Lottery support through the UK Film Council and its predecessors for film in the North East of England in the last five years.

	Government funding (£)	Lottery (£)	Total
1998–99	[1]764,579	169,467	934,046
1999–2000	[2]778,245	8,400	786,645
2000–01	[3]452,800	0	452,800
2001–02	280,000	323,530	603,530
2002–03	400,000	405,026	805,026
Total			3,582,047

[1] This figure includes £445,800 from the British Film Institute.
[2] This figure includes £417,405 from the British Film Institute.
[3] This figure includes £272,274 from the British Film Institute.

Notes:

1. In 1998–99 and 1999–2000, the Regional Arts Board (funded by the Arts Council of England) was responsible for supporting filmmaking in the English regions.
2. Since April 2000, the UK Film Council has been responsible for providing Government and lottery funding to the English regions through its Regional Investment Fund for England Fund. Northern Film and Media, established in October 2002, is the regional screen agency for the North East of England.

Free-to-view Broadcasting

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with broadcasters on the retention of free-to-view broadcasting on digital satellite. [130582]

Estelle Morris: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has written to the chief executives of ITV, Channel Four and Five to ask them how they intend to solve this very serious issue. Their responses indicate they are considering various options. We are very closely monitoring their discussions, which I understand are making progress, and while it will not be appropriate to comment on current commercial negotiations, I will place details of their outcome on our website www.digitaltelevision.gov.uk.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with OFCOM on free-to-view broadcasting on digital satellite. [130584]

Estelle Morris: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not had any formal discussions with OFCOM on this matter, as OFCOM has not yet been transferred any relevant functions. But this is a very serious issue which my Department as well as the ITC are monitoring.

Gaming Board

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) whether the Gaming Board has concluded its investigations into the Lottery operations of charities linked to Solutions RMC; and if she will make a statement; [130538]

(2) what (a) audits and (b) other checks the Gaming Board carried out between 1996 and 2002 concerning the gaming operations of (i) Breast Cancer Relief, Manchester and (ii) Breast Cancer Research, Scotland. [130539]

Mr. Caborn: I understand from the Gaming Board for Great Britain that it has completed its investigations into these matters. It intends to cancel their registrations to promote society lotteries under the terms of the Lotteries and Amusements Act 1976 and to write to the receivers who have been appointed to administer the two charities accordingly.

The Gaming Board registered Breast Cancer Relief Manchester (BCRM) on 23 March 2000. It received BCRM's audited accounts in 2000 and 2001 and 13 returns relating to individual lotteries. The Gaming Board's inspectors visited BCRM on four occasions between 31 November 2001 and 16 December 2002.

The Gaming Board registered Breast Cancer Research Scotland (BCRS) on 12 August 1999. It received BCRS's audited accounts in 1999, 2000 and 2001 as well as 17 returns relating to individual lotteries. The Gaming Board's inspectors visited BCRS in February 2003

Libraries

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what progress she has made towards the goal of putting all libraries online. [129080]

Mr. Caborn: The £100 million Lottery funded People's Network programme has enabled all but 20 of the libraries in England to be connected to the internet, including all the libraries in my hon. Friend's constituency. This represents well over 3,000 libraries, a very fine achievement. The remaining libraries will go online after refurbishment or technical programmes have been completed. All libraries in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland are online.

Microsoft

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much was paid to Microsoft in licensing fees by her Department and its agencies in each of the last three years; and how much has been budgeted for (a) 2003–04 and (b) 2004–05. [130677]

Mr. Caborn: This Department paid licensing fees to Microsoft of £17,500 in 2000–01, £9,500 in 2001–02 and £234,000 in 2002–03.

Future year payments are still under review and no decision has yet been taken on whether to continue with Microsoft or to look at other potential vendors including open source.

Television Advertisements

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the monitoring of the extent to which television channels increase the volume of transmissions during advertisements; and if she will make a statement. [130396]

Estelle Morris [holding answer 16 September 2003]: None. Responsibility for advertisements broadcast on television rests with the broadcasters and the organisation which regulates broadcast advertisements—the Independent Television Commission (ITC). The ITC is independent of the Government and responsible for safeguarding the public interest in broadcast television advertising.

The ITC's licensees are obliged, as a condition of their licences, to comply with the terms of the ITC's Advertising Standards Code which states that advertisements must not be excessively noisy or strident and that studio transmission power must not be increased from normal levels during advertising breaks. Responsibility for monitoring compliance with these terms rests with the licensees.

In addition, the ITC monitors individual services as necessary. The ITC investigates all complaints of excessive advertising loudness and are able to take action against broadcasters who breach the conditions of the code.

Under the Communications Act 2003 the Office of Communications (OFCOM) will have similar responsibilities for broadcast advertisements from the end of this year.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Capita

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) how many local authorities use Capita and their software package Academy; [129173]

(2) how many local authorities who use Capita and their software package Academy for Housing Benefit have made complaints to the Department. [129171]

Mr. Pond: I have been asked to reply.

The seven local authorities who contract out their benefit administration with Capita are Bexley, Blackburn with Darwen, East Cambridgeshire, Havant, Mendip, West Devon and Westminster. A further 65 local authorities have stated that they use Capita's Academy software package.

We have received no complaints from local authorities using Capita or their Academy software. Local authorities have complete autonomy to select and contract with the provider of their choice.

Civil Service

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many jobs under the remit of his Department in (a) the core Department, (b) non-departmental public bodies, (c) executive agencies and (d) independent statutory bodies, organisations and bodies financially sponsored by his Department and other such organisations, are located in (i) Scotland, (ii) each region in England, (iii) Wales, (iv) Northern Ireland and (v) overseas, broken down by (A) whole-time equivalent jobs and (B) the percentage per individual department, body or organisation. [127310]

Yvette Cooper: In response to parts (a) and (c), I refer the hon. Member to Table D of the annual publication "Civil Service Statistics", which covers permanent staff numbers (FTE basis) for each Government Department and their respective executive agencies. Table D shows civil servants by regional distribution.

Copies of the publication are available in the Libraries of the Houses. The last edition, based on April 2001 data, was published in June 2002. The next edition, based on April 2002 data, was published on 24 July 2003.

Alternatively, this information is available at the following address on the Cabinet Office Statistics website: http://www.civil-service.gov.uk/statistics/css.htm.

In response to part (b) Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Executive NDPBs.

Audit Commission for local authorities and the NHS in England and Wales

Government Office region	Whole-time equivalents	Percentage
London	593	23.3
South East	270	10.6
South West	378	14.9
West Midlands	189	7.4
East Midlands	145	5.7
Eastern	144	5.7
North East	105	4.1
North West	279	11
Yorkshire and Humber	249	9.8
Wales	192	7.5
Total	2,544	—

Castle Vale Housing Action Trust

79 posts all in West Midlands Region

English Partnerships

	Number	Percentage
London	86	19.6
South East	146	33.3
North East	78	17.8
North West	112	25.5
West Midlands	17	3.9
Total	439	—

Housing Corporation

	Number	Percentage
East Midlands	58.26	10.2
London	324.95	57.1
Yorkshire and Humberside	41.16	7.2
North West	61.10	10.7
South West	42.74	7.5
West Midlands	40.74	7.2
Total	568.9	—

Liverpool Housing Action Trust

79 posts all based in North-West Region

Standards Board for England

96 posts based in London (96 per cent.), 4 people based in Yorkshire and Humberside—4 per cent.

Stonebridge Housing Action Trust

74 posts all based in London Region

Tower Hamlets Housing Action Trust

12 posts all based in London Region

In response to part (d) independent statutory bodies, organisations and bodies financially sponsored by Office of the Deputy Prime Minister

Residential Property Tribunal Service

83 whole time equivalents (a regional breakdown is problematic as the Rent Assessment Panel areas do not correspond with the Government Office regions)

Valuation Tribunals

	Number	Percentage
East	18	12
East Midlands	11	7
London	25	17
North East	10	7
North West	21	14
South East	17	12
South West	16.5	11
West Midlands	17	11
Yorkshire and Humberside	13	9
Total	148.5	—

Parliamentary Boundary Commission for England

15 posts, all full-time and all based in London

Parliamentary Boundary Commission for Wales

3.6 whole-time equivalent posts and all based in Wales

Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's other financially sponsored bodies

	Number	Percentage
Groundwork
East of England	23	1.2
East Midlands	257	13.5
London	128	6.7
North East	101	5.3
North West	535	28.1
South East	99	5.2
South West	55	2.9
West Midlands	318	16.7
Yorkshire and the Humber	253	13.3
(i) Wales	98	5.7
(ii) Northern Ireland	22	1.1
Total	1,899	99.7

Note:
The figures are for headcount not whole-time equivalent jobs

LEASE (The Leasehold Advisory Service)

12 whole time equivalent posts all based in London

Climate Change

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on climate change talks he has had since January 2003. [129450]

Phil Hope: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister discusses a wide range of issues, including climate change, in meeting foreign visitors, colleagues and others.

Election Costs

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much it cost to run the European elections in Scotland in 1999. [130461]

Mrs. McGuire: I have been asked to reply as the conduct and funding of parliamentary elections in Scotland is the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Scotland. The estimated cost of the European parliamentary election in Scotland in 1999 was £6.7 million.

Fire Service

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Halifax (Mrs. Mahon), 30 June 2003, Official Report, column 33W, whether his statement that there will be no reduction in response to 999 calls as a result of modernisation of the Fire Service applies to all fire brigades. [130693]

Mr. Raynsford: The statement made by my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister applies to all fire brigades.

Housing

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his Department's latest estimate is of the number of people in housing need and accepted as such by their local housing authority in each London borough. [130021]

Keith Hill: Local authorities in England report the numbers of households on their waiting lists (excluding tenants awaiting a transfer) as at 1 April on their Annual Housing Investment Programme returns. Their activities under the homelessness provisions of the Housing Act 1996 (as amended by the Homelessness Act 2002) are reported on their quarterly PIE housing returns to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. The latest available information reported by London boroughs is in the table.

London boroughs	Households on the Housing Register 1 April 2002	Statutorily homeless households—number accepted as eligible, unintentionally homeless and in priority need April to June 2003
Barking and Dagenham	2,668	155
Barnet	7,030	301
Bexley	3,487	104
Brent	14,746	304
Bromley	3,592	236
Camden	8,147	331
City of London	623	10
Croydon	6,890	261
Ealing	8,289	348
Enfield	7,264	318
Greenwich	6,876	[1]
Hackney	8,930	[1]
Hammersmith and Fulham	6,044	[1]
Haringey	12,585	[1]
Harrow	3,992	85
Havering	1,888	[1]
Hillingdon	6,041	216
Hounslow	6,369	179
Islington	8,161	[1]
Kensington and Chelsea	8,294	127
Kingston upon Thames	3,971	95
Lambeth	14,228	364
Lewisham	15,368	368
Merton	4,361	54
Newham	13,942	417
Redbridge	5,671	203
Richmond upon Thames	3,763	92
Southwark	6,164	425
Sutton	1,653	81
Tower Hamlets	7,837	438
Waltham Forest	10,283	300
Wandsworth	3,923	241
Westminster	3,709	316

[1] Data not reported.

Notes:
As local authorities have different practices for compiling and managing housing registers/waiting lists, direct comparisons between authorities can be misleading.
Sources:
ODPM: Housing Investment Programme (HIP) annual returns
ODPM: P1E housing activity quarterly returns

Bob Russell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 15 September 2003, ref 129308, when he expects to allocate funds to Colchester's Arms Length Management Organisation; and how much will be allocated. [131011]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will confirm the funding for Colchester's Arms Length Management Organisation (ALMO) once the Housing Inspectorate notifies us that it has awarded the ALMO at least a 2* (good) rating. The inspection is currently planned to begin in February 2004. The conditional allocation for 2003–05 is £13.44 million.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the local authorities which are six months or more behind paying Housing Benefit; and how many local authorities who are six months or more behind payment use Capita and their software package Academy. [129172]

Mr. Pond: I have been asked to reply.

We collect average processing times, by local authority, for Housing Benefit claims. The data provided by local authorities for the year ended 31 March 2003, and published on the our Housing Benefit website, www.dwp.gov.uk/housing benefit, show that on average no local authority took longer than six months to process new claims.

Average processing times for local authorities whose Housing Benefit administration is contracted out to Capita and who use Academy software, range from 26 days to 131 days. Actual clearance times for individual cases within the average are not collected centrally.

Local Rates

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what legal responsibilities local authorities have for new build houses with respect to maintaining (a) drains, (b) play areas that are incomplete and (c) roads which are unfinished. [129176]

Keith Hill: When granting planning permission local authorities may impose conditions to secure the completion of elements of the development. Both the imposition of conditions and their subsequent enforcement if not implemented is at the discretion of the local authority. Any decision to assume responsibility for streets which are not maintainable at public expense is entirely a matter for the relevant local highway authority. The sewers that serve developments are normally adopted by means of an agreement under section 104 of the Water Industry Act 1991. After an acceptance period the sewers will be maintained by the sewerage undertaker. Drains to groups of houses may not be adopted, but the extent of such systems has been limited to 10 connections under a protocol produced jointly by Government, the water industry and house builders in March 2002. The protocol should limit the extent of drainage systems that are maintained by householders.

Postal Ballots

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the average voter participation rate was in the areas where a postal ballot was (a) held and (b) not held in local elections. [130459]

Phil Hope: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The Electoral Commission published their evaluation of the 2003 local electoral pilots on 31 July. According to their report, the average voter turnout across all local elections in 2003, including results from elections held on a pilot basis, was 34.9 per cent. The average turnout at elections where all-postal voting pilots were held was 49.4 per cent.

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many trial postal ballots have been conducted in local elections; where they were held; and how much each one cost. [130460]

Phil Hope: Sixty-eight all-postal elections have been held since May 2000.

In the May 2000 local elections, seven all-postal ballots were held in Bolton, Doncaster, Gateshead, Norwich, Stevenage and Swindon.

In the May 2002 local and mayoral elections, 13 all-postal ballots were held in Chorley, Crawley, Gateshead, Greenwich, Hackney, Havering, Middlesbrough, North Tyneside, North West Leicestershire, Preston, South Tyneside, Stevenage and Trafford.

In the May 2003 local elections, 33 all-postal ballots were held in Blackpool, Blyth Valley, Bolton, Brighton and Hove, Chesterfield, Copeland, Corby, Darlington, Doncaster, East Staffordshire, Gateshead, Guildford, Herefordshire, Hyndburn, King's Lynn and West Norfolk, Lincoln, Newcastle, North Lincolnshire, North Shropshire, Redcar and Cleveland, Rotherham, Rushcliffe, Salford, Sedgefield, St. Edmundsbury, St Helens, Stevenage, Stockton-on-Tees, Sunderland, Trafford, Telford and Wrekin, Wansbeck and Derwentside, Chester-le-Street and Wear Valley who held a joint pilot.

In addition, Hackney and Stoke-on-Trent held all-postal ballots in their mayoral elections in October 2002, whilst all-postal ballots took place in 13 local authority by-elections during this period. These were: Aberdeenshire, Caldicot, Doncaster, Durham, Eden, Hackney, Kerrier, King's Lynn and West Norfolk, Newcastle, Stirling, Telford and Wrekin, Trafford and West Wiltshire.

No central funding has been given to authorities conducting all-postal ballots.

Travellers/Gypsies

Andrew Selous: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the definition is of (a) a traveller and (b) a gypsy as far as planning law is concerned. [130435]

Yvette Cooper: For the purpose of planning, a gypsy is a person of nomadic habit of life, whatever their race or origin, who wanders or travels for the purpose of making or seeking their livelihood. Members of other groups who do not meet these criteria are not treated as gypsies for planning purposes. For the purposes of planning law, there is no definition of traveller.

Water Supplies

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the impact on the future level of water supply in the South East of the projected increased numbers of houses to be built; and if he will make a statement. [130470]

Keith Hill: The South East Regional Assembly is responsible for regional planning for the South East and as such is working with the Environment Agency and also water companies on the impact of future development on both water supply and water quality.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister understands that the Environment Agency is currently assessing the business plans of water companies in the region and will be providing advice to the Assembly on investment requirements and impact on future development in due course.

SCOTLAND

Boundary Commission

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to change the remit of the Boundary Commission for Scotland. [129700]

Mrs. McGuire: The proposed legislation to retain the present number of MSPs will require to include provisions on the review by the Boundary Commission of the Scottish Parliament constituencies and regional boundaries.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many departmental staff are not based in Dover House; and where they are located. [128025]

Mrs. McGuire: At 18 September, 47 staff were in post in Edinburgh (including 28 staff of the Office of the Advocate General) and 29 staff were in post in Glasgow.

Ministerial Visits

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the (a) foreign and (b) UK visits he has made since 1 April; what the cost was to public funds of each trip; who he met; and what gifts were received [126986]

Mrs. McGuire: The Government publish the overall costs of all ministerial overseas travel and a list of all visits overseas by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500 on an annual basis. The list for the period 1 April 2002 to March 2003 was published by my right. hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 16 July 2003, Official Report, column 327W. The next list for the period 1 April 2003 to March 2004 will be published at the end of the financial year.

In respect of gifts received, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 14 March 2003, Official Report, column 482W.

The information on UK travel is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

National Lottery

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport to discuss the allocation of lottery funds to Scotland. [128009]

Mr. Darling: I have regular discussions with ministerial colleagues on a wide range of issues affecting Scotland.

Special Advisers

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on how many occasions between 31 March 2002 and 31 March 2003 (a) departmental and (b) non-departmental special advisers have travelled abroad in an official capacity; what places were visited; and how much each visit cost. [126667]

Mrs. McGuire: Between 31 March 2002 and 31 March 2003, one of the special advisers in the Department travelled abroad on one occasion, at a cost of £1,000.40. This was to Madrid and Segovia to accompany the Secretary of State at an intergovernmental conference on 'European enlargement, decentralisation and institutional reform' and at bilateral meetings with Spanish Government and regional Government Ministers.

All travel by special advisers is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code, and the Civil Service Management Code.

TREASURY

Capital Gains Tax

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the yield of Capital Gains Tax in each year from 1990–91 to 2005–06; and if he will make a statement. [130548]

Dawn Primarolo: The yield from Capital Gains Tax on a receipts basis, from 1990–91 to 2001–02 is published in IRS 2002 on the Inland Revenue website in Table 1.2. The link to this table is: http://www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/tax_receipts/g_t02_1.pdf

Estimates of Capital Gains Tax on a receipts basis, for 2002–03 and 2003–04 are published in Table C8 in the Budget Report 2003. Figures for later years are not available.

Customs and Excise

Ms Atherton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many (a) unauthorised persons, (b) illegal imports of cigarettes, (c) illegal imports of alcohol, (d) illegal imports of prohibited drugs and (e) illegal imports of meat were seized in each of the last five years by customs teams based in (i) Cornwall, (ii) Devon and (iii) Dorset; [127299]

(2) what drugs were seized from yachts in the South West in the last five years; and whether each seizure was made by (a) static officers by routine inspection in each of the last five years and (b) officers acting on received intelligence. [127300]

John Healey: HM Customs and Excise has made four drugs seizures in the last five years from all types of non-commercial vessels in the area covering the Bristol Channel to the Isle of Wight including the Scilly Isles and the South West approaches, totalling 400 kilos of cocaine and 10 tonnes of cannabis.

The intended landing points may have been elsewhere in the UK.

Customs use intelligence information and targeted risk-profiling techniques to help determine how and when to deploy resources. Experience demonstrates that this flexible approach allows Customs to deploy in larger numbers, less predictably and with greater impact anywhere in the UK.

In accordance with exemption 4 (law enforcement and legal proceedings) of the Open Government Code Customs do not normally reveal whether or not they were acting on received intelligence in individual cases. Customs do not keep information on seizures delineated by county boundaries.

Personal Income Tax Allowance

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the cost of raising the personal income tax allowance to (a) £5,000, (b) £6,000, (c) £7,000 and (d) £7,500 per year; how many people would cease to pay income tax as a consequence; and if he will make a statement. [130560]

Dawn Primarolo: The full-year cost of making these tax changes in 2003–04 are set out in the following table.

Raising the under 65 personal income tax allowance in 2003–04 to	Cost (£ billion)	Number of people cease to pay income tax (thousand)
(a) £5,000 per year	2.4	500
(b) £6,000 per year	8.3	1,800
(c) £7,000 per year	13.9	3,000
(d) £7,500 per year	16.6	3,500

These estimates exclude any behavioural response to the tax change and are based upon the 2000–01 Survey of Personal Incomes and consistent with Budget 2003.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the cost of raising the personal income tax allowance to £10,000 per year for people aged 65 years and over; and if he will make a statement. [130566]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimated full-year cost of raising the personal income tax allowance to £10,000 per year for those age 65–74 and 75 plus in 2003–04 is £2 billion.

This estimate excludes any behavioural response to the tax change and is based upon the 2000–01 Survey of Personal Incomes and consistent with Budget 2003.

Road Fuels

Mrs. Shephard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will quantify in pence per litre the value given to each of the main (a) environmental and (b) other benefits of road fuel gases which make up the rebate applied to such fuels. [130868]

John Healey: I refer the right hon. Lady to the answer I gave on 8 September 2003, Official Report, column 102W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Waveney (Mr. Blizzard).

Savings Income

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what his estimate is of the cost of abolishing income tax on (a) all savings income and (b) all savings income up to the start of the higher rate threshold; and if he will make a statement; [130562]

(2) what his estimate is of the cost of abolishing the existing capital gains tax and savings tax regimes, and taxing capital gains and savings as income under the existing income tax regime; and if he will make a statement. [130563]

Dawn Primarolo: The current tax yield from taxation of interest on savings in 2003–04 is set out in the following table.

The current tax yield in 2003–04 from taxation	£ billion
(a) All savings income	2.5
(b) All savings income up to the start of the higher rate threshold	1.4

Note:
This estimate is based the 2000–01 Survey of Personal Incomes and consistent with Budget 2003.

This yield would be lost if no tax was charged, but we are not able to provide the full cost of such a change as other behavioural effects will substantially distort the impact on costs of such a move.

Departmental Annual Report

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what procedures are used by his Department to brief officials appearing before select committees; [131381]

(2) if he will make a statement about the production of his Department's Annual Report; [131382]

(3) what accounting standards his Department used in producing the 2003 HM Treasury Annual Report; [131383]

(4) whether he plans to use an external auditor to audit the Treasury's Annual Report. [131386]

John Healey: The Treasury's annual report sets out the performance of the department against its Public Service Agreement targets. It includes the same standard information as all departmental reports.

As with all departments, the financial data for previous years contained in the report are based on the Treasury's accounts, which are prepared in accordance with United Kingdom generally accepted accounting principles (UK GAAP), modified as necessary for the public sector following advice from the independent Financial Reporting Advisory Board (FRAB). These requirements are reflected in the resource accounting manual (RAM) (available at www.resource-accounting.gov.uk).

The Treasury's accounts are audited by the Comptroller and Auditor General. Accounts for the financial year 2002–03 (HC 999) were laid before Parliament on 16 July, and are available on the Department's website.

The financial data for future years are based on the agreed departmental expenditure limit for the department, and compiled using the same accounting treatment.

Briefing for officials appearing before select committees is provided by a range of people across the Department.

Tax/NIC (South Gloucestershire)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the amount of (a) income tax and (b) national insurance contributions paid by South Gloucestershire residents in the latest year for which figures are available. [130380]

Dawn Primarolo: South Gloucestershire residents paid an average of about £3,300 in income tax in 2000–01.

Data on National Insurance contribution paid in this area are not available.

Transport Infrastructure

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps are being taken actively to manage demand for transport infrastructure through tax increases. [130452]

John Healey: The Chancellor decides taxation policy after considering all relevant economic, social and environmental factors, including the implications for demand for transport infrastructure.

VAT (Church Repairs)

Helen Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress has been made on his proposal to reduce VAT on church repairs to 5 per cent.; and if he will make a statement. [130927]

John Healey: The Government are particularly concerned about the position of listed places of worship. That is why we asked the European Commission to bring forward proposals to extend the categories of permitted reduced VAT rates to include their repair, maintenance and improvement.

We are continuing to press this case during the current EU review of VAT reduced rates and have, in the meantime, introduced the Listed Places of Worship Grant Scheme to provide an equivalent reduction in the cost of these repair projects.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect of differential rates of vehicle excise duty on promoting the manufacture and sale of vehicles with improved pollution characteristics; and if he will make a statement. [130545]

John Healey: The Government have introduced a range of measures to encourage the use of cleaner vehicles and technologies, including graduated vehicle excise duty, vehicle labelling and graduated company car tax.

The effectiveness of all these policies are being evaluated including an assessment of graduated VED by the Department of Transport and the results will inform future policy advice.

HEALTH

Deep Vein Thrombosis

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will bring forward amendments to legislation to allow registered midwives to (a) sell or supply and (b) administer a range of medicines in the course of their professional practice, with particular reference to the provision of compression hosiery for pregnant women considered at particular risk of deep vein thrombosis. [127592]

Mr. Hutton: There are already provisions under medicines legislation which allow registered midwives to sell or supply and administer a range of medicines in the course of their professional practice. Midwives can also supply certain non-medicinal products including compression hosiery for varicosis during pregnancy at national health service expense.

Departmental Agencies

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the need for each departmental agency. [124698]

Mr. Hutton: The Department conducts reviews of its executive agencies in accordance with Cabinet Office guidance, amended following the 2002 Agency Policy review. It has merged the Medical Devices Agency and Medicines Control Agency to form the Medical and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency. There are no current plans to change the role of the three remaining agencies but they will be reviewed as the Department's strategic needs are reassessed.

ADHD

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what benefits are available to individuals and their families, following a diagnosis of attention deficit hyperactivity disorder. [130263]

Maria Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

Attention deficit hyperactivity disorder is a developmental disorder in children. In Great Britain, a child with this disorder may be entitled to disability living allowance if the symptoms impair the child's normal functioning to the extent that they amount to a severe disability and the normal entitlement conditions are met. The additional benefits which, subject to the normal entitlement conditions, are available to families in Great Britain with disabled children who qualify for disability living allowance are shown in the table. The Family Fund Trust, which is funded by government, also provides grants to families of severely disabled children in order to ease the stress of their day-to-day life.

Benefits available to families in Great Britain with children who qualify for disability living allowance

Disability living allowance component and rate	Additional benefits available
Care component (all rates) and mobility component (all rates)	Disabled child premium in income related benefits[2], or the disability element of child tax credit
Highest rate care component	Enhanced disability premium and the disabled child premium in income related benefits, or the disability element and severe disability element of child tax credit.
Highest or middle rate care component	Carer's allowance[3]
Higher rate mobility component	Access to the Motability, "Blue Badge" and Vehicle Excise Duty Exemption schemes

[1] Entitlement to disability living allowance depends on the effects that a severe physical or mental disability have on a person's need for personal care and/or their ability to walk. It is the overall picture of need in the individual case, rather than the specific diagnosis that is important. Children under 16 years of age with a severe disability can qualify for any rate of the the care component arid the lower rate mobility component of disability living allowance if they are so severely disabled that their need for attention, supervision or watching over by another person is substantially in excess of that normally required by children of their age. Those who qualify for the highest rate of the care component may also qualify for the higher rate of the mobility component if they exhibit extreme and unpredictable disruptive behaviour as the result of arrested or incomplete development of the brain.
[2] Income support, jobseeker's allowance (income related), housing benefit and council tax benefit.
[3] Entitlement to carer's allowance can also give entitlement to the carer premium in income related benefits.

The benefits available to individuals and their families in Northern Ireland, following a diagnosis of attention deficit hyperactivity disorder, are a matter for my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Budgets

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (a) how many staff are employed and (b) what the total budget in 2003–04 is for the (i) Commission for Health Improvement, (ii) National Institute for Clinical Excellence, (iii) Food Standards Agency, (iv) National Care Standards Commission, (v) General Social Care Council and (vi) Health and Safety Executive. [128332]

Mr. Hutton: The Health and Safety Executive is an executive non-departmental public body sponsored by the Department for Work and Pensions. The other information requested is shown in the following table:

Body	Number of staff	Total budget for 2003–04 (£ million)
Commission for Health Improvement	347	35
National Institute for Clinical Excellence	43	17.8
Foods Standards Agency	738	119
Meat Hygiene Service	1,597	28
National Care Standards Commission	2,400	133.3
General Social Care Council	115	52.6

Notes:

(i) The staff numbers are the latest available figures expressed as whole-time equivalents.

(ii) The Total Budgets shown are estimated plan forecasts.

(iii) The Food Standards Agency (FSA) is a non-Ministerial Department, governed by a Board, and accountable to Parliament and the devolved administrations through Health Ministers. The Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) is an executive agency of FSA.)

(iv) The total budget of the FSA includes £8.277 million from the devolved administrations and payments to the MHS in respect of specified risk material (SRM)

(v) FSA staff figures are on a UK basis and include all workers (eg temporary contract workers).

Cancelled Operations

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations were cancelled in NHS hospitals in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [127495]

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations were cancelled for non-clinical reasons in each of the last six years. [127321]

Mr. Hutton: Quarterly data are collected on the number of operations cancelled by the hospital for non-clinical reasons (i) at the last minute (i.e. on the day patients are due to arrive, or after arrival in hospital, or on the day of their operation), and (ii) the number of patients not admitted within 28 days of a 'last minute' cancellation as part of the NHS Plan cancelled operations guarantee.

Cancelled operations data at England level and at national health service trust and strategic health authority level are available in the Library and on the Department's website at www.doh.gov.uk/hospitalactivity/data requests.htm

Departmental Computer Security

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been (a) budgeted and (b) spent by his Department since April 2002 on combating (i) computer fraud, (ii) preventing theft of computers and (iii) safeguarding the security information held on computer; and if he will make a statement. [128771]

Mr. Hutton: The Department of Health does not have specific financial budgets for combating computer fraud, computer theft or protecting its information. These areas are subsumed within a wide variety of other budgets. Responsibility, from 1 April 2002 to 1 April 2003, for countering fraud and corruption in all its forms within the Department of Health fell to the National Health Service Counter Fraud Service. From 1 April 2003 this responsibility was transferred to a newly formed special health authority, the Counter Fraud and Security Management Service.

The Department of Health takes the protection of its computers and information systems very seriously and complies with Her Majesty's Government's Manual of Protective Security. Security measures are kept constantly under review and the Department employs a dedicated and professional security unit as part of this commitment. The Department's information technology network achieved compliance with the British Standard 7799 which covers best practice for information security management at the end of 2002. In 2002 the Department of Health awarded a new service support contract to Computer Sciences Corporation and their security expertise was significant in them winning this bid.

Diagnostic and Treatment Centres

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the organisations which (a) have been awarded and (b) are being considered for franchises for operating private diagnosis and treatment centres, indicating the location of each centre. [129747]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 15 September 2003]: The Department of Health announced the shortlist of preferred bidders on 12 September 2003 that will provide new treatment centres to contribute to the Government's drive to cut waiting times for patients. The 26 areas covered by the new scheme along with the shortlist of companies is set as listed. These include two mobile units, which will deliver services to patients in towns across England. All likely preferred bidders are subject to final contract negotiation and agreement and schemes will only proceed if they provide the required level of value for money for national health service commissioners. This represents about two thirds of the total programme. Further announcements will be made in due course.

The treatment centres will be based at the following locations:

South West Peninsula (Mercury Health Ltd.)

Lincolnshire (Mercury Health Ltd.)

Horton Hospital, North Oxford (Mercury Health Ltd.)

North East Yorks (Mercury Health Ltd.)

Southampton (Mercury Health Ltd.)

Northumberland (Mercury Health Ltd.)

East Berkshire (1. Slough 2. Bracknell 3. Maidenhead and 4. Windsor/Ascot) (Mercury Health Ltd.)

Didcot, Oxfordshire (Mercury Health Ltd.)

Ashford, Surrey (Mercury Health Ltd.)

Maidstone (Care UK Afrox)

Barlborough Links, Nottinghamshire (Care UK Afrox)

Derriford, Plymouth (Care UK Afrox)

Chase Farm, Barnet, London (Anglo Canadian)

King George Hospital, Redbridge (Anglo Canadian)

Royal National Throat Nose and Ear Hospital, Kings Cross (Anglo Canadian)

Bradford (Nations Healthcare)

Burton (Nations Healthcare)

Daventry (Birkdale Clinic)

Trafford, Greater Manchester (Netcare UK)

Royal National Orthopaedic Hospital, Stanmore (New York Presbyterian)

Shepton Mallet, Somerset (New York Presbyterian).

There will be two mobile units offering ophthalmology services in the following areas:

Cheshire and Merseyside (Netcare UK)

Cumbria and Lancashire (Netcare UK)

Horton, Oxfordshire (Netcare UK)

Wycombe, Bucks (Netcare UK)

North Tyneside (Netcare UK)

South West Oxfordshire (Netcare UK)

North West Peninsula (Netcare UK)

Dorset/Somerset (Netcare UK)

Kent/Medway (Netcare UK)

Hants and Isle of Wight (Netcare UK)

Surrey and Sussex (Netcare UK)

Thames Valley (Netcare UK)

The preferred bidders to run the schemes are:

Netcare UK (South Africa)

Mercury Health Ltd (UK)

Care UK Afrox (South Africa)

Anglo Canadian (Canada)

Nations Healthcare (USA)

Birkdale Clinic (UK)

New York Presbyterian (USA).

Disability Legislation

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to introduce legislation on disability; what representations he has received over the need for such legislation; and if he will make a statement. [130208]

Maria Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

On 1 July, Parliament approved Regulations which will make significant changes to the employment provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act. Ending various employment and occupational exemptions will bring within scope of the Act over one million additional employers and around seven million jobs, in which 600,000 disabled people already work. These Regulations implement the main employment recommendations of the Disability Rights Task Force that were supported by the Government in our document "Towards Inclusion". As we have said, we shall be laying further Regulations in due course—such as on occupational pensions—which will make further changes to the DDA's employment provisions. All these regulations will come into force in October 2004.

Later this year we will publish a draft Disability Bill which will contain proposals on other measures recommended by the Task Force and outlined in "Towards Inclusion", such as changes to the DDA affecting the public sector, transport and premises, some widening of the definition of disability and covering membership of larger private clubs.

We intend that the draft Bill should undergo pre-legislative scrutiny. We continue to receive a wide range of representations from disability organisations, business, trade unions, employers, disabled people and others on civil rights legislation for disabled people.

Health Conferences

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost was of sending (a) Ministers and (b) civil servants to health conferences in (i) the UK and (ii) overseas in each of the last five years. [127378]

Mr. Hutton: Information is not available in the form requested.

Health Vacancies

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many vacancies there are for (a) nurses, (b) doctors and consultants and (c) radiographers and other technical positions, broken down by NHS trust. [106626]

Mr. Hutton: The national health service vacancy survey collects information on the number of posts which trusts are actively trying to fill which have been vacant for three months or more. The available information has been placed in the Library.

Hip Replacements

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in England with hip replacements had to undergo a hip revision within (a) three years, (b) five years and (c) 10 years in the last 12 months. [127539]

Mr. Hutton: The Department is unable to provide this information, as the Hospital Episode Statistics data do not identify individual patients.

In 2000, the National Institute for Clinical Excellence published guidance on the selection of prosthesis and set a benchmark that no more than 10 per cent. of patients should require revision surgery within 10 years, or evidence from at least three years follow up which when extrapolated, implies an equivalent performance.

The Department established a National Joint Registry (NJR) for total hip and knee replacements in April 2003. This collects data on hip and knee replacements carried out in the national health service and private sector in England and Wales. The NJR will look at the performance of hip and knee implants, and will over time be able to provide this information.

Hospital Bed Occupancy

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the average bed occupancy rate, as a percentage, for each NHS hospital trust in England from April 2001 to April 2003. [127496]

Mr. Hutton: Data on average bed occupancy rates are available on an annual basis, at national health service trust level and for England, for the years 2000–01 to 2001–02 on the Department of Health's website at: www.doh.gov.uk/hospitalactivity/data_requests/beds_open_overnight.htm

Data for 2002–03 are not yet available.

The latest available statistics for 2001–02 show that the number of general and acute beds increased by over 1,500 to 136,583 over the previous two years. This represents over two thirds of the target set out in the NHS Plan.

Hospital Cleanliness

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evaluation he has undertaken into the efficiency of the league tables for hospital cleanliness; and what plans he has to amend them. [127707]

Mr. Hutton: The patient environment action team programme, and the resulting 'traffic light' ratings awarded to hospitals, have been significant factors in improving the environmental conditions, including standards of cleanliness, in hospitals.

Since the introduction of the system the number of 'Green' hospitals has increased from 22 per cent. to 78 per cent. (2000–2003) while the number being assessed as 'Red' has fallen from 36 per cent. to zero over the same period.

There are no plans at present to change the system.

Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the role of the Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency in negotiations with the European Commission on the proposed Traditional Herbal Medicinal Products Directive. [128312]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) and, before April 2003, the Medicines Control Agency (MCA) represented the UK Government in the negotiations on the proposed Directive on Traditional Herbal Medicinal Products that have taken place in the Council of Ministers Working Group in 2002 and 2003 under the chairmanship of successive European Union Presidencies. Before the publication in 2002 of the European Commission's formal proposals for a Directive the MCA had a range of discussions with the European Commission and representatives of other Member States, predominantly in the European Pharmaceutical Committee and an expert group set up by that Committee, about the emerging proposals.

During this period the MCA and later the MHRA has held discussions on a number of occasions with the UK herbal sector about issues and priorities to be pursued in the negotiations, notably the case for flexibility to take greater account of evidence of traditional use from outside the EU and to permit vitamins and minerals to be added to traditional herbal remedies registered under the proposed Directive.

Mixed-sex Hospital Wards

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to end all use of mixed sex wards. [130997]

Mr. Hutton: The Department of Health has set three objectives to support the elimination of mixed sex accommodation. A small number of hospitals have yet to achieve these objectives on every ward. This is because a number of new hospitals and healthcare facilities are currently in construction, which will upon completion bring all wards to the required standards.

Guidance issued to national health service trusts on the achievement of the objectives made it clear that a variety of ward layouts and designs could be used to deliver separate sleeping accommodation, including the use of single-sex wards, or combinations of single-sex bays and individual rooms. Single-sex bays, together with increasing numbers of single rooms, are common features of modern hospital design both here and abroad, and can provide perfectly acceptable levels of privacy and dignity.

NHS Charges

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the (a) items and (b) procedures in the NHS for which charges are made. [127559]

Mr. Hutton: Treatment provided by the national health service is free at the point of delivery except in cases where specific legislation has been passed allowing a charge to be made. The current items and services for which a charge can be made are:

prescriptions;

dental services;

the supply of optical appliances by the hospital eye service;

treatment of private patients;

treatment of overseas visitors;

appliances such as wigs and fabric supports.

The NHS can also charge for the provision of accommodation and services for private resident and non-resident patients.

In addition to the above, NHS hospitals can charge for certain patient services using income generation powers. However a charge can only be made where the service is considered to be additional treatment over and above the normal service provision. Any item or service that is considered to be an integral part of a patient's treatment by their clinician remains free of charge.

NHS IT Programme

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the McKinsey report on the national IT programme for the NHS made an assessment of the total cost of the programme. [129230]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 11 September 2003]: The report in question was commissioned to help inform planning for the National Programme for Information Technology in the National Health Service. It did not attempt to assess the cost of the national programme, funding for which was announced in January 2003.

Pain Relief

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what management and assessment services and facilities are available to those suffering from persistent pain. [128080]

Mr. Hutton: It remains the responsibility of primary care trusts (PCTs) to commission services for people with pain, taking account of the resources they have available and the needs of their wider populations. The Clinical Standards Advisory Group (CSAG) report on pain services, published in April 2000, highlighted variations in access to pain services throughout the country. It made recommendations to national hospital service acute trusts and commissioners on how pain services should be delivered in order to reduce variations to access.

It recommended that PCT commissioners should review local provision of pain services, looking particularly at the provision of more specialised treatments on a networked basis. In this review, account should be taken of the needs of both adults and children, and include patients with acute pain resulting from sudden illness or accident, as well as post-operative pain and chronic pain. Trusts should also agree with commissioners the services and resources which are appropriate to meet local needs.

The National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) has been reviewing pain management techniques as part of the Supportive and Palliative Care Guidance. This provides a clearer idea of what therapies are effective and areas where further work is needed. Part A of the guidance is available in draft on the NICE website at http://www.nice.org.uk/.

Hospital Security

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients are under (a) police guard and (b) armed police guard in (i) NHS and (ii) private hospitals; and if he will make a statement. [128766]

Mr. Hutton: This information is not routinely collected centrally.

Public Health Laboratory Service

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the Public Health Laboratory Service laboratories that (a) will transfer and (b) have transferred to NHS trusts, broken down by (i) trust, (ii) date of transfer, (iii) current running cost and (iv) staffing complement. [124310]

Miss Melanie Johnson: [illegible]unning costs and staffing numbers for the laboratories transferred to the national health service are shown in the following table. All the laboratory transfers were completed on or before 1 April 2003.

Laboratory	NHS Trust	2002–03 budget (£)	Staff complement (WTE)[1]
Ashford	East Kent Hospitals NHS Trust	2,799,466	62.69
Brighton	Brighton and Sussex University NHS Trust	1,868,306	42.44
Carlisle	North Cumbria Acute Hospitals NHS Trust	1,251,210	30.43
Chelmsford	Mid Essex Hospital NHS Trust	1,212,129	37.82
Chester	Countess of Chester Hospital NHS Trust	1,728,815	47.67
Central Middlesex	North West London Hospitals NHS Trust	1,625,217	30.70

Laboratory	NHS Trust	2002–03 budget (£)	Staff complement (WTE)[1]
Coventry	University Hospitals Coventry and Warwickshire NHS Trust	2,145,805	49.78
Dorchester	West Dorset General Hospital NHS Trust	1,134,621	22.99
Exeter	Royal Devon and Exeter Healthcare NHS Trust	1,979,930	49.29
Gloucester	Gloucester Hospitals NHS Trust	1,465,721	45.71
Hereford	Hereford Hospitals NHS Trust	975,290	23.73
Hull	Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals NHS Trust	2,366,917	61.16
Ipswich	Ipswich Hospital NHS Trust	1,279,748	34.75
Leicester	University Hospitals of Leicester NHS Trust	2,812,959	68.30
Lincoln	Northern Lincolnshire and Goole Hospital NHS Trust	998,295	23.59
Liverpool	Aintree Hospitals NHS Trust	1,934,072	54.38
Luton	Luton and Dunstable NHS Trust	1,229,500	28.89
Middlesbrough	South Tees Hospitals NHS Trust	1,372,303	36.73
Norwich	Norfolk and Norwich University NHS Trust	2,055,942	52.34
Nottingham	Nottingham University NHS Trust	3,105,899	80.38
Peterborough	Peterborough Hospitals NHS Trust	944,533	25.00
Plymouth	Plymouth NHS Trust	2,125,294	44.17
Poole	Poole Hospital NHS Trust	2,329,965	52.67
Portsmouth	Portsmouth Hospital NHS Trust	1,984,922	47.01
Preston	Lancashire Teaching Hospitals NHS Trust	2,426,407	72.21
Reading	Royal Berkshire and Battle NHS Trust	1,644,385	35.94
Salisbury	Salisbury Healthcare NHS Trust	842,955	17.32
Sheffield	Sheffield Teaching Hospitals NHS Trust	2,354,821	58.60
Shrewsbury	Royal Shrewsbury Hospital NHS Trust	1,775,981	36.47
Stoke	North Staffordshire Healthcare NHS Trust	1,756,098	39.34
Taunton	Taunton and Somerset NHS Trust	1,474,244	32.28
Truro	Royal Cornwall Hospital NHS Trust	2,182,102	44.80

[1] Whole-time equivalent

Queen Mary's Sidcup NHS Trust

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many organisations tendered when the present contract for car parking at Queen Mary's Sidcup NHS Trust was awarded; and how long the contract lasts. [129756]

Mr. Hutton: Four organisations responded to the tendering exercise for this contract in 1999. The contract length is five years with an option to extend for a further two.

Stem Cell Research

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State's letter of 15 January, PO1021981, what action he has taken as a result of the House of Lord's findings in relation to stem cell research and therapeutic cloning; and if he will make a statement. [128416]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Government policy in this area of research has evolved following a number of influential reports, the most recent being that of the House of Lords Select Committee in February 2002. All of these reports have stressed the great potential of stem cell research and have concluded that no single source of stem cells should be worked on exclusively. The Government have made available, through the research councils, £40 million over two years for stem cell research, including stem cells derived from embryos, adult tissue, and cord blood.

The House of Lords confirmed, in its judgement of 13 March 2003, that embryos created by cell nuclear replacement (commonly known as therapeutic cloning) are fully regulated by the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1990. Subject to strict criteria, licences for the creation by therapeutic cloning of embryos for research may be granted by the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority.

Wage Costs

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the wage costs of (a) administration and (b) estates staff within the NHS were in 2002–03. [130322]

Mr. Hutton: This information will be available in February 2004.

Waiting Times/Lists

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of patients in each hospital trust area were waiting for treatment for more than 12 months (a) in 2002–03 and (b) on the latest date for which figures are available. [130283]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 16 September 2003]: The table provides the percentage of patients at those trusts showing patients waiting over 12 months at either March or July 2003 or both. For all remaining trusts the percentage of patients waiting over 12 months at both periods was zero.

Patients waiting for elective in-patient admission: Position at month end: England (provider based)

NHS trust/primary care trust	Percentage of patients waiting over 12 months: March 2003	July 2003
East and North Hertfordshire NHS Trust	0.51	0.09
Gloucestershire Hospitals	0.00	0.01
Hull and East Yorkshire Hospitals NHS Trust	0.00	0.03
James Paget Healthcare NHS Trust	0.00	0.03
Leeds Teaching Hospitals NHS Trust	0.00	0.01
Maidstone and Tunbridge Wells NHS Trust	0.03	0.02
Medway NHS Trust	0.19	0.06
North Bristol NHS Trust	0.01	0.00

Patients waiting for elective in-patient admission: Position at month end: England (provider based)

NHS trust/primary care trust	Percentage of patients waiting over 12 months
	March 2003	July 2003
North Hampshire Hospitals NHS Trust	0.12	0.00
Royal Shrewsbury Hospitals NHS Trust	0.00	0.31
South Tees Hospitals NHS Trust	0.00	0.12
St. Mary's NHS Trust	0.00	0.02
Trafford Healthcare NHS Trust	0.00	0.04
University Hospitals of Leicester NHS Trust	0.12	0.00
West London Mental Health NHS Trust	7.69	0.00
Weston Area Health NHS Trust	0.18	0.00

Source:
Department of Health forms KH07 and Monthly monitoring

HOUSE OF COMMMONS COMMISSION

Parliamentary Works

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission what the estimated cost is of the work carried out to the Palace of Westminster in (a) 2002, (b) 2003 and (c) 2004; and how many workmen (i) are and (ii) have been employed on the Parliamentary Estate in connection therewith. [129606]

Sir Archy Kirkwood: The cost to the House of Commons of maintenance and new works on the Parliamentary Estate in the financial year 2002–03 was £29.5 million. For the financial year 2003–04 the forecast cost is £24.2 million and for 2004–05 it is £18.4 million. Due to the many estate-wide services, it is not possible to provide accurate figures for individual buildings or to provide figures by calendar years. During the summer recess of 2002 approximately 1,200 contractors' personnel were employed on site and in the summer of 2003 the number is approximately 1,000.

The House of Commons Commission can answer only for those parts of the Parliamentary Estate for which this House is responsible.

EDUCATION

Online Centres

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many UK online centres were opened in deprived or rural wards across the north west in 2002–03; and how many centres there are. [128566]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 9 July 2003.

Adult Education

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what his estimate is of the cost of the guarantee of free tuition to help adults study for a Level 2 qualification in (a) 2003–04, (b) 2004–05 and (c) 2005–06; and if he will make a statement. [130720]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 17 September 2003]: The new entitlement to free tuition for adults studying for a first full level 2 qualification will be phased in from 2004–05: we expect to introduce the entitlement on a partial basis in academic year 2004–05. Subject to experience in that first year, the entitlement will proceed to roll out nationally from 2005–06. This will enable us to test out the impact on demand. The cost will depend on learner take-up of the entitlement. We have to target a greater proportion of state funding towards priority groups, so those with the greatest need have opportunities to acquire relevant skills and qualifications. Over time, colleges and other providers will need to better focus their resources to support this aim.

Bureaucracy (Universities)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) when he expects to receive the findings of the Committee chaired by David Van de Linde in relation to bureaucracy in universities; and if he will make a statement; [128415]

(2) if he will make a statement on the work in progress of the Better Regulation Review Group under Professor Van de Linde. [129994]

Alan Johnson: Professor Van de Linde has been asked to chair the Better Regulation Review Group, a committee of senior stakeholders from across higher education, to consider the issue of bureaucracy in higher education. The Group first met in March, since when it has been in regular discussions with the Department on regulatory matters, notably the Regulatory Impact Assessment of the White Paper The future of higher education, and aspects of it, such as the development of the Office for Fair Access. An important responsibility of the Group is to oversee the implementation of the recommendations of the Better Regulation Task Force report Higher education: Easing the burden. I look forward to receiving an interim report on the status of the recommendations from Professor Van de Linde in November.

Learning and Skills Council

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make it his policy to ensure that workers facing redundancy within the Learning and Skills Council are given the opportunity to retrain for other jobs within the organisation; and if he will make a statement. [129793]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council. John Harwood, the Council's Chief Executive will write to the hon. Member with the information requested and a copy of his reply will be placed in the Library.

Connexions

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many personal advisers Connexions employed, broken down by region, in (a) 2001, (b) 2002 and (c) 2003. [130717]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 17 September 2003]: The information in the following table shows the number of full time equivalent personal advisers working for the Connexions Service by region in the first years of operation.

The number of full time equivalent personal advisers working for Connexions

	December 2001		December 2002		June 2003
	PAs	Number of Partnerships	PAs	Number of Partnerships	PAs	Number of Partnerships
England	1,872.4	15	6,086.2	44	7,251.6	47
South East	118.0	1	606.9	5	862.1	6
London	252.2	2	841.7	6	910.3	6
East of England	42.8	1	398.6	5	614.6	6
South West	272.0	2	735.4	6	658.7	6
West Midlands	328.1	3	784.3	5	1,009.5	5
East Midlands	63.4	1	488.2	5	528.0	5
Yorkshire and Humber	300.0	2	800.5	4	898.0	4
North West	495.9	3	1,082.8	5	1,220.6	5
North East	118.0	0	347.8	3	549.8	4

Notes:
1. The figures include those staff directly employed by the Partnerships and those seconded to Connexions from local partner agencies.
2. In addition to personal advisers, Partnerships also employ other delivery staff whose main role is customer contact in support of the personal adviser role, but who are not qualified to give the in depth advice and guidance expected from a personal adviser. In 2001 there were 438.7 full time equivalent other delivery staff in the 15 Partnerships rising to 2,206.8 in the 42 partnerships in 2002 and 2,456.0 at the end of June 2003.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills by how much Connexions services are reducing their support, in terms of personal adviser time, for young people from (a) schools and (b) colleges. [130718]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 17 September 2003]: Connexions offers a service to all young people aged 13–19 differentiated on the basis of need. It is not reducing personal adviser time in schools or colleges. There have been significant year-on-year increases in funding since Connexions was introduced in 2001–02. In 2000–01, before the start of Connexions, Careers service and New Start budgets totalled £243 million; in 2001–02, the first year of Connexions, the total budget was £320 million. In 2002–03 this rose to £420 million and in the current year to £455 million.

One service offered by Connexions is for career guidance to be available to all 13 to 19-year-olds. The Ofsted report "Connexions Partnerships: the first year 2001–2002" found that the implementation of the Connexions Service had maintained, restored and, in some instances, enhanced the provision of Careers Education and Guidance in schools and colleges.

Education Clothing Grant

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the level of education clothing grant given by each local authority in England. [130416]

Mr. Miliband: The information you have requested is not collected by this Department.

Foundation Degrees Forward

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a further progress statement on Foundation Degrees Forward; and what the planned publication date for its prospectus is. [129993]

Alan Johnson: Foundation Degree Forward (FDF) is in the process of being set up, as a network organisation, with its administrative centre located at the Lichfield Campus jointly owned by Staffordshire University and Tamworth and Lichfield College. Dr. Derek Longhurst has been appointed as the Executive Director. The FDF Management Board will hold its first meeting on October 7 when it will consider a Strategic Plan for 2003–06 and a Business Plan and Operating Statement for 2003–04.

Maintenance Grants

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students in sixth form colleges and other education institutions in Hull are eligible for maintenance grants; how many are receiving them; what steps he is taking to ensure that individual students receive such grants; if he will list those institutions whose students qualify; and if he will make a statement. [129532]

Alan Johnson: The latest information available shows that the number of 16 and 17 year olds eligible for Education Maintenance Allowance (EMA) in Kingston upon Hull LEA at the end of 2000 was around 2,300. This is based on estimates of participation in full time education and the percentage of young people eligible for EMA based on income distribution. In 2002–03 1,960 students received weekly payments of EMA, of which 1,654 students received the maximum allowance.

Local LEAs are responsible for ensuring young people are aware of EMA. In the pilots eligibility is governed by the local authority area in which the young person lives, so any school with a sixth form, sixth form college or FE college at which an EMA student enrols will "qualify" to operate EMA.

EMA pilots are currently available in 56 LEA areas and the national scheme will be available from September 2004.

Post-graduate Certificate in Education (Citizenship)

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many places have been (a) taken up and (b) available for Post-graduate Certificate in Education Citizenship courses since their introduction; and if he will make a statement. [129894]

Mr. Miliband: Since 2001–02, when the citizenship PGCE course was introduced, 332 trainees have taken up places (147 in 2001–02 and 185 in 2002–03).

The table which shows the number of entrants to training against the number of places for 2001–02 and 2002–03 in England only.

	Places	Entrants
2001–02[1]	—	147
2002–03	200	185
2003–04[2]	250	—

[1] In 2001–02, there was no separate allocation for citizenship places.

[2] The number of entrants to Initial Teacher Training in 2003–04 is not yet available.

Source:

TTA

In addition to those trainees shown above, in 2002–03 14 trainees started the Graduate Teacher Programme (GTP) in citizenship.

Safer Schools Partnership Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact of the Safer Schools Partnership Initiative. [130502]

Mr. Miliband: My Department, in partnership with the Home Office and Youth Justice Board, has commissioned an independent evaluation of the first year of the Safer School Partnerships (SSPs) scheme for police officers based in schools. The evaluation report is nearing completion.

"Streets Ahead", the recently published joint inspectorate report on the Street Crime Initiative, included positive examples of SSPs, with case studies of good practice in London and Manchester. Lessons learned from the first SSPs will be reflected in future guidance and training material.

School Budgets (Buckinghamshire)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools in (a) the Chesham and Amersham constituency and (b) Buckinghamshire have set deficit budgets for the academic year 2003–04. [129887]

Mr. Miliband: Figures for balances are collected at the end of each financial year. The latest complete figures are for March 2002, when 7 schools in the Chesham and Amersham constituency and 39 schools in Buckinghamshire as a whole, were in deficit.

School Standards

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) Key Stage 2 pupils and (b) Key Stage 3 pupils reached the required standards in both literacy and numeracy in each year since 1997. [127902]

Mr. Miliband: The percentages of pupils achieving the expected level in both English and Maths at (a) Key Stage 2 and (b) Key Stage 3 are shown in the following table for all years available since 1997.

Percentage

	(a) Key Stage 2	(b) Key Stage 3
1997	52	—
1998	51	—
1999	61	—
2000	64	55
2001	64	56
2002	65	57
2003*	66	—

*Provisional

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many (a) boys, (b) girls and (c) children from ethnic backgrounds have reached the required standards of (i) English and (ii) mathematics at Key stages 1, 2, 3 and 4 in each year since 1997, broken down by local education authority; [127904]

(2) how many and what percentage of (a) boys and (b) girls from ethnic minority backgrounds have reached the required standards of (i) English and (ii) maths at Key stages 1, 2, 3 and 4 in each year since 1997, broken down by local education authority. [127924]

Mr. Miliband: The information requested has been placed in the Libraries.

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) boys and (b) girls have reached the required standards of (i) English and (ii) mathematics at Key stages 1, 2, 3 and 4 in each year since 1997, broken down by local education authority. [127922]

Mr. Miliband: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

The tables show, for each local education authority, the number of boys and girls in maintained schools who achieved the expected level in each year from 1997 to 2002.

The figures shown are based on:

Pupils achieving level 2 or above at Key Stage 1 in reading and in maths.

Pupils achieving level 4 or above at Key Stage 2 in English and in maths.

Pupils achieving level 5 or above at Key Stage 3 in English and in maths.

Pupils achieving good grades (A*-C) at GCSE in English and in maths.

Secondary Schools (Buckinghamshire)

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what criteria will be applied by the adjudicator in relation to catchment areas for secondary schools in Buckinghamshire; and if he will make a statement. [130436]

Mr. Miliband: The Adjudicator is independent. In considering any objections he will look at them in the context of the law and guidance given in the Code of Practice on School Admissions, and take account of what is in the best interest of all pupils and parents in the area.

Student Loans

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to assist Moslem students with finance, in the event of the student not wishing on religious grounds to take a loan requiring repayment of interest; and if he will make a statement. [129321]

Alan Johnson: The Government are committed to widening access to higher education. We are naturally concerned that some Muslim students from low income families may be missing out on the benefits of higher education because they may not wish to take out a student loan on religious grounds. Student loans are not commercial loans. To make sure that all borrowers pay back the same amount that they borrowed in real terms, the Government uprate the value of what is owed in line with the general rate of inflation.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Skills met representatives from the Federation of Student Islamic Societies (FOSIS) on 8 July to discuss their concerns, and senior officials from my Department will hold further discussions with FOSIS representatives in the near future.

Student Transport

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what action he is taking in conjunction with the Learning and Skills Council to co-ordinate the transport requirements of individual students, with particular reference to those with (a) special needs and (b) specialist course requirements. [129984]

Alan Johnson: In 2001–02, we commissioned an extensive study by Steer Davis Cleave into transport support for students of 16–19 and in particular, those with disabilities and learning difficulties. In line with the recommendations from this, my Department has revised legislation, via Schedule 19 of the Education Act 2002, and made an additional £39 million of funding available to local education authorities (LEAs) and their partners for the three years from 2003–06. Now LEAs, Learning and Skills Councils (LSCs) and further education colleges are required to work together to produce, publish and deliver local policies to ensure that there are effective transport services and financial support in order that young people can access and complete their further education. These new transport arrangements are currently the subject of independent evaluation.

This is in addition to the learner support fund, which is £36 million in 2003/04. This is paid to schools and colleges so that they can help students aged 16–19 to meet course related costs, which can include transport. The LSC also provides additional learning support to institutions to help with the extra costs a learner with special needs may require, e.g. for transport between sites and to other off-site activities for learners with mobility difficulties. And the LSC has provided support to education providers through revenue and capital funding to implement the Disability Discrimination Act.

The Government have announced that from September 2004 education maintenance allowances will be available across England. These will pay a means tested allowance of up to £30 per week (plus bonuses) to young people to provide them with an incentive to stay in learning and to help them with the associated costs, including transport.

Students 19 plus

Learner support funds are the main source of financial support to help students of 19 and over in further education with costs associated with studying, including transport costs. They are allocated via the LSC and used flexibly by colleges to help students facing financial difficulties related to their learning. £96.5 million has been made available for students aged 19 plus for 2003/04.

Each college is able to set its own policy on how it applies the funds and is required to give priority to students with disabilities, learning difficulties and other socially disadvantaged groups.

University of Bournemouth

Mr. Christopher Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what discussions he has had on the list of invitees to the meeting which he is addressing at the University of Bournemouth in October; [131053]

(2) if he will attend a meeting with students to discuss top-up fees when he visits the University of Bournemouth in October; [131054]

(3) if he will publish the list of invitees to the meeting which he proposes to address at the University of Bournemouth in October. [131055]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I have been invited to visit Bournemouth university which I intend to do in October. The university is responsible for the programme and arrangements.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Burma

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent reports he has received about the circumstances of Aung San Suu Kyi and those members and supporters of the National League for Democracy imprisoned after the attack on 30 May on Aung San Suu Kyi's motorcade. [130638]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It is unacceptable that Aung San Suu Kyi and other members and supporters of the National League for Democracy (NLD) should ever have been detained by the Burmese regime. As I recently told the Burmese Ambassador to the UK, we hold the Burmese military regime responsible for the wellbeing of Aung San Suu Kyi and we will continue to push for her release and other NLD members and supporters detained since 30 May.

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what advice the Government has issued to British American Tobacco on the future of its cigarette factory in Burma owned jointly with the Burmese Government. [130630]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Government do not encourage UK companies to trade or invest in Burma while the regime continues to suppress the basic human rights of its people. On 2 July I asked British American Tobacco to withdraw their investment from Burma. They are currently considering this request.

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what progress has been made to have Burma placed on the UN Security Council agenda; and if he will table proposals for targeted sanctions against Burma through the UK's position as chair of the UNSC; [130633]

(2) what proposals the Government plans to make to the UN Security Council regarding the political, economic and humanitarian crisis in Burma. [130639]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Government fully supports the efforts of the UN Secretary General's Special Envoy to Burma and the UN Special Rapporteur for Human Rights in Burma to help bring about national reconciliation, respect for human rights and democracy in Burma. This includes raising Burma in the various fora of the UN as and when appropriate.

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the governments of the ASEAN nations on formulating a co-ordinated policy to influence the Burmese Government towards democracy and improved human rights. [130634]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We take advantage of our regular bilateral and multilateral contacts with all ASEAN nations to discuss Burma related issues, most recently on 23–24 July at the ASEM Foreign Ministers' Meeting. We welcome the joint Asian and EU Foreign Ministers statement on 24 July calling for the release of Aung San Suu Kyi and democracy in Burma which sent a strong message of EU-Asian unity to the regime. We will remain in regular consultation with ASEAN Governments in the build up to the ASEAN Summit on 7–8 October. We believe that the ASEAN nations have an important role to play in encouraging substantive change in Burma.

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what results have followed his decision in June to write to tour operators to ask them not to organise tourism in Burma. [130636]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: By writing to the Association of British Travel Agents and individual tour operators we have drawn attention to the fact that Aung San Suu Kyi and the National League for Democracy continue not to encourage tourists to visit Burma in the present circumstances. At least one UK tour operator has since said it will remove Burma from its 2004 Brochure and others are considering whether to withdraw.

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has held about the closure of the universities in Burma following 30 May. [130637]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The UK made numerous representations to the Burmese authorities concerning the closure of universities after 30 May. The universities re-opened on 16 June.

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what impact the publication of the road map to democracy and the national convention recently published by the Burmese Prime Minister has had on the Government's advice to British businesses on trading with and investing in Burma. [130640]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister made clear in this House on 25 June, the British Government do not encourage trade with or investment in Burma, while the regime continues to suppress the basic human rights of its people, We offer no support for companies wishing to trade with Burma or for those who want to invest there. Representatives of British companies or their subsidiaries that inquire about the prospects either for trade with or investment in Burma are informed of this policy. The publication of the Burmese road map to democracy does not change this policy. We would want to see substantive dialogue with democratic groups leading to national reconciliation in Burma before considering any change to Government advice.

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Government of Burma about the road map to democracy; and if he will make a statement. [130641]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I have had no discussions with the Burmese regime about its so called road map to democracy. I call on the Burmese authorities to release Aung San Suu Kyi and other members of the National League for Democracy (NLD) immediately and to enter into a substantive and meaningful political dialogue with them.

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had about the exclusion of the National League for Democracy from the recently announced Burmese national convention. [130642]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The UK is active within the EU, UN and with our Asian partners to persuade the Burmese military regime to enter into substantive dialogue with democratic and ethnic minority leaders. Any meaningful democratic process in Burma must include the National League for Democracy.

Conflict Prevention Pools

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) when he expects the independent evaluation of the Global Conflict Prevention Pool to be complete; [130523]

(2) when he expects the independent evaluation of the Africa Conflict Prevention Pool to be complete. [130524]

Mr. Rammell: The joint external evaluation of the Africa Conflict Prevention Pool and the Global Conflict Prevention Pool began in June 2003. The results will inform the Spending Review 2004 process and so the aim is for the evaluation to be completed by early 2004.

Consultancies

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many consultancies were commissioned by his Department in the last two years for which figures are available; and what the cost of those contracts was. [130894]

Mr. Rammell: The total number of consultancies could be established only at disproportionate cost. Annual expenditure on external consultants is published in the Department's Annual Reports (copies of which are in the Library of the House). It amounted to £17.9 million in 2000–01 and £20.1 million in 2001–02. The vast majority of this expenditure was associated with our major Information Communication Technology and Estate construction programmes.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on smuggling arms to rebel forces within the Congo from (a) Rwanda, (b) Angola and (c) Uganda. [130658]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 17 September 2003]: We condemn the supply of arms to militia groups in the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC) and continue to call for an end to all such support. UN Security Council Resolution 1493 (2003) introduced an arms embargo on eastern DRC and on armed groups not party to the main power-sharing agreement (signed in Pretoria in December 2002). The UN Mission in the DRC (MONUC) are mandated by the same resolution to report regularly to the Security Council on information concerning arms supplies.

EU Accession States (Work Permits)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether residents of countries which join the European Union will have immediate permission to work in the United Kingdom with effect from the date of those countries joining the Union; and if he will make a statement. [129773]

Mr. MacShane: The EU (Accessions) Bill provides a power to grant nationals of the Czech Republic, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Hungary, Poland, Slovenia and Slovakia the same rights to work in the UK from 1 May 2004 as are enjoyed by nationals of the states in the European Economic Area. The Accession Treaty automatically grants nationals of Cyprus and Malta these rights.

I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's written statement of 16 December 2002, Official Report, columns 537–51WS, on EU enlargement and free movement of workers, and to the EU (Accessions) Bill and its Explanatory Notes—both available on the FCO website under 'enlarging the EU'—http://www.fco.gov.uk.

Israel

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Israeli Government regarding the security barrier. [130378]

Mr. Rammell: My right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and the Foreign Secretary both made clear our concerns over the route and likely impact of the "security fence" to Ariel Sharon, the Israeli Prime Minister, when he visited London on 14 July. Foreign Office officials have also made representations through the Israeli embassy.

The fence should not be built within occupied territory. We deplore this seizure of Palestinian land, isolation of Palestinian villages and the creation of a further physical obstacle to the two-State solution.

Parliamentary Questions

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Questions directed to him remain unanswered. [130758]

Mr. Straw: My Department has 49 Parliamentary Questions unanswered as of 17 September, only one of which is more than 7 working days old, which will be answered shortly.

Serbia and Montenegro

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what monitoring is occurring of attacks on religious minorities in (a) Serbia and (b) Montenegro. [130572]

Mr. MacShane: The implementation of the Charter on Human and Minority Rights and Fundamental Freedoms in Serbia and Montenegro, including the protection and promotion of national minorities (whether religious, ethnic or otherwise), is closely monitored by the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE) and the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (UNHCHR). Non-Government Organisations (NGOs) also monitor observance of human rights in Serbia and Montenegro and include Amnesty International, the Helsinki Committee for Human Rights in Serbia (HCHRS) and Human Rights Watch.

Serbia and Montenegro is also subject to a number of the Council of Europe's human rights monitoring mechanisms, including those provided for under the Framework Convention on National Minorities which was ratified by the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (now Serbia and Montenegro) on 11 May 2001.

Written Answers to Questions

The following answers were received between Friday 19 September and Monday 6 October 2003

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Gender Pay Gap

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Minister for Women what measures have been taken to address the pay gap between men and women; and if she will make a statement. [131312]

Ms Hewitt: The Government are taking action to tackle the complex factors behind the pay gap, including promoting voluntary pay reviews and good practice on equal pay. We have set a target for pay reviews and are working in partnership with businesses and trade unions, the Equal Opportunities Commission (EOC) and Opportunity Now towards ensuring that 35 per cent. of large companies have done pay reviews by 2006. We provided the EOC with £100,000 to produce a toolkit to help employers conduct pay reviews and provided trade unions with additional funding to train over 400 representatives in equal pay issues. The Government have committed all civil service Departments and agencies to review their pay systems and produce action plans to close any equal pay gaps, 83 action plans have been submitted, representing 98 per cent. of the civil service. We are also taking steps to widen women's opportunities in the labour market. The Employment Act 2002 introduced measures to help parents maintain links with the world of work and better balance their work and home lives. These will help women return to the labour market and have a positive impact on the pay gap. The Act also introduced an equal pay questionnaire that will make it easier to tackle pay discrimination in the workplace.

People Trafficking

Linda Perham: To ask the Minister for Women what assessment she has made of progress in tackling the illegal trafficking of women. [127787]

Beverley Hughes: I have been asked to reply.

We have set out a comprehensive approach to tackle trafficking in women and other forms of organised crime in the "White Paper Secure Borders, Safe Haven" published in 2002. The United Kingdom was one of the first countries to sign the United Nations Convention Against Transnational Organised Crime, and its Optional Protocol to prevent, suppress and punish trafficking in persons, especially women and children. The Government also supports action to combat trafficking, in both European Union and international fora and has supported information campaigns aimed at alerting women to the risks involved in such illegal immigration.

The Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 introduced a new offence of trafficking for the purpose of controlling prostitution with a maximum penalty of 14 years, and comprehensive offences covering trafficking into, out of and within the UK for purposes of sexual exploitation are included in the Sexual Offences Bill.

The Government have also recently published a trafficking toolkit, which will be a best practice guide for immigration officers, police and others potentially dealing with trafficking. A pilot scheme to support victims of trafficking to help them give evidence against their exploiters has been running since March 2003.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Battalion Disbandments

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland who has ultimate authority on the disbandment of a battalion of a regiment within the Army. [120172]

Mr. Ingram: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has ultimate authority on the disbandment of a battalion of a regiment within the Army.

CABINET OFFICE

Civil Contingencies

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what role the EU will play in civil contingencies planning. [130796]

Mr. Alexander: The EU is taking a leading role in facilitating multilateral emergency planning. Through the Committee for the Action Programme and for the Mechanism in the field of Civil Protection, the EU is establishing a Community mechanism to facilitate reinforced co-operation in civil protection assistance interventions.

While the UK continues to retain national responsibility for its own contingency planning, there may be cases where the resources of one nation are unable to cope with the scale of a particular incident.

In such exceptional circumstances we would expect the full co-operation of the member states and institutions of the European Union, including the Health and Safety Committee, in containing and resolving the situation. To this end the European Union's civil protection Monitoring and Information Centre would facilitate and co-ordinate any request for assistance from Member States.

Asbestos

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how much has been spent by his Department and its agencies on (a) asbestos surveys and (b) the management and removal of asbestos since 1 January

2001; and what budget is available to (i) commission asbestos surveys and (ii) manage and remove asbestos from buildings in (A) 2003 and (B) 2004. [130916]

Mr. Alexander: The Cabinet Office has undertaken asbestos surveys for the London and Basingstoke Estate, the GCDA buildings, HMSO (Norwich), Emergency Planning College (York), the COI and the CMPS Residential Training Centre (Sunningdale). This has identified risk areas and how this can best be managed.

The costs incurred since 2001 are as follows:

London Estate

No data on the costs of asbestos surveys and work pre-April 2002 are available, with the exception of the refurbishment project in Admiralty House and 22–26 Whitehall, where the cost of identifying and removing asbestos was £291,000. Expenditure in the management and removal of asbestos on the London Estate since April 2002 is £9,000.

Basingstoke Estate

The control of asbestos is the responsibility of the building's landlord. Some low risk asbestos has been found and removed but no costs were incurred.

GCDA

No asbestos identified and no costs incurred.

HMSO (Norwich)

The control of asbestos is the responsibility of the building's landlord. No risk has been identified and no costs were incurred.

Emergency Planning College (York)

No expenditure incurred in 2001 and 2002.

CMPS Residential Training Centre (Sunningdale)

Since 1 January 2001, £511 has been spent on asbestos surveys and £6,000 on asbestos removal (the latter amount was paid in 2003).

COI

No expenditure was incurred in 2001 and 2002.

The budgets available in 2003 and 2004 are as follows:

London Estate

The Cabinet Office's FM provider, as part of their fixed annual fee, maintains all asbestos surveys. No specific budget has been identified for the removal of asbestos, as there are no high-risk areas unless areas are disturbed due to building works. Costs of required measures will be identified and incorporated into any budgeted project costs at the time of the works.

Basingstoke Estate

No further risks have been identified and therefore no specific budget allocated.

GCDA and HMSO (Norwich)

No risk identified; therefore, no specific budget allocated.

Emergency Planning College (York)

The budget for 2003 for surveys is £5,725; for the management and removal it is £18,500. All of this work has been completed. The budget for 2004 for management and removal is £10,500.

CMPS Residential Training Centre (Sunningdale)

In May 2002 the Cabinet Office commenced a PPP contract with Initial Style Conferences Ltd. (ISC) to manage Sunningdale Park. All risks and expenditure relating to asbestos is now the responsibility of ISC.

COI

As the asbestos previously identified was deemed as being of low risk, costs of its management and removal will be included as part of any future refurbishment works. No separate cost data are available.

Information Technology

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what IT projects with a value in excess of £10,000 the Cabinet Office authorised in each of the last three financial years. [124424]

Mr. Alexander: I have today placed in the Libraries of the House a summary of IT projects with a value in excess of £10,000 that my Department authorised in the last three financial years.

It has been compiled from centrally held records and those maintained by existing business units, but, due to changes in my Department over the last three years, will not capture all projects that were managed by units that no longer exist.

The summary excludes any projects undertaken by the executive agencies of my Department (i.e. the Central Office of Information and the Government Car and Despatch Agency).

Mr. Flight: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many outsourced IT contracts have been signed by his Department in each year since 1997; how much each of these contracts is worth; with whom they are signed; how many have been renegotiated; how many are still in place; and if he will make a statement. [126209]

Mr. Alexander: My Department has signed 21 outsourced IT contracts since 1 April 1997. 20 of these contracts were awarded to the suppliers listed below for the delivery of services in connection with the Government Gateway. Of these, 9 have been renegotiated and 14 are currently in place. The estimated total value of these contracts is just over £117 million.

BCC Chambersign
BT Syntegra
Cable & Wireless
CGEY
Chatmoderators
Clark, McKay & Walpole
Domain Technologies
EDS (Initially Loudcloud)
EduServ
EMC Computer Systems (UK) Ltd
Equifax
ITNet
Microsoft Corporation
National Computing Centre
Sapient Limited
SchlumbergerSema
Securicor
Team Netsol
Vizuri
Westminster Digital.

A further contract for the provision of my Department's internal office systems and ancillary services was awarded to Compaq Computer Limited (now HP Ltd.) in January 2000 and runs for five years, with the option to extend for a further two years. This was the renewal of an existing outsourced contract. The estimated expenditure on the core services over five years is in the region of £15 million.

Secondments

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what the Cabinet Office's policy is on employing secondees from the private sector; how many secondees from the (a) private and (b) public sector the Cabinet Office were employed in each year since 1997; from which companies and organisations they were seconded; at what level they were employed; and if he will make a statement. [127066]

Mr. Alexander: The Government are committed to developing a modern, flexible, outward-focused civil service that works in partnership with all sectors of society. Interchange is a key tool in meeting that commitment. Secondments are encouraged as part of the interchange programme, which promotes the exchange of people and good practice between the civil service and other organisations. Before an interchange can occur all parties must be satisfied that no conflict of interest arises. In all cases agreement is reached with the parent organisation on the salary reimbursed by the Cabinet Office to ensure it falls in the civil service pay range appropriate to the post.

There are no records available prior to April 1999. The following table gives the number of secondees within the Cabinet Office by Pay Band within each year from 1999–2000. The figures for secondees from the private and public sectors are aggregated. Separate figures are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate costs.

	Level	Number of secondees in post
1999–2000	SCS	5
	Band A[1]	22
	Band B2[2]	6
	Band B1[3]	1
	Total	34
2000–2001	SCS	6
	Band A	33
	Band B2	12
	Band B1	1
	Total	52
2001–2002	SCS	9
	Band A	52
	Band B2	19
	Total	80
2002–2003	SCS	11
	Band A	44
	Band B2	10
	Total	65
2003–2004 (to date)	SCS	15
	Band A	20
	Band B2	8
	Total	43

[1] Combined grades 6 and 7.
[2] Combined grades Senior Executive Officer (SEO) and Higher Executive Officer (HEO).
[3] Equivalent to Executive Officer.

The following is a list of the companies and organisations from which the above were seconded:

Accenture
Addenbrooke's NHS Trust
Adult Learning Inspectorate
Age Concern
Arthur Andersen
Audit Commission
Australian Civil Service
Barking and Dagenham, London Borough
Bass Leisure Retail
Bates, Wells and Braithewaite
Boston Consulting Group
British Telecom
BSkyB
BUPA
Camden, London Borough
Canadian Government
Commission for Racial Equality
Deloitte and Touche
Energis
Energy Saving Trust
Environment Agency
Environmental Resource Management Ltd.
European Bank for Reconstruction and Development
Financial Times
Ford Motor Company
French Civil Service
GlaxoSmithKline
Greater London Authority
Guy's and St. Thomas's Hospital Trust
Hay Management Consultants
Hertfordshire Constabulary
Hewlett Packard
House of Commons
IBM UK Ltd.
ICI
Imperial College
Improvement and Development Agency
Institute for Public Policy Research Institute of Education
Kids' Club Network
King's Fund
KPMG
Local Government Association
Logica
London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine
Marks and Spencer
Metropolitan Police
Microsoft Ltd.
National Children's Bureau
National Consumer Council
National Council for Voluntary Organisations
National Criminal Intelligence Service
New Opportunities Fund
New Policy Institute
NHS Information Authority
NHS Purchase and Supply Agency
North Hertfordshire District Council

Office of Public Management
Ofsted
Oracle Corporation UK Ltd.
Oxera Consulting Ltd.
Poole Hospital NHS Trust
PricewaterhouseCoopers
Qualifications and Curriculum Authority
Royal Bank of Scotland
Sandwell Metropolitan Council
Singapore Government
Skillmind Consultancy
Social Market Foundation
South Bank University
Stockport Corporation
Sun Microsystems
Surrey County Council
Tarmac
Three
Unilever
University of Bristol
University of Edinburgh
University of Portsmouth
Warwick Business School
Welsh Development Agency
Westminster University
Worksystems Inc.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Solicitor-General what targets were set by the CPS in 2002–03 to deal with prosecution cases in a timely and efficient manner in partnership with other agencies; and what the performance results are against these targets. [128716]

The Solicitor-General: In 2002–03, the Crown Prosecution Service set two targets in order to deal with prosecution cases in a timely and efficient manner in partnership with other agencies.

The first target was to send 80 per cent. of committal papers to the defence within 14 days (10 days in custody cases) of receipt from the police of a full file for committal certified as trial ready. The target was achieved in 86.7 per cent. of cases.

The second target was to deliver 84 per cent. of briefs to counsel within 14 days of committal or transfer (21 days in non-standard fee cases). The target was achieved in 86.6 per cent. of cases.

Domestic Violence

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Solicitor-General what steps the CPS has taken to contribute to the Government's strategy to tackle domestic violence. [128721]

The Solicitor-General: The CPS handles about 13,000 cases of domestic violence each year. The revised policy on prosecution of cases of domestic violence launched in November 2001 focuses on the safety of the victim and children and on conducting cases, wherever possible, on the basis of evidence other than that of the victim. The work done by the CPS at operational level is complemented by the strategic contribution of the network of CPS Domestic Violence Co-ordinators across England and Wales who share information and good practice and issue guidance to prosecutors to help them identify and address difficult and sensitive issues that are regularly raised in domestic violence cases.

The CPS also contributes to the Government's strategy by consulting and working closely at a local level with criminal justice partners and the voluntary sector by participating in local domestic violence fora. At national level the CPS Policy lead on domestic violence attends the Home Office Virtual Unit and made a significant input into the Government White Papers, "Justice for All" and "Safety and Justice", addressing issues of prevention, protection and support.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Afghanistan

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development if he will make a statement on the security situation in Afghanistan and its effect on humanitarian and reconstruction work. [130296]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The security situation in Afghanistan continues to be a major concern of the population, the Afghan government and the international community. In large areas of the south the aid community remains extremely constrained in providing humanitarian and development assistance because of the threats from a lack of reliable security.

Attacks have been primarily concentrated in the south of the country. However, there have been other incidents elsewhere in the country, including incidents related to clashes between contending power holders. NGOs and the UN continue to work across the whole of Afghanistan, although their freedom of movement is constrained in some areas.

To help to counter the increasing insecurity, four international joint civil-military provincial reconstruction teams (PRTs) have been established in Mazar-e Sharif, Bamiyan, Kunduz and Gardez with four more planned to be operational before the end of this year in Jalalabad, Kandahar, Herat and Charikar. The PRTs are designed to bring stability to the regions and facilitate the reconstruction effort of the Afghan Administration, UN and NGOs

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development how much of the money pledged the Government of Afghanistan has received; and how much money his Department has given to Afghanistan. [130297]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: International donors meeting in Tokyo 21 to 22 January 2002 pledged more than US$1.8 billion to rebuild Afghanistan in 2002 which has been disbursed, and US$4.5 billion over five years.

DFID have given £131million to Afghanistan since November 2001. The joint DFID, MOD and FCO Global Conflict Prevention Pool has also given £16 million.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development if he will make a statement on attacks on non-governmental organisations workers in Afghanistan. [130299]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: Aid workers and relief organisations can be seen as soft targets by those seeking to undermine efforts to rebuild and bring stability.

It is with much regret that in the last month two workers of the Afghan Red Crescent Society, a Mercy Corps driver and four members of the Danish Committee to Aid Afghan Refugees have been killed in Afghanistan.

I greatly admire the way in which, despite the difficult conditions under the present security situation, non-governmental organisations are continuing to provide assistance to the poorest and most vulnerable Afghans.

Aid Expenditure

Angus Robertson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development how much aid his Department has (a) unilaterally and (b) multilaterally provided to (i) Afghanistan, (ii) Algeria, (iii) Angola, (iv) Bangladesh, (v) Botswana, (vi) Ghana, (vii) Jamaica, (viii) Kazakhstan, (ix) Kenya, (x) Nigeria, (xi) Pakistan, (xii) Sri Lanka, (xiii) Syria, (xiv) Tanzania, (xv) Tunisia, (xvi) United Arab Emirates and (xvii) the Ukraine per annum since 1997 through (A) ECHO, (B) the UN, (C) the World Bank and (D) the IMF; how much of this aid was delivered in kind; how much of this aid was provided as monetary investment for specific projects; and if he will make a statement. [129977]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: Information in the form requested is not readily available but I have placed in the Libraries of the House two tables under the title "DFID Bilateral and Multilateral Aid to Countries referred to in Parliamentary Question UIN 129977". These show DFID bilateral expenditure to the countries listed broken down by form of aid, and the imputed UK share of multilateral assistance to these countries by main channel. The bilateral data are in financial (April-March) years and the multilateral in calendar years. The latest year is shown in each case.Note also that the imputed multilateral data are based on OECD statistics and are an estimate for the UK effort—i.e. wider than DFID.

Additional information on the bilateral expenditure is available in DFID's annual publication Statistics on International Development, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. No further information is available on multilateral expenditure.

Arms Control

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what steps have been taken by the Department to assist developing countries in increasing security for legal stockpiles of armaments. [131139]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The UK recognises that improving stockpile security is a key component of efforts to prevent the proliferation of illegal armaments. The UK provides limited assistance to countries on security for legally held stockpiles of small arms. Through the Global Conflict Prevention Pool Small Arms Strategy, the UK provides support to the work of UNDP's South Eastern Europe Small Arms Clearing House, which has provided training and assistance to states in that region on stockpile security. In Sierra Leone, the UK provided training to the military and security forces on weapons management and security systems as part of a wider package of support for restructuring the military forces after the conflict.

The UK was a key contributor to the development of the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE) Best Practice Guidelines on Stockpile Management, published earlier this year, and is currently working with the OSCE to devise ways to support the operationalisation of these Guidelines.

DFID, the FCO and the MOD are also looking at ways to increase provision of technical guidance and assistance in this area within the context of security sector reform programmes.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development pursuant to his answer of 17 June, Official Report, column 122W, on the gun trade, what assessment he has made of the impact of export control legislation on the proliferation of small arms in developing countries; and whether the Government raised the issue of export control legislation and the proliferation of small arms at the UN Biennial Meeting of States in July. [129808]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The UK believes that stronger export control legislation is an important way of tackling the proliferation of small arms in developing countries, and is committed to working with our international partners to strengthen existing legislation at the national, regional and international levels. However, legislation also requires effective and sustained enforcement, and the UK government provides support to ensure effective implementation and enforcement of that legislation.

The UK Government made export control legislation one of its priorities for the UN Biennial Meeting of States, and made a strong statement on the need to strengthen and enforce export controls during the plenary session. The UK also co-sponsored a side meeting for interested states to consider ways of achieving this. This meeting established a considerable degree of support, particularly for regional processes as an interim stage to securing greater international agreement. The UK is now discussing options for taking this process forward with possible co-partners, including UK support for regional processes, and remains committed to working with our partners internationally to secure stronger export controls on transfers of small arms.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what steps the Department has taken to help developing countries use and develop their air traffic control infrastructures to reduce the number of illicit arms shipments arriving in their countries. [131149]

Hilary Benn: The UK currently focuses its assistance on strengthening policing, customs and border control in developing countries as a means of helping them to reduce the number of illicit arms shipments arriving in their countries. This work is funded under the Global Conflict Pool Small Arms Strategy. The Pool has not provided any direct assistance to developing countries to develop their air traffic control infrastructure.

Burma

Vera Baird: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development whether UK development aid to Burma is made conditional upon specific policies or course of conduct by the Burmese Government. [130629]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: UK aid for the Burmese poor addresses priority humanitarian and other critical needs, including prevention of HIV/AIDS. UK aid is provided within the European Union (EU) Common Position on Burma, which states that "... Non humanitarian aid or development programmes shall be suspended ..." except those "projects and programmes which should be, as far as possible, defined in consultation with democratic groups, including the National League for Democracy, and run with their involvement:

in support of human rights and democracy,

in support of poverty alleviation and, in particular, of the provision of basic needs for the poorest section of the population, in the context of decentralised cooperation through local civilian authorities and non-governmental organisations, in support of health and basic education through non-governmental organisations."

We require partners to institute suitable mechanisms to ensure that UK aid is used in a transparent and accountable manner. Monitoring and evaluation systems have to be set up by recipients of UK aid, and such systems prevent any part of it going to the regime.

Vera Baird: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what the (a) extent and (b) nature is of Government development aid to Burma; and what plans there are to change the amount and nature of aid. [130631]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: In the current financial year 2003–04, UK aid for poor Burmese people is likely to be about £4 million, addressing needs in the areas of health, HIV/AIDS and support to refugees. Options for future aid are currently being assessed through the preparation of a new country plan.

Vera Baird: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what proportion of UK development aid to Burma is channelled through the Burmese (a) Government and (b) Government agencies. [130632]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: UK aid for poor Burmese people is channelled through United Nations (UN) agencies and international and local non-governmental organisations. In 2003, some of the funding for the UN-led programme to tackle HIV/AIDS, to which the UK is the largest contributor, will be spent on activities delivered through the National AIDS Programme. It is not yet possible to say what proportion of UK aid will be used in this way. The UN is required to monitor these expenditures rigorously to ensure that they are used for the intended purposes in a transparent and accountable manner.

Burundi

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what recent assessment he has made of the numbers of people internally displaced in Burundi; and what measures are in place to meet their humanitarian needs. [130305]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The current estimate of the number of internally displaced persons as of August this year is just over 280,000 plus up to an additional 100,000 temporarily displaced at any time. They are an important focal point for the humanitarian relief effort in the country. Although this is effective where there is access, there is concern about the welfare of communities who cannot be reached.

The UK's humanitarian support to Burundi includes a £400,000 grant to Medecins Sans Frontieres for emergency health interventions, which benefits displaced persons in Bujumbura by increasing access to basic health and to emergency surgical services. We envisage a further £500,000 contribution to the UN Consolidated Appeal in the near future. The EU are providing, through its European Community Humanitarian Office (ECHO), up to £15 million for humanitarian support activities in Burundi, this includes humanitarian support to internally displaced people.

We continue to monitor the humanitarian situation and will continue to respond to requests for support in line with perceived humanitarian priorities.

Cameroon

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development pursuant to the answer of 14 July 2003, Official Report, column 9W, on poverty reduction strategies, what pressure his Department applied for the inclusion of water, sanitation and hygiene in the Cameroon Poverty Reduction Strategy Plan published on 12 August; and whether the Poverty Reduction Strategy Plan provides sufficient resources to meet (a) the water and (b) the sanitation millennium development targets in Cameroon. [130749]

Hilary Benn: Cameroon's Poverty Reduction Strategy includes objectives of improved access to drinking water and sanitation under one of the seven Strategic Areas. DFID participated in discussions of the draft strategy with the Government of Cameroon and other donors. Our focus was on improved governance, monitoring of PRS implementation, and forestry sector reform, which is the sector we are concentrating on and where we feel we can make most difference. We would expect adequacy of the Strategy with respect to all the Millennium Development Goals to become clearer through the monitoring process, which the government of Cameroon and donors are working to put in place.

Congo

Ms Oona King: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what actions his Department is taking to support the transitional national government in the Democratic Republic of Congo. [130689]

Hilary Benn: Since the installation of the Transitional National Government in the Democratic Republic of Congo in July DFID has started to engage actively with it, and with other donors, aimed at establishing a significant programme of support to the DRC. This involves some initial Quick Impact Projects in the fields of health and education to an estimated value of £19 million. In addition, a DFID mission visited Kinshasa in early September to identify activities in support of the five Transitional Institutions of the TNG. We are also looking at working with partners, especially the Government of Belgium, in Security Sector Reform. The UK is also a major contributor to the World Bank's regional Great Lakes programme for DDR which will include programmes in the DRC.

Consultancy Contracts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development how many consultancies were commissioned by the Department in the last two years for which figures are available; and what the cost of those contracts was. [130889]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID central Procurement Department commissioned consultancy contracts as follows:

	Number of contracts	£ million
2001–02	1,082	282
2002–03	833	262

In addition, DFID overseas departments commissioned lower value contracts worth a total of £20 million in 2001–02 and £25 million in 2002–03.

Departmental Budget

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what percentage of the Department's 2002–03 budget is spent on providing help to those without adequate access to water, food and shelter. [129248]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The central focus of the Government's policy on international development is a commitment to the internationally agreed target to halve the proportion of people living in extreme poverty by 2015, together with associated targets including basic health care provision and universal access to primary education. We believe that reducing poverty is the best way of empowering people to take control of their own lives and gain access to basic requirements such as food, shelter and water.

The Monterrey Consensus, agreed at the UN Financing for Development conference in Monterrey in 2002, recognised the crucial role played by developing countries' own poverty reduction strategies. Experience has shown that the reform agendas drawn up locally are more successful than those imposed from outside. More effective use of aid means moving away from donors allocating funding to selected sectors and donor-led projects to providing support that is consistent with poverty reduction strategies drawn up by the developing countries themselves. It is for this reason that we do not plan our resources on the basis of different sectors. Rather, we allocate funds to regions and countries and allow country programmes to determine priorities according to national plans.

It is not therefore possible to provide an exact figure for the percentage of the Department's overall budget spent on particular sectors. Over half of the Department's overall budget is allocated to expenditure through multilateral organisations and other categories, such as direct budget support and humanitarian aid, where it is difficult to attribute precisely spending according to sectors.

We are committed to the Millennium Development Goal targets on water and sanitation as well as to the adoption of national policies and strategies for integrated water resources management in all developing countries by 2005. Improvements to water management are central to the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals. DFID expenditure on water and sanitation in 2001–002 was £33.8 million. We do not yet have final figures for 2002–03.

The United Nations agency responsible for shelter is UN-Habitat. The UK contribution is around £1 million a year (which in 2002–03 amounted to 27 per cent. of their core funding). We do not have figures on bilateral spending on shelter.

The causes of hunger are many and include poverty, ill health, exclusion, conflict and natural disasters. Poverty is, however, the principal cause. The concept of 'food security' focuses on people's ability to obtain food, rather than simply on food production, which is a necessary but not a sufficient condition for tackling hunger. Policies to tackle food insecurity need to be based on a clear understanding of who is hungry and why. The design of such policies needs to take into account people's vulnerability, the impact of shocks and the effects of trade policies.

DFID spent an average of around £275 million a year in the period 1998–99–2000–01 on Sustainable Livelihoods (including Agriculture and Food Security). Final figures are not yet available for 2002–03. This does not include short-term emergency food aid.

DFID's total bilateral spend in 2001–02 was £1,506 million, of which £964 million can be allocated by sector (this does not include budget support or humanitarian assistance).

It should be noted that all these figures are likely to understate the amounts actually spent in these sectors for the reasons given above and because, in the past, DFID only attributed expenditure to one sector even when an activity contributed to more than one sector.

Ethiopia

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what the Department's policy is on the Ethiopian Government's programme of national resettlement in the Southern Nations, Nationalities and People's Region; and if he will make a statement. [130304]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The Government of Ethiopia are undertaking a programme of voluntary resettlement. We recognise that if properly managed, such programmes can have a role to play as part of a wider set of actions to address food insecurity. However, badly managed resettlement can have a negative impact if people are moved into inappropriate areas or given insufficient support or services.

There clearly have been some cases of inappropriate resettlement in Southern Nations, Nationalities and People's Region. Our overall policy has been to engage with the federal and regional Government to promote a more careful and measured approach. In addition, we have remained ready to respond to humanitarian situations that might develop. Our Ethiopia office will continue to monitor the situation carefully.

Export Control Act

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development pursuant to his answer of 18 June 2003, Official Report, column 241W, on the Export Control Act 2002, whether the Department discussed the impact of the orders on developing countries with (a) aid agencies and (b) NGOs working in developing countries. [129820]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: No. DFID officials did discuss the submissions made by aid agencies and NGOs working in developing countries to HMG's consultation on the draft secondary legislation of the Export Control Act with relevant DTI officials.

Food Expenditure

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development how much was spent on food by his Department and by each of the agencies for which it is responsible in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03; what proportion of that food by value was produced in the United Kingdom; what guidance he has issued to encourage the procurement of home-produced food; and if he will make a statement. [129373]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID's headquarters catering services purchased food costing £121,000 in 20012–02 (only part-year figures are available, dating from the start of the current contract) and £224,000 in 2002–03. The caterers estimate that around 60 per cent. was produced in the UK. We have agreed an action plan with them to implement the Government's policy for sustainable food procurement.

Great Lakes Region

Ms Oona King: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development when his Department will publish a joint strategy paper on the Great Lakes Region. [130688]

Hilary Benn: DFID and FCO plan to publish their Joint Strategy Paper on the Great Lakes within the next month.

Iraq

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development pursuant to his answer of 18 June 2003, Official Report, column 241W, on Iraq, whether water companies in the UK have offered assistance in Iraq. [129804]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: In response to requests from NGOs, one UK water company has provided assistance, on a not-for-profit basis, to drinking water supply and sanitation services in Iraq. The company has also provided DFID with information on its experience in the water sector in Iraq, and has offered further not-for-profit support to NGOs, the Coalition Provisional Authority (CPA) and the Baghdad Water Authority in rehabilitating water infrastructure. This offer has been forwarded to the Iraqi Ministry of Public Works and the CPA.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development pursuant to his answer of 9 June 2003, Official Report, column 614W, whether the Department has made an assessment of (a) whether there are sufficient numbers of trained public health laboratory staff in Iraq and (b) whether British military personnel can offer assistance in this area. [129806]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: No overall assessment of public health laboratory staff in Iraq has taken place since the conflict this year. Information from agencies working the health sector in Iraq, such as the World Health Organisation, suggests that trained Iraqi staff are available, but their skills need to be updated in line with current professional knowledge.

UK forces have a very small number of appropriately trained personnel in theatre who could, in principle, offer assistance in the training of Iraqi public health laboratory staff, subject to other priorities.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development pursuant to his answer of 17 June 2003, Official Report, column 124W, on Iraq, if he will also make a detailed study of the resources needed to re-establish a working civil service in Iraq. [129818]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The Coalition Provisional Authority is assessing the resources required to re-establish the Iraqi civil service. Institutional strengthening requirements are also expected to be addressed in the social and economic needs assessments now being undertaken by the World Bank, International Monetary Fund and United Nations. DFID will consider whether any further detailed study is required after these bodies have reported their findings.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development pursuant to his answer of 17 June 2003, Official Report, column 124W, on Iraq, if he will take steps to ensure that short term reform to Iraq's food network before the restoration of normal market conditions are free of political interference. [129819]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID's priority in the short term is to minimise any disruption to food supplies, particularly to poor and vulnerable people, resulting from the winding-up of the Oil for Food Programme in Iraq. Over the medium term, our policy is to replace the food distribution system by a monetary benefit which, like the current food distribution system, would initially be universal and standardised.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what support has been given by his Department to the Marsh Arabs of Iraq since the conclusion of hostilities in that country; and if he will make a statement. [129825]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID has been providing support for health care and sanitation for Iraqi Marsh Arabs and refugees in Iran through the NGO AMAR (£2.45 million over the last four years). We are in the process of considering a further year's support for AMAR. DFID has also granted £522,000 to the International Medical Corps for its work in Iraq, which includes providing clean and sustainable water supplies in Marsh Arab areas.

Social and economic needs assessments being undertaken by the World Bank, IMF and United Nations are expected to identify future requirements in the Marsh Arab areas. The Coalition Provisional Authority and the UN Environment Programme are also planning to assess environmental issues in Iraq, including in the southern marshlands. Future DFID support will be informed by outcome of these assessments.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what estimate he has made of the number of (a) boys and (b) girls returning to school in Iraq. [129877]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: It is not possible to provide accurate estimates of numbers of children returning to school in Iraq because the administrative systems in the country do not at present have the capacity to collect such information. The Coalition Provisional Authority has reported that almost all Iraq's schools were open by June 2003. UNICEF, which assisted in the running of the summer examinations, has reported that end of year exams were taken by approximately 5.5 million children in June and July 2003.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development whether students in Iraq will be able to sit examinations in this academic year. [129878]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: UNICEF reports that end of year exams were taken by approximately 5.5 million children in Iraq in June and July this year. We fully expect Iraqi students to be able to sit examinations in the forthcoming academic year.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what assessment he has made of the effect of the recent conflict in Iraq upon aid programmes for other developing countries. [130053]

Hilary Benn: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development and I set out in our letter of 22 May to Members of both Houses, we will not divert funding to Iraq from existing DFID programmes such as emergency assistance in Southern Africa, Afghanistan or the West Bank and Gaza, or programmes tackling poverty elsewhere.

Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what amounts have been spent in Iraq since 1 May on (a) re-establishing water supplies, (b) re-connecting electricity supplies and (c) assisting in supporting existing Iraqi hospitals and medical centres; and if the Department will include a breakdown of itemised expenditure in each weekly edition of its Iraq Update Report. [130291]

Hilary Benn: Most of DFID's expenditure on Iraq is channelled through the United Nations, the Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement and non-governmental organisations, each of which report to DFID on their expenditure and activities separately and at different times. It would not therefore be possible, other than at disproportionate cost to DFID and to the agencies concerned, to provide details of our total spending in Iraq, sector by sector, at any particular point of time.

DFID has so far committed £198 million to humanitarian and reconstruction assistance in Iraq. This includes £15.8 million to water and sanitation, £12.2 million to power and fuel, and £8.5 million to health and nutrition. A further £35 million has been allocated to humanitarian agencies without being earmarked to specific sectors, a proportion of which is being spent in the water, power and health sectors according to priorities identified on the ground. DFID has also recently agreed a £20 million project to help restore essential infrastructure in southern Iraq, which is expected to improve service delivery of power, water and fuel to over 5 million people.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what recent assessment has been made of the availability of medical supplies in Iraq. [130307]

Hilary Benn: Recent assessments by the World Health Organisation (WHO) and the Iraqi Ministry of Health indicate that there are no major shortages of essential medical supplies in Iraq. There are, however, still reported shortages of specialist supplies such as laboratory reagents, TB antibiotics, oxygen and drugs for some chronic diseases. A number of agencies, including WHO, have helped refurbish drug warehouses in Baghdad, and the transport of drugs to the regions.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what recent assessment has been made of the supply of (a) clean water, (b) sanitation and (c) electricity throughout Iraq. [130308]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: Recent assessments suggest that the Baghdad water system is working at approximately 80 per cent. of its pre-war capacity, and that 75 per cent. of the population of Baghdad has access to sewage networks. The supply of clean water and access to sanitation in other areas is difficult to assess accurately. UNICEF and the General Corporation for Water Supply are compiling a database on progress in the water and sanitation sector in order to provide better assessments of the current level of services.

Electricity supply throughout Iraq has improved over the last month. On 8 September, power generation had reached 3550 megawatts, approximately 81 per cent. of the pre-war level of 4400 megawatts. The Coalition Provisional Administration has set a target for reaching this pre-war level by the end of September. Work is also taking place to restore the transmission grid, which has suffered particularly badly from looting and sabotage. This will allow the additional power to be used effectively throughout the country to improve the reliability of service and to provide additional power to the less well served areas. In July and August Baghdad had power on a 3 hours on and 3 hours off basis while Basrah had up to 20 hours per day.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what measures are in place to restore and maintain security in Iraq to enable the provision of humanitarian aid. [130309]

Hilary Benn: The provision of stability and security in Iraq is the highest priority for the Coalition. A secure environment is essential if political and economic reconstruction is to succeed, and humanitarian assistance provided. The Coalition is making considerable efforts to develop Iraq's own security institutions as quickly as possible, as well as deploying, additional forces to Iraq as announced by my RHF the Secretary of State for Defence on 8 September.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what assessment has been made of the level of food shortages in Iraq. [130310]

Hilary Benn: The food security situation in Iraq is under constant review by the World Food Programme (WFP) and the Iraqi Ministry of Trade. Food stocks are not expected to run out.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what recent discussions the Department has had regarding the role of the UN in Iraq. [130311]

Hilary Benn: DFID is in regular contact with the UN, both in New York and in-country, about its operations in Iraq and I met Kevin Kennedy, the head of the UN mission in Iraq, during my recent trip to Baghdad. The UN is still assessing the effect on its operations of the bombing of its Baghdad office and the subsequent temporary reduction in the number of international staff in Iraq. The UN has said that it intends to continue to operate in Iraq and that its key humanitarian programmes, including the Public Distribution System for food, will remain operating under the management of Iraqi staff.

A current priority for the UN is to complete assessments of its own security provisions and put in place additional appropriate security measures. DFID has offered to help support increased safety and security measures for the UN operations in Iraq.

DFID is also involved in discussions with other Government Departments on the role of the UN in Iraq's political development.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what assistance his Department is giving to the (a) World Bank, (b) IMF and (c) UN in preparing the report on the social and economic needs in Iraq; and when he expects the report to be completed. [131203]

Hilary Benn: DFID has not provided financial assistance to the IFIs or the UN to prepare their report on the social and economic needs of Iraq.

DFID has however committed £3.15 million to the IMF to provide technical assistance to Iraqi Ministries and £113 million to UN agencies for humanitarian and reconstruction activities.

We expect the WB/IMF/UN report to be published on 2 October.

Kosovo

Adam Price: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what humanitarian contribution the Department has made since 1999 to help children in Kosovo who lost their parents owing to the conflict there in 1999. [130348]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: Immediately after the end of the 1999 conflict, DFID disbursed £108 million as humanitarian assistance, covering food supplies, shelter, health care, mines clearance and support to small enterprises, and funding for international relief agencies working with refugees both in Kosovo and in neighbouring countries. This assistance included the provision of £4.5 million to UNICEF for support to schools. DFID also provided humanitarian support through its contributions to the EC Humanitarian Office.

Since then DFID has collaborated with the Kosovo authorities and the World Bank to review social welfare policies, and is providing a £2 million grant, to assist with social policy reform. This includes the provision of social assistance to families and children in need, and social services for the protection of children. DFID has also co-funded a major poverty assessment to assist the design and monitoring of social services and benefits. In parallel with this, DFID has provided support to the United Nations Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) for the strengthening of systems for setting standards and quality assurance for children's services.

Liberia

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what measures are in place to improve the (a) sanitary conditions and (b) water supply in Liberia. [130301]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: During the peak of the conflict the NGOs that remained in Liberia managed to ensure a minimum level of water supply to the displaced in Monrovia, but sanitation became a major cause for concern. The current situation is that water supply and sanitation issues are being addressed in Monrovia by the UN, NGOs and the Red Cross with the help of DFID funding, but access to areas outside Monrovia and its environs are still hampered by security concerns.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development if he will make a statement on the security situation in Liberia and its impact on humanitarian relief. [130302]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: Security remains the major issue hampering humanitarian access in Liberia and the capacity of ECOMIL to ensure security outside of Monrovia is limited. Access to areas outside Monrovia is being hampered by militia groups and access to other major towns is sporadic.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what recent assessment he has made of the availability of (a) food, (b) shelter and (c) medicines for the people of Liberia. [130303]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: Food supply and nutritional issues are being addressed by the UN and NGOs. From 16 August until 5 September, the World Food Programme (WFP) has provided assistance to 419,177 beneficiaries with 2,994 metric tons of food. In addition, WFP distributed 337 metric tons of food to an estimated 62,130 people through special feeding programmes, approximately 50,000 of whom were fed under Action Contre la Faim's DFID-funded emergency food distribution.

The Red Cross and the UN are addressing non-food items and shelter requirements, and a number of our partners on the ground are supplying medical equipment and drugs to Liberian health centres (Figures currently unavailable).

To address all these needs, we have committed £4.7 million to support the humanitarian work of the UN, the International Committee of the Red Cross and NGOs. This in addition to the £2.9 million we have provided to international agencies and NGOs in Liberia previously this year.

Microsoft

Norman Lamb: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development how much was paid to Microsoft in licensing fees by his Department and its agencies in each of the last three years; and how much has been budgeted for (a) 2003–04 and (b) 2004–05. [130672]

Hilary Benn: DFID undertook a major upgrade of its systems in the period 2000–02 and the resulting licence fees paid to Microsoft takes account of this. The figures are:

	£
2000–01	223,451[1]
2001–02	162,849
2002–03	55,000

[1] includes ASSIST 2000 Upgrade Project licence fees

Our budgets for future years (providing we continue with Microsoft) will be approximately £60,000 for both 2003/04 and 2004/05.

Middle East/North Africa

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development if he will make a statement on his assessment of the link between accountable regimes and economic growth in (a) the Middle East and (b) North Africa; and what action his Department is taking to promote good governance in the regions. [129892]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The Middle East and North Africa compares badly with other regions of similar incomes and characteristics in terms of public accountability and inclusiveness. A number of reports have been published recently which highlight the relationship between accountable governance and economic growth in the Middle East and North Africa. The 2002 "Arab Human Development Report" concluded that social and economic development was being hampered by deeply rooted shortcomings in the structures of governance in the region. More recently, a World Bank's report, "Better Governance in the Middle East and North Africa", noted that income growth per head averaged just 0.5 per cent. across the region in the period 1985–2000, and at the heart of this poor record was a noticeable "governance gap". Taken together, these reports provide a substantial body of evidence to support the view that improving accountable governance, strengthening political and economic freedoms, and enhancing public participation are prerequisites for lasting economic, social and human development in the region.

Promoting better governance is a key feature of DFID's bilateral programme to the region: this is set out as a central theme of our soon-to-be-published Regional Assistance Plan. Examples include support to public administration and civil service reform in both Jordan and the Palestinian Territory. We are also working to help ensure that the European Commission's development programme takes proper account of the need to improve governance and respect for human rights, and reduce poverty, in partner countries in the Middle East and North Africa.

Parliamentary Questions

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development how many Questions directed to the Department remain unanswered. [130760]

Hilary Benn: According to our records there are 17 outstanding questions (not answered by their due date in the question book, which is two days from date of tabling) from before the Conference recess.

Of these, 16 including this one, are due to be published on 6 October. The reply to the outstanding one will be published shortly.

Reproductive Health Services

Richard Ottaway: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development pursuant to his reply of 16 July 2003, Official Report, column 332W, what percentage of the money spent on reproductive health services, is being spent on (a) HIV/AIDS programmes and (b) family planning; and in which countries. [130514]

Hilary Benn: The Department for International Development spent £31 million in 2002–03 on activities within the Sector-Wide Approaches (SWAPS) that had support for reproductive health services as one of their objectives (the reply of 16 July 2003, Official Report, column 332W refers).

The breakdown is as follows:

Country	Title	Expenditure 2002–03 (£)
Ghana	Health Grant	3,500,000
Malawi	Health SWAP	163,126
Mozambique	Essential Medicines	4,700,000
Tanzania	Health Sector Programme	9,489,992
Zambia	Health SWAP	7,621,863
Bangladesh	SHAPLA[1] WB Time Slicing	5,000,000
Cambodia	Health Sector Support	226,835
Total		30,701,816

[1] Support for Health and Population for the Less Advanced Programme: World Bank Time Slicing.

DFID support for reproductive health is wide ranging. It covers HIV/AIDS programmes, prevention and treatment of sexually transmitted infections and maternal and adolescent health. Reproductive health also encompasses the services for family planning, contraception and childbearing that make an important contribution to increasing women's choice and opportunity and to preventing unplanned or unwanted pregnancy. Family planning services also provide an important opportunity to improve sexual health and in particular to increase women's access to methods that help prevent HIV infection. The £31 million expenditure for 2003–03 cannot therefore be apportioned between HIV/AIDS and Family Planning, as many reproductive health programmes and projects contribute to both objectives (for example through the provision of information on family planning and HIV/AIDS prevention or the provision of condoms).

The figures above include only the DFID contributions to SWAPS. If our other expenditure on Reproductive Health and HIV/AIDS (for example through multilateral organisations) were included the amounts would be considerably higher.

Russian Republics

Angus Robertson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development how much international aid was received directly by the Russian constituent republics of (a) Ingushetia and (b) North Ossetia-Alania in each year since 1997; how much of this was delivered in (i) money and (ii) kind; what the UK's share of aid was in each year; and if he will make a statement. [131327]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: Since 1997, DFID has contributed over £15 million for humanitarian assistance to support refugees and internally displaced people in the North Caucasus (includes Chechnya, North Ossetia, Ingushetia and Dagestan). Our funding is channelled through selected international agencies such as the UN and the International Red Cross.

For 2003–04, DFID has so far approved funds of £1.8 million for humanitarian assistance to support for both refugees and internally displaced people in the North Caucasus.

Since 1997, the EC contribution to the North Caucasus has been euro 111 million.

We do not have a breakdown of the total amount of international aid provided to Ingushetia and North Ossetia-Alania.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development if he will list the major development programmes launched in (a) Ingushetia and (b) North Ossetia-Alania in each year since 1997; how long these programmes have run; what his Department's involvement has been in each of these programmes; and what assessment his Department has made of the impact of each programme. [131328]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The UK's development programme for Russia aims, through its work with Federal Government, to benefit all regions of the country. However we consider that the North Caucasus is a medium term emergency. The security environment doesn't lend itself to developmental programmes. Therefore, the UK's assistance is focused only on humanitarian programmes. The UN agencies and the ICRC do work with the Russian Authorities to try and build capacity in certain areas, which we support.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what assessment his Department has made of the humanitarian situation in (a) North Ossetia-Alania, (b) Ingushetia, (c) the Ferghana Valley and (d) South Ossetia and their (i) direct and (ii) indirect sources; and if he will make a statement. [131329]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The overall humanitarian situation in North Ossetia-Alania and Ingushetia remains acute. People affected by the instability in Chechnya are facing their fifth extremely difficult winter amid rising tensions in the region.

Four years after the resumption of hostilities in the Republic of Chechnya, more than 80,000 internally displaced persons (IDPs) from Chechnya still live in tents or unsuitable shelters in the neighbouring Republic of Ingushetia. In North Ossetia, there are 30,000 Georgian refugees living in poor conditions. In Chechnya, the situation is worse. According to a recent UN report, more than 100,000 of the about 800,000 people living there are still displaced from their homes and surviving indoor conditions.

The UK travel restriction to the North Caucasus prevents DFID from making direct assessments of the humanitarian situation. DFID makes regular missions to Moscow and Georgia to meet with key international organisations and government officials who work in the area. Our humanitarian support to the North Caucasus is channelled through the UN, ICRC and international NGO's.

DFID has made no independent assessment of the humanitarian situation in the Ferghana Valley. The Department's representatives in Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan and Uzbekistan, are in regular contact with the UN organisations active in the Valley as well as with the governments concerned.

In South Ossetia the humanitarian situation remains acute. A de facto government is functioning. There is little rule of law. The area is economically dependent upon smuggled goods from Russia. Local Ossetians are migrating to North Ossetia due to economic hardship and lawlessness. The UN, Organisation for Security and Co-operation for Europe (OSCE), the EU is active in South Ossetia. The UN through its UNOCHA and (formerly the UNHCR) is responsible for humanitarian assessments and aid provision. The EC has participated in the Joint Control Commission (JCC) on South Ossetia since 1991. This quadripartite body (with Georgia, South Ossetia, North Ossetia and Russia) is conducted by the OSCE. The OSCE continues the search for a settlement. The EU provided in 2000 and 2001 Euro 1.045 million to the Georgia Border Guards, aimed at protecting the unarmed OSCE monitors at the border between Georgia and Chechnya. Most International Organisations formerly involved left as the security situation deteriorated.

We are aware of the situation and we have made small contributions through the multilateral organisations and Small Grants Scheme.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development if he will list the major development programmes launched in South Ossetia in each year since 1997; how long these programmes have run; what his Department's involvement has been in each of these programmes; and what assessment his Department has made of the impact of each programme. [131332]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The UK's development programme for Georgia aims to benefit all regions of the country. However the difficulties of working in unresolved conflict situations do not lend themselves to development programmes. The EU has provided through its annual allocations from the 1997 and 1999 budgets a total of Euro 7.5 million to stimulate the peace process between South Ossetia and the Georgian Government.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what the total amount of international aid received directly by the Georgian autonomous region of South Ossetia was in each year since 1997; how much of this was delivered in (a) money and (b) kind; what the United Kingdom's share of aid was in each year; and if he will make a statement. [131331]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: Since the cease-fire agreement concluded in 1992 to bring the fighting to an end, the legal situation over the status of South Ossetia remains grid locked between the Georgian Government and South Ossetia authorities and is unlikely to be resolved in the foreseeable future. We will continue to support the efforts of the international community to bring about a lasting settlement to this situation.

We do not have a breakdown of the total amount of international aid provided to South Ossetia. We do however make small contributions annually through our Small Grants Scheme managed by our embassy in Tbilisi. We have not provided any major assistance to South Ossetia.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's involvement in the United Nations' Ferghana Valley Development Programme; what discussions (a) he and (b) members of his Department have had with representatives of the (i) Tajik, (ii) Turkmen and (iii) Uzbek governments about the United Nations' Ferghana Valley Development Programme; and if he will make a statement. [131330]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The UN Ferghana Valley Development Programme dates back to early 2000, and since then there has been no British involvement. The programme attempts to link the three neighbouring states (Uzbekistan, Kyrgyzstan and Tajikistan) through a number of cross border development initiatives. There has been little progress due to the lack of enthusiasm on the part of the Uzbek Government.

Smoking

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development (1) what discussions he has had with developing countries about health programmes to reduce smoking; and what assessment has been made of the use of UK programmes in developing countries; [131204]

(2) what estimate his Department has made of the healthcare costs associated with the growth in smoking in developing countries; [131205]

(3) what discussions his Department has had with developing countries on (a) using taxation to reduce consumption of tobacco products and (b) developing public education campaigns on the dangers of smoking; [131206]

(4) what measures his Department has taken to educate the public in least developed countries on the dangers of smoking. [131237]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: We do not have direct discussions with or provide support to countries in this area, but work through the World Health Organisation (WHO) and also support the Framework Convention on Tobacco Control. This convention was adopted at the World Health Assembly in May 2003 and has been signed by 56 countries so far, including many developing countries. The convention requires countries that have signed it to implement comprehensive tobacco control programmes and strategies at the national, regional and local levels. These include promoting treatment programmes to help people stop smoking, education to prevent people from starting and measures to prohibit sales of tobacco products to minors. The convention recognises that tax and price measures are an important way of reducing tobacco consumption, particularly in young people, and requires signatories to consider public health objectives when implementing tax and price policies on tobacco products.

This year we plan to transfer a total of £12.5 million to WHO. For the calendar year 2002, WHO spent $4.1 million of its regular budget and $10.4 million of extra-budgetary funds on tobacco-related work, from a total expenditure of $464 million in 2002.

South Asia

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development if he will make a statement on aid programmes funded by the Department in (a) India, (b) Bangladesh and (c) Pakistan in the last five years. [131010]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID's country programme in India is governed by the Country Strategy Paper published in 2000. We run a nationwide programme, which covers the whole of India, and we also have state-level programmes in Andhra Pradesh, Madhya Pradesh, Orissa and West Bengal. Our main partners are the Indian Government; focus state governments and non-governmental organisations. The principal objectives of DFID's work in India under the current strategy are to have partnerships with selected state governments, to support economic reform, services, empowerment of poor, especially minority groups, and better management of the natural and physical environment. We are currently revising our country strategy in India.

In Pakistan we support priorities agreed following reengagement with the Government in 2000. The programme has three objectives: creating economic conditions for poverty reduction; improving health outcomes; and improving education outcomes. In Pakistan too we are preparing a new Country Assistance Plan to support the Government of Pakistan's own Poverty Reduction Strategy due for publication in October 2003. DFID works in Pakistan with a wide range of partners including Government departments and non-government organisations, and closely coordinates its activities with those of other multilateral and bilateral development agencies.

In Bangladesh we work in accordance with our Country Strategy published in 1998. Here too a new County Assistance Plan is about to be published which gives priority to advancing the position of women and girls. The new Country Plan supports the Government of Bangladesh's own national poverty strategy and focuses DFID activity around seven areas of importance: support to the private sector, land transport, maternal mortality, primary education, access to food and water and Governance. DFID works in Bangladesh Government departments and non-government organisations and closely coordinates its activities with those of other multi-lateral and development agencies.

In 2002–03, DFID spent £161 million, £39 million and £77 million in India, Pakistan and Bangladesh respectively.

Southern Africa

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what emergency aid has been provided to southern Africa in recent months. [129444]

Hilary Benn: Since September 2001, DFID has provided approximately £120 million in emergency assistance to the six countries in Southern Africa (Lesotho, Malawi, Mozambique, Swaziland, Zambia and Zimbabwe) that have been most affected by the humanitarian crisis over the past two years. Most of this assistance (approximately £90 million) has been provided to Zimbabwe and Malawi, where needs have been greatest. In addition, we estimate that our contribution to commitments by the European Commission to date is around £26 million.

Since January this year, over £35 million has been spent on supporting continuing humanitarian operations, particularly in Zimbabwe, but also covering Zambia, Malawi, Swaziland and Mozambique. We intend to programme a further £40 million of emergency aid to Zimbabwe this year, building on our existing programme commitments, in response to the serious humanitarian needs there. We, along with the UN and other donors, will ensure that our humanitarian assistance continues to be distributed according to need and without political interference.

Where immediate humanitarian needs have reduced, as we have seen this year in Zambia and Malawi, we have shifted our support to programmes that support recovery from the crisis, including through provision of seeds and fertilisers. In Malawi, some £9.3 million has been committed for these activities—again with the objective of improving food security at the household level and ensuring that safety nets that cover an appropriate mix of cash, food and subsidised inputs, are available for the most vulnerable. We have also provided seeds and fertilisers in Mozambique and Swaziland and responded to UN calls for support to seed fairs in those countries.

Emergency assistance is still needed this year in areas of southern Mozambique, and in Lesotho where the failure of the winter harvest has put more people at risk. We are working to identify where the greatest needs are in these countries and will provide emergency aid to help cover the greatest gaps.

DFID is also supporting the work of the UN Regional Inter-Agency Co-ordination and Support team in Johannesburg, which works to co-ordinate and harmonise UN and NGO efforts across the region. We have provided £2 million of support to this team so far, and are looking to continue this support until the end of the current phase of the UN Consolidated Appeal, which ends in June 2004.

Vietnam

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development if he will make a statement on aid to Vietnam. [131239]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: DFID is finalising a new Country Assistance Plan for Vietnam, which will be published in November. The key objectives of this plan are: more effective, efficient and equitable use of public financial resources; promotion of socially inclusive development and greater accountability of Government to citizens; and support to economic and social transition from a centrally planned economy to a market economy. These objectives will support the Government of Vietnam's own Comprehensive Poverty Reduction and Growth Strategy (CPRGS).

Under the new CAP, DFID's assistance is planned to increase from £26 million in 2003–04 to £60 million in 2005–06. This increase is in response to the Government of Vietnam's success in and continuing commitment to, reducing poverty. The incidence of poverty has halved from 58 per cent. in 1992 to 29 per cent. in 2002.

DFID's current assistance to Vietnam includes supporting the development of primary education, the building and maintenance of rural roads, public financial management reform, state owned enterprise reform, reducing HIV infection, and area based rural development in the Northern Mountains and Central Region. We will continue to work in these areas. We are also directly supporting the Government of Vietnam's reform programme under the CPRGS by providing budget support through the World Bank Poverty Reduction Support Credit. In addition we are supporting the development of the National Assembly, and a project to analyse how market institutions can achieve better development outcomes for the poor. Our assistance is mainly co-financed with other donors.

WTO Meeting (Cancun)

Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of State, Department for International Development what proposals the department has put forward for increasing the importance attributed to protecting the environment in taking forward world trade reform at the World Trade Organisation ministerial meeting in Cancun. [130295]

Mr. Gareth Thomas: The UK, with DTI and DEFRA as the lead departments, has taken a central role in determining the European Union's negotiating position on trade and environment issues. Despite the collapse of Cancun, we will continue to work towards achieving a successful outcome at the WTO and jointly ensuring the implementation of the WSSD Commitments.

One of the WTO trade and environment negotiating mandates is to clarify the relationship between WTO rules and specific trade obligations in Multilateral Environmental Agreements (MEAs). The EU's overall aim is to ensure that these two bodies of international law are mutually supportive. With a view to better informing the WTO debate, at Cancun, the EU proposed that agreement be reached to formalise the observer role of MEAs, UNEP and UNCTAD in the WTO Committee on Trade and Environment Special Sessions. The text under discussion when the Conference collapsed had taken on board the EU view by making clear that MEAs and UN agencies should be given observer status in the Committee on Trade and Environment Special Sessions.

The EU has also been the main driver supporting further work on eco-labelling and increased market access for environmental goods. At Cancun, the EU proposed that agreement should be reached on a new WTO Committee on Trade and Environment work programme on labelling for environmental purposes. However, there was little support for this from other WTO members and at the time of the collapse of the talks, no progress had been made on this issue.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Building Regulations/Standards

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the impact of Part M of the Building Regulations on the design of new housing. [130981]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has recently commissioned research to evaluate the impact of the changes to Part M introduced in 1999. The work is expected to begin before Christmas, and to report in two years time.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidance he has given local authorities to ensure the consistent application of Part M of the Building Regulations by building control officers. [130982]

Phil Hope: Each Part of the Building Regulations consists of a, usually small, number of functional requirements. Guidance on the application of the requirements is provided by a statutory 'Approved Document'. Each such document states that it is intended to provide guidance for some of the more common building situations, but recognises that there may well be alternative ways of achieving compliance with the requirements, and advises builders and developers that "... there is no obligation to adopt any particular solution contained in an Approved Document if you prefer to meet the relevant requirement in some other way."

Every building in its site context is different and there must therefore be room for discretion and adaptation to local circumstances. Nor is it possible in a usable guidance document to illustrate an acceptable solution for the almost infinite variety of building situations. Absolute consistency of application of any part of the Building Regulations is thus neither achievable nor desirable, and reliance must be placed on the professionalism and competence of the building control community.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many instances there have been of enforcement action against builders for breaches of Part M of the Building Regulations in the last three years; and with what results. [130983]

Phil Hope: Responsibility for enforcement of the Building Regulations rests with local authorities. Data on enforcement action are not collected centrally, and could not be provided at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what amendments he proposes to make to Part M of the Building Regulations. [130984]

Phil Hope: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister expects to announce the publication of amendments to Part M of the Building Regulations relating to buildings other than dwellings shortly. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister issued a consultation document on the proposed amendments in November 2002, and officials have since then, with the assistance of the Building Regulations Advisory Committee, been finalising the new Approved Document. The amendments will extend the application of Part M to work to existing buildings, reflect the contents where appropriate of British Standard BS 8300:2001 'Design of buildings and their approaches to meet the needs of disabled people—Code of Practice', and complement the objectives of Part III of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 relating to accessibility of goods, facilities, services and premises.

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will extend the period in which a builder can be sued for poor workmanship. [131305]

Mr. Lammy: I have been asked to reply.

The period within which a civil action must be commenced against a builder for poor workmanship is subject to the Limitation Act 1980 (unless the terms of an individual contract specify otherwise). In July 2002, the Government announced its acceptance in principle of the recommendations for reform of the 1980 Act contained in the Law Commission report "Limitation of Actions", subject to further consideration of certain aspects. Legislation will be introduced when an opportunity arises.

The Commission proposed a core limitation regime that would apply to the majority of claims for a remedy for a wrong or the enforcement of a right. In broad terms, a claim would have to be brought within a primary limitation period of three years from the date on which the claimant knows (or ought reasonably to know) the facts giving rise to the claim, the identity of the defendant, and that any injury, loss or damage was significant. No claim could be brought after the expiry of a 10-year "longstop" period, which normally would run from the date on which the cause of action arose. At present in a simple contract claim the limitation period is six years from the date the cause of action arose.

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what representations he has received in the last 12 months on the buildmark warranty scheme operated by the National House-Building Council. [131306]

Phil Hope: Over the last 12 months, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has received about 50 letters from hon. Members and from members of the public raising points about the Buildmark warranty scheme. This is a non-statutory scheme ran by the National House Building Council (NHBC), which is an independent company, limited by guarantee. Officials from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister inform NHBC senior management of the key points raised in correspondence, to assist them in their monitoring of the scheme.

Compulsory Purchase Orders

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to amend the law regarding compulsory purchase orders. [130987]

Keith Hill: Part 7 of the Planning and Compulsory Purchase Bill, currently before Parliament, includes provisions to amend the planning compulsory purchase power at section 226 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 and to introduce a new loss payment to enhance compulsory purchase compensation. A further six amendments to the Bill were tabled on 17 September 2003 to provide for improvements to compulsory purchase procedures and compensation arrangements. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will consult shortly on the details of a further proposed amendment to the Bill relating to advance payments of compensation for land subject to mortgage.

The Law Commission is also considering how best to codify, consolidate and modernise the existing complex and convoluted legislative base, and is expected to produce its final recommendations in January 2004.

Consultancy Contracts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the five highest value consultancy contracts relating to (a) council house privatisation and (b) stock transfer for proposals; and what payments have been in each case in each of the last three years. [130895]

Keith Hill: Information on costs relating to Best Value studies, decent home delivery option appraisals or housing transfer advice is not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether his Department maintains a recommended list of consultants to carry out (a) Best Value studies and (b) council house privatisation studies. [130946]

Keith Hill: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not maintain lists of consultants to carry out Best Value studies, decent home delivery option appraisals or housing transfer advice.

Domestic Violence

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what action his Department is taking to help victims of domestic violence. [129449]

Yvette Cooper: Tackling domestic violence, and supporting those who are victims of domestic violence, is taken very seriously across Government.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister announced at the end of last year a £7 million capital investment programme through the Housing Corporation to extend and renovate the national network of women's refuges in England. Initial allocations for 2003–04 were agreed in conjunction with the Housing Corporation in March this year and it is hoped that further schemes will be supported in the next two years.

The Supporting People programme, which begins on 1 April, will put in place a new integrated policy and funding framework for housing-related support services, including those for people experiencing domestic violence. Current annual expenditure is £34 million for a total of 5,000 places. Local authorities have now submitted their shadow Supporting People strategies. These are currently being analysed and will provide valuable data on the supply of refuge and support services for people experiencing domestic violence, so helping to inform and direct future action.

Supporting People guides have also been issued on addressing the accommodation and support needs of households experiencing domestic violence; and two dedicated co-ordinators are working with providers and local authorities to ensure that the sector is prepared for the new programme.

In July 2002, the main homelessness provisions of the Homelessness Act 2002 and the Homelessness (Priority Need for Accommodation) (England) Order 2002 were brought into force. These required local housing authorities to take a more strategic approach to preventing and tackling homelessness, placed stronger duties on authorities to help homeless people, and extended the groups of homeless applicants who have a priority need for accommodation, including, among others, people vulnerable as a result of fleeing their home because of violence. The Homelessness Directorate has allocated £70 million in 2003–04 to local authorities and other agencies to help them address homelessness. This will include some support for domestic violence schemes where local authorities have identified this as a priority.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister in partnership with Comic Relief, plans to support the introduction of a national freephone helpline, linked to a 'refuges online' database to assist victims of domestic violence which it is hoped will be operational before the end of the year.

Euro

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what cumulative spending by all local authorities has been in each year in preparing for United Kingdom entry to the euro; how much he plans to allocate for spending by all local authorities on preparations for United Kingdom entry to the euro for each year from the current financial year up to and including 2005–06; and what estimates he has made of the cumulative total costs to all local authorities of changeover to the European Single Currency. [131605]

Mr. Raynsford: Details of public sector expenditure to date on changeover planning were included in the third outline National Changeover Plan, published on 9 June 2003. Copies of the document are available in the Library of the House.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister expects no significant costs to local authorities at this stage and there are no plans for additional allocation of funds. The guidance to local authorities, which was released on 17 June, advises them to undertake sensible risk management and business planning for the possibility of a euro changeover. All the evidence from the euro area suggests that such early planning can significantly reduce costs of any changeover.

In the event of any changeover, the total cost to local authorities will depend upon the circumstances and approach taken by individual councils. The Government would look with local authorities at the pressures they face.

High Hedges

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to propose legislation to deal with fast-growing high hedges; and if he will make a statement. [130881]

Keith Hill: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 17 September 2003, Official Report, columns 859–60.

Homelessness

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) how many families have claimed to be homeless in (a) Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) the North East and (d) England, in each year since 1997; [128711]

(2) how many people were homeless in (a) the Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) the North East and (d) England, in each year since 1997. [128714]

Yvette Cooper: Information collected is in respect of households, rather than persons, and is not available below local authority level. The available information reported by South Tyneside MBC, and all councils comprising the North East region and nationally is presented as follows. The term "homelessness acceptances" means those applicants whom a local housing authority have accepted as being eligible for assistance, homeless through no fault of their own and who have a priority need for accommodation. The priority need categories were extended by Order in July 2002 to broaden the safety net available for homeless people.

	Homelessness Decisions			Homelessness Acceptances
	South Tyneside	North East Region	England	South Tyneside	North East Region	England
1997	144	12,800	246,170	126	4,420	102,000
1998	[1]206	11,730	250,960	[1]166	4,370	104,630
1999	266	12,440	249,110	212	4,830	105,370
2000	246	12,100	252,290	201	5,060	111,340
2001	370	12,320	260,170	306	5,470	118,560
2002	430	14,210	273,480	364	6,420	124,880

[1] South Tyneside reported in only three quarters of 1998.

Notes:

1. Decisions include those where applicant household was found to be ineligible for assistance under the homelessness provisions of housing legislation.
2. Figures for the North East and England include estimates for missing data, and have been rounded to the nearest 10.
3. Acceptances refers to households found to be eligible, unintentionally homeless and in priority need.

Source:

Office of the Deputy Prime Minister P1(E) quarterly housing activity returns

Housing

Bob Russell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 15 September, ref 129306, for what reasons the allocation of additional funds for additional investment in local authority housing stock under the Sustainable Communities Plan did not include the option for a local authority to retain ownership and democratic control. [131012]

Keith Hill: The Government believes that the benefit from additional resources will be maximised if the landlord function is separated from the authorities broader strategic functions. The three options offering additional investment—stock transfer, Private Finance Initiative (PFI) and Arms Length Management Organisation (ALMOs)—all provide this.

They also ensure that tenants have a greater role in the future management of their homes.

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will grant the Rowner housing estate in Gosport eligibility for his schemes for special support. [128156]

Keith Hill: The Government Office for the South East is currently working with Gosport's Local Strategic Partnership and Hampshire county council to help resolve the key issues around the Rowner estate. At present the partnership is in its infancy and as such is debating proposals to tackle the root causes of the problems surrounding the Rowner estate. The Government Office is in a position to provide advice during this process to the Local Strategic Partnership and Hampshire county council on any schemes that the Rowner estate may be eligible for.

Local Government

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will estimate the level of area cost adjustment for each local authority in the West Midland region for the 2003–04 financial year using average pay levels for the West Midland region as a basis. [131360]

Mr. Raynsford: The table gives the area cost adjustment (ACA) values calculated for each upper tier authority in the West Midlands region, relative to the West Midlands average. Because we no longer use average wages as the basis of the ACA, the figures are relative to the average labour cost adjustment for the West Midlands region.

	ACA
Authority	Education	PSS: children and younger adults	PSS: older people	Police	Fire	Highway maintenance	EPCS
Shropshire	0.970	0.972	0.968	0.968	0.968	0.976	0.976
Telford and Wrekin	0.970	0.972	0.969	0.969	0.969	0.976	0.976
Staffordshire	0.981	0.983	0.980	0.980	0.980	0.985	0.985
Stoke-on-Trent	0.976	0.977	0.974	0.974	0.974	0.980	0.980
Herefordshire	0.964	0.966	0.962	0.962	0.962	0.971	0.971
Worcestershire	0.986	0.987	0.985	0.985	0.985	0.988	0.988
Warwickshire	1.029	1.029	1.032	1.035	1.036	1.031	1.031
Wolverhampton	0.995	0.997	0.996	0.999	1.000	1.003	1.003
Walsall	0.972	0.976	0.971	0.974	0.975	0.984	0.984
Dudley	0.979	0.982	0.979	0.982	0.983	0.990	0.990
Sandwell	0.991	0.993	0.991	0.994	0.995	0.999	1.000
Solihull	1.055	1.053	1.059	1.062	1.063	1.051	1.052
Coventry	1.030	1.030	1.033	1.036	1.037	1.031	1.032
Birmingham	1.032	1.032	1.035	1.038	1.039	1.033	1.033

Note:
ACA factors estimated relative to the West Midlands average

There are two parts to the ACA: the labour cost adjustment (LCA) and the rates cost adjustment (RCA). To produce the ACA factors calculated in the table, individual LCA factors have been calculated for each upper tier authority in the West Midlands. These factors have been rebased so that they are relative to the West Midlands regional average and used in the above ACA calculation.

As a result, these ACA figures are not directly comparable to the current ACA figures because the West Midlands region is not used as the basis for ACA calculations. No lower limit is applied to the LCA figures calculated in the table, in the interest of providing illustrative figures for every authority.

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the impact of regional pay in public services upon the area cost adjustment used in revenue support grant calculations. [131368]

Mr. Raynsford: In his Budget statement, the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced that the Government would be giving increased emphasis to the regional and local elements of public sector pay. As a first and immediate step, the terms of reference or remit letters of the Pay Review Bodies have been modified to require them to have regard to regional/local labour markets and their effects on recruitment and retention. The ability to recruit and retain staff in every location is crucial to high quality public services. Staff shortages, resulting from an inability to recruit and retain staff with the requisite skills in the right numbers in specific locations, are currently concentrated in certain areas, mainly but not exclusively in parts of London and the south-east. A stronger local and regional element to pay is one important tool to address these issues.

The area cost adjustment already directs grant to areas with higher wages in recognition of the increased recruitment and retention cost experienced there. Any effect of regional public service pay will be reflected in the pay cost evidence that we use in calculating the area cost adjustment.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many prosecutions have taken place using the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1982; and if he will make a statement. [128798]

Ms Blears: I have been asked to reply.

Persons proceeded against under the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1982 cannot be separately identified on the Home Office Court Proceedings database.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, what recent estimates he has made on the costs of re-organising local government in the (a) North West, (b) North East and (c) Yorkshire and Humberside as a part of his proposals to set up regional assemblies. [131678]

Mr. Raynsford: The cost of re-organising local government in the three regions will be dependent on the extent of the changes recommended by the Boundary Committee for England and subsequent decisions made by the newly created authorities about their organisational structure and levels of service provision.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much central government funding was allocated to each local authority in recognition of residents receiving (a) disability living allowance, (b) attendance allowance and (c) minimum income guarantee in the latest year for which figures are available. [130414]

Yvette Cooper: Elderly people in receipt of disability living allowance (DLA) and attendance allowance are taken into account in the older people social services formula spending share, although it is not possible to provide a detailed breakdown of how much money local authorities receive as a direct result of this.

Local housing authorities have a statutory duty to offer means tested disabled facilities grants (DFGs) to eligible applicants who require adaptations to help them live independently in their own homes. The grants are available to homeowners and tenants in both the private and social rented sectors.

The Government meets 60 per cent. of local authority expenditure incurred on DFGs, with the remaining 40 per cent. being met from the authority's own resources. The budget for this grant for English authorities in 2003–04 is £99 million compared with £88 million in 2002–03 and £56 million in 1997–98. The allocation of these resources to local housing authorities takes into account the numbers of people claiming DLA and attendance allowance within each local authority.

A table showing each English local housing authority's share of DFG resources from the national budget for 2003–04 is available in the Libraries of the House.

Planning

Bob Russell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what procedures are open to residents to seek an independent determination of planning applications involving departure from the local plan where the local authority is both the land owner and the planning authority; and if he will make a statement. [131609]

Keith Hill: The procedures dealing with development undertaken by local authorities are set out in the Town and Country Planning General Regulations 1992. Guidance on these regulations is given in Department of Environment (DOE) Circular 19/92. The general principle underlying these regulations is that the local planning authorities must make planning applications in the same way as any other person and must follow the same procedures as would be applicable to everyone.

Any local authority development proposals or development on authority owned land which are not in accordance with the provisions of the local development plan, must also be notified to my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister so that he can consider whether to "call in" the application for his own determination. If consent is granted for a development undertaken by a local planning authority, the only recourse remaining to any aggrieved third party is to apply for judicial review if they believe the decision was wrong in law or to ask the Local Government Ombudsman to investigate if they consider there has been maladministration by the local authority.

Property Rentals

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent discussions he has had with groups representing tenants about the feasibility of establishing a Government-sponsored bond scheme for those renting property. [131128]

Keith Hill: Later this year the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister plan to hold a seminar between officials and representatives of groups with an interest in tenancy deposits (including tenants), to discuss the possibility of legislative measures for deposit handling in the context of the Law Commission's proposals for tenure review. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will continue to consult interested parties on any further proposals.

Regional Assemblies

Joyce Quin: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) on what basis the assessment was made in the White Paper, "Your Region, Your Choice", that elected regional assemblies needed at least 25 members in order to provide members for the executive while retaining sufficient backbench members for effective scrutiny but set an upper limit of 35 members for assemblies; [131545]

(2) on what basis the assessment was made in the White Paper, "Your Region, Your Choice", that for elected regional assemblies to be representative of different political views and different parts of a region 25 members was the minimum needed to secure a representative assembly using proportional representation. [131546]

Mr. Raynsford: Elected regional assemblies will be strategic bodies with an efficient and focused membership of between 25 and 35 elected members. They will have a similar role to that of the Greater London Authority, which has a Mayor and 25 assembly Members.

The Government expects that elected regional assemblies will have an executive of at least three members and a maximum of six, including the leader. The Government believes that this leaves a sufficient number of members to exercise the scrutiny function.

Approximately two thirds of elected members will be constituency members, the other third will be regional members elected from a regional list. This form of proportional representation will ensure that the assembly is representative of the region. Fewer than 25 members would make it difficult to reflect the vote proportionately. Membership will be larger where population is greater up to a maximum of 35. Any larger size would risk compromising the strategic role of Elected Regional Assemblies and could cause confusion between this and the separate representative and service delivery role of local authorities. Elected regional assemblies will also be expected to involve regional stakeholders in their work, which will help ensure that different views are taken into account.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To as the Deputy Prime Minister, if he will place in the Library the responses he received to the soundings exercise to gauge opinion on the proposed regional assemblies. [131679]

Mr. Raynsford: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister announced on 16 June that copies of the summary document "Your Region, Your Say" were available in the Libraries of both Houses, along with copies of the 1,333 responses from representative organisations. Copies of the 7,132 responses from individuals are held by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and can be viewed on request, except for those that requested that their responses be held in confidence.

Revenue Support Grant

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what base year was used to calculate the level of visitor numbers when setting the Revenue Support Grant for 2003–04. [130897]

Mr. Raynsford: The 2003–04 Local Government Finance Settlement included estimates of day visitors and overnight visitors.

The estimates of day visitors were based on research using information from the Leisure Day Visits Survey 1988–89, 1991 Census, 1991 Survey of Visits to Tourist Attractions, 1991 Census of Employment and other information about urban areas, National Parks, areas of outstanding natural beauty and official bathing beaches. The information used was that available to the Secretary of State for National Heritage on 1 November 1993.

The estimates of overnight visitors were generally based on information from the United Kingdom Tourism Surveys (1993 to 2001), for domestic visitors; and from the International Passenger Surveys (1999 to 2001) and the 1991 Census for foreign visitors.

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he made of visitor numbers to Worcester City when calculating the Revenue Support Grant for 2003–04. [130898]

Mr. Raynsford: The figure used in the calculation of the 2003–04 Local Government Finance Settlement for the annual number of day visitors to Worcester City was 2,188,000. Overnight visitors are not included in the calculation for district councils.

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he next plans to assess visitor numbers used in the Revenue Support Grant allocation. [130899]

Mr. Raynsford: A review of the visitor indicators used in the calculation of Formula Spending Shares is planned to commence early in 2004.

The 2003–04 Local Government Finance Settlement saw the introduction of a new formula. To give some stability, it was announced there would be no further Formula Spending Share formula changes until 2006–07 at the earliest, except where there are changes in the functions of councils, or the financing of particular services. During this time data will continue to be updated.

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of (a) the night-time economy and (b) visitor numbers for county towns when setting the Revenue Support Grant. [130900]

Mr. Raynsford: Overnight visitors to an area are included in the calculations for the Police and Highway Maintenance Formula Spending Shares. Day visitors are included in calculations for the Police, Highway Maintenance and Environmental, Protective and Cultural Services Formula Spending Share.

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether he will use 2001 census data to determine country of birth indicators when allocating revenue support grants in 2004–05. [130902]

Mr. Raynsford: Data from the 1991 census will be used to determine the country of birth indicators in the calculation of the 2004–05 Local Government Finance Settlement.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Rights of Way

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, what steps have been taken to assess whether any land held by the Church of England may be suitable for dedicating for access under section 16 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000. [131573]

Mr. Bell: No such assessment has been made. The Commissioners are committed to protecting public rights of way over their land and ensuring that such rights are respected. Any proposals for additional rights that were compatible with the Commissioners' trustee obligations and had no adverse effect on the land or tenants would be looked at on their merits.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Organ Donors

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs if he will amend the Electoral Registration form to allow persons to indicate whether they are willing to be organ donors. [130989]

Mr. Leslie: The framework governing the purposes for which the electoral registration form and the electoral register may be used, which was introduced last year after lengthy discussion, complies with data protection and human rights legislation, and my Department has no plans to amend the electoral registration form to allow it to be used for additional purposes. We concur with the view of the independent Electoral Commission that additional material unrelated to electoral issues should not normally be included with registration forms.

Electoral Register

Mr. Love: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what action he is taking to tackle the problem of citizens disappearing from the electoral register; and what assistance he gives local authorities. [131423]

Mr. Leslie: The Representation of the People (England and Wales) Regulations 2001 introduced in February 2001 a number of changes to voter registration procedures, including 'rolling registration', aimed both at making it easier to register to vote and at achieving more accurate and up to date electoral registers. The independent Electoral Commission is to undertake research into the effects of the changes to registration procedures in order to identify the extent of under registration, which the Government will consider carefully. The Electoral Commission is responsible for offering advice and guidance to electoral registration officers on these and other matters and will continue to encourage registration through various promotional activities.

Mr. Love: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what obligations local authorities have to ensure UK citizens remain on the electoral register. [131424]

Mr. Leslie: Electoral Registration Officers, appointed by local authorities, are required to compile and maintain accurate electoral registers. They must register all eligible persons and have powers to seek information from any person who they consider is eligible to be registered. It is an offence for any person to fail to comply with a request for information from, or to give false information to, an Electoral Registration Officer.

Asbestos

Dr. Cable: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much has been spent by his Department and its agencies on (a) asbestos surveys and (b) the management and removal of asbestos since 1 January 2001; and what budget is available to (i) commission asbestos surveys and (ii) manage and remove asbestos from buildings in (A) 2003 and (B) 2004. [130914]

Mr. Lammy: My Department's HQ Estate has spent £5,801 on asbestos surveys and £10,396 on the management and removal of asbestos since 2001. Funding for commissioning surveys and the management and removal of asbestos from the estate in 2003 and 2004 will be available from existing maintenance budgets.

The Court Service is unable to provide the information and figures without incurring disproportionate costs. They are preparing to comply with the 2004 duty by identifying where in buildings asbestos is present, assessing the risk and, depending on its condition and whether it is likely to be disturbed, taking action to manage the risk.

Catherine Meyer

Keith Vaz: To ask the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what plans he has to make representations to the Chief Justice of Germany concerning the case of Catherine Meyer. [131740]

Mr. Lammy: None.

Western Circuit

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs (1) who was consulted about the proposal to remove Hampshire from the Western Circuit; when the decision will be made; and if he will make a statement; [129035]

(2) what representations he has received on the proposal to remove Hampshire from the Western Circuit; [129043]

(3) what factors underlay the proposal to (a) remove Hampshire from the Western Circuit and (b) include it in a South Eastern tier; and if he will make a statement. [129044]

Mr. Key: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs (1) what assessment he has made of the impact on the Western Circuit of his proposal to move Winchester Crown Court into the South Eastern Circuit; [129017]

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact of his proposal to move Winchester Crown Court into the South Eastern Circuit on the administration of justice in the Salisbury Constituency; [129018]

(3) what representations he has received from the judiciary about his proposal to remove Winchester Crown Court into the South Eastern Circuit; [129019]

(4) what consultation he proposes to hold with hon. Members for constituencies in (a) Wiltshire and (b) Dorset about his proposals to remove Winchester Crown Court from the Western to the South Eastern Circuit; [129020]

(5) where people from the Salisbury Constituency charged with (a) murder, (b) manslaughter and (c) attempted murder will be sent for trial if Winchester Crown Court is removed to the South Eastern Circuit. [129021]

Mr. Leslie: The Courts Bill, which is currently before Parliament, makes provisions that will allow the Government to replace the existing 42 magistrates courts committees and the Court Service with a single executive agency, responsible for the administration of all the courts below the House of Lords. No date has yet been set for the establishment of the new unified courts agency although it will not be before April 2005.

The unified courts agency will be an entirely new organisation, twice the size of either of the two services that will be subsumed within it. The Secretary of State and I have given close consideration to the regional management structure for the agency and what the boundaries of those regions should be. In this context, we paid careful attention to the "Modernising Government" White Paper of March 1999. This sets out the Government's policy that, wherever possible, the boundaries of government departments and public bodies at regional level should coincide with those of the Government Offices for the Regions. This commitment was repeated in the White Paper "Your Region, Your Choice" in May 2002.

Since May 2003 the Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Pontefract and Castleford (Yvette Cooper), officials from the Department for Constitutional Affairs and I have held meetings with the senior judiciary, representatives of the General Council of the Bar, and judges and barristers from the Western Circuit to discuss the structure of the new agency and in particular how the area currently covered by the Western Circuit should fit within that. Written submissions from judges and barristers have also been received on the subject.

On 31 July 2003, the Secretary of State and I announced our decision that, at local level, the unified courts agency would have 42 management units coterminous with local government boundaries. This is in line with other criminal justice agencies such as the Police Authorities, Crown Prosecution Service and the Probation Service. There will also be seven regions.

The boundaries of these regions will be coterminous with those of the Government Offices for the Regions, with two exceptions. The Secretary of State and I have decided that the Cheshire management unit should be linked with the Wales region for the time being but that we want to review this in 2006–07 as part of a general post implementation review of the agency's working arrangements. We have asked for further work to be undertaken before deciding whether to align the Hampshire unit with the South East or South West regions. This work will cover what the impact of including Hampshire within the South East region would be on the administration of justice throughout the current Western Circuit and in particular whether there would be a need to change the way in which cases are handled in Wiltshire, Dorset and Hampshire. This will inform our decision, which we intend to take by 31 October 2003. I would be happy to discuss this matter with hon. Members representing constituencies in those counties.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what plans he has for redeployment of members of his Department out of London and the south east. [125361]

Mr. Lammy: The scope for relocating Government activity is being considered by Sir Michael Lyons. His independent review was announced in the Chancellor's Budget statement on 9 April.

Details of the review, including the consultation launched on 19 June, can be found on the HM Treasury website at www.hm-treasury.gov.uk. Sir Michael will report his findings on the scope for relocating Departments and other public sector bodies before the end of the year.

Currently, 11,315 DCA staff (out of a total of 13,455) are either based in regional locations or are in front-line customer facing roles in London and the south east. We are, in light of the Sir Michael Lyons exercise, reviewing the need for continuing to locate staff in London and the south east.

Domestic Violence

Vera Baird: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs (1) when the new forms, devised by the Safety Stakeholder Group of his Department, screening Children's Act cases for domestic violence will be brought into use; and what steps are being taken prior to the forms' introduction to ensure that relevant issues of domestic violence are brought to the attention of the court; [130516]

(2) what factors have influenced the date of the introduction of the new domestic violence forms for use in Children Act 1989 cases. [130656]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 16 September 2003]: I have been asked to reply.

We want to encourage contact between children and their non-resident parent where it is in the best interests of the child and safe for all family members. We encourage parents who are divorcing or separating to agree contact arrangements for their children. Most parents do agree such arrangements. Where the courts are asked to intervene, the Children Act 1989 makes the welfare of the child its paramount concern. The courts are required to consider any harm a child has suffered or is at risk of suffering when determining what, if any, contact order to make. The court is also obliged to make a finding of fact in any case involving allegations of violence. The court must determine whether or not the alleged violence has occurred and, if so, its impact on the child. This obligation is set out in best practice guidelines issued by the Children Act Sub-Committee to the Lord Chancellor's Advisory Board on Family Law in spring 2001. The impact of these guidelines is being evaluated.

The court may attach supervisory conditions to an order for contact that may be for indirect rather than direct contact. We are providing £2.5 million over the next three years from the Children's Fund to extend the provision of supervised contact.

Section 120 of the Adoption and Children Act 2002 amended the Children Act 1989 to make it clear that when a court is considering whether a child has suffered or is likely to suffer harm, this harm includes harm a child may suffer as a result of witnessing the ill-treatment of another person. In addition the Safety Stakeholder Group has suggested revisions to the court forms used in applications for residence, contact, specific issues and prohibited steps to highlight allegations of domestic violence. This would enable domestic violence to be raised right at the beginning of proceedings and enable the judge more effectively to determine whether, and in what terms, any order should be made on the basis of all the available facts. The revised definition of harm and the changes to the court forms to highlight domestic violence will be implemented as soon as the necessary resources are identified.

Ecclesiastical Appointments

Mr. Beith: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs for what reason his powers of appointment to ecclesiastical livings referred to in paragraph 37 of the Consultation Paper on Reforming the Office of Lord Chancellor are described as the appointment of priests, but not to the appointment of clerks in holy orders, including deacons. [131824]

Mr. Leslie: A "Clerk in Holy Orders" is a generic designation, which covers those orders recognised by the Church of England, of which priests are one. The Lord Chancellor only appoints priests to those posts under his patronage.

Ethnic Minorities

Keith Vaz: To ask the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many ethnic minorities there are in each grade in his Department. [131739]

Mr. Lammy: The number of staff of minority ethnic origin by responsibility level is set out in the table below.

Ethnic Origin of Permanent Staff in the Department for Constitutional Affairs (including the Court Service and the Public Guardianship Office) by Responsibility Level as at 31 August 2003

Grade equivalent	Ethnic minority staff	White staff	Not known	Total	Ethnic minority as percentage of known ethnic origin
AA/AO	660	4,326	2,442	7,429	13.2
EO	333	1,763	789	2,885	15.9
HEO/SEO	131	1,193	459	1,783	9.9
Grade 6/7	26	364	179	569	6.7
SCS	0	81	36	117	0
Total	1,150	7,727	3,906	12,783	13

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs (1) what research he has undertaken to assess the implications of the ending of the free legal advice and representation service to ethnic minorities; and if he will make a statement; [128328]

(2) what factors underlay the decision to end the free legal advice and representation service to ethnic minorities; what the benefits are of the changes he is proposing; and if he will make a statement. [128329]

Mr. Lammy: I have assumed that the hon. Member is referring to the effect on the services currently provided to ethnic minority clients by the Immigration Advisory Service (IAS), following the proposed transfer of funding from the Home Office to the Legal Services Commission.

The terms of the contract that will be awarded to the IAS following the transfer of funding from the Home Office to the Legal Services Commission have yet to be finalised. Ministers will write to the IAS in the near future, once the position is clearer.

Fine Defaulting

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what measures have been taken to prevent people defaulting on court-imposed fines. [130771]

Mr. Leslie: I refer the hon. Gentlemen to the Written Ministerial Statement I gave on 25 June 2003, Official Report, column 40WS in respect of fine enforcement.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many and what value of court-imposed fines were defaulted on in (a) Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) Tyne and Wear and (d) the UK in each year since 1997. [130772]

Mr. Leslie: The data are not available in the form requested.

Magistrates' Court Committees (MCCs) have a responsibility to collect a range of debts imposed by both the magistrates courts and the crown court. Debt collected not only includes fines but also fees, compensation, confiscation orders, legal aid contributions and some maintenance orders. It is not yet possible to separate out only the fines from the total and thus it is also not possible to report on the number or the value of court imposed fines that were defaulted on.

The available data illustrating the total value of arrears outstanding at relevant Courthouse, Northumbria MCC and national are as follows.

Closing arrears totals[1]

£

Courthouse/area	1999–2000[2]	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03
Gateshead	n/a	n/a	461,028.08	439,039.30
Newcastle upon Tyne	563,330.36	589,787.61	979,945.41	967,089.08
North Tyneside	366,322.00	454,551.00	613,469.00	587,985.00
Sunderland	n/a	502,039.19	600,256.41	607,341.86
South Tyneside	169,930.30	181,144.84	270,283.70	358,126.63
Northumbria MCC[3]	2,008,365	2,763,505	3,201,597	3,157,655
England and Wales	227,361,076	225,908,941	246,481,521	276,870,306

[1] The amount of the 'closing balance owed' that is in arrears.
[2] Current information collection commenced in 1999–2000 and data is not available prior to that year.
[3] To note: this data is incomplete, it does not include information on Houghton Le Spring.

Food Expenditure

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much has been spent on food by his Department and by each of the agencies for which it is responsible in 2002–03; what proportion of that food by value was produced in the United Kingdom; what guidance he has issued to encourage the procurement of home-produced food; and if he will make a statement. [129370]

Mr. Lammy: The majority of food is provided under catering service contracts with commercial suppliers, in addition the Department buys some food directly.

Expenditure on catering service contracts in 2002–03 amounted to £2,093,265, the amount for food bought directly for the same period was £377,209.

Information available for DCA HQ indicates that on average 52 per cent. of the food bought directly was produced in the UK. For food provided under catering service contracts, dependent on the type of product and time of year this proportion varies from 25 per cent. to 100 per cent.

DCA is working with DEFRA to implement their guidance on local sourcing and has developed an action plan with our current catering service providers to increase the proportion of local and UK produce purchased.

Immigration Advisory Service

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what free legal representation will be available to those refused visas by overseas posts when funding is withdrawn from the Immigration Advisory Service. [128327]

Mr. Lammy: The terms of the contract that will be awarded to the Immigration Advisory Service (IAS) following the transfer of funding from the Home Office to the Legal Services Commission have yet to be finalised. Ministers will write to the IAS in the near future, once the position is clearer.

Judges' Lodgings

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs if he will list for each judges' lodgings in each of the last four years (a) their total cost, (b) the number of nights they were used by judges, (c) the number of staff employed, (d) whether it is freehold and (e) in relation to (d) (i) the capital value if freehold and (ii) its surrender value if leasehold. [123202]

Mr. Leslie [holding answer 2 July 2003]: The information requested has been set out in the following tables. The individual capital values of judges' lodgings have not been provided as they are considered to be commercially confidential. The disclosure of individual property values could prejudice the Department's negotiating position when progressing any plans to rationalise the lodgings estate. The information is withheld under exemption 7 of the Code (relating to effective management and operations of the public service). No data are available for leasehold and license properties.

Expenditure for each judge's lodgings, for the years 1999–2003 inclusive

Lodging	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03
Birmingham	356,736.17	405,865.43	415,705.55	432,874.74
Leicester	40,964.94	50,432.89	44,928.71	91,569.11
Lincoln	35,075.36	39,000.34	38,385.96	42,885.14
Northampton	25,031.50	18,109.32	30,622.87	17,472.17
Nottingham	189,056.39	218,144.54	246,113.20	250,807.08
Stafford	104,226.10	137,966.93	88,366.49	99,057.55
Warwick	9,792.75	235.00	4,827.92	0
Worcester	24,001.84	33,214.04	55,280.08	31,991.60
Leeds	289,833.69	376,933.30	316,445.18	319,626.98
Pawsworth	331,201.69	430,176.19	326,003.36	305,022.17
Sheffield	322,359.72	291,088.99	242,090.17	256,479.49
Temporary judge's lodgings (Hull)	0.00	14,112.24	27,053.68	12,515.76
Carlisle	35,784.61	34,554.58	31,239.93	22,821.63
Liverpool	291,920.72	233,721.22	274,731.19	235,575.37
Manchester	340,661.18	448,365.96	382,005.97	339,810.76
Preston	213,045.95	214,021.46	223,802.25	225,748.93
Chelmsford	105,494.41	107,853.64	114,388.17	138,508.71
Lewes	142,912.21	178,327.11	159,481.23	147,923.35
Temporary judge's lodgings (Lewes)	0	0	0	22,192.13
Maidstone	185,689.18	224,916.27	206,906.43	188,572.83
Norwich	124,637.02	186,917.83	152,954.05	149,283.82
Oxford	59,168.85	42,878.64	38,768.96	33,449.34
Reading	112,420.32	123,004.54	182,071.19	169,882.14
St. Albans	216,451.08	291,011.19	224,267.65	258,149.67
Caernarfon	13,771.03	14,652.72	21,989.96	10,482.15
Cardiff	235,173.88	317,177.84	286,408.24	235,232.72
Chester	197,999.40	268,956.26	234,009.87	202,777.96
Mold	46,604.57	48,145.87	67,136.40	0
Swansea	182,186.78	213,549.28	199,587.93	177,590.17
Bristol	213,888.24	213,776.82	209,010.69	242,817.41
Exeter	46,945.43	39,512.79	64,960.49	65,923.56
Plymouth	16,856.05	17,628.52	15,537.34	18,527.92
Truro	19,967.87	19,647.59	20,637.26	14,123.77
Winchester	255,824.13	301,791.48	325,776.83	295,237.96
	4,785,683.07	5,555,690.83	5,271,495.20	5,054,934.09

Number of judge nights each judges' lodgings was used for the period 1999–2003

Lodging	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03
Birmingham	620	575	560	717
Leicester	62	53	73	109
Lincoln	42	46	55	48
Northampton	23	20	40	17
Nottingham	201	239	263	313
Stafford	146	144	207	161
Warwick	38	0	30	0
Worcester	29	40	41	35
Leeds	509	549	599	576
Plawsworth	554	590	496	394
Sheffield	230	256	303	231
Temporary judge's lodgings (Hull)	0	45	90	40
Carlisle	59	60	84	35
Liverpool	529	457	491	518
Manchester	492	635	581	659
Preston	274	218	277	348
Chelmsford	151	69	145	142
Lewes	120	125	60	42
Temporary judge's lodgings (Lewes)	0	0	0	38
Maidstone	120	120	110	81
Norwich	130	125	145	120
Oxford	72	30	40	24
Reading	110	80	131	129
St. Albans	165	230	95	135
Caernarfon	13	16	26	10
Cardiff	331	426	311	249
Chester	198	199	188	206
Mold	23	20	8	0
Swansea	147	190	190	145
Bristol	323	235	229	267
Exeter	73	91	93	55
Plymouth	15	25	18	30
Truro	20	30	40	23
Winchester	370	330	224	300
	6,189	6,268	6,243	6,197

Number of staff employed at each judges' lodgings during the period 1999–2003

Lodging	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03
Birmingham	8	10	10	6
Leicester	—	—	—	—
Lincoln	—	—	—	—
Northampton	—	—	—	—
Nottingham	6	6	6	4
Stafford	—	—	—	—
Warwick	—	—	—	—
Worcester	—	—	—	—
Leeds	10	10	10	7
Plawsworth	7	7	7	7
Sheffield	6	6	6	6
Temporary judges' lodgings (Hull)	—	—	—	—
Carlisle	—	—	—	—
Liverpool	7	7	7	7
Manchester	9	9	7	7
Preston	6	6	5	5
Chelmsford	—	—	—	—
Lewes	4	4	3	3
Temporary judges' lodgings (Lewes)	0	0	0	—
Maidstone	4	4	5	5
Norwich	5	5	5	5
Oxford	5	5	5	5
Reading	4	4	4	2
St Albans	4	4	4	2
Caernarfon	—	—	—	—
Cardiff	6	6	6	5
Chester	5	3	4	4
Mold	3	3	3	—
Swansea	4	4	4	2
Bristol	7	5	4	4
Exeter	—	—	—	—
Plymouth	—	—	—	—
Truro	—	—	—	—
Winchester	9	8	7	5
	119	116	112	91

Schedule of right of occupation by judges' lodgings and summary valuation of freehold properties as at 30 September 2001

Lodging	Freehold	Leasehold	License	Other
Birmingham	•	—	—	—
Leicester	—	—	•	—
Lincoln	—	—	•	—
Northampton	—	—	•	—
Nottingham	•	—	—	—
Stafford	—	—	•	—
Warwick	—	—	—	•
Worcester	—	—	•	—
Leeds	—	•	—	—
Plawsworth	•	—	—	—
Sheffield	•	—	—	—
Temporary judges' lodgings (Hull)	—	—	—	•
Carlisle	—	—	•	—
Liverpool	—	•	—	—
Manchester	•	—	—	—
Preston	•	—	—	—
Chelmsford	—	•	—	—
Lewes	—	•	—	—
Temporary judges' lodgings (Lewes)	—	—	—	•
Maidstone	•	—	—	—
Norwich	•	—	—	—
Oxford	—	—	•	—
Reading	•	—	—	—
St Albans	•	—	—	—
Caernarfon	—	—	•	—
Cardiff	•	—	—	—
Chester	•	—	—	—
Mold	—	•	—	—
Swansea	•	—	—	—
Bristol	—	•	—	—
Exeter	—	•	—	—
Plymouth	—	—	—	—
Truro	—	—	•	—
Winchester	•	—	—	—
	11,375,000.00	Not available	Not applicable	Not applicable

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many nights were reimbursed in relation to judges' overnight accommodation; and what the average cost was per night in each of the last four years; and if he will make a statement. [123203]

Mr. Leslie [holding answer 2 July 2003]: No reimbursement was made in relation to High Court judges' overnight accommodation. The average cost per night in each of the last four years is set out in the table. These figures are based on the total annual expenditure of the lodgings network and therefore not only include the costs of providing accommodation, travel and subsistence for High Court judiciary and their clerks, but also the accommodation overheads (i.e. rent, rates, capital charge) of the lodgings themselves.

	Average cost per night (£)
1999–2000	774.06
2000–01	886.36
2001–02	844.38
2002–03	815.71

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs if he will make a statement on progress of the review of judges' lodgings; and when it commenced. [123204]

Mr. Leslie [holding answer 2 July2003]: An internal review of judges' lodgings reported to the, then, Lord Chancellor in July 2000. Progress on a number of the administrative and staffing improvements has been good and new arrangements for transporting the judges to and from lodgings have now been introduced. We have, in addition, discontinued the use of Mold Lodgings. These measures will save in excess of £450,000 per annum in running costs.

It is still our policy intention to introduce further efficiencies, particularly on rationalisation of lodgings ownership. I will be in a position to make a statement later this year.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what discussions he has had with the judiciary on the reform of the judges' lodging system; and if he will make a statement. [123205]

Mr. Leslie [holding answer 2 July 2003]: Discussions have taken place with the judiciary and will continue to do so.

Legal Advice

Keith Vaz: To ask the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what action the Government is taking to make access to legal advice more readily available to poor people. [131658]

Mr. Lammy: The key aim of the Community Legal Service (CLS) is to provide greater access to advice services to everyone within England and Wales. Financial eligibility limits apply to the provision of publicly funded Legal Help, ensuring that public funding is targeted to assist those on low incomes. In addition, through the work of over 200 CLS Partnerships, and supported by initiatives such as the Partnership Initiative Budget and the Legal Services Commission's Methods of Delivery Pilots, we are devising new ways of delivering frontline legal advice services to local communities. Regional Legal Service Committees and CLS Partnerships are responsible for co-ordinating the delivery of legal and advice services in their area and through an analysis of local legal needs, can ensure that resources are more effectively targeted to help the socially excluded and other vulnerable groups.

Legal Aid

Keith Vaz: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the legal aid budget is in 2003–04 for immigration and asylum work. [130945]

Mr. Lammy: Legal aid expenditure for immigration and asylum forms part of a single asylum fund jointly owned by the Department for Constitutional Affairs and the Home Office. Discussions about the level of funding in relation to the single asylum fond with HM Treasury are still taking place and it is therefore not possible to answer this question yet.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the legal aid budget is for 2002–03; and what it was in 1991–92. [131738]

Mr. Lammy: The legal aid budget for the financial year 2002–03 was £1,871 million; the budget for the financial year 1991–92 was £697 million.

Magistracy

Helen Jones: To ask the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what progress has been made in recruiting more people from the most deprived areas of Warrington North to the magistracy; and if he will make a statement. [130928]

Mr. Leslie: The Cheshire Advisory Committee is responsible for the recruitment of lay magistrates in Warrington. It has been working for some time on increasing awareness across all local communities of the opportunities for individuals to apply to become JPs. Recruitment in North Cheshire which includes Warrington North has been a particular difficulty therefore priority has been given to this area.

The Committee is in the middle of a recruiting process that ends on 30 November. I will be in a position to write to my hon. Friend once recruitment has finished with final evidence of progress.

Some recent initiatives include advertising in a Match-Day Programme for Warrington Rugby League Football Club and having a stand at the local Asda Superstore. There have been press releases and local radio coverage. Recruitment literature has been sent to local political party constituency offices and to the Council for Voluntary Service, and links are being maintained with the local Council for Racial Equality.

Microsoft

Norman Lamb: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much was paid to Microsoft in licensing fees by the Lord Chancellor's Department and its agencies in each of the last three years; and how much the Department for Constitutional Affairs and its agencies has budgeted to pay Microsoft for licensing fees in (a) 2003–04 and (b) 2004–05. [130671]

Mr. Leslie: The DC A has contracts for IT services with EDS, Liberata and Fujitsu, which include the provision of Microsoft licences. The licences are obtained direct by the three suppliers, and recharged as an element in the overall service charge. The Department also purchases a limited number of Microsoft licences outside these contracts. The amounts spent on these in the last three last financial years are as follows:

	£
2000–01	124,155
2001–02	66,148
2002–03	71,100

Since these licences are procured by local business units within the Department there are no central monies specifically budgeted for licence fees in the financial years 2003–04 and 2004–05.

Parliamentary Questions

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many questions directed to the Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs remain unanswered. [130766]

Mr. Lammy: My Department as of today, 6 October, has eight unanswered questions in the House of Commons and two unanswered questions in the House of Lords.

Crown Dependencies

Mr. Beith: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what proposals he has for the future of the Lord Chancellor's responsibilities in respect of (a) Jersey, (b) the Bailiwick of Guernsey and (c) the Isle of Man; and what discussions he has had with Crown Dependencies on these matters since he took office. [131823]

Mr. Lammy: There are no proposals to change the relationship between the Crown Dependencies, the Crown and the UK. However, as part of the process of abolishing the office of Lord Chancellor, the Government proposes that his responsibilities as the Privy Counsellor primarily concerned with the affairs of the Crown Dependencies should be transferred to the Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs.

I visited Jersey on 21–22 September and am due to visit the Isle of Man in November. I also hope to visit Guernsey in the next few months.

My discussions in Jersey covered a wide range of matters.

Supreme Courts Act

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the present role is of the Court established under the Supreme Courts Act 1981. [131665]

Mr. Leslie: The Supreme Courts Act 1981 established the Court of Appeal, the High Court and the Crown Court, collectively, as the Supreme Court of England and Wales. The Court of Appeal is divided into Criminal Division, which hears appeals from the Crown Court, and the Court Martial and Civil Division, which hears appeals mainly against decisions in the High Court and county court. The High Court has three divisions: Chancery Division, Queens Bench Division and Family Division, each of which exercises appellate jurisdiction and handles different types of civil work. The Crown Court is responsible for trials of indictable offences, appeals from magistrates courts and cases for sentence.

We have proposed the creation of a UK Supreme Court, which will be the highest court in the whole of the United Kingdom and will take on the present jurisdiction of the Appellate Committee of the House of Lords as well as the devolution functions of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. This will not affect the function of the three courts that currently make up the Supreme Court of England and Wales.

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs what new name he proposes for the current Supreme Court. [131697]

Mr. Leslie: We are consulting on how we should re-name the current Supreme Court the jurisdiction of which is England and Wales. To avoid confusion in the future, the title of Supreme Court will be reserved for the new court for the United Kingdom which will be created as a result of the Government's constitutional reform proposals, announced on 12 June 2003.

Appointments

Keith Vaz: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs if he will list the names of the people whom the Lord Chancellor has appointed since 12 June; what posts they were appointed to; and for what term each person was appointed. [129998]

Mr. Leslie: A table detailing the names of those appointed by the Lord Chancellor since 12 June, the posts to which they have been appointed and the term of appointment has been sent to the hon. Member, and a copy placed in the House of Commons Library.

Civil Servants

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many new entrants to the Civil Service were employed in the Department in each of the last five years; and how many in each year were aged 50 or over. [119823]

Mr. Lammy: I apologise for the delay in replying to your question, this was due to an administrative error.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer my hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office (Mr. Alexander), gave to him on 24 June 2003, Official Report, column 658W.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Film Council

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the films that have been approved since 2000 by (a) the Film Council's New Arena Fund and (b) the Film Council's Premiere Fund; in each case, how much was invested; and how much has so far been recouped. [130954]

Estelle Morris: The Premiere Fund was established to stimulate commercial filmmaking in association with the private sector and improve the quality and appeal of British films. Details of the films supported and how much has been recouped are shown at Table 1.

The New Cinema Fund was established to support innovative film-making to develop film culture, encourage creative excellence and nurture new talent. Details of the films supported and how much has been recouped are shown at Table 2.

In addition, the New Cinema Fund has invested £1.3 million in over 200 short digital films. This initiative provides a platform for new and emerging talent to explore innovative ways of telling stories and is not designed to provide a financial return on the investment.

The UK Film Council investment in a film is likely to take place well before the film receives a theatrical (or other) release, resulting in a considerable time-lag between the investment and any recoupment. Individual films are expected to generate income over many years through different "windows" of exploitation around the world (for example, DVD, Pay-TV, Free TV). The recoupment received to date is therefore only a small part of the return on the investment expected by the UK Film Council.

Table 1: Premiere Fund

Title	Net award	Receipts
Code 46	1,565,063	0
The Importance of Being Earnest	1,320,000	227,925
Gosford Park	2,000,000	2,000,000
L'Homme du Train	500,000	0
Mike Bassett: England Manager	2,103,000	1,688,965
Miranda	849,315	112,933
Sex Lives of the Potato Men	1,766,222	0
Sylvia	2,450,000	0
Valiant	2,580,645	0
Young Adam	500,000	0
Total	15,634,245	4,029,823

Table 2: New Cinema Fund

Title	Net award	Receipts
AKA	101,250	0
Anita and Me	680,000	17,879
Ape	178,000	0
Blind Flight	460,000	10,000
Bloody Sunday	299,500	138,830
Bodysong	350,000	0
This Little Life (Entering Blue Zone)	241,000	0
Hoover Street	175,000	0
Kiss of Life (Helen of Peckham)	510,000	10,000
Intermission	570,000	0
Live Forever	212,249	1,760
The Magdalene Sisters	620,000	64,477
Noi the Albino	100,000	0
One for the Road	240,000	0
One Love	899,827	0
Once Upon A Time in the Midlands	750,000	262,485
Revengers Tragedy	510,000	10,000
Tomorrow La Scala (Sweeney)	247,406	0
This is not a Love Song	289,650	13,047
Touching the Void	335,000	0
Total	7,768,882	528,478

Note:

The figures given in the tables relate to films on which the UK Film Council had entered into contracts by 30 June 2003, and therefore do not include all of the awards made to date. Some of the films listed are still in production and have therefore not started to recoup funding.

National Lottery

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent assessment she has made of lottery funding for projects in seaside towns. [131321]

Estelle Morris: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not made any recent assessment of lottery funding specifically for projects in seaside towns. However, since the introduction of the National Lottery Act 1998, and changes to policy directions, distributors have increasingly focussed on areas of social and economic deprivation, including seaside resorts. The Government remains committed to ensuring that all parts of the country should have access to lottery funds. Many areas, suffering wider social and economic deprivation, need extra support to develop and put in applications of a quality that will succeed. The National Lottery Funding Decision Document, published in July, contained proposals to make it easier for communities to access lottery grants.

Ministerial Engagements

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what sporting engagements she has attended in her official capacity since January, broken down by category. [129505]

Tessa Jowell: Since January I have visited the following sporting events in my official capacity:

Event	Date
Arsenal v Chelsea	1 January 2003
England v Australia Football Match	12 February 2003
World Indoor Athletics Championships	16 March 2003
London Marathon	13 April 2003
Wimbledon Tennis Championships	6 July 2003

Royal Residences

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the plans are for each of the buildings for which her Department is responsible which were occupied by Her Late Majesty, Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother. [131284]

Mr. Caborn: Clarence House is the only building that was occupied by the late Queen Elizabeth, The Queen Mother for which the Department is responsible. Clarence House has recently been refurbished as the official London residence for His Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales, Prince William and Prince Harry, to provide office accommodation for his immediate staff and to enable His Royal Highness to carry out his official duties.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Asbestos

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much has been spent by his Department and its agencies on (a) asbestos surveys and (b) the management and removal of asbestos since 1 January 2001; and what budget is available to (i) commission asbestos surveys and (ii) manage and remove asbestos from buildings in (A) 2003 and (B) 2004. [130918]

Maria Eagle: A programme of surveys and risk assessments, covering all buildings occupied by this Department, is being carried out and it is anticipated that this will be completed by April 2004. This Department is expected to be fully compliant with the Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations by the required date of 21 May 2004. No estimate has been made of the cost of these actions so far or of the likely future cost. However, the majority of the Estate occupied by this Department was transferred, for value, to Land Securities Trillium in 1998. Under the terms of the contract they are responsible for arranging and funding the surveys and risk assessments and also taking necessary action for the removal or management of any asbestos found.

Child Care

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps are being taken to (a) train and (b) recruit people in the child care sector; and if he will make a statement. [128675]

Margaret Hodge: I have been asked to reply.

Child care is an important community resource, supporting parents to work, learn and study. Good quality child care supports better outcomes for children. A skilled and qualified child care workforce is essential to meet our objective to increase the availability of high quality child care for all age groups.

We provide for the training of child care workers through the Learning and Skills Council, and through funding allocated to local authorities and their Early Years Development and Child care Partnerships. It is for local LSCs and local authorities to assess needs in their areas and develop plans to ensure the training delivered best meets them. We issued joint guidance with LSC to encourage local planning for workforce development.

A national child care recruitment campaign has been running since 2000 to encourage people to consider a career in child care. It includes television and media advertising, a variety of customised information and materials, a national orderline and a website with order facility. Local authorities promote careers in child care using a range of materials and events, working with local partners such as Jobcentre Plus, Careers Services, providers and sector organisations to provide practical help to potential recruits.

We issued guidance to local authorities in July 2003, including activities to promote training and recruitment. The General Sure Start Grant includes £129.9 million for workforce development for the two years 2004–06, which covers training and recruitment for child care and early years workers.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the efficiency of information technology where the Child Support Agency is responsible for drawing payments from an individual for a number of children by different partners. [131376]

Mr. Pond: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Doug Smith to Mr. David Drew, dated 26 September 2003:

The Secretary of State in replying to your recent Parliamentary question about the Child Support Agency promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You ask for a statement on the efficiency of IT where the CSA is responsible for drawing payments from an individual for a number of children by different partners.

The child support computer system has been designed to support and reflect the change in policy under the new child support scheme. This means that it will allocate payments received from Non Resident Parents equally between all the relevant Parents with Care based on the number of qualifying children. However, we recognise that in implementing the new child support scheme arrangements and introducing a complex new IT system that there will be teething problems. Where problems occur we aim to respond quickly and to ensure that these do not adversely affect the client.

A report on progress in the implementation of the new child support scheme was placed in the Library on 14 July 2003.

Crosby

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many times he has visited Crosby in his official capacity; and what the purpose was of each visit. [129503]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Since becoming the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, in May 2002, I have not yet had the opportunity to visit the hon. Member's constituency.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) special advisers, (b) press officers, (c) civil servants, (d) advisers to civil servants and (e) permanent staff were working for the Department in each year since 1996. [126477]

Maria Eagle: Information on the numbers of staff in civil service Departments and agencies is published in Table C of "Civil Service Statistics" which covers permanent staff numbers in each Department and agency from 1995 to 2002. Copies of the publication are laid in the Libraries of both Houses.

The Department for Work and Pensions was created in June 2001 merging staff from the Department of Social Security and the Employment Service. Information in respect of the Department for Work and Pensions first becomes available in the October 2001 publication. Prior to this, information for the two former Departments is shown separately. Information on staffing in respect of the former Department of Social Security is in the publications from 1995 until April 2001. Information in respect of staffing in the former Employment Service is included with those of the Department for Education and Employment and is also included in publications from 1995 to 1 April 2001.

The latest edition, based on April 2002 data was published on 24 July 2003. The figures include press officers.

As at 16 July 2003, the Department employed two special advisers. The term advisers to civil servants is not recognised.

Incapacity Benefit

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to change the rules relating to the payment of incapacity benefit for disabled lay members of employment tribunals. [129634]

Maria Eagle: Any incapacity benefit (IB) recipient can work for up to and including £20 a week for an unlimited period, or work for less than 16 hours a week and earn up to and including £67.50 per week for 26 weeks. The latter can be extended for another 26 weeks if a New Deal for Disabled People Job Broker, Jobcentre Plus Personal

Adviser or Disability Employment Adviser agrees that progress is being made towards work of 16 or more hours a week.

In addition, a person receiving IB can work for one day a week as a panel member on appeal tribunals that specifically involve issues of disability, such as those dealing with disability living allowance or attendance allowance, without their benefit being affected. However, there are no current plans to introduce similar provisions for disabled lay members of employment tribunals who receive incapacity benefit.

Job Advertisements

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what measures are taken by the Employment Service to ensure that those businesses advertising jobs through job centres are genuine. [129422]

Mr. Browne: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive, David Anderson. I have asked him to reply to my hon. Friend.

Letter from David Anderson to Mrs. Janet Dean, dated 25 September 2003:

As Jobcentre Plus is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to reply direct to your question asking what measures are taken by Jobcentre Plus, as the public Employment Service, to ensure that businesses advertising vacancies with us are genuine. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

Our aim is to maintain a reasonable level of assurance about our vacancies without setting up a costly and cumbersome checking process that may deter genuine employers from giving us their vacancies. We have systems in place to establish the genuine nature of both the employers and their jobs. For example, the employer is required to provide us with a valid UK address, postcode and landline telephone number. If there is any cause for doubt a visit may be arranged to the employer by staff from the local Jobcentre Plus office.

We maintain regular contact with all employers using our services. If we believe that an employer has deliberately misled us and we are unable to obtain assurances to the contrary, the employer's vacancies are removed from display.

By and large these arrangements work well and we rarely receive complaints from customers as to the genuineness of employers. However, when we do receive such a complaint, we investigate the complaints thoroughly and promptly and, if appropriate, remove the company's vacancies from display. Should such an 'employer' attempt to advertise further vacancies, these are not advertised until the previous problems have been resolved satisfactorily.

I hope this is helpful.

Jobcentre Plus

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many staff in JobCentre Plus were employed on temporary contracts; how many were employed in London; and if he will make a statement on his policy on the employment of temporary staff in JobCentre Plus; [125493]

(2) what consultation was held in 2002–03 with trade unions concerning the termination of employment of temporary workers by JobCentre Plus; what his policy is on consultation with trade unions on the employment and termination of temporary contract workers; and if he will make a statement; [125494]

(3) how many staff on temporary contracts employed by JobCentre Plus (a) in total and (b) in London had their contracts terminated in financial year 2002–03; in each case how many (i) had been employed for more than 49 weeks but less than 52 weeks, (ii) were employed for more than 52 weeks, (iii) were women and (iv) were from minority ethnic communities; and if he will make a statement on his policy towards the termination of employment of temporary contract workers. [125495]

Mr. Browne: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, David Anderson. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from David Anderson to Mr. Andrew Dismore, dated 25 September 2003:

As Jobcentre Plus is an Executive Agency, I have been asked to reply to your questions concerning the employment of temporary workers and consultation with trade unions by Jobcentre Plus. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

I apologise for the delay in replying, which has arisen because of the need to obtain and verify the detailed information requested. Our payroll information does not distinguish between contracts that run their course or those which are terminated early. Information on contracts 'terminated' would therefore include both categories. It would not, however, include those who resigned In the course of their temporary employment.

During 2002–03 Jobcentre Plus took on 6,034 temporary staff and 6,968 temporary staff left our employment. 5,269 of these had their contracts terminated—1,048 of them in London—and the detailed information you requested about these temporary workers is set out in the table below.

	Jobcentre Plus	London
Temporary workers whose contracts were terminated in 2002/03	5,269	1,048
In each case how many:
Had been employed for more than 49 weeks but less than 52 weeks	433	85
Were employed for more than 52 weeks[2]	3	0
Were women	3,300	702
Were from ethnic minority communities[1]	481	135

[1] This data is collected from application forms and is voluntary. It may therefore, not represent the total sample. Across DWP, ethnicity data is only currently held for only 67.7% of permanent staff.

[2] It is not the usual practice to extend contracts beyond 51 weeks. One contract was extended while the individual was awaiting the imminent results of her application for a permanent appointment—for which she was unsuccessful so her contract was ended. Two contracts were extended to cover acute shortfalls of staff.

Source:
Information from FAMIS and REBUS Payroll Database

Jobcentre Plus employs temporary workers for a number of reasons, for example, to help manage peaks of work and to aid release of permanent staff for training and preparation for major business change.

All Jobcentre Plus permanent staff are recruited through procedures and criteria which meet the Civil Service Commissioners' rigorous fair and open competition criteria. However, to support flexibility and responsiveness Jobcentre Plus generally does not recruit temporary staff through such procedures, as they are only being recruited to meet a short-term need. All temporary staff are recruited through a procedure that includes an initial application form, a sift, an interview, and the completion of pre-appointment checks. The Department recommends that at least three applicants are interviewed for each post. Equality of opportunity is central to all the Department's personnel and recruitment policies.

Jobcentre Plus informs temporary staff of the length of time they are likely to work for us by specifying the duration of their temporary contracts. This situation is then kept under review in relation to any changing business needs. Temporary contracts can be extended up to a maximum of 51 weeks.

Managers at all levels of the business discuss with their trade union representatives Jobcentre Plus overall staffing requirements on an ongoing basis. In particular, these discussions cover the need for recruitment or promotion exercises, redeployment of staff, or the need to manage staff reductions. Discussions take into account the established policies within the Department for Work and Pensions for dealing with these issues—policies which have been subject to consultation with the trade unions at Departmental level.

In the case of managing staff reductions Jobcentre Plus has agreed principles for redundancy avoidance and handling with the trade unions which set out a number of measures to avoid redundancies of permanent staff. These measures make specific reference to reducing or eliminating the use of casual/temporary staff and contract employees.

Between April 2002 and February 2003, Jobcentre Plus London region reduced its permanent staffing through a combination of staff moving to The Pension Service, other parts of the Department for Work and Pensions, other Government Departments and through natural wastage. In reaching the reduction in staffing figures, no permanent members of staff were dismissed or made redundant.

A number of meetings, at both Regional and District level, have taken place with trade union representatives since last summer about the deployment of staff across London region. These meetings have also been supplemented by correspondence. Headcount target figures were shared with trade union regional colleagues in September 2002, and a discussion on measures required to manage towards those workforce numbers took place at a meeting on 25 September 2002.

Subsequently, specific plans for releasing temporary workers were discussed with union representatives in January 2003. Detailed letters followed this meeting together with a further meeting, which took place in February 2003.

I hope this is helpful.

Microsoft

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was paid to Microsoft in licensing fees by his Department and its agencies in each of the last three years; and how much has been budgeted for (a) 2003–04 and (b) 2004–05. [130683]

Mr. Browne: The Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) was formed in June 2001.

Payments made to Microsoft by DWP in 2001–02 were £1,075 and 2002–03 were £282.

Payments made direct to Microsoft are very low because the majority of purchases are made by the Department's main IT Service Provider on the DWP's behalf and are therefore not recorded as a Departmental purchase from Microsoft.

Details of how much has been budgeted for in 2003–04 and 2004–05 cannot be provided since the Department do not budget for software licences by specific suppliers.

Ministerial Visits

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the (a) foreign and (b) UK visits he has made since 1 April; what the cost was to public funds of each trip; whom he met; and what gifts were received. [126870]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Government publishes the overall costs of all Ministerial overseas travel and a list of all visits overseas by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500 on an annual basis. The list for the period 1 April 2002 to 31 March 2003 was published by the Prime Minister on 16 July 2003, Official Report, column 482W. The next list for the period 1 April 2003 to 31 March 2004 will be published at the end of the financial year.

In respect of gifts received, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister, on 14 March 2003, Official Report, column 482W.

Between 1 April and 16 July, I have made a number of visits in the UK, the individual cost of each could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Pension Credit

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in what circumstances and for what reason, under pension credit legislation, pensioners will receive an award of £1.20 instead of 60 pence for each extra pound of qualifying income; and whether those entitled to the £1.20 award will be informed of this. [131044]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 18 September 2003]: In very exceptional circumstances the effect of applying the normal formula will be that some pensioners will receive a reward of £1.20 instead of 60 pence for each extra pound of qualifying income. This may happen if the Pension Credit recipient is also receiving a working tax credit, spousal maintenance, or a social security benefit which does not count as rewardable income. It will only occur if their total income brought to account is greater than their appropriate guarantee level but the income which counts for the savings credit is less than the guarantee level. If this happens the pensioner will be able to ask the Pension Service for an explanation.

Pensions (Armed Forces)

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Defence on the implications of the Pensions Green Paper for armed forces personnel's future pensions. [131313]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has worked closely with MoD officials to ensure that the proposals have taken full account of the changes to policy likely to emerge from the Pension's Green Paper (published in December 2002).

The proposals for the new schemes reflect recent announcements on pensions reform. For example, the replacement of the early Immediate Pension provision with an Early Departure Scheme will ensure compliance with Inland Revenue proposals to increase the earliest age from which a pension can be paid from 50 to 55.

HOUSE OF COMMONS PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES (HANSARD) ● 2002-03
CHADWYCK-HEALEY Vol. 410 (Part 2) cols. W1055 - 1246 8 Sept - 6 Oct 2003

TRANSPORT

Motor Vehicle Pollution

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will issue a statement on his Department's plans to reduce motor vehicle pollution over the next 10 years.131278]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government's Powering Future Vehicles Strategy, published in July 2002 and available via the Department's website, sets out our plans for promoting the development, introduction and take-up of clean, low carbon vehicle technologies and fuels in the UK. We will be publishing a first progress report on the implementation of this Strategy very shortly. Emissions of key air pollutants from motor vehicles are set to fall by about 30 per cent. over the next decade as progressively tighter European regulations come into effect for new vehicles, and as older, more polluting vehicles drop out of circulation. The Government is also playing a constructive role in discussions in Europe on future vehicle emission standards for the period from 2010 onwards.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what support the Department plans to give to low pollution fuel initiatives. [131279]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government is always prepared to consider supporting the introduction and use of clean fuels where these offer proven environmental benefits. We have an excellent track record of incentivising cleaner fuels by means of fuel duty incentives. Decisions on fuel duty levels are a matter for the Chancellor of the Exchequer. My Department also runs a number of grant programmes which can help support the introduction of clean, low-carbon vehicles and fuels. Details of these are available via the Transport Energy website at http:// www.fransportenergv.org.uk .

Asbestos

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 16 June 2003, Official Report, column 17W, on asbestos, if he will list the buildings identified as containing asbestos. [130939]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Balloons

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) whether there is a standard of airworthiness in respect of tethered balloons for passenger transport; [131180]

(2) when he expects European Aviation Safety Authority type certification CS31TGB to be (a) promulgated and (b) enforced; [131189]

(3) what plans he has to give the Civil Aviation Authority powers to certify the safety of airworthiness of tethered balloons for passenger transport; [131181]

(4) if he will list the (a) telephone calls, (b) meetings, (c) correspondence and (d) other communication he has had with the (i) Civil Aviation Authority, (ii) European Aviation Safety Authority, (iii) Joint Aviation Authority and (iv) EU transport ministers on the certification of airworthiness of tethered balloons for passenger transport in the last 12 months; [131190]

(5) what research he has conducted on the safety regimes of (a) France and (b) Germany on tethered balloons for passenger transport; [131191]

(6) whether UK operators of tethered balloons for passenger transport will be able to operate such equipment after 28 September without (a) type certification under CS 31 TGB and (b) grandfather rights; [131182]

(7) what recent assessment he has made of the safety of tethered balloons for passenger transport; [131183]

(8) what assessment he has made of the employment prospects for the balloon industry, with particular reference to the effects of the lack of a certification standard for tethered balloons for passenger transport; [131192]

(9) what estimate he has made of sales volumes of tethered balloons for passenger transport in the next five years; [131184]

(10) what estimate he has made of the number of tethered balloons for passenger transport which have been (a) sold in and (b) imported into the UK in the past five years; [131193]

(11) how many officials at his Department have duties relating to the certification of airworthiness of tethered balloons; [131194]

(12) what his Department's responsibilities are in respect of Civil Aviation Authority certification for tethered balloons for passenger transport; [131185]

(13) what his Department's responsibilities are in respect of the airworthiness of tethered balloons for passenger transport; [131186]

(14) how many Civil Aviation Authority officials have (a) full and (b) part-time duties in relation to airworthiness certification; [131195]

(15) what advice he gives to manufacturers of tethered balloons on the (a) current and (b) proposed regulatory framework; [131196]

(16) what recent discussions he has had with (a) UK balloon manufacturers (b) the Civil Aviation Authority and (c) the European Aviation Safety Authority on the certification of airworthiness of tethered balloons for passenger transport; [131187]

(17) what plans he has to make provision for the temporary certification of airworthiness of tethered balloons for passenger transport, in advance of a European standard; [131188]

(18) how many (a) accidents, (b) injuries and (c) deaths to (i) passengers, (ii) operators and (iii) users of tethered balloons for passenger transport have been reported in the last five years; [131197]

(19) if he will list the communications he has had with ministers in other departments with regard to the certification of airworthiness of tethered balloons for passenger transport in the last 12 months; [131303]

(20) if he will make a statement on the negotiations with EU authorities establishing grandfather rights for regulatory authorities in France and Germany in respect of tethered balloons for passenger transport. [131304]

Mr. McNulty: There are no international airworthiness standards in respect of tethered balloons for passenger transport.

In the UK, the Air Navigation Order 2000 exempts such aircraft, described as captive balloons, from the requirement to be registered and thus from any airworthiness certification requirement. Tethered balloons carrying passengers are treated as fairground rides and their safety standards have been regulated by the Health and Safety Executive, rather than the Civil Aviation Authority. The Department for Transport accordingly has had no duties relating to the airworthiness of tethered balloons.

Some other European countries have required tethered balloons to be registered and established national airworthiness certification requirements. Such requirements have been the responsibility of the states concerned and the Government has had no reason to research their safety regimes. UK produced tethered balloons sold into these countries have been required to meet national requirements which has caused some practical difficulties due to those states' unfamiliarity with UK Health and Safety Executive regulations.

EC Regulation 1592/2002 on common rules in the field of civil aviation and establishing a European Aviation Safety Agency came into force in September 2002. Its primary objective is to establish and maintain a high uniform level of civil aviation in Europe and an additional objective is to facilitate the free movement of goods, persons and services. The regulation lays down safety essential airworthiness requirements for aircraft and aviation products within its scope, which includes tethered balloons, and empowers the agency to establish the type certification basis for each aircraft, to issue the appropriate type certificates and to conduct, either itself or through national aviation authorities, the technical inspections associated with such certification. This system will facilitate the marketing of aircraft, such as captive balloons, throughout the Community.

The agency is required to take up its certification responsibilities by 28 September. Commission Regulations detailing how these responsibilities will be implemented are being drawn up to a very tight timetable and should be finalised very shortly. The UK has been fully involved in the process of drawing up these implementing regulations. The regulations will include transitional provisions to ensure that all aircraft types currently used in member states can continue to be used after 28 September, including UK built tethered balloons.

There are also provisions to give grandfather rights to a large range of aircraft and products certified under previous regimes. Under specified conditions, the type certification basis for certain products will be deemed to be an EASA certification basis: this will apply to a number of types of tethered balloons certified in other member states. Such provisions cannot apply to UK designed balloons because there has been no UK type certification basis for them. The agency has to establish an EASA certification basis for these aircraft and work is in hand to draft the appropriate certification specification (Certification Specification 31 Tethered Gas Balloons, known as CS 31 TGB). The agency is using a team of national expert put together by the Joint Aviation Authorities to develop this specification, industry will be consulted and it is expected to be adopted early in 2004.

EASA arrangements for outsourcing tasks to national aviation authorities will allow the CAA to carry out a range of certification activities on behalf of the agency after 28 September and we understand that the CAA could quickly begin the necessary certification work for UK tethered balloons on the basis of the current draft of the certification specification. The authority has been in touch with the manufacturer of tethered balloons in the UK about the EASA developments and will endeavour to ensure as smooth a transition to the new system as possible.

Food Expenditure

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent on food by his Department and by each agency for which it is responsible in (a) 2001-02 and (b) 2002-03; what proportion of that food by value was produced in the United Kingdom; what guidance he has issued to encourage the procurement of home-produced food; and if he will make a statement. [129376]

Mr. McNulty: The Department came into being on 29 May 2002. The information requested is given in the following table.

The Department's catering services are all contracted out, with the contractor recovering costs through the sale of services. Expenditure on food in DfT is, therefore, limited to official hospitality provided by the Department and its Agencies, and canteen subsidies. Records of spend on food provided at some external conferences and similar events are not kept centrally and are not included.

The Department does not generally prescribe the sourcing of goods and produce supplied to the Department or sold in staff restaurants, nor are contractors currently required to provide this information. The percentage and value of foodstuffs sourced from the UK under existing departmental catering contracts is not, therefore, readily available.

DEFRA has published a "Guidance and action Sheet for buyers and their internal customers" that includes guidance on local sourcing and in particular how to remove obstacles to tendering faced by local and UK suppliers. I am taking steps to ensure that the guidance is implemented by departmental purchasers involved in the procurement of facility management/catering services.

We are also working closely with DEFRA, and our agencies, to integrate and promote the principles of sustainable development into the public procurement of food and catering services.

Department/Agency	2001–02 hospitality expenditure (£)	2001–02 canteen subsidies (£)	Estimated percentage of procured food produced in UK in 2001–02	Estimated monetary value of UK produced food supplied to organisation in 2001–02 (£)
(Central) Department	Not Available[1]	None	Not Available[1]	Not Available[1]
Driving Standards Agency	54,575	None	Not Available[1]	Not Available[2]
Driver Vehicle and Licensing Agency	35,512	None	86	Not Available[2]
Highways Agency	216,995	9,692	Not Available[2]	Not Available[2]
Maritime and Coastguard Agency	35,525	None	Not Available[2]	Not Available[2]
Vehicle Certification Agency	2,000	None	Not Available[2]	Not Available[2]
Vehicle and Operator Services Agency	147,787	142,921	60	Not Available[2]
Total	492,394	152,613	—	—

Department/Agency	2002–03 hospitality expenditure (£)	2002–03 canteen subsidies (£)	Estimated percentage of procured food produced in UK in 2002–03	Estimated monetary value of UK produced food supplied to organisation in 2002–03 (£)
(Central) Department	[3]161,924	None	Not Available[2]	Not Available[2]
Driving Standards Agency	28,364	None	Not Available[2]	Not Available[2]
Driver Vehicle and Licensing Agency	92,188	None	87	Not Available[2]
Highways Agency	212,103	13,461	Not Available[2]	Not Available[2]
Maritime and Coastguard Agency	46,587	None	Not Available[2]	Not Available[2]
Vehicle Certification Agency	2,000	None	Not Available[2]	Not Available[2]
Vehicle and Operator Services Agency	90,357	33,980	60	Not Available[2]
Total	633,503	47,441	—	—

[1] The Department for Transport came into being on 29 May 2002, earlier figures for the predecessor department are not available.
[2] This information is not held centrally, and is not readily available from catering service providers.
[3] The Department for Transport came into being on 29 May 2002, the figure shown only includes available data from that date up to and including 31 March 2003.

Docklands Light Railway

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the effects on the integrated transport strategy of bicycles not being allowed on the Docklands Light Railway. [131124]

Mr. McNulty: None. The Docklands Light Railway is the responsibility of the Mayor and Transport for London.

Local Transport Finance

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the (a) unclaimed and (b) returned sums from each local authority's local transport plans for the last year for which figures are available. [129721]

Mr. McNulty: Most capital funds paid through the Local Transport Plan system to local authorities are subject to financial flexibilities which are sufficient to ensure that none are unclaimed or returned. The exceptions relate to funds allocated for major local transport schemes—through grants under Section 56 of the Transport Act 1968, or through credit approvals.

As Section 56 grants are claimed in arrears and are subsequently subject to audit, local authorities invariably claim only as much as they need to cover works undertaken on a particular scheme in a particular financial year, and no grant needs to be returned. The authorities that claimed less than the full amount offered by the Government for major schemes in 2002–03 are listed as follows.

Authority	Scheme	Unclaimed amount (£)
Sandwell MBC	Hagley Road Bus Showcase Route	300,000
Tyne and Wear PTA	Stephenson's Link	887,000
Tyne and Wear PTA	Metro Track Dualling	199,000
Newcastle CC	Quayside Public Transport	392,000

Where under-claiming is the result of a delay in delivering a scheme, the Government may decide to offer a corresponding additional grant for the scheme in subsequent years.

There is no corresponding 'claim' for credit approvals. Following a local authority bid, the Government may decide to make credit approvals available, at times and levels decided by Ministers. Local authorities that chose not to take full advantage of credit approvals made available in 2002–03 are listed in the following table. These sums were subsequently reallocated as credit approvals for other local authority transport schemes.

Authority	Scheme	Unclaimed amount (£)
Bolton MBC	Quality Bus Corridor	155,999
Bradford CC	South Bradford Integrated Transport	2,122,000
Cheshire CC	Chester Park and Ride	1,480,000
East Sussex CC	A22 Dualling	23,000
Gateshead MBC	Centrelink	276,410
Salford CC	Trafford Road Improvement	617,000
Staffordshire CC	Biddulph by-pass	300,000
Stockport MBC	Manchester Airport Eastern Link Road	89,000
Tyne and Wear PTA	Stephenson Link	50,000
Tyne and Wear PTA	Metro Track Dualling	300,000
Warwickshire CC	Nuneaton Development Project	240,000

M6

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the effect that the charge for lorries using the M6 toll road will have on lorry movements on the non-tolled M6 motorway. [130970]

Mr. Jamieson: Since the announcement of the toll prices the Highways Agency have not carried out any assessment.

Following the opening of the Toll Road, the Highways Agency in conjunction with the Concessionaire will carry out a review of flows along the adjacent network together with flows on the toll road.

Under all charging scenarios, the net relief to the M6 was forecast to be quite small. Long distance through traffic which transfers onto the M6 Toll, which represents about one third of M6 traffic, will release capacity on the M6 which will be taken up by local traffic, thus providing significant relief to many local roads.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what powers he has to alter the charges for using the M6 toll road. [130971]

Mr. Jamieson: The Secretary of State has no powers to alter the charges. Under the terms of the concession agreement signed in 1992, the Concessionaire (Midland Expressway Ltd.) is responsible for all aspects of the M6 toll's operation, including the level of tolls.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consultations he had with the private operator of the M6 toll road over the setting of the initial charges for users; and what representations he made to the operator. [130972]

Mr. Jamieson: The concession agreement places no obligation on the Concessionaire to consult with the Secretary of State before setting toll charges. Under the terms of the concession agreement signed in 1992, the Concessionaire (Midland Expressway Ltd.) is responsible for all aspects of the M6 toll's operation, including the level of tolls.

Mapeley Steps Contract

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the then Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and Regional Affairs was a party to the agreement between the Inland Revenue and Customs and Excise and Mapeley Steps Ltd (Bermuda) in April 2001 to sell buildings; and whether he received advice from officials with regard to (a) the contract and (b) where the purchaser company was based. [124866]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The agreement for the transfer of buildings to Mapeley Steps Ltd. by the Inland Revenue and Customs and Excise was signed by officials of those departments pursuant to a general authorisation to sign documents on behalf of the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions in whom the majority of the Civil Estate is nominally vested.

Mersey Tunnels

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has received a full set of accounts for the Mersey Tunnels illustrating income and expenditure with appropriate notes and an auditor's certificate in the last 12 months. [131229]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer of 16 September 2003, Official Report, column 626W.

Section 100 of the County of Merseyside Act 1980 does not require that the accounts sent to Ministers have to be accompanied by appropriate notes and an auditor's certificate.

Motorways

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from road hauliers and their associations on his proposal for use of motorway hard shoulders within the Active Traffic Management project. [130968]

Mr. Jamieson: No formal representation has been received from road hauliers and their associations on the proposals for the controlled use of the hard shoulder within the Active Traffic Management project. However, as part of the preparation for the trial of Active Traffic Management on the M42, the Highways Agency commissioned research to assess user attitudes to the Active Traffic Management proposals. The views of HGV drivers that use the M42 were sought as part of this work.

Representatives of the Highways Agency have also met and discussed the proposals for the M42 with a range of key stakeholders including the local emergency services. The road hauliers associations will be consulted in the future as part of the on-going stakeholder liaison.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to include in his public education programme the promotion of good lane discipline among the users of motorways. [130969]

Mr. Jamieson: There is a specific section in the "Motorways" part of the Highway Code on lane discipline. The Department has also produced a leaflet 'A guide to safer motorway driving' which includes advice on lane discipline.

Passenger Railway Carriages

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many passenger railway carriages there were in (a) 1993, (b) 1998 and (c) 2003; and if he will make a statement. [128792]

Mr. McNulty: Figures are only readily available for the years 1995 and 2003. There were 9,979 vehicles in 1995 and 10,610 in 2003. This increase reflects both the fact that some operators have increased the number of services they provide and the statutory requirement to replace the Mark 1 rolling stock that is currently operated by the three franchises operating south of the river Thames (GoVia South Central, Connex South Eastern and South West Trains).

Public Transport

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures have been taken to extend public transport infrastructure since 1997; and what measures have been taken to ensure that the infrastructure is adequately maintained. [130453]

Mr. McNulty: We have launched a major programme of investment through the 10 Year Plan for transport, published in July 2000. This comprises a £180 billion programme of public and private funding aimed at improving transport infrastructure and services across all modes. Major additions and enhancements to public transport infrastructure started or completed since 1997 include:

High Speed Channel Tunnel Rail Link
Heathrow Express rail line
West Coast Main Line upgrade
Chiltern Line double tracking
Rebuilding of Manchester and Leeds stations
London Underground Jubilee Line extension
London Underground modernisation
Docklands Light Rail extensions to Lewisham and City Airport
New light rail lines in Birmingham, Manchester, Croydon, Sunderland and Nottingham
Guided busways in Leeds, Bradford and Crawley.

The 10 Year Plan also included substantial increases in funding to improve the maintenance of infrastructure. Funding for local road maintenance has been doubled, with the aim of eliminating the long-term maintenance backlog by 2010. Network Rail is now focussing on reducing the maintenance backlog on rail, and plans toreplace 740 miles of track this year (compared to 300 miles achieved by Railtrack and in the run-up to privatisation). And substantial new investment is now going in through the PPP to tackle the long-term maintenance backlog on the London Underground.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to invest in public transport infrastructure in the next five years. [130454]

Mr. McNulty: Investment plans for transport over the current decade were set down in the 10 Year Plan for transport, published in July 2000. Up-dated plans were published in the progress report published in December 2002. Expenditure on public transport is not separately identified, but total investment (public and private) over the five years from 2004–05 on railways, and on non-roads transport by local transport authorities and the Mayor for London, is estimated to be around £48 billion.

Light Pollution

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance he has issued to highway authorities about light pollution resulting from road lighting. [131235]

Dr. Howells: The Lighting Board of the Roads Liaison Group (which brings together representatives from national and local highway authorities across the UK) is producing a revised Code of Good Practice for Street Lighting. This will include advice on reducing light pollution. In the meantime, other guidance issued previously remains applicable.

The Department of Transport published "Road Lighting and the Environment" in 1993 which gave advice on good street lighting practice to reduce sky glow and light pollution generally.

The Department also contributed to "Lighting in the Countryside: Towards good practice", which was commissioned by the Department of the Environment (now Office of the Deputy Prime Minister). The document provides guidance to local authorities, highway planners and engineers and members of the public. It demonstrates what can be done to lessen the adverse effects of external lighting, including street lighting. The advice is applicable in towns as well as the countryside.

Road Safety

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many signs there are on trunk roads indicating that queues are likely; and what plans the Government has to eliminate the causes in each case. [129149]

Mr. Jamieson: The information requested has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

European Cohesion Policy

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what her policy is on the Leipzig Declaration on European Cohesion Policy; and if she will make a statement. [130886]

Jacqui Smith: The Government's position on the future of the EU Structural and Cohesion Funds was confirmed in a statement by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on 17 September 2003. Although some of the principles of the Leipzig declaration—for example, its emphasis on a strengthened Community regional and cohesion policy and an enhanced role for regional and local government—are reflected in the Government's approach, our overall position is somewhat different. In particular, we believe that richer EU member states should fund their own regional policy within an EU-wide agreed framework and we do not regard the current budget maximum, 0.45 per cent. of EU GDP, as a reference point for future Structural and Cohesion funding.

Arms Exports

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what export credit guarantee arrangements have been made to support the Defence Systems and Equipment Information exhibition held in London in September; and if she will make a statement. [129915]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The ECGD has not made any arrangements to support the DSEI exhibition.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will take steps to ensure that end-user certificates used for arms exports carry (a) the serial numbers of the arms being exported, (b) the number of weapons to be transferred, (c) details of the transportation to be used to carry the shipment and (d) details of the route the shipment is to take. [131133]

Nigel Griffiths: End-user certificates must be consistent with the model format published on the Department of Trade and Industry's export control website. Precise details of information required on end-user certificates will vary depending on the nature of the proposed export and end-user. There are currently no plans to amend this format.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if, as part of her proposals for the secondary orders to the Export Control Act 2002, she will create a binding agreement with countries that receive arms exports from the UK that they will not re-export weapons of UK origin without first informing the UK Government. [131134]

Nigel Griffiths: The Government has no plans to introduce such binding agreements. The surest way to minimise the risk of UK arms being re-exported and ending up in the wrong hands is to carry out a rigorous assessment of export licence applications at the licensing stage.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information the Foreign Office passes to the export control organisations on emerging conflicts; and whether this information is then used for making decisions on reducing or ceasing shipments. [131138]

Nigel Griffiths: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office work very closely with the Department of Trade and Industry's Export Control Organisation, to keep them fully informed of any changes in circumstances that might affect export licensing decisions. The Export Control Organisation then establishes which pending applications and extant licences need to be re-examined. Applications have been refused, or extant licences revoked, if the changed circumstances warrant this.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps her Department has taken to increase the security devices used on end-user certificates. [131144]

Nigel Griffiths: Each page of a submitted EUC must contain an original signature and be dated. With each completed EUC, the end-user or consignees must provide a covering letter on their headed stationary signed by the same person who has signed the EUC. Both the EUC and covering letter must be in original format.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether contact details for the Export Control Agency are visible on end-user certificates. [131145]

Nigel Griffiths: End-user certificates are provided by the consignee or end-user of the goods to be exported. The Department of Trade and Industry's export control address is included on all export licences issued on behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether there are provisions in the proposals for the Secondary Orders of the Export Control Act 2002 to regulate the provision of military and police training to embargoed countries. [131147]

Nigel Griffiths: Yes, where specified by the terms of the embargo.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether end-user certificates for arms exports set out the conditions under which the export licence has been granted. [131150]

Nigel Griffiths: End-user certificates (EUCs) are provided by the consignee or end-user of the goods to be exported and must be consistent with the model format published on the Department of Trade and Industry's export control website. Conditions under which the export licence has been granted are set out on the export licence issued on behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the extent to which her proposals for export control accord with Clause 5 of the resolution on Export Control passed by the European Parliament on 19 June. [131151]

Nigel Griffiths: The Government's proposals for export control are fully consistent with Article 5 of the EU Council Common Position on the control of arms brokering, adopted on 23 June 2003.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what international agreements the UK is party to on small arms regulation; and how her Department is ensuring these commitments are maintained, with particular reference to the proposals on export control. [131152]

Nigel Griffiths: The UK fully supports the UN Programme of Action (POA) on Small Arms and Light Weapons and actively participated in the first Conference in 2001 and the follow up Biennial Meeting of States, which was held in July 2003 to review progress on implementing the PoA. To help control the supply of SALW, the UK is leading the global effort to develop common international standards on arms exports. In December 2002 the UK was instrumental in securing "Best Practice Guidelines in the Exports of SALW" in the Wassenaar Arrangement, a group of 33 of the world's major arms exporters.

The UK signed the UN Protocol against the illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in firearms.

We continue to work in partnership with other Governments, NGOs and industry on policies and projects to implement the UN Programme of Action on Small Arms. This includes £20 million (2001–04) to curb small arms proliferation worldwide. The UK provides funding for research, projects such as weapon destruction, building awareness of small arms issues.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of how the Government's proposals on transportation of small arms, set out in the Department's consultation on the Export Control Act, comply with Clause II.12 of the United Nations Programme on Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects. [131154]

Nigel Griffiths: The UK has fully taken into account it's international obligations on small arms, including the UN Programme of Action.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for what reasons all the recommendations set out in Clause II.14 of the United Nations Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects were not included in the Department's proposals for export controls, with particular reference to the creation of a register of arms brokers. [131155]

Nigel Griffiths: The Government believe that licence applications should be scrutinised on a case by case basis and that it is impractical to maintain a register of brokers who have been 'vetted' by the DTI.

The consultation document on the draft Export Control Bill explained that the Government proposes to register information on all those applying for licences, both for experts and for arms trafficking and brokering activities. It is intended that this database will be used for licensing and enforcement purposes, including on an international basis as appropriate.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what support her Department provides (a) financially and (b) in other ways to Interpol's international weapons and explosives tracking system; and what use her Department makes of the system. [131156]

Nigel Griffiths: None.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what studies her Department has (a) conducted and (b) collated on the export controls regime in (i) the US and (ii) other European countries. [131157]

Nigel Griffiths: The DTI maintains contact with officials in the export control regimes of other countries, for example through participation in the work of the international export control regimes and the EU Dual-Use Regulations Working Party. Collated systematic studies have not been carried out.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will amend her proposals on export control in response to the resolution passed by the European Parliament on 19 June calling on nation states (a) to adopt full extraterritorial legislation on export controls and (b) to establish registers for arms dealers. [131158]

Nigel Griffiths: The DTI can find no record of any resolution by the European Parliament on this subject.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what arms embargoes the UK has imposed since 1997 on countries in response to (a) armed conflict and (b) human rights violations. [129848]

Mr. Rammell: I have been asked to reply.

Since 1997 the UK has implemented mandatory UN arms embargoes on Sierra Leone, Afghanistan, Ethiopia/Eritrea and Liberia, an EU embargo on Indonesia and a unilateral embargo on Zimbabwe. The latter was superseded by an EU arms embargo in February 2002. The UN arms embargo on Sierra Leone from 1998 was in response to internal armed conflict between the rebel militia group, the Revolutionary United Front (RUF), and the government. In 1999 an arms embargo was imposed on Afghanistan because of internal conflict. In 2000, a UN arms embargo was placed on Ethiopia/Eritrea due to armed conflict between the two states. It was terminated in 2001. The UN arms embargo on Liberia from 2001 was imposed (superseding the UN arms embargo UNSCR 788 (1992)) because Charles Taylor's government was supporting the RUF in Sierra Leone, and at war internally with a rebel opposition group, the Liberian United for Reconciliation and Democracy (LURD). The UN Security Council deemed that all of these conflicts represented a threat to international peace and security and therefore the Security Council acted under Chapter 7 of the Charter of the United Nations. An EU arms embargo was imposed on Indonesia in September 1999 because of conflict in East Timor; this was limited to four months and it fell away in January 2000. In February 2001, the UK imposed a unilateral arms embargo on Zimbabwe because of human rights violations involving repression by the government of the Zimbabwean public. In February 2002, the EU imposed an arms embargo against Zimbabwe for the same reason, which the UK now implements instead.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of how her Department's proposals for the secondary orders on export control will impact on the Government's commitment to improve human rights internationally. [129865]

Nigel Griffiths: The new controls will support the Government's commitment to human rights. Under current export controls, all licence applications received are assessed on a case-by-case basis against the consolidated EU and national arms export licensing criteria that require the Government to give consideration to respect for human rights. The Government have made clear that these criteria will also form the basis for decisions on licence applications for exports subject to the new controls. By increasing the number of transactions subject to licensing, the new controls will increase the Government's ability to act to prevent human rights abuses.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to her Answer of 9 June 2003, Official Report, column 630W, if she will make a statement on the submission to the consultation on Export Control from Fund for Peace which was e-mailed to her Department on 1 May. [129805]

Nigel Griffiths: Yes.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for what reasons the National Criminal Intelligence Service was not included in the bodies consulted on the proposed legislative changes to export controls. [130028]

Nigel Griffiths: The DTI consulted other interested Government Departments, including the Home Office of which NCIS is a part, when formulating policy in this area.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether her assessment of US export controls included an analysis of the effect US export controls have on the competitiveness of US arms manufacturers. [130186]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 16 September 2003]: There is no assessment of the effect of other countries' export controls on the competitiveness of US arms manufacturers.

Asbestos

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to her answer of 13 June 2003, Official Report, column 1096W, on asbestos, if she will list the buildings identified as containing asbestos. [130938]

Ms Hewitt: For the Department of Trade and Industry's London Estate, the buildings identified as containing asbestos are listed:

10 Victoria Street, London SW1H 0NN;

Elizabeth House, 39 York Road, London SE1 7LJ; and Westfield House, 30 Knaresborough Drive, London SW18 4UT.

Atomic Energy Board

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what matters are dealt with in the 1952 Atomic Energy Board (minutes and papers); and if she will transfer those documents to the Public Record Office for public inspection. [129246]

Mr. Timms: These minutes and papers contain information relating to the civil and military nuclear programme in the early 1950s.

They are retained in the Department for reasons of defence and security under section 3(4) of the Public Records Act 1958. As part of a continual programme of reviewing retained material their retention is currently being re-considered.

Baku-Tbilisi-Ceyhan Pipeline

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what her Department's assessment is of the (a) environmental, (b) social and (c) human rights impacts of the Baku-Tbilisi-Ceyhan pipeline project in Azerbaijan; and if she will make a statement. [129976]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The review of the ETC project is ongoing. Cover will only be provided if ECGD are satisfied that the relevant environmental, social and human rights impacts have been properly addressed and that the financial and project risks are acceptable.

Biopharmaceuticals

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the turnover was of the biopharmaceuticals industry in (a) Speke Garston and (b) Greater Merseyside in 2002–03. [130434]

Jacqui Smith: In August 2002, Merseyside had 14 biopharmaceutical companies with a turnover of £406 million for the period 2001–02. Specific figures for the Speke Garston area are not available, though the area has the highest concentration of biopharmaceuticals companies in the North West.

Blackouts

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent assessment she has made of the capacity of the National Grid to avert power blackouts in the UK. [130974]

Mr. Timms: The Government views with concern recent problems on the high voltage electricity transmission network that led to power cuts in London and the Midlands on 28 August and 5 September respectively. We have received a report from National Grid Transco (NGT) on the incident in London and we will shortly receive a report from them on the Midlands incident.

The independent energy market regulator, Ofgem, and the DTI are jointly commissioning consultants to investigate the operational and technical issues surrounding these electricity supply interruptions. In the light of the findings, the DTIs Engineering Inspectorate will consider whether the Electricity Safety, Quality and Continuity Regulations 2002 were fully adhered to. Separately, Ofgem will consider whether any transmission licence obligations have been violated.

British Coal

Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made in reviewing the arrangements for apportioning surpluses in the pension schemes for former employees of British Coal. [130371]

Mr. Timms: I am advised that the current arrangements represent a good deal for the pension scheme members. Their basic pensions are secure even in times when, as is now the case for the Mineworkers Pension Scheme, investment performance has produced a deficit. Under the terms of the Guarantee, that deficit will be met by a transfer of several hundred million pounds from the Investment Reserve, which represents Government's share of pre-privatisation surpluses in the Scheme, to the Guaranteed fund to pay members' guaranteed benefits. And despite the deficit, Government have agreed to a Trustee proposal allowing members of the MPS to continue to receive inflation linked increases to their total pension (i.e. basic pension plus bonus) over the next three years.

The DTI Department has held discussions with the Trustees of the British Coal Staff Superannuation Scheme and the Mineworkers' Pension Scheme on the future of the Government Guarantee for those Schemes, including the division of surpluses.

Following those discussions the trustees were advised that the Government do not consider it would be right to adjust the current surplus sharing arrangements. Some other changes to the Guarantee arrangements were agreed, as were further discussions to consider possible different methods of paying for the Guarantee and also other ways of guaranteeing the bonuses that have already been awarded to members, while not representing a significant additional burden on the taxpayer

Broadband

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) whether she has asked for a regulatory impact assessment on forthcoming internet traffic management proposals explicitly to consider broadband rollout; [117718]

(2) what steps she is taking to ensure any forthcoming internet traffic management proposals are consistent with the Government's objective of making Britain the most competitive and extensive broadband market of all the G7 nations by 2005; and if she will make a statement. [117719]

Mr. Timms: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Blaby (Mr. Robathan) on 14 April 2003, Official Report, column 488W.

Carbon Dioxide

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what (a) national and (b) international organisations the Department has consulted on plans to capture and store carbon dioxide. [130533]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 18 September 2003]: We are consulting a large number of UK organisations covering industry, academia and environmental bodies in considering the options for carbon capture and storage (CSS). This has mostly been through conference and seminar events. A full list of the organisations who have participated more fully in the development of our current position can be found at annex 1 of the "Review of the Feasibility of Carbon Capture and Storage in the UK". This report can found on the DTI website at http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/coal/cfft/co2capture/review.pdf. DEFRA have also been closely involved in the development of our conclusions. In addition to this we have held a public seminar in October 2002 at which representatives of Greenpeace and Bellona were invited to speak on the issue. Other NGOs, such as Friends of the Earth, the WWF and the RSPB also attended.

Internationally, we have directly discussed CCS with the governments of Norway, Denmark, the Netherlands and Germany. CCS is also an area of interest included in the UK/US Cleaner Fossil Fuel Implementing Arrangement signed earlier this year. We have also been in touch with governments and industry in both Canada and Australia.

Chemicals Industry

Mr. Mike Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action she has taken to secure the future of the north-west chemicals industry; and if she will make a statement. [130994]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 18 September 2003]: The chemical sector is very important to the north-west and DTI has worked very closely with the private sector lead North West Chemical Initiative to develop a strategy and action plan for the sector. The North West Chemical Initiative was established with the financial support of both the North West Development Agency and DTI.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has recently announced that £50 million worth of regional selective assistance has been awarded to chlorine manufacturer Ineos Chlor (subject to EU Commission approval) to help modernise its Runcorn facility on Merseyside. Over 2000 direct jobs at the plant will be safeguarded by the aid, part of a £389 million investment programme by the company, safeguarding around a further 8,000 jobs in associated businesses which are dependent upon the Runcorn site.

The UK Government fully supports the objectives of the new European chemicals strategy. However, it considers that the draft legislative text published by the Commission before the summer would not create a workable, efficient system that will provide the right level of protection of human health and the environment while avoiding unnecessary burdens to industry. Indeed, the UK Government consider that as currently drafted the legislation would be both too costly and damaging for the chemicals industry (particularly small businesses) and not effective enough in terms of protecting human health and the environment. We are working with other member states and the Commission to ensure that there are substantial changes to the legislation before it is finally agreed.

Copyright Law

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to review copyright law in relation to publication of research. [131169]

Ms Hewitt: I have no plans to review copyright law in relation to publication of research. The law clearly defines a copyright owner's exclusive rights under which he is, among other things, able to decide whether or not, and if so how, copies of his copyright work are issued to the public.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to review intellectual property rights as they apply to those working in institutes of higher education. [131170]

Ms Hewitt: My Department maintains a close relationship with higher education institutions and has published guidance on managing intellectual property in higher education in co-operation with these institutions. I have no plans to review these matters specifically, but there may be recommendations from current reviews under way that impact on this area.

E-Working

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what her estimate is of how many (a) businesses in the UK and (b) businesses regulated by the Financial Services Authority do not have access to (a) email and (b) the internet. [131259]

Mr. Timms: The information is as follows:

(a) The DTI International Benchmarking Study 2002 shows that [illegible] UK businesses, 12 per cent. do not have access to e-mail and 9 per cent. do not have access to the internet. These figures are weighted by number of employees.

(b) Unfortunately, no statistical information of this type is available for businesses regulated by the Financial Services Authority.

EU Copyright Directive

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what evidence she has taken on the implementation of EU Directive 2001/29/EC (May 2001). [131171]

Ms Hewitt: We have received representations, both in person and in writing, from a very large number of organisations and individuals, including over 300 written responses to the consultation paper on UK implementation of EU Copyright Directive 2001/29/EC issued last year. These representations covered the views of a very wide range of interests and dealt with a great number of issues ranging from general concerns to detailed drafting points.

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment is made of the environmental impact of products, goods and services for which ECGD guarantees are given; who makes that assessment; and whether such assessments are published. [129933]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The nature of the environmental assessment varies with the size, sector and location of the project in question, but it includes consideration of the impact on water, air quality and atmospheric emissions, wildlife and habitats, degradation of land, unsustainable consumption of natural resources, use of hazardous substances, waste generation and noise.

For low and medium potential impact cases the assessments are carried out by ECGD's in-house specialists. These assessments are not published.

For high potential impact cases ECGD requires an in-depth Environmental Impact Assessment. These are normally produced by environmental consultants and are generally made publicly available by the project developer.

Further details of ECGD's environmental assessment procedures are given in the 'Case Handling Process—Information Note' and in the guidance notes to ECGD's Impact Questionnaire, both of which are available from the Department's website (www.ecgd.gov.uk).

Fair Trade

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to her answer of 14 July 2003, Official Report, column 17W, on the Everything But Arms Agreement, how many people in sub-Saharan Africa (a) have lived and (b) are predicted to live, on less that $1 a day between 1990 and 2015; and if she will assess the impact of the Everything But Arms Agreement on the number of people. [130694]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Figures for sub-Saharan Africa, given in the World Development Indicators Report (World Bank) show the number of people who have lived or are predicted to live on less than $1 a day between 1990 and 2015 as follows:

	Million people
1990	241
1999	315
2015	404

These figures, as a percentage of the total population, are:

	Percentage
1990	47.4
1999	49.0
2015	46.0

There are as yet no estimates of the impact of the Everything But Arms Agreement.

Export Licences

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to her answer of 16 May 2003, Official Report, column 463W, what account was taken of the Home Office guidelines that extra-territorial jurisdiction is permissible in cases where it is likely that the crime would otherwise not be judiciable. [130185]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 16 September 2003]: The Government took the guidelines set out in the Home Office Review of Extra-Territorial jurisdiction into consideration when deciding on the extra-territorial scope of the controls to be introduced under the Act. The proposed new controls are consistent with these guidelines.

Inward Investment

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many jobs have been (a) created and (b) protected in the North East region by inward investment projects since 1997. [131319]

Jacqui Smith: The number of jobs that have (a) been created is 20,947 and (b) protected is 31,495 in the North East region by inward investment projects since 1997. This is based on information provided by companies at the time of announcement of the decision to invest in the UK. These figures include only those projects where Invest-UK and its regional partners were involved or, which have come to their notice.

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many inward investment projects there have been in the North East region since 1997; what the value of each project was; and what plans she has to attract future inward investment into the region. [131320]

Jacqui Smith: Invest-UK recorded 288 inward investment decisions in the North East region since 1997. This is based on information provided by companies at the time of announcement of the decision to invest in the UK. These figures include only those projects where Invest-UK and its regional partners were involved or, which have come to their notice.

Invest-UK does not have a value figure, as many companies do not notify this.

With regard to attracting future inward investment into the region, Invest-UK works in partnership with all of the UK's Development Agencies including One North East Development Agency, to attract the maximum level of inward investment and to market the UK's attractions for high quality investment.

Mobile Phone Charges

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations she has received from consumer organisations on simplifying the charging structures of mobile phone companies. [131123]

Mr. Timms: None.

Modern Languages

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what (a) assessment she has made and (b) research she has commissioned on the commercial impact of (i) the declining uptake of modern languages courses at GCSE, A level and undergraduate level and (ii) the change in status of modern foreign languages from a mandatory to an optional subject at Key Stage 4. [130710]

Ms Hewitt: Although the DTI has not commissioned any specific research on the commercial effects of the decline in the uptake of modern languages, We continue to monitor the situation for example making a point of asking established inward investors about the issues that concern them (currently they do not raise foreign language skills as such an area of concern).

We were of course party to the work carried out by the DfES Steering Group which met under the Chair of Baroness Ashton (and included representation from the Nuffield Foundation, FCO, British Chambers of Commerce and Trade Partners UK) tasked with developing a strategy for improving foreign language teaching. While the study of modern foreign languages will no longer be compulsory at Key Stage 4 from September 2004, any pupil wishing to do will have an entitlement to do so. This statutory entitlement is to be welcomed as a way of strengthening of the work done at key stages 2 and 3 and of encouraging greater take-up of modern foreign languages during the 14–16 phase and beyond.

We will of course be continuing to work with the DfES and others to monitor the situation.

Near Earth Objects

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures the Government has taken to fulfil each of the recommendations in the September 2000 Report of the Task Force on potentially hazardous Near Earth Objects: and if she will make a statement. [130857]

Ms Hewitt: The Government issued their response to the Task Force Report in February 2001 and an update to the response was issued in January 2002. My noble Friend the Minister for Science will be meeting the former members of the Task Force in the autumn. A further update will be issued before the end of the year.

Postal Services

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what criteria are used to distinguish between rural and urban post offices. [130798]

Mr. Timms: The decision to classify a post office branch as urban or rural is an operational matter for Post Office Ltd. The company classifies as rural any post office within a community of less than 10,000 inhabitants. Above that the post office is classified as urban. I understand that the company has a geographical mapping model that enables it to adopt a consistent approach to classification across the country.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what consultations have been undertaken by (a) Postwatch and (b) Postwatch Scotland since 2001; and how much each of these has cost. [129901]

Mr. Timms: This is a matter for Postwatch and I have therefore asked the Chairman of Postwatch to reply directly to the hon. Member.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the latest posting time is from each parliamentary constituency which will achieve first delivery of first class mail to the House the following day; and what the latest posting time is at the hon. Members' post office which will achieve next day first delivery of first class mail to each parliamentary constituency. [131059]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 18 September 2003]: This is an operational matter for Royal Mail Group plc. I have therefore asked the Deputy Chairman of Royal Mail to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Renewable Energy

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures she has put in place to develop the electricity grid to support the development of renewable energy resources. [131262]

Mr. Timms: The Government are clear that the electricity grid network needs to be developed to support more renewable generation. It is working closely with Ofgem to ensure that the costs of this required work is spread across the whole of the GB consumer base. An important part of this process will be the British Electricity Trading and Transmission Arrangements (BETTA), and these are currently under development.

The Government are committed to bringing forward legislation in time to implement BETTA in April 2005. Through the Transmission Issues Working Group, Government meet with Ofgem, the Scottish Executive, the Wales Assembly Government and the Transmission Assets Owners to review the progress of this important work. Already an early success is the start of the required planning work required to strengthen transmission lines in Scotland to accommodate an initial 2 GW of new renewable generation.

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make proposals concerning the renewable obligation under the renewable energy policy to (a) change the wording defining biomass and (b) exclude raw material from this definition. [131308]

Mr. Timms: We have no plans to change the definition of biomass in the way suggested.

A Statutory Consultation, "The Renewables Obligation (Amendment) Order 2003", was published on 29 August 2003. Its main focus is a set of modifications to the co-firing rules to enhance the prospects for energy crops without a radical change to the Obligation. Consultation closes on 21 November 2003.

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made towards the 2010 targets of electricity sales from licensed electricity suppliers coming from eligible renewable sales. [131309]

Mr. Timms: In 2002, 1.7 per cent. of electricity sales from licensed electricity suppliers came from sources eligible for the Renewables Obligation; the comparable figure for 2001 was 1.5 per cent.

In 2002, 3.0 per cent. of electricity generated in the UK came from all renewable sources; the comparable figure for 2001 was 2.6 per cent.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if she will make a statement on the implications for the future of renewable obligation certificate trading following the recent demise of TXU; [130519]

(2) if she will make an assessment of the performance of renewable obligation certificate trading. [130520]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 17 September 2003]: Renewables Obligation Certificate trading is a matter for the electricity industry.

We are aware of the electricity industry's concerns regarding the consequences of TXU going into administration and the implications of a potential shortfall in the Renewables Buy-out Fund for the value of Renewables Obligation Certificates and the level of confidence in the renewables market.

My officials are in discussion with the industry at present to discuss the implications of the potential shortfall and consider options for resolving the issue. I understand that officials from Ofgem are in discussion with the TXU administrator on compliance with the obligation.

Road Traffic Management

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she will answer the questions, references 117718 and 117719, on road traffic management proposals, tabled by the hon. Member for Twickenham for written answer on 5 June 2003. [131258]

Mr. Timms: I have answered the Member's questions today.

Royal Mail

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the effect on rail employment of the decision of Royal Mail to abandon the use of rail for post distribution. [129210]

Mr. Timms: I refer to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Glasgow, Baillieston (Mr. Wray) on 15 September 2003, Official Report, column 541W.

Small Businesses

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the start up rate was for small businesses in (a) the Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) Tyne and Wear, (d) the North East and (e) the UK in each year since 1997. [130735]

Nigel Griffiths: Business start-ups are measured officially by VAT registrations. The latest year for which VAT registration data are available is 2001. Data are not available for parliamentary constituencies.

The VAT registrations threshold has risen during this period from £48,000 to £54,000. There is no accurate estimate of the number of companies that would be added to this total if the £48,000 threshold had not risen by more than the rates of inflation.

VAT registrations 1997–2001, number and rate

	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001
Number
United Kingdom	182,570	186,250	178,460	183,325	175,455
North East Government Office Region	4,170	4,215	4 230	4,280	4,050
Tyne and Wear Metropolitan county	1,825	1,750,	1,785	1,800	1,675
South Tyneside	190	185	205	180	175
Rate per 10,000 resident adults[1]
United Kingdom	40	40	38	39	37
North East Government Office Region	21	21	21	21	20
Tyne and Wear Metropolitan county	21	20	21	21	19
South Tyneside	15	15	17	15	14

[1] Mid-year resident adults (aged 16 and over)

Source:

Business Start-ups and Closures: VAT Registrations and De-registrations 1994–2001

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what support the Government offers to new small businesses in the North East. [130736]

Jacqui Smith: Government support for new businesses comes in a variety of forms. The Business Link Operators (BLOs) put together programmes for start-up businesses, working with Enterprise Agencies and other partners, which are funded from a variety of sources, including: SBS core funding, residual SRB monies, RDA "single programme" funds, and European funds. In total, in the North East, the BLOs are spending around £3.6 million on start-up programmes (such as BL Tees Valley's "Start Right in Business" programme), and are contributing around £1.7 million to supporting incubation projects.

Support programmes vary in content between sub-regions, but essentially offer a programme of advice and assistance in key areas where new businesses require help, eg producing business plans to help access finance; developing marketing programmes, managing finance and cash flow, etc. They may be able to offer subsidies directly, or secure funding through other partners.

Help for start-up businesses does not end with the start-up programmes. LSC-funded workforce development, DTI-funded TPUK activities, and DTI's new products such as the R&D) grant are part of the wider range of services available via BLOs which may be appropriate for young businesses.

Access to Finance initiatives, such as the SBS-funded Regional Venture Capital fund (Capital North East) and Investor Readiness programmes (operated by Northern Enterprise and Entrust respectively), and the BL Tyne and Wear-operated regional Micro Loan fund can also benefit businesses in the early stage of operation, and lead to a more mature approach to business finance being inculcated into new businesses in a region where a grant culture has persisted. This is essential for the future growth prospects of businesses.

Start-up programmes in the North East are becoming better co-ordinated, with closer working between BLOs, Enterprise Agencies and other partners. Examples include the new start-up consortium in Tyne and Wear, closer working relationships in County Durham, and the "Start Right In Business" programme in Tees Valley. The on-going RDA-led review of business support process will develop these co-operative approaches further.

An RDA-led initiative "Strategy for Success" should lead, through the creation of centres of excellence and an DPR exploitation company, to the spin out of more businesses through the HEI sector.

At national level, SBS is co-ordinating the development of a cross-Government national strategy for start up businesses. This will draw on the experience and research from partners around the country to create a consistent, evidence-based start-up proposition, to which local variations may be added. It will also develop a co-ordinated between DWP, DFES and other Government Departments which will result in easier access and interface with entrepreneurs. An early result of such co-operation is the "No-nonsense Guide" to Government rules and regulations for setting up your business. This has been well received by start-up companies and by business support intermediaries.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action the Government is taking to encourage entrepreneurs to set up their own businesses in the North East. [130737]

Jacqui Smith: The information is as follows:

Enterprise Centres in six FE colleges in Tyne and Wear.

Sponsoring "Start a Business a day" initiative by the Chronicle Newspaper Co-operative working with People into Enterprise and Women into the Network to run events helping budding entrepreneurs turn hobbies into businesses.

Specialised programmes in decentralised advice centres in rural Northumberland, including motivational workshops and de-mystification sessions.

A three-day rural enterprise event.

Initiatives to encourage social enterprise such as "School for Social Entrepreneurs" and "Regen School" in Tyne and Wear and the work of the Community Enterprise team at BL County Durham. Co-operation being developed through NESEP (North East Social Enterprise Partnership) "Women get into Enterprise" programme, one of a number of initiatives to encourage enterprise in under-represented groups.

Linking in with incubation projects to provide co-ordinated start-up support and advice.

The RDA, ONE North East, has embarked on an ambitious programme to encourage more start up businesses by encouraging would-be entrepreneurs to take the plunge and start their businesses with the help of support programmes and agencies in the region, and in which the BLOs provide a key delivery role. This is using the flexibility of single programme funding to prioritise the entrepreneurship agenda in the NE to raise the relative start-up rate and encourage entrepreneurs to stay in the North East. Initiatives include:

A major event last April, organised by BL Tyne and Wear and funded by the RDA and SBS, in which the regions' BLOs and Enterprise Agencies ran Start up shows in Tyne and Wear and Teesside and which would-be entrepreneurs could speak directly with advisers, other entrepreneurs, etc.

This was followed by several local outreach events earlier this year supported by a regional enterprise PR campaign.

The "Enterprise Island" programme in which progress of 10 would-be entrepreneurs was charted in a film.

Initiatives are also being developed to boost graduate enterprise (building on programmes the universities have developed through HEFCE funding), and to further promote enterprise in schools building on "Enterprise Insight", Young Enterprise, and other programmes.

At national level, SBS is co-ordinating the development of a cross-Government strategy to encourage an enterprise culture. Emerging ideas for this will be closer co-operation with Job Centres and the benefits system (including ideas pioneered by Inbiz, a Teesside company), and with careers services to encourage self-employment and business start up as a career choice. The strategy is also expected to develop ideas for reducing risk to individuals contemplating business start-up.

Subcontinent

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on bilateral trade relations with (a) India, (b) Bangladesh and (c) Pakistan. [131009]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Trade relations between the UK and the South Asia markets are strong.

India, Pakistan and Bangladesh provide a wide range of business opportunities for UK companies. Trade Partners UK and Invest UK, the two operating arms of British Trade International (BTI), deliver a package of services to British and South Asian companies wishing to do business with each other.

BTI teams in our High Commission offices in India, Pakistan and Bangladesh and in the English regions are available to provide support and advice to British companies wishing to do business with all three countries.

In 2002 the value of the United Kingdom's bilateral trade (in goods) with the three markets was:

£ million

	UK exports	UK imports	Total
India	1,768	1,870	3,638
Bangladesh	68	482	550
Pakistan	234	488	722

Note:
Figures for trade in services in 2002 are currently unavailable.

Union Learning Representatives

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions she has had with trade union representatives on the development of union learning representatives. [130578]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I have been asked to reply.

Union Learning Representatives are a key component of the Government's new Skills Strategy. In developing the strategy we consulted widely and met with trade union representatives on a number of occasions to discuss the vital role that unions and their learning representatives have to play. The TUC is, of course, a key member of the Skills Alliance which will bring together Government, employers and trade unions to oversee the future development and delivery of the Skills Strategy.

Union Learning Representatives have already proved to be highly effective in helping to encourage workers to improve their skills, particularly workers with low skills and those with literacy and numeracy problems—the very people who so often miss out on learning opportunities. That is why we introduced legislation to give them statutory backing and rights to time off with pay which came into effect at the end of April 2003. This will help to reinforce the invaluable role that Union Learning Representatives are currently playing in the workplace to promote workforce development and open up new training opportunities for their colleagues.

There are currently around 6,500 Union Learning Representatives. The new statutory rights will help their numbers to grow and we look forward to seeing a national network of over 22,000 trained Union Learning Representatives in place by 2010, helping over 250,000 workers a year into learning.

TREASURY

Breast Cancer

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of breast cancer cases diagnosed in the United Kingdom in each of the past five years. [131314]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl to Dr. Julian Lewis, dated 30 September 2003:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question concerning the estimate of the number of breast cancer cases diagnosed in the United Kingdom in each of the past five years. I am replying in his absence. (131314)

The number of registrations of newly diagnosed cases of breast cancer in females in the United Kingdom in the most recent five years for which data are available are given in the following table. The figures shown are for females only and exclude the small number of breast cancer cases that occur in men.

Registrations of newly diagnosed cases of breast cancer in females, UK, 1996–2000

	Females
1996	37,000
1997	39,300
1998	39,500
1999	40,900
2000[1]	40,400

[1] Data for Scotland for 2000 are not yet available. The figure for the UK has been estimated using 1999 data for Scotland.

Sources:
National Cancer Intelligence Unit, Office for National Statistics.
Welsh Cancer Intelligence & Surveillance Unit.
Scottish Cancer Registry, National Health Service in Scotland.
Northern Ireland Cancer Registry

European Union

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the change in Britain's annual financial contribution to the European Union will be after 1 May. [131274]

Ruth Kelly: The Government publishes a trended forecast of the UK's net contribution to the EC Budget. The latest forecast, which was published in the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Budget Report (HC 500 (Table C11, footnote 3)), covers the period up to 2005–06 and includes the additional costs to the UK arising from enlargement.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost of membership of the European Union was in each year since 1997; and what these figures are expressed as a sum per taxpayer. [131276]

Ruth Kelly: Details of the United Kingdom's net contribution to the EC budget for each of the years 1997–98 to 2002–03, including an estimate per taxpayer, are set out in the following table:

	Net contribution (£ million)	Net contribution per taxpayer (£)
1997–98	2,567	98
1998–99	4,111	153
1999–2000	3,325	[1]
2000–01	4,318	147
2001–02	1,488	51
2002–03	3,097	105

[1] Estimates of taxpayers based on the 1999–2000 Survey of Personal Incomes (SPI) have been temporarily withdrawn.

Note:

Figures for 1997–98 to 2001–02 are outturn, the figure for 2002–03 is an estimated outturn.

Sources:

Net contribution figures taken from Table 3.1 of 2003 European Community Finances White Paper "Statement on the 2003 EC Budget and measures to counter fraud and financial mismanagement" (Cm 5800).

Net contribution per taxpayer calculated by dividing net contribution figure by number of taxpayers shown in Table 1.4 of Inland Revenue Statistics.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the financial management of the European Union. [131388]

Ruth Kelly: The Government publish an annual statement on European Community Finances, which includes details of recent developments in financial management and the fight against fraud. The most recent Statement was published in April 2003 (Cm 5800).

Financial Services

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out the timetable for mandatory electronic reporting required for all businesses regulated by the Financial Services Authority. [131257]

Ruth Kelly: The matter raised in this question is the responsibility of the Financial Services Authority. The FSA will be writing to the hon. Member.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he has taken since 1997 to reduce fraud in the financial services industry in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [131385]

Ruth Kelly: The Financial Services Authority has been established to regulate the financial services industry effectively, and has been given a specific statutory objective to reduce the potential for financial firms to be used for financial crime, including fraud.

Household Incomes

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the number of adults living on an income of less than (a) £5,000, (b) £7,500, (c) £10,000, (d) £15,000, (e) £20,000, (f) £30,000, (g) £35,000, (h) £40,000, (i) £50,000, (j) £75,000, (k) £100,000, (l) £150,000, (m) £200,000, (n) £500,000, (o) £1 million and (p) £10 million in the latest year for which information is available. [130553]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is provided for households and is set out in the table. The income definition used is household net equivalised income before housing costs.

Number of households in 2000–01 with net equivalised[1] income of less than	Number[2] (thousand)
(a) £5,000	483
(b) £7,500	1,857
(c) £10,000	4,651
(d) £15,000	10,950
(e) £20,000	15,872
(f) £30,000	21,090
(g) £35,000	22,319
(h) £40,000	23,048
(i) £50,000	23,795
(j) £75,000	24,290
(k) £100,000	24,439
(l) £150,000	24,504
(m) £200,000	24,523
(n) £500,000	24,576
(o) £1,000,000	24,586
(p) £10,000,000	24,586

[1] Income is adjusted or equivalised to take into account variations in both size and composition of the household. This process reflects the notion that a family of several people needs a higher income than a single person in order for both households to enjoy a comparable standard of living. Incomes of larger families are adjusted downwards and incomes of smaller households adjusted upwards.

[2] This is based on IGOTM Tax/Benefits model using the Family Resources Survey 2000–01.

Advertising Campaigns

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the publicity and advertising campaigns run by his Department since April 2002, specifying the (a) purpose, (b) cost to public funds, (c) number of staff involved and (d) method of evaluation in each case; and if he will make a statement. [124371]

Ruth Kelly: Information in the required format for all Departments for which the Chancellor has responsibility could be provided only at disproportionate cost. HM Treasury has conducted no such campaign since April 2002. Other Departments have carried out publicity campaigns in connection with, for example, their responsibilities for enforcing the law and assisting taxpayers with their obligations. Information about many such campaigns is included in the annual reports published by these Departments. Details were also provided in my answer to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) on 5 March 2003, Official Report, column 1062W. Planned expenditure for 2002–03 was provided in the Paymaster General's answer to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow) on 18 June 2003, Official Report, column 232W.

Debt

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average (a) unsecured debt per person and (b) annual income per person was in each year since 1997. [129931]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell to Dr. Vincent Cable, dated 30 September 2003:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question on unsecured debt per person and annual income per person. I am replying in his absence. (129931) The information requested is shown in the table below. The data for unsecured debt (households' total financial liabilities other than secured debt) and income (households1 gross disposable income) used in the calculations are national accounts series for the combined household and non-profit institutions serving households (NPISH) sectors. The accounts for the household and NPISH sectors are currently combined; separate estimates are not available.

The average annual disposable income and unsecured debt person can be obtained by dividing the appropriate national accounts totals by the UK population aged 16 and over. These are shown for the years requested in the table.

Average annual income and unsecured debt per person, UK, 1997–2002

	Annual Income per person (£)	Unsecured Debt per person (£)
1997	12,400	3,540
1998	12,680	3,790
1999	13,330	4,090
2000	13,980	4,470
2001	14,980	4,900
2002	15,310	5,330

Capital Gains Tax

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of capital gains tax is paid at the 40 per cent. rate of tax; and if he will make a statement. [130144]

Dawn Primarolo: 81 per cent. of the capital gains tax accrued in 2000–01 was paid at the 40 per cent. rate of tax.

Employment Disincentives

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effects on (a) wage inflation, (b) labour market productivity and (c) the economy of the disincentive for those on low incomes to change jobs because of short term cash flow problems. [129861]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government are committed to making work pay and to supporting low-income households in sustaining employment. The new tax credits help low-income families and working households by providing targeted financial support according to need and are designed to reduce households' uncertainty about their income when circumstances change. The Government are also encouraging low-income households to save more, helping them to deal with short-term cash flow problems. No assessment has yet been made of the impact of these policies on wage inflation, labour market productivity or the economy.

Corporation Tax

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many companies paid corporation tax at (a) the main rate, (b) the small companies rate and (c) a zero rate in each year from 1990–91 to 2003–04; and if he will make a statement. [130546]

Dawn Primarolo: Information on the numbers of companies liable for tax at different rates is published in Table 11.3 available on the Inland Revenue's website: www.inlandrevenue.gov.uk/stats/index. Figures for 2001–02 will be published shortly.

Corporate Venturing Scheme

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the costs of the Corporate Venturing Scheme announced in the March 2000 Budget for each year from 2000–01 to 2005–06; what assessment he has made of the economic effects of this scheme; and if he will make a statement. [130130]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimated cost of tax reliefs for the Corporate Venturing Scheme from 2000–01 to 2002–03 are:

£ million

Tax year	Cost of Tax reliefs
2000–01	5
2001–02[1]	2
2002–03[1]	1

[1] Figures for more recent years are subject to revision, as more information becomes available.

With a long-term measure such as CVS the full effects on outcomes such as investment, productivity and output will not become apparent for a number of years, in the meantime we will continue to monitor activity and expenditure.

Customs and Excise

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what seizures were made by Customs officials at (a) Newhaven, (b) Poole and (c) Isle of Wight ports in each of the last five years for which there are records of (i) drugs, (ii) firearms, (iii) pornography, (iv) illegal meat, (v) cigarettes and tobacco and (vi) other goods; and if he will make a statement. [127153]

John Healey: Seizures by number, and where applicable volume, for drugs, firearms, cigarettes, pornography and other goods for the requested ports are as follows. Data for the financial years prior to 2000–01 are not available.

Number of seizures (volumes in brackets where applicable)	2002–03		2001–02		2000–01
	Newhaven	Poole	Newhaven	Poole	Newhaven	Poole
Class A Drugs	1 (36.75kg)	2 (1.5kg)	0	0	0	0
Firearms and ammunition	0	1 (8)	1 (218)	1 (5)	n/a	n/a
Pornography	0	0	2	1	n/a	n/a

Number of seizures (volumes in brackets where applicable)	2002–03		2001–02		2000–01
	Newhaven	Poole	Newhaven	Poole	Newhaven	Poole
Cigarettes	43 (3,863,276)	81 (2,949,678)	157 (370,520)	173 (2,480,239)	17 (60,060)	92 (712,140)
Other[1]	0	10 (11)	1 (1)	8 (8)	0	0

[1] Includes gas canisters and offensive weapons.

There are no recorded seizures of these commodities from the Isle of Wight ports for the period in question.

Responsibility for illegal imports of meat and animal products passed to Customs on 11 April 2003 from DEFRA. Customs have no recorded seizures of illegal meat from the requested ports for the period in question.

Departmental Employment

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many jobs under the remit of his Department in (a) the core department, (b) non-departmental public bodies, (c) executive agencies and (d) independent statutory bodies, organisations and bodies financially sponsored by his Department are in (i) Scotland, (ii) each region in England, (iii) Wales, (iv) Northern Ireland and (v) overseas, broken down by (A) whole-time equivalent jobs and (B) the percentage per individual department, body or organisation. [127313]

John Healey: I refer the hon. Member to Table D of the annual publication 'Civil Service Statistics', which is available in the Library of the House.

This information is also available on the Cabinet Office Statistics website: http://www.civil-service.gov.uk/statistics/css.htm.

The Treasury has two advisory non-departmental public bodies and one public corporation:

NDPB	Staff number	Location
Statistics Commission	7	England
Public Services Productivity Panel Unit	No staff (12 members)	n/a
Bank of England[1]	2,187	England

[1] Bank of England is a Public Corporation.

Four parliamentary bodies are financially sponsored by the Treasury:

Bodies	Staff number	Location
The Commonwealth Parliamentary Association	7	England
The British American Parliamentary Group	1 (part-time)	England
The Inter-parliamentary Group	7	England
The British-Irish Inter-parliamentary Body	1 full-time, 1 part-time	England

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) special advisers, (b) press officers, (c) civil servants, (d) advisers to civil servants and (e) permanent staff were working for his Department in each year since 1996. [126486]

John Healey: The Treasury does not employ advisers to civil servants.

The staffing figures for permanent staff (civil servants) at HM Treasury since 1996 are published on the Cabinet Office web site at www.civil-service.qov.uk/statistics.

For the number of Press Officers employed by HM Treasury since 1996, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answers given by my hon. Friend the Financial Secretary to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) on 10 February 2002, Official Report, column 614W and the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow) on 10 April 2003, Official Report, column 400W.

The table following lists the number of Special Advisers in each year since 1996. Additionally, the Chief Economic Adviser has been appointed on Special Adviser terms since October 1999.

Number of special advisers in each year since 1996

Year[1]	HM Treasury Special Advisers[2]
1996	2
1997	3
1998	4
1999	3
2000	3
2001	4
2002	4
2003	3

[1] At 1 April.

[2] These figures do not include members of the Council of Economic Advisers that was established in 1997.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his statement of 9 June 2003, Official Report, column 415, on EMU, what the (a) composition and (b) remit is of the euro preparation committees in (i) Scotland, (ii) Wales and (iii) Northern Ireland. [131270]

Ruth Kelly: The composition and remits of the Euro Preparations Committees for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland are set out as follows:

(i) Scotland Euro Preparations Committee

(a) Composition

Scotland Office: Right hon. Alistair Darling MP, Secretary of State, David Crawley, Head of Office;

Scottish Executive: Right hon. Jack McConnell MSP, First Minister; right hon. Jim Wallace QC MSP, Deputy First Minister and Minister for Enterprise and Lifelong Learning; Andy Kerr MSP, Minister for Finance and Public Services;

John Elvidge, Permanent Secretary; Trevor Jones, Head of Health Department and Chief Executive, NHS Scotland; Dr. Andrew Goudie, Chief Economic Adviser;

HM Treasury: Ruth Kelly MP, Financial Secretary;

Committee of Scottish Clearing Bankers: Susan Rice, Chair;

Confederation of British Industry (Scotland): Iain McMillan, Director;

Convention of Scottish Local Authorities: Councillor Pat Watters, President;

Federation of Small Businesses (Scotland): Andy Willox, Scottish Policy Convenor;

Scottish Consumer Council: Graeme Miller, Chairman;

Scottish Council for Development and Industry: Donal Dowds, Chairman;

Scottish Council for Voluntary Organisations: Professor Joan Stringer, Convenor;

Scottish Enterprise: Dr. Robert Crawford, Chief Executive;

Scottish Financial Enterprise: Amanda Harvie, Chief Executive;

Scottish Retail Consortium: Eddie Thompson, Chairman;

Scottish Trades Union Congress: Tracey White, Assistant Secretary; and

The Scottish Chambers of Commerce: David Ross, Chairman.

(b) Remit

The Chancellor of the Exchequer proposed that Scotland should have its own Committee to oversee Scottish preparations for potential future UK entry into Economic and Monetary Union and to provide advice and input to the work of the UK National Standing Committee on the Euro.

The chairman of the Committee is the Secretary of State for Scotland and its work is being taken forward in partnership with the First Minister of the Scottish Executive.

Scottish Executive and Scotland Office Ministers also attend both the Committee of Devolved Euro Ministers and Euro Ministers meetings, which oversee public sector preparations.

As a devolved Administration the Scottish Executive is responsible for euro preparations within its own remit, but it is also responsible for overseeing preparations in other sectors in Scotland.

The role of the Scottish Euro Preparations Committee is to:

Oversee the work of Euro preparations across the Scottish economy;

Generate awareness of preparations issues in Scotland;

Ensure co-ordination and co-operation between key sectors;

Consult on the third outline National Changeover Plan in Scotland; and

Feedback particular Scottish views and issues to the Chancellor's Standing Committee on Euro Preparations (of which the Secretary of State for Scotland is a member).

(ii) Wales Euro Preparations Committee

(a) Composition

Wales Office: Peter Hain MP, Secretary of State for Wales; Don Touhig MP, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State;

Welsh Assembly Government: First Minister Rhodri Morgan; Minister for Finance, Local Government and Public Services; Sue Essex and Permanent Secretary Sir Jon Shortridge;

HM Treasury: Financial Secretary to the Treasury;

Cardiff Chamber of Commerce: Helen Conway;

CBI Wales: David Rosser, Director;

Chartered Accountants for Business in Wales: Andrew Leonard;

Farmers' Union of Wales: Brian Walters, Vice-President;

National Farmers' Union: Malcolm Thomas, Director;

NHS Wales: Martin Turner, Chief Executive Gwent Healthcare NHS Trust;

Wales Council for Voluntary Action: Graham Benfield, Chief Executive;

Wales Tourist Board: Jonathan Jones, Chief Executive;

Wales TUC: Margaret Hazell, Vice-President;

Welsh Consumer Council: Vivienne Sugar;

Welsh Development Agency: David Childs, Finance Director;

Welsh Language Board: Jon Walter Jones, Chief Executive; and

Welsh Local Government Association: Sandy Blair, Director.

(b) Terms of reference

The Chancellor proposed that Wales should have its own Committee to oversee Welsh preparations for potential future UK entry into Economic and Monetary Union.

The Secretary of State for Wales is taking this work forward in partnership with the First Minister of the Assembly, who has responsibility for euro preparations in policy areas under the Assembly's control.

The role of the Wales Euro Preparations Committee is to:

Oversee the preparations in Wales

Generate awareness of the preparations

Ensure co-ordination and co-operation between key sectors

Consult on the third outline National Changeover Plan

Feedback Wales' views to the Chancellor's Standing Committee on Euro Preparations, (of which the Secretary of State for Wales is a member).

(iii) Northern Ireland Euro Preparations Committee

(a) Composition

Northern Ireland Office: The right hon. Paul Murphy MP, Secretary of State for Northern Ireland; Ian Pearson MP, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State;

Head of NI Civil Service: Mr. Nigel Hamilton;

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development: Mr. Pat Toal, Permanent Secretary;

Department of Enterprise Trade and Investment: Mr. Bruce Robinson, Permanent Secretary;

Department of Finance and Personnel: Mr. David Thomson, Treasury Officer of Accounts

HM Treasury: Ruth Kelly MP, Financial Secretary

Confederation of British Industry (NI): Dr. Ian McMorris, Chairman;

NI Chamber of Commerce and Industry: Mr. Ian Morrow, Deputy Chief Executive;

Institute of Directors: Mr. Dennis Rooney, Chairperson;

Federation of Small Businesses: Mrs. Rosemary Armstrong, Lady Chair;

Northern Ireland Congress/Irish Congress of Trade Unions: Frank Bunting, Northern Secretary

NI Tourism Industry Confederation: Mr. John O'Carroll, Chief Executive;

NI Banker's Association: Mr. John Diver, Deputy Head of Payment Operations, Ulster Bank Ltd.;

Institute of Chartered Accountants (Ulster Society): Mr. John Hannaway, Chairman;

General Consumer Council for NI: Mr. Stephen Costello MBE, Chairman;

NI Council for Voluntary Action: Mr. Seamus McAleavey, Chief Executive;

Northern Ireland Centre for Competitiveness: Bob Barbour, Chief Executive;

Chartered Institute for Marketing: Mr. Michael Maguire, Regional Director;

NI Local Government Association: Heather Moorehead, Chief Executive.

The Chancellor proposed that Northern Ireland should have its own Committee to oversee local preparations for potential future UK entry into Economic and Monetary Union.

This work is being taken forward by the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland under Direct Rule and, on the restoration of Devolution, in partnership with the First Minister and Deputy First Minister of the Assembly, who will have responsibility for euro preparations in policy areas under the Assembly's control.

The role of the Northern Ireland Euro Preparations Committee is to:

Oversee the preparations in Northern Ireland

Generate awareness of the preparations

Ensure co-ordination and co-operation between key sectors

Consult on the third outline National Changeover Plan

Feedback Northern Ireland's views to the Chancellor's Standing Committee on Euro Preparations, (of which the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland is a member).

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his statement of 9 June, Official Report, column 415, on EMU, if he will list the locations of events to disseminate information and promote discussion which (a) have been held and (b) are planned, broken down by constituency. [131271]

Ruth Kelly: The Treasury continues to work closely with key stakeholders across the country/UK on practical preparations for potential future UK entry into Economic and Monetary Union.

New members have joined the Chancellor's Standing Committee from the Local Government Association, regional development associations, citizens advice and the National Council for Voluntary Organisations. New preparation committees in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland have been set up to oversee local preparations for potential future UK entry into Economic and Monetary Union.

Euro

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of the rate of economic growth in the eurozone since 1999; and if he will make a statement; [131378]

(2) what assessment he has made of the unemployment rate in the eurozone; and if he will make a statement. [131379]

Ruth Kelly: The Treasury's latest assessment of developments in and prospects for the euro area economy is set out in the April 2003 Financial Statement and Budget Report (HC 500).

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect upon the UK economy of the interest rate most recently set by the European Central Bank; and if he will make a statement. [131380]

Ruth Kelly: A full assessment of the importance of euro area developments for the UK economy was given in "UK membership of the single currency: an assessment of the five economic tests", published on 9 June (CM 5776).

Food Expenditure

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was spent on food by his Department and by each of the agencies for which it is responsible in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03; what proportion of that food by value was produced in the United Kingdom; what guidance he has issued to encourage the procurement of home-produced food; and if he will make a statement. [129368]

Ruth Kelly: The information is not available in the form requested.

Gold

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent assessment he has made of the world market in gold bullion. [131389]

Ruth Kelly: The Treasury monitors developments in the gold market on a daily basis and receives ongoing advice and analysis from the Bank of England. We are well aware of recent developments, including de-hedging operations by gold producers that have resulted in upward pressure on the US dollar price of gold.

Individual Savings Accounts

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what his estimate is of the revenue yield from (a) abolishing the tax relief on individual savings accounts and (b) halving the annual subscription limit for ISAs; and if he will make a statement; [130123]

(2) what his estimate is of the cost to the Exchequer of the individual savings account for each year from 1998–99 to 2005–06; what his estimate is of the effect of the ISA tax relief on total savings; and if he will make a statement. [130148]

Dawn Primarolo: Available estimates of the tax relief on ISAs from 1999–2000 to 2002–03 are contained in the following table.

Available estimates of the tax relief on ISAs[1]

£ million

Year	Cost of tax relief
1999–2000	120
2000–01	420
2001–02	725
2002–03	825

[1] From 1999–2000 to 2002–03

The estimates represent the reduction in tax liabilities from investment in ISAs. They do not indicate the yield from abolishing ISAs since in practice this could result in significant and uncertain changes in taxpayers' behaviour because of the range of alternative investment options. Therefore, no estimate is available of this yield.

There is no available estimate of the effect of ISAs on total savings. Overall, ISAs have attracted a wide range of individuals of different ages and income, whose savings experience will vary widely. They have attracted more younger and lower income savers than TESSAs and PEPs.

The relief in any particular year is derived from subscriptions built up over a number of years, including the current year. In 2000–01, the latest year for which estimates are available, contributions in excess of half of the current limits represented around 40 per cent. of the total. Assuming a similar distribution of contributions in every year since the introduction of ISAs would imply that the costs of relief given in the table would have been 40 per cent. lower each year.

Iraq

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether it is his policy that Iraq's debt should be written off. [129860]

Ruth Kelly: The Government's paper "A Vision for Iraq and the Iraqi People" of 17 March made it clear that we are seeking a fair and sustainable solution to Iraq's external debt problems.

The Government believes the most effective way to deliver a fair and sustainable solution is by asking the International Monetary Fund (IMF), International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (IBRD) and other responsible international organisations, to make a full assessment of Iraq's needs, resources and obligations. We expect this to be followed by a shared solution through the Paris Club of official creditors and comparable treatment from other creditors. On 14 April the Prime Minister stated in this context that he hopes people will be generous in recognizing Iraq's needs for the future.

We strongly supported the International Monetary and Finance Committee (IMFC) and Development Committee statements about the importance of addressing the debt issue. The IMF and IBRD have started making their assessments.

UNSCR 1483 welcomes the readiness of creditors, including those of the Paris Club, to seek a solution to Iraq's sovereign debt problems, protects oil revenues from seizure until December 2007, and provides a transparent route for settlement of UN compensation claims.

We welcomed the 10 July Paris Club statement that creditors ". . . share the view that they don't expect Iraq to be in a position to resume payments to them before end 2004." We expect this unofficial moratorium to allow sufficient time for the establishment of an internationally recognized, representative Government of Iraq, legally empowered to negotiate and agree an IMF programme and debt treatments with creditors.

Lost Working Days

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his answer of 1 September, Official Report, column 884W, on lost working days and chronic pain, when he will supply the information requested. [131199]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Burstow, dated 30 September 2003:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question pursuant to my answer of 1st September, Official Report, column 884W (126352), on lost working days and chronic pain. (131199)

Unfortunately, due to what I understand was an administrative error, the answer to another of your questions (126506) was printed at the above Hansard reference by mistake. The answer that should have been provided is given below.

Using data from the Labour Force Survey (LFS), it is estimated that in England, in the twelve months ending in May 2003, there were 89.25 million working days lost due to sickness or injury. The corresponding figure for the previous twelve months was 96.68 million. Comparable data for earlier periods are not available. The LFS does not collect information about the types of illnesses or injuries which cause sickness absence. Therefore, information about the number of working days lost because of chronic pain is not available.

I apologise for the delay in providing an answer to this question.

Microsoft

Norman Lamb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was paid to Microsoft in licensing fees by his Department and its agencies in each of the last three years; and how much has been budgeted for (a) 2003–04 and (b) 2004–05. [130685]

John Healey: The information requested is commercially confidential and is covered by Exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Mortgage Companies

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to introduce a statutory obligation on mortgage companies to advise borrowers about the risks of using property and equity release as a vehicle for pension investment when they take on a new mortgage. [131202]

Ruth Kelly: On 1 July 2003, Parliament approved legislation bringing mortgages, including equity release mortgages, within the scope of Financial Services Authority (FSA) regulation with effect from 31 October 2004. The FSA is consulting on rules governing the advice and selling of these products.

National Insurance

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received regarding the status of employers' national insurance contributions for seafarers on ships trading in United Kingdom territorial waters. [129629]

Dawn Primarolo: Since my announcement in April 2003 regarding employer's national insurance contributions for mariners engaged through offshore manning companies, I have received letters from shipping industry representatives and employers affected. I also met industry representatives on 8 September 2003. In the light of the evidence they presented concerning the likely effect of the proposals on the competitiveness of UK shipping in territorial waters, I have decided to restrict the changes I announced to mariners who are employed in inshore waters classified as A, B, C or D under the Merchant Shipping (Categorisation of Waters) Regulations 1992. Regulations were laid before Parliament on 18 September 2003 and the changes will apply from 13 October 2003.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much has been lost to the National Insurance Fund by reductions in contributions by employers to compensate for the climate change levy. [129716]

Dawn Primarolo: The reduction in contributions to the National Insurance Fund to compensate for the climate change levy is £1.1 billion for each of the years 2001–02 and 2002–03 and it is estimated to be £1.2 billion for 2003–04. These figures are rounded to the nearest £0.1 billion.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the transfer of the contribution to the NHS from the National Insurance Fund matches the total received by the increase of 1 per cent. in national insurance rates. [129726]

Dawn Primarolo: Under the National Insurance Contributions Act 2002, all the proceeds of the 1 per cent. increase in national insurance contributions from April 2003 are added to the amount allocated to the national health service. The effect on the National Insurance Fund of the change in the allocation to the national health service from national insurance contributions, following the National Insurance Contributions Act 2002, is shown in Appendix 5 of the Report by the Government Actuary on the drafts of the Social Security Benefits Up-rating Order 2003 and the Social Security (Contributions) (Re-rating and National Insurance Funds Payments) Order 2003. This was presented to Parliament in February 2003.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the amount of the Treasury's supplement to the National Insurance Fund would be if it had been paid at the same rate that prevailed from 1911 to the late 1980s; and what proportion the supplement would now be as a proportion of the total cost of the basic pension. [129866]

Dawn Primarolo: The Treasury Supplement was abolished in 1988–89. It is not possible to say what the amount of the supplement would be for the current year, as the relevant rate used to calculate the supplement varied from one year to the next.

Rented Properties

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the financial benefits to the Exchequer of creating a bond payment scheme for tenants living in rented properties. [131127]

John Healey: No assessment has been made of the financial benefits to the Exchequer of creating a bond payment scheme for tenants living in rented properties.

Research and Development Tax Credit

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost arising from cash repayments and enhanced deductions of the research and development tax credit in 2000–01. [131042]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 18 September 2003]: For companies claiming the R&D tax credit for small or medium-sized companies in 2000–01, the cost to the Exchequer was £75 million.

Personal Expenditure

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimates are of the proportion of income paid in (a) income tax, (b) income tax and national insurance contributions, (c) income tax, NICs and value added tax and (d) income tax, NICs, vat and council tax for each income decile for each year since 1990–91; and if he will make a statement. [130557]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell to Mr. David Laws, dated 30 September 2003:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question on estimates of the proportion of income paid in (a) income tax, (b) income tax and national insurance contributions, (NICs), (c) income tax, NICs and value added tax (VAT) and (d) income tax, NICs, VAT and council tax, for each income decile for each year since 1990–91. I am replying in his absence. (130557)

Due to changes in some survey variables, consistent estimates for UK taxes and income are only available with effect from the financial year 1996–97. These are produced from the Office for National Statistics' analysis "The effects of taxes and benefits on household income" and the latest analysis for 2001–02 was published on 11 April 2003 on the National Statistics website.

Results for 2001–02 and earlier years are also published in 'Economic Trends', which can be obtained from the House of Commons Library. The analysis includes measures of income inequality for the United Kingdom as a whole based on data from the Expenditure and Food Survey (EPS), formerly the Family Expenditure Survey (FES). For the data that you have requested, sample sizes are only sufficient to allow a breakdown to be given by quintiles of income distribution and not by decile.

Tables 1 to 6 show for each year between 1996–97 and 2001–02 the requested direct and indirect taxes paid as a proportion of gross income for all households in the UK, and for each income quintile group where households are ranked by equivalised disposable income. Equivalisation is a standard methodology that takes into account the size and composition of households and adjusts their incomes to recognise differing demands on resources. The net council tax figures are gross council tax less reported council tax benefits and discounts. The tables also show the equivalised disposable income quintile point boundaries, which have been calculated separately for each year. For example, the 1st quintile point is the income below which one fifth of all households are estimated to lie. The quintile point boundaries differ between each year as shown in the tables.

Table 1: Selected direct and indirect taxes paid as a percentage of gross income by equivalised disposable income quintile, 1996–97

United Kingdom % of gross income

Quintile	Income boundary[1] (£ per year)	Income tax	Income tax and national insurance contributions (NIC)	Income tax, NIC and value added tax (VAT)	Income tax, NIC, VAT and council tax
Bottom		3.2	4.6	14.7	17.9
	8,031
2nd		5.9	8.5	17.0	19.7
	11,344
3rd		10.0	14.2	21.9	24.2
	15,519
4th		12.9	17.9	24.9	26.8
	21,964
Top		17.4	21.5	27.0	28.4
Average for all households		12.9	17.0	23.8	25.7

[1] Boundary point between equivalised disposable income quintiles

Source:

Office for National Statistics, based on the analysis 'The effects of taxes and benefits on household income', published on the ONS website and in Economic Trends.

Table 2: Selected direct and indirect taxes paid as a percentage of gross income by equivalised disposable income quintile, 1997–98

United Kingdom % of gross income

Quintile	Income boundary[1] (£ per year)	Income tax	Income tax and national insurance contributions (NIC)	Income tax, NIC and value added tax (VAT)	Income tax, NIC, VAT and council tax
Bottom		2.9	4.4	14.6	17.8
	8,504
2nd		5.5	8.2	16.5	19.4
	11,922
3rd		9.7	14.2	21.8	24.2
	16,342
4th		13.0	18.2	25.3	27.2
	23,457
Top		17.4	21.6	27.0	28.4
Average for all households		12.9	17.1	23.8	25.8

[1] Boundary point between equivalised disposable income quintiles

Source:

Office for National Statistics, based on the analysis 'The effects of taxes and benefits on household income', published on the ONS website and in Economic Trends.

Table 3: Selected direct and indirect taxes paid as a percentage of gross income by equivalised disposable income quintile, 1998–99

United Kingdom % of gross income

Quintile	Income boundary[1] (£ per year)	Income tax	Income tax and national insurance contributions (NIC)	Income tax, NIC and value added tax (VAT)	Income tax, NIC, VAT and council tax
Bottom		3.7	5.3	16.0	19.8
	8,785
2nd		6.2	9.1	17.3	20.3
	12,494
3rd		10.3	14.7	22.4	25.0
	17,192
4th		13.2	18.4	25.4	27.4
	24,255
Top		18.2	22.3	27.8	29.2

Table 3: Selected direct and indirect taxes paid as a percentage of gross income by equivalised disposable income quintile, 1998–99

United Kingdom % of gross income

Quintile	Income boundary[1] (£ per year)	Income tax	Income tax and national insurance contributions (NIC)	Income tax, NIC and value added tax (VAT)	Income tax, NIC, VAT and council tax
Average for all households		13.5	17.7	24.5	26.6

[1] Boundary point between equivalised disposable income quintiles

Source:

Office for National Statistics, based on the analysis 'The effects of taxes and benefits on household income', published on the ONS website and in Economic Trends.

Table 4: Selected direct and indirect taxes paid as a percentage of gross income by equivalised disposable income quintile, 1999–2000

United Kingdom % of gross income

Quintile	Income boundary[1] (£ per year)	Income tax	Income tax and national insurance contributions (NIC)	Income tax, NIC and value added tax (VAT)	Income tax, NIC, VAT and council tax
Bottom		3.2	4.7	15.9	20.1
	9,171
2nd		6.3	9.1	17.3	20.6
	13,173
3rd		10.1	14.3	22.1	24.8
	18,212
4th		13.3	18.3	25.2	27.4
	26,118
Top		17.8	21.7	26.8	28.2
Average for all households		13.4	17.4	24.0	26.2

[1] Boundary point between equivalised disposable income quintiles

Source:

Office for National Statistics, based on the analysis 'The effects of taxes and benefits on household income', published on the ONS website and in Economic Trends.

Table 5: Selected direct and indirect taxes paid as a percentage of gross income by equivalised disposable income quintile, 2000–01

United Kingdom % of gross income

Quintile	Income boundary[1] (£ per year)	Income tax	Income tax and national insurance contributions (NIC)	Income tax, NIC and value added tax (VAT)	Income tax, NIC, VAT and council tax
Bottom		3.6	5.0	16.4	20.6
	9,790
2nd		7.3	9.9	18.5	21.8
	13,808
3rd		10.9	15.0	22.8	25.4
	19,029
4th		13.9	18.8	25.7	27.9
	27,109
Top		17.7	21.5	26.8	28.3
Average for all households		13.7	17.5	24.3	26.5

[1] Boundary point between equivalised disposable income quintiles

Source:

Office for National Statistics, based on the analysis 'The effects of taxes and benefits on household income', published on the ONS website and in Economic Trends.

Table 6: Selected direct and indirect taxes paid as a percentage of gross income by equivalised disposable income quintile, 2001–02

United Kingdom % of gross income

Quintile	Income boundary[1] (£ per year)	Income tax	Income tax and national insurance contributions (NIC)	Income tax, NIC and value added tax (VAT)	Income tax, NIC, VAT and council tax
Bottom		3.3	4.5	15.8	20.3
	10,417
2nd		6.3	8.7	16.2	19.6
	14,761
3rd		10.3	14.3	21.2	24.0
	20,082

Table 6: Selected direct and indirect taxes paid as a percentage of gross income by equivalised disposable income quintile, 2001–02
United Kingdom % of gross income

Quintile	Income boundary[1] (£ per year)	Income tax	Income tax and national insurance contributions (NIC)	Income tax, NIC and value added tax (VAT)	Income tax, NIC, VAT and council tax
4th	28,631	13.5	18.3	24.5	26.8
Top		18.3	22.1	26.7	28.1
Average for all households		13.7	17.5	23.6	25.8

[1] Boundary point between equivalised disposable income quintiles
Source:
Office for National Statistics, based on the analysis 'The effects of taxes and benefits on household income', published on the ONS website and in Economic Trends.

Road Pricing

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress he has made in the development of a scheme for charging road hauliers for road use; and when he expects to implement the scheme. [130966]

John Healey: "Modernising the taxation of the haulage industry—lorry road-user charge—Progress Report Two", published on 6 May 2003 and available in the Library of the House, described the Government's plans to develop the lorry road-user charge, alongside an offsetting cut in hauliers' fuel duty. Since then Customs and Excise have been working very closely with the haulage industry and with other stakeholders to refine the detailed requirements of the Charge. This is necessary before the tendering process can begin.

The charge is a new and complex development, and it will therefore be some time before we will be certain about when it can be introduced.

The Government and the haulage industry want to ensure that the Charge will work reliably and as intended when it goes live. In the meantime our plan remains to introduce the Charge in 2006.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he intends that British road hauliers will have to pay vehicle excise duty for individual lorries when he implements the scheme for road use charges. [130967]

John Healey: The Government stated in "Modernisation the taxation of the haulage industry: progress report two", published in May 2003, that when introduced the distance based lorry user charge will be offset though tax cuts in fuel duty.

Decisions about vehicle excise duty for lorries will be made separately by the Chancellor as part of the normal Budget decision making process.

Sweden (Euro Referendum)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what reports he has commissioned on the euro campaign in Sweden. [130043]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 17 September 2003]: None. However, the Government continually monitor economic and political developments in other economies.

Tax Credits

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Galloway and Upper Nithsdale (Mr. Duncan) of 3 July 2003, Official Report, column 377W, on tax credits, how many written appeals against tax credit decisions for (a) disagreements about award notices and (b) reporting changes in circumstances have been received in each of the last six months; and of those, how many were found to be in favour of the appellant. [126545]

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what action he is taking to reduce the length of time it takes for the Inland Revenue to make a decision on appeals about the level of tax credit awarded; [128212]

(2) what assessment he has made of the length of time it takes for the Inland Revenue to make a decision on appeals about the level of tax credit awarded. [128213]

Dawn Primarolo: Up to the end of August, when over 4.6 million claims were in payment, less than 0.5 per cent. had had written correspondence classified as CTC or WTC appeals. Over half of these appeals had been settled by 31 August.

The Inland Revenue has increased the resources allocated to handling appeals against tax credit awards. This has had a significant impact on its handling of appeals, in further improving the rate at which appeals are settled.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many claims for compensation in relation to the delivery of the child and working tax credits have been received; and how many have been (a) processed, (b) successful and (c) unsuccessful. [128749]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is not available in the form requested.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many letters to the Inland Revenue from right hon. and hon. Members about working family tax credit applications were awaiting a reply on 31 August; how many of those were over (a) 30 days old and (b) 60 days old; and if he will make a statement. [128802]

Dawn Primarolo: At mid-September 2003 there were no letters from right hon. and hon. Members about working families tax credit applications awaiting a reply.

Clive Efford: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total paid out since May 1997 to increase family incomes has been; and what has been the average gain per family (a) in the UK and (b) in Eltham. [129432]

Dawn Primarolo: Total benefit and tax credit expenditure directed at children from 1997–98 to 2003–04 (in 2003–04 prices) is estimated at £106 billion. The real terms increase in annual spending on financial support for children over this period is 87 per cent.

As a result of personal tax and benefit measures on average families with children in the UK are £1,200 better off in real terms this year compared with 1997–98. It is not possible to estimate the equivalent gain for families living in Eltham.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the effect on employment of the working tax credit; and if he will make a statement. [130016]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 16 September 2003]: The working families' tax credit was designed to improve work incentives and help families move into employment, and evaluation findings will be published in due course. Building on the success of WFTC, the new working tax credit is a further step in improving in-work support for low earners.

Tax Rates

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the revenue yield from introducing a rate of tax of (a) 50 per cent. and (b) 45 per cent. on (i) incomes over £100,000 per annum, (ii) taxable incomes over £100,000 per annum, (iii) incomes over £150,000 per annum, (iv) taxable incomes over £150,000 per annum and (v) capital gains over £100,000 per annum; and if he will make a statement. [130138]

Dawn Primarolo: We are compiling comprehensive information on income tax which we expect to publish on the Inland Revenue website shortly. A copy will be placed in the Library of the House.

The full-year capital gains yields from introducing a rate of tax of (a) 50 per cent. and (b) 45 per cent. on incomes over £100,000 per annum are £100 million and £50million respectively.

Thalidomide Trust

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what meetings he has had with the Thalidomide Trust in the last 12 months; and what advice and assistance he has offered to the Trust. [131302]

Dawn Primarolo: I met representatives of the Thalidomide Trust on 18 December 2002. Subsequently, Inland Revenue officials visited the Trust to offer direct advice and assistance on a number of issues, including tax repayment and access to tax credits.

Treasury Growth Forecasts

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the accuracy of Treasury growth forecasts over the last three years. [129084]

Mr. Boateng: In recent years, Treasury forecasts of GDP growth have outperformed the average of independent forecasts (as included in "Forecasts for the UK Economy—A comparison of independent forecasts", HM Treasury).

VAT

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to preserve the zero rate of UK VAT for (a) children's clothing and (b) motorcycle safety helmets under European Commission proposals to revise reduced rates of value added tax (COM(2003) 397 final); and if he will make a statement. [129134]

Dawn Primarolo: We have made clear that the European Commission's proposals as they currently stand are unacceptable.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Burundi

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the situation in Burundi; what actions his Department is taking to support the peace process; and if he will make a statement. [130690]

Mr. Mullin: The latest round of talks between the FDD (Nkurunziza) and the Government of Burundi in Dar es Salaam ended on 16 September without agreement. It is not clear how the regional initiative will now respond.

The British Government is committed to supporting the Arusha process and the transitional Government institutions. We have given extensive support to South African Vice President Zuma and his facilitation team. We are also supporting the African Mission in Burundi, both financially and politically.

Colombia

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what support he has offered President Uribe to assist in the safe return of the two British people taken hostage by terrorist guerrillas in Colombia. [131245]

Mr. MacShane: We welcome the news of Mathew Scott's escape from his captors in Colombia and are continuing our efforts to secure the release of Mark Henderson, the other Briton who was among those abducted in the Sierra Nevada National Park on 12 September. We have offered help from British police kidnap specialists to the Colombian government. Embassy staff in Santa Marta are also liaising closely with the Colombian authorities involved in the search for the hostages. We have stressed throughout the incident the need for the safety of the hostages to be put above all other considerations.

Ethical Foreign Policy

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what actions his Department takes to ensure that the UK pursues an ethical foreign policy. [131363]

Mr. Rammell: It is increasingly clear that respect for human rights, good governance and the rule of law helps underpin political stability, economic development and open societies. Ensuring respect for human rights remains, therefore, at the heart of the Government's foreign policy. On 18 September, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) published its Annual Report on Human Rights 2003 which sets out the Government's work over the past year to promote human rights abroad. A copy of the report has been sent to all Members of Parliament and is also available on the FCO's website (www.fco.gov.uk). The report includes details of projects funded under the FCO's Human Rights Project Fund which has spent £17 million over five years on over 600 human rights projects in more than 90 countries.

Iraq

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the frequency of abduction of Iraqi (a) women and (b) children. [130312]

Mr. Rammell: Given the current nature of policing in Iraq no comprehensive crime recording exists. Crime recording and analysis will of course need to be part of the reformed Iraqi Police Service.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the UK is making financial contributions to other coalition nations' forces in Iraq. [129750]

Mr. Rammell [holding answer 16 September 2003]: We are providing some logistical help to Coalition partners operating under UK command in Multinational Division South East (MND SE). We continue to assess the help that we could provide on a case by case basis.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many military personnel from each of the coalition countries are deployed in Iraq; and what he estimates the totals will be in six months' time. [129882]

Mr. Rammell [holding answer 16 September 2003]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 15 September 2003, Official Report, column 587W. We keep force levels under constant review as the situation develops. We are not at this stage able to estimate what numbers will be in six months time.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans the Government have for posting civil servants to Iraq. [131141]

Mr. Rammell: We have seconded over 100 UK civil servants to the Coalition Provisional Authority (CPA) in Iraq since the end of the conflict. They have made an outstanding contribution to the CPA's work in providing services across Iraq, and we expect to maintain at least this level of commitment over the next few months.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what preparations have been made to hand over border controls in Iraq from coalition forces to Iraqi civilians. [131143]

Mr. Rammell: We are working to give the Iraqis a greater role in security. We are assisting the development of the border police and the new Iraqi army which will have a role in border security. On 15 September there were 2,122 trained border police working alongside coalition forces and a further 3,269 training. The Shalamcheh Point of Entry is now manned by Iraqis.

Afghanistan

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how many soldiers have left the Afghan army since training by British forces began; and what effects this has had on the proposed date of the completion of the training of the Afghan army; [130777]

(2) when he expects the training of the Afghan army to be complete; and how many recruits have now been trained. [130780]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The US leads international efforts to establish a new Afghan National Army (ANA). UK personnel trained the first battalion of the ANA in April 2002 and have been providing NCO training since March 2003. The ANA decree signed by President Karzai in December 2002 refers to training up to 70,000 personnel but does not specify a completion date. We do not have access to exact figures for personnel who have completed the US training program, or for the retention rate. But the ANA currently consists of eight battalions and as of late June around 4,500 soldiers had undergone basic training.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the process of democratisation and political participation in Afghanistan; what recent discussions (a) he and (b) members of his Department have had with representatives of the Afghan Government; and if he will make a statement. [131338]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Work has begun on a new Afghan constitution. The UK has made clear that the new constitution must reflect Afghan culture and traditions and also respect Afghanistan's obligations under international human rights standards. A Constitutional Loya Jirga will meet in December to approve a new constitution.Elections are due in mid-2004, but it has yet to be decided how these are to be organised. The UN has begun the voter registration process, although they are still seeking funding for this programme. The UK has so far allocated £3 million to assist with preparations for the elections, and we will consider further requests for funding.

During their visits to Afghanistan earlier this year, both my right hon. Friends the Foreign Secretary and the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (Mr. Rammell) met with President Karzai and a number of his Ministers in the Afghan Transitional Administration. Reform of the political process was one of the many issues that were discussed. Officials from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and our embassy in Kabul are in regular contact with members of the Transitional Administration on these issues.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions (a) he and (b) members of his Department have had with representatives of NATO member states' governments concerning the expansion of (i) the number and (ii) the mandate of peacekeeping operations in Afghanistan; and if he will make a statement. [131339]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The UK has regular discussions at all levels with NATO partners both bilaterally and in NATO fora on matters relating to Afghanistan, including the International Security Assistance Force (ISAF). NATO took over leadership of ISAF in August 2003 and is currently engaged in a review of ISAF's role. It would be inappropriate for us to second-guess the outcome of this review and any possible effect it might have on the ISAF mandate or the number of troops required for any additional tasks. But any change to ISAF's role would also require amendment of its mandate through the UN.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions (a) he and (b) members of his Department have had with representatives of the Russian Government concerning peacekeeping operations in Afghanistan. [131340]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: On 26 June 2003, my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary briefed President Putin and Foreign Minister Ivanov on his forthcoming visit to Afghanistan. Russia is not directly participating in the International Security Assistance Force in Afghanistan. But we regularly discuss issues relating to Afghanistan, including security issues, with the Russian Government, both bilaterally and in international fora such as the NATO-Russia Council and the UN. Most recently, officials briefed the Russian embassy in London on 15 September 2003 on progress made by the UK Provincial Reconstruction Team in Mazar-e Sharif.

Arms Embargoes

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will impose secondary arms embargoes on countries that continue to supply countries with military or para-military equipment in violation of an existing arms embargo. [131146]

Mr. Rammell: Any proposal for sanctions, secondary or otherwise needs to be looked at on a case-by-case basis. Her Majesty's Government supports the use of sanctions that are closely targeted and designed to deliver a clear objective. Such measures are most effective when they are enforced by multilateral institutions such as the UN, the EU or the OSCE. The UK therefore seeks to work with the international community where it can to prevent sanctions breaches.

The UK has supported the imposing of secondary sanctions against countries where appropriate; for instance, UNSCR 997(1995) which imposed an arms embargo on Rwanda also imposes an embargo on the sale or supply of arms to persons in the States neighbouring Rwanda; "if that sale or supply is for the purpose of the use of such arms or materiel within Rwanda".

Article 111.8 (EU Draft Constitutional Treaty)

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact of the unanimity requirement on the effectiveness of Article 111.8 Draft Constitutional Treaty for the European Union in combating discrimination. [130859]

Mr. MacShane: The Government believe that the unanimity requirement in Article III-8 will provide a good basis for EU legislation to combat various forms of discrimination. The Government consider that the requirement of unanimity will ensure that EU legislation is framed appropriately in order to take account of national diversity as well as the principles of proportionality and subsidiarity. Furthermore, initiatives taken under Article III-8 are measures aimed at supporting member state action, and do not therefore in any case stop member states putting in place additional measures.

Asbestos

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much has been spent by his Department and its agencies on (a) asbestos surveys and (b) the management and removal of asbestos since 1 January 2001; and what budget is available to (i) commission asbestos surveys and (ii) manage and remove asbestos from buildings in (A) 2003 and (B) 2004. [130921]

Mr. Rammell: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office commissioned a complete review of asbestos in buildings in the UK in 2002. The cost of this survey was £81,500. Approximately £180,000 has been spent on the removal of asbestos during routine maintenance and refurbishment works. No further expenditure on surveys is anticipated for the next two years. There is no planned programme for asbestos removal in 2003 and 2004 as the review did not indicate that this is necessary.

In our posts overseas, the cost of asbestos specific surveys since January 2001 has been £72,672. The management and removal of asbestos is however a component of building maintenance budgets devolved to our Posts, and it is therefore not possible separately to identify asbestos related expenditure without incurring disproportionate costs.

Subcontinent

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the UK's relationship with (a) India, (b) Bangladesh and (c) Pakistan. [131008]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: This Government attaches great importance to the South Asian region as a whole.

The UK and India work together on regional and global issues, poverty relief, trade and investment, science and the environment. The shared vision was set out in the New Delhi Declaration of January 2002. There has been a series of high-level visits to and from India. Outward visits have been made by: my right hon. Friends the Deputy Prime Minister; the Foreign Secretary; and Secretaries of State for Defence; Environment, Food and Rural Affairs; Culture; Trade and Industry; and the then Secretary of State for International Development (Clare Short). We have received recent inward visits from Indian Ministers including the Prime Minister, Deputy Prime Minister, Foreign Minister and Defence Minister.

The UK and Bangladesh regularly engage on all levels and there have been a number of high profile visits between our two countries, including that of my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to Dhaka in January 2002, and that of the Bangladeshi Foreign Minister, Morshed Khan, to London in May 2003.

Our bilateral relationship with Pakistan is close. Our relationship has been strengthened by the initiatives launched by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister in Islamabad in the judicial, commercial and defences spheres. We very much welcomed the official visit to the UK in June 2003 by President Musharraf.

The large number of British nationals of South Asian origin play a major part in Britain's economy and culture and strengthen the partnerships we share with India, Bangladesh, and Pakistan.

Brazilian Prisons

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many United Kingdom citizens have been detained in Brazilian prisons in each year since 1997. [131333]

Mr. Mullin: The total number of British prisoners detained in Brazilian prisons each year since 1997 is as follows:

Year	Number
1997	15
1998	8
1999	12
2000	11
2001	12
2002	15
2003[1]	26

[1] To date

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list for each year since 1997 the representations (a) he and (b) members of his Department have made to representatives of the Brazilian government concerning the conditions of gaols in Brazil; what assurances were sought; what assurances were given; and if he will make a statement. [131334]

Mr. Rammell: Since 1997, our dialogue with Brazil on human rights questions has taken place within the framework of the UK-Brazil Joint Declaration on human rights. The situation in Brazil's prisons forms a regular part of our bilateral dialogue. Prisons was one of the topics I discussed during my meeting with Nilmario Miranda, Brazil's Special Secretary for Human Rights, in Brasilia last May.

We have developed an active programme of co-operation with Brazil in this area. A project to improve the management of prisons in the state of Sao Paulo, thereby increasing respect for the human rights of prisoners, has received funding of £191,430 from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's (FCO) Human Rights Project Fund. Key project partners include the Brazilian Federal Government's Department of Prisons and the Sao Paulo State Government's Secretariat of Prison Administration. On 29 August, a successful workshop was held to encourage other State Governments to replicate the ongoing project and discussions continue with federal and state authorities to this end.

A project to produce a Brazilian Portuguese language version of a handbook, 'A Human Rights Approach to Prison Management' has received funding of £12,200 from the FCO's Human Rights Project Fund. The project, operating in partnershipwith the Brazilian Federal Government's Department of Prisons, aims to distribute copies of this practical guide to all prison staff throughout Brazil, promoting best practice in placing human rights at the centre of prison management, thereby increasing practical respect for the human rights of prisoners throughout the country.

Central Asia

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the security situation in Central Asia and its (a) direct and (b) indirect causes. [131336]

Mr. Rammell: We monitor the security situation in Central Asia closely. Security in the region is affected by many factors, including the threat from local and international terrorism, crime, and the political situation in each country.

We are not aware of any current, specific terrorist threat to British nationals in Central Asia, but we cannot discount the possibility of attacks. We advise travellers to the region to contact the relevant embassy for up-to-date advice.

Although we have no immediate plans to change our current assessment of the security situation in Central Asia, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's travel advice is kept under constant review.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions (a) he and (b) members of his Department have had with representatives of the (i) Russian and (ii) US governments on Central Asia; what issues were raised in these discussions; and if he will make a statement. [131337]

Mr. Rammell: We have regular discussions with representatives of both the Russian and US governments on Central Asia. This year officials have discussed a variety of issues affecting the respective countries of Central Asia and the region as a whole, including economic and political reform, counter-narcotics, regional co-operation and security matters.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed the problem of drug trafficking in Central Asia and the surrounding region with Russian Foreign Minister Ivanov on 4 March 2003.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place with (a) the Russian Government and (b) governments of the Baltic states regarding the clean up of dumped chemical weapons in the sea after the Second World War. [129097]

Mr. MacShane: The UK disposed of captured German chemical munitions in the Skagerrak immediately after World War II. We did not dump or dispose of captured German chemical weapons in the Baltic.

This issue was first raised by Russia in a NATO context in 1997. They also raised the matter directly with the UK around the same time and subsequently raised it with the EU in 1998.

The issue was also investigated by the Helsinki Commission, an international maritime forum, in the early 1990s. At that time there was no evidence of any increased levels of toxicity in the seas in that area.

The NATO Political Committee rejected proposals for a joint NATO-Russia environmental expedition, stating that any future expeditions should be conducted through, or as part of, the Helsinki Convention.

Although there is no suggestion that this would be an acceptable method for disposing of chemical weapons stocks today, the UK believes that any attempt to raise or salvage the munitions could create a far greater environmental hazard.

Diplomatic Posts

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many diplomatic posts overseas his Department has closed in the last three years; and how many posts it plans to close in the next three years. [131103]

Mr. Rammell: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office did not close any Posts in the financial years 2000–01, 2001–02 or 2002–03.

This financial year (2003–04) we have already closed Bamako. We have announced plans to close San Salvador, Managua and Tegucigalpa by the end of this financial year. There are currently no proposals to make any further closures of Diplomatic Posts in the next three years, although the situation is kept under continuous review.

Draft European Constitution (Territorial Cohesion)

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's position with regard to the forthcoming Inter-Governmental Conference on the articles in the draft European Constitution dealing with terroritorial cohesion. [130887]

Mr. MacShane: The Government are considering the implications of the references to territorial cohesion, and will respond appropriately in the Intergovernmental Conference.

Entry Clearance

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list entry clearance posts that have ceased to use the pre-assessment of entry clearance applications, together with the date on which each post ceased to use the procedure. [131102]

Mr. Mullin: Guidance was issued to all visa sections on 2 May 2002, instructing them to minimise the use of pre-assessment procedures.

Posts authorised to use pre-assessment were advised that it should only be used where applicants clearly lack adequate documentation, to manage queues on days where the visa operation would otherwise be unable to cope with demand, or deal with specific local circumstances affecting limited groups.

Since many posts thus have authority to use pre-assessment in exceptional circumstances, there is no definitive record of those posts which have ceased to use the procedure.

European Union

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the evidential basis is of the statement on page 8 of the White Paper, "A Constitutional Treaty for the EU", that the EU's share of total UK trade has grown from 40 to 55 per cent. [131272]

Mr. MacShane: HM Customs and Excise data indicates that in 1973 UK trade with the EU 15 was 43 per cent. of total UK trade. This has risen to 55.2 per cent. in 2002.

Detail	1973	2002
UK trade with the EU 15 (£ million)	12,177	227,925
UK trade with the world (£ million)	28,310	413,281
EU15: per cent. share	43.0	55.2

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his Department is doing to encourage more countries to join the European Union. [131275]

Mr. MacShane: The British Government continue to champion the accession of the three remaining candidates for EU membership. We are providing political and practical support to help Romania and Bulgaria complete their negotiations, prepare for membership and accede in 2007. We are also encouraging Turkey to implement fully the reforms that are a prerequisite for the opening of EU accession negotiations.

Beyond this, we will continue to support eligible potential future candidates in carrying out political and economic reforms that will help their EU candidacies.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his assessment of the benefits of expansion of the European Union. [131349]

Mr. MacShane: We have long supported the enlargement process, which will promote peace, prosperity and security across the EU and beyond. Both the benefits and potential costs to the UK of the next wave of enlargement are outlined in the Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA) on the European Union (Accessions) Bill. The RIA has been placed in the Library of the House and is available on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office website: www.fco.gov.uk

Heads of State (Assassination)

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what Her Majesty's Government's policy is on the assassination of heads of state recognised by the United Nations; and what recent representations have been made to other countries on this matter. [131112]

Mr. MacShane: Our policy is to act in accordance with UK and International law. In the case of the Israeli decision in principle to expel President Arafat, the UK has made its view clear during debates in the UN Security Council and General Assembly. The expulsion or harm of President Arafat would be wrong and counterproductive. Israel should not allow its justified anger at the continuing violence to lead to actions that would undermine both the peace process and Israel's own interests. My noble Friend the Baroness Symons made strong representations to the Israeli Ambassador on this issue on 15 September.

Krishna Maharaj

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when, in relation to Krishna Maharaj, the Government expects to have advised the United States court of the submitting of its brief. [128804]

Mr. Mullin: We are appointing US lawyers who will advise the Government and take matters forward with the US Courts in an appropriate manner.

Legal Advice

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make an assessment of the feasibility of publishing the legal advice prepared by the Attorney General for use by the United Kingdom ambassador to the United Nations. [130361]

Mr. Rammell: It is the long-standing practice of successive Governments that neither the substance of Law Officers' advice, nor the fact that they have been consulted, is publicly disclosed. This information is withheld under exemptions 2 and 4*(d)* of Part II of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Military and Police Training

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what powers the Government have to prevent UK citizens providing (a) military and (b) police training to embargoed countries and forces. [131130]

Mr. Rammell: Where the United Nations Security Council has adopted a resolution deciding that states shall prohibit the supply of military and police training to specified countries or forces, the UK will generally implement this by making statutory instruments under the United Nations Act 1946 applicable to the UK, Overseas Territories and Crown Dependencies. Where the European Union has acted swiftly to implement a UN Security Council Resolution by an EC Regulation, the EC Regulation will be directly applicable in the UK and Gibraltar, and the UK and Gibraltar will legislate only to provide penalties for the breach of the Regulation in those territories.

Where the European Union has adopted measures prohibiting the supply of military and police training (for example, in the case of Zimbabwe), those measures will include an EC Regulation which is directly applicable in the UK and Gibraltar. The UK and Gibraltar will legislate only to provide penalties for the breach of the Regulation. Bermuda and the Crown Dependencies will adopt their own legislation to implement the EU measures. The UK will legislate in respect of the Overseas Territories other than Gibraltar arid Bermuda using powers in the Saint Helena Act 1833, the British Settlements Acts 1887 and 1947, and prerogative powers.

The precise powers taken in legislation will depend upon the scope of the sanctions regime against that particular state. However, legislation will generally create a criminal offence of providing assistance and training to prohibited territories or individuals without a licence from an appropriate authority, and this will apply to all individuals within the territory to which the legislation applies, and also to all categories of British citizen wherever they may be. Legislation will also generally provide ancillary powers to enforce the prohibition, for example, powers for the obtaining of evidence and information, and provisions for criminal proceedings and penalties. Penalties on summary conviction will generally be imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or a fine not exceeding £5,000 or both, and on conviction on indictment, imprisonment for a term not exceeding seven years or an unlimited fine or both.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many of the countries hoping to join the European Union in the near future he has visited in his capacity as Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs. [131273]

Mr. MacShane: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has visited seven of the acceding member states and candidate countries: Poland (October 2001), Hungary, Romania and Slovakia (July 2002), the Czech Republic (November 2002), Slovenia (December 2002) and Turkey (October 2001 and December 2002).

Portuguese Embassy

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Portuguese Ambassador requesting that he require staff at his office in London to acknowledge and respond to correspondence from hon. Members. [130845]

Mr. MacShane: The Portuguese Chargé d'Affaires has assured the Foreign and Commonwealth Office that the Portuguese Embassy are committed to responding to all correspondence which they receive, including that from hon. Members.

Russia

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions (a) he and (b) members of his Department have had in 2003 with representatives of the Russian Government concerning the security situation in (i) Ingushetia and (ii) North Ossetia-Alania; and if he will make a statement. [131335]

Mr. Rammell: We regularly discuss the security situation in the North Caucasus, including Ingushetia and North Ossetia, with representatives of the Russian Government, e.g. at the annual human rights talks at senior official level in March 2003.

We remain concerned about the security and human rights situation in Chechnya and the surrounding republics. We have noted with concern recent bombings throughout the North Caucasus, including the bombings in Mozdok, North Ossetia, and most recently of the Federal Security Service headquarters in Magas, Ingushetia. We also monitor carefully the humanitarian and security situation of Internally Displaced People in the North Caucasus, particularly those in tent camps in Ingushetia.

Sierra Leone

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the oral Answer given by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, 11 September 2003, Official Report, columns 169–70WH, which countries and organisations have been approached by the UK Government for additional funding for the UN special court in Sierra Leone. [130909]

Mr. Rammell: The Government has lobbied more than 40 states. These have included EU partners as well as selected Asian, Middle Eastern and African states. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has written in person to his colleagues in 10 states and has put the issue of funding for the Special Court for Sierra Leone on the agenda of the General Affairs and External Relations Council of the EU on 29 September. The Government has also approached the European Commission on this issue.

Sudan

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what monitoring is being undertaken by the British Government of human rights abusers in Sudan. [130570]

Mr. Mullin: There has been no formal human rights monitoring mechanism in place since the defeat of the EU sponsored resolution on Sudan at the UN Commission on Human Rights on 16 April. This resulted in the termination of the mandate of the Special Rapporteur. However, the British embassy in Khartoum continues to monitor human rights abuses and raises them with the Government of Sudan bilaterally and as part of the EU/Sudan Dialogue. We also part-fund the work of the Sudan Organisation Against Torture (SOAT) which documents human rights abuses.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the suppression of the media in parts of the Sudan. [130571]

Mr. Mullin: On 9 August President Beshir announced the complete lifting of press censorship. The British embassy in Khartoum will monitor the implementation of this arrangement.

UN Arms Embargoes

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken to encourage national legislatures, with particular reference to countries which produce military or paramilitary equipment, to increase the number of UN arms embargoes that they enact at a national level. [131135]

Mr. Rammell: The UK fully supports UN sanctions. We try to ensure that other States follow suit. The UK has lobbied countries believed to be involved in embargo breaches both unilaterally and multilaterally. Lobbying regarding sanctions enforcement often occurs during high-level ministerial visits.

In addition, officials from the FCO, MOD, DTI and HM Customs and Excise undertake regular Export Control Outreach visits to raise awareness about responsible export controls, licensing and enforcement. Since 2001, the UK has held bilateral talks with Bosnia, China, Cyprus, Hong Kong, Israel, Macau, Malta, Poland, Russia, Serbia and Montenegro and the Ukraine.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has taken steps to encourage the UN Security Council to develop a list of (a) military, (b) paramilitary, (c) police and (d) dual-use equipment to which UN arms embargoes will apply. [131148]

Mr. Rammell: The Bonn-Berlin process (a German initiative involving the UN Secretariat and supported by the UK) on the design and implementation of arms embargoes and travel and aviation related sanctions in 2001, considered the question of whether the UN Security Council should adopt lists of military goods to which UN arms embargoes would apply. The participants concluded that it was important to agree a list of goods prior to the introduction of a UN resolution with the assistance of the UN Secretariat. If there were divergent views on the list, arbitration should be provided by the UN Secretary-General.

However, due to lack of consensus among Security Council members, these proposals were never adopted. UK sanctions policy focuses upon and encourages the use of sanctions that are appropriately targeted and effectively implemented and enforced. The UK therefore continues to support the adoption of lists of military equipment to which UN arms embargoes would apply.

United Nations (Sanctions)

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the Government's policy is on supporting increased (a) funding and (b) resources available to the UN's sanction committees. [131132]

Mr. Rammell: The UK contributes to UN sanctions committees through assessed contributions on an annual basis. Mandates for funding are set out by the Security Council. These mandates are ratified by the General Assembly, who in turn approves the budget. HMG wants to see all the sanctions committees functioning effectively; through appropriate funding and resources, but to date support for increased funding for sanctions committees has not been necessary.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what support he has given towards the creation of a dedicated sanctions unit within the UN Secretariat. [131131]

Mr. Rammell: The UK and France drafted a joint proposal in 2001 for an independent sanctions monitoring mechanism to improve the Security Council's capacity to monitor targeted sanctions regimes it has established. After considerable discussion among Council members, the proposal stalled as some members were opposed to it. The Government are currently considering whether we should re-initiate discussions on this proposal again in the near future.

Visas

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many non-settlement visa applications were (a) received, (b) determined and (c) refused at entry clearance posts worldwide in (i) 2000, (ii) 2001, (iii) 2002 and (iv) 2003 to date. [131100]

Mr. Mullin: The information is as follows.

	Non-settlement visas issued
	Received	Issued	Refused
2000	1,616,790	1,431,283	110,391
FY 2001–02	1,687,816	1,471,458	164,916
FY 2002–03	1,714,167	1,465,472	166,462

The table above shows the number of non-settlement visa applications received, issued and refused at entry clearance posts worldwide each year since 2000. Since 2001, statistics have been collated by financial year (1 April to 31 March) rather than calendar year.

The discrepancies in these figures are due to the fact that applications can be carried forward from one month to the next before being resolved, and applications can be withdrawn during processing and still count as an application received. Posts are also required to count all applications received (a mother and three children on one passport may count as four applications, but one entry clearance may be issued).

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) short-term and (b) long-term student visa applications were (i) received, (ii) determined and (iii) refused at entry clearance posts worldwide in each month since 1 January 2002. [131101]

Mr. Mullin: Worldwide statistics for student visas are collated by financial year (1 April to 31 March) only, and are not available on a monthly basis. The statistics do not distinguish between short-term and long-term student visa applications. During the financial year 2002–03 the worldwide figures for the number of student visa applications that were received, determined and refused were as follows:

(i) Received applications—171,100

(ii) Determined applications—120,888

(iii) Refused applications—48,845

Zimbabwe

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the Zimbabwean Government regarding the shutting down of the Daily News. [131212]

Mr. Straw: I issued a press statement on 15 September condemning the Government of Zimbabwe for this latest attack on the free and independent media in Zimbabwe. I made it clear that we regard the closure of the Daily News as a blatant attempt by the Government of Zimbabwe to stifle independent scrutiny and silence democratic voices in Zimbabwe. With our support the EU also issued a declaration on 18 September, condemning the closure of the Daily News and describing it as a serious attack on freedom of information in Zimbabwe. I issued a further press statement on 20 September. We will continue to press for the Daily News to be allowed to resume publication.

Visitor Visa Applications

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many visitor visa applications were (a) received, (b) determined and (c) refused at entry clearance posts worldwide in each month since 1 January. [131097]

Mr. Mullin: Worldwide statistics for all visitor visas are collated by financial year (1 April to 31 March) only, and are not available on a monthly basis. During the financial year 2002–03 the worldwide figures for the number of visitor visa applications that were received, determined and refused were as follows:

Applications	Number
(a) Received	1,421,597
(b) Determined	1,219,169
(c) Refused	175,434

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many family visitor visa applications were (a) received, (b) determined and (c) refused at (i) Mumbai, (ii) New Delhi, (iii) Dhaka, (iv) Islamabad, (v) Tehran, (vi) Nicosia, (vii) Accra, (viii) Lagos and (ix) Nairobi in each month since 1 January. [131098]

Mr. Mullin: The following table shows the statistics requested up to July, after which figures are not yet available.

	Mumbai	New Delhi	Dhaka	Islamabad	Tehran	Nicosia	Accra	Lagos	Nairobi
Received
January	825	1,210	410	619	645	297	2,039	1,558	173
February	840	962	289	723	798	139	1,879	1,145	187
March	1,384	1,468	421	2,281	855	189	1,749	1,019	116
April	2,314	2,499	383	1,852	89	196	2,198	582	199
May	2,610	3,172	409	1,447	1,592	223	2,378	643	147
June	2,700	3,520	807	2,057	2,009	487	1,999	940	543
July	2,862	3,747	1,238	2,865	1,911	485	1,975	1,057	749
Issued
January	659	584	116	524	504	284	725	1,281	146
February	690	458	99	631	602	126	701	130	156
March	1,202	810	144	2,263	635	[1]174	737	197	58
April	2,016	1,726	77	1,827	98	[1]174	1,131	318	152
May	1,984	2,272	123	1,393	1,339	456	1,225	456	128
June	2,044	2,265	467	1,943	1,674	454	1,205	559	464
July	2,336	2,579	830	2,563	1,508	449	1,346	681	618
Refused
January	219	626	247	95	134	13	1,317	264	27
February	198	504	190	92	190	13	1,213	649	31
March	305	658	277	18	220	15	1,083	706	58
April	418	773	306	25	—	22	1,053	341	43
May	658	900	232	54	253	17	1,151	344	16
June	713	1,223	251	114	300	33	838	385	58
July	589	1,168	315	302	403	36	638	340	80

[1] Figures given for March and April in Nicosia have been double-checked. The identical figure is coincidental.

The discrepancies in these figures are due to the fact that applications can be carried forward from one month to the next before being resolved, and applications can be withdrawn during processing and still count as an application received. Post are also required to count all applications received (a mother and three children on one passport may count as four applications, but one entry clearance may be issued).

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many family visitor visa applications were (a) received, (b) determined and (c) refused at entry clearance posts in (i) South Asia region, (ii) Middle East region, (iii) Far East region, (iv) Central Europe region, (v) Southern Europe region, (vi) Western Europe region, (vii) Equatorial Africa region, (viii) Southern Africa region and (ix) Near East and North Africa region in each month since 1 January. [131099]

Mr. Mullin: The following table shows the statistics requested up to July, after which figures are not yet available.

	South Asia	Middle East	Far East	Central Europe	Southern Europe	Western Europe	Equatorial Africa	Southern Africa	Near East/ North Africa
Received
January	3,618	962	798	1,497	1,712	969	4,403	1,253	1,202
February	3,528	1,055	502	1,400	1,575	1,138	3,792	456	941
March	6,836	1,081	794	1,731	1,974	1,519	3,634	518	976
April	8,846	322	789	1,850	2,088	11,733	3,861	616	1,270
May	9,492	2,166	557	2,153	2,501	1,649	4,120	513	1,428
June	11,066	2,912	1,256	2,994	3,397	2,017	4,868	1,055	2,257
July	12,655	2,565	1,629	3,233	3,636	2,767	5,110	1,523	2,718
Issued
January	2,467	761	725	1,396	1,616	901	2,561	720	1,006
February	2,615	779	416	1,220	1,383	993	1,364	279	787
March	5,658	822	719	1,548	1,792	1,368	1,424	263	795
April	7,297	271	675	1,577	1,801	1,614	2,094	375	948
May	7,515	1,829	502	1,945	2,264	1,497	2,510	340	1,144
June	8,565	2,485	1,172	2,721	3,110	2,007	3,166	678	1,912
July	9,964	2,049	1,489	2,983	3,370	2,870	3,568	1,008	2,244
Refused
January	1,317	217	58	124	136	71	1,874	516	166
February	1,088	[illegible]	80	115	127	61	2,138	188	152
March	1,339	[illegible]	86	110	129	98	2,135	246	123
April	1,688	[illegible]	99	122	137	109	1,833	245	235
May	2,024	316	61	166	181	90	1,785	139	276
June	2,473	391	75	223	248	87	1,732	430	265
July	2,685	501	135	235	250	163	1,441	509	369

The discrepancies in these figures are due to the fact that applications can be carried forward from one month to the next before being resolved, and applications can be withdrawn during processing and still count as an application received. Posts are also required to count all applications received (a mother and three children on one passport may count as four applications, but one entry clearance may be issued).

Western Sahara

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made on the Baker peace plan in the Western Sahara. [130574]

Mr. Rammell: In July this year the Security Council called upon the parties to the dispute to work with the United Nations and with each other towards acceptance and implementation of James Baker's Peace Plan which provides for a UN organised referendum after a transitional period. The United Kingdom is encouraging the parties and States of the region to cooperate fully with the Secretary-General and his Personal Envoy to this end.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Child Care

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on measures taken to encourage employer responsibilities towards child care costs for employees with children. [131307]

Margaret Hodge: The Government recognises that making child care affordable is a key challenge for the National Child care Strategy and has made a substantial investment to achieve this.

All working parents may receive means-tested support through the child care element of the Working Tax Credit (WTC). Families are eligible to apply for the child care element of WTC where a lone parent or both parents work for at least 16 hours a week. Support may be worth up to 70 per cent. (maximum £135 a week for one child) of eligible child care costs up to £200 a week. Parents cannot claim the child care element of WTC for the time their children receive a free nursery education place but may be eligible for help for extended hours or wraparound care. The responsibility for claiming WTC rests with parents, not child care providers.

We are working closely with Inland Revenue and the Treasury over proposals to improve employer supported child care for employees. Inland Revenue and Treasury launched a consultation document in February 2003, and the responses were published on September 17.

Child Protection

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to implement Lord Laming's recommendations on child protection when formulating future star ratings for Social Services Departments. [127564]

Margaret Hodge: The Green Paper Every Child Matters and Keeping Children Safe—the Government's response to the Victoria Climbie Inquiry Report and the Joint Chief Inspectors' Report Safeguarding Children were published on 8 September, and copies are available in the Library.

Since the Victoria Climbie Inquiry Report was published on 28 January 2003, councils with social services responsibilities have been required by the Social Services Inspectorate to carry out a self-audit of their child protection services. This was based on a checklist issued by the Government of the recommendations in the report that were considered to be basic good professional practice.

Within the social services star rating system, there are performance levels expected for child protection services. For 2003, this will include a performance indicator on child protection review conferences. It will also use the audit of child protection services. Where inspectors judge that the audit has revealed that a council's child protection services are only at best, serving some people well, then the overall assessment of children's services will not be higher than "serving some people well", with a consequent effect on the maximum star rating that a council can achieve.

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many of Lord Laming's recommendations in his report on child protection had been put into action by 1 July. [127894]

Margaret Hodge: 83 of the 108 recommendations contained in the Victoria Climbie Inquiry report had been partially or fully implemented by 1 July 2003.

Our substantive response to the report as part of the Green Paper 'Every Child Matters', was published on 8 September.

Somali Refugees

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the number of unaccompanied Somali child refugees in local authority care in England. [127387]

Margaret Hodge: This information is not available in the form requested. However, in 2002, the most recent year for which figures are available, 345[1] Somali children applied for asylum in the UK as unaccompanied asylum seeking children i.e. aged under 18 at the time of their application. Only a small proportion of applications result in grants of refugee status. This figure is taken from the annual Home Office statistical bulletin "Asylum Statistics United Kingdom 2002" published by the Home Office on 28 August 2003. It is published on the internet at the following web address; http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html. The bulletin is also available in hard copy.

All unaccompanied asylum seeking children are supported by local authorities under the Children Act 1989.

[1] This figure is provisional and rounded to the nearest 5.
The data is not comparable to manual counts data prior to 2002.
The data excludes age dispute cases.

Admissions Policy

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills under what circumstances it is possible for (a) local education authority maintained schools, (b) academies and (c) city colleges which have an admissions policy which requires prospective pupils to undertake an assessment of ability and or aptitude to charge the pupil or parent for information about the pupil's performance in the assessment except where the information is sought under the Data Protection Act 1998. [131289]

Mr. Miliband: Maintained schools, academies and city colleges cannot charge for or in connection with admission.

If the request for information about a pupil's performance in an assessment for ability or aptitude is unrelated to the application for admission, or any appeal against a decision not to admit the pupil, then they may charge for supplying that information.

Adoption

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children have been adopted (a) voluntarily and (b) as a result of a court order by (i) social services and (ii) other agencies in Gloucestershire and the adjoining authorities in the last five years. [130198]

Margaret Hodge: All adoptions require an adoption order to be made by a court. When deciding whether to make an adoption order, section 6 of the Adoption Act 1976 requires the court to take account of the wishes and feelings of the child and give due consideration to them, having regard to his age and understanding.

The number of children adopted from Gloucestershire and the seven adjoining authorities in the years ending 31 March 1998–2002 are shown in the table.

Information on the number of children adopted through voluntary adoption agencies is not collected centrally. However, the actual figure is likely to be very small, as voluntary adoption agencies only place children voluntarily relinquished by their birth family to their care for the purposes of adoption.

Number of looked after children adopted during the years ending 31 March 1998–2002, in Gloucestershire and the adjoining local authorities

	Number[1]
	1998[2]	1999[3]	2000[3]	2001[4]	2002[4]
England	2,100	2,200	2,700	3,100	3,400
Gloucestershire		10	20	20	20
Herefordshire		—	15	15	10
Worcestershire		10	25	35	60
Warwickshire		—	10	10	15
Oxfordshire		20	30	20	30
Swindon		—	10	10	—
Wiltshire		15	20	10	15
South Gloucestershire		—	5	10	10

[1] Numbers are rounded to the nearest five. Numbers between one and five are suppressed (—).
[2] Because of the small number of children involved in many local authorities, reliable estimates cannot be obtained from the SSDA 903 one-third sample for 1997–98.
[3] 1998–99 and 1999–2000 adoption data are taken from the Key Statistics Return (KS1).
[4] 2000–01 and 2001–02 data are from the AD1, an annual return completed by local authorities with social services responsibilities in England. This return provides data on children looked after by each local authority who were adopted during the year ending 31 March.

Apprenticeships

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on progress towards the take-up of modern apprenticeships with specific reference to the provision of opportunities for employees working for smaller companies in rural areas. [130587]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Modern apprenticeships make an important contribution to meeting the skills needs of smaller companies in rural areas. The operation and delivery of modern apprenticeships is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council and I have therefore asked John Harrwood, the council's chief executive, to write to the hon. Gentleman with the information requested and to place a copy of his reply in the Library.

Autism

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how the education authorities in Tyne and Wear have performed in relation to the Government's inspection programme for autistic education; [130741]

(2) what inspection provision the Government has in place to measure the quality of autistic education; [130742]

(3) how much is spent on average on each autistic child in each education authority in Tyne and Wear in the current financial year; [130743]

(4) how many specialist teachers for autistic children there are in each education authority in Tyne and Wear; [130744]

(5) how many autistic children there are in each education authority in Tyne and Wear. [130745]

Margaret Hodge: The quality of educational provision in schools and local education authorities is the subject of inspections by the Office for Standards in Education. Ofsted look at how schools and local education authorities provide for all children, including those with special educational needs such as autistic spectrum disorders. They are currently carrying out a thematic study of how local education authorities and schools are implementing the inclusion framework introduced as a result of the SEN and Disability Act 2001 and this should be published in 2004. Information about Ofsted reports can be found at www.ofsted.gov.uk.

Data is not collected centrally on:

the spending of each local education authority on children with autistic spectrum disorders, the number of specialist teachers for autistic spectrum disorders in local education authorities, or the numbers of children with autistic spectrum disorders .

Spending by local education authorities and schools on special educational needs is estimated at around £3.12 billion in 2002–03—some 12.6 per cent. of the total overall spending on schools.

Data on the numbers of children with different types of special educational needs, including autistic spectrum disorders, will be collected as part of the Pupil Level Annual Schools Census from January 2004. We anticipate that provisional data from the survey will be available in May 2004 and that final figures will be published in November 2004.

Guidance from the Autism Working Group on good practice in provision for autistic spectrum disorders was issued to local education authorities in July 2002 and provides a practical tool for authorities to review and improve their provision for children on the autistic spectrum.

CAFCASS

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 1 September 2003, Official Report, column 719W, on CAFCASS, how many private law cases were unallocated (a) less than 10 weeks and (b) more than 10 weeks before a CAFCASS report is filed at court. [131177]

Margaret Hodge: CAFCASS's target is that at least 95 per cent. of requests in a month should be allocated 10 weeks before a report is filed at court. A benchmark of 10 weeks is used because this is the timescale required for an officer to complete relevant inquiries and meet the deadline for filing the report with the court. It also enables the service to be flexible when dealing with urgent cases that arise with shorter filing dates.

In July 2003, CAFCASS dealt with 3,200 private law cases. Of these, 385 cases were unallocated less than 10 weeks before a report was filed at court. This is 4.7 per cent. of the caseload and achieved the target. 1,236 private law cases were unallocated more than 10 weeks before a report was filed at court.

Child Abuse

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what changes have been instituted since the publication of the Laming Report to enable the free exchange of information between agencies in child abuse investigations. [127988]

Margaret Hodge: On 19 May, my hon. Friend the then Health Minister, Jacqui Smith launched a booklet for practitioners who have concerns about the welfare of children. "What To Do If You're Worried A Child Is Being Abused" was published jointly by six Government Departments and is aimed at all practitioners who come into contact with children, parents and/or families in the course of their work.

The booklet contains a short section on sharing information. This steers practitioners through the process of deciding whether to share information, and if so, what to share and with whom. It explains in a clear and concise way the issues involved in making decisions about sharing information. Copies of the booklet are available in the Library.

The Green Paper Every Child Matters and Keeping Children Safe—the Government's response to the Victoria Climbie Inquiry Report and the Joint Chief Inspectors' Report Safeguarding Children were published on 8 September, and copies are available in the Library.

The Green Paper sets out proposals for new information sharing systems to enable concerns to be registered at an early stage and flagged up to relevant staff working with children. The Green Paper also explains how front-line workers will become more closely integrated through arrangements such as Children's Trusts.

To take forward such information sharing systems, the Government provided £1 million to 10 'Identification, Referral and Tracking' (IRT) trailblazers involving 15 local authorities to test out approaches. We are putting in place a central team to learn lessons and develop a national framework for local information sharing systems. We will have early lessons from the trailblazers by December 2003, and more detailed information by late summer 2004. By the end of 2004, we aim to set out how the lessons from the trailblazers can be reflected across the country. As part of this, the Government will examine the potential benefits and risks of introducing ICT-based information sharing systems at local authority level.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has to institute mandatory inquiries into unexpected child deaths. [127987]

Margaret Hodge: Paragraphs 117–121 of Keeping Children Safe—The Government's response to The Victoria Climbie Inquiry Report and Joint Chief Inspectors' report Safeguarding Children, sets out the Government's position in relation to recommendations made by the Victoria Climbie Inquiry and the Joint Chief Inspectors relating to Serious Case Reviews and inquiries into child deaths.

Child Law Reform

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to his answer to the hon. and learned Member for Redcar (Vera Baird) of 1 September 2003, Official Report, column 718W, on child law reform, which Minister has overall responsibility for child law reform. [129713]

Margaret Hodge: My Department has lead responsibility across Whitehall for policy on children, young people and the family. As Minister for Children, Young People and the Family in the DfES, I will keep under review the legislation relating to children and young people for which this Department is responsible. A number of other Ministers are responsible for legislation that impacts, either directly or indirectly, on children. I will work with these Ministers with a view to ensuring that their legislation contributes to the best possible outcomes for children and young people.

Children and Young People's Unit

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what work the Children and Young People's Unit undertakes in Scotland in relation to reserved matters. [130528]

Margaret Hodge: In terms of domestic policy, the Children and Young People's Unit has an England only remit. In terms of international policy, the Unit has a remit to co-ordinate the UK's participation in a number of international initiatives relating to children and young people, notably the EU Open Method of Co-Ordination on Youth Policy and the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child.

The EU Open Method of Co-Ordination on Youth Policy relates exclusively to devolved policy issues—youth participation, local information services for young people, youth volunteering and youth research. Each Devolved Administration is responsible for implementing the obligations of this initiative, whilst the CYPU is responsible for overseeing implementation in England, for co-ordinating the UK's approach as a whole and for reporting UK progress to the European Commission.

The UN Convention on the Rights of the Child covers both devolved and reserved issues. In the case of devolved policies (for example, health and social services, education, participation policy), the Devolved Administrations are responsible for observing the convention when making devolved policy decisions. In the case of reserved policies, the relevant Whitehall Department is responsible for observing the convention when making reserved policy decisions, and for consulting the Devolved Administrations as necessary. Examples of reserved policies covered by the convention are: asylum and immigration (Home Office), international development (DfID) and defence policies (MOD). The CYPU is responsible for co-ordinating the UK's approach as a whole across all policy leads (including the Devolved Administrations on devolved matters) and for reporting to the UN on UK implementation.

When undertaking this co-ordinating role for international initiatives, the CYPU works in accordance with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's Concordats with the Devolved Administrations on International and EU Relations, with full and regular working-level contacts with the Devolved Administrations.

Children's Directorate

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many officials will work in the new Children's Directorate in his Department. [127895]

Margaret Hodge: The number of officials who will work in the Children and Families Directorate of this Department will be determined by decisions on what functions are required to secure the best possible outcomes for children, young people and families, how those functions can be best organised within this Department and the resources needed for them to be carried out. I will be considering recommendations on those issues soon.

Civil Servants

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many civil servants have been employed by his Department in each of the years 1997–98 to 2002–03; and what the median and weighted mean salary is for each of these years. [117761]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The numbers of civil servants employed in my Department as at 1 April for the years in question were as follows.

	Number of civil servants employed
2002	4,170
2001	4,775
2000	4,303
1999	3,948
1998	3,838

The figures for 2003 are not yet available.

Median and weighted mean salary information could be produced only at disproportionate costs.

Comprehensive Schools

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance he has issued to local education authorities in respect of the minimum size of comprehensive secondary schools; and if he will make a statement. [131290]

Mr. Miliband: The Department issues non-statutory guidance in Building Bulletin 82: "Area Guidelines for Schools". This document, which is currently being revised, gives recommendations on overall floor areas and the sizes of individual spaces in relation to the number of pupils.

Connexions

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the budget for 2003–04 for the Connexions service is for each (a) local education authority and (b) Careers Service area; and how many young people there are in each of those areas. [128953]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 11 September 2003]: The Connexions Service is provided nationally by 47 Connexions Partnerships. The budget allocations for each Partnership and the number of young people in each Partnership area is given below. The careers service functions are now subsumed within Connexions. How much is spent in each local authority area is a matter for Connexions Partnership to decide based on local needs.

13–19 year old population & grant allocations by Connexions partnership

	13–19 population	Total grant allocation (2003–04) £ million
Bedfordshire & Luton	50,443	4,738,377
Berkshire	70,668	6,233,298
Birmingham & Solihull	115,837	13,035,551
Black Country	98,410	11,471,386
Bournemouth, Dorset & Poole	56,469	5,005,025
Cambridgeshire & Peterborough	62,544	5,839,068
Central London	102,829	15,335,249
Cheshire & Warrington	74,385	6,849,066
Cornwall & Devon	133,053	12,511,182
County Durham	45,259	4,691,191
Coventry & Warwickshire	72,316	6,959,745
Cumbria	40,809	4,211,678
Derbyshire	79,903	7,817,476
East London	169,356	21,649,094
Essex, Southend & Thurrock	132,913	12,621,280
Gloucestershire	48,280	4,386,413
Greater Manchester	237,663	26,251,106
Greater Merseyside	143,438	17,407,792
Hereford & Worcester	59,096	5,495,746
Hertfordshire	89,549	7,584,278
Humber	79,679	8,531,852
Kent & Medway	136,973	12,940,734
Lancashire	128,522	12,709,953

13–19 year old population & grant allocations by Connexions partnership

	13–19 population	Total grant allocation (2003–04) £ million
Leicestershire	82,252	8,188,625
Lincolnshire & Rutland	57,822	5,392,320
M. Keynes, Oxfordshire & Bucks.	114,576	10,293,332
Norfolk	63,483	6,270,498
North London	83,678	9,774,835
Northamptonshire	55,557	5,563,219
Northumberland	27,006	2,875,134
Nottinghamshire	91,166	9,642,650
Shropshire, Telford & Wrekin	39,214	3,628,394
Somerset	42,114	3,719,593
South Central	153,355	14,244,717
South London	105,237	10,330,508
South Yorkshire	112,859	12,356,833
Staffordshire	92,935	9,234,154
Suffolk	54,878	5,157,784
Surrey	87,305	7,866,666
Sussex	115,980	11,075,372
Tees Valley	63,221	7,142,333
Tyne & Wear	100,435	11,664,903
West London	111,400	12,056,005
West of England	84,132	7,889,859
West Yorkshire	191,799	20,541,868
Wiltshire & Swindon	51,484	4,778,769
York & North Yorks.	65,939	5,391,600
Total England	4,276,221	439,356,51

The 13–19 population data on which Connexions Service funding allocations are based use a combination of 13–15 year old pupils in school taken from the Annual School Census at January 2001 and the number of 16–19 year olds from the Estimated Resident Population Mid-2000 based on the 1991 Census by single year of age.

Domestic Violence

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what means he is using to educate young people at school about domestic violence issues; [129619]

(2) whether domestic violence and its impact is a topic in the citizenship syllabus; [129620]

(3) at what age he intends that education about the dangers and effects of domestic violence will be given to children at school. [129621]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: Personal, Social and Health Education (PSHE) teaches pupils about social and moral differences, including aggressive behaviour. Specifically in primary schools, pupils are taught how to get help, to realise the consequences of anti-social and aggressive behaviour, and to resolve differences by looking at alternatives. There are opportunities for schools to address violence, including domestic violence, through the framework of PSHE and Citizenship. In Citizenship, for example, pupils can discuss the impact of domestic violence and challenge the belief that domestic violence is inevitable and acceptable.

Resources such as 'Watch Over Me' which has been sent to all secondary schools, support the teaching of domestic violence. This includes a video that highlights risks in different situations. This pack covers domestic violence, explaining the role of schools in conflict resolution, why schools should discuss domestic violence, and lesson plans.

Early-years Education (Buckinghamshire)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of 3-year-olds have access to early years education in (a) Chesham and Amersham and (b) Buckinghamshire. [129883]

Margaret Hodge: The information is not available in the form requested.

In January 2002, 2,500 free early years education places were taken up by 3-year-olds in Buckinghamshire local education authority area.

We have made the commitment that by April 2004, six months ahead of our original target, all 3-year-olds whose parents want one, will have access to a free, part-time early education place.

The latest figures on early years provision in England were published by the Department in the Statistical First Release 15/2003 "Provision For Children Under Five Years Of Age In England—January 2003 (Provisional)", copies of which are available from the Library and the Department's website, www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/.

Earned Autonomy Scheme

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools applied for the earned autonomy scheme; and how many have been (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful in being granted earned autonomy. [127892]

Mr. Miliband: The Government is not currently operating an Earned Autonomy scheme, as defined in the Education Act 2002. Instead, it has taken a number of steps to extend autonomy across the school system more generally. In relation to teachers' pay and conditions, specific new freedoms have been introduced from 1 September this year which mean that schools have a greater degree of flexibility in relation to certain pay decisions. Changes to the curriculum at Key Stage 4 set out in the strategy document 14–19: Opportunity and Excellence will enable schools to respond more flexibly to the needs of their pupils. We have established the Implementation Review Unit—a Panel of serving head teachers and other school staff to identify areas where schools can be freed from bureaucracy and red tape. The Power to Innovate offers all schools the chance to apply for innovative projects that would otherwise be blocked by education legislation. The Government is keeping under review whether to introduce an Earned Autonomy scheme as provided for in the 2002 Act.

Educational Scholarships

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what support the Government gives to companies that sponsor educational scholarships. [131120]

Mr. Miliband: The Government are keen to encourage the involvement of companies and businesses in education. However, we regard the sponsorship of educational scholarships as a matter for the companies themselves.

Energy Performance Directive

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what action he is taking (a) to encourage schools and colleges to respond to the requirements of the European Directive on the energy performance of buildings and (b) to monitor compliance with it. [129982]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The Department is working closely with ODPM on actions required to implement the European Directive on energy performance. ODPM believe that many of the requirements of the directive can be implemented through changes to the Building Regulations and to Approved Document Part L2 (the next revision being due in 2005). As schools are required to comply with building regulations, any changes in energy performance requirements will apply to schools.

The Department already encourages energy efficiency and management in schools through a number of measures. The Departments guidance on design of new school buildings promotes a carbon performance rating of 5kg C/m^2 per year or better, which is in line with current building regulations requirements.

Further Education colleges will be responsible for compliance with the Directive in relation to their own premises and the Learning and Skills Council is updating its guidance to colleges on estate management to reflect the directive's requirements.

The Departments approach to monitoring compliance is still being developed with ODPM.

European Court Ruling

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will publish the Government's response to the Council of Europe in respect of the European Court of Human Rights ruling in the 1998 A v UK judgment. [130811]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 18 September 2003]: In cases of alleged assault against children where the defence of reasonable chastisement is used, the Courts are obliged to take note of the outcome in the European Court of Human Rights of the A v UK case. Juries must now be directed, when considering the reasonableness of any punishment, to consider the nature and context of the defendant's behaviour, its duration, its physical and mental consequences in relation to the child and the reason given by the defendant administering punishment.

The Government has asked the Attorney General to keep the use of the reasonable chastisement defence under review in order to assess the impact of A v UK. His findings to date suggest that this defence is being used properly.

The Government's position is that these measures fulfil our obligations arising from the A v UK ruling and we will be responding to the Council of Europe accordingly. [We will publish this response after it has been presented to the Council of Europe in October.]

Fees Remission and Grants

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will estimate the number of students likely to qualify for (a) full fees remission, (b) partial fees remission and (c) maintenance grants under his revised proposals; and what the projected annual cost for each category of such remissions and grants is. [129990]

Alan Johnson: From 2004/05, the percentage of students receiving fee remission will be affected by the inclusion of the income of parents' spouses and co-habiting partners in the means-test. Future numbers and proportions of students receiving fee remission also depend on changes in demand for higher education.

The latest data (provisional Academic Year 2001/02) available for English and Welsh domiciled students are:

	(a) Full fee remission	(b) Partial fee remission
Student numbers (thousand)	334	127
Percentage	43	16
Cost (£ million)	[1]405	405

[1] Public expenditure on fees assessed for payment from public funds.

Source:

Form F503G survey of LEAs for Student Support Scheme students from England and Wales as published in the Statistical First Release of 29 April 2003.

Once the Higher Education Grant in September 2004 has been introduced, it is estimated that around 30 per cent. of students will be eligible for the full grant and around 10 per cent. for a partial grant. The annual cost has been estimated at around £300 million.

Foster Parents

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) whether foster parents have the same maternity and paternity rights as other parents; and what assistance is given to foster parents willing to take on disabled children; [128068]

(2) how many children have been placed with foster parents in each year since 1997; and what measures have been taken to encourage more couples to foster children; [128069]

(3) what assistance is given to foster parents to take on children with behavioural problems; and whether it is compulsory for them to attend school; [128070]

(4) what age financial assistance to foster parents looking after children with behavioural problems stops; and what plans he has to extend payments to fosterers parenting for children reaching adult age [128071]

Margaret Hodge: Foster carers do not have the same right to maternity and paternity leave as other parents with respect to the children they are fostering. However, from April 2003 foster parents have the right to request flexible working. The recent Green Paper on Children at Risk "Every Child Matters" consults on a proposal for increasing parental rights for foster carers.

Foster parents caring for disabled children may receive funding and support beyond and above a fostering allowance. This will be dependent on the child's needs.

The table as follows shows the numbers of children in foster placements each year since 1997:

Number of looked after children in foster care in England at 31 March: 1997–2002

At 31 March	All children in foster placement[1]
1997	33,500 (66% of all children looked after)
1998	35,000 (65% of all children looked after)
1999	36,200 (65% of all children looked after)
2000	37,900 (65% of all children looked after)
2001	38,300 (65% of all children looked after)
2002	39,200 (66% of all children looked after)

[1] Figures exclude children looked after under an agreed series of short term placements

Source:

The information provided is derived from the SSDA903, a one in three sample survey of all looked after children in England, completed by local councils with social services responsibilities.

The Choice Protects Review has been set up to strengthen fostering services and has a grant of £113 million over three years from 2003–4 attached to it. To support local recruitment the Review has commissioned Fostering Network to develop Good Practice Guidelines for the Recruitment of Foster Carers, which will be available shortly, and is also developing a recruitment toolkit for local authorities. The recent Green Paper on Children at Risk "Every Child Matters" consults on further proposals to encourage more people to consider fostering.

Treatment foster care is a new three year scheme linked to the Choice Protects Review, which aims to provide foster care for the most difficult to place children. two million has been made available to set up development projects in 2003–4 and a further three million is available for new bids in 2004–5.

Section 7 of the Education Act 1996 states that: "The parent of every child of compulsory school age shall cause him to receive efficient full-time education suitable:

(a) to his age, ability and aptitude, and

(b) to any special educational needs he may have, either by regular attendance at school or otherwise."

The Children Leaving Care Act 2000 places a duty on local authorities to provide general assistance for looked after young people, including those with behavioural problems, in cash or in kind, until they are 21, and to assist with employment, education and training.

Free School Meals

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what the face value is of the free school meal voucher or equivalent provided by each local education authority in England; [129737]

(2) what steps he is taking to ensure that the value of a free school meal voucher or equivalent provided by local education authorities enables pupils using cafeteria systems to purchase a two-course lunch and a drink which conform to the nutritional standards laid down by his Department. [129738]

Mr. Stephen Twigg [holding answer 15 September 2003]: It is the responsibility of the local education authority or, where a budgetary element for school meals has been delegated to them, a school's governing body to decide the monetary value of a free school meal. The Department for Education and Skills, does not collect data on the value of the free school meal voucher.

'Healthy School Lunches' guidance, produced by this Department, includes the Secretary of State's strong recommendation that the value of a free meal should be set to enable eligible pupils to have a standard two course lunch and a drink.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what guidance he has issued to schools on introducing systems which do not make pupils receiving free meals readily identifiable; [129739]

(2) if he will provide incentives for schools to increase the take-up of free school meals; and if he will make a statement. [129740]

Mr. Stephen Twigg [holding answer 15 September 2003]: The Department for Education and Skills (DfES) funded research, commissioned to the Child Poverty Action Group, into the reasons children fail to take up their free school meal entitlement. The findings were published in a research report (RR270) entitled 'Improving the Take-Up of Free School Meals' in May 2001. The study identified a number of good practice strategies that could be adopted to encourage more parents and pupils to take up their entitlement. It also suggested that every effort should be made to ensure that pupils receiving free school meals are not easily identifiable. For example, this could be achieved if schools that operate a cafeteria system introduce cashless systems such as swipe cards.

The report is published on the DfES Research and Statistics Gateway website www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/ Alternatively, copies of the report can be obtained from DfES Publications by telephoning: 0845 6022260 quoting reference RR270.

The Department of Education and Skills has no plans at present to provide incentives for schools to increase the take-up of free school meals.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average time taken by each local education authority between a parent registering for free school meals and the provision of free meals to their children was in the last year for which figures are available. [129741]

Mr. Stephen Twigg [holding answer 15 September 2003]: The Department for Education and Skills does not collect this information.

Free Tuition

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how he will define the qualifying breadth of a qualification at Level 2 to which an entitlement to free tuition will be attached. [131367]

Alan Johnson: Adult learners will be eligible for free tuition to reach their first full level 2 qualification. The White Paper "21st Century Skills; Realising Our Potential" (Cmnd 5810) stated that a full level 2 would be interpreted as covering "any qualification equivalent in standard and breadth to 5 GCSEs at A*-C or a National Vocational Qualification at level 2". We are working with the Learning and Skills Council and the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority to identify in detail which qualifications meet this definition.

Further Education

Mr. Best: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students there were in further education in Leeds, North-West in each year since 1997. [127295]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The numbers of people resident in Leeds, North-West constituency who were students at Further Education colleges in each year since 1997/98 are shown in the table. Due to the way the data is collected, figures prior to 2000/01 are only available for students funded by the Learning and Skills Council (LSC), or as it was then, the Further Education Funding Council (FEFC). Learners not funded by the council are included for 2000–01 and 2001–02.

Numbers of people resident in Leeds North West constituency studying at Further Education colleges by year (thousands)

Academic year	Council funded	Non-council funded
1997–98	5.4	N/a
1998–99	5.4	N/a
1999–2000	5.3	N/a
2000–01	4.9	1.0
2001–02	5.4	1.1

Source:
Individualised Student Record

Gifted Children

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures are in place to ensure that gifted children that are (a) moved up educational years at school and (b) placed in a different school retain contact with their peer group. [127957]

Mr. Miliband: It is rare for a gifted pupil to be accelerated to an older year group for all subjects, and rarer still to be placed in a different school. Such decisions are taken locally. Schools and local education authorities should take account of all relevant factors, particularly the academic and social needs of the student concerned.

Internet Access

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the internet access available to the economically disadvantaged. [130195]

Mr. Charles Clarke: We assess internet access through quarterly surveys produced by the Office for National Statistics. Access is tracked by income, age, gender and region. Latest figures from the Office for National Statistics (published in July) show that levels of internet access in the UK continue to grow. 54 per cent. of the adult population are now regular users of the internet.

However the figures also show that take-up among economically disadvantaged groups is lower. 12 per cent. of households in the lowest income group have internet access compared to 86 per cent. in the highest income group.

In May and June, to help drive up levels of internet among those less likely to be online the Office of the e-Envoy, supported by the Department for Education and Skills ran the Get Started campaign. The campaign promoted the benefits of the internet to key groups such as the unemployed, lone parents, those with disabilities and the elderly. People were encouraged to visit UK online centres throughout the country that offered free internet st. ... sessions. Evaluation of the campaign, particularly its impact on economically disadvantaged groups, will be completed shortly.

Key Stage Attainment

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of children who attained (a) level 4 in mathematics Key Stage 2 assessment in 1998 achieved level 5 or above in mathematics Key Stage 3 assessment in 2001; and what proportion who attained level 5 in mathematics Key Stage 2 assessment in 1998 achieved level 6 or above in mathematics Key Stage 3 assessment in 2001. [131291]

Mr. Miliband: The information requested is as follows:

Of those pupils who achieved level 4 or above in the 1998 Key Stage 2 Maths tests, the proportion who went on to achieve level 5 or above in the 2001 Key Stage 3 Maths tests was 92.6 per cent.

Of those pupils who achieved level 5 or above in the 1998 Key Stage 2 Maths tests, the proportion who went on to achieve level 6 or above in the 2001 Key Stage 3 Maths tests was 96.5 per cent.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of children who attained level 4 in English Key Stage 2 assessment in 1998 achieved level 5 or above in English Key Stage 3 assessment in 2001; and what proportion who attained level 5 in English Key Stage 2 assessment in 1998 achieved level 6 or above in English Key Stage 3 assessment in 2001. [131288]

Mr. Miliband: The information requested is as follows:

Of those pupils who achieved level 4 or above in the 1998 Key Stage 2 English tests, the proportion who went on to achieve level 5 or above in the 2001 Key Stage 3 English tests was 85.4 per cent.

Of those pupils who achieved level 5 or above in the 1998 Key Stage 2 English tests, the proportion who went on to achieve level 6 or above in the 2001 Key Stage 3 English tests was 81.6 per cent.

Learning and Skills Councils

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of funds available to the Learning and Skills Council was devolved to the discretion of local LSCs in (a) 2001–02, (b) 2002–03 and (c) 2003–04; and what proportion is projected for 2004–05. [131013]

Alan Johnson: This is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council. John Harwood, the Council's Chief Executive, will write to the hon. Gentleman with the information requested and place a copy in the Library.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what changes he is making in financial provision for learning and skills councils for the next three financial years; what assessment he made of the effect of these changes; and if he will make a statement. [131299]

Alan Johnson: The budgets allocated to the Learning and Skills Council for the next three financial years were set out in the Grant Letter to the LSC on 5 December 2002. A copy of this was placed at the time in the Library. The budget figures in the letter are £8,095 million in 2003–04, rising to £8,618 million in 2004–05 and £9,200 million in 2005–06. These figures represent record levels of investment in the learning and skills sector and will substantially improve standards and increase the number of people engaged in learning.

Decisions relating to the allocation of budgets by the LSC National Office to local LSCs are a matter for the LSC. Mark Haysom, the Council's Chief Executive from 1 October 2003 will write to the hon. Gentleman with this information and a copy of his reply will be placed in the Library.

Level 2 Qualification

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how he will ascertain whether students seeking to access free tuition for a Level 2 qualification have no existing higher qualifications. [129697]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We are working with the Learning and Skills Council to evaluate the use of existing data systems for checking whether applicants have already gained a relevant qualification. We shall be using the experienced gained in the Employer Training Pilots to assess the risks. The phased introduction of the entitlement provides the opportunity to test that light tough but robust validation procedures are in place.

National Literacy Strategy

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the effect of the National Literacy Strategy on literacy skills among primary school pupils in (a) Chesham and Amersham and (b) Buckinghamshire. [129884]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The National Literacy Strategy has transformed standards of literacy in our primary schools. Nationally, 75 per cent. of pupils achieved level 4 or above in the 2003 Key Stage 2 English tests, 10 percentage points more than in 1998.

The results in Buckinghamshire LEA show that in 1998 73 per cent. of pupils achieved level 4 or above in English at Key Stage 2. In 2003 the figure was 80 per cent. We are unable to disaggregate results for schools in Chesham and Amersham.

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the effect of the National Literacy Strategy on literacy skills amongst primary school children in Tynemouth constituency. [130388]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The National Literacy Strategy has transformed standards of literacy in our primary schools. Nationally, 75 per cent. of pupils achieved level 4 or above in the 2003 Key Stage 2 English tests, 10 percentage points more than in 1998.

The improvement in literacy standards of pupils in North Tyneside LEA has been greater than the national improvement. In 1998, 65 per cent. of pupils achieved level 4 or above in English at Key Stage 2. In 2003 the figure was 77 per cent. We are unable to disaggregate results for Tynemouth schools.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the representations made by his Department to the Centre for British Teachers regarding the management and delivery of the primary (a) literacy and (b) numeracy strategies in the last three years. [131341]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The Department for Education and Skills has a close working relationship with CfBT Education Services and is in daily communication with its representatives regarding the management and delivery of the primary literacy and numeracy strategies.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what changes his Department plans to make to the management and delivery of the primary (a) literacy and (b) numeracy strategies. [131343]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The separate professional teams responsible for the delivery of the national literacy and numeracy strategies within the contract between the Department and CfBT Education Services have been brought together this year under the leadership of a new Director of the Primary Strategy. The Primary Strategy force has a central role in delivering the Government's commitments set out in "Excellence and Enjoyment".

Mathematics/Science Education

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps have been taken to improve the recruitment of young people into electronic engineering since the publication of his Department's Research Report No.112, The Labour Market for Engineering, Science and IT Graduates: Are there Mismatches Between Supply and Demand? [131114]

Mr. Charles Clarke: My Department is working actively with the DTI and with the industry to address the issues raised. Following the recent Roberts Review, Government have announced the largest sustained growth in science and engineering expenditure for a decade, with £1.25 billion extra a year by 2005–06.

We are improving the careers advice available to young people. We are committed to expanding higher and vocational education provision in order to deliver the skills and qualities that individuals need in the workplace. This includes the establishment of progression routes for vocational learning from Vocational GCSEs through to Modern Apprenticeships, Foundation Degrees and Graduate Apprenticeships.

Examples of collaboration between DTI, DfES and the sector includes 'Electronics in Schools' to enable more schools to provide the teaching of electronics within schools, therefore making 11–14 year olds more aware of electronics and the opportunities available, and the 'Shell Technology Enterprise Programme' which provides undergraduates with a placement in the field of electronics on completion of their degree.

One of the first Sector Skills Council's we have licensed is SEMTA, the Science, Engineering and Technologies Alliance. They will be the key to our on-going work in identifying and addressing gaps between the supply and demand of suitably qualified people.

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what have been the student participation rates for physics at A level standard in the last five years. [131116]

Mr. Miliband: The number of entries for physics A level by all candidates in all schools and further education sector colleges in England in 1998–2002:

	Physics	Total GCE A level entries	Percentage of total GCE A level entries
2002	28,642	666,479	4.3
2001	28,616	707,784	4.0
2000	28,945	709,580	4.1
1999	30,428	720,304	4.2
1998	30,605	724,852	4.2

Figures for 2003 are due to be published on 8 October 2003 and will be available on the Department's website.

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what incentives his Department is giving to students to study mathematics and physics at A-level; [131117]

(2) what action his Department is taking to encourage the development of (a) the Filtronics plc Maths Scheme and (b) other industry schemes to encourage young people to study mathematics at school; [131118]

(3) what progress has been made following the meeting between his Department's officials and Filtronics plc on 29 January to consider the Filtronics plc Maths Scheme. [131121]

Mr. Miliband: The Department does not offer incentives to students to study any particular A-level subjects. Students should choose those subjects which are the most appropriate for their individual skills and aspirations. The independent Post-14 Maths Inquiry is due to publish its final report by the end of October and has received evidence from a wide range of interested organisations, including Filtronic. The inquiry is expected to make recommendations on the curriculum, qualifications and pedagogy for those aged 14 and over in schools, colleges and higher education institutions to enable students to acquire the mathematical knowledge and skills necessary to meet the wide-ranging needs of employers and of further and higher education. In view of this, consideration of local initiatives and schemes such as Filtronic's should rightly take place once we have had the opportunity to consider the inquiry's final report.

Mr. Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what state scholarships there are to support students studying accredited courses in mathematics, physics and engineering. [131119]

Alan Johnson: There are no state scholarships available to students undertaking maths, physics or engineering courses. However, there is a range of statutory, targeted and discretionary financial support available to undergraduate students irrespective of discipline.

Microsoft

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was paid to Microsoft in licensing fees by his Department and its agencies in each of the last three years; and how much has been budgeted for (a) 2003–04 and (b) 2004–05. [130681]

Mr. Charles Clarke: From our records the Department for Education and Skills has spent the following amounts on Microsoft products in licensing fees in the last three years:

£

Year	Amount spent
2000–01	[1]1.4 million
2001–02	538,000
2002–03	215,000

[1] Includes £1,130,000 on Computers within Reach Project.

For 2003–04 and 2004–05, £350,000 has been budgeted for each year.

Numeracy Strategy (Tynemouth)

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the effect of the National Numeracy Strategy on numeracy skills among primary school children in Tynemouth constituency. [130389]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The National Numeracy Strategy has transformed standards of numeracy in our primary schools. Nationally, 73 per cent. of pupils achieved level 4 or above in the 2003 Key Stage 2 mathematics tests, 14 percentage points more than in 1998.

The improvement in numeracy standards of pupils in North Tyneside LEA has been greater than the national improvement. In 1998, 59 per cent. of pupils achieved level 4 or above in mathematics at Key Stage 2. In 2003 the figure was 76 per cent. We are unable to disaggregate results for Tynemouth schools.

Ofsted Inspections

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to his answer of 2 July 2003, Official Report, column 293W, on school setting, (1) what percentage of maintained secondary school lessons inspected by Ofsted between 1995 and 2002 in (a) Year 7, (b) Year 8, (c) Year 9, (d) Year 10 and (e) Year 11 were recorded as set by ability in (i) history, (ii) geography, (iii) music and (iv) religious education; [131173]

(2) what percentage of maintained schools in West Sussex LEA inspected by Ofsted between 1995 and 2002 in (a) Year 7, (b) Year 8, (c) Year 9, (d) Year 10 and (e) Year 11 were recorded as set by ability in (i) history, (ii) geography, (iii) music and (iv) religious education. [131174]

Mr. Miliband: These are matters for Ofsted. HM Chief Inspector, David Bell, will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of his letter in the Library.

Parliamentary Questions

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many Questions directed to him remain unanswered. [130764]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: 35.

PFI (Schools)

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the Private Finance Initiative in schools. [131234]

Mr. Charles Clarke: There are now 59 Schools PFI contracts signed covering 595 schools with a total capital value of £1.6 billion. Services have started in 39 projects, which include more than 100 brand new, replacement or refurbished schools.

In addition, 36 schools projects and 4 ICT projects have been approved by the Project Review Group (PRG) and are in procurement. The total capital value for these is over £1.6 billion and they involve more than 600 schools. Nineteen further projects covering more than 260 schools have been prioritised for support by DfES. The amount of PFI credits has been significantly increased by this Government, from £35 million in 1997–98 to a planned £1.05 billion in 2004–05.

Retraining (Upper Age Limits)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make it his policy to remove upper age limits for retraining into a new job under Government training schemes. [130988]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We want to ensure that people of all ages can acquire skills that enable them to fulfil their own potential and meet the needs of employers. Our Skills Strategy, "21st Century Skills—Realising Our Potential" signalled a number of important developments, including opening up Modern Apprenticeships to older workers and developing a Level 2 entitlement intended for people in the workforce who are not already qualified at that level.

Schools

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps his Department has taken to reduce the number of school (a) exclusions and (b) truants. [130386]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Under our innovative Behaviour and Attendance Strategy, we are providing £470 million between 2002 and 2006 to schools and local education authorities to encourage prevention and early intervention in tackling the root causes of truancy and the poor behaviour that can lead to exclusion.

The Government are putting in place unprecedented measures to prevent bad behaviour. For example, we have introduced targeted Behaviour Improvement Programmes in 61 areas. We are providing training and support to all secondary schools and we are piloting similar resources in up to 3,500 primary schools. Through these initiatives, we are promoting successful alternatives to exclusion, although we recognise that head teachers retain the right to exclude pupils in the case where they judge that is necessary.

We are determined to tackle the long standing problem of truancy and its negative impact on children's life chances. The Government now co-ordinates truancy sweeps at a national level. We provide expert support and advice to the 56 education welfare services facing the largest challenges. We are bearing down on parentally condoned truancy through national implementation of the Fast Track to Prosecution initiative. Through the Anti-Social Behaviour Bill, we are seeking to introduce parenting contracts and penalty notices for the parents of persistent truants.

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many times consent has been given to a relaxation of the minimum area standard for team game playing fields at schools, under section 543 of the Education Act 1996 (as amended by paragraph 159 of Schedule 30 to the School Standards and Framework Act 1998), in each of the last five years. [128610]

Mr. Stephen Twigg: The Education (School Premises) Regulations 1999 set out the minimum size of team game playing fields that should be provided for schools according to the age and number of pupils attending those schools. The Secretary of State's agreement is needed if changes to the team game playing field provision mean that a school falls, or remains, below the minimum required by the Regulations. This means that agreement is also needed if a school already below the required minimum makes any changes to its team game playing fields, even if it results in an increase.

We have no central records before 2000. Six applications were agreed in 2000, 25 in 2001, 11 in 2002, and 9 so far in 2003. Of these 41 approved applications, 31 (75 per cent.) resulted in either no change or an increase in the amount of team game playing field provided for schools.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) classroom assistants and (b) teachers in schools there were in (i) the Chesham and Amersham constituency and (ii) Buckinghamshire in each year since 1997. [129886]

Mr. Miliband: The number of full time equivalent (FTE) regular teachers and teaching assistants in the maintained sector in Chesham and Amersham constituency and Buckinghamshire LEA since 1997 are shown in the following table.

Teachers and teaching assistants in Chesham & Amersham constituency and Buckinghamshire: 1997 to 2003

	Chesham & Amersham constituency		Buckinghamshire LEA
	FTE number of teachers[1]	FTE number of teaching assistants[1,2]	FTE number of teachers[3]	FTE number of teaching assistants[1,2]
1997	850	80	[4]—	[4]—
1998	860	100	3,790	460
1999	870	90	3,740	470
2000	880	100	3,930	490
2001	890	110	3,900	570
2002	930	170	4,030	760
2003	[5]860	160	4,240	710

[1] Source: Annual Schools Census.
[2] Includes nursery assistants, special needs support staff, minority ethnic pupil support staff and other teaching assistants
[3] Source: 618g annual survey of teacher number and vacancies
[4] Not available on a consistent basis because of local government reorganisation
[5] provisional
Note:
Teacher numbers for 2003 from the Annual School Census are provisional. Annual School Census and 618G have a survey data of the third Thursday in January.
Source:
618g annual survey of teacher number and vacancies.

Angela Watkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the local authorities' schools funding taskforce. [119761]

Mr. Miliband [holding answer 18 June 2003]: The Department for Education and Skills is working in partnership with LEA and school representatives to identify changes that need to be made to the funding system for 2004–05 so that all schools can expect to receive a reasonable per pupil settlement in that year. We have been discussing how best to ensure sufficient funding increases for every LEA; the right balance between support through general grant and through ring-fenced and targeted grant; how to give confidence that schools and pupils will receive the money intended for them; the right balance between school and LEA central provision; how to ensure that that variations in the budget increases received by different schools within each LEA are appropriate and fair; and how work force reform, in line with the National Agreement, can be sustained. We will aim to ensure that changes are in place in good time to allow LEAs and schools to plan for 2004–05 and so provide increased predictability and stability in school funding.

Sixth Form Colleges

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent representations he has received on the adequacy of public funding to support pay increases in sixth form colleges; and if he will make a statement. [131001]

Alan Johnson: On 1 September I met with sixth form college employers' and union representatives to discuss funding for sixth form colleges. The outcome of the Spending Review 2002 provides a good settlement for the FE sector. In 2003–04 assumed total funding for further education allocated to the Learning and Skills Council has increased by 6 per cent. in real terms compared with 2002–03. The funding allocated to the Learning and Skills Council also assumes there will be year on year real terms increases in total funding for further education of 7 per cent. in 2004–05 and 5 per cent. in 2005–06. Sixth form colleges are independent organisations. It is for them to determine the level of pay increases for their staff in negotiation with the trade unions within the resources available.

Students

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what information he collates on possible changes to the pattern of student enrolment paying (a) controlled undergraduate fees and (b) undergraduate fees as a result of his student support proposals. [129991]

Alan Johnson: We do not have any specific estimates of the possible change to the pattern of student number enrolments as we do not know which universities will be charging the variable fees and which will be charging controlled fees. However initial analysis suggests that we can expect enrolment to continue to rise over the course of the decade. We continue to monitor enrolment through a number of sources such as UCAS, HESA and HEFCE.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what research he has collated on the opportunity costs incurred by full-time students in higher education. [129729]

Alan Johnson: The opportunity costs incurred by students participating in higher education (HE) comprise the earnings they could have earned had they not been studying net of the income they receive through working during their studies. Both these income streams vary between individuals.

Individuals with two or more A-levels who have been in the labour market for up to three years have average net annual earnings of around £8,300[1]. Over a three year, full-time HE course this would be equivalent to around £25,000 in foregone earnings.

However, many students also work while studying. Student Income and Expenditure Survey (SIES) data indicate that full-time first-degree students typically earn around £5,000[2] over the duration of their course. This means that an overall opportunity cost for full-time first-degree students who enter with two or more A-levels is on average around £20,000. However, this average figure will vary widely between individual students.

[1] Based on spring 2003 LFS data for the UK, covering men and women aged 18–24 whose highest qualifications are two or more A-levels. Individuals are assumed to be UK employees who have been in the labour market for up to three years. Individuals are assumed to work 52 weeks per year.

[2] Based on SIES 1998/99 data for full-time first-degree UK students aged 18 to 24-years-old. Net earnings are up-rated by the average earnings index in order to get equivalent spring 2003 data.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the Higher Education Funding Council for England and the Office for Fair Access will share (a) chief executives and (b) accounting officers. [129732]

Alan Johnson: As we set out in "Widening Participation in Higher Education", the Office for Fair Access will be separate from but supported by HEFCE. It will exercise its independent judgment in considering and monitoring access agreements. We will give more detail on its organisation when we introduce the Higher Education Bill.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if the remission of tuition fees for higher education by British public sector organisations has been approved as (a) a state aid under European legislation and (b) non-taxable under British revenue law. [129733]

Alan Johnson: State aid (as defined under Article 87(1) of the European Treaty) does not apply to educational functions such as the remission of tuition fees for higher education students. There is therefore no need for approval.

No special approvals are required for the treatment of fee remission arrangements. Existing tax law provides methods by which such arrangements can be exempt from tax, depending on the circumstances.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans he has for obtaining information on (a) students' financial situation, (b) living conditions and (c) academic experiences from interested bodies, with particular reference to the Higher Education Funding Council for England and the National Union of Students, and for disseminating information between these bodies. [129764]

Alan Johnson: The Department has conducted a Student Income and Expenditure Survey (SIES) for the 2002/03 academic year. It will provide up-to-date information on the finances and living arrangements for full-time, young, single, childless, English and Welsh domiciled students who are undertaking an undergraduate degree at publicly funded higher education institutions in England and Wales in 2002/03. The National Union of Students (NUS) and Universities UK (UUK) are represented on the SIES steering committee.

The new National Student Survey, which is being developed by the Higher Education Funding Council for England, will collect students' views on their learning experiences from 2004 onwards. The Council is working with key sector partners, including the National Union of Students, to develop the Survey. The results of the Survey will be publicly available.

Sure Start

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many relevant children there are in each of the Birkenhead Sure Start areas; and how many of these children have been contacted by Sure Start. [129170]

Margaret Hodge: The three Sure Start local programmes in Birkenhead were developed and approved on different timescales. This is reflected in their level of activity and the number of children they are reaching.

Sure Start Birkenhead North was approved in August 2000 and has reported that since then it has contacted over 95 per cent. of the 648 children living in the area. Sure Start Ferries was approved in January 2002 and has estimated that it has to date contacted over 74 per cent. of the 741 children living in the area. Sure Start Birkenhead Central was approved in January 2003 and has so far contacted 33 per cent. of the 868 children living in the area.

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the benefits of the Sure Start Scheme. [130383]

Margaret Hodge: A large scale, comprehensive evaluation of the Sure Start programme is under way. This will establish what works to improve outcomes for young children and their families, in the short, medium and long term.

By its nature many of the benefits of Sure Start will be long term: so the evaluation is tracking 8,000 children over time—initially at nine months, three years and five years—and then beyond. The first information will be available by spring 2004.

The evaluation is also examining how the programme is being implemented. To date assessments have been published on Setting Up Sure Start, Early Experiences of Implementing Sure Start, Characteristics of Sure Start Areas and Fathers in Sure Start Areas. These assessments show that many of the necessary building blocks for successful Sure Start programmes, such as joint working and involvement of parents in planning and delivering services, are being put in place.

These publications and further information about the National Evaluation can be found at www.surestart.gov.uk/ensuringquality/research/localprogrammeevaluation/

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many Sure Start schemes there are in the north east; and what their total cost has been. [130384]

Margaret Hodge: A total of 63 Sure Start Local Programmes have been approved in the north east of England. To date we have given approval for over £33.2 million capital and paid just over £46.1 million in revenue for Sure Start Local Programmes in the North East of England to help reach 238,000 0 to 3-years-old children. Some of the programmes have started delivering full Sure Start services for parents and families in their area and others are at various stages of delivery.

Teachers

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the relationship between SATS scores and the results of teacher assessment at Key Stage Two. [129030]

Mr. Miliband [holding answer 11 September 2003]: Testing of all pupils at the end of each key stage of education provides objective evidence, against a national standard, of what children have learned in the core subjects. Teacher assessment is an important part of the overall statutory assessment framework and covers the full range and scope of the programmes of study, taking into account evidence of achievement in a range of contexts, including that gained through discussion and observation.

The evidence from both types of assessment, together provides, valuable information to support the future learning of each pupil.

The results from teacher assessment and tests are broadly consistent, but they are derived from different sources of evidence of a pupil's attainment.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many teachers he estimates will lose their jobs in (a) the Chesham and Amersham constituency and (b) Buckinghamshire as a result of the financial problems encountered by schools in England in the next school year; and how many (i) teaching and (ii) other staff posts he estimates will remain unfilled for the same reason. [129890]

Mr. Miliband: My right hon. Friend has made no such estimate. Provisional statistics on teacher and support staff numbers and teacher vacancies at January 2003 were published in April in Statistical First Release 10/2003. Statistics released on 9 September provided regional and LEA level breakdowns of these figures. Provisional national figures for January 2004 are due to be published next April. As I made clear in my reply to the hon. Member of 8 September 2003, Official Report, column 112w, the broad assessment of changes in teaching staff numbers made by my Department in liaison with local education authorities (LEAs) in May this year did not provide a definitive picture.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will list the subjects which have missed targets for teacher training recruitment in the last year for which figures are available. [127284]

Mr. Miliband: My Department has moved from a system which obliges teacher training providers to aim for a particular intake target to one that incentivises them to recruit as many good candidates as they can in the areas where new teachers are needed most. That is why 4,000 more conventional teacher training places and over 5,000 more employment-based training places will be funded in 2003/04 than were being funded in 1996/97. The table shows the number of conventional teacher training places funded in 2002/03 by subject and phase; the number of entrants who took up these places; and the number of recruits to employment-based teacher training in that year. Numbers of funded employment-based training places are not specified in advance by subject or phase.

2002/03	Initial teacher training places	Entrants to initial teacher training	Entrants to employment based teacher training
Primary	14,000	14,451	1,659
Secondary
Mathematics	1,940	1,673	382
English and drama	2,350	2,479	649
Science	2,850	2,701	506
Modern Foreign Languages	2,050	1,732	221
Technology[1]	2,500	2,404	653
History	950	985	79
Geography	1,100	946	59
Physical Education	1,200	1,325	138
Art	850	885	82
Music	700	596	68
Religious Education	700	576	62
Citizenship	200	185	15

2002/03	Initial teacher training places	Entrants to initial teacher training	Entrants to employment based teacher training
Other	300	174	100
Secondary Reserve	100	—	—
Total secondary	17,790	16,661	3,014
Overall Total	31,790	31,112	4,673
Fast Track	n/a	117	n/a
Total (including Fast Track)	31,790	31,229	4,673

[1] Technology includes design and technology, business studies and information technology

Source:
TTA

Teenage Pregnancy

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what evaluation he has made of the effectiveness of the Teenage Pregnancy Unit working with local teenage pregnancy units; and if he will make a statement. [120769]

Margaret Hodge: The Teenage Pregnancy Unit was established in 1999 with a cross Whitehall remit to manage implementation of the Strategy. The first independent evaluation report of the Strategy, published in 2002, commended the joint working between the Teenage Pregnancy Unit, Regional Teenage Pregnancy Co-ordinators based in Government Offices and Local Teenage Pregnancy Co-ordinators who lead the implementation of strategies in each top tier local authority. The second annual report of the national evaluation will be published shortly.

The report acknowledged the success of these arrangements as a major factor in wielding influence at local level. The effectiveness of joint working was also recognised in the first annual report of the Independent Advisory Group on Teenage Pregnancy, published in 2001. The importance of joint working was reinforced in the second annual report of the Independent Advisory Group on Teenage Pregnancy, published in July 2003.

There are very encouraging signs that the Government's overall teenage pregnancy strategy is working. Data for 2001 published in February by the Office for National Statistics shows that conceptions among under 18-year-olds in England fell by 3 per cent. and represents a total reduction of 10 per cent. since 1998. For under 16s, the rate is 4 per cent. lower than in 2000 and represents a 10 per cent. reduction since 1998.

University Medical Schools (Funding)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to his answer of 18 July 2003, Official Report, column 749W, which university medical schools are in receipt of funding from the improving retention pot as a result of admitting full-time students under 21 with an A-level points score of less than 3 C's to study medicine; how many such students each medical school has admitted; and how much such funding each school has attracted. [131004]

Alan Johnson: The Higher Education Funding Council for England, in making funding allocations to institutions to improve retention, does not allocate funds to particular individuals, departments or schools. How they are distributed internally is entirely at the discretion of institutions. Information on how much funding is passed on to individual medical schools is not available.

University Research

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will report progress in preparing a single measure of research excellence on the basis of collaboration between university departments and external partners. [129992]

Ms Hewitt: I have been asked to reply.

The Government are working with other partners to develop appropriate metrics for the science base and knowledge transfer.

This work will be informed by the conclusions of the review of the Research Assessment Exercise which is due to report during the next few months.

Mr. Best: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proposals the Government have to increase funding for departmental research in UK universities. [127294]

Alan Johnson: The Government have announced the most generous research settlement for many years, with overall expenditure on science and research increasing by £1.25 billion a year by 2005–06 compared to 2002–03—around 30 per cent. in real terms. In our grant letter to the Higher Education Funding Council for England this year, we announced increased quality-related funding for research in higher education institutions of £80 million in 2003–04, £107 million in 2004–05 and £246 million in 2005–06.

Visual Impairment

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will assess the level of accessibility for visually impaired people in (a) UK Online Centres and (b) Online Centres in Wales. [129946]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 16 September 2003]: The Department allocated £199 million of Capital Modernisation Funding (CMF) to fund around 2,800 UK online centres specifically to provide ICT access to the disadvantaged. One main target group centres were set up to reach people with disabilities. Centres are expected to demonstrate that they comply with current requirements of the Disability Discrimination Act and other legal requirements around Equal Opportunities. This element is scrutinised as part of the contract monitoring process.

One way that my Department is looking to improve accessibility for the disabled and visually impaired in UK online centres is a package of 811 Assistive Technology kits. These kits have been made available to help some centres meet the immediate, basic, access requirements of a wide range of disabled people. For example, for visually-impaired users the package includes a large keyboard with big keys as well as magnification and screen reading software.

The Department also has contracts in place with key organisations such as AbilityNet, Direct Support and Becta to ensure that there is adequate support and guidance for UK online centres and centre staff on a wide range of issues including people disabilities.

I am afraid I am unable to advise you on Online Centres in Wales as the DfES are only responsible for centres in England. May I suggest you speak to National Assembly for Wales, Cardiff Bay, Cardiff CF99 1NA, Tel: 029 20 825111.

DEFENCE

Iraq

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the incident in the Mansur district of Baghdad on 27 July, with particular reference to the number of Iraqi civilians killed by US forces during that incident. [129643]

Mr. Hoon: UK Armed Forces were not involved in the incident in question. We do not possess sufficient information to comment on incidents involving Coalition partners' Armed Forces.

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of coalition forces were killed in Iraq from the end of the conflict to 1 September. [128944]

Mr. Ingram: Between the end of the conflict and 1 September, 16 United Kingdom armed forces personnel and one member of the Defence Fire Service (DFS) had died. Eleven, all from the armed forces, were killed in action or subsequently died of wounds received and six, including the member of the DFS, died in non-battle accidents or from natural causes.

We do not hold data on the numbers of fatalities suffered by other members of the coalition.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions the Government has had with allies on the use of NATO peacekeepers in Iraq. [130778]

Mr. Ingram: The possibility of NATO involvement in stabilisation operations in Iraq has been the subject of discussion within NATO and, bilaterally, between allies. Following the NATO ministerial meeting in June 2003, a communiqué was released that read:

> "The North Atlantic Council will review NATO's contribution to the stabilisation efforts on a regular basis."

The North Atlantic Council has also agreed for NATO to support the Polish-led Multinational Division (Centre South) in Iraq. This support includes assistance with the force generation of the Multinational Division (Centre South), provision of NATO owned and operated satellite communications and advice on logistics.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his written ministerial statement of 8 September 2003, Official Report, columns 2–3WS, on Iraq, what funds have been set aside to cover the costs of the additional British troops to be sent to Iraq. [131106]

Mr. Hoon: The Chancellor of the Exchequer has set aside £3 billion to a special reserve for the cost of military operations in Iraq. The Ministry of Defence drew down £1 billion of this reserve at Spring Supplementary Estimates 2002–03.

It is too early to estimate the costs likely to arise in 2003–04. Once these are known, additional funding, if required, will be sought by MOD in the normal way through Supplementary Estimates.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether all sites in Iraq where cluster munitions were deployed by the coalition have been identified. [129602]

Mr. Ingram: Those areas where it is known Coalition Forces dropped explosive ordnance including cluster bombs, have been noted and work is currently underway to inspect and mark these areas in order to confirm the presence of unexploded ordnance. This work is being carried out by United Kingdom and Coalition Armed Forces and Non-Governmental Organisations. In areas outside the UK Area of Operation, it is for the Coalition Partners concerned to comment on their progress.

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of the degree of success achieved in integrating tri-service United Kingdom personnel into the United States Army V Corps Headquarters staff at Headquarters, Combined Joint Task Force, in Baghdad. [130333]

Mr. Ingram: Following its involvement in the recent successful combat operations in Iraq, Headquarters V (US) Corps assumed the role of Headquarters Combined Task Force 7 (HQ CTF 7).

The Headquarters commands a multinational organisation of some 30 nations. It ensures that the Combined Joint Task Force (CJTF7) provides the military support required by the Administrator and the Coalition Provisional Authority (CPA). CJTF7 is commanded by an American three star officer. He has two deputies, one of whom is a UK two star officer (who also acts as the senior British military representative in Iraq). UK military staffs have been embedded in the HQ since May and now fill some 30 posts. We judge that the integration of tri-service United Kingdom personnel in the Headquarters, has gone very well.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the (a) five most used weapons and (b) five most expensive weapons used in the Iraq conflict were; what the unit value of each of these weapons was; how many of each of these weapons were used; and if he will make a statement. [113262]

Mr. Ingram: The five most common weapons deployed by UK forces during Operation TELIC were:

SA80 A2 rifle and variants;
Browning 9mm pistol;
General Purpose Machine Gun;
L2A2 hand grenade;
LAW 94 Light Anti-armour Weapon.

Calculating the unit costs of weapons used during the Coalition's military action will take some time since they will include the costs of weapons consumed in excess of peacetime levels and the cost of repairing and replacing weapons and ordnance that was destroyed or damaged. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as the work is complete.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many leaflets have been distributed by UK forces in Iraq giving information about the dangers of unexploded ordnance since the conflict began. [131142]

Mr. Ingram: Providing a safe, secure and risk free environment for the Iraqi people is a key aspect of restoration activity for the Coalition. The United Kingdom has made a significant effort to educate the local population in its area of operations about the dangers of mines and unexploded ordnance. To date, over 4,000 leaflets containing information about the dangers of unexploded ordnance have been distributed in theatre by UK troops. Those troops involved in explosive ordnance disposal continue to distribute leaflets.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 1 September 2003, Official Report, column 901W, on warehouse looting in Basra, whether UK forces will increase their patrols as a result. [129999]

Mr. Ingram: United Kingdom forces currently have 12 personnel from 1st Battalion The Kings Regiment based at the warehouse in Basra. Their role is primarily administrative but also to support and oversee the local Iraqi security guards who are directly responsible for the security of the warehouse.

The physical security of the warehouse has been improved, with perimeter fences being secured and better lighting installed, and the guards have successfully apprehended a number of would be looters. UK forces continue to conduct routine patrols in the area of the warehouse. Commanders on the ground—who are best placed to judge—do not currently judge that there is a need to increase the frequency of these patrols.

Armoured Vehicles

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the value to the Ministry of Defence is of the planned sales of armoured land rovers; how many have been sold in the past two years; and how many are up for sale. [130791]

Mr. Ingram: The financial returns to the Ministry of Defence for the planned sale of armoured land rovers is very much dependent on the vehicles' condition and the requirements of the market and therefore cannot be accurately determined. However, the average return to the MOD for each of those vehicles already sold is approximately £1,500, following completion of removal of armour and repair/making good of any damage resulting from the removal process. To date some 26 vehicles have been sold in the past two years and eight scrapped due to poor condition. There remain 82 vehicles that could be sold.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of the effectiveness of the procurement process for the (a) TRACER and (b) MRAV armoured vehicle programmes. [130622]

Mr. Ingram: Both the Tactical Reconnaissance Armoured Combat Equipment (TRACER) and Multi Role Armoured Vehicle (MRAV) programmes were subject to our normal procurement processes, which are kept under regular review.

The joint United Kingdom/United States decision to terminate the collaborative TRACER programme came at the end of its Assessment Phase and took account both of an emerging, wider requirement for deployable, rapid effect forces, and the potential cost of the TRACER solution. I am satisfied, therefore, that this phase of the procurement process fulfilled its purpose, namely to take account of such factors before deciding whether to commit to a major investment decision.

On MRAV, I refer the hon. Member to the statement I made on 17 July 2003, Official Report, column 71WS, about the UK's decision to withdraw from this tri-national programme, which is managed by the Organisation for Joint Armaments Cooperation (OCCAR) on behalf of the UK, Germany and the Netherlands. Officials intend to conduct a 'Post Project Evaluation' study once the United Kingdom has completed its withdrawal from the programme.

Arms Exports

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on Britain's arms dealings with Israel. [131364]

Mr. Ingram: Export licence applications for items to be exported to Israel are assessed by the DTI on a case-by-case basis against the consolidated European Union and national arms export licensing criteria in the light of the circumstances prevailing at the time.

The Government's procurement policy is laid out in the Defence Industrial Policy reference OP DEF 2002/1, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been spent by his Department in each year since 1997–98 on promoting British military equipment and arms sales to foreign customers. [131111]

Mr. Ingram: The Defence Export Services Organisation (DESO) of the Ministry of Defence (MOD) plays a fundamental role in implementing the Government's policy of supporting legitimate United Kingdom defence exports.

Operating costs for DESO in each year since financial year 1997–98 are as follows.

£ million

Financial year	Expenditure	Receipts	Net operating costs
1998–99	45.359	-29.342	16.017
1999–2000	46.473	-34.977	11.496
2000–01	55.81	-41.430	14.380
2001–02	48.930	-37.853	11.077
2002–03	56.944	-44.407	12.537

Main sources of offsetting income for DESO are three Government to Government project offices, where the customer country pays MOD costs, and the Disposal Services Agency where costs are met from revenue.

DESO raises other sources of income from charging industry for activities undertaken on their behalf where Government independence from industry is not essential and when costs can be directly identified calculated and recovered from individual companies.

Savings to the defence budget come from spreading the fixed overhead cost of equipment over the longer production runs generated by exports, from the sale of surplus military equipment to overseas governments and from Commercial Exploitation Levy receipts on exports of equipment developed using public money.

Bat Colony (RAF Halton)

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress so far and expected timetable of measures to investigate and manage the bat colony at the Princess Mary Hospital site, RAF Halton. [129398]

Mr. Caplin: Following the completion of the bat survey on the Princess Mary Hospital site in July this year, and at the request of English Nature, Defence Estates has commissioned WSP Environmental (licensed bat ecologists) to undertake evening emergent and dawn swarming surveys to establish the population size of each roost. These surveys will be completed by the middle of September.

Based on the results of these surveys, WSP Environmental will prepare a mitigation strategy that will outline the measures to be put in place to ensure the protection of the bats. This mitigation strategy will be submitted in draft to English Nature and Aylesbury Vale District Council on the 19 September and subject to their agreement will be incorporated into the Environmental Statement which will be submitted with the outline planning application for the Princess Mary Hospital site at the end of the September.

Application for the DEFRA licence, implementation of the mitigation measures and the management of the bat roosts will be the responsibility of the eventual purchaser of the site.

Bosnia

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the timescale for EU forces taking over the SFOR mission in Bosnia. [130779]

Mr. Ingram: No decisions have yet been taken on an end date for the SFOR operation, or on the arrangements for any follow-on missions.

Commonwealth Service Personnel

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what surveys of (a) Commonwealth families and (b) Fijian families have been carried out to ascertain their views on life in the armed forces away from their homes; and if he will make a statement. [130850]

Mr. Caplin: The Army carried out an informal survey of Foreign and Commonwealth soldiers and their families in 2002. No other surveys have been conducted by any of the Services specifically targeting Commonwealth or Fijian families. The data revealed no large variants between different ethnic groups, and Foreign and Commonwealth soldiers have generally the same level of occurrences on most issues, although there is a slightly higher level of cases on welfare and immigration. The Adjutant General's staff are now taking forward recommendations arising from the survey.

Each Service, however, conducts Continuous Attitude Surveys of serving personnel to measure the morale and understand the concerns of their people.

The questions cover a wide variety of subjects, including families, welfare and quality of life. The surveys are sent to a randomly selected sample, which may therefore include Commonwealth or Fijians, but they are not specifically targeted.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to provide (a) discounted telephone calls and (b) discounted air fares to Commonwealth servicemen and women and their families for communication with their friends and family in their country of origin; and if he will make a statement. [130851]

Mr. Caplin: There are currently no plans to provide discounted air fares or discounted telephone calls for personnel from Commonwealth countries, whose Terms and Conditions of Service (TACOS) are the same as for all other personnel. However, under the "Leave to Countries Abroad" (DOMCOL) scheme, a Service individual normally domiciled abroad may accumulate part of their Annual Leave Allowance each year over a period not exceeding five years for the purpose of visiting the country of their domicile. Under the scheme, which is subject to specific qualifying conditions, personnel are entitled to travel at public expense once in five years after five years service to the country of normal domicile. Requirements for the DOMCOL scheme include that the individual be single, but married personnel whose family are resident abroad and have been separated from their family for the whole of the five-year qualifying period may also register under the scheme.

The Ministry of Defence is aware that current TACOS vary between the Services and consequently do not offer all Commonwealth personnel the same opportunities for compassionate leave and travel arrangements as for those ordinarily domiciled in the United Kingdom, and is reviewing TACOS accordingly.

For those personnel on deployed operations the Operational Welfare Package (OWP) provides 20 minutes of publicly funded telephone calls per week for all personnel, regardless of nationality or country of origin and allows them to maintain telephone contact with their families and friends overseas.

Continuous Attitude Surveys

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when he expects the next continuous attitude surveys in each service will be (a) conducted and (b) published; in what format the report of the surveys will be published; and if he will make a statement; [130849]

(2) what plans he has to publish the armed forces continuous attitude surveys; and if he will make a statement. [130848]

Mr. Caplin: The next Continuous Attitude Survey (CAS) for the Royal Navy will be issued at the end of September with a report expected at the end of December 2003. For the Army the next survey is scheduled to be sent out in December with a report due in the spring. For the RAF the next survey will be issued on 1 November with the results reported later next year. The RAF report with the 2002 results will however be produced on 1 November. All three reports are produced electronically and distributed to internal stakeholders.

Copies of the questions asked in each of the CASs are held in the Library of the House. There are no immediate plans to publish the answers. We are however reviewing the range of survey material to release and appropriate ways of putting it into the public domain.

Daedalus Site

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department is proposing to make further use itself of the Daedalus site at Lee-on-the-Solent. [131263]

Mr. Caplin: The Ministry of Defence continues to assess the scope for estate rationalisation across the whole of mainland Great Britain. Areas such as Portsmouth, Gosport, and Fareham currently accommodating a high incidence of MOD activity are a particular focus for this work.

The Daedalus site may present an opportunity to facilitate rationalisation within these areas or elsewhere. No specific recommendations, for the Daedalus main site, have yet been made and it will be some time before the necessary studies have been conducted and completed.

Defence Diversification Agency

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress towards creating a Defence Diversification Agency. [130381]

Mr. Ingram: The Defence Diversification Agency (DDA) was created in 1999 as part of the then Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA). In July 2001 the DDA became part of the Ministry of Defence head office when QinetiQ plc and the Defence Science and Technology Laboratories were created out of DERA.

Over the four years it has been operating the DDA has made very good progress. It has assisted over 2,000 firms with access to MOD's knowledge bases and facilitated more than 400 contracts to transfer defence technology and know how into the civil sector. DDA has also arranged for more than 40 commercial technology offerings to be made to MOD programmes, which has resulted in some 20 contracts to date.

Defence Equipment Exhibition

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what subsidy is provided by his Department to the Defence Systems and Equipment International Exhibition held in London in September 2003; and if he will make a statement. [129914]

Mr. Ingram: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 20 May 2003, Official Report, columns 677–78W) which gave an estimate of the direct cost to the Ministry of Defence of DSEI 2003. The final cost of the exhibition remains to be established.

Departmental Finance

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library copies of (a) operating cost statements, (b) statements of recognised gains and losses, (c) cash flow statements and (d) the fixed asset register maintained by his Department's management groupings since the financial year 1999–2000. [130747]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what financial information is maintained by his Department's management groupings. [130748]

Mr. Ingram: A management grouping is the lowest level at which a complete set of financial ledgers is kept. The Department's management grouping holds all the accounting information necessary to prepare the management grouping resource accounts. It also provides the relevant accounting information to the Top Level Budget (TLB) holder to enable the TEB to prepare its resource account submissions for the publication of the overall departmental resource accounts.

Departmental Relocation

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the possible benefits of moving his Department out of London; and if he will make a statement. [130222]

Mr. Caplin: The Department's estate strategy was set out in 'In Trust and On Trust', published in 2000. The aim is to create a defence estate of the right size, shape and location through corporate management of the estate. The implementation of this strategy has informed our active engagement in the Independent Review on Public Sector Relocation—the Lyons Review—and will continue to do so.

In recent years the Department has relocated a significant amount of defence activity from London. The reviews and evaluations that inform these decisions have generally been undertaken internally, rather than commissioned from external consultants. We evaluated the relocations of the Defence Procurement Agency, and the Meteorological Office as part of our submission to the Lyons Review, which generally welcomed the actions taken by the Ministry of Defence.

Depleted Uranium

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 8 July 2003, Official Report, column 701W, on depleted uranium, what agreement was reached with the United States about use of depleted uranium munitions. [129821]

Mr. Caplin: Decisions on the release of information on the use of depleted uranium (DU) munitions by United States Forces during the recent conflict in Iraq are a matter for the US Department of Defence. There are currently no plans to produce a combined report of DU firings by United Kingdom and US Forces.

Electromagnetic Guns

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what assessment has been made of the effects on the environment of the US electromagnetic gun tests at Dundrennan; [130247]

(2) when the trials of the new US electromagnetic gun at Dundrennan are expected to conclude; [130248]

(3) whether a review is planned of the safety procedures involved in the US electromagnetic gun trials at Dundrennan; [130463]

(4) what representations have been received from the local community on the dangers involved in the trials of the US electromagnetic gun at Dundrennan. [130464]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence and the United States Army have been working together on a collaborative research programme into the Electro-Magnetic gun at Dundrennan range, in Kirkcudbright, since 1993. In December 2002, we jointly signed a Memorandum of Understanding with the US to continue this long-standing project agreement until 2009.

Extensive tests have proven that the electro-magnetic radiation from the gun is negligible and that it has no effect on the environment.

The safe operation of defence ranges is of paramount importance. Safety procedures at Dundrennan have been tried and tested over the last 10 years without incident. Risk assessments are conducted prior to each series of firings and strict operating procedures are followed. Safety procedures are constantly reviewed and updated in line with the progress of the trial, and all safety procedures are independently audited.

We have received a limited number of representations from the local community regarding the possible dangers associated with the Electro-Magnetic gun testing at Dundrennan. The correspondence received specifically focuses on the perceived use of depleted uranium, but also reflects some general concerns, which have been generated by articles in the press. The Electro-Magnetic gun's projectiles do not contain depleted uranium, nor do they contain any explosives.

The high velocity of the projectile round generates the penetrative effect, not the projectile's mass or density.

European Armaments Policy

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the contribution of a European armaments policy to the development of the European security and defence policy; and what contribution his Department has made to the plans of the European Commission to develop such a policy. [130805]

Mr. Ingram: The Government are committed to playing a leading role in the development of European security and defence policy. Working with other European Union partners, we are actively engaged in the creation of an inter-Government Agency in the field of defence capabilities, development, research, and acquisition. The Agency, which will be capability focussed, will, inter alia, promote and enhance European armaments co-operation with the aim of contributing to the military equipment needs of member states in a cost effective and efficient manner. The Government's view of the Commission's initiative to develop European armaments related proposals are set out in the Explanatory Memorandum on European Community Document entitled: "Communication from the Commission to the Council, the European Parliament, the European Social and Economic Committee of the Regions "European Defence—Industrial and Market Issues: Towards an EU Defence Equipment Policy" Reference Number 8484/03 [COM (2003) 113 final] dated 15 May 2003, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. The Government notes that armaments are primarily a matter for European Union member states with any contribution from the Commission being in support of national Governments' initiatives.

Ex-servicemen (Injury Claims)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the decision taken by the War Pensions Agency to redefine the acceptance procedure for ex-service people who make claims for injuries from reasonable doubt to balance of probability. [131322]

Mr. Caplin: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer of 17 September 2003, Official Report, column 753W.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on Britain's military commitment to the Falkland Islands. [129911]

Mr. Ingram: We are fully committed to ensuring the sovereignty and security of the Falkland Islands.

Food Expenditure

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was spent on food by his Department and by each agency for which it is responsible in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03; what proportion of that food by value was produced in the United Kingdom; what guidance he has issued to encourage the procurement of home-grown food; and if he will make a statement. [129378]

Mr. Ingram: In 2001–02 the total amount spent on food by the MoD was £114.8 million and in 2002–03 it was £115.7 million. Of these totals, 61 per cent. was spent on products of UK origin; however, 25 per cent. of the food goods purchased by the MoD are not produced or grown in UK.

The MoD's main food supply contractor, 3663, is mandated to give due consideration to British products during the tendering process and to procure them whenever they are competitive.

Future Rapid Effects System

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when the British Army will have its initial operating capability with the Future Rapid Effects System; [130407]

(2) for what reason funding for the Future Rapid Effects System Assessment Phase Planning work has ceased; what the expenditure on this work has been to date; and how the results of this work will be used in the Future Rapid Effects System programme; [130408]

(3) what the next phase of the Future Rapid Effect System project will be; what assessment he has made of the advantages of the next phase being led by (a) Alvis Vickers Ltd. and (b) a company other than Alvis Vickers Ltd.; and how long he expects it would take to select a contractor other than Alvis Vickers Ltd. through competitive tender; [130410]

(4) what the size was of the co-located industrial Future Rapid Effect System team made up of personnel from Alvis Vickers, BAE Systems and General Dynamics UK in July; and what assessment he has made of the effect on British industry if the next phase of FRES were to be awarded to (a) Alvis Vickers and (b) a company other than Alvis Vickers. [130411]

Mr. Ingram: The project to introduce a Future Rapid Effect System is currently in its concept phase. As part of this, Alvis Vickers Ltd. (AVL) has recently completed background planning work to develop initial estimates of programme schedule and cost. This work involved some 70 staff drawn from AVL, BAE Systems and General Dynamics (UK) Ltd. and was valued at approximately £4 million. The Department is now considering procurement options and will consider all relevant factors in determining the way forward. The ISD for FRES will not be endorsed until the main investment decision, but on current plans, the intention is to introduce early variants into service around the end of the decade.

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to award a contract for the demonstration and manufacture phase of the Future Rapid Effect System. [130412]

Mr. Ingram: The project to introduce a Future Rapid Effect System is currently in its Concept phase. The Department is now considering procurement options but no date has yet been fixed for the award of contracts for future phases.

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the average age is of the British Army fleets of (a) the 430-Series vehicles, (b) CVR(T) and (c) Saxon; and when these vehicles will be replaced by the Future Rapid Effect System. [130413]

Mr. Ingram: The average age of the British Army fleet for the FV430, CVR(T) and Saxon Light Armoured Vehicles is detailed in the table:

Vehicle	Average age (years)
FV430 series	38
CVR(T)	31
Saxon	14

An endorsed in-service date for the Future Rapid Effect System (FRES), and the numbers and types of vehicles to be procured as part of the FRES programme, will not be determined until the assessment phase of the programme has been completed. We are therefore currently unable to confirm which in-service vehicles will be replaced by FRES vehicles or when that might occur.

Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when and why his Department stopped funding work on FRES Assessment Phase Planning; how much had already been spent on the work; and how it can be used in the further development of the FRES project; [130465]

(2) what estimate he has made of the overall value of the FRES contract when it is let; how many jobs it can be expected to sustain or generate; and how many jobs would be lost in the UK if the contract were to be awarded overseas. [130466]

Mr. Ingram: The project to introduce a Future Rapid Effect System is currently in its concept phase. Acquisition costs are yet to be established but could be in the region of £6 billion.

Industry has undertaken some background planning work, under an Assessment Phase Planning contract valued at approximately £4 million, to develop initial estimates of programme schedule and cost. This work is now complete. The Department is considering procurement options and will have regard to all relevant factors, including industrial issues, in determining the way forward.

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what assessment has been made of the Future Rapid Effects System project in relation to (a) security of supply, (b) export potential and (c) industrial capabilities; [130705]

(2) how much has been spent on the Future Rapid Effects System; [130706]

(3) whether overseas companies will be invited to bid for a lead role in the Future Rapid Effects System project; [130707]

(4) whether there has been a change in the projected in-service date of the Future Rapid Effects System; [130708]

(5) what estimate has been made of the number of United Kingdom jobs that will be (a) created and (b) secured by the Future Rapid Effects System project. [130709]

Mr. Ingram: The total value of work done to date in support of concept and planning work on a Future Rapid Effects System (FRES) is approximately £7 million; this includes £4 million for Assessment Phase Planning work carried out by Alvis Vickers Ltd. to develop initial estimates of programme schedule and cost. The Department is now considering procurement options. No decision has yet been reached with regard to commercial arrangements for future phases. All relevant factors will be taken into account in determining the way forward. The ISD for FRES will not be endorsed until the main investment decision, but on current plans, the intention is to introduce early variants into service around the end of the decade.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when he expects a decision to be made on the awarding of the contract for the Future Rapid Effect System; [130789]

(2) whether he intends to have the assessment phase of the Future Rapid Effect System conducted by an independent body. [130784]

Mr. Ingram: The Future Rapid Effect System project is in the Concept Phase. We are currently reviewing procurement options and no decision has yet been made on how to take the programme forward. An announcement on the way ahead will be made later in the year.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made with the Future Rapid Effects System; what armoured vehicles will be produced; what roles they will fulfil; and whether the in-service date has changed. [129192]

Mr. Ingram: The project to introduce a Future Rapid Effect System is currently in its concept phase. As part of this phase the Department has been undertaking background planning work in order to inform decisions on how to take the programme forward. The Department is now considering procurement options.

Studies planned for the next phase of the programme will determine the make up of the FRES fleet. Only when these studies have been completed will we know what armoured vehicles will be produced and what role they will fulfil in the rapid intervention force.

The ISD for FRES will not be endorsed until the main investment decision, but on current plans, the intention is to introduce early variants into service around the end of the decade.

Gurkhas

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many and what percentage of the total Ghurkha forces in the years 1997 to 2003, leaving the armed forces before 15 years maximum service, (a) left voluntarily, (b) were made redundant, (c) had their employment terminated for other operational reasons, (d) were invalided out and (e) left for other reasons. [130360]

Mr. Caplin: All data in the tables are taken from the soldiers' Record of Service.

Data given are for Ghurkha other ranks only as there are no officers that fall into the categories described in the question.

Number of Ghurkha soldiers who left the service with less than 15 years service[1]

Reason	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03
Left voluntarily	0	0	0	0	0	0
Redundant	140	*	0	0	0	0
Discipline/misconduct	*	*	*	0	0	0
Invalided	*	*	0	0	0	0
Completed service	20	10	20	*	*	0
Death	*	*	*	0	*	*

[1] Note that all numbers in the data table are rounded to the nearest 10, numbers less than five are represented with a "*" to preserve confidentiality.

Percentage of Ghurkha soldiers who left the service with less than 15 years service

Reason	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03
Left voluntarily	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
Redundant	4.2	0.1	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
Discipline/misconduct	0.1	0.0	0.1	0.0	0.0	0.0
Invalided	0.1	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.0
Completed Service	0.5	0.2	0.7	0.1	0.1	0.0
Death	0.1	0.0	0.0	0.0	0.1	0.0

The 140 personnel shown as redundant in the years 1997–98 reflect the drawdown of the Brigade of Ghurkhas at the time of the handover of Hong Kong in 1997. The Army Personnel Centre have confirmed that they are all in receipt of a service pension.

Of the 50 shown as having completed service before 15 years in years 1997–98, 1998–99 and 1999–2000, inquiries through the Army Personnel Centre have revealed several individuals were actually made redundant and are therefore in receipt of a pension as a result of the drawdown. Virtually all of the remaining individuals are in receipt of a pension either because they received condonation of service to increase their reckonable service to 15 years or are in receipt of other types of pension as appropriate (Liberalised Family Pension or Ordinary Family Pension).

Hercules

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to buy back some of the C-130K Hercules aircraft sold to Lockheed Martin for onward sale. [112687]

Mr. Ingram: As part of the agreement signed in March 1995 to acquire C-130J aircraft, 24 C-130K Hercules aircraft were returned to Lockheed Martin Aero between November 2000 and July 2002 in part exchange. There are no plans for the Department to re-acquire any of these.

ITAR Waiver

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what effects the EU proposals on the (a) harmonisation of European rules on procurement, (b) the simplified licence system to facilitate the circulation of components and defence equipment between EU countries and (c) the co-ordination of European research and development in defence industries will have on (i) UK defence industrial relations with the US and (ii) the proposed ITAR waiver. [130786]

Mr. Ingram: In all of these considerations our overriding aim is to maintain effective relations on both sides of the Atlantic. At the same time, based on the Government's open and transparent defence industrial policy, we will continue to press for increased market access for United Kingdom defence companies in both the United States and Europe.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what effects developments in the US Congress and Buy American proposals are having on the UK's negotiations with the US Government to secure an ITAR waiver. [130787]

Mr. Ingram: The Government continues to do all it can to support the United States Administration in its scrutiny of the waiver for the United Kingdom from the US International Traffic in Arms Regulations. An amendment to the State Department Authorizations Bill, to support a waiver for the UK, is to be discussed in the autumn in Conference between the Senate and House of Representatives. It goes without saying that the Government would very much regret any attempt by Congress to impose damaging restrictions on the ability of UK companies to access the US defence market, which could only be detrimental to our mutual interests.

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects negotiations with the US Government on an ITAR waiver for the UK to be concluded. [130788]

Mr. Ingram: Negotiations were completed with the US Administration in May 2003 on the text of an unclassified waiver for the UK from the US International Traffic in Arms Regulations.

Licences (EU Harmonisation)

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with European partners on the simplified licence system to facilitate the circulation of components and defence equipment between EU countries; and when he expects such a licence system to come into effect. [130794]

Nigel Griffiths: I have been asked to reply.

There is already in place the Letter of Intent (LOI) arrangements that provide a simplified licensing system to facilitate the transfer of defence equipment for joint projects involving the LOI Partners that the UK supports. In addition, the European Commission in its Communication, "Towards an EU Defence Equipment Policy" (COM 2003 113 final of 11 March 2003), has proposed an impact analysis to establish the value of any Community-level legislative initiative to simplify intra-community transfers of defence-related goods. Work on this will start at the end of 2004.

Low Flying

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many low flying sorties by military jet aircraft of the (a) NATO air forces and (b) RAF were carried out last year within the UK flying system. [129197]

Mr. Caplin: The information is not held in the form requested. The amount of military low flying that takes place in the United Kingdom is expressed in hours rather than by number of sorties, which can vary significantly from minutes to several hours. A statement on the Pattern of Low Flying Across the UK is published annually, with copies placed in the Libraries of both Houses. The statement for the training year 2002–03 records that foreign-based aircraft were booked into the UK Low Flying System for some 174 hours (this figure covers all foreign aircraft with the exception of United States Air Forces in Europe (USAFE) aircraft which are based in the UK). The total amount of booked low flying by all military aircraft was some 47,058 hours.

The statement for the training year 2002–03 records the amount of booked low flying in Low Flying Area 7 (an area that broadly equates to the land area of Wales, except for a small area of northeast Powys) was some 7,635 hours.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many low flying military sorties were undertaken within Low Flying Area 7 of the UK low flying system in 2002. [129198]

Mr. Caplin: The information is not held in the form requested. The amount of military low flying that takes place in the United Kingdom is better expressed in hours rather than by number of sorties, which can vary significantly from minutes to several hours. On this basis, a statement on the Pattern of Low Flying Across the UK is published annually, with copies placed in the Libraries of both Houses. The statement for the training year 2002–03 records that the amount of booked low flying in Low Flying Area 7 (an area that broadly equates to the land area of Wales, except for a small area of northeast Powys) was approximately 7,635 hours.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) in which military conflicts of the past decade low flying tactics have been used by the RAF; [129202]

(2) how many sorties have been flown by UK RAF pilots at a level of 100 ft during (a) military conflicts over the past six years and (b) the recent war in Iraq. [129216]

Mr. Caplin: Low flying tactics have been used in military conflicts in the Balkans, Sierra Leone, Afghanistan and Iraq. Although fast jet low flying has not been employed in all of these conflicts, I can confirm that a number of fast jet sorties were flown at low level during the recent operation in Iraq. The heights at which operational sorties are undertaken vary according to the assessed threat at the time. Details of the number of sorties and the heights at which they were flown are not held centrally.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements govern the training of foreign nationals in low flying military exercises by the RAF. [129203]

Mr. Caplin: Low flying in the United Kingdom by non UK-based foreign air forces, whether in RAF-led exercises or any other training, is closely controlled and generally only permitted on a reciprocal basis. Foreign aircrew are bound by the same restrictions as those that apply to UK aircrew, but additionally are not generally permitted to operate under more favourable conditions than those applied to our forces in the country concerned. All foreign aircrew receive a face to face brief from an appropriately qualified member of British forces before they can operate in the UK Low Flying System.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what percentage of low flying military aircraft exercises conducted in the United Kingdom in each of the past 10 years were undertaken by foreign nationals; [129204]

(2) how many foreign pilots have been involved in low flying military training exercises in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Wales in each of the last 10 years. [129206]

Mr. Caplin: Low flying military exercises are not generally conducted by foreign air forces alone. The number of pilots involved in low flying is not recorded centrally. The amount of low flying by foreign military aircraft is typically less than 1 per cent. of all the low flying training that takes place in the United Kingdom.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many accidents involving low flying military aircraft in the United Kingdom have been reported in each of the past 10 years. [129205]

Mr. Caplin: The number of accidents recorded to aircraft in the United Kingdom Low Flying System in the last 10 training years is:

April to March	Accidents
1994–95	3
1995–96	3
1996–97	0
1997–98	1
1998–99	2
1999–2000	5
2000–01	3
2001–02	0
2002–03	2
April 2003–Present	2

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many complaints his Department received with regard to military low flying aircraft in each parliamentary constituency in each of the last 10 years. [129208]

Mr. Caplin: The information is not held in the form requested. The number of individual complaints recorded for each county (based on the information supplied by the complainants) over the last three years is given in the following table. Detailed records are only retained for a three-year period.

	Complaints per training year
County	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03
No county provided	11	13	11
Aberdeenshire	46	48	45
Angus	13	16	35
Argyll and Bute	23	12	19
Avon	26	20	17
Ayrshire	14	14	7
Bedfordshire	42	38	19
Berkshire	31	39	62
Berwickshire	27	22	15
Borders	61	73	56
Buckinghamshire	29	40	27
Cambridgeshire	99	122	109
Carmarthenshire	78	73	63
Central	17	14	8
Ceredigion	30	31	22
Cheshire	15	25	22
Cleveland	6	6	2
Clwyd	16	14	22
Cornwall	91	108	72
Cumbria	138	165	218
Denbighshire	2	3	1
Derbyshire	13	20	18
Devon	178	211	197
Dorset	59	120	102
Dumfries and Galloway	159	165	130
Durham	9	15	26
Dyfed	141	114	109
East Sussex	33	33	29
East Yorkshire	18	15	12
Essex	56	63	78
Fife	22	26	44
Glamorgan	11	12	13
Gloucestershire	96	120	102
Grampian	16	12	42
Greater Manchester	0	0	3
Gwent	11	15	35
Gwynedd	94	26	76
Hampshire	249	243	225
Hereford and Worcester	106	117	150
Hertfordshire	18	15	22
Highlands	124	86	131
Humberside	27	15	16
Isle of Man	0	1	1
Isle of Wight	1	0	0
Kent	61	63	59
Lanarkshire	5	9	14
Lancashire	28	17	107
Leicestershire	22	15	28
Lincolnshire	143	150	110

County	Complaints per training year 2000–01	2001–02	2002–03
London	15	13	18
Lothian	59	47	57
Manchester	1	1	0
Merseyside	2	1	8
Middlesex	1	3	6
Monmouthshire	6	12	4
Moray	10	14	14
Norfolk	276	275	246
North Yorkshire	168	143	171
Northamptonshire	39	57	56
Northumberland	119	60	85
Nottinghamshire	36	53	33
Orkney	13	14	18
Oxfordshire	88	73	88
Pembrokeshire	20	71	47
Perthshire	21	29	48
Powys	87	83	96
Ross-Shire	16	25	51
Rutland	1	1	0
Shropshire	52	67	67
Somerset	196	224	226
South Yorkshire	22	9	13
Staffordshire	33	31	31
Strathclyde	48	24	41
Suffolk	148	138	110
Surrey	26	21	44
Tayside	65	34	44
Tyne and Wear	2	2	7
Warwickshire	25	20	20
West Midlands	4	0	2
West Sussex	43	64	67
West Yorkshire	14	31	14
Western Isles	0	3	12
Wiltshire	87	108	97
Yorkshire	11	4	7
Total	4,270	4,350	4,520

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many and what percentage of military low-flying services over the Welsh Military Tactical Training Area, this year was undertaken by foreign nationals. [129194]

Mr. Caplin: Foreign air forces are not permitted to operate in any of the three Tactical Training Areas including the one that exists over mid-Wales.

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many RAF low-flying sorties have been within three miles of (a) Kirkcudbright and (b) Gatehouse-of-Fleet in the last year. [130457]

Mr. Caplin: The hon. Member will be aware that Kirkcudbright and Gatehouse-of-Fleet lie within Low Flying Area (LFA) 16 and Tactical Training Area (TTA) 20T. In the last training year LFA 16 had a total of 3,535 hours of low flying activity booked of which 188 hours and 18 minutes were Operational Low Flying (OLF) activity which is carried out within the TTA boundary. These are the only figures available.

Manning Control Review

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many soldiers subject to Manning Control have made official complaints of harassment and bullying of them or their family during the MCP process in the last six years; and what steps are used to punish individuals who are proven to have bullied or harassed soldiers. [130008]

Mr. Caplin: The data requested are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The Ministry of Defence has a policy of zero tolerance towards all forms of bullying and harassment. Appropriate disciplinary or administrative action will be taken against any individual(s) found guilty of practising or condoning such behaviour.

Military Equipment

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with European partners on interoperability of military equipment with that of the United States of America. [130797]

Mr. Ingram: Regular discussions are held with our European partners on equipment capability issues. An important aspect is interoperability of equipment with Allies including the United States of America.

Ministry of Defence Police

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes there have been in procurement funding for the Ministry of Defence Police in the last five years. [130803]

Mr. Caplin: The bulk of the Ministry of Defence Police budget is taken up with the staff costs relating to pay and allowance. However, that part of the budget that is allocated to the procurement of capital items was, for the previous four years:

£

	Capital investment
1998–99	4,829,000
1999–2000	2,649,000
2000–01	1,851,000
2001–02	1,746,000
2002–03	1,460,000

A budget of £2.045 million has been set for the present year 2003–04.

Missile Defence

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he is taking to ensure that the activities undertaken at RAF Fylingdales are in the national interest of the United Kingdom. [131281]

Mr. Ingram: RAF Fylingdales has operated as a ballistic missile early warning station for some 40 years, and provides an essential component of United Kingdom defences. As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence told the House on 15 January 2003, Official Report, column 698, we are satisfied that the upgrade of the radar at RAF Fylingdales for missile defence purposes will also be in the national interest. The Ministry of Defence is negotiating an annex to the recently signed Ballistic Missile Defence Memorandum of Understanding with the United States to cover the upgrade, and is discussing with the US the operational arrangements for its use in missile defence. These agreements will ensure that UK interests are protected.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the silos at RAF Molesworth were last inspected under the terms of the INF Treaty 1987. [131282]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on 28 February 2003, Official Report, column 739W.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the locations where he has permitted the X-band system to be based. [131283]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence to my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham Selly Oak (Dr. Jones) on 7 March 2003, Official Report, column 1257W. The position remains that the United States has not asked us to site an X-Band radar in the UK, nor are we aware of any plans to do so.

MOD Deployments

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the deployments of (a) Ministry of Defence Guard Service and (b) Ministry of Defence Police officers abroad. [130776]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence Police are currently deployed in Kosovo (67 officers), Pitcairn Island (two officers) arid Bosnia Herzegovina (two officers). In addition, there are currently two officers in Iraq assessing conditions and training requirements.

Ministry of Defence Guard Service personnel are not deployed overseas.

Smuggling (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the role of the armed forces in combating smuggling in Northern Ireland. [131231]

Mr. Ingram: HM Customs and Excise have the lead responsibility for combating smuggling. Under long-standing arrangements the armed forces can provide support when requested by the civil power. In addition if, during the course of their normal duties, the armed forces discover instances of suspected smuggling this information is passed to the civilian authorities.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will answer Question 120316, tabled by the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South on 18 June. [129801]

Mr. Caplin: I replied on 11 September 2003.

Pilot Training

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the average monthly flying training time of trainee pilots in the RAF were in the last seven years. [130790]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Trainee pilots in the Royal Air Force undertake a minimum of 62 hours Elementary Flying Training (EFT) during their first year, before being streamed for fast jet, rotary wing or multi-engine pilot training. Flying hours will then depend on which aircraft type their training has undertaken. For example, fast jet trainees normally undertake 130 hours Basic Fast Jet Training, 70 hours Advanced Flying Training and 52 hours Tactical Weapons Training following completion of EFT, over a further two-year period. All students undertake relevant ground school training prior to each flying phase.

Procurement (EU Harmonisation)

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with European partners on the harmonisation of European rules on procurement; and when he expects the harmonisation of European rules on procurement to be completed. [130793]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence has not had any direct discussions with European partners on harmonisation of European rules on procurement. It does, of course, contribute when invited to do so to the overall UK response to proposals for changes to the existing EC Public Procurement Regulations.

RAF Lyneham

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what studies he has commissioned into possible aerospace commercial use that could be made of RAF Lyneham. [130872]

Mr. Ingram: A study was commissioned by the Royal Air Force into the potential for commercial development at RAF Lyneham, which reported in March 2002. This included investigation into the potential for both passenger and freight services. It revealed minimal potential for the site mainly due to the vicinity of other airports and the need for considerable investment for a likely minimal return.

Research and Development (EU Harmonisation)

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with European partners on the co-ordination of European research and development in defence industries and the effect of co-ordination on research and development projects involving the United States of America. [130795]

Mr. Ingram: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Defence, has not held any recent discussions on the co-ordination of research and development in defence industries, nor has he any immediate plans to do so. However, officials have regular contact with their European and US counterparts.

The Ministry of Defence collaborates on research with those nations who can significantly contribute to our capability requirements. Our aim is to generate technology that both United Kingdom and partner foreign industries can access. We seek to do this on both transatlantic and European axes.

RNAS Yeovilton

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on Lynx replacement at RNAS Yeovilton. [131232]

Mr. Ingram: The Surface Combatant Maritime Rotorcraft, which is planned to fulfil the role currently undertaken by Lynx HMA Mk3 and Lynx HMA Mk8 based at RNAS Yeovilton, is provisionally planned to enter service later this decade. The project is presently in the assessment phase, in which the capability offered by the Westland Helicopters Ltd. Future Lynx proposal is being evaluated. The outcome of this assessment will result in a decision on the procurement of a replacement for Lynx early in 2004.

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on site security at RNAS Yeovilton. [131233]

Mr. Ingram: All aspects of security at RNAS Yeovilton are maintained and administered in accordance with the requirements of the current Joint Service Publication (JSP) 440—The Defence Manual of Security. Security arrangements throughout the Royal Navy Estate, including RNAS Yeovilton, are subject to a programme of regular audit inspections by the Director of Naval Security's Integrated Contingency Planning Area Teams.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the sites of special scientific interest in the ownership of his Department and its agencies. [129342]

Mr. Caplin: A list of sites will be placed in the Library of the House.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Abattoirs

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many approved abattoirs operated within England for each year from 1991. [129266]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

Abattoirs producing meat for sale for human consumption must be licensed in order to operate. The number of licensed abattoirs in England from 1991 to date is shown in the table.

Year	Red meat abattoirs	White meat abattoirs
1991	593	98
1992	542	93
1993	434	98
1994	424	137
1995	402	144
1996	384	144
1997	375	131
1998	360	131
1999	339	119
2000	316	111
2001	300	117
2002	297	109
August 2003	286	109

Abstractions

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what factors underlay the proposal of the Environment Agency to reduce the number of abstractions in the south east; what assessment she has made of the effect on water supplies in the south east as a result of this proposal; and if she will make a statement. [130471]

Mr. Morley: Proposals to reduce abstraction in the south east are aimed at improving the environment at important wildlife sites that are presently being damaged or are threatened with being damaged by abstraction.

Water companies have been given the proposed list of sites and have been asked to identify the solutions that they would have to implement to make these environmental improvements.

The Office of Water Services and the Environment Agency are scrutinising the companies' plans and I have asked them to report to me in November. From their reports I will identify the environmental improvement schemes that should be included in companies' final business plans for 2005–10, due in April 2004. Throughout this process, security of water supply to customers is paramount and the timing of any changes to abstraction will be arranged so that there is no risk to public water supply.

Aggregates Levy

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much funding has been paid to the sustainability fund in each region of the UK from the aggregates levy since the levy was introduced. [127213]

Mr. Morley: The following amounts have been allocated and spent under the Aggregate Levy Sustainability Fund:

£ million

Region of the UK	Aggregate levy sustainability fund allocation	Aggregate levy sustainability fund spend
England	58.6	20
Wales	3.4	2
Scotland	6	2
Northern Ireland	1.9	Figure unavailable

Note:
The reason for the Northern Ireland spend figure being unavailable, is due to the fact that their fund was never ring fenced. Therefore there is uncertainty about the exact amount spent on the Fund.

Agricultural Assistance

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will estimate what percentage of agricultural assistance goes to (a) the largest and (b) the smallest 10 per cent. of farms in the United Kingdom. [131375]

Mr. Bradshaw: Data from the Farm Business Survey have been used to assess the level of agricultural assistance going to farms of different sizes. The sample for the Farm Business Survey covers only those farm businesses that are over a minimum size threshold, representing around 70,000 out of a total of around 180,000 holdings in England. Within the sample there were 1,570 farm businesses in the survey in receipt of subsidy payments in 2001–02.

Agricultural assistance has been defined as all crop and livestock subsidy payments and agri-environment scheme payments. Farm size is defined in European Size Units, an economic measure of farm size in terms of the value added to variable inputs. The analysis shows that around a third of these subsidy payments are received by the largest 10 per cent. of farms and around 2 per cent. is received by the smallest 10 per cent. of farms covered by the FBS in England. Estimates for the other UK countries are a matter for the Devolved Authorities.

Air Pollution

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the Government's policy to reduce air pollution by 2005. [131088]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Government's policies on improving air quality are set out in detail in the Air Quality Strategy for England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, published in January 2000 and its Addendum published in February 2003. The Strategy sets standards for the pollutants of main concern and target dates for their achievement between 2003 and 2010. It also explains the measures that are in place to reduce emissions of harmful pollutants from all sectors. Copies are available via the Department's website at www.defra.gov.uk/environment/airquality.

We are on course or have already met the targets for five of the nine pollutants in England, namely benzene, 1,3-butadiene, carbon monoxide, lead and sulphur dioxide. Significant progress has been made towards meeting the air quality objectives for nitrogen dioxide, particles, polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons and ozone. This is as a result of the measures that have been implemented to reduce emissions of these pollutants, and their precursors, particularly from road transport and industry.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the level of air pollution was in the UK in 2002; and what the levels were in other EU countries. [131089]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Air Quality Headline Indicator for Sustainable development published on 8 May 2003 summarised UK air pollution in 2002. The statistical release is available at www.defra.gov.uk/news/2003/030508a.htm.

In urban areas in 2002, air pollution was recorded as moderate or higher on 20 days on average per monitoring site, compared with 25 days in 2001, and 59 days in 1993. There has been a long term decline in the number of air pollution days, largely because of a reduction in particles and sulphur dioxide, but fluctuations from one year to the next can occur because of differences in weather conditions.

In rural areas, the figure for 2002 was 30 days on average per site, compared with 34 in 2001. The number of days has fluctuated between 21 days in 1987 and 50 days in 1990. The series can be volatile from one year to the next, and there is no clear trend. This reflects the variability in levels of ozone, the main cause of pollution in rural areas.

Comprehensive information on all UK air quality monitoring data is available on the Air Quality Archive at www.airquality.co.uk.

The European Environment Agency (EEA) collates and publishes air pollution information for all European Union member states. Its AirBase database is at http://etc-acc.eionet.eu.int/databases/airbase.html. Air pollution data for 2002 are not yet available.

The EEA's report "Europe's Environment, the third assessment report", published in May 2003, includes a summary of air pollution trends in Europe from1990 to 2000. The report is at http://reports.eea.eu.int/environmental_assessment_report_2003_10/en

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on levels of air pollution in Romford, in each year since 1997. [131277]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra does not conduct any air quality monitoring in Romford. The levels have been assessed using air quality information for the closest three national automatic monitoring stations at Thurrock, Southend-on-Sea and London Bexley. These sites are generally representative of public exposure. The sites monitor nitrogen dioxide, particulate matter, sulphur dioxide, carbon monoxide and ozone. The number of days of (a) moderate, (b) high and (c) very high air pollution recorded in each year since 1997 are given in the table. The levels of particulate matter and ozone are the main drivers for the number of days of moderate and above air pollution.

	Number of days
	Moderate	High	Very high	Total
1997	53	9	1	63
1998	33	1	0	34
1999	60	4	0	64
2000	36	0	0	36
2001	57	1	2	60
2002	47	5	1	53

Animal Welfare

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make it her policy to seek amendments to draft EU legislation on the welfare of livestock during travel to allow the United Kingdom to continue its effective ban on the export for food of horses, ponies and donkeys. [129234]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 11 September 2003]: I am currently considering the best way to protect British ponies in the light of domestic and European Legislation.

Asbestos

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much has been spent by her Department and its agencies on (a) asbestos surveys and (b) the management and removal of asbestos since 1 January 2001; and what budget is available to (i) commission asbestos surveys and (ii) manage and remove asbestos from buildings in (A) 2003 and (B) 2004. [130922]

Alun Michael: Defra expenditure on asbestos related works within its own buildings and agencies has been as follows:

(a) Surveys

	£
2001–02	Minimal
2002–03	242,000
2003–04	[1]200,000

[1] Is a 'best estimate' based on current commitments.

(b) Management and removal

	£
2001–02	Minimal
2002–03	420,345
2003–04	[1]260,000

[1] Is a 'best estimate' based on current commitments.

No budget for 2004–05 has been approved at the present time.

CAP Reform

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what further proposals she has to reform the Common Agricultural Policy. [129064]

Mr. Bradshaw: On 26 June EU Agriculture Ministers agreed a radical reform of most elements of the Common Agricultural Policy. The UK Government is pressing for similar radical reform of the remaining sectors, which include the sugar, olive oil, cotton and tobacco regimes and we are pleased that the European Commission intends to bring forward proposals in the next few months.

We are consulting on how we should implement the reforms already agreed so that we can introduce the new scheme from 1 January 2005, the earliest date permitted.

Carbon Trust

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) debt equity deals and (b) interest free energy action loans the Carbon Trust has approved since it was established. [128033]

Mr. Morley: I understand that the Carbon Trust has received 84 proposals for equity investment. Of these, 31 are in progress, and three investments have been made totalling £1.7 million (leveraging in a further £16 million).

The Carbon Trust are also seeking opportunities to support embryonic low carbon technology companies through both the offer of incubator services and through the future creation of incubator funds.

The Carbon Trust's loan scheme has approved over £1 million worth of loans to SMEs since it started in January 2003. The Trust currently receive over 60 inquiries per month. On September 1 there were 149 applications under consideration, 32 formal offers had been made and 15 loans had been paid with a total value of £440,000.

Community Composting

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on community composting; and what plans she has to expand its take-up. [130592]

Mr. Morley: The Government recognise the valuable role that community composting groups can play in delivering more sustainable waste management.

We are taking various measures (that do not relate to community groups alone) to increase the amount of waste that is composted. For example, we have set targets to increase the level of recycling and composting of household waste to 17 per cent. by 2003–04 and 25 per cent. by 2005–06. We are primarily looking to local authorities, as the statutory waste collection and disposal authorities, to deliver these targets. Some authorities are working with community groups to do this and the Government encourage this partnership-working.

We are also supporting the Composting Association with a grant of £272,000 over three years to raise awareness and increase the understanding of composting and uses of composts.

In addition, funding of £35.2 million is available until September 2006 specifically for community waste schemes in England under the New Opportunities Fund's Community Recycling and Economic Development Programme.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research projects are being supported by her Department in the area of community composting; and what discussions she has had with representatives of the waste industry on the subject of community composting. [130593]

Mr. Morley: I am not aware of any research projects currently being funded by Defra specifically concerning community composting. However, Defra does fund some community composting projects through the Waste Minimisation and Recycling Fund. Under the category of community initiatives, the fund is supporting two projects with composting elements.

Defra is also providing funds of £12.2 million over the next three years to the Waste and Resource Action Programme to stimulate markets for composted products. A proportion of these funds will be used for research projects, some of which may be of relevance to community composting groups.

The Government hold regular discussions on a number of topics with representatives of the waste industry.

Consultancy Contracts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many consultancies were commissioned by her Department in the last two years for which figures are available; and what the cost of those contracts was. [130888]

Alun Michael: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Costs

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost was to her Department for (a) ministerial cars and drivers, (b) taxis, (c) train travel, (d) the use of helicopters, (e) airline tickets and (f) chartered aeroplanes in each year since 1997. [123081]

Margaret Beckett: With regard to the costs for ministerial cars and drivers, I refer to the answer given by the Cabinet Office and the letter from the Chief Executive of the Government Car and Despatch Agency to the hon. Gentleman, dated 17 September 2003.

The costs to the Department for taxis, train travel and airline tickets, use of helicopters and chartered planes since 8 June 2001, when Defra was formed, are as follows:

Year end 31 March	Train travel (£)	Public transport travel (£)
2001–02 (part year)	1,487,983	636,681
2002–03	1,631,848	620,267
2003–04 (to 31 July)	688,191	201,403

The figures for 2001–02 and 2002–03 include travel expenses incurred as a result of foot and mouth disease.

All the figures for 'Travel by Public Transport' includes the use of helicopters, chartered planes, airline tickets, taxis, bus, underground and pedal cycle expenses, and can be broken down further only at disproportionate cost.

End of Life Vehicles Directive

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the costs to local authorities of implementing (a) the End of Life Vehicles Directive and (b) the Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive. [129402]

Margaret Beckett: (a) The ELV Directive contains no provision which applies directly to local authorities. However, under the New Burdens arrangements, DTI have transferred to local authorities £25 million for 2003–04 to meet any additional costs they may incur in relation to abandoned vehicles as a result of the directive's implementation. It is proposed to transfer similar sums in respect of financial years 2004–05 and 2005–06.

(b) The Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment (WEEE) Directive does not place direct responsibilities on local authorities for the collection and disposal of WEEE, but on producers and distributors. Future implementation options will take full account of the costs for all stakeholders and will be subject to full consultation.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to enforce greater energy saving practices in homes; and what timescale has been drawn up for homes to improve their energy saving practices. [130532]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 18 September 2003]: The Energy White Paper details the steps being taken to encourage greater energy efficiency in the UK, and sets out an ambitious strategy for energy efficiency up to 2010 and beyond. Energy efficiency is expected to deliver about half the carbon savings needed to meet our goals for 2020. This will mean roughly doubling the rate of energy efficiency improvement of recent decades.

Households account for around 5MtC of the expected savings by 2010. The Energy White Paper sets out measures which have the potential to deliver 3.5MtC by 2010, in addition to the savings of 1.5MtC from measures already in place. It is estimated that by 2020, a further 4–6MtC of annual savings can be realised in the household sector.

Key measures proposed in the White Paper that would provide a statutory basis for improvements in energy efficiency in households include extension of the Energy Efficiency Commitment beyond 2005 at possibly twice its current level of activity; improvements in building standards through revisions to the Building Regulations, which we aim to bring into effect in 2005; and faster improvements in the standards of new household appliances.

The Government intend to publish an Energy Efficiency Implementation Plan within a year of the White Paper's publication, which will provide further detail on all of these policies.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps are being taken to increase the UK's energy efficiency. [131078]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Energy White Paper details the steps being taken to encourage greater energy efficiency in the UK, and sets out an ambitious strategy for energy efficiency up to 2010 and beyond. Energy efficiency is expected to deliver about half the carbon savings needed to meet our goals for 2020. This will mean roughly doubling the rate of energy efficiency improvement of recent decades.

Key measures proposed in the White Paper include extension of the Energy Efficiency Commitment beyond 2005 at possibly twice its current level of activity; improvements in building standards through further revisions to the Building Regulations; faster improvements in the standards of new household appliances; and consultation on economic instruments to improve household energy efficiency.

Already established are a wide range of policies and measures to encourage energy efficiency across the economy. These include:

Climate Change Agreements, where companies can gain an 80 per cent. discount from the Climate Change Levy for eligible processes by entering into Agreements and meeting energy efficiency targets;

the work of the Carbon Trust, which takes the lead on energy efficiency for business and the public sector, and supports the development of a low carbon economy in the UK. The Trust was launched in April 2001 as part of the CCL "package";

the UK Emissions Trading Scheme (ETS), which will generate significant emissions reductions and is the first economy-wide greenhouse gas emissions trading scheme in the world. The UK Government is also working towards implementing the European ETS, due to start on 1 January 2005.

funding for the Energy Saving Trust to run a number of programmes to promote the sustainable and efficient use of energy in homes. The Trust also facilitates the Energy Efficiency Partnership for Homes, which brings together key stakeholders to support and promote domestic energy efficiency.

encouraging improvements in product standards so that energy-using appliances operate more efficiently;

the Building Regulations, updated in 2002, which are already delivering significant energy efficiency improvements in new and existing buildings.

The Government intend to publish an Energy Efficiency Implementation Plan within a year of the White Paper's publication, which will provide further detail on all of these policies.

Enhanced Capital Allowance Scheme

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many businesses are taking part in the Enhanced Capital Allowance Scheme through (a) the Carbon Trust, (b) her Department and (c) the Inland Revenue. [128032]

Mr. Morley: The Department has joint policy lead for the energy efficiency Enhanced Capital Allowance scheme with Inland Revenue and Treasury. In August 2002 the Carbon Trust took over the administration and promotion of this scheme.

On 5 August 2003 a Treasury Order came into effect revising the qualifying technologies eligible for the energy efficiency EGA. As of 1 September 2003 the number of companies with qualifying products (manufacturers and distributors) stands at 289, while individual products numbered 5255.

Environment Agency

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will place in the Library a copy of the results of the Environment Agency's May 2003 survey of public opinion. [129340]

Margaret Beckett: I am happy to place a copy of the results of the Environment Agency survey in the Library.

Food Expenditure

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much was spent on food by her Department and by each of the agencies for which it is responsible in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03; what proportion of that food by value was produced; what guidance she has issued to encourage the procurement of home-produced food; and if she will make a statement. [129372]

Margaret Beckett: Expenditure on food in Defra is generally limited to official hospitality provided by Defra and canteen subsidies. Records of spend on food provided at some external conferences and like events are not kept centrally and so will not be included.

In 2001–02 Defra recorded expenditure of £139,984 on hospitality and £395,277 on canteen subsidies. The figures for 2002–03 were £202,029 and £409,179 respectively.

Information made available by canteen service providers indicates that on average 67 per cent. of the food they procured was produced in the UK. Therefore, the monetary value of UK produced food supplied to Defra as official hospitality and indirectly through subsidies is estimated to be £357,509 in 2002–02 and £408,287 in 2002–03.

Defra has published a "Guidance and action Sheet for buyers and their internal customers" that includes guidance on local sourcing and in particular how to remove obstacles to tendering faced by local and UK suppliers. It can be seen on our website at: http://www.defra.gov.uk/farm/sustain/procurement/index.htm. Defra has also produced a model food procurement action plan with guidance for completion that includes an objective concerned with opening up opportunities for local providers to compete for business. The guidance takes account of the Government's policy of achieving value for money in public procurement, and its commitment under the EC rules to ensure that public procurement is fair, transparent and non-discriminatory. We are also taking a number of other steps to integrate sustainable development into the public procurement of food and catering services. We have had bilateral meetings at Ministerial and senior management level (including with representatives of local government) and have published a number of case studies. A national conference on 26 November will raise awareness still further and that will be followed by regional workshops next year. Within Defra we are discussing with our catering service providers the scope they have for purchasing local and UK produce.

Fruit and Vegetable Imports

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the purpose is of the import duties charged by the EU for the import of fruit and vegetables, with particular reference to (a) peas, (b) pineapples, (c) honeydew melons, (d) apricots, (e) strawberries, (f) raspberries and (g) sugar; what criteria were used for setting the level of import duty in each case; and if she will make a statement. [131040]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 18 September 2003]: The purpose of import duties on fruit and vegetables is to prevent or counteract adverse effects on the market in the Community which may result from imports of these products. The duty rates applied are those set out in the Common Customs Tariff and are reviewed from time to time as a consequence of international negotiations. Variations in the amount of duty paid reflect seasonal factors and the declared or standard value of the produce.

GM Crops

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how often her Department's Ministers have met (a) Doug Parr of Greenpeace, (b) Patrick Holden of the Soil Association and (c) scientists working on GM crops in the last 12 months. [128698]

Margaret Beckett: Defra Ministers have met either Douglas Parr of Greenpeace, Patrick Holden of the Soil Association or scientists working on GM crops a total of six times in the last 12 months as follows:

Date	Minister	Who met
18 September 2002	Michael Meacher	Patrick Holden—Soil Association
24 September 2002	Michael Meacher	Greenpeace Scientists
17 December 2002	Margaret Beckett	Scientists
03 March 2003	Michael Meacher	Patrick Holden—Soil Association
10 June 2003	Margaret Beckett	Scientists
01 July 2003	Margaret Beckett	Scientists

Landfill Sites

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many landfill sites in each Environment Agency region are licensed to accept hazardous waste; how many sites in each such region will be licensed to accept hazardous waste after July 2004; and if she will make a statement. [129352]

Margaret Beckett: Information from the Environment Agency's conditioning plan exercise carried out in July 2002, covering England and Wales, indicated the following:

Region	Hazardous (post 2002)	Hazardous (post 2004)
Anglian	47	9
Midlands	42	4
North East	39	11
North West	27	8
South West	16	1
Southern	13	1
Thames	19	0
Wales	15	3
Total	218	37

Given that July 2004 is still some time away, the actual number may well change before then. Also, there will be scope to landfill treated hazardous waste in separate cells in landfills classified as non-hazardous.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what amount of hazardous waste was sent to landfill in each year since 1996. [129353]

Margaret Beckett: The amount of special waste sent to landfill (as notified to the Environment Agency on special waste consignment notes) for the calendar years 1999, 2000 and 2001 is as follows:

	Tonnes
1999	2,092,490
2000	2,054,084
2001	2,332,000

Information in respect of earlier years is not held centrally. Data for 2002 are not yet available.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the amount of hazardous waste that will be sent to landfill in (a) 2004, (b) 2005 and (c) 2006. [129354]

Margaret Beckett: In 2001, 2,332,000 tonnes of hazardous waste were disposed to landfill in England and Wales. Projections for future years are affected by a range of factors, including the likely increase in costs of treatment and disposal as a result of requirements in the Landfill Directive, and the impact of these changes in costs on producers efforts to minimise waste. Changes to the hazardous waste list are likely to increase the amount of hazardous waste to be consigned. These and other factors are currently being investigated in support of work on possible scenarios for the hazardous waste forum, which is due to report in the autumn.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the likely change in costs of sending hazardous waste to landfill after implementation of the ban on co-disposal in July 2004. [129355]

Margaret Beckett: A Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA) of the Landfill Directive in England and Wales was published with the Second Consultation Paper on Implementation of Council Directive (1999/31/EC) on the Landfill of Waste. This is available on the Defra website (www.defra.gov.uk). The RIA points out that increasing disposal costs will provide greater impetus to minimise, recycle and re-use waste and hence move the management of waste up the waste hierarchy. This outcome is a major objective of the Government's environmental policy and is supported by business, non-Government organisations and Select Committees of this House.

The RIA indicates that at the extreme, waste producers will face an additional cost in the range of £97 million to £696 million. Part of this increased cost relates to landfilling hazardous waste; this fell into the range of £15 million to £87 million.

The RIA recognises that many of the potential benefits cannot be quantified but believes that a number will be of local significance where they result in a reduced impact of existing landfills. These benefits relate principally to reducing health and environmental risks and by promoting more sustainable options as set out above. The RIA also draws attention to benefits from investment in treatment technologies and rising landfill standards that could result in new opportunities for business.

Light Pollution

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent guidance she has issued to local authorities and other relevant bodies on light pollution. [131236]

Mr. Bradshaw: In 1997 the Government issued "Lighting in the Countryside: Towards Good Practice". This document continues to be a valuable guide for local authorities, highway engineers and members of the public. It demonstrates what can be done to lessen the adverse effects of external lighting, including security lights and street lighting. The advice within it is applicable in towns as well as the countryside. Copies may be obtained from: www.odpm.gov.uk

Defra considered the control of nuisance caused by security lighting in its recent consultation, "Living Places: Powers, Rights, Responsibilities". A summary of the comments received to this consultation exercise has now been published. A copy of this document may be obtained from: www.defra.gov.uk/environment/consult/pubspace/index.htm. Most of the respondents who mentioned the document, "Lighting in the Countryside: Towards Good Practice", considered it very useful, but felt it needed updating with more examples of good practice.

The Government will consider what additional guidance on light pollution may be needed, taking into consideration any recommendations emerging from Defra's consultation exercise and from the House of Commons Select Committee's recent inquiry into light pollution and astronomy that was recently completed.

Local Wildlife Sites

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many local wildlife sites there are. [129361]

Margaret Beckett: I understand from the Wildlife Trusts' publication "Status of UK Wildlife Site Systems 2002" that there are at least 37,045 local wildlife sites in the United Kingdom.

Loss Insurance

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with interested parties regarding loss insurance in the event of a disease outbreak in (a) animals and (b) crops. [131325]

Mr. Bradshaw: The purpose of discussions about loss insurance for disease outbreaks is to explore ways to reduce the cost to taxpayers of such outbreaks. For animal diseases a working group which Defra set up with representatives of the insurance and livestock sectors met several times last year. The group has completed its initial task and we are now working on proposals for the livestock sector to bear a greater share of the cost of animal diseases. While there is no cost to taxpayers from crop diseases, wider discussions on crop insurance generally were held last year by a joint Defra/HM Treasury working group on farm risk management, with representatives from the finance and arable sectors.

Media Training

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost was to her Department of media and voice training for Ministers and officials in each year since 1997. [123127]

Margaret Beckett: To the best of my knowledge, none. However, officials can attend the courses run by the Corporate Development Group under its CMPS banner. Four specifically cover media and voice training. These are Top Management Programme; Creating Personal Impact; Developing Style and Presence; Media Skills. The details requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Microsoft

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much was paid to Microsoft in licensing fees by her Department and its agencies in each of the last three years; and how much has been budgeted for (a) 2003–04 and (b) 2004–05. [130678]

Alun Michael: Defra was established as a new Department in 2001. Defra and its executive agencies paid Microsoft £1,004,963 for software licences for financial year 2001–02, £913,575 for 2002–03 and £528,853 for 2003–04 to date.

Budget provision for Microsoft licensing for 2003–04 is £773,162 and for 2004–05 is £969,690.

These figures exclude the cost of licences for Windows operating systems on new personal computers and laptops, which are provided and paid for by the manufacturers under separate arrangements.

All sums are inclusive of VAT; financial years start 1 April.

Ministerial Meetings

Joyce Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how often she met her counterparts in the devolved Administrations in the last 12 months; and if she will make a statement. [126520]

Margaret Beckett: I have met my counterparts in the devolved Administrations on 7 occasions over the past 12 months in regular arranged meetings in London. However, I have also met with them on a number of occasions whenever they have attended Agriculture Council in Brussels and Luxembourg.

Ministerial Visits

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the (a) foreign visits and (b) visits within the United Kingdom she has made since 1 April; whom she met; what the cost was to public funds of each trip; and what gifts were received. [126934]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 8 September 2003]: The Government publishes the overall costs of all ministerial overseas travel and a list of all visits by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500 on an annual basis. The list for the period 1 April 2002 to 31 March 2003 was published by the Prime Minister on 16 July, Official Report, column 482W. The next list for the period 1 April 2003 to 31 March 2004 will be published at the end of the financial year.

In respect of gifts received, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister, on 14 March, Official Report, column 482W.

Since 1 April, I have undertaken one visit in the UK; to the Royal Agricultural Show in Stoneleigh, Warwickshire. The cost of this visit was over £500. No gifts were received.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost was to her Department of mobile phones supplied to Ministers and officials in each year since 1997. [123150]

Margaret Beckett: The cost to my Department of mobile phones supplied to Ministers and officials since 8 June 2001 (when Defra was formed) were as follows:

£

Year end 31 March	Secretariat	Defra
2001–02[1]	13,311	2,517,693
2002–03	13,895	625,467
2003–04[2]	1,537	115,018

[1] Part year
[2] To 31 July 2003

The Defra mobile phone expenditure includes £1,970,611 in 2002 and £148,098 incurred in respect of Foot and Mouth Disease.

Airport Development (South-East)

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what studies her Department has commissioned to assess the impact of proposed new airport developments at (a) Heathrow, (b) Gatwick, (c) Stansted and (d) Cliffe on the extent of human exposure to nitrogen dioxide. [129400]

Margaret Beckett: We have not commissioned any air quality studies to assess the impacts of the proposed new airport developments at Heathrow, Gatwick, Stansted or Cliffe.

"The Future Development of Air Transport in the UK: South East" consultation document issued by DfT in February 2003, sets out the environmental impacts, including the extent of human exposure to nitrogen dioxide levels, of the proposed new airport developments at each of the airports in the south-east. My officials have been in contact with DfT officials about the results presented in the consultation document, and they have informed them about the results from our national modelling of air quality, including around airports and the current results from the local air quality management system. My officials will also be working closely with DfT and officials in other Government Departments in drawing up the Air Transport White Paper.

Peat Extraction

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the peat extraction sites in the UK (a) which are operational and (b) where active permissions remain valid. [129265]

Mr. Bradshaw: This information is not available in the format requested. However a survey of land for mineral workings in England in 2000 commissioned by the former Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions indicated that nationally, approximately 5,200 hectares is permitted for peat production at about 180 sites, of which approximately 300 hectares remains to be worked but where the permissions remain valid. The raw data came from Mineral Planning Authorities but two of the largest authorities were unable to produce accurate survey data and assumptions were made based on previous information.

Phytophthora Ramorum

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what study her Department has made into the incidence of Phytophthora ramorum in wild-growing Rhododendron ponticum. [130852]

Margaret Beckett: In collaboration with the Forestry Commission, English Nature, and the Countryside Commission for Wales, Defra is currently undertaking a survey of a sample of areas of wild-growing Rhododendron ponticum in order to establish the extent of the presence of Phytophthora ramorum and the likely impact on our native flora. To date 56 such sites have been inspected for the presence of the organism but it has been found on only two sites, both of which are in the area of an existing confirmed outbreak.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will place in the Library a list of gardens open to the public that have been served with enforcement notices in respect of Phytophthora ramorum during 2003. [130853]

Margaret Beckett: The Government believe the public should have as much information as possible about this disease and is happy to meet all reasonable requests for information. However, the information obtained specifically in relation to individual premises has been gathered in pursuance of the Plant Health and Seeds Inspectorate's statutory powers and on the basis of this information, where necessary, enforcement notices are issued to ensure compliance. In the absence of a statutory obligation to publish details identifying individual premises, to publish such details without consent could seriously jeopardise our ability to work with business in relation to the reporting and control of Phytophthora ramorum.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many gardens and nurseries have been visited by her Department's staff during 2003 in order to take samples to test for Phytophthora ramorum; what the time scale is for the testing programme; how many staff are employed on the testing programme; and if she will make a statement. [130854]

Margaret Beckett: Since 1 January 2003, staff from Defra's Plant Health and Seeds Inspectorate, the Horticultural Marketing Inspectorate and the Central Science Laboratory have visited 2,961 parks, gardens, nurseries and other retail outlets in order to take samples to test for Phytophthora ramorum. Up to 14 scientific staff from the Central Science Laboratory are directly involved in the process of testing for this disease and each routine test can take up to seven days.

Defra has committed resources to continue the visits and the testing programme at least until the end of March 2004.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research she has commissioned to discover for how long Phytophthora ramorum has been present in rhododendrons and related plants in this country. [130855]

Margaret Beckett: It is unlikely that we will be able to determine exactly how long Phytophthora ramorum has been present in rhododendrons and related plants in this country. However, surveys are currently being conducted to establish how widespread the disease is and this may give an indication of how long it has been present.

In addition, the literature has been reviewed for records of Phytophthora species on rhododendrons in the UK. The established authority "Pathogens of Trees and Shrubs" by Pearce, published in 1963, states that at that time there was no evidence of any Phytophthora on rhododendrons. The first record of a Phytophthora species on this host was in 1968. Phytophthora ramorum was first described as a new species in October 2001 and first found in the UK in April 2002.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many samples have been tested for Phytophthora ramorum during 2003; what proportion of samples have proven positive; and if she will make a statement. [130856]

Margaret Beckett: Since 1 January 2003, 3883 individual laboratory tests have been carried out on samples of plant material suspected of being infected with Phytophthora ramorum fungus in the United Kingdom. 15.9 per cent. of these samples were confirmed as being infected with this pathogen.

Defra and the devolved authorities continue to survey for the disease and to take eradication action against any findings.

Habitats Directive

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the 96 Habitats Directive sites identified by the Environment Agency in its Composite Plan, page 8, as most at risk of being damaged, including in each case the nature and source of the damage. [129347]

Margaret Beckett: The Habitats Directive sites identified on page 8 of the Environment Agency's Corporate Plan for England have been placed in the Library of the House; the responsibility for Wales rests with the National Assembly for Wales.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will place in the Library a copy of the results and conclusions of the Environment Agency's Habitats Directive benefits assessment of 2003. [129348]

Margaret Beckett: I am happy to place a copy of the conclusions of the Environment Agency's benefits assessment of 2003 in the Library. It should be noted that the addendum (item (iii) in para. 1.3 of the covering paper) is the result of further work done after consideration of the initial paper, and the figures therefore replace those shown in para. 4.1 and Appendix 1 of that paper.

Pollution

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) serious (category 1) and (b) significant (category 2) pollution incidents there have been in each year since 1996. [129349]

Margaret Beckett: The number of Category 1 and 2 incidents affecting water for each year from 1996 is shown in the table, together with the number of Category 1 and 2 incidents affecting all media (air, land and water) from 1999. Statistics relating to air and land were not reported to the Environment Agency prior to 1999.

	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002
Category 1 incidents affecting water	156	194	128	90	77	118	79
Category 2 incidents affecting water	1,510	1,354	1,238	863	758	860	760
Category 1 affecting all media (air, land and water) from 1999	—	—	—	131	99	147	109
Category 2 affecting all media (air, land and water) from 1999	—	—	—	1,387	1,198	1,707	1,357

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many current applications for pollution prevention and control permits have been pending for four months or longer. [129351]

Margaret Beckett: Schedule 1 to the PPC Regulations categorises installations subject to integrated pollution prevention and control into Part A(1) and Part A(2). If the installation is categorised as a Part A(1) installation then the permit application must be made to the Environment Agency. The Part A(1) installations are generally larger or more complex than Part A(2) installations, which are regulated by the relevant local authority.

If a regulator requires more information before it can reach a final decision on an application, it can issue a notice to an operator requesting the information under Schedule 4 of the PPC Regulations. This inevitably delays the process significantly.

Currently 160 permit applications made to the Environment Agency have been under determination for four months or longer. Local authority data are collected annually and information for this the first major year of operation will not be available until autumn 2004.

Poultry Industry

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has for ensuring that the UK poultry industry is able to remain competitive; and if she will make a statement. [130207]

Mr. Bradshaw: From the industry's perspective, the principal need is for Government to avoid unnecessary burdens or obstacles, while ensuring that standards (including those related to the environment and animal health and welfare) meet public requirements.

Our priorities in this sector are to continue to act where there is clear evidence of illegal competition from third countries; within overall government policy, to work to achieve a satisfactory WTO agreement; domestically and internationally, to strike an appropriate balance between need for regulation and overburdening industry; in line with the Government's wider Sustainable Farming and Food Strategy, to encourage industry to look increasingly towards value added/premium products; to support poultry industry participation in Defra's sustainability forum; and to continue to participate fully in EU negotiations on animal welfare issues affecting the poultry industry.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the suppliers of poultry meat whose consignments have been found to contain nitrofurans, indicating in each case the date of detection and the subsequent period of time during which imports from that source were stopped. [129406]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

Poultry meat consignments (from Thailand and Brazil) are required to be tested for nitrofurans before they are allowed into the food chain. Any consignments containing nitrofurans above the reporting limit are destroyed. The results are also reported to the European Commission (EC) through the rapid alert system for food and feed (RASFF). The EC has made it clear that supplier details contained in these rapid alerts are confidential.

Records of United Kingdom raised RASFFs show that nitrofurans residues were detected in the following consignments of poultry sampled on the dates shown in the table.

Dates of sampling for nitrofuran positive poultry samples (UK)

2002		2003
25 March (3 samples)	22 July	1 February
26 March	24 July	19 February
29 March	31 October	25 March
30 March	1 November	—
5 April	19 November	—
23 April	21 November	—
4 May	2 December	—
10 July	—	—

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make it her policy to make representations to the European Commission to delist third country plants that have been found to have exported poultry meat containing nitrofurans into the European Union. [129407]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

Representation has been made to the European Commission (EC) to delist third country plants exporting products of animal origin containing illegal veterinary residues, for example, nitrofurans and chloramphenicol. The EC is responsible for pursuing this issue with the third countries concerned to ensure that plants for which repeated failures are reported are delisted.

Private Office Costs

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what have been the running costs of Ministers' private offices in her Department in each year since 1997. [123100]

Margaret Beckett: The running costs of Ministers' private offices in my Department since 8 June 2001 (when Defra was formed) were as follows:

Year end 31 March	£
2001–02[1]	943,101
2002–03	1,194,162
2003–04[2]	269,367

[1] Part year
[2] To 31 July 2003

Radioactive Material

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what quantity of radioactive material has been incorporated into consumer goods pursuant to EU Directive 96/29. [129252]

Mr. Morley: This is a matter for my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

"Refreshing the Rural White Paper"

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the re-appraisal document, "Refreshing the Rural White Paper", and its conclusions on whether affordable housing in small villages is sustainable. [131377]

Alun Michael: The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs announced a review of the Rural White Paper last November. The review is nearing completion and will be published in due course.

As my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for Housing and Planning announced on 17 July, Official Report, column 53WS, the Government are consulting on an update of the existing nationwide guidance on planning for affordable housing, and the public consultation period runs until October 31. The update will be supported by practice advice. The update addresses a number of matters including the provision of affordable housing in rural areas. The proposed changes give greater flexibility to local authorities to seek affordable housing on smaller sites where this is justified. It is also envisaged that in rural areas affordable housing provision may be supported by allocating sites solely for affordable housing, on land within or adjoining existing villages, which would not otherwise be released for housing and where this would contribute to the attainment of mixed communities.

Retail Banks

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how often she has met the head of the agricultural departments of retail banks in the last six months. [129497]

Margaret Beckett: I have not done so in the last six months.

Sea Temperature

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what records she maintains of sea temperature around the various sectors of the British Isles; and what movements in temperature have taken place over the last 20 years. [130366]

Mr. Bradshaw: Sea temperature data collected for the waters around the British Isles are collated by such national and international bodies as the British Oceanographic Data Centre and the Hydrographic Service of the International Council for the Exploration of the Sea (ICES).

The ICES Working Group on Oceanic Hydrography produces an Annual Ocean Climate Status Summary of the North Atlantic Region, and include long time series from the seas around the British Isles.

Other relevant publications include:

Alcock, G. and Rickards, L. (2001) Climate of UK waters at the millennium: Status and trends. Inter-Agency Committee on Marine Science and Technology, IACMST Information Document, 9, 48 pp.

Clark, R. A., Fox, C. J., Ben-Hamadou, R. and Planque, B. (2001) A directory of hydrographic and atmospheric datasets for the north east Atlantic and UK shelf seas. CEFAS, Science Series Technical Report, 113, 43 pp.

Round Britain most surface temperature series show a warming trend at a rate of between 0.5°C and 1°C per decade since the 1960s. This warming has largely been driven by a strongly positive phase of the fluctuating atmospheric pattern called the North Atlantic Oscillation (NAO).

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the sea temperature bands required by each main species of fish in waters surrounding the British Isles. [130367]

Mr. Bradshaw: The table shows the estimated temperature range associated with several important commercial species:

Common name	Scientific name	Temperature (°C) Range
Cod	Gadus morhua	0–20
Haddock	Melanogrammus aeglefinus	4–10
Saithe	Pollachius virens	Temperate
Ling	Molva molva	Temperate
Whiting	Merlangius merlangus	Temperate
Monkfish	Lophius piscatorius	Temperate
Salmon	Salmo salar	2–9
Bass	Dicentrarchus labrax	8–24
Dogfish	Scyliorhinus canicula	Sub-tropical
Plaice	Pleuronectes platessa	2–15
Lemon sole	Microstomus kitt	Temperate
Sole	Solea solea	8–24
Herring	Clupea harengus	1–18
Mackerel	Scomber scombrus	4–14
Sprat	Sprattus sprattus	Temperate
Pilchard	Sardina pilchardus	Sub-tropical
Sandeel	Ammodytidae	Temperate

Note:
References to temperate and sub-tropical in the table indicate that a specified range is not available in the scientific literature.

While a change in sea temperature could affect stock distribution, spawning, migratory patterns and survival of very young fish, the effect of long term temperature trends on fish stocks is not easy to predict. Increased sea temperature has been linked to reduced recruitment (the numbers of young fish entering the population) in cold-water species such as cod, and improved recruitment in other species such as bass, but the factors influencing the survival of fish are complex and in many cases still poorly understood. For heavily fished species, fishing pressure remains the primary control on stock size but recruitment success also has a significant impact.

Secondments

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her Department's policy is on employing secondees from the private sector; how many secondees from the (a) private and (b) public sectors her Department employed in each year since 1997; from which companies and organisations they were seconded; at what level they were employed; and if she will make a statement. [127064]

Alun Michael: Secondments into and out of Defra are vital in meeting our commitment to develop a modern, flexible, outward focused Civil Service that works in partnership with all sectors of society. Defra promotes and encourages the interchange of personnel between the Department and a range of organisations, in the private sector, the public sector and the voluntary and community sector.

Since the creation of Defra in June 2001 the Department has seconded personnel from the following organisations all at middle to senior management level:

	Organisation
From June 2001 to March 2002
Private	BBC
	British Petroleum
	GlaxoKlineSmith
	Greater London Enterprise
Total	4
Public	Countryside Agency (2)
	English Nature
	Environment Agency
	Imperial College
	Local Government Association
	New Zealand Government
	Warwick University
	Natural Environment Research Council
Total	9
Voluntary and Community	World Wildlife Fund
	Year in Industry
Total	2
April 2002 to March 2003
Private	Chemical Industrial Association
	Envirowise
	TXU Warm Front
Total	3
Public	Countryside Agency (2)
	English Nature
	Environment Agency (4)
	Forum for the Future
	Global to Local
	Gloucestershire CC
	Energy Action Grants Agency (EAGA)
Total	11
Voluntary and Community	Environmental Campaigns
	Groundwork
	Royal Society for the Protection of Birds (RSPB) (2)
	World Wildlife Fund
Total	5

From June 2001 to March 2002	Organisation
April 2003-to date
Private	Powergen CPH Ltd.
Total	1
Public	Cambridgeshire CC
	English Nature
	Environment Agency (2)
	SW Regional Development Agency
Total	5
Voluntary and Community	Environmental Campaigns
Total	1

Letter from Professor Mike Roberts to Ms Annabelle Ewing, dated July 2003:

The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs has asked me to reply, with respect to the Central Science Laboratory, to your question concerning secondees from the private and public sectors since 1997.

The purpose of inward secondments from the private sector is to allow CSL to seek specialist expertise which cannot be provided by existing staff and for which recruitment to permanent posts is not appropriate. Modified rules on fair and open competition apply. CSL would ensure that the best candidate has been selected and the candidate's qualifications and experience qualify them to undertake the duties required. The secondee would continue to be paid and formally employed by the organisation that seconds them and the organisation invoices CSL for the salary costs.

A posting from another Government Department is classed as a loan and can be for up to 2–3 years. Payment of salary is taken over by the importing department.

CSL have not had any inward secondments from the private sector since 1997. There has been one loan in 2002 from VLA, a consultant in Veterinary Parasitology.

Sheep

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what compensation is available for farmers whose sheep may be affected by bluetongue. [130729]

Mr. Bradshaw: The 1981 Animal Health Act provides for compensation in the event of sheep slaughtered following an outbreak of bluetongue. However, slaughter would not be the primary method of control. A Compensation Order would need to be made in relation to bluetongue to reflect Government policy on compensation at the time of the outbreak.

The Government would not pay for sheep to be treated following infection with Bluetongue.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will place a copy of her Department's contingency plan for bluetongue in the Library. [130730]

Mr. Bradshaw: Copies of the Bluetongue contingency plan have been placed in the House of Commons and House of Lords Libraries and a copy is in the main Defra library.

In addition, the plan is available on the Defra website: http://www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/diseases/notifiable/disease/bluecontin.PDF

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many live sheep have been imported into the United Kingdom to date in 2003 for (a) slaughter, (b) further fattening and (c) breeding; and how many of the sheep in each of these categories were imported from each country of origin; [129918]

(2) how many live sheep were imported into the United Kingdom through Dover on 3 September; whether the sheep were imported for (a) slaughter, (b) further fattening and (c) breeding; and what the addresses were of the places of (i) departure and (ii) final destination given on the route plan for each of the consignments. [129919]

Mr. Bradshaw: Our records show that the number of live sheep that were imported into the UK for (a) slaughter, (b) further fattening and (c) breeding between 1 January 2003 and 11 September 2003 is 31,993. The following table shows the breakdown by country:

Country	Slaughter	Further fattening	Breeding
Belgium	—	—	238
France	666	410	11
The Netherlands	132	—	393
The Republic of Ireland	27,257	1,675	353
Spain	680	—	—
New Zealand	—	—	24
Poland	—	154	—

Our records show that 328 sheep were imported through Dover on 3 September, all of them for slaughter. Details of the places of departure and final destination given on the route plan are treated as commercially confidential information.

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many live sheep were exported from Dover to continental Europe on 3 September; when and where health certification was carried out in respect of the sheep; how many of the sheep were rejected as unfit for the intended journey (a) during inspection for heath certification purposes and (b) at Dover docks; to where those sheep were taken; and what the address of the final destination given on the route plan was for each of the consignments. [129920]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information requested is as follows:

	As at 3 September 2003
Total animals	2,516
Where consignments were certified	England and Scotland
Animals rejected at certification	[1]22
Animals rejected at Dover docks	0
Destination	Netherlands

[1] Additionally four sheep were rejected after certification and before loading onto the lorry. The sheep rejected for export remained in Great Britain.

The sheep for the consignment were certified within 24 hours prior to export. The consignment was for sheep for further fattening which were transported to a single holding.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of sites of special scientific interest owned by the Environment Agency are assessed as in a favourable condition. [129341]

Margaret Beckett: Scientific assessment by English Nature shows that 76.1 per cent. of the area covered by its sites of special scientific interest is either in favourable or recovering from unfavourable condition. The remaining 23.9 per cent. is not in favourable condition and the agency is drawing up plans to remedy the situation.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the sites of special scientific interest in the ownership of her Department and its agencies. [129343]

Margaret Beckett: There is one site, Boxworth Experimental Husbandry Farm, Boxworth, Cambridge that includes land designated as a Site of Special Scientific Interest (SSSI).

Sustainable Energy

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps are being taken to promote sustainable energy. [131080]

Mr. Timms: I have been asked to reply.

Sustainable forms of energy are at the heart of the Government's energy policy—as set out in this year's White Paper, "Our Energy Future: Creating a Low Carbon Economy". This encompasses renewable energy, cleaner coal technologies, and fuel cells.

To take forward the commitments made in the White Paper, we have established the Sustainable Energy Policy Network (SEPN) of departmental policy units, regulators, Devolved Administrations and delivery organisations that are involved in delivering the White Paper's commitments. The network is overseen by a Ministerial Group chaired jointly by the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry and the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs. The Ministerial Group will be provided with independent advice by the creation of a Sustainable Energy Policy Advisory Board (SEPAB), made up of senior independent experts.

For renewable energy, we have already been working hard to create a comprehensive framework to meet our target that 10 per cent. of electricity should be sourced from renewables by 2010, and our aspiration that this should be doubled by 2020. Licensed electricity suppliers in England, Scotland and Wales are subject to the Renewables Obligation—requiring them to supply a specified and growing amount of their sales from electricity generated from a range of eligible renewable sources. The Obligation is backed up by a package of funding worth nearly £350 million. This is divided between: capital grants, which are available to help kickstart a range of new and emerging technologies, for example, offshore wind, wave and tidal power and solar photovoltaics; and the New & Renewable R&D programme.

Waste Disposal/Management

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the Government's policy on the implementation of European legislation on the treatment and disposal of liquid dredgings from waterways. [129399]

Margaret Beckett: The regulatory and technical provisions of the 1999 EU Landfill Directive, including those on the treatment and disposal of liquid dredgings, were implemented in England and Wales by the Landfill (England and Wales) Regulations 2002. The Government recognise that some organisations responsible for the management of waterways in England may encounter difficulties in disposing of liquid dredged material, particularly when the ban on landfilling of liquid wastes comes fully into force. (The decision on when the ban will start will be taken following consultation with interested parties). The Department is currently working with waterways' representatives to identify a way forward that meets the needs of all parties.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the cost to industry of a requirement to recover 60 per cent. of packaging waste by 2008. [129401]

Margaret Beckett: An assessment of the likely costs to industry was included in the draft Regulatory Impact Assessment which forms part of the Consultation Paper on Changes to the Packaging Regulations issued by the Department on 21 July 2003. A copy of the RIA will be laid in the Library of the House when finalised towards the end of the year.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidance she offers to farmers wishing to dispose of (a) farm plastics and (b) silage wrap. [129267]

Mr. Morley: Current guidance to farmers wishing to dispose of (a) farm plastics and (b) silage wrap is contained in the Codes of Good Agricultural Practice.

However, we will shortly be consulting on Regulations to apply the controls necessary under the Waste Framework Directive to agricultural waste. The Regulations will prohibit the burial and uncontrolled burning of agricultural waste. Until these Regulations come into force we can only encourage farmers to dispose of their waste in ways that are not harmful to the environment and human health.

Within the consultation exercise, we will also be seeking comments on the options for a scheme to collect and recycle farm plastics.

The consultation will be issued in late 2003.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on progress in distributing to local authorities the 2003–04 financial allocation for the Waste Implementation Programme. [129403]

Margaret Beckett: As announced on 4 July, £24 million of the funds available to the Waste Implementation Programme in this Financial Year will be allocated to local authorities through the Waste Minimisation and Recycling Fund. £3.6 million was allocated to London, and Defra has announced the 19 schemes we propose to support elsewhere in the country. Funds will be distributed in response to valid claims sent by the relevant local authorities.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what criteria she intends to use to determine the allocation of money to local authorities under the Waste Management Performance Fund. [129404]

Margaret Beckett: No decisions have yet been taken on the criteria to be used for making awards from the Performance Reward Grant, which will be introduced in 2005–06. The Government will consult interested parties on the design of the Grant towards the end of this year.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether it is her policy that local authorities should be allowed to carry forward into the next financial year money allocated through the Waste Implementation Programme. [129405]

Margaret Beckett: As announced on 4 July, £24 million of the funds available to the Waste Implementation Programme in this financial year will be allocated to local authorities through the Waste Minimisation and Recycling Fund. The current Waste Minimisation and Recycling Fund is a discrete year fund and as such there is no automatic right to end of year flexibility for local authorities. If there are valid reasons that local authorities will not be able to complete their capital spend the Department can seek end-year flexibility.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much household waste was collected in (a) 1996 and (b) 2002. [131107]

Mr. Morley: Results from the Municipal Waste Management Survey show that the amount of waste collected from households in England were 22,549 thousand tonnes in 1996–97 and 25,592 thousand tonnes in 2001–02. Results for 2002–03 are not yet available.

Wildlife Trusts

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what meetings have been held by Ministers and her officials in the last year with representatives of the wildlife trusts. [130594]

Margaret Beckett: My hon. Friend the Minister of State for Environment met Dr. Simon Lyster and John Everitt of the Wildlife Trusts on 2 December 2002. In addition, representatives of the Wildlife Trusts regularly meet with Defra officials on matters of mutual interest, and have attended numerous functions where Defra Ministers have been present.

Zoo Animals

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the number of llamas and alpacas kept (a) in zoos and (b) outside zoos in the United Kingdom. [129338]

Margaret Beckett: As the licensing of zoos is a function for local authorities, there are no central records for the numbers of different species kept in zoos. The British Llama and Alpaca Association's own figures indicate that there are in the region of 2,700 llamas and 4,500–5,500 alpacas in private ownership in the UK.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make it her policy to provide a general exemption for keepers of llamas and alpacas from the requirement to hold a zoo licence. [129339]

Margaret Beckett: The advice received from the Zoos Forum is that New World Camelids such as llamas and alpacas have not been kept in this country in sufficient numbers for sufficient time for them to be considered "normally domesticated in Great Britain" and they therefore fall within the scope of zoo licensing legislation.

Keepers of llamas and alpacas wishing to exhibit their animals to the public for seven days or more in any period of 12 consecutive months are therefore required to apply for a zoo licence. However, establishments displaying small numbers of llamas and alpacas may be eligible for a full exemption from the Act or for dispensations from the full inspection regime. I consider each case on its own merits.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Fraud

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the impact of credit card fraud on British businesses' operating costs. [130813]

Ms Blears: The Government do not collect figures on the cost of credit card fraud but the Association for Payment Clearing Services (APACS) estimates the cost of all plastic card fraud in the year to August 2002 to be £424.6 million. A majority of these costs will be borne by businesses. As with all expenses the costs of card fraud will have an impact on business's operating costs.

APACS figures up to July 2003, which have not yet been published, suggest a year on year decline in card fraud of around 5 per cent. This follows a number of initiatives both within government and in partnership with the private sector to combat this type of fraud.

In April 2002, the Government launched a two-year pilot of a unique policing unit (the Dedicated Cheque and Plastic Crime Unit—DCPCU) based in London, which works closely with the banking industry to reduce organised card and cheque fraud, using intelligence largely provided by the card industry. DCPCU has had significant success in its first year including recovery of more than 4,000 cards and 524 cheques, resulting in 59 arrests and six convictions with potential savings of £13.35 million.

The Government are actively supporting the introduction of 'Chip and PIN', a major finance and retail industry initiative to reduce card fraud. This involves the introduction of microchips into payment cards to help authentication, combined with the use of PIN codes in place of signatures. The banking industry anticipates that by 2005 the new Chip and PIN technology will eliminate over half of the predicted level of plastic card fraud in the UK.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of the cost of fraud in the UK's financial services industry on the UK economy. [131384]

Caroline Flint: A Home Office study, the Economic and Social Costs of Crime, published in July 2000 estimated that the total economic cost of fraud in Britain was up to £13.8 billion in 2000, equivalent to £230 per head. The Home Office does not collate separate figures on the costs of fraud in the United Kingdom's financial services industry.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with (a) credit card companies, (b) representatives of the retail sector and (c) law enforcement agencies on the level of credit card fraud in the United Kingdom. [131387]

Ms Blears: The Home Office is actively supporting the finance and retail industry's 'Chip and PIN' initiative and maintains regular contact with the Association for Payment Clearing Services and the British Retail Consortium (BRC). 'Chip and PIN' involves the introduction of microchips into payment cards to help authentication combined with the introduction of PIN codes in place of signatures. The banking industry anticipates that by 2005, the new Chip and PIN technology will eliminate over half of the predicted level of plastic card fraud in the UK.

Since my appointment to the Home Office in June I have provided forewords for the two reports on the public trial of 'Chip and PIN' which took place in Northampton between May and August this year. I shall shortly be meeting with APACS and the BRC to receive a progress report on the 'Chip and PIN' project. My right hon. Friend the Member for Southampton, Itchen (Mr. Denham) also discussed the 'Chip and PIN' initiative with the BRC and APACS.

The Home Office has frequent and regular contact with law enforcement agencies. In addition, in April 2002 the Government launched a two-year pilot of a unique policing unit (the Dedicated Cheque and Plastic Crime Unit—DCPCU), which is funded jointly by the Home Office and the card industry. The DCPCU is based in London and works closely with the banking industry to reduce organised card and cheque fraud, using intelligence largely provided by the card industry. DCPCU has had significant success in its first year including recovery of more than 4,000 cards and 524 cheques, resulting in 59 arrests and six convictions with potential savings of £13.35million.

Accommodation Centres

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what Government policy was on abiding by the outcome of a public inquiry on accommodation centres on 5 November 2002; what the policy is now; and when and for what reason it changed. [131392]

Beverley Hughes: The Government's policy has not changed. We will abide by the planning process and the outcome of the public inquiry which is a part of it. The outcome of the public inquiry is my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister's decision.

Annual Crime Survey

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with representatives of the British Retail Consortium on its latest Annual Crime Survey. [130581]

Ms Blears: I have not held any discussions with representatives of the British Retail Consortium (BRC) about its latest Annual Crime Survey. I am, however, aware of the regular information that the survey provides. The Home Office has also recently undertaken a Crime against Business survey, covering the retail and manufacturing sectors, in conjunction with Her Majesty's Treasury, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Neighbourhood Renewal Unit and the Small Business Service (an agency of the Department for Trade and Industry). The British Retail Consortium, British Chambers of Commerce, and the Confederation of British Industry have been consulted and closely involved in the survey.

The Government take the issue of retail crime very seriously and it is one of the main workstreams on business crime that is being progressed by the Business Crime Section in the Home Office. We have provided £15 million over three years to improve the security of small retailers in deprived areas and 12,500 individual businesses will have benefited by the end of this year. We are supporting the development of retail crime partnerships in major town and shopping centres. Home Office officials are also working closely with the BRC and other members of the retail industry in the Retail Strategy Group, set up by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, to address crime problems facing the retail industry in a strategic way.

Anti-social Behaviour

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the links between anti-social behaviour and social exclusion; and if he will make a statement. [130205]

Ms Blears: The links between anti-social behaviour (ASB) and social exclusion can be examined on two separate levels: (1) links between experience or perceptions of ASB in local areas and social exclusion and (2) links between engaging in ASB and social exclusion.

In terms of the links between experience or perception of ASB and social exclusion the British Crime Survey (BCS) provides data on people's experience (as a victim) and perception of anti-social behaviour according to respondents' neighbourhood and their current status in terms of employment, skills, income and housing.

Ellis, C. and Fletcher, G. (2003) 'Antisocial behaviour and disorder'. In C. Flood-Page and J. Taylor (Eds.) Crime in England and Wales 2001/2002: Supplementary Volume. Home Office Statistical Bulletin 01/03.

London: Home Office—deposited in the Library. The report indicates that people living in council estates and low-income areas are most likely to perceive local problems of disorder and that the economically inactive, those on low income, the unskilled and social renters are most likely to say that disorder has a great impact on their lives.

In terms of the links between engaging in ASB and social exclusion see Campbell S. (2002). A review of Anti-social Behaviour Orders. Home Office Research Study No. 236. London: Home Office—deposited in the Library. The review found that where case file information was available, a high proportion of people placed on Anti-Social Behaviour Orders (ASBOs) during the evaluation period had some sort of mitigating factor, e.g. had been evicted from their home or had been excluded from school, which appeared to have contributed to their behaviour. Additional work which has been commissioned and which will examine the link between engaging in ASB and social exclusion:

A forthcoming evaluation based on research of Acceptable Behaviour Contracts in Islington will look at the social background of families involved in ASB. A new Home Office survey of the general population currently in the field will provide information on offending, anti-social behaviour and victimisation. It will be possible to use England and Wales 2001/2002: Supplementary Volume. Home Office Statistical Bulletin 01/03. London: Home Office—deposited in the Library. The report indicates that people living in council estates and low-income areas are most likely to perceive local problems of disorder and that the economically inactive, those on low income, the unskilled and social renters are most likely to say that disorder has a great impact on their lives. In terms of the links between engaging in ASB and social exclusion see Campbell S. (2002). A review of Anti-social Behaviour Orders. Home Office Research Study No. 236. London: Home Office—deposited in the Library. The review found that where case file information was available, a high proportion of people placed on Anti-Social Behaviour Orders (ASBOs) during the evaluation period had some sort of mitigating factor, e.g. had been evicted from their home or had been excluded from school, which appeared to have contributed to their behaviour. Additional work which has been commissioned and which will examine the link between engaging in ASB and social exclusion:

A forthcoming evaluation based on research of Acceptable Behaviour Contracts in Islington will look at the social background of families involved in ASB.

A new Home Office survey of the general population currently in the field will provide information on offending, anti-social behaviour and victimisation. It will be possible to use the survey data to identify links between problems associated with social exclusion and anti-social behaviour.

Research has been commissioned to determine the predictive indicators of antisocial behaviour at eight age using data from the Avon Longitudinal Study of Parents and Children (ALSPAC). The work will determine whether certain factors associated with social exclusion, e.g. family income, place children at increased risk of engaging in antisocial behaviour.

Anti-terrorism Measures

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will hold an inquiry into how anti-terrorism legislation is performing, with specific reference to the monitoring of police use of that legislation. [130579]

Mr. Blunkett: All current anti-terrorism legislation—the Terrorism Act 2000 and the Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001—is subject to independent review.

The Terrorism Act 2000 is reviewed annually by an independent reviewer who is currently Lord Carlile of Berriew QC. This is a statutory requirement and a report of his review will be laid before both Houses.

The powers contained within the Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 are currently being reviewed by a committee of nine Privy Counsellors chaired by Lord Newton of Braintree. This is also a statutory requirement and is scheduled to be completed by 13 December this year.

Both reports will be comprehensive reviews of the operation of the powers under the legislation.

In addition, where specific concerns arise, I have sought reviews from the relevant force and they in turn have taken appropriate steps to review their own operational procedures.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps have been taken to establish a closer working relationship between the CPS and the (a) National Crime Squad and (b) Anti-Terrorist Branch of the Metropolitan Police on (i) terrorism and (ii) other international, serious organised crime. [128864]

Mr. Blunkett: The already close working between the three organisations is continually being reviewed with a view to improvement. For example, the Crown Prosecution Service's (CPS) Central Casework Unit now becomes involved at the earliest stage of an investigation and provides pre-charge advice to the Anti-Terrorist Branch.

A more recent development is the completion of a pilot scheme between the National Crime Squad's (NCS) Special Casework Division and the CPS in the preparation of cases concerned with serious and organised crime.

I understand that this scheme has proved successful for all parties and will be extended further.

The working arrangements between the CPS, NCS and police and other law enforcement agencies dealing with serious organised crime will be significantly enhanced as a result of the recent establishment by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister at a Cabinet Committee on organised crime chaired by myself.

Asset Recovery Agency

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the work of the Asset Recovery Agency. [130496]

Caroline Flint: The Agency is already making an effective contribution towards recovering criminal proceeds. Since the Agency became operational on 24 February 2003, the total value of assets under its investigation exceeds £17million in 33 cases, of which some £10 million is currently frozen under court orders in nine cases, pending hearings for recovery orders. In addition, one tax assessment has been issued under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 for tax in excess of 250,000. The Agency has also provided assistance to law enforcement agencies in 11 confiscation order cases raised under the previous legislation with a total value of £3.25 million.

The Centre of Excellence in the Assets Recovery Agency has delivered training in the Proceeds of Crime Act to over 1,400 financial investigators in law enforcement agencies. This year it plans to provide enhanced training and accreditation in financial investigation to an additional 350 staff from law enforcement agencies and to 50 staff from other agencies. The Agency has also successfully raised awareness of the new powers in the Act by hosting a series of conferences and presentations; and by the issue of a monthly newsletter which publicises successes in recovering the proceeds of crime.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money Havering borough council was given to deal with asylum seekers in (a) 1997, (b) 2002 and (c) 2003. [128729]

Beverley Hughes: The information is not available in the exact format requested. The Home Office assumed responsibility for the budget for adult asylum seekers and their dependants in April 1999 and for unaccompanied asylum seeking children in April 2000. Between 1996–97 and 1998–99 the Department of Health was responsible for special grant payments to local authorities to meet the direct costs of providing support. Total spending by the Department of Health for 1996–97 was £10 million for adults and families and £2 million for children. The total figures for 1997–98 are £68 million for adults and families and £2 million for children.

The figures for the grant paid to Havering borough council for the financial years ending 31 March 2002 and 31 March 2003 are as follows:

£

Year to 31 March	Adults and families	Unaccompanied asylum seeking children
2002	[1]2,347,950	[1]875,095
2003	[2]1,693,289	[2]493,136

[1] Audited
[2] Subject to audit.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many asylum applications from people residing in Romford were declined in each year since 1995; [128730]

(2) how many asylum seekers were sent to live in Havering in each year from 1995 to 2002; [128731]

(3) how many registered asylum seekers are residing in the Romford constituency; [128732]

(4) how many claims for asylum were made from people whose address was in Romford during 2002. [128733]

Beverley Hughes: The information is not available in the form requested.

The availability of information on the location of asylum seekers in the UK is currently linked to the support the asylum seeker receives. Asylum seekers in the UK either receive support from the National Asylum Support Service (NASS), local authorities or the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP), or are supporting themselves.

Figures in respect of persons in receipt of accommodation support from NASS (those who have been dispersed or are disbenefited[1] cases) are available by local authority as at the end of each Quarter since December 2002. Figures for Havering show that for the quarters ending December 2002, March 2003 and June 2003 only one or two people were in receipt of NASS accommodation support.

Information in respect of the number of asylum seekers by constituency area, number of asylum applications by area of residence and refusals of asylum by area of residence are not currently published.

[1] Disbenefited cases are cases which were previously supported under the main UK benefits system and have been moved onto NASS support. Some of these cases have remained in the original social services accommodation.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers have been (a) found guilty of committing crimes carrying a custodial sentence, (b) released and given leave to remain in the country and (c) deported after release in each year since 1997. [129107]

Beverley Hughes: The information requested on the number of asylum applicants found guilty of crimes subject to a custodial sentence, and for those who were granted leave to remain or who were deported after release from such sentences, is not available.

We take very seriously any criminal or anti-social acts committed by asylum seekers. Although there is no evidence to suggest that asylum seekers are disproportionately likely to commit crime, we have taken powers in the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 to prevent serious criminals using the protection of the 1951 Refugee Convention. We will seek to remove such criminals from the United Kingdom wherever possible.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum applications had been awaiting an initial decision for more than (a) six months and (b) 12 months at the latest date for which figures are available. [129469]

Beverley Hughes: As at the end of June 2003 (the latest date for which published figures are available), the estimated number of asylum applications awaiting an initial decision for more than six months was 22,900. Of these an estimated 15,700 cases had been awaiting an initial decision for more than 12 months. These figures include cases that are currently under consideration.

Provisional data show that 74 per cent. of applications (excluding withdrawals and third country cases) received in 2002–03 were decided and served within two months. This exceeded the Government's target of 65 per cent. for 2002–03, and was a significant increase on the corresponding figure of 61 per cent. for 2001–02.

Information on the number of asylum applications outstanding and the timeliness of initial decisions is published quarterly on the Home Office website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his Department's latest estimate is of the number of asylum applicants in the UK without any official financial support. [129913]

Beverley Hughes: The requested information is not available.

It is estimated that during 2002, around 73 per cent. of asylum seekers eligible for National Asylum Support Service (NASS) support chose to apply, with the remainder supporting themselves.

Statistics on the number of asylum seekers who are supported by NASS are available on the Home Office's Immigration and Asylum Statistics website: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of asylum applications in each of the last six years was decided within two months. [130480]

Beverley Hughes: Provisional data show that 74 per cent. of substantive applications (excluding withdrawals and 3rd country cases[1]) received in 2002–03 were decided and served within two months. This exceeded the Government's target of 65 per cent. for 2002–03, and was a significant increase on the corresponding figure of 61 per cent. for 2001–02 which was achieved against the then target of 60 per cent. Corresponding data for previous years is not available and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Information on the timeliness of initial decisions is published quarterly on the Home Office website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

[1] Cases which may be the responsibility of other EU member states under the Dublin Convention.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether a decision has been made on the asylum application of Dr. Boris Berezovsky; and if he will make a statement. [130865]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 18 September 2003]: Dr. Berezovsky was granted asylum in the United Kingdom on 10 September 2003. It would be inappropriate to make any further statement on this matter.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is on asylum applications lodged by an individual after extradition proceedings have begun against that individual. [130867]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 18 September 2003]: An asylum application made by an individual who is the subject of extradition proceedings initiated by the authorities in their country of origin would be considered in accordance with the standard criteria for assessing such applications. This would include consideration of whether information contained in the extradition request provided grounds for excluding the individual from the protection of the Refugee Convention. A decision would be taken as quickly as possible. We would not return to a state requesting extradition an individual who has an outstanding asylum application against return to that state.

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when Mr. G. Qosja, reference Q1006624, will receive confirmation of the result of his appeal hearing in October 2002; and what the reasons are for the delay. [131039]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 18 September 2003]: I wrote to the hon. Member on 24 September 2003.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers have been issued with application registration cards since October 2001. [131056]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 18 September 2003]: Up to the end of August 2003, approximately 150,000 Application Registration Cards had been issued. The Application Registration Card (ARC) was first issued on 31 January 2002.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when a standard acknowledgement letter was last issued to an asylum applicant. [131057]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 18 September 2003]: The Government are committed to ensuring that all asylum seekers and dependants are issued with Application Registration Cards. Consequently, there are on-going measures to ensure that Standard Acknowledgement Letters, which have been issued to asylum seekers, are replaced with Application Registration Cards.

No statistics are held showing when Standard Acknowledgement Letters have been issued.

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the report on the provision of policing in the event of the Daedalus site at Lee-on-the-Solent being used as an accommodation centre for asylum seekers. [131269]

Beverley Hughes: The Home Office has not commissioned any such report.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the application by Nataliya Peacock, reference P1062430, for indefinite leave to remain in the United Kingdom made on 13 December 2002, will be decided; and what the reasons are for the delay. [131390]

Beverley Hughes: Mrs. Peacock will receive a decision within four weeks.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of the total number of failed asylum seekers was represented by those removed in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03. [130479]

Beverley Hughes: Including dependants, there were 11,600 asylum removals in 2001–02 and a record 14,400 asylum removals in 2002–03. The numbers of asylum removals continued to rise in April-June (Q2) 2003 to a record quarterly total of 4,280. These figures include removals relating to applications made in earlier years.

The information requested is not readily available and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Business Insurance Premiums

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the estimated financial cost in terms of higher insurance premiums for businesses was in each of the last three years as a result of crime. [130473]

Ms Blears: The Government does not make any estimates of the increase in insurance premia for business as a result of crime. The Association of British Insurers (ABI) publishes annual information in their "Insurance Statistics Yearbook" on trends in total premium income but this does not identify the overall impact of crime on insurance premiums.

The Home Office has published estimates of the economic and social costs of crime (Home Office Research Study 217). This study includes the cost of "insurance administration", that is the resources used in administering and processing premiums and claims, based on information in the ABI "Yearbook". The study estimates the total cost to society of insurance administration in England and Wales in 1999–2000 was £200 million for crime against the commercial and public sectors.

CCTV

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is on the installation by private individuals on their property of CCTV cameras to monitor public areas. [129245]

Ms Blears: While the Home Office supports the installation by private individuals of CCTV cameras, and other appropriate security measures, to protect their property, we do not support the installation by private individuals of cameras that monitor or overlook public areas.

Chemical Agents

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which chemical agents are deployed for law enforcement and riot control purposes in the UK; what delivery devices are used; how much of each agent has been deployed in the last 12 months; and which institutions have received the agents. [128867]

Ms Blears [holding answer 11 September 2003]: CS is currently the only chemical irritant authorised for use by police forces in the UK. The CS is available in a number of different delivery systems.

The Police Service retains a tactical option to use CS agents to disperse a riotous assembly in life-threatening situations; subject to prior authorisation by the relevant chief officer. The CS is pyrotechnically discharged in the form of a cloud of smoke from a hand-thrown or weapon-launched grenade. The option has only been used once in a public disorder situation in Toxteth, Liverpool, in 1981. A small stock of such devices is retained by some forces.

CS in the form of an incapacitant spray is also issued to individual officers by the majority of police forces in the UK as a piece of personal defensive equipment for routine carriage. The method of delivery of CS in this case is by a discriminate aerosol spray with a range of up to four metres. Recording of the use of the spray is the responsibility of each individual force.

CS is also available to police forces in the form of 'barricade penetrating rounds' fired from a shotgun. These rounds rapidly disperse micronised CS in a cloud form within enclosed premises; the tactic is used, in extremis, to create a distraction or to encourage individuals to leave the premises. The rounds are only deployed on the authority of a senior officer for use by specially trained firearms officers in firearms/siege type situations.

Child Abuse

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to tackle child pornography on the internet. [127791]

Paul Goggins: The Government are committed to tackling child pornography on the internet. We are determined to ensure that there are effective measures to combat this exploitation of children. In January 2001, we raised the maximum penalties for taking, making, distributing or showing indecent photographs or pseudo-photographs of children to 10 years (from three years), and the maximum penalty for simple possession of such material to five years (from six months). There are proposals in the Sexual Offences Bill currently before Parliament that these offences should apply to photographs and pseudo-photographs of children up to the age of 18.

We have made substantial investment in law enforcement to enhance the capability of the police to investigate serious and organised crime committed via computers or computer networks, such as the internet. In April 2001, the National Hi-Tech Crime Unit was established, within the National Crime Squad, to investigate or support the investigation of such serious criminal activity, including the production and distribution of child pornography.

In March 2001, the then Home Secretary established a Task Force on Child Protection on the Internet. The Task Force includes representatives from internet service and communication providers, PC and software retailers and manufacturers, child welfare organisations, the main opposition parties, law enforcement agencies and academics. The Task Force has brought forward proposals for legislation to tackle paedophile 'grooming' activity on and off-line. In addition, sub-groups of the Task Force are looking at a range of issues including the evaluation of rating and filtering systems, and the impact of 3G mobile telephones.

Officials and members of the Taskforce have also produced a single document covering separate models of good practice relating to chat services, instant messaging and web services, which was published on 6 January 2003. We consider that these models are a significant step forward in making the internet a safer place for children. We will be reviewing the models and their impact in the near future.

Internationally, the Government actively support efforts within the European Union, and more widely, to combat child pornography on the internet. In November 2001, we signed April 2001, the National Hi-Tech Crime Unit was established, within the National Crime Squad, to investigate or support the investigation of such serious criminal activity, including the production and distribution of child pornography.

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he has given to law enforcement agencies on combating child prostitution. [127785]

Paul Goggins: It is a tragedy for any child to become involved in prostitution. Children involved in prostitution are primarily victims of abuse and adults who take advantage of them, whether by exploiting them as pimps or by buying sexual services from them, are child abusers.

The Government issued guidance for law enforcement agencies and other agencies working with children entitled "Safeguarding Children in Prostitution" in May 2000. This was followed by "The National Plan for Safeguarding Children from Commercial Sexual Exploitation", which was published in September 2001.

The key message of both documents is that those under 18 who engage in prostitution are almost invariably victims and must be treated as such. A further key message is that wherever possible criminal justice action should be pursued against those who abuse children through prostitution or seek to exploit them as prostitutes.

The Sexual Offences Bill currently before Parliament proposes new offences to tackle the sexual exploitation of children, which will carry severe penalties. The proposals cover the exploitative and abusive activities associated with child prostitution and the involvement of children in pornography.

The Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 introduces a new offence of trafficking persons to control them in prostitution. This offence carries a maximum penalty of 14 years in prison. The Sexual Offences Bill includes more comprehensive trafficking legislation to re-enact and replace these provisions, again carrying a maximum penalties of 14 years imprisonment. We have also developed and published a 'toolkit' on victims of trafficking, which is a guide for immigration officers, police and others potentially dealing with trafficking victims. We hope that the toolkit will raise awareness of the difference between trafficking and smuggling, and help them to treat trafficking victims fairly.

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans his Department has to criminalise all forms of child trafficking in the UK; and if he will make a statement. [129085]

Beverley Hughes: The UK is committed to tackling the trafficking of children for sexual exploitation. Our strategy on trafficking is set out in the White Paper Secure Border Safe Haven and focuses on strengthening the law through new offences covering trafficking; providing appropriate support to victims of trafficking in the UK; tackling the criminals through intelligence and enforcement operations through the Reflex taskforce; EU co-operation and prevention in source and transit countries in partnership with Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) and Department for International Development (DFID).

The new Sexual Offences Bill sets out new wide-ranging offences covering trafficking for sexual exploitation to replace the stop-gap offence of trafficking for the purpose of prostitution, introduced in the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002. The offence of trafficking for sexual exploitation carries a tough maximum penalty of 14 years. In addition to this, the Bill also introduces a new offence of commercial sexual exploitation of a child, which will protect children up to 18. It covers a range of offences, including buying the sexual services of a child, (for which the penalty ranges from seven years to life depending on the age of the child); and causing, facilitating or controlling the commercial sexual exploitation of a child in prostitution or pornography, for which the maximum penalty will be 14 years imprisonment.

Citizenship Applications

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for UK citizenship have been determined in the last 12 months; and what the mean average time taken from receipt of the application until its determination was. [130467]

Beverley Hughes: 129,535 applications for UK citizenship were determined in the United Kingdom in 2002, of which 120,145 applications were granted and 9,385 were refused. This is the latest information available and figures are rounded to the nearest five.

There are no data published on actual decision times to determine applications for British citizenship. Information on expected waiting times for citizenship applications are available on the Immigration and Nationality Directorate website; www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk and is periodically updated. As at July 2003 the expected average processing times were:

	Months
Naturalisation	8.8
Adult registrations	3.5
Minor registrations	8
Other registrations	2.3

However, this time may be significantly reduced if all relevant documents are sent with the application form.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the application for UK citizenship from Mr. Grieve of Fordingbridge was first received by his Department; when the application will be determined; and if he will make a statement. [130468]

Beverley Hughes: The application was received on 18 May 2000. The application has necessitated extensive inquiries which we expect to finalise shortly.

Civil Service

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many jobs under the remit of his Department in (a) the core Department, (b) non-departmental public bodies, (c) executive agencies and (d) independent statutory bodies, organisations and bodies financially sponsored by his Department and other such organisations, are located in (i) Scotland, (ii) England, excluding Greater London, (iii) Greater London, (iv) Wales, (v) Northern Ireland and (vi) overseas, broken down by (A) whole-time equivalent jobs and (B) the percentage per individual Department, body or organisation; and with respect to core Department jobs, if he will provide a breakdown of the number of jobs in terms of responsibilities which apply to (a) England only, (b) England and Wales and (c) the United Kingdom as a whole. [127311]

Fiona Mactaggart: The figures received in respect of the bodies under (b) and (d) are in the table which has been placed in the Library. Table D of the annual publication "Civil Service Statistics" contains the information requested in (a) and (c). The latest edition was based on April 2002 data and was published on 24 July 2003; alternatively, this information is available at the following address on the Cabinet Office website: http://www.civil-service.gov.uk/statistics/css.htm.

Class A Drugs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of people under the age of 25 years reported the use of Class A drugs in each of the last six years. [130482]

Caroline Flint: The British Crime Survey estimates last year use of Class A drugs by 16 to 24-year-olds since 1996 as being:

	Percentage
1996	9
1998	9
2000	10
2001–02	9

Note:
From 2001–02, the BCS reporting period moved to financial years

However, none of these changes are statistically significant. Class A drug use has therefore been stable between 1996 and 2001–02. Data for 2002–03 will be published later in the year.

The 'Smoking, drinking and drug use among young people in England in 2002' survey estimates last year Class A drug use among 11 to 15-year-olds since 1998 as being:

	Percentage
1998	3
1999	2
2000	4
2001	4
2002	4

A revised method for measuring the prevalence of drug use was introduced in 2001. Therefore, estimates used in 2001 and 2002 are not strictly comparable with results from previous sweeps.

Commercial Confidentiality

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is on the application of the principle of commercial confidentiality in relation to the disclosure of information to inquiries which he has instigated. [129679]

Mr. Blunkett: My Department's policy in relation to the disclosure of information is to adhere to the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information and the principles of the Freedom of Information Act 2000, which becomes fully applicable from January 2005.

My Department is committed to the principles of open government and information will be disclosed in the public interest unless there are overriding commercial reasons (or legal constraints) not to disclose as allowed for under the exemptions described in the Code.

Community Support Officers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many community support officers (a) there were in 2002–03 and (b) there are in 2003–04 in each police authority in England and Wales. [130472]

Ms Blears: Home Office funding enabled 27 police forces to recruit a total of 1,222 Community Support Officers (CSOs) by the end of 2002–03. There was a second opportunity to bid for funds earlier this year and the allocation from this will enable 36 forces to recruit a further 1,234 CSOs in 2003–04. The numbers recruited and deployed in the first year and allocated to forces in this year are as follows:

Police force	2002–03	2003–04
Avon and Somerset	12	30
Bedfordshire	0	12
Cambridgeshire	6	40
Cheshire	6	15
Cleveland	40	20
Devon and Cornwall	20	35
Dorset	7	0
Durham	10	25
Dyfed-Powys	0	5
Essex	10	45
Gloucestershire	0	30
Greater Manchester	160	25
Gwent	30	20

Police force	2002–03	2003–04
Hertfordshire	14	24
Kent	18	45
Lancashire	72	35
Leicestershire	28	17
Lincolnshire	32	10
Merseyside	40	60
Metropolitan police	499	250
Norfolk	12	18
Northamptonshire	12	0
North Wales	0	8
North Yorkshire	0	30
Northumbria	0	45
Nottinghamshire	10	35
South Wales	0	50
South Yorkshire	14	28
Staffordshire	0	10
Suffolk	0	15
Surrey	52	11
Sussex	22	40
Thames Valley	0	8
Warwickshire	11	13
West Mercia	10	30
West Midlands	0	40
West Yorkshire	60	100
Wiltshire	15	10
	1,222	1,234

128 of the CSOs allocated in round 2 are already trained and deployed and a further 77 are under training. In addition there are 174 non Home Office funded CSOs on the streets making a total of 1,601 CSOs in England and Wales.

Confiscated Assets

Mr. Tom Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals have been the subject of confiscation orders under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002. [127971]

Caroline Flint: The confiscation powers in the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 are triggered by offences committed after the provisions were brought into force on 24 March 2003, so it will be some time before confiscation cases are dealt with by the Crown Court in numbers. To date, two convicted offenders have been made the subject of confiscation orders under the Act in England and Wales with a total value of £53,000.

Coroners

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when it is expected that there will be further action on the recommendations of the Home Office Review of Coroners and Death Certification. [129671]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 16 September 2003]: We are considering the recommendations of the Report of a Fundamental Review 2003—Death Certification and Investigation in England, Wales and Northern Ireland, published on 4 June, alongside those in the Third Report of the Shipman Inquiry on death certification and death investigation, which was published on 14 July. As I announced on 4 June, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has asked the Chair of the Review, Mr. Tom Luce, to undertake some further work to link the Review's recommendations to the relevant findings of the Shipman Inquiry. We expect this work to be completed later in the autumn.

Corporate Manslaughter

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations he has received since 1 March in support of the introduction of a corporate manslaughter charge; and if he will make a statement. [129477]

Paul Goggins: We have received in excess of 50 letters on corporate killing since 1 March 2003. The vast majority of these supported the introduction of new measures to reform the law on corporate manslaughter.

I also refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for Castle Point (Bob Spink) on 23 June 2003, Official Report, column 596W. These organisations are also supportive of our proposal to reform the law in this area. Officials will be holding a number of meetings with key external stakeholders to inform the development of proposals for legislation on corporate killing. As announced on 20 May 2003, these will be published before the end of the year.

Correspondence

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the hon. Member for Bolton South-East to the letter on behalf of Befriending Refugees and Asylum Seekers of 28 February. [129893]

Beverley Hughes: My hon. Friend the Member for Slough (Fiona Mactaggart) wrote to my hon. Friend on 9 September 2003.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the ARDG Central Allocation Team of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Totnes of 14 July regarding Mrs. John Lewis of Dartmouth, South Devon; and what the reasons are for the delay in replying. [130991]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 18 September 2003]: I wrote to the hon. Member on 29 September 2003.

Clare Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter of 27 May 2003 from the right hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood regarding Singobile Lunga, H.O. Ref L1047295, a constituent. [131159]

Beverley Hughes: I wrote to my right hon. Friend on 23 September 2003.

Crime Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the estimated cost of crime, in money terms, in each of the last six years was. [130487]

Ms Blears: The Home Office made estimates of the economic and social cost of crime in England and Wales in 1999–2000. Estimates were published in Home Office Research Study 217 (HORS 217), "The economic and social costs of crime". This study estimated that, in England and Wales in 1999–2000, the cost of crimes against individuals was £32.2 billion, against businesses and public sector was £9.1 billion, of fraud and forgery was £13.8 billion, and of traffic and other non-notifiable offences was £4.8 billion. Figures for other years are not currently available.

Crime Statistics

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the differences are in the criteria by which an offence is considered to be (a) cleared up and (b) brought to justice. [109586]

Ms Blears: The term cleared up is used when an individual has been charged, cautioned, reprimanded, or received a final warning for a notifiable offence or offences in relation to a crime, or when such an offence has been accepted for consideration in court. A crime may also be counted as cleared up when no further action is taken on an offence for one of the following reasons:

the offender, victim or an essential witness is dead or too ill;

the victim refuses or is unable to give evidence;

the offender is under the age of criminal responsibility;

the Police or Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) decide that no useful purpose would be served by proceeding; or the time limit of six months for commencing prosecution, where applicable, has been exceeded.

A notifiable offence is considered to have been brought to justice if the outcome is a conviction, caution, Penalty Notice for Disorder, or it is taken into consideration at court.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many shoplifting offences were committed in Romford in (a) 2002 and (b) each of the last 10 years. [128375]

Paul Goggins: The available information is contained in the table:

Persons[1] aged 10–17 and 18–20 convicted in the Petty Sessional Area of Havering[2], 1992–2001

	Persons aged 10–17	Persons aged 18–20	All young offenders
1992	178	505	683
1993	171	609	780
1994	156	480	636
1995	N/a	N/a	N/a
1996	201	518	719
1997	252	481	733
1998	292	409	701
1999	269	473	742
2000	222	466	688
2001	286	481	767

[1] A person convicted on more than one occasion during a year will be counted separately on each occasion.
[2] Court sits at Romford. Figures include those convicted at the Crown Court, having been committed for trial from Havering PSA.

Statistics for 2002 will be available in December.

Juvenile Offenders

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his answer of 8 July 2003, Official Report, column 724W, on juvenile prisoners, what plans he has to move all 17-year-old females out of Prison Service custody. [125889]

Paul Goggins: We are determined to minimise the number of juvenile girls mixing with adult prisoners. We are currently setting up a new, separate juvenile unit at Downview, to end placements in Holloway. Given the numbers and geographical spread, complete separation across England and Wales is not simple, but we are looking at how further improvements can be made.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with the Metropolitan Police Force in the London borough of Havering with regard to young offenders. [128373]

Ms Blears: I have regular bilateral meetings with the Commissioner which cover the whole of the Metropolitan police area. The Youth Offending Team (YOT) in Havering was the first in London to be managed by a serving officer from the Metropolitan police and is one of the best performing YOTs in London, according to the tables of performance compiled by the Youth Justice Board for England and Wales.

It forms part of a consortium of YOTs which run the East London Intensive Supervision and Surveillance Programme for persistent young offenders. With support from the Children's Fund, Havering is also developing a Youth Inclusion and Support Programme which will aim to identify young people at risk of offending and provide a series of early intervention measures to address this risk.

Criminal Cases Review Commission

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much the CCRC received in Grant Aid in the year ending 31 March 2003. [128886]

Paul Goggins: In the year ending 31 March 2003, the Commission received £7 million in Grant Aid.

Criminal Enterprises

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what additional steps he is taking to ensure that the target to disrupt 10 per cent. more organised criminal enterprises by 2004 is met. [130486]

Ms Blears: The target of disrupting 10 per cent. more organised criminal groups by 2004 set against a 2000–01 baseline was met in 2001–02. In 2002–03 there was a 3.4 per cent. increase in disruptions on 2001–02.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people are employed by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority. [130510]

Paul Goggins: The Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority has a complement of 554 posts. At the end of July 2003, 496.5 of these posts were filled by staff on secondment from the Authority's sponsoring organisations, the Home Office and the Scottish Executive. A further 37 posts were filled by agency and casual staff.

Criminal Justice Boards (Targets)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the proposed timelines and targets set by each local Criminal Justice Board for the reduction of the time from arrest to sentence. [130483]

Paul Goggins: All Local Criminal Justice Boards are expected to continue to work towards meeting and maintaining the Government's objective to halve the average time from arrest to sentence for persistent young offenders in England and Wales from 142 days (1996) to 71 days. The average time from arrest to sentence for persistent young offenders in England and Wales was 64 days for the second quarter of 2003—the eighth consecutive quarter at or below the 71 day target. Current Persistent Young Offenders (PYO) performance for each Local Criminal Justice Board is set out in the table (Table A) and further details are available at www.youth-justice-board.gov.uk/PractitionersPostal/PracticeAndPerformance/Performance.

Locally, since April 2003 when the Boards were formally established, each Board has set itself individual adult and youth targets for improving general timeliness in the magistrates courts, with separate Crown court targets for different types of cases. These have been set in the context of the overall delivery of the Criminal Justice Systems (CJS's) Public Service Agreements and in the magistrates courts are expressed in terms of charge to completion. Targets for each area are set out in the table (Table B). Performance data from April-June 2003, is due to be published in October 2003.

Table A

Force	AS	April–June 2003 Number of cases
National	64	6,296
Avon and Somerset	61	108
Bedfordshire	44	27
Cambridgeshire	43	82
Cheshire	55	95
Cleveland	57	88
Cumbria	53	93
Derbyshire	91	90
Devon and Cornwall	48	120
Dorset	76	58
Durham	60	102
Dyfed-Powys	31	51
Essex	79	94
Gloucestershire	40	41
Greater Manchester	67	474
Gwent	64	78
Hampshire	65	314
Hertfordshire	49	58
Humberside	89	130
Kent	67	189
Lancashire	52	240
Leicestershire	66	106
Lincolnshire	79	78
Merseyside	89	257
Metropolitan	75	453
Norfolk	70	72
North Wales	43	110
North Yorkshire	76	79
Northamptonshire	68	71
Northumbria	70	384
Nottinghamshire	59	150
South Wales	63	259
South Yorkshire	73	164
Staffordshire	46	147
Suffolk	40	91
Surrey	74	48
Sussex	55	121
Thames Valley	64	147
Warwickshire	43	41
West Mercia	59	129
West Midlands	51	436
West Yorkshire	65	331
Wiltshire	68	36
British Transport Police	75	54

Note:
This table shows the latest available PYO arrest-to-sentence figures for each Criminal Justice Area.

Table B

		Magistrates court						Crown court
		Adult			Youth
TARGETS 2003/04	PYO	Initial Guilty Plea	Trials	Committals	Initial Guilty Plea	Trials	Committals	Committal for trial (%)	Sent for trial (%)	Committal for sentence (%)	Sent for appeal (%)
England and Wales	71
Avon and Somerset	71	57	142	84	54	121	95	[1]	[1]	[1]	[1]
Bedfordshire	71	36	175	86	49	121	85	78	78	78	78
Cambridgeshire	71	49	145	86	49	119	85	78	78	78	78
Cheshire	71	46	123	98	41	108	98	78	78	78	78
Cleveland	71	50	141	86	49	99	85	80	80	80	80
Cumbria	71	42	112	84	42	98	70	[1]	[1]	[1]	[1]
Derbyshire	71	54	130	102	56	140	98	82	85	92	93
Devon and Cornwall	71	40	128	76	46	121	92	78	78	78	78
Dorset	71	48	182	86	46	112	68	78	78	78	78
Durham	71	37	111	90	24	85	55	78	78	78	78
Dyfed Powys	71	38	126	72	44	78	85	78	78	78	78
Essex	71	50	127	86	40	106	76	78	78	78	78
Gloucestershire	71	50	140	85	45	110	80	80	85	90	90
Greater Manchester	71	42	136	84	49	121	85	62	72	80	85
Gwent	71	[1]	[1]	[1]	49	121	85	78	78	78	78
Hampshire	71	35	148	69	42	115	83	78	78	78	78
Hertfordshire	71	45	145	86	44	121	62	78	78	78	78
Humberside	71	50	150	85	49	120	85	[1]	[1]	[1]	[1]
Kent	71	40	140	80	40	115	80	[1]	[1]	[1]	[1]
Lancashire	71	50	145	86	49	121	85	70	78	80	85
Leicestershire	71	41	130	84	47	108	69	78	78	78	78
Lincolnshire	71	47	145	86	49	121	58	78	78	78	78
London	71	47	145	65	49	121	77	78	78	78	78

Table B

		Magistrates court						Crown court
		Adult			Youth
TARGETS 2003/04	PYO	Initial Guilty Plea	Trials	Committals	Initial Guilty Plea	Trials	Committals	Committal for trial (%)	Sent for trial (%)	Committal for sentence (%)	Sent for appeal (%)
Merseyside	71	52	140	80	40	110	80	81	83	91	96
Norfolk	71	38	110	62	37	98	70	78	78	78	78
Northamptonshire	71	50	145	86	49	121	62	78	78	78	78
Northumbria	71	28	112	84	28	112	70	[1]—	[1]—	[1]—	[1]—
North Wales	71	36	104	90	45	102	67	90	92	90	93
North Yorkshire	71	42	130	86	42	90	72	78	78	78	78
Nottinghamshire	71	49	144	69	48	114	84	78	78	78	78
South Wales	71	50	128	84	42	92	60	78	78	78	78
South Yorkshire	71	54	138	98	57	117	102	78	78	78	78
Staffordshire	71	50	129	86	44	90	85	78	78	78	78
Suffolk	71	50	142	71	49	101	78	78	78	78	78
Surrey	71	45	140	86	44	100	45	78	78	78	78
Sussex	71	50	145	86	41	121	82	[1]—	[1]—	[1]—	[1]—
Thames Valley	71	50	145	86	46	109	85	[1]—	[1]—	[1]—	[1]—
Warwickshire	71	50	117	85	46	99	85	78	78	78	78
West Mercia	71	42	155	125	45	118	85	78	78	78	78
West Midlands	71	42	112	70	42	112	70	78	78	78	78
West Yorkshire	71	48	128	84	45	116	84	78	78	78	78
Wiltshire	71	47	120	108	42	98	0	78	78	78	78

[1] denotes no area target set

Notes:

Persistent Young Offenders—Targets are based on average time in days from arrest to sentence

Timeliness in Magistrates courts—Targets are based on 80 per cent. of defendants charged with crime to be dealt within the number of days shown from charge to disposal.

Timeliness in Crown courts—Targets are the percentage of defendants to be dealt with within National Targets from committal to first hearing

Crown Court National targets are: Committals for trial, 16 weeks; Sent for trial cases, 26 weeks; Committals for sentence, 10 weeks; Appeals, 14 weeks

These figures have been updated recently and may differ slightly from previously published figures

Awaiting clarification from Gwent on Adult timeliness targets

Criminal Justice System

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons the proportion of victims very or fairly satisfied with their treatment by the criminal justice system changed between 2000 and 2002. [130484]

Paul Goggins: The proportion of victims satisfied with their treatment by the criminal justice system has remained at around 58 per cent. since 2000, although this year's figure has shown a small rise, to 59 per cent.

We recognise that there is more to do to improve support and services for victims, and to ensure that their interests are fully taken into account at every stage of the criminal justice process. We detailed our plans in the national strategy for victims and witnesses, published in July. Among the proposals highlighted in the strategy was new legislation, to be brought forward as soon as Parliamentary time allows, which will include the first statutory Code of Practice for victims. The Code will list the minimum services which criminal justice agencies should deliver, and give victims the right of complaint to the Parliamentary Ombudsman if they are not received.

Criminal Records Bureau

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many criminal records checks have been carried out on staff employed by a (a) domiciliary care agency and (b) nursing agency, which have resulted in a criminal records certificate not being issued since the introduction of Criminal Records Bureau checks; [130530]

(2) how many criminal records checks have been carried out on staff employed by a (a) domiciliary care agency and (b) nurses agency who seek work in care homes since the introduction of Criminal Records Bureau checks; [130531]

(3) what the average time taken is to process a criminal record check on a (a) domiciliary care agency employee and (b) nursing agency employee in cases (i) when a criminal records certificate is issued with no further investigation or problems arising, (ii) when further investigations are necessary before a criminal records certificate can be issued and (iii) when further investigations were necessary and it was consequently determined that a criminal records certificate would not be issued. [130661]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 17 September 2003]: The Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) issues a Disclosure against all applications received, regardless of the information contained in it, except where the application has been withdrawn at the request of the registered body or applicant. I am unable to provide data on the average time taken to process CRB checks, broken down by category of worker or when further investigation has been required as there are no information technology procedures at present to extract these data from the CRB database.

However, I can confirm that the average turnaround times for Standard and Enhanced Disclosures across all business sectors is 24 days. Service turnaround times for Standard and Enhanced continue to exceed the CRB target of 90 per cent. of Standard Disclosures within two weeks and 90 per cent. of Enhanced Disclosures within four weeks. The CRB expects to process the checks for new care home workers within this service standard. In July 2003, the average turnaround was 93.1 per cent. for Standard Disclosures and 93.5 per cent. for Enhanced Disclosures. Over the last four weeks output has exceeded intake: 142,932 applications have been received and 145,117 have been issued. Since 11 March 2002 the Criminal Records Bureau has issued over 2,364,312 Disclosures.

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the total costs imposed on the voluntary sector in 2003–04 by (a) Criminal Records Bureau changes in respect of volunteers, (b) registration fees imposed under the Care Standards Act 2000 and (c) medical checks required by legislation. [130700]

Paul Goggins: The information is as follows:

(a) My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary announced in February 2001 that criminal record checks for volunteers would be conducted free of charge by the Criminal Records Bureau. There has been no change to that policy and checks remain free for volunteers.

(b) The Department of Health consulted the National Care Standards Commission (NCSC), which is the independent regulator of care services. The NCSC does not identify the voluntary sector payments separate from payments made by the statutory and private providers of care services. It is therefore not possible to provide separate figures for the voluntary sector.

(c) The Department of Health has informed us that as far as they are aware, there are no medical checks, as such, required by legislation. There are requirements in the various care regulations that providers, managers and staff must be physically and mentally fit for the purpose of the work they are to do. However, the regulations do not specify how these people are to prove they are fit. It is for the NCSC to decide whether the evidence of fitness is satisfactory.

Detained Persons

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the time needed to conclude the investigative process and charge a detained person. [130430]

Ms Blears: The Report of the joint Cabinet Office/ Home Office Review of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/docs/pacereview2002.pdf) published in November 2002 recommended that the existing maximum detention period of 24 hours without charge for an arrestable offence was insufficient and should be extended to 36 hours. The police provided the Review with supporting evidence on difficulties associated with the 24-hour detention period. The extended period would enable investigations being completed more effectively and avoid the investigative process to be rushed to the detriment of either the suspect or the criminal justice system or both. The provision is included at Clause 5 to the Criminal Justice Bill currently before Parliament.

DNA Database

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the size of the DNA database in each of the last five years. [130494]

Ms Blears: The DNA Database consists of records of both subject sample (offenders) profiles and profiles obtained from crime scene stains. In addition records are removed from the database. It is not possible toprovide information about the size of the database in each of the last five years as information about the number of deleted records has not been collected annually.

As at 31 August 2003 the database held 2,148,611 records.

Domestic Burglary

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what additional steps he is taking to ensure that the target to reduce domestic burglary by 25 per cent. by 2005 is met. [130488]

Ms Blears: We have already made significant progress towards meeting our target of reducing domestic burglary by 25 per cent. between 1999 and 2005. Figures published in the most recent British Crime Survey (BCS) show that there has been a 23 per cent. reduction in burglary since 1999.

We recognise the importance of driving down burglary still further, and a wide range of work is in progress to this end. Some initiatives are continuing from previous years. For example:

All police authorities have agreed targets for reducing domestic burglary by 2005. The Police Standards Unit is working with police forces to help them meet these targets and is offering specific support to those forces at greatest risk of not meeting their burglary targets.

Minimum sentences of three years have been introduced for those convicted of burglary on a third separate occasion.

Targets for reducing burglary are included in over 80 per cent. of the strategies developed by the Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships.

"Stretched" burglary targets have been included in over one third of Local Public Service Agreements (LPSAs) between local authorities and central Government.

Work is continuing with universities, student unions, the police and other relevant agencies to reduce crime against students.

We are working with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) on an Approved Code of Practice for landlords, which will promote better standards of security in Houses in Multiple Occupancy (HIMOS) and improve landlord management practices.

Initiatives taken forward for the first time during 2003 include:

Developing a targeted publicity campaign in conjunction with brand partners to reinforce burglary prevention messages targeted at specific at-risk groups such as holidaymakers and home-movers.

Developing a strategy for reducing the market for stolen goods.

Through the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) Burglary Working Group, producing a "Good Practice and Tactical Options Guide".

In addition, several other programmes of work are under way that will impact on a range of crimes, including burglary. Such programmes include Narrowing the Justice Gap, reducing re-offending and our anti-drugs strategy.

Domestic Violence

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice and assistance he gives to local authorities to help them deal with cases of domestic violence. [127280]

Ms Blears: The Crime Reduction Programme (CRP) Violence against Women Initiative (VAWI) is an evidence-based programme to find out which approaches and practices are effective in supporting victims of domestic violence. In July 2000, some 34 multi-agency victims focused projects were commissioned and independently evaluated. The main findings are due to be published in early 2004. In addition, a series of concise reports, which will be aimed at promoting good practice to a range of practitioners, will start to become available from the end of 2003. These guides will help local authorities and others improve the way in which they deal with domestic violence cases.

In addition, a significant portion of the £14 million funding package announced in February this year will go towards assisting Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships, in which local authorities are a key partner, to improve their performance in tackling domestic violence over the next three years. Another portion of that funding is being used to fund a three-year project by the Local Government Association aimed at supporting local authorities in tackling domestic violence.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to improve the collection of data on domestic violence. [127282]

Ms Blears: There is a Crime Reduction Programme (CRP) Violence Against Women project looking at data collection and we will be producing guidance on data collection arising out of the evaluation of that project.

The Policing Performance Assessment Framework, which is currently being developed, will examine the police's current data collection in its work to develop meaningful indicators to measure police performance.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will institute a national policy to ensure consistency in the way that police forces deal with the perpetrators of domestic violence; and if he will make a statement. [130204]

Ms Blears: Home Office circular 19/2000 gives guidance on police handling cases of domestic violence.

The National Centre for Policing Excellence (NCPE) is currently developing updated guidelines for police handling of domestic violence cases.

Drug Rape

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police forces are equipped with readily available test kits to secure samples in the event of a complaint of drug rape. [129615]

Caroline Flint: Twenty six police forces have ordered the Early Evidence Kit produced by the Forensic Science Service Scenesafe Unit. Scenesafe are the only suppliers of Early Evidence Kits approved by the Association of Chief Police Officers.

Another supplier, Tetra, sell separate modules and some forces use Tetra's urine and mouth modules to make up their own kit. It is not known how many forces have done this, but the Forensic Science Service estimate that most forces have access to one or other kit.

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what training in the specific handling of cases of drug rape is available to police forces; how many forces have taken up such training; and for what level of officer. [129616]

Ms Blears: Training for investigators in the handling of allegations of drug induced rape is contained within the Initial Crime Investigators Development Programme (ICIDP). This is a national programme, launched in February 2003 and endorsed by the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO). The training includes a knowledge of the various drugs that may be used and their effects; evidential and forensic considerations; and issues concerning victim care and evidence.

The training of uniformed officers who deal with sexual offence investigation (variously known as SOIT, SOLO or chaperones) is not currently delivered to a national programme. However, forces deliver a range of appropriate local training, including sexual offence training and drug induced rape issues. Numbers of forces providing such training are not currently known, but it features in a wide range of force training programmes.

Training for those officers, to agreed national standards, is currently being developed within the Sexual Offences Training Project at the Centre for Investigative Skills, National Specialist Law Enforcement Centre (NCPE). This is part of the response to the Home Office Action Plan to implement the recommendations of the HMCPSI/HMIC joint investigation into the investigation and prosecution of cases involving allegations of rape.

'Early Evidence Kits', developed by the Forensic Science Service in conjunction with the Police Service, have been available since 2002.

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to ensure that early support is available to the victims of drug rape who do not intend to report the matter to the police. [129625]

Caroline Flint: Victims of drug rape currently have access to all the support services available to victims of any type of sexual offence. These include local GP and hospital services, Sexual Assault Referral Centres (SARCs), Victim Support and NHS Direct, all of which will support victims of any sexual crime, whether or not they intend to report the matter to the police. In addition, there are local rape crisis centres in some parts of the country providing services for women only or which are geared towards the needs of particular groups, such as people with disabilities.

In July, the Home Office published a new national strategy, 'A new deal for victims and witnesses', which sets out our plans for ensuring that victims and witnesses of crime—including victims of sexual offences—get a better deal in future. One of the issues identified in the strategy is the need to ensure that there is better support for victims of sexual offences, including increased access to Sexual Assault Referral Centres (SARCs) and rape crisis centres.

As well as supporting the further roll out of Sexual Assault Referral Centres and improving access to other forms of support, the Home Office also intends to set up a national helpline for victims of sexual offences.

Drug Treatment

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to page 38 of the 2003 Departmental Report, how many of the 5,500 probationers who entered drug treatment completed that treatment. [130504]

Paul Goggins: Government funding for drug treatment has more than doubled since 2000 to over £500 million pounds in 2003–04 and will rise further to £573 million by 2005–06. The number of problematic drug misusers entering treatment has also steadily increased over the last five years as treatment services have improved and become more widely available. The Drug Treatment and Testing Order (DTTO) is the main criminal justice disposal for drug addicts who commit crime and require treatment. The order can last between six months and three years and currently over 53 per cent. of DTTO offenders have either successfully completed their order or are still engaging positively with their treatment. Last year 6,140 DTTOs were made.

Dungavel Detention Centre

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who has responsibility for the education of children detained at the Dungavel Detention Centre; and under what legislation this responsibility is given. [130417]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 16 September 2003]: Under sections 148 and 149 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 the management and operation of Dungavel Immigration Removal Centre has been contracted out to Premier Detention Services. Premier Detention Services is therefore responsible for the provision of all services at the centre including the education provision for both adults and children.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letters of (a) 7 August and (b) 18 August from the hon. Member for Perth regarding the Dungavel Detention Centre. [130418]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 16 September 2003]: My hon. Friend the Member for Slough (Fiona Mactaggart) replied to the hon. Member's letter of 7 August on 9 September. The hon. Member's letter of 18 August was not received in this Department. A copy has been obtained from the hon. Member's office and there will be a reply as soon as possible.

Foreign Nationals (Deportation)

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign nationals held in prison service custody who have been served with a deportation notice are currently awaiting a decision from him on a parole application. [130535]

Beverley Hughes: Information on the number of people held in Prison Service establishments who have been served with notice of intention to deport is not available except by examination of individual case-files at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign nationals in prison service custody who have completed their sentence (a) are awaiting deportation, (b) have been awaiting deportation for between one and three months, (c) have been awaiting deportation for between three and six months, (d) have been awaiting deportation for between six and 12 months and (e) have been awaiting deportation for more than a year. [130536]

Beverley Hughes: Information on the number of people held in Prison Service establishments under the Immigration Act (2002) after completion of a custodial sentence is not available except by examination of individual case-files at disproportionate cost.

Forensic Science Service

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what profit/loss has been returned by the Forensic Science Service in each year since 1992. [130271]

Ms Blears: Figures relating to the profit/loss returned by the Forensic Science Service in each year since 1992 are set out in the table:

	£000
1991–92	-1,113
1992–93	1,193
1993–94	-1,930
1994–95	769
1995–96	628
1996–97	-1,457
1997–98	3,035
1998–99	239
1999–2000	157
2000–01	3,695
2001–02	4,891
2002–03	10,232

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were employed by the Forensic Science Service (a) in total and (b) at its Wetherby site in each year since 1992. [130272]

Ms Blears: Information is currently available only for 1996–97 to 2002–03. The number of employees (permanent staff, counted as full-time equivalents) at 31 March of each of those years is as follows.

Year	FSS total[1]	Wetherby
1997	1,167	115
1998	1,276	126
1999	1,677	183
2000	1,811	170
2001	2,230	222
2002	2,488	258
2003	2,603	273

[1] Forensic Science Service

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the police authorities in England and Wales used the services of the Forensic Science Service in each year since 1992. [130273]

Ms Blears: The Forensic Science Service has provided a service to all police authorities in each year since 1992 to the current year.

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost was of redundancy payments met by the Forensic Science Service in (a) 2002 and (b) 2003. [130274]

Ms Blears: There were no redundancies in 2001–02 or 2002–03. The current estimate of redundancy cost of 2003–04 is £6 million.

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the procedure is for the appointment of members to the Executive Board of the Forensic Science Service; and how many people serve on the Board. [130275]

Ms Blears: Appointments are made by the executive board after scrutiny by the Development and Remuneration Committee, and approval by the main board.

The Development and Remuneration Committee consists solely of independent members and the majority of members of the main board are non-executive directors.

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent on research and development by the Forensic Science Service in each year since 1992. [130276]

Ms Blears: The value of research and development by the Forensic Science Service in each year since 1992 is set out in the table.

	£000
1991–92	2,506
1992–93	2,295
1993–94	1,671
1994–95	1,582
1995–96	1,656
1996–97	2,109
1997–98	2,235
1998–99	2,771
1999–2000	3,187
2000–01	3,173
2001–02	3,670
2002–03	3,417

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people are employed by the Forensic Science Service. [130478]

Ms Blears: The number of people employees (permanent staff, counted as full-time equivalents) on 31 July 2003 was 2,649.

Graffiti

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the level of graffiti; and what plans he has to reduce it. [125371]

Ms Blears: The British Crime Survey records that, in 2002–03 survey year, over a third of respondents perceived graffiti vandalism and other deliberate damage to property as being a very or fairly big problem.

Graffiti spoils our enjoyment of public places, increases fear of crime and produces an environment where crime and anti-social behaviour can thrive. That is why we are taking action to tackle it in both the Anti-Social Behaviour Bill and the Criminal Justice Bill. We are banning the sale of spray paints to under 18s. We are closing the loophole which prevents the police from searching for items which they suspect may be intended for causing criminal damage, such as spray paints. We are also giving local authorities powers to issue fixed penalty notices for graffiti and to clean graffiti from certain types of property now owned by them.

The Anti-Social Behaviour Unit is also looking at practical ways to reduce further anti-social behaviour, including graffiti.

Gun Control

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what studies he has commissioned of gun control policies in other nations, with particular reference to (a) the United States and (b) other EU member states; and what conclusions he has drawn. [130051]

Caroline Flint: I have not received recent studies. In developing our approach to gun control we pay broad regard to aspects of controls in other countries and to our European Union and international obligations. But ultimately United Kingdom legislation has to be framed in the context of domestic requirements. We have one of the toughest frameworks of control in the world, and we consider it right that we should. However, although controlling legal firearms is important in helping to prevent guns falling into the wrong hands, it does not obviate the need for other measures to deal with armed crime. This needs to be addressed in the context of all violent crime and other activities such as drug dealing, as well as the emergence of a gang culture in some areas, and in the light of what we can learn from police best practice, both here and abroad. The experience of the police in Boston, for example, is already being taken into account by police forces in the United Kingdom.

Gurkhas

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the basis is for the policy that wives of Gurkha soldiers who hold British overseas passports are refused visas to join their husbands in this country where the soldiers have six months or less to serve. [130179]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 16 September 2003]: British overseas citizens do not have right of abode in the United Kingdom and are subject to immigration control. There is no provision within the immigration rules for dependants of members of the armed forces to enter or remain in the United Kingdom. Under a concession outside the rules dependants are normally granted leave for the duration of the principal member's posting, up to a maximum of three years, on conditions permitting employment.

Gurkhas are discharged in Nepal and Gurkhas often return to Nepal, with their personal possessions, six months prior to their official discharge in order to undertake pre-retirement courses and take leave. During this time, the basis of any leave in the United Kingdom granted to the dependant wife of such a Gurkha no longer exists, as the Gurkha is no longer in the United Kingdom, and she may be refused entry.

An application for a visa to enter the United Kingdom may also be refused for the same reason.

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made with the review into policy governing the right of Gurkhas to return to this country after completion of service; and when he expects to report on its findings. [130180]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 16 September 2003]: Officials from the Immigration and Nationality Directorate met with officials from the Ministry of Defence on Friday 12 September as part of their review of immigration issues affecting Gurkhas and other foreign and commonwealth personnel in the armed forces. Their discussion included access to settlement, work permits, naturalisation and welfare issues, including those affecting dependants. They are aiming to conclude their review and report their findings by Christmas.

Hearsay

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what safeguards exist to deal with the risks of hearsay evidence of an unrecorded cell confession; and if he will make a statement. [130432]

Paul Goggins: The Government set out its position on these issues in its response, published in March 2003 this year, to the 2nd Report of the Home Affairs Committee (Session 2002–2003) Criminal Justice Bill:

> In relation to the admissibility in criminal proceedings of confessions made to third parties, judges already have discretion to exclude evidence if it appears to the court that the admission of the evidence would have such an adverse effect on the fairness of the proceedings that the court ought not to admit it. When considering exercising this discretion the court would have regard for all the circumstances of the case, including the circumstances in which the evidence was obtained. [Ref: Section 78 Police & Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (PACE)].
>
> Judges also have the discretion to exclude evidence where its prejudicial effect would outweigh any probative value. [Ref: Section 82(3) of PACE].

More specifically, where evidence is obtained in circumstances such as confessions made in custody cells, it is also open to the judge to draw the attention of the jury to these circumstances in his summing up.

The Royal Commission on Criminal Justice considered this issue in 1993 and made no recommendation for change. It was considered again by the Law Commission as part of its review of the hearsay laws in 1997. It concluded that confessions should continue to be admissible against their makers, subject to the discretions in PACE and in common law to exclude them. This view was supported on consultation.

Home Security

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact of the security improvements for homes in high crime areas. [130512]

Ms Blears: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to the Locks for Pensioners scheme, a two-year programme funded under the Crime Reduction Programme to provide home security upgrades for low income pensioners in areas with burglary rates above the national average. The scheme ran from July 2000 to June 2002 in conjunction with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA's) Warm Front scheme.

The scheme is being evaluated and the report of the evaluation, covering both processes and outcomes, is expected to be published early in 2004.

Immigration

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what extra resources have been provided in the last three years to police authorities to enable them to deal with the policing of immigrants. [131264]

Ms Blears: Expenditure on policing supported by Government has increased by 25 per cent. in the past three years. It is a matter for each police authority to match resources to local policing requirements.

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what statistics are maintained on the criminal activities of (a) illegal immigrants and (b) seekers of political asylum. [131265]

Beverley Hughes: The statistics referred to are not available from existing data collection systems and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Details of the nationality and immigration status of suspects or of those convicted of crimes are not collated centrally as part of the recorded crime statistics and are not necessarily recorded by individual police forces.

Information on asylum applications is published quarterly on the Home Office website at: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html. The next publication will be available from the end of November and will cover the third quarter of 2003.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases in each of the last 12 months have been (a) sent to the Appeals Processing Centre and (b) despatched to the Immigration Appellate Authority. [130611]

Beverley Hughes: The available information is shown in the table.

Number of cases (principal applicants)

Month	Asylum appeals received by the Home Office[1]	Asylum Appeals received by the IAA[1,2]
July 2002	4,565	4,500
August 2002	3,960	4,510
September 2002	3,905	9,635
October 2002	4,965	4,475
November 2002	3,740	6,080
December 2002	3,575	6,110
January 2003	[3]3,400	6,015
February 2003	[3]4,000	6,025
March 2003	[3]5,200	6,045
April 2003	[3]3,700	5,825
May 2003	[3]3,400	6,025
June 2003	[3]3,600	5,985

[1] Figures rounded to the nearest five, and are provisional.
[2] Based on information supplied by the Department for Constitutional Affairs.
[3] Figures rounded to the nearest 100, and subject to later revision.

Information on the number of asylum appeals received by the Home Office, and the number of appeals received by the Immigration Appellate Authority (IAA), is published quarterly on the Home Office website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Incapacitating Drugs

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress is being made with the design of a device to test for a broad spectrum of incapacitating drugs in alcoholic drinks. [129617]

Caroline Flint: The Department of Trade and Industry commissioned research to look at the viability of a potential drug detecting device, such as a "swizzle stick", that could be unobtrusively used by people in pubs and clubs to detect drugs in drinks. Unfortunately, the prohibitive costs involved, and the difficulty of producing a satisfactory device, led to the project's discontinuance.

In general, we would urge people to exercise care with any product that claims to provide a complete solution to this problem, not least because of the reported widespread use of alcohol itself as a substance to facilitate the overpowering of a victim. Any device that provides only a partial screen is potentially dangerous to the extent that it may offer false reassurance.

Internet Grooming

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has analysed into which age group is the most targeted for internet grooming. [126939]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 8 September 2003]. We know of no research which would directly answer the question. Rachel O'Connell's published research ("Young Peoples' use of chatrooms: implications for policy strategies and programmes of education", 2002) explores the use of chatrooms by children of different ages but did not purport to identify the age group most at risk of grooming. The position is that a child of any age might be a target and so all should be cautious.

Interpretation/Translation Services

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department why the Immigration Research and Statistics Service commissioned a consultant to conduct a mapping exercise of the Immigration Research and Statistics Service research into the use of interpreters by Government Departments and other public services; if he will make a statement on the conclusions reached regarding how public services provide interpretation and translation services, where they are adequate and where they are not; what they cost; and what best practice has been identified. [130724]

Beverley Hughes: The Immigration Research and Statistics Service recently commissioned a research study to map the provision of interpretation and translation across five geographical regions and across eight public sector services. The research was carried out by the Health for Asylum Seekers and Refugees Portal (HARP) group at East London University. Its main aims were to identify the range of interpretation and translation services available in the United Kingdom, to identify the main service providers and public sector users of these services and to identify the role of community groups in this provision. The project also aimed to examine the costs of this provision and to identify good practice in providing interpretation and translation services.

This research project has not yet been completed.

Lawful Protests (RAF Fairford)

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on the use of powers provided by the Terrorism Act 2000 to prevent lawful protests by anti-war protestors at RAF Fairford during the recent conflict in Iraq; [130339]

(2) what powers provided by the Terrorism Act 2000 were used to police anti-war protests at RAF Fairford during the recent conflict in Iraq; [130341]

(3) if he will make a statement on the issuing of section 44 notices under the terms of the Terrorism Act 2000, to anti-war protesters at RAF Fairford during the recent Iraq conflict. [130343]

Mr. Blunkett: Lawful protests were not prevented at RAF Fairford during the recent conflict in Iraq as a result of use of the Terrorism Act 2000.

The use of the stop and search powers under section 44 was authorised and confirmed according to statutory procedure for a designated area which included Fairford. They were therefore available to officers during the policing of the protests. Such powers are confirmed solely to enable officers to search for articles that could be used in connection with terrorism.

The issuing of individual stop and search notices was an operational matter for the police.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the policing tactics used during anti-war protests at RAF Fairford during the recent conflict in Iraq. [130340]

Ms Blears: Gloucestershire constabulary co-ordinated a joint operation with the Ministry of Defence police who were responsible for policing on the base. In a complex operation, Gloucestershire constabulary deployed a significant number of police officers and operational tactics designed to facilitate peaceful protest and prevent terrorist activity or public disorder while maintaining the integrity of the outer perimeter of the base.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the total policing costs at the anti-war protests at RAF Fairford during the recent conflict in Iraq. [130342]

Ms Blears: The Chief Constable of Gloucestershire constabulary informs me that the latest estimate of costs for the policing operation at RAF Fairford is of the order of £6.9 million.

The revised projection is a significant increase on previous estimates of around £3.3 million to £3.6 million.

Earlier this year my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary agreed to support the police authority with special grant towards the costs of the operation.

We are now considering the revised estimate with the police authority and the constabulary.

Metropolitan Police

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funding per head of population the Metropolitan police received in each year since 1993 from (a) Government and (b) precept; and if he will make a statement. [128757]

Ms Blears: The information is set out in the table.

£

	Funding per head of population	Precept per head of population
1993–94	172.8	50.9
1994–95	174.6	53.7
1995–96	209.6	20.7
1996–97	206.5	20.3
1997–98	211.8	24.3
1998–99	209.1	28.9
1999–2000	209.2	31.0
2000–01	220.8	33.5
2001–02	250.2	45.3
2002–03	262.6	49.0
2003–04	279.1	60.2

Funding includes Home Office police grant and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) revenue support grant and national non-domestic rates and Standard Spending Assessment (SSA) reduction grant, Crime Fighting Fund, Airwave, Street Crime Initiative, DNA Expansion programme, London Allowance, free travel, Basic Command Unit (BCU) funding, special priority payments, counter-terrorism funding, capital grant, C3i, Premises Improvement Fund and special grant.

Source for population data (and police grant in 1993–94 and 1994–95) is the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy police statistics (Actuals to 2001–02 and Estimates for 2002–03). Figures for 2003–04 are not yet available so the estimated population figure for 2002–03 has been used.

Source for precept information is the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister.

Microsoft

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was paid to Microsoft in licensing fees by his Department and its agencies in each of the last three years; and how much has been budgeted for (a) 2003–04 and (b) 2004–05. [130686]

Fiona Mactaggart: The cost of Microsoft Licensing fees are inclusive of enterprise and select agreements and monies paid under software assurance but are exclusive of spend on customisation, often classified as professional services and software licences procured by IT service providers.

		July 2000 to March 2001	April 2001 to March 2002	April 2002 to March 2003	Total
Home Office	Home Office	53	5,726	17	5,796
	Includes: National Probation Service Criminal Justice IT Immigration & Nationality Dir	—	—	—	—
Home Office Total	—	53	5,726	17	5,796
Home Office Agencies	Forensic Science Service	263	391	450	1,104
	UK Passport Office	0	0	11	11
—	Prison Service (costs incurred locally by prisons)	52	433	2,029	2,514
Home Office Agencies Total	—	315	824	2,490	3,629

Note:
Figures shown above are £000s

Budgets:

The Forensic Science Service retain the management of their IT infrastructure in-house and therefore allocate a budget to the annual costs of Microsoft Licensing (2003–04 £227,000; 2004–05 £227,000 est).

Neither the Home Department nor the Prison Service and United Kingdom Passport Agency are able to provide budgeting information as requested.

Labour Party Conference

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much funding will be paid to Dorset police authority in respect of the costs of policing the Labour Party Conference in Bournemouth; and what percentage of the cost of policing the conference this represents. [130647]

Ms Blears [holding answer 16 September 2003]: The Chief Constable has estimated that the additional costs of policing the conference this year will be £2.276 million. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has agreed a special grant to cover this sum. He has also agreed to contribute £0.204 million (48 per cent.) towards the cost of permanent equipment for security.

Migrants

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information his Department holds on the deaths of migrants to Europe and the Mediterranean in the last 12 months; and what discussions his Department has held with relevant officials in (a) Spain, (b) Italy and (c) Greece. [129912]

Beverley Hughes: Statistical information on the deaths of migrants to Europe and the Mediterranean is not collated centrally in the UK. Such incidents are appalling, and we know that a significant number of those that have died have had their journeys facilitated by organised criminal gangs. The Government are committed to working with our EU partners to combat this exploitative trade by targeting people smugglers and traffickers through joint operations across Europe. During the last 12 months, officials in the Home Office have held discussions with their counterparts across the EU, including Spain, Italy and Greece, to ensure that such operations are appropriately targeted and rigorous action is taken to combat people smuggling and its inherent risks to life.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the amount paid in taxes by migrants to the UK in each of the last five years. [130497]

Beverley Hughes: Information does not exist on the precise amounts paid in taxes by migrants to the UK each year. However, a Home Office research study, published in 2002 (RDS Occasional Paper 77 "The migrant population in the UK: fiscal effects"), estimated that for the fiscal year 1999–2000 migrants paid £31.2 billion in taxes. By comparison they received an estimated £28.8 billion in public expenditure and services—making a net fiscal contribution to the UK of £2.5 billion.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the new detection technology used in the management of migration to the UK. [130498]

Beverley Hughes: The deployment of people detection technology is one of the many initiatives the Government have taken to significantly reduce the number of unfounded asylum claimants arriving in the United Kingdom.

We have deployed people detection technology at ports in France, Belgium, Holland, Germany and Ireland.

In France, we have deployed technology in Calais and Coquelles and negotiations on deployment are at an advanced stage with the ports of Dunkirk, Cherbourg, Le Havre and Caen, and preliminary scoping visits have been made to Dieppe, Roscoff and St. Malo. At Calais there is the capability to screen 100 per cent. of embarking freight vehicles. Following the tightening of security at Calais, we are taking steps to deploy at other continental ports vulnerable to the displacement of clandestine activity.

In Belgium, operations have commenced at Ostend where United Kingdom provided technology screens on embarking freight. Initial operations have commenced at Zeebrugge and deployment continues at other terminals within the port. A gamma scanner has been trialed in a joint operation with the Belgian authorities since August 2003.

In the Netherlands, deployment has now commenced at the port of Vlissingen and negotiations continue with other Dutch ports.

In Germany, technology has been operational on the German border with Poland and the Czech Republic since late August.

In Ireland, technology has been deployed since late July.

Motor Salvage

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact of the Motor Salvage Operations Regulations. [130511]

Ms Blears: The provisions of the Vehicles (Crime) Act 2001 and accompanying regulations regulating the motor salvage industry took effect on 21 October 2002. They have been welcomed by the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) who believe they will be effective in driving criminals out of the motor salvage industry. Information about registrations of motor salvage operators, inspections of premises and prosecutions and convictions under the 2001 Act is not available centrally at present. We are in touch with ACPO and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister about how this information can be collected without unnecessarily increasing the bureaucratic burden on police forces and local authorities.

National Crime Squad

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people are employed by the National Crime Squad; and what its total salary costs in 2002–03 were. [130475]

Ms Blears: The total workforce of the National Crime Squad (NCS) for 2002–03 was 1,769.

The total salary costs for NCS in 2002–03 were £83,255,000.

National Criminal Intelligence Service

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people are employed by the National Criminal Intelligence Service; and what its total salary costs in 2002–03 were. [130476]

Ms Blears: In 2002–03, the National Criminal Intelligence Service (NCIS) workforce was 956 staff.

This included an average of 71 members of staff attached to NCIS who were paid for by their parent employer.

NCIS total salary costs for 2002–03 were £39,526,000.

Operation Magician

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the final cost was of Operation Magician in 2000. [131228]

Caroline Flint: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the approximate additional cost for this operation was £300,000.

Operation Ore

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes are planned to the Operation Ore Child Protection Unit operated by the Metropolitan police. [129330]

Ms Blears [holding answer 11 September 2003]: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis advises me that the Metropolitan Police Service (MPS) does not have a specific 'Operation Ore Child Protection Unit'. The MPS Child Protection Group manages all child abuse investigations including all Operation Ore subjects. The Group is led by a Detective Chief Superintendent and has an establishment of 418 specialist police officers and 150 civilian support staff.

The MPS Child Protection Group's health and safety strategy has required that a small number of officers who have served a long time within the Paedophile Unit be rotated to other duties. This has been misreported in the media as the disbanding of the Paedophile Unit. However the unit is in fact being expanded and made ready for the new legislation, including the Sexual Offences Bill, currently passing through Parliament.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been spent on Operation Ore since it was set up. [129331]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 11 September 2003]: Investigations concerning Operation Ore are carried out by paedophile units, child protection or investigation teams within police forces, assisted by computer crime units. The decision as to the level of funding that should be allocated to this type of work, and this specific investigation is the responsibility of individual chief police officers.

There is no central record held of the sums allocated to these units or the amount spent on individual operations.

Ordnance Safety Board

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what account police forces in England and Wales take of the views of the Ordnance Safety Board in determining which weapons to recommend for police use. [130696]

Ms Blears: Decisions regarding the choice of weapons for police use are a matter for chief officers. Information on the sources of advice they receive is not available centrally.

Overseas Students

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on the level of charges for leave to remain for overseas students. [131366]

Beverley Hughes: The fees are set under Treasury rules to recover the full administrative cost entailed in considering applications and no more. This is calculated by taking the overall costs of processing applications divided by the number of decisions we expect to make.

A number of letters have been received from groups representing the education sector such as UKCOSA, Universities UK, and various universities to which I have already responded.

A number of letters, phone calls and emails have also been received from members of the public, including students with regard to both the introduction of charging and the level of the fee. Officials continue to deal with these.

Paedophiles

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce minimum sentences for those guilty of paedophile offences; and if he will make a statement. [128987]

Paul Goggins: The Government have no plans to introduce a minimum sentence for those found guilty of sexual offences against children. The offences cover a wide range of behaviour and in some cases the offender may himself be a child.

However, the Criminal Justice Bill currently before Parliament will establish a Sentencing Guidelines Council, chaired by the Lord Chief Justice. The Council will be responsible for setting guidelines for the full range of criminal offences, including sexual offences against children. It will be required to consult Parliament before publishing a guideline and will commission advice from the Sentencing Advisory Panel which will consult widely.

The guidelines should ensure that there is an agreed starting point for sentences and agreed aggravating and mitigating factors. In each individual case, the judge or magistrate will continue to make a decision as to sentence as they see fit, but will be required to operate within the Council's guidelines or explain why they do not apply to the case in question.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce legislation to increase the maximum sentence for those guilty of paedophile offences; and if he will make a statement on judicial leniency in such cases. [128988]

Paul Goggins: The new Sexual Offences Bill includes a range of child sexual offences that will cover not only unlawful sexual intercourse but also other forms of sexual touching involving a child under 16. The offences are underpinned by maximum penalties. Many of these represent significant increases on the maximum penalties available for the comparable offending at present.

The Criminal Justice Bill currently before Parliament will establish a Sentencing Guidelines Council, chaired by the Lord Chief Justice. The Council will be responsible for setting guidelines for the full range of criminal offences, including sexual offences against children. It is proposed that Parliament will also be consulted as a guideline is developed. In each individual case, the judge or magistrate will continue to make a decision as to sentence as they see fit, but will be required to operate within the Council's guidelines or explain why they do not apply to the case in question.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to increase the funding for the Special Paedophile Unit; and if he will make a statement on its role. [128989]

Paul Goggins: The Paedophilia On Line Investigation Team (POLIT) is a unit of the National Crime Squad (NCS) which administers online paedophile investigations on a national basis.

The unit is responsible for directing key investigations on behalf of forces and providing a national single point of contact for international enquiries in relation to online child sex abuse. The unit is particularly well known for the vital role it has assumed in the co-ordination of Operation Ore.

The funding of this unit is currently being considered as part of the wider funding provision for the National Crime Squad for the years 2004-05 and beyond.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures are in place to test whether a convicted paedophile is ready for release; and what plans he has to change these procedures. [128990]

Paul Goggins: Where release of a prisoner is discretionary, a variety of reports from a number of different sources are produced to assess a prisoner's suitability for release, and to inform the decision making process. These may include specific assessments designed for sex offenders. The assessment process is kept under review.

Parliamentary Questions

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many questions directed to him remain unanswered. [130763]

Fiona Mactaggart: The current number of parliamentary questions directed to the Secretary of State for the Home Department yet to be answered is 320.

Passports

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to deny visa-waived entrance to EU passport holders who carry passports without modern security features. [128661]

Beverley Hughes: Under EC law, EU nationals must be admitted to the United Kingdom if they produce, on arrival, a valid passport or national identity card issued by an EU State, regardless of the security features contained in those documents. Therefore there are no plans to introduce visa requirements for EU passport or identity card holders.

The European Community currently has a general power that would enable it to agree provisions on security features on identity cards, residence permits and passports on the basis of unanimity. This will be reinforced under the draft Constitutional Treaty which will provide a specific unanimity legal base and will raise the profile of EU competency in this area.

This will allow the European Community to actively press for improved levels of security and quality in all member states' identity documents.

Peaceful Demonstrations

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the use of powers under the Terrorism Act 2000 in relation to peaceful demonstrations. [130221]

Mr. Blunkett: Powers under the Terrorism Act 2000 are available to police to prevent acts of terrorism, and to aid investigation into terrorist activities. The use of such powers at any demonstration should be only for these purposes.

Where specific concerns arise, I have sought reviews from the relevant force and they in turn have taken appropriate steps to review their own operational procedures.

Performance Targets (Criminal Justice System)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the SR2002 public service agreement targets are for the criminal justice system with effect from April 2003. [128875]

Paul Goggins: The Home Office's public service agreement targets, with effect from April 2003, were agreed with Her Majesty's Treasury as part of the 2002 Spending Review. They were laid before the House, on 15 July 2002, in the White paper '2002 Spending Review: Public Service Agreements' (Cm 5571), a copy of which was placed in the Library.

These targets are shared with the Department for Constitutional Affairs and the Crown Prosecution Service.

Details of the public service agreement targets from SR2002 are also available on the Her Majesty's Treasury website www.hm-treasury.gov.uk.

Police

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers were licensed to carry firearms in each year since 1997. [129940]

Ms Blears: The number of authorised firearms officers (AFOs) in police forces in England and Wales for years 1997-2002 are shown in the table.

	Number of authorised firearms officers (AFOs)
1996-97	6,738
1997-98	6,585
1998-99	6,308
1999-2000	6,262
2000-01	6,064
2001-02	5,776

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the more flexible working practices in the Police Service are that are referred to on page 46 of the 2003 Departmental Report. [130505]

Ms Blears: A number of more flexible working practices were implemented in April 2003, as part of the reforms to police pay and conditions agreed by the Police Negotiating Board in May 2002. They are:

A national target of a 15 per cent. reduction in overtime expenditure by 2005–06, designed to give officers a healthier work life balance;

A change from annual rosters to three-month rosters;

Removal of the 16-hour a week minimum requirement for part-time working;

Removal of the requirement for job-sharing in middle and senior ranks; and

Rationalisation of the system of allowances.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the work of the Police Standards Unit in assisting forces which are having difficulty meeting volume crime targets. [130491]

Ms Blears: The Police Standards Unit's (PSU) work with police forces to address performance issues is initiated where there are gaps in performance across a range of indicators, including key volume crime indicators. The full range of indicators were set out in the National Policing Plan 2003–06. The PSU is also leading the development of the Policing Performance Assessment Framework (PPAF) which aims to provide a broader balanced score approach to performance assessment.

While each PSU project is subject to scrutiny and review, no formal assessment has been made to quantify the impact of this work on meeting specific volume crime targets in forces. PSU is making, and will continue to make, a significant impact in assisting forces to improve their performance.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made by police forces in England and Wales in emulating the best practice highlighted by the National Centre for Policing Excellence. [130506]

Ms Blears: The National Centre for Policing Excellence was launched in April 2003 to increase the professional capacity of the police by identifying and disseminating evidence-based best practice. In 2002–03, it produced a knowledge map on street robbery which has been available to all forces on the Criminal Justice Extranet. It is too early, however, to judge how effective this good practice guidance has been in improving the professional capability of the Police Service.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police forces in England and Wales have signed up to the best practice standards in the use of the National Intelligence Model. [130507]

Ms Blears: The National Policing Plan commits all forces in England and Wales to be National Intelligence Model (NIM) compliant by April 2004. Implementation is supported by Home Office funding. Regular assessments of progress are taking place and development plans are in place within forces where appropriate.

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what appraisals of the safety and reliability records of different types of pistols are being undertaken in relation to weapons recommended for police use. [130697]

Ms Blears: All forces are required to notify the Police Scientific Development Branch (who are part of the Home Office) of any failures or defects in weapons or ammunition in order that an assessment can be made as to whether there is a need for further investigation and potential circulation of information to all forces.

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the manufacturers of pistols used by UK police forces; and if he will indicate for each manufacturer which other Western European police forces use weapons of that manufacture. [130698]

Ms Blears: Decisions on the make of pistols used by UK police forces would be a matter for chief officers. Information on the weapons used by other European police forces is not available.

Prisons

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what research his Department has commissioned into the effect of prison overcrowding on prisoners, what his evaluation is of this research; and if he will make a statement; [124597]

(2) what research his Department has commissioned on the effect of prison overcrowding on (a) prison staff morale and (b) safety in prisons; and if he will make a statement. [124598]

Paul Goggins: Prison overcrowding is carefully managed within agreed operating capacities at each establishment. Operating capacities are the total number of prisoners that an establishment can hold taking into account control, security and the proper operation of the planned regime. Prison Service area managers determine such capacities on the basis of operational judgement and experience.

No specific research projects have been undertaken into the effects of overcrowding on prisoners. However, we do keep under careful review the impact of population pressures, including overcrowding, on prisoners and staff in all prisons. There are a number of measures that can be used to assess the effects, for example, by the monitoring of regime performance, we know that population pressures are not yet significantly affecting the provision of rehabilitative schemes in prisons. It is inevitable though that at times of high population pressures, such provision may become disrupted.

The Prison Service is taking steps to ensure the safety of prisoners and to mitigate against the effect of overcrowding.

For example, The Prison Service is in the final year of a three-year safer custody programme to develop policies and practices to reduce prisoner suicide and self-harm in prisons. The programme includes a series of inter-related projects to improve pre-reception, reception and induction arrangements; inter-agency information exchange; prisoner care; detoxification; prisoner peer support, and the learning from investigations into deaths in custody. Over the next few months the outcome of this programme will be reviewed taking into account an evaluation of these projects and emerging research findings.

The Prison Service also keeps under review the distance between where prisoners are accommodated and their home areas. The Prison Service aims to hold prisoners in establishments that provide the degree of security they require; are suitable to their gender, age and legal status; provide special facilities appropriate to prisoner needs or are near to their homes or the courts dealing with their cases. High population levels throughout the prison estate can lead to prisoners being transferred from their home area to establishments where there are vacancies. However, evidence shows that over the last two years there has been little change in the proportion of prisoners held either under or more than 50 miles from their home area.

There is, however, no evidence to suggest that population pressures compromise public security. Since 1992–93, the number of escapes from prison has significantly fallen from 232 in 1992–93 to five in 2002–03. This is despite an increase of around 50 per cent. in the average prison population over the same period.

The number of assaults across the Prison Service fell in 2001–02 in comparison to figures for 2000–01. There was an increase in assaults in 2002–03, but early indications are that there may be a slight decrease in the number of such incidents for 2003–04. Minimising the number of incidents is essential to the safe custody of prisoners and to the protection of prisoners and staff. While it is expected that the number of incidents will increase as the prison population rises, it should be recognised that the majority of incidents other than escapes, assaults and deaths are quickly and safely resolved through the use of good contingency planning and incident resolution procedures.

While there has been no research into effects of overcrowding on Prison Service staff, an annual staff survey asks staff, as part of a range of questions, and as an indication of motivation about job satisfaction, whether they feel safe in their working environment. 67 per cent. of staff that responded to the 2002 survey said that they felt safe in their working environment. The survey itself does not directly research the effects of overcrowding on staff attitudes and morale. It cannot, therefore, identify whether the reasons for this response rate can be directly attributed to overcrowding.

A copy of the surveys and their outcomes are held in the Library.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign citizens were in prison in England and Wales in each year between 1992 and 2002; and if he will make a statement. [128607]

Paul Goggins: The numbers of foreign nationals in prisons in England and Wales on 30 June of each year between 1993 and 2002 are given in the table. Information for 1992 is not available.

Year	Number
1993	3,503
1994	3,781
1995	4,089
1996	4,259
1997	4,677
1998	5,133
1999	5,388
2000	5,587
2001	6,926
2002	7,718

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his answer of 6 March 2003, Official Report, column 1243W, on prisons, on the basis of which scenario term projections set out in the Home Office Prison Population Brief, England and Wales: March 2003 (27/08/03) the forecast average population for 1995–2006 is calculated; and if he will make a statement. [129219]

Paul Goggins: The projected prison population for 2003–2006 in the answer given by my hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, Central (Hilary Benn) on 6 March 2003, Official Report, Column 1244W, was scenario C published in Home Office Statistical Bulletin 14/02 in December 2002. It assumes that custody rates increase by 1.25 per cent. per year for males and 2.5 per cent. for females to 2005, with the increase halving thereafter.

The legislative and other changes that are included in the projection are given as follows.

'Narrowing the Justice Gap'—one of the delivery targets for the Criminal Justice System.

Crime (Sentences) Act 1997—automatic life sentences for serious repeat offenders; minimum custodial sentences of three years for thire-time domestic burglars.

Crime and Disorder Act 1997— the recall of short sentence prisoners released on licence; the extension of secure remands.

Early release from Detention and Taining Orders (DTOs).

Intensive Supervision and Surveillance Programmes (ISSPs).

Added days—effect of a decision by the European Court of Human Rights.

The number of Immigration Act detainees

Extension of Home Detention Curfew (HDC)—the maximum period of HDC to be increased to 90 days for those prisoners eligible from 16 December 2002.

An updated set of prison population projections was released on Tuesday 9 September in the April 2003 monthly brief. The projections take into account recent policy changes, such as the extension to HDC in July, and sentencing trends.

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to ensure that staff in private prisons receive adequate training to enable them to deal with sophisticated prisoners. [129421]

Paul Goggins: The contracts for the operation of private sector prisons already require that staff are provided with adequate and appropriate training. Prisoner Custody Officers (PCOs) must therefore undertake an ongoing training programme, which is equivalent to that of public sector prison officers and is monitored by the on-site Correctional Services controller. Issues such as manipulation and conditioning by prisoners are covered in regular security awareness training courses.

Probation Service

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans the National Probation Directorate has further to outsource probation service functions. [124965]

Paul Goggins: There is a long history of providing probation services in partnership with the voluntary and private sector. The Criminal Justice Bill indicates a significant increase in the use of community penalties and further outsourcing will be considered in order to ensure that qualified and experienced probation staff are used where they will have greatest impact. At present there are no firm plans as to how this might be done. Where competition and collaboration are able to help improve performance and increase capacity this will be given serious consideration.

Project Reflex

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the agencies involved in Project Reflex; and the resources allocated to each. [130501]

Beverley Hughes: Reflex is chaired by the Director General of the National Crime Squad and includes similar representatives from INDIS (Immigration and Nationality Directorate Intelligence Service), NCIS (National Criminal Intelligence Service), Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO), the Home Office, Europol, Kent Police, ACPO (Association of Chief Police Officers), Crown Prosecution Service (CPS), Cabinet Office and the Intelligence Services.

Other UK regional police forces (eg Merseyside and South Yorkshire) have received support from Reflex operations against organised immigration crime.

In the SR2000 spending review, Reflex received £22.5 million over three years. A breakdown is set out in the table.

Agency	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04
NCS[1]	3.4	4.0	4.8
NCIS	0.8	1.3	1.4
IND	1.5	1.7	1.9
Security and Intelligence agencies	0.6	0.5	0.6
Total	6.3	7.5	8.7

[1] CS figure includes additional project fund used to support operations by other agencies.

An additional £20 million is being made available to support Reflex activities in 2003–04.

Public Lavatories (Sexual Activity)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his policy on sexual activity in public lavatories. [130431]

Paul Goggins: The Government believe that no-one should have to witness sexual activity in public lavatories. While the Government believe that current legislation does cover such activity, it is sympathetic to the aim of ensuring that there is no doubt that sexual activity in public toilets is unlawful. It has, therefore, tabled, during the Committee Stage in the House of Commons, amendments to Clause 67 of the Sexual Offences Bill, which proposes a new offence of "sexual activity in a public lavatory", to make explicit that such behaviour is unlawful and to ensure that the offence will be workable in practice.

Rape

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether reports of drug rape since 2001 have involved the presence of a drug which had not before been known as a drug rape drug. [129668]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 16 September 2003]: A large number of sedative drugs (controlled and medicinal) could potentially be used to facilitate rape. The Forensic Science Service say that no new drug is being regularly detected in cases of drug rape reported to them over the last two years.

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether forensic medical examiners are in receipt of specific training about the symptoms and effects of drugs which have been used in rape cases. [129672]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 16 September 2003]: The Forensic Science Service (FSS) is developing a Toxicology Awareness module to be incorporated into Forensic Medical Examiner training, which is currently supplied by FSS. The aims of the module are to discuss case results specific to the police force concerned and compare these with national results, thereby raising general awareness.

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of forensic nurses in supporting rape complainants. [129781]

Caroline Flint: The Violence against Women Initiative under the Crime Reduction Programme has funded projects to provide support to victims of rape and sexual assault, and to find out what works in reducing attrition within the criminal justice system. One of these projects, St. Mary's Sexual Assault Referral Centre in Manchester, has trained a female nurse to conduct forensic examinations and provide evidence in court. The findings from the evaluation of this project are expected to be published at the end of this year.

Refugees

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether in the last six months refugee status has been granted to persons in respect of whom extradition proceedings had begun; and if he will make a statement. [130866]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 18 September 2003]: Refugee status has been granted on one occasion in the last six months to a person who was the subject of extradition proceedings.

Removal Centre (Haslar)

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans there are for the development of the removal centre at Haslar. [131266]

Beverley Hughes: There are no plans at present to develop the removal centre at Haslar.

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions have been held with Gosport borough council about the development of the removal centre at Haslar. [131267]

Beverley Hughes: No meetings have taken place with Gosport borough council about the development of the removal centre at Haslar. There are currently no plans to extend or develop Haslar.

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what planning procedure and public consultation the Government propose to undertake with regard to development of the removal centre at Haslar. [131268]

Beverley Hughes: If we planned any development of the removal centre at Haslar, we would consult with the council and other interested parties at a very early stage. There are however no plans for any development or expansion at Haslar.

Reoffending

Mr. Keith Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders who have been placed on an Intensive Supervision and Surveillance Programme have re-offended during the course of the programme. [129180]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 11 September 2003]: The Intensive Supervision and Surveillance Programme was launched in 2001 to provide the courts with a tough community based programme designed to tackle persistent young offenders. It currently provides for approximately 3,500 young offenders a year at an annual cost of £21.5million. Additional funding of £2 million has been made available for national roll-out, providing for a total of 4,200 persistent young offenders annually from January 2004. The programme is being fully evaluated by Oxford University; the final report with an analysis of reconvictions is due in March 2004. It is not possible at present to provide a comprehensive answer to my hon. Friend's question.

Repeat Offending (Drugs)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of repeat offending among problem drug-misusing offenders there have been in each of the last six years. [130481]

Caroline Flint: Data are not collected in this way. But the New English and Welsh Arrestee Drug Abuse Monitoring (NEW-ADAM) research programme, which involved interviewing and drug testing a sample of those arrested by the police in 1999–2000, reported that 15 per cent. of arrestees were classed as drug misusing repeat offenders (defined as arrestees who reported using heroin and/or cocaine or crack at least once a week who reported two or more income-generating offences per month).

New nationally-representative measures of drug-related crime are being developed, including a new Arrestee Survey able to provide national estimates of drug-related crime, which commenced in September 2003 and replaces the NEW-ADAM research programme.

Road Safety

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many deaths there have been on roads in (a) 1997 and (b) 2002 as a result of people using a mobile telephone whilst driving. [130751]

Mr. Jamieson: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is not available as the official road casualty statistics which are collected by the police and reported to the Department using the STATS 19 accident report format does not currently include information on mobile phones.

Seasonal Agricultural Workers Scheme

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the number of participants in the Seasonal Agricultural Workers' Scheme. [130499]

Beverley Hughes: The quota for the Seasonal Agricultural Workers' Scheme for 2003 is 25,000. We expect most of those places to be filled.

Security Industry Authority

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were employed by the Security Industry Authority on (a) 1 April and (b) 1 July. [130474]

Ms Blears: The Security Industry Authority had 33 staff on 1 April 2003 and 35 staff on 1 July 2003. In each case the figures include 13 staff on secondment from government departments, mainly the Home Office.

Sentencing Powers (Juveniles)

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what circumstances courts can impose (a) a detention and training order and (b) any other custody-based sentence on juveniles aged under 15, who have been found guilty of breaching an anti-social behaviour order. [129115]

Paul Goggins: Where a juvenile aged 15 or more but under 18 breachesan anti-social behaviour order (ASBO), the youth court can impose any sentence up to and including a Detention and Training Order (DTO). No other custodial sentence is available for such cases. It is for the court to decide which sentence is appropriate, in the light of the young person's background, home surroundings and family circumstances.

Sexual Offences

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people in (a) 2000, (b) 2001 and (c) 2002 were proceeded against in the UK for outraging public decency where this was the principal offence; and how many of these were found to be guilty; [128637]

(2) what the conviction rate was for persons proceeded against in the UK for outraging public decency where this was the principal offence, in each of the last five years. [128638]

Paul Goggins: The information requested, for England and Wales, is contained in the table.

Figures for Scotland are a matter for the Scottish Office and those for Northern Ireland for the Northern Ireland Office.

Statistics for 2002 will be published in December.

Number of persons[1] proceeded against at magistrates' courts, found guilty at all courts and the conviction rate for the Common Law offence of "Outraging public decency", England and Wales 1997 and 2001

Year	Proceeded against	Found guilty	Conviction rate[2] (percentage)
1997	47	13	28
1998	42	28	67
1999	86	26	30
2000[3]	121	31	26
2001	164	34	21

[1] These data are on the principal offence basis.
[2] Persons found guilty at all courts as a percentage of persons proceeded against at magistrates' courts—as notified to the Home Office.
[3] Staffordshire Police were only able to submit sample data for persons proceeded against and convicted at magistrates' courts in 2000. Although sufficient to estimate higher orders of data, these data are not robus enough at a detailed level and have been excluded from the table.

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received on the effectiveness of the Sex Offenders Registry. [127839]

Paul Goggins: The purpose of the notification requirements of Part 1 of the Sex Offenders Act 1997 (commonly known as the Sex Offenders' Register) is that the police know the names and addresses of the most serious sex offenders living in their area. This is one of a number of tools which enable them to protect the public more effectively.

We have received no specific representations on the effectiveness of the register. However, we receive a large number of letters on the Sex Offenders Act, which sometimes raise, among other issues, the effectiveness of the register as it applies in individual cases.

The most useful measure of effectiveness for the 'register' itself is the level of compliance with the notification requirements. We estimate that nationally around 97 per cent. of offenders currently on the 'register' are complying fully with the notification requirements.

Shop Workers (Violence)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the Union of Shop, Distributive and Allied Workers on its campaign to try to prevent violence against shop workers. [130580]

Ms Blears: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has accepted an invitation from the Union of Shop, Distributive and Allied Workers (USDAW) to attend the launch of their "National Respect for Shop Workers" day which took place on 17 September 2003. Separate meetings are being held by Home Office Ministers with USDAW representatives.

The Government are very grateful to USDAW for the work it has undertaken to raise awareness of this issue. We fully understand the detrimental effect crime against business has throughout the community and the damaging effect on people's lives, their businesses and their families. Any form of violence is totally unacceptable and should not be tolerated.

Somali Community

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what organisations representing the Somali community he has met in development of his Department's multi-ethnic policies. [129742]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 15 September 2003]: A number of organisation representing the Somali community have met officials at the Immigration and Nationality Directorate or participated in Home Office research projects relating to asylum seekers and refugee integration.

Stewart Report

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what account he took of the recommendation of the Stewart Report that amplitude modulation around 16 Hz should be avoided in the commissioning of the new police TETRA telecommunications systems; and what assessment he has made of the implications of the information available on potential health problems arising from this system for the continued use of the system. [129765]

Ms Blears: The Stewart report stated that "as a precautionary measure, amplitude modulation around 16 Hz should be avoided, if possible, in future developments in signal coding". TETRA technology was already well established at the time the Stewart report was published.

Expert advice was sought from the National Radiological Protection Board's independent Advisory Group on Non-ionising Radiation (AGNIR). The AGNIR experts concluded that it was unlikely that the special features of TETRA technology could pose a risk to health.

In addition, as recommended by AGNIR, the Home Office has set up an extensive research programme on the potential health effects of TETRA. All results to date confirm that TETRA technology is safe. Further information is available on the Home Office website (www.homeoffice.gov.uk/docs/tetra.html).

Street Crime Courts

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effect of the establishment of designated street crime courts. [130513]

Mr. Leslie: I have been asked to reply.

The Street Crime Initiative (SCI) was a co-ordinated inter-departmental and inter-agency response to escalating robbery figures early in 2002. The 70 designated courts were part of the contribution which the Court Service provided to the SCI.

The 26 Crown Courts and 44 magistrates courts have been collecting and providing data to the Department on a monthly basis and the monitoring of the throughput of cases continues. Street crime cases are not fast tracked but special attention is given to them to avoid unnecessary delay. The latest data presented to the Prime Minster's Street Crime Action Group Meeting in July revealed that street crime cases were disposed of, on average, within 135 days, compared to 178 days in respect of non-street crime cases proceeding in the same courts. All courts were well within the Department for Constitutional Affairs' target for the Crown Court, which is that 78 per cent. of cases sent to them should be listed within 182 days.

Vehicle Crime

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress in meeting his target to reduce vehicle crime by 30 per cent. by 2004. [130489]

Ms Blears: We have made significant progress towards meeting our target of reducing vehicle crime by 30 per cent. between 1999 and 2004. British Crime Survey estimates based on interviews in the year ended March 2003 (published in July 2003) show 2,366,000 vehicle crimes. This is a reduction of 576,000 offences (20 per cent.) against the 1999 baseline of 2,942,000 offences (published as British Crime Survey 2000).

We recognise the importance of driving down vehicle crime still further, and a wide range of work is in progress to this end.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effect of the national publicity campaign to highlight how to avoid becoming a victim of vehicle crime. [130508]

Ms Blears: The campaign, which is now in its fourth year, continues to achieve its objectives of successfully getting across to motorists key car crime prevention messages and engaging "brand partners" (that is, private companies and other organisations) to amplify those messages to their customers and staff.

Research shows that 84 per cent. of those sampled recognised the vehicle crime prevention advertising when prompted and, of these, 88 per cent. claimed they made sure that nothing was left on view when they parked in a public place. These are very high rates. In addition, 19 "brand partners" have joined the campaign, undertaking marketing activity to a value of over £3.2 million and extending the reach of the campaign to an equivalent audience of 35 million people.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what evaluation has been made of the impact of the pilot exercises, using the DVLA database to communicate car crime prevention measures. [130509]

Ms Blears: The initiative was piloted in parts of Bristol, Coventry and Middlesbrough local authority areas for 12 weeks from 28 October 2002. Vehicle crime figures for the precise areas covered by the pilots are not available. But figures for larger areas covering central Bristol and Middlesbrough showed reductions of 22 per cent. and 23 per cent. respectively in the period November 2002-January 2003 when the pilots were running. Coventry's vehicle crime figures showed no change.

Recipients of car crime prevention advice in the pilots were sent questionnaires seeking their views on the exercise. A total of 627 recipients responded and 95 per cent. of the responses were supportive. The Association of Chief Police Officers, the Local Government Association and the three local authorities involved all thought the initiative was worthwhile and should be expanded.

Voluntary Community Activities

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of (a) the number of people engaged in voluntary community activities and (b) the total number of man hours of voluntary community service delivered in each of the last seven years. [130702]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information is as follows:

(a) The 2001 Home Office Citizenship Survey, published on 16 September 2003, provides the following information on "voluntary and community activities", which include civic participation, informal volunteering, and formal volunteering. In the last 12 months 38 per cent. of people aged 16 and over in England and Wales engaged in civic participation (e.g. signing a petition, contacting public officials or elected representatives, attending a public meeting or rally or taking part in a public meeting or protest). This is equivalent to 15.9 million people. In the last 12 months 67 per cent. of people aged 16 and over in England and Wales volunteered informally (as individuals) at least once. This is equivalent to approximately 27.8 million people. In the last 12 months 39 per cent. of people aged 16 and over in England and Wales volunteered formally (through groups, clubs and organisations) at least once. This is equivalent to approximately 16.2 million people.

(b) The 2001 Home Office Citizenship Survey shows that in 2001 the contribution of people aged 16 and over who volunteered informally at least once in the last 12 months in England and Wales totalled approximately 1.8 billion hours. The contribution of people aged 16 and over who volunteered formally at least once in the last 12 months in England and Wales totalled approximately 1.7 billion hours.

These data are only available for 2001. Results from the 2003 Home Office Citizenship Survey will be available during 2004. Separate data, collected as part of the 1997 National Survey of Volunteering is not directly comparable to the findings of the 2001 Home Office Citizenship Survey.

West Mercia Constabulary

Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what total funding for West Mercia police was per head of population in each year since 1997 from (a) Government grant and (b) precept. [127586]

Ms Blears: The funding of the police authority net budget per head of population in each year since 1997 from (a) Government grant and (b) precept was as follows:

£

	Total funding per head of population from
	(a) Government grant	(b) Precept
1996–97	79.88	15.38
1997–98	81.53	17.45
1998–99	81.49	18.57
1999–2000	85.48	20.52
2000–01	91.09	26.13
2001–02	94.09	27.62
2002–03	97.42	37.50
2003–04	100.79	42.88

Note:

Funding includes Home Office police grant and Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) revenue support grant and national non domestic rates and Standard Standing Assessment (SSA) reduction grant, Crime Fighting Fund, Rural Grant, Airwave, Basic Command Unit (BCD) funding, Community Support Officer funding, special priority payments, DMA Expansion programme and capital grant.

Sources:

1. For population data (and police grant in 1993–94 and 1994–95) is the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy police statistics (Actuals to 2001–02 and Estimates 2002–03). Figures for 2003–04 are not yet available so the estimated population figure for 2002–03 has been used.

2. For precept information is the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister.

Peter Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) community support officers, (b) street wardens and (c) neighbourhood wardens there are in (i) West Mercia constabulary and (ii) The Wrekin. [127830]

Ms Blears: West Mercia Constabulary has recruited 10 Community Support Officers (CSOs) to date which are fully funded by the Home Office. By the end of this financial year, they will have recruited a further 45 CSOs, of which 30 are part-funded by the Home Office.

The Wrekin is to be allocated 21 of the new CSOs of which six will be fully funded by Wrekin council and two by Wrekin Housing Trust.

In the area covered by West Mercia Constabulary there are two Street Warden schemes with seven wardens between them and one Neighbourhood Warden scheme with two wardens. Of these nine wardens, two are deployed as Street Wardens in the Wrekin.

Vulnerable Witnesses

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact of the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 on the experience of vulnerable witnesses. [128648]

Paul Goggins: The Home Office has commissioned a consortium of researchers to conduct an evaluation of special measures for vulnerable and intimidated witnesses (VIWs). The aims of the research are: (1) to evaluate how well the special measures have been implemented throughout the criminal justice system (CJS); and (2) to examine the experience of VIWs before and after the implementation of special measures in Crown Courts. The latter was addressed using pre and post-implementation surveys. The pre-implementation survey was conducted in 2000 and published in 2001 (Home Office Research Findings 147). This report can be found on the Home Office website at: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs/r147.pdf

The post-implementation survey was conducted in 2003 and is currently being written-up. The survey work will help determine: whether the introduction of special measures has been accompanied by an increase in VIWs' satisfaction with the CJS, to what extent provisions for VIWs have changed with the implementation of special measures; and VIWs attitudes to the special measures. Home Office Research and Development Statistics expect to publish a full report next year.

Yarlswood

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the contracts made between his Department and all contractors relating to the (a) construction, (b) administration and operation and (c) insurance of the Yarlswood removal centre. [129680]

Beverley Hughes: The contract to design build and operate the Yarlswood Immigration Removal Centre was awarded to Group 4 Amey Immigration Ltd. (GAIL) following a competitive tender. Each contract has to be considered individually and a range of tests applied to ascertain if its disclosure would adversely affect the parties involved. At present, the contract is being amended to enable the refurbishment and revised operation of the centre. Once these amendments are finalised, I will ensure that a copy of the contract is placed in the Library in due course, provided that it meets the test above.

Youth Justice Board

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people are employed by the Youth Justice Board; and what has been the percentage staff turnover in each of the last six years. [130477]

Paul Goggins: The Youth Justice Board currently employs 138 permanent staff. The percentage staff turnover in the five years since the Board was established, as calculated from September to September using the total staff numbers in post at the end of each 12-month period, has been 1998–99 (0 per cent.), 1999–2000 (3.7 per cent.), 2000–01 (15.5 per cent.), 2001–02 (17 per cent.) and 2002–03 (5.1 per cent.).

HEALTH

Abortions

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on psychological services provided to women who have had abortions. [129046]

Miss Melanie Johnson: It is for primary care trusts, which commission abortion services, to consider whether psychological services should be available for women who have had an abortion. The Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists' evidence-based guideline, "The Care of Women Requesting Induced Abortion (2000)", considered the mental health implications of termination and concluded only a small minority of women experience any long term, adverse psychological consequences after abortion and that referral for further counselling should be available for those women.

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has assessed into possible links between abortions and breast cancer. [129047]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department funded the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists' evidence-based guideline "The Care of Women Requesting Induced Abortion (2000)". This stated that the available evidence on an association between induced abortion and breast cancer is inconclusive. Cancer Research UK is undertaking a study, which is considering the full range of potential risk factors for breast cancer. This is an important and complex international research project. We understand that Cancer Research UK intends to publish the work when it is available.

Accident and Emergency Departments

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when the next review of targets in Accident and Emergency departments is scheduled to take place; [127643]

(2) whether he plans to change the guidelines on the four-hour access targets for accident and emergency departments. [130167]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Oxford, West and Abingdon (Dr. Harris) on 17 September 2003, Official Report, column 838W.

Acupuncture

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to propose statutory regulation of the acupuncture profession. [130317]

Mr. Hutton: A working group has been established by the Department and the Prince of Wales's foundation for integrated health to develop recommendations for the statutory regulation of acupuncture. The working group is currently finalising its recommendations and is due to report shortly. A parallel working group is also finalising recommendations for the statutory regulation of herbal medicine. Following the publication of the working groups' reports, the Department will carry out a full public consultation on the statutory regulation of acupuncture and herbal medicine.

"Agenda for Change"

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when his Department is planning to start implementing "Agenda for Change" nationwide. [130163]

Mr. Hutton: The United Kingdom Health Departments, staff representative organisations and the national health service confederation agreed earlier this year that the new NHS pay system should be introduced in a number of "early implementer" sites from June 2003, with a view to implementing the new system nationally from October 2004 subject to any appropriate action that is needed to address any concerns arising from the "early implementer" phase.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which trusts have been chosen to pilot "Agenda for Change"; and when the pilots are due to begin. [130164]

Mr. Hutton: The following national health service trusts and primary care trusts were selected as 'early implementer' sites for the new NHS pay system. They began the process of implementation in June 2003:

James Paget Healthcare NHS Trust

Guy's and St. Thomas' Hospital NHS Trust

City Hospitals Sunderland NHS Trust

Papworth Hospital NHS Trust

Aintree Hospitals NHS Trust

Avon and Wiltshire Mental Health Partnership NHS Trust

South West London and St. George's Mental Health NHS Trust

West Kent NHS and Social Care Trust

Herefordshire NHS Primary Care Trust

Central Cheshire Primary Care Trust

North East Ambulance Service NHS Trust

East Anglian NHS Trust

Alcohol (Health Warnings)

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions he has had with regard to the displaying of health warnings on alcohol beverages. [129209]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Government are committed to ensuring that everyone has a right to know how much alcohol they are drinking and what the safe limits for consumption are. As part of the work to develop a national alcohol harm reduction strategy, the strategy unit is working closely with other Government Departments and will be looking at the most effective way of achieving this. The strategy is due to be published towards the end of 2003 and implemented from 2004.

Food Packaging

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his policy is on the use of the phrase 'may contain nuts' on food packaging. [130091]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I am advised that the Food Standards Agency (FSA) wish to see this type of phrase used responsibly on food labels—only being used when strictly necessary and being worded in a manner that allows consumers with food allergies to make informed choices about what they eat. The FSA has held discussions with a wide range of interested parties and will shortly seek comments on an alternative phrase and guidance to industry.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he plans to amend the regulations on allergy-related labelling on food. [130092]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have been advised by the Food Standards Agency that a new European Directive on allergen labelling of food is in the process of being finalised in Brussels. This will strengthen existing labelling legislation, helping to ensure that consumers are provided with comprehensive information about the ingredients of foods and that those with food allergies are able to identify products they may wish to avoid.

Alzheimer's Disease

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many Alzheimer's patients are in (a) private and (b) NHS care homes in the United Kingdom; [129514]

(2) how many Alzheimer's patients entered (a) private and (b) NHS care homes in the United Kingdom in each of the last three years; [129515]

(3) what the average care home costs were to the NHS for each Alzheimer's patient in each of the last three years; [129516]

(4) how much was spent by the NHS on care home costs for Alzheimer's disease patients in each of the last three years; [129517]

(5) how many (a) moderate and (b) severe Alzheimer's disease patients were diagnosed in the United Kingdom in each of the last three years. [129518]

Dr. Ladyman: Data are not collected on the number of people with Alzheimer's disease, in the population generally or in care homes in particular, or about the care home costs of people with Alzheimer's.

Research evidence shows that about five per cent. of the population who are aged over 65 have dementia. This represents about 600,000 people in the United Kingdom. Alzheimer's disease causes up to 60 per cent. of cases of dementia.

While data are not available specifically about care home costs for people with Alzheimer's, the average weekly fee for residential care in England at March 2003 was £336.50.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent by the NHS on drug treatments for (a) moderate and (b) severe Alzheimer's disease patients in each of the last three years. [129519]

Dr. Ladyman: The table shows how much was spent, over the last three years, on drug treatments for mild to moderate and moderate to severe Alzheimer's disease. This data cover all prescription items that were dispensed in the community in England. This includes drugs that were prescribed in hospitals or clinics, which are dispensed in the community. However, the data do not include drugs that are dispensed in hospitals/clinics or private prescriptions.

Number of prescription items (thousand) and net ingredient cost (£000) of drugs used for dementia that are dispensed in the community in England, 2000–02

	2000		2001		2002
Drugs for dementia	Prescription items (thousand)	Net ingredient cost (£000)	Prescription items (thousand)	Net ingredient cost (£000)	Prescription items (thousand)	Net ingredient cost (£000)
Drugs used for mild to moderate Alzheimer's disease
Donepezil Hydrochloride	43.6	4,178.2	91.2	8,815.3	169.3	16,078.3
Galantamine	0.2	13.6	11.3	880.2	31.1	2,469.9
Rivastigmine	9.9	681.0	19.7	1,309.2	30.5	1,997.9
Drugs used for moderate to severe Alzheimer's disease
Memantine Hydrochloride	—	—	—	—	0.3	21.1
All drugs for dementia	53.8	4,872.8	122.1	11,004.6	231.3	20,567.1

Notes:

1. The prescription information was obtained from the Prescription Cost Analysis (PCA) system and is based on a full analysis of all prescriptions dispensed in the community, ie by community pharmacists and appliance contractors, dispensing doctors, and prescriptions submitted by prescribing doctors for items personally administered in England. Total prescriptions include not only prescriptions originating from general medical practitioners in England but also from hospital doctors, nurses, and dentists, provided they were dispensed in the community. Also included are prescriptions written in Wales, Scotland, Northern Ireland and the Isle of Man but dispensed in England. The data do not cover drugs dispensed in hospital or private prescriptions.
2. Drugs used for dementia are those defined in the British National Formulary (BNF) section 4.11 "Drugs for dementia". Drugs used for dementia have been grouped into those used for mild to moderate and moderate to severe Alzheimer's disease in line with the NICE guidance on drugs for Alzheimers disease. Please refer to the NICE website at www.nice.org.uk for more details.
3. Doctors, dentists or nurses write prescriptions on a prescription form. Each single item written on the form is counted as a prescription item.
4. Net ingredient cost refers to the basic cost (which the dispenser is reimbursed) of the drug before discounts and does not include any dispensing costs or fees.

Data Source:

Prescription Cost Analysis (PCA) data from the Prescription Pricing Authority (PPA).

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what instructions have been offered to PCTs regarding drug prescribing practices for Alzheimer's disease patients. [129520]

Dr. Ladyman: In January 2001, the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) recommended that donepezil (Aricept), rivastigmine (Exelon) and galantamine (Reminyl) should be made available on the national health service as one component of the management of those people with mild to moderate Alzheimer's disease.

Directions have been issued obliging health authorities and primary care trusts to provide appropriate funding for treatments recommended by NICE. The directions came into effect on 1 January 2002.

Anaesthetists

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) consultant and (b) other anaesthetists there were in England in each of the last five years. [129601]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the table.

The number of consultants in anaesthetics (including intensive care) increased by 33.5 per cent., between September 1998 and March 2003.

The total number of doctors in anaesthetics (including intensive care) increased by 21 per cent., between September 1998 and September 2002.

Hospital, Public Health Medicine and Community Health Services (HCHS): Anaesthetists (including intensive care) by grade; September 1998 to March 2003

England[1] Numbers (headcount)

	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002	March 2003
All staff	6,817	7,010	7,264	7,680	8,233	n/a
Consultant	2,978	3,168	3,322	3,595	3,874	3,977
Associate Specialist/Staff Grade	625	681	754	817	885	n/a
Registrar Group	1,629	1,621	1,646	1,686	1,758	n/a
Senior House Officer	1,274	1,248	1,288	1,378	1,498	n/a
House Officer	1	13	21	14	31	n/a
Hospital Practitioner/Clinical Assistant	309	278	233	188	179	n/a
Other Hospital grades	1	1	0	0	0	n/a
Other CHS grades	0	0	0	2	8	n/a

[1] As at 30 September each year except for 2003, which is as at 31 March.
n/a—not available
Source:
Department of Health medical and dental workforce census.

Ancillary Services

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the rate of pay per hour is for (a) cleaners and (b) porters in each acute trust; and which of these trusts have contracted out (i) cleaning and (ii) portering services. [129688]

Dr. Ladyman: Rates of pay for cleaners and porters are not identified separately in the national health service staff earnings survey. Cleaners and porters directly employed by trusts are paid in accordance with national agreements reached by the ancillary staffs' Whitley Council or in accordance with agreements reached locally. The current Whitley rates of pay are set out in advance letter (ASC) 1/2003, a copy of which is available in the Library.

On the subject of trusts where these services have been contracted out, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave her today.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which companies have contracts with NHS acute trusts for carrying out (a) cleaning and (b) portering services; which trusts have contracts with each company; what the commencement date of each contract was; and what the duration of the contract is in each case. [129689]

Dr. Ladyman: A number of companies have contracts with national health service acute trusts for the provision of domestic services.

Information requested relating to each contract—including the specific services provided and the duration—is not collected centrally.

Anti-TNF Therapy

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reason anti-TNF therapy is not available to patients in the Leicester area. [131094]

Dr. Ladyman: Tumour necrosis factor (TNF) therapy has been available to patients in the Leicestershire area since 2002, in line with the National Institute for Clinical Excellence timescale for implementation. It is provided by the University Hospitals of Leicester National Health Service Trust for those patients who meet the criteria which has been agreed by the Trust and the primary care trusts in the area.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many requests for anti-TNF treatment he has received in the last 12 months. [131095]

Dr. Ladyman: We estimate that there has been around 170 letters from right hon. and hon. Members and the public on this subject. There have also been several Parliamentary Questions on anti-TNF therapy and there was an adjournment debate on the care and treatment of rheumatoid arthritis in July.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the cost of providing anti-TNF treatment per patient. [131096]

Dr. Ladyman: In their appraisal of these drugs, the National Institute for Clinical Excellence estimated the costs per patient using the Monthly Index of Medical Specialities, September 2001. Updated costs from the September 2003 edition show that Etanercept costs £178.75 per week when administered at a dose of 25 mg. twice weekly, equivalent to £9,295 per annum. Infliximab costs £451.20 per vial, equivalent to £12,182 in the first year and an average of £8,798 in subsequent years.

Antibiotic-resistant Infections

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many reports there were of antibiotic resistant E. coli in the NHS in (a) England, (b) each region and (c) each strategic health authority in each of the last six years. [128921]

Dr. Ladyman: Under a voluntary reporting scheme, the Health Protection Agency receives reports of E. coli blood stream infections with their susceptibility to antibiotics from microbiology laboratories in England and Wales. Gentamicin resistance is monitored because it is used to treat the more serious E. coli infections.

Table 1 shows data on gentamicin resistance for England and Wales from 1997 to 1999. Data on gentamicin resistance in England, broken down by region, is available only from 2000. This is shown in table 2. Data by strategic health authority is not available.

Table 1: Escherichia coli blood stream infections resistant to gentamicin: England and Wales, 1997 to 1999

	Number resistant
1997	132
1998	161
1999	175

Table 2: Escherichia coli blood stream infections resistant to gentamicin: England by region, 2000 to 2002

	Number resistant
Region	2000	2001	2002
Northern and Yorkshire[1]	12	28	—
North East	—	—	8
Northern and Humberside	—	—	45
East Midlands	21	6	24
Eastern	24	48	58
London	45	30	67
South East	37	54	64
South West	17	20	31
West Midlands	12	15	108
North West	13	17	36
Total	181	218	441

[1] Northern and Yorkshire was divided into two regions—North East and Yorkshire and Humberside—in 2002.

Source:

Health Protection Agency—Communicable Disease Surveillance Centre.

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many reports of MRSA outside hospitals there were in (a) England, (b) each region and (c) each strategic health authority in each of the last six years. [128922]

Dr. Ladyman: A new national mandatory surveillance system for healthcare associated infection started with reporting of methicillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) blood stream infections (bacteraemias), in April 2001. All acute trusts in England now collect this information and results for the first year of this scheme (April 2001 to March 2002) were published by individual trust in the Communicable Disease Report Weekly on 20 June 2002. They are available at www.phls.co.uk/publications/cdr/PDFfiles/2002/cdr2502.pdf.

Information for 2002–03 will be published shortly.

The data do not include information on where the infection was acquired (hospital or elsewhere). However, the majority of cases are acquired in hospital.

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of urinary tract infections resistant to antibiotics were recorded in the NHS in (a) England, (b) each region and (c) each strategic health authority in each of the last six years. [128920]

Miss Melanie Johnson: This information is not held centrally.

Antibiotics

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many antibiotic and antimicrobial drugs were bought by the NHS in each of the last six years; and what the expenditure was on these drugs in each year. [128902]

Dr. Ladyman: There is currently no comprehensive national data available on the costs of antibiotic and antimicrobial drugs in the national health service.

The number of prescription items and the associated net ingredient cost for anti-bacterial drugs (antibiotics), dispensed in the community in England from 1997 to 2002 is shown in the table.

£ million

	Prescription items	Net ingredient cost
1997	46.4	172.0
1998	42.6	163.0
1999	38.6	177.1
2000	36.9	172.2
2001	37.9	162.8
2002	37.0	164.4

Notes:

1. The prescription information was obtained from the Prescription Cost Analysis (PCA) system and is based on a full analysis of all prescriptions dispensed in the community, i.e. by community pharmacists and appliance contractors, dispensing doctors, and prescriptions submitted by prescribing doctors for items personally administered in England. Total prescriptions include not only prescriptions originating from general medical practitioners in England but also from hospital doctors, nurses, and dentists, provided they were dispensed in the community. Also included are prescriptions written in Wales, Scotland, Northern Ireland and the Isle of Man but dispensed in England. The data do not cover drugs dispensed in hospital or private prescriptions.
2. Antibacterial drugs are those defined in the British National Formulary (BNF) section 5.1, "Antibacterial drugs".

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies he has assessed of a possible correlation between GP antibiotic prescribing levels and antibiotic resistance. [128924]

Dr. Ladyman: Prescribing of antimicrobials by general practitioners in England decreased by 16 per cent. between 1996 and 2002, but there is currently no system in place to link prescribing levels to antibiotic resistance.

The Department is currently funding three research projects, which are investigating to link antimicrobial prescribing data to diagnosis and clinical outcome.

Ashford (Middlesex) Hospital

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what new buildings will be provided for the new treatment centre at Ashford (Middlesex) Hospital. [130934]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 18 September 2003]: It is proposed that existing facilities at Ashford Hospital be refurbished to provide an operating theatre and in-patient beds.

Asian Health Indicators

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the health indicators specific to the (a) Indian, (b) Bangladeshi and (c) Pakistani communities. [131007]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The public assessment of the national health service through indicators is the responsibility of the Commission for Health Improvement the independent regulator of NHS performance.

The Department's strategy for meeting the needs of minority ethnic communities is to set action on race equality within the overall framework for planning and delivering the Department's priorities. The Department has a detailed programme of work under way to take forward our race equality commitments and has strengthened the arrangements for supporting and accounting for progress on race equality.

Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many individuals have been diagnosed with attention deficit hyperactivity disorder. [130262]

Dr. Ladyman: This information is not collected centrally. The National Institute for Clinical Excellence appraisal of the use of methylphenidate in treating attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD) estimated the prevalence of all types of ADHD at around 5 per cent. of school-aged children, approximately 345,000 of six to 16-year-olds in England.

Autistic Spectrum Disorders

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of using coloured spectacle lenses in the treatment of children with autistic spectrum disorders. [128701]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 9 September 2003]: There is currently little evidence in this area and we are not aware of any widely accepted benefits to specific groups such as children on the autistic spectrum. We will, however, continue to consider the issue as evidence becomes available.

Batten's Disease

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what funding has been given to research of Batten's Disease; and how many children he estimates have the condition; [131240]

(2) what steps his Department has taken to increase the awareness among (a) general practitioners and (b) other health professionals of Batten's Disease. [131241]

Dr. Ladyman: The main agency through which the Government support medical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council (MRC). The MRC has large current portfolios on neurological disorders and genetics. However, none of this research is specifically into Batten's disease. Nevertheless, this work includes a considerable amount of underpinning research that may be of relevance. The MRC has funded some research on Batten's disease in the past and currently carries out work on the main symptoms of the disease.

Information on the number of children with Batten's disease is not collected centrally.

The Department has for many years provided section 64 funding to Climb (Children Living with Inherited Metabolic Diseases), a voluntary organisation which provides information, advice and support to children suffering from metabolic diseases, including Batten's disease, and their families, as well as educating health care professionals. Climb is currently in receipt of a project grant for £63,220 over the period from 2002–03 to 2005–06.

Breast Cancer

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his Answer of 1 September 2003, Official Report, column 926W, on breast cancer, how many patients aged 85 years and over underwent surgery in (a) 2000 and (b) 2002. [129715]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The number of finished consultant episodes (FCEs) for breast cancer surgery for patients aged 85 and over in national health service hospitals in England is shown in the table.

	Number of finished consultant episodes
1999–2000	895
2000–01	1,045
2001–02	1,012

Source:
Hospitals Episode Statistics Department of Health

Bureaucracy

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many clinically-trained (a) nurses and (b) midwives are working in an administrative position within the NHS. [129595]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Cancelled Operations

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many operations were cancelled at Willesden Community Hospital, London, in the last quarter for which figures are available; what percentage of the cancelled operations were consequently carried out within four weeks; and if he will make a statement; [128761]

(2) how many operations were cancelled at (a) Darent Valley Hospital, Dartford and (b) West Middlesex Hospital, London in the last quarter for which figures are available; what percentage of the cancelled operations were subsequently carried out within four weeks; and if he will make a statement. [128775]

Mr. Hutton: The Department collects quarterly data on 'last minute' cancelled operations for non-clinical reasons at Trust level (i.e. patients cancelled on the day of admission, after admission, or on the day of surgery). Figures for the first quarter of 2003–04 were published on 11 September 2003. Data by individual hospital sites are not collected.

The percentage of cancelled operations that were consequently carried out within four weeks cannot be calculated from the data available. However, data are available for the number of patients who were not treated within four weeks of a last minute cancellation as part of the central data collection arrangements for the NHS Plan cancelled operations guarantee. These data are shown in the table for the respective NHS Trusts for Darent Valley Hospital, Dartford; West Middlesex Hospital, London; and Willesden Community Hospital, London.

	Quarter 1, 2003–04
	Number of last minute cancellations for non-acute clinical reasons	Number of patients not admitted within 28 days of a last minute cancellation
Dartford and Gravesham NHS Trust	37	0
West Middlesex University NHS Trust	20	1
North West London Hospitals NHS Trust	178	0

Note:
The NHS Plan stated that "From 2002, when a patient's operation is cancelled by the hospital on the day of surgery for non clinical reasons, the hospital will have to offer another binding date within a maximum of the next 28 days or fund the patient's treatment at the time and hospital of the patient's choice." From April 2003, the cancelled operations guarantee was extended to apply to cancellations that occur on or after the day of admission.

Cancer Care

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what targets have been set for patients with cancer having pre-planned and pre-booked care; what the baseline is for the target; in which document the target was published; and what progress has been made towards the target. [128911]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The NHS Cancer Plan, published in September 2000, said that the cancer services collaborative would make booking of cancer services a priority, so that by 2004 every patient diagnosed with cancer will benefit from pre-planned and pre-booked care. The NHS Modernisation Agency's cancer services collaborative and the national booked admissions programme are working with national health service trusts to establish booking systems across the NHS by 2005 and to develop systems for monitoring the booking of cancer patients by 2004 within this wider target.

Care Homes

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many care home beds were available in (a) the public sector and (b) the independent sector in each year since 1997. [130209]

Dr. Ladyman: The latest information available on the number of care home places available in the public sector and the independent sector is shown in the table for 1997 to 2001. Figures for later years have been collected by the National Care Standards Commission; it plans to publish them this autumn.

Number of care home places by type of home, England 1997 to 2001

Rounded numbers

As at 31 March	Total all homes[1]	Local authority staffed	Independent[1,2]
1997	534,410	65,820	468,590
1998	553,490	63,980	489,510
1999	546,190	59,030	487,160
2000	539,240	55,460	483,780
2001	528,000	50,860	477,150

[1] Includes dual registered homes.
[2] Includes voluntary, private and small residential homes, all nursing homes, private hospitals and clinics.
Source:
RA form A and RH(N) 1998–2001 (KO36 1997).

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) domiciliary care agency employees, (b) nursing agency employees and (c) care home owners and managers have been convicted of an offence against an elderly resident in a care home in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [130660]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 17 September 2003]: The Department does not hold information on the number of domiciliary care agency employees, nursing agency employees and care home owners or managers who have been convicted of an offence against older residents in care homes.

Under the Care Standards Act 2000, rigorous checks are required on providers, managers and staff of care establishments and agencies, to ensure their suitability to work with vulnerable people and protect these people from neglect or abuse. Regulations made under the Act included requirements for staff to undergo criminal record checks through the Criminal Records Bureau.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Department has for further regulation of the long-term care sector. [130841]

Dr. Ladyman: We announced on 9 September that certain regulations would be amended from 1 October 2003, requiring Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) checks for new domiciliary care staff or nurses agency staff.

The regulations will require existing domiciliary care staff to complete their enhanced CRB checks by 31 October 2004.

Regulations to require checks for existing nursing staff will be introduced once the CRB has made good progress with completing the checks on existing domiciliary and existing care home staff.

We are proposing to regulate adult placement schemes rather than adult placement carers. We will be consulting later this year on our proposals.

This Government has made it clear in the past that the care homes regulations would be continuously monitored and it has always been our intention that these regulations would be reviewed by April 2005.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps his Department is taking in conjunction with the Department for Work and Pensions to reduce the number of job vacancies within the care home sector; [130842]

(2) what plans the Department has to assist care homes in (a) maintaining staffing levels and (b) undertaking Criminal Records Bureau checks prior to employment. [130843]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department is aiming to reduce vacancy rates and encourage new entrants into the workforce through a national social care recruitment campaign. The campaign is raising awareness of the social care work force and there will be further media and television advertising in January 2004.

The Department is working closely with Job Centre Plus to raise awareness of the diversity of roles within social care and the training available. Job Centre Plus is represented on the Department's stakeholder group, which has responsibility for the recruitment campaign and wider social care workforce issues.

To meet the regulatory requirements on appropriate staffing levels and skill mix in care homes, providers must take into account the assessed needs of their residents. They must also ensure that staff are of integrity and good character by carrying out a number of rigorous pre-employment checks including a Criminal Record Bureau (CRB) check.

The National Care Standards Commission, as the independent regulator has stated clearly that it will continue to exercise its powers wisely and where CRB clearances are not in place will continue to apply its discretion on the use of its enforcement powers on a case-by-case basis.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has commissioned into (a) the cost of temporary agency nurses and care assistants for the care home sector in comparison with the cost of direct employment and (b) the consequences for the care homes sector of any difference in cost. [130844]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department has not commissioned research into the costs of temporary agency nurses and care assistants for the care home sector.

Staffing levels are a matter for care home providers. To meet the regulatory requirements on staffing levels and skill mix in care homes, providers take into account the assessed needs of their residents and recruit accordingly. Providers are required to ensure that all their staff are of integrity and good character by carrying out a number of rigorous pre-employment checks including a Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) check.

The National Care Standards Commission as the independent regulator has the responsibility to ensure care homes meet all their statutory requirements. They have stated clearly that they will continue to exercise their powers wisely and where CRB clearances are not in place will apply their discretion on the use of their enforcement powers on a case by case basis.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations his Department has received from care home owners concerning the impact of the reintroduction of the requirement for new staff to have a Criminal Records Bureau check; and what response he has made. [130924]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 18 September 2003]: The Department has received 40 letters from right hon. and hon. Members and three letters from care homes' umbrella organisations about the withdrawal of the National Care Standards Commission's (NCSC) interim guidance. Officials have discussed the issue with organisations representing care homes. Since 1 April 2002, all new staff in care homes have been required to obtain a satisfactory Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) check as part of their pre-employment checks. However, initial difficulties experienced by the CRB in dealing with the level of demand for checks led to delays. In response to this, in June 2003, the NCSC issued interim guidance on how to deal with recruitment of care home staff while steps were taken to improve the CRB's performance.

Following significant improvements made at the CRB the NCSC rightly decided to look again at its guidance. However, I should emphasise that the NCSC has stated that it will continue to exercise its powers wisely and, where CRB clearances are not in place, will continue to apply its discretion on the use of its enforcement powers on a case by case basis.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the reasons why the National Care Standards Commission has decided to enforce the regulations empowering Criminal Records Bureau checks on new staff working in the long term care sector as from 1 October 2003; on what basis the period of time given to phase in this change was selected; and what assessment he has made of the impact the introduction of checks will have on care homes. [129841]

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what study his Department has conducted concerning the practical implications for the private care homes sector of the planned enforcement from 1 October 2003 of regulations requiring staff working in care homes to have a Criminal Records Bureau check completed before starting work; and if he will make a statement. [129513]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 15 September 2003]: From 1 April 2002, when the Care Homes Regulations came into force, care home providers have been required to undertake a number of pre-employment checks, including a Disclosure from the Criminal Records Bureau (CRB), before new staff can take up their position.

Following significant improvements made at the CRB since last summer, the CRB is now processing 90 per cent. of applications within four weeks. The National Care Standards Commission (NCSC) rightly decided to look again at its guidance because there will now be fewer circumstances in which it will need to make allowance for delayed checks.

As the independent regulator, the NCSC has the responsibility to ensure care homes meet all their statutory requirements. It has stated clearly that it will continue to exercise its powers wisely and where CRB clearances are not in place, it will apply their discretion on the use of its enforcement powers on a case-by-case basis.

The NCSC issued a press release on 22 September 2003 setting out its approach to CRB checks for care home staff. A copy is available on the NCSC's website at: www.carestandards.org.uk

Catheter-associated Infection

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the impact on the NHS of catheter-associated infection in relation to vancomycin resistant enterocci. [130619]

Miss Melanie Johnson: This information is not available centrally.

Voluntary surveillance data[1] show that almost two-thirds of blood stream infections of known origin were associated with an intravascular device or device-related infections, such as a catheter-associated urinary tract infection.

The second phase of the mandatory surveillance scheme for healthcare associated infection was recently introduced. From 1 September 2003, trusts will report blood stream infections due to glycopeptide resistant enterococci (including vancomycin resistant enterocci) and serious untoward incidents associated with infection.

[1] Public Health Laboratory Service. Nosocomial Infection National Surveillance Service. Surveillance of hospital acquired bacteraemia in English hospitals. 1997–2002.

Chronic Fatigue Syndrome

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance the NHS has issued to ensure that clinicians are fully informed in how to deal with patients presenting with chronic fatigue syndrome/myalgic encephalomyelitis. [130713]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 16 September 2003]: We have issued no guidance to the National Health Service on the treatment of patients with cronic fatigue syndrome/myalgic encephalomyelitis (CFS/ME).

We are, however, taking steps to improve services for patients with this condition. On 12 May, we announced funding of £8.5 million that will be used to develop services for people with CFS/ME. In July, health organisations were invited to bid for development funds to set up centres of expertise to develop clinical care, support clinical research and expand education and training programmes for health care professionals and to establish satellite community multidisciplinary teams. The first phase of development will start in April 2004.

Chronic Pain

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the cost to public funds of (a) treatment, (b) sickness absence and (c) lost production relating to chronic pain in England. [131200]

Mr. Hutton: The Department has not estimated the cost to public funds of treatment, absence, or lost productivity because of chronic pain and has no plans to carry out such a study.

Clatterbridge Hospital

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on proton therapy facilities at Clatterbridge Hospital. [131230]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Clatterbridge Centre for Oncology (CCO) currently has access to the Douglas Cyclotron Facility, which produces protons of 62MeV. This particular piece of equipment was developed by the Medical Research Council in 1984 to undertake studies into neutron therapy but was later modified in association with the Imperial Cancer Research Fund to provide proton therapy of eye tumours.

The CCO became responsible for this facility in 1991. It provides ocular oncology services in association with four national referring centres, the main one of which is the Royal Liverpool University Hospital, in addition to centres in London, Glasgow and Sheffield.

Consultancies

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many consultancies were commissioned by his Department in the last two years for which figures are available; and what the cost of those contracts was. [130893]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department does not hold centrally a record of individual contracts. However, our financial records show the following figures as the payments made to consultancies for the last two complete financial years.

Financial year	£ million
2000–01	6.53
2001–02	6.8

Contact Lenses

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what action he is taking to warn children of the dangers associated with swapping contact lenses; [128137]

(2) what assessment he has made of the General Optical Council proposals to restrict sale of contact lenses to registered opticians and doctors; [128138]

(3) what action he is taking to encourage contact lens users to seek proper advice before purchase and to attend regular check-ups thereafter; [128139]

(4) what action he is taking to (a) encourage and (b) compel organisations that sell non-prescription contact lenses to (i) advise purchasers of their suitability for lenses and (ii) provide them with adequate information on care and hygiene; [128140]

(5) what assessment he has made of the link between (a) microbial keratitis, (b) acanthamoeba, (c) poor colour perception, (d) reduced binocular vision and (e) damage to the surface of the cornea and the use of non-prescription contact lenses; [128148]

(6) what action he is taking to ensure that the sale of non-prescription contact lenses is effectively monitored; [128151]

(7) what assessment he has made of the long-term effects on eye health of using non-prescription contact lenses; [128152]

(8) what plans he has to reclassify contact lenses as medical devices. [128153]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We plan to regulate the sale of non-prescription cosmetic contact lenses to ensure that outlets selling them have professional optical supervisory arrangements to ensure that advice is available to purchasers, whether adults or children, on use of these lenses. A public consultation is due to take place this year as part of the parliamentary process. Detailed rules for the professional optical supervisory arrangements will be developed to implement the regulations.

Although the Department has made no specific assessment of the links between certain eye conditions and the use of non-prescription contact lenses, it is widely recognised that prescription contact lens wearers are more at risk of eye infections if they over-wear their lenses, adopt poor hygiene or smoke. It is reasonable to assume that similar risks apply to people wearing non-prescription lenses and that the lack of professionally supervised advice may put them at greater risk.

For prescription contact lenses, the Contact Lens Rules 1988 require that they be provided by General Optical Council registered opticians who also provide the necessary instruction and information to the person fitted on the care, wearing, treatment, cleaning and maintenance of such lenses and also provide the clinical management and adjustment of the fitting of the lenses for a period of six months from the date of first fitting.

Powered contact lenses are classified as medical devices but plano lenses have no corrective function or medical purpose and are not considered to be a medical device. There are no plans to reclassify them as such.

Coronary Disease

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Government has to research possible links between malfunctioning LOX-1 genes and cardiac arrest. [130060]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Medical Research Council (MRC) supports a range of research into cardiac arrest including ways of targeting genes in vascular disease, but does not have any projects targeting LOX-1 at the present time. The MRC always welcomes high quality applications for support into any aspect of human health and these are judged in open competition with other demands on funding.

The Department and the Department of Trade and Industry are investing around £15 million to support the development of five genetics knowledge parks over five years. The knowledge parks will carry out research into the genetic components of major diseases, including cardiovascular disease.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research the Government have undertaken into the link between tooth loss and subclinical atherosclerosis. [130108]

Miss Melanie Johnson: To date, the Government have not commissioned any research into the links between tooth loss and subclinical atherosclerosis, although we are aware of some recent research on this topic.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what health advice his Department has issued for people at risk of coronary heart disease. [130109]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department attaches great importance to preventing coronary heart disease.

The priorities and planning framework for 2003–06 includes targets for reducing the incidence of coronary heart disease. One of these requires practice-based registers for patients with coronary heart disease and diabetes, with systematic treatment regimes, including advice on diet physical activity and smoking. This covers the majority of patients at high risk of coronary heart disease, particularly those with hypertension, diabetes and a body mass index greater than 30.

Programmes are also in place to tackle the risk factors for coronary heart disease in the general population. These take a life-course approach and focus on improvements to diet and nutrition, reducing excess weight and obesity, increasing physical activity and reducing the prevalence of smoking.

Cosmetic Surgery

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to conduct a review of cosmetic surgery practice in England and Wales. [130161]

Mr. Hutton: We announced in early 2002 that there would be a review of the effectiveness of the national minimum standards for the qualifications of cosmetic surgeons in England who were not on the specialist register of the General Medical Council and had been in practice before 1 April 2002.

The National Care Standards Commission (NCSC) submitted a report to the Chief Medical Officer in July of this year on the findings from inspections carried out in its first year of operation of establishments where such surgeons worked. This report can be found on the NCSC website at www.carestandards.org.uk.

A further more comprehensive report on inspections so far is scheduled for this autumn.

Decorative Greenery

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on decorative greenery in the Department of Health in each of the past three financial years. [131020]

Dr. Ladyman: Within the Department's administrative estate, the provision of decorative greenery comes within the contract for cleaning services.

The cost of providing decorative greenery within the past three financial years has been:

	£
2000–01	18,471.49
2001–02	16,179.57
2002–03	12,168.37

Deep Vein Thrombosis

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate he has made of the percentage of people diagnosed with deep vein thrombosis who had taken a long haul flight in the preceding week in each year since 1997; [129794]

(2) what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on travel-related deep vein thrombosis, with particular reference to the use of compression hosiery as a preventative measure; and if he will make a statement; [129795]

(3) what guidance his Department has given to long haul air travellers on deep vein thrombosis. [129796]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Hospital episodes statistics can provide data on numbers of admissions with a primary diagnosis relating to deep vein thrombosis (DVT). However, no information is available to assess how many of these were for patients who had undertaken a long haul flight within the preceding week.

DVT is linked to older age, cancer, trauma, surgery, long periods of immobilisation, oral contraception, pregnancy and a number of conditions related to hyperactive blood clotting.

The Department has not commissioned any specific research on the use of compression hosiery as a preventative measure for DVT, although we are aware of existing research in this area.

In 2001 the Department of Health issued information and advice to the airlines and the public about minimising the risk of DVT during long journeys. This included practical advice for air passengers on long haul flights. It also identified certain groups which may be at a higher risk of DVT and advised them to seek medical advice before travelling and described simple in-seat exercises that should be recommended to all air passengers.

To maximise access for the public to this information and advice it is available through health services, on the internet at http://www.doh.gov.uk/dvtA from the airlines and from NHS Direct. It will be kept under review in the light of new research information.

Dementia

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Crosby (Mrs. Curtis-Thomas) of 8 September 2003, Official Report, column 179W, on dementia, if he will start a routine collection of information at local level. [131198]

Dr. Ladyman: There are no plans to start a routine data collection.

Dental Students

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many students were in dental school in (a) 1983, (b) 1987, (c) 1992, (d) 1997 and the latest year for which figures are available. [131280]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the intake of pre-clinical dental students from 1990–91 up to 2002–03, the latest year for which figures are available, is shown in the table.

	Intake
1992–93	631
1997–98	668
2002–03	696

We are currently undertaking a review of the dental workforce, including the number of undergraduate places in dental schools. The review will be published by the end of this year.

Dentistry

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the number of (a) children and (b) adults waiting to register with an NHS dentist in Shrewsbury and Atcham. [129638]

Dr. Ladyman: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children received NHS dental treatment in Shrewsbury and Atcham in each year since 1997. [129640]

Dr. Ladyman: For the general dental service (CDS) the available information is for children's registrations, which cover children aged under 18 years seen by a dentist within the past 15 months. This information is at health authority level between 1998 and 2002 and primary care trust (PCT) level for 2002 and 2003.

The first table shows the number of children's registrations in Shropshire Health Authority and the Shropshire County PCT and Telford and Wrekin PCT areas between 1998 and 2003.

In addition, children were also seen for treatment in the community and personal dental services. The numbers are shown in the second table.

General Dental Service: Number of children's registrations in Shropshire health authority area and PCT area between 1998 and 2003

Number of patients registered (thousand)

	Shropshire County PCT	Shropshire HA	Telford and Wrekin PCT
30 September
1998		66.5
1999		67.4
2000		67.4
2001		65.8
At 31 August
2002		66.9
At 30 September
2002	39.9		26.8
At 30 June
2003	39.4		27.0

	Number seen/treated
1998–99	4,200
1999–2000	3,200
2000–01	3,500
2001–02	3,100
2002–03	1,200

Source:
Dental Practice Board

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the availability of NHS dentistry on the Wirral. [128604]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information requested in shown in the table.

Strategic Health Authority/ Primary Care Trust	England	Cheshire and Merseyside SHA	Bebington and West Wirral PCT	Birkenhead and Wallasey PCT	Total of the two PCTs
Number of registrations
Adults	[1]168	[2]915.3	[2]54.2	[2]88.4	[2]142.6
Children	[1]6.7	[2]332.6	[2]16.3	[2]31.1	[2]47.4
Total	[1]23.5	[2]1,247.9	[2]70.5	[2]119.5	[2]190.0
Number of GDS dentists3
All dentists	18,335	837	35	82	128
Principals	16,401	765	44	70	114
Assistants	1,347	42	1	4	5
Vocational Dental Practitioners	587	30	1	8	9
Number of persons per dentist[4]	2,682	2,799	2,586	2,357	2,439
Number of registrations per dentist	1,283	1,491	1,532	1,457	1,484
Registration rate[4] (%)	48.0	53.3	59.2	61.8	60.8

[1] Millions
[2] Thousands
[3] Some dentists have contracts in more than one Primary Care Trust. These dentists have been counted only once in the PCT in which they hold their main contract.
[4] For population, mid year ONS population estimates based on the 2001 census have been used for England. Mid-year 2001 resident relevant population estimates based on GP patients registration data and constrained by ONS census based population for 2001 have been used for SHA and PCTs
Source:
Dental Practice Board

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his Department's strategy is for (a) maintaining and (b) increasing participation levels of dentists in the NHS. [128605]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A national health service support team is being set up to support those primary care trusts (PCTs) and practices which are under greatest pressure. The team will provide advice and guidance on best practice in increasing access and modernising dentistry locally, backed by £3 million support funds in 2003–04 and £6 million in 2004–05 to tackle particularly acute or longstanding bottlenecks.

The Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Bill, currently before Parliament, proposes new duties for PCTs to secure the provision of primary dental services and the financial resources to do so. The proposals in this Bill will underpin a modernised high-quality primary dental service provided through contracts between PCTs and dental practices properly integrated with the rest of the NHS.

Diabetes

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of diabetics were offered screening for diabetic retinopathy in the last year for which figures are available. [130326]

Ms Rosie Winterton: These data were not collected prior to April 2003. Since this date, information on screening for diabetic retinopathy is being collected from the national health service. Annual figures will not be available until May 2004.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the NHS is taking to develop support and promote the management of insulin-dependent diabetics by means of dose adjustment for normal eating. [130469]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Dose adjustment for normal eating (DAFNE) is an educational programme aimed at people with type 1 diabetes to enable them to take better control of their diabetes and to teach them how to adjust their insulin injections to fit their life and food rather than the other way around. The Department provided £500,000 to support the development of the DAFNE programme in the financial year 2002–03. The National Institute for Clinical Excellence has recommended that structured education be offered to all people with diabetes at the time of diagnosis and then, as required, based on a formal, regular assessment of need. They also considered that the DAFNE programme may be a suitable option for individuals with type 1 diabetes, being one means of enabling people to self-manage this condition.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average intervals were between follow-up appointments at diabetic clinics in each primary care trust in the last year for which figures are available. [131032]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not collected or recorded centrally.

Diagnostic and Treatment Centres

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what basis certain geographical areas were selected to participate in the procurement programme for diagnostic and treatment centres. [129591]

Mr. Hutton: In autumn 2002, the national health service undertook a national capacity planning process lead by local NHS commissioners. This identified a range of capacity gaps that needed to be met for the NHS to meet the waiting time target set for 2005. Where the NHS was not able to demonstrate robust plans to meet this demand, the residual activity was tested with the independent sector.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what role Augmentis has played in the process of developing diagnostic and treatment centres. [129592]

Mr. Hutton: To facilitate the procurement process for independent sector treatment centres, the Department has offered central project management and commercial support to local national health service sponsors to help them in this new and innovative programme.

Augmentis was one of the companies that was successful in the competitive tendering process that was run to identify suitable project support.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his Department's estimates were of the savings from operations carried out at NHS diagnostic and treatment centres; and how far these have been borne out by experience. [130649]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 16 September 2003]: The purpose of National Health Service treatment centres is to provide additional capacity to treat more patients more quickly, in a modern streamlined environment. Treatment centres were not set up with the express aim of saving money, although evidence from other countries shows that they are likely to be a cost-effective and safe way of undertaking many operations. They have, however, already begun to make an important contribution to cutting waiting times for treatment.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements have been made to provide residential accommodation for staff from overseas who are to work in private sector diagnostic and treatment centres. [131050]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 18 September 2003]: Additional overseas staff working in independent sector treatment centres will be employed by the independent sector providers running these new units. They will be responsible for providing residential accommodation for these staff should that be necessary.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his estimate is of the number of professional staff who will be employed in private sector diagnostic and treatment centres; and how many of them will be on secondment from the NHS. [131052]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 18 September 2003]: The precise number of professional staff working in these new units will be finalised in the next stage of negotiations leading to contract close.

Diet

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many five-a-day co-ordinators are employed in each NHS trust; [127372]

(2) how many five-a-day project co-ordinators have been appointed in each primary care trust. [130365]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Sixty-six primary care trusts (PCTs) are part of a programme being funded by the lottery-funded new opportunities fund to lead five-a-day initiatives in their communities to employ a local co-ordinator. By 15 September, 46 of these 66 co-ordinators had been appointed; the other 20 PCTs expect to appoint by the end of the year. In addition one PCT receives a grant from the new opportunities fund to employ seven full-time and three part-time regional co-ordinators and one part-time supra-regional co-ordinator.

All PCTs lead in their communities on public health issues, including healthy eating projects to increase fruit and vegetable consumption supported by local five-a-day co-ordinators.

Information is not collected centrally on such projects or support staff.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the population (a) in total and (b) under the age of 18, broken down by social class, has been classified as obese in each of the past 10 years. [130057]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Information is not available in the form requested. Available information on adult obesity by social class is shown in the table. Figures are from the health survey for England and cover years 1994, 1996, 1998, and 2001.

Prevalence of adult obesity by survey year and social class, aged 16 and over with a valid height and weight measurement

	Social class of Head of Household
Survey year	I %	II %	IIIN %	IIIM %	IV %	V %	Total %
Men
1994	9.9	13.7	13.8	15.1	15.0	14.0	13.8
1996	11.8	16.6	16.3	18.9	14.7	18.2	16.4
1998	11.9	16.5	16.5	20.5	16.1	17.9	17.3
2001	14.5	20.8	18.9	23.5	23.4	19.0	21.0
Women
1994	11.5	14.4	15.0	19.7	21.9	22.5	17.3
1996	13.2	15.2	16.0	21.3	22.1	27.1	18.4
1998	15.1	18.4	18.9	24.4	24.9	27.5	21.2
2001	14.1	19.7	21.5	27.0	30.5	28.5	23.5

Trend information on children's obesity by social class is not available. Young people aged 16–18 are classified as adults. The following analyses therefore cover children under age 16. Social class comparisons of the percentage of children in BMI quintiles were published in the Health Survey for England—The Health of Young People 95–97 table 3.15, a copy of which is available in the Library. Overall trends show that obesity in children is rising. Although there is no generally accepted consensus on the definition of obesity in childhood, all recent studies, no matter which definition is used, have shown that the prevalence of obesity is increasing in children in England.

Health survery of England: obesity prevalence trends among English children aged 6–15

	1996	2001
Percentage obese[1]	12.1	15.6

[1] Equal to or greater than 95 BMI centile (Cole TJ, Freeman JV, and Preece MA. Body mass index reference curves for the UK, 1990. Arch. Dis. Child. 1995; 73: 25–29).

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the percentage of food advertising that is broadcast during children's television viewing times on (a) terrestrial television and (b) cable and satellite children's television channels; and what assessment he has made of the percentage of food advertising broadcast during children's television viewing times on (i) terrestrial and (ii) cable and satellite children's television channels that is promoting high calorie, low nutrient foods. [130083]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Food Standards Agency have funded an independent expert review of the evidence regarding the effect of promotional activity on children's eating behaviour, which covers television advertising and will identify research papers on a range of relevant topics.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will take powers to restrict the use of free toys and well-known children's film and television characters in the promotion of fast food to children. [130084]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Food Standards Agency is currently considering the issue of the promotion of food to children. They have funded an independent expert review of the evidence regarding the effect of promotional activity on children's eating behaviour, which will be published this autumn.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what booklets the Food Standards Agency published on healthy eating in (a) 2000–01, (b) 2001–02 and (c) 2002–03. [130093]

Miss Melanie Johnson: In 2000–01, the Food Standards Agency (FSA) re-branded booklets it inherited from the Health Education Authority and the Department on healthy eating.

In 2001–02, the FSA published the following life stage leaflets on healthy eating entitled: "While you are pregnant"; "Thinking of having a baby"; "Breastfeeding"; "Feeding your baby"; "Feeding your toddler"; "Feeding your growing child"; "Eating for later in life"; and "Men and food".

In 2002–03, the FSA published a series of leaflets: "Healthy Eating Sugars"; "Healthy Eating Salt"; "Healthy Eating Fats"; and "Labelling claims".

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what foods the chemical acrylamide is present in; and what research has been done into the effects of acrylamide on health. [130094]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I am advised by the Food Standards Agency that acrylamide has been found to occur in a wide range of home-cooked and processed foods. These include chips, crisps, bread and breakfast cereals. It has not been found in uncooked or boiled foods, and appears to be formed during cooking by methods such as frying, roasting and baking, which involve higher temperatures.

Acrylamide has been shown to cause various types of cancer in laboratory animals. It is considered to have the potential to cause cancer in humans. Research into the effects of acrylamide on health is being conducted nationally and internationally.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the additives permitted in (a) conventional food and (b) organic food. [130100]

Miss Melanie Johnson: A list of all European Union permitted food additives has been created by the Food Standards Agency. This list can be accessed by using the following link to the Food Standards Agency website: http://www.food.gov.uk/safereating/additivesbranch/enumberlist

Food additives in organic foods are limited to those listed in Section A of Annex VI of Regulation (EEQ2092/91, which governs organic production in the EU. A list of these can be found on page 66 of the UKROFS standards at http://www.defra.qov.uk/farm/orqanic/ukrofs/standard.pdf.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to change the number of additives allowed in food. [130101]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I am advised by the Food Standards Agency that food additives legislation is harmonised throughout the European Union. All additives permitted in food have been rigorously assessed for safety by the independent scientific committees that advise the European Commission and the UK Government on food safety issues. Any changes to the number of additives allowed in food would be on the basis of advice from these expert committees.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Government has to try and reverse the decline in minerals in food. [130103]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The evidence on whether there has been a decline in the mineral content of foods generally is unclear. This is due to differences over time in study methodologies and because mineral levels naturally occurring in foods can vary widely due to a range of factors.

The overall balance of the diet is more important than the nutrient content of individual foods. It is for this reason that Government activity has concentrated on promoting the uptake of a healthy balanced diet.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Government have to make independent testing of food additives an automatic requirement. [130117]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Safety data on additives, whether provided by manufacturers or from independent sources, are thoroughly assessed by the independent expert committees that advise the Government or the European Commission before authorisation is granted. Data that are submitted for evaluation by committees must satisfy good laboratory practice requirements and also comply with any guidelines laid down by the expert committee.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research the Government has undertaken into the health consequences that might occur when several food additives are combined in a single product. [130118]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Food Standards Agency (FSA) is currently funding a research project entitled "Development of methods for the assessment of the health effects from mixtures of food additives". This study is investigating four additives, chosen because they have a similar mode of action and is due to be completed in 2005. The FSA has also recently established a new research programme on mixtures of chemicals. The main focus is on residues of pesticides and veterinary medicines, but the results will provide more general information on possible effects of mixtures of chemicals in food including additives.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to remove a star from trusts where the percentage of obese people increases. [130159]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Commission for Health Improvement is the independent regulator of national health service performance and is responsible for developing indicators and publishing NHS performance ratings. Ministers will continue to agree key targets and the priority areas to be covered in the ratings, but are not responsible for their calculation.

The prevention and management of obesity is at the heart of many of the Government's priority areas, as set out in the NHS Plan, the cross-cutting review on health inequalities, national service frameworks and the priorities and planning framework.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with the European Commission regarding the proposal to ban health claims made about food products. [130174]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I am advised by the Food Standards Agency that the European Commission has adopted a proposal that seeks to better regulate health claims on foods, allowing them only when evidence to substantiate the claim has been accepted by the European Food Safety Authority. This proposal is currently under negotiation in Brussels.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will respond to the recent proposals of the Obesity Awareness and Solutions Trust in relation to Toast House. [130393]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department is aware of the work of the obesity awareness and solutions trust (TOAST).

The Department provided funding for TOAST through a Section 64 grant in 2002. The funding finished in March 2003. TOAST have updated the Department on their proposals in relation to TOAST house, which may complement the Department's work to tackle overweight and obesity.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will ban the food additives (a) tartrazine, (b) quinoline yellow, (c) sunset yellow FCF, (d) cochineal, (e) carmoisine, (f) amaranth, (g) poncean 4R, (h) erythrosine, (i) indigo carmine, (j) caramel, (k) black PN, (l) annatto, (m) benzoic acid, (n) sodium benzoate, (o) sulphur dioxide, (p) sodium nitrate, (q) sodium nitrate, (r) butylated hydroxyanisole and (s) butylated hydroxytoluene; and if he will undertake further research to identify additives that may exacerbate hyperactivity in children. [130401]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I am advised by the Food Standards Agency (FSA) that there are no plans to ban these additives. Legislation on food additives is harmonised throughout the European Union and all additives permitted for use in food, including those listed, have been rigorously assessed for safety by the independent scientific committees that advise the European Commission and the United Kingdom Government. Any ban on the use of these additives would be on the basis of advice from these expert committees.

In May this year the FSA put out a research call inviting new proposals to examine whether there are any links between certain food additives and behaviour in children. Proposals have now been received and are currently being appraised by an independent panel of experts.

Direct Payments

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in each of the last five years were (a) eligible for and (b) in receipt of direct payments, broken down by client group. [130873]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of people eligible for direct payments is not available. Prior to April 2003 whether individuals were offered direct payments was a choice for each council so eligibility differed between areas. Since April 2003, it has been made a "duty" for each council to offer a direct payment, but eligibility will depend on a number of factors, including the person's ability to manage a direct payment. The number of people in receipt of direct payments between the years 1997–2000 is also not available. However, the number of adults aged 18 or over and in receipt of direct payments for the years 2000–01 and 2001–02, broken down by client group, is available and shown in the table.

Number of clients receiving direct payments (England)

Rounded figures

Primary client type	2000–01	2001–02
All client groups	5,000	6,300
Physical and sensory disability/frailty	3,600	5,300
of which:
physical disability	2,800	3,600
hearing	[1]
visual	100	100
dual frailty	300	400
Learning disability	200	500
Mental health	100	200
of which:
dementia	[1]	[1]
Substance abuse	[1]	60
Other vulnerable people	1,000	200
of which:
asylum seekers	900	60
welfare benefits	0	0

[1] Figures less than 50.

Note:

2000–01 figures are based on 133 P2f forms.

2001–02 figures are based on 140 P2F forms.

Doctor-Patient Ratios

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average ratio of family doctors to patients was in each year since 1997 in (a) England, (b) each NHS region and (c) each strategic health authority. [128918]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Domestic Violence

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what role he envisages primary care trusts taking in dealing with domestic violence. [129622]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Government are firmly committed to tackling domestic violence, a serious and abhorrent crime, and we recently published our strategy to co-ordinate concerted action on this issue in the consultation paper, "Safety and Justice". Within this framework, the national health service has a particular contribution to make in identifying and responding to domestic violence, which has a profound impact on the health and well-being of the individuals concerned and their children.

The Department of Health's publication, "Domestic Violence: A Resource Manual for Health Care Professionals (March 2000)", provides a solid foundation for local multi-agency work and supports health care professionals and managers across all sectors of the NHS, including those working in primary care trusts (PCTs), in developing their domestic violence policies, protocols and services to ensure victims receive the care and support they need in whatever health setting they present.

The Department is working closely with the NHS Modernisation Agency to facilitate sharing of good practice domestic violence strategies by PCTs, particularly those who have developed effective partnership working arrangements with other key local agencies, through the national primary and care trust development programme.

Drugs

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase the number of GPs recognised as having a special interest in the treatment of drug addiction. [129141]

Mr. Hutton: We are committed to expanding the numbers and the role of general practitioners with a special interest (GPwSIs) and have already met the NHS Plan commitment to have 1,000 such GPs. These GPs will help expand the range of services offered by primary care in settings more convenient for patients than hospital-based care. It is important, however, that the services offered by these GPs address local priorities and needs. The decisions on which specialties to develop locally are therefore for primary care trusts.

We are supporting the GPwSIs' development with guidelines which we have commissioned from the Royal College of General Practitioners (RCGP) on a range of specialities. Drug misuse is among these and we are funding a RCGP training programme on this. In the first year, 440 GPs attended the training and there were over a 100 on the waiting list.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 1 September 2003 the hon. Member for Shrewsbury and Atcham (Mr. Marsden), Official Report, column 3W, on adverse reactions to drugs (children), what the equivalent information is for (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99, (c) 1999–2000 and (d) 2000–01. [129724]

Mr. Hutton: The following table provides data from hospital episode statistics of admissions to hospital of children under 16 years due to adverse effects from drugs, medicines and biological substances in therapeutic use in national health service hospitals in England.

	Number of admissions of children under 16 (ungrossed data)
1997–98	2,437
1998–99	2,608
1999–2000	2,986
2000–01	2,819

These data include adverse effects from all medicines, whether prescribed or taken without prescription. It is important to note that these figures do not represent the number of patients as a person may have more than one admission episode of hospital care within the year.

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 9 June 2003, Official Report, column 694W, on unused drugs, if he will commission independent research to assess ways of reducing this wastage; and what assessment he has made of whether smaller packs of drugs could reduce wastage. [129807]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department is concerned about the wastage of unused medicines and has introduced a number of measures to address this.

These include the medicines management collaborative, which involves primary care trusts (PCTs), general practitioners (GPs) and pharmacies in schemes that demonstrate innovation and good practice in medicines management. Reducing the volume of unwanted medicines is one of the local objectives being pursued by some of the PCTs participating in the programme.

Repeat dispensing makes it possible for patients to get their repeat medicines for up to a year without having to contact their GP's surgery. At each repeat dispensing episode, the pharmacist checks that the medicines are still needed and being used appropriately by the patient. The first wave of pathfinder sites is now under way and I announced the second wave of 40 sites at the British Pharmaceutical Conference on 17 September 2003. We remain committed to repeat dispensing schemes nationwide until the end of 2004. Evidence from previous pilot studies has shown that repeat dispensing helps reduce waste.

Modernising hospital pharmacy services, where patients can now continue to use their medicines when admitted to hospital, together with dispensing for discharge, has also been shown to reduce waste.

Given all these initiatives we do not propose to commission further research.

Patients have different requirements according to their clinical condition. Pharmaceutical companies therefore have to decide what pack sizes will suit the majority of patients and provide pack sizes to meet these needs.

E.coli

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many recorded (a) E-coli infections and (b) E-coli 0157 infections there were in each year since 1997 which were linked to camping or visiting open farms; and if he will make a statement. [128928]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The table shows the number of laboratory confirmed cases of Escherichia coli 0157 (E.coli) infection in England, Wales and Scotland from 1983 to 2002.

The first case of infection with a Vero-cytotoxin producing strain of Escherichia coli (VTEC) was diagnosed in 1982. Virtually all cases of Vero-cytotoxin producing strains of E.coli infection are caused by E.coli 0157. All cases of E.coli infection associated with camping or visits to open farms have been due to the 0157 strain.

Data on sporadic cases are not included because it is not possible to link individual sporadic cases to a particular route of transmission.

Report year	E.coli 0157	E.coli 0157 associated with camping or open farms
1983	0	—
1984	6	—
1985	53	—
1986	80	—
1987	101	—
1988	88	—
1989	206	—
1990	415	—
1991	563	—
1992	585	—
1993	504	—
1994	653	5
1995	1,039	0
1996	1,166	0
1997	1,513	30
1998	1,107	11
1999	1,378	21
2000	1,093	33
2001	1,003	23
2002	824	5

This table does not include outbreaks associated with camping or visiting open farms in which infection was acquired from contaminated food or water. The figures for 2002 are provisional.

Emergency Planning

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 16 July 2003, Official Report, column 412W, on emergency planning, if he will publish the review of major incident planning capacity. [129125]

Mr. Hutton: There are no plans to publish the detailed findings of the review. The review has helped ensure that national health service major incident planning is continuously reviewed and improved. Revised guidance will be issued to the NHS later this year. Our approach was described in the Treasury minute responding to the Public Accounts Committee report "Facing the Challenge: NHS Emergency Planning in England", which was published on 17 March. Copies of the minute have been placed in the Library.

Energy Use Targets

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the voluntary targets for energy use in NHS capital schemes have been made mandatory; what progress his Department has made in revising the NHS carbon dioxide standard of heat insulation; and whether it is his intention to bring the revised NHS carbon dioxide standard into line with the current British Standard for heat insulation. [129150]

Miss Melanie Johnson: In April 2001 the then Minister of State for Health, my right hon. Friend the Member for Southampton, Itchen (Mr. Denham), set mandatory energy targets for the national health service in England.

NHS Estates is currently undertaking a comprehensive review of its healthcare engineering guidance which includes Model Engineering Specification CO_2 Thermal Insulation (MES CO_2). It is NHS Estates' intention to harmonise MES CO_2 with the revised British Standard.

Fluoride

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by what methods other than fluoridation of public water supplies safe levels of fluoride can be delivered to the population. [130429]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Trials are underway of offering fluoridated milk in schools and, in some parts of Europe, fluoridated salt is on sale. We have introduced the brushing for life scheme whereby free fluoridated toothpaste is given to families with young children in areas of high tooth decay. Findings to date suggest that none of these measures yields benefits equivalent to those derived from water fluoridation.

Food

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent by the NHS on food in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03; how much food was wasted in each of those years; and if he will make a statement. [129364]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not routinely collected.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on food by his Department and by each agency for which it is responsible in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03; what proportion of that food by value was produced in the United Kingdom; what guidance he has issued to encourage the procurement of home-grown food; and if he will make a statement. [129377]

Mr. Hutton: Expenditure on food relates to hospitality, working lunches and refreshments supplied at meetings. Available information from the Department of Health and its Agencies is shown in the table.

	2001-02	2002-03
Department of Health	348,000	173,000
The Medicines and Health Care Products Regulatory Agency (total expenditure in the formerly separate Medicines Control Agency and Medical Devices Agency)	264,819	185,683
NHS Purchasing and Supplies Agency	8,148	9,714
NHS Pensions Agency	63,892	81,726
NHS Estates	132,798	66,569

Catering services are contracted out and no detailed information is available on the proportion of food that is produced in the United Kingdom.

The main Department of Health contractor has a policy to purchase food products sourced in the UK wherever it is available and commercially viable to do so. 92 per cent. of purchases are products produced within the UK.

The Department's procurement policy requires prospective catering suppliers to demonstrate within their tenders their approach to purchasing local products and those produced within the UK.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Government has to introduce central enforcement of breaches of food legislation. [130121]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Local and central Government are responsible for different aspects of food law enforcement. However, most enforcement work is undertaken by local authority environmental health and trading standards departments. I am advised by the Food Standards Agency that there are no plans to change these arrangements.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the bacterial infections which caused death from food poisoning in each year since 1997, indicating the (a) number and (b) percentage in each category. [127344]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Public Health Laboratory Service, now the Health Protection Agency, carried out a detailed study of all statistics on foodborne disease in order to calculate reliable estimates of the true burden of indigenously acquired foodborne disease and deaths. These estimates exclude foodborne infections acquired abroad and infections acquired by other routes such as person to person. Annual data for 1997 to 2000 are shown in the table. Data for 2001 onwards are not yet available.

Estimated number of deaths due to indigenous foodborne infection in England and Wales 1997 to 2000

Bacterial pathogen	1997	Percentage	1998	Percentage	1999	Percentage	2000	Percentage
Non typhoidal Salmonellas	304	34.5	208	30.2	146	28.0	119	24.8
Clostridium perfringens	260	29.5	189	27.5	89	17.0	89	18.5
Campylobacter spp.	79	9.0	88	12.8	84	16.1	86	17.9
Listeria monocytogenes	87	9.9	76	11.0	76	14.6	68	14.2
Escherichia coli 0157	27	3.1	22	3.2	27	5.2	22	4.6
Other E.coli	6	0.7	6	0.9	6	1.1	6	1.3
Verocytotoxigenic E.coli (Non 0157)	3	0.3	2	0.3	3	0.6	2	0.4
Vibrio spp.	2	0.2	2	0.3	2	0.4	2	0.4
Yersinia spp.	5	0.6	3	0.4	2	0.4	1	0.2
Parasites & Viruses[1]	21	2.3	19	2.8	20	3.8	20	4.2
Unknown Agents[2]	88	10.0	73	10.6	67	12.8	65	13.5
Total deaths[3]	882	100	688	100	522	100	480	100

[1] Information on parasites and viruses is provided for comparison.

[2] Unknown agents may include some bacterial infections.

[3] Figures shown are for all agents.

Source (raw data):

Gastrointestinal Diseases Division, Health Protection Agency

Communicable Disease Surveillance Centre. 23/7/03

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what percentage of the target to reduce foodborne disease is made up of food poisoning caused by (a) salmonella, (b) campylobacter, (c) clostridium perfringens, (d) E.coli 0157 and (e) listeria; [130069]

(2) how many deaths were caused by (a) salmonella, (b) campylobacter and (c) clostridium perfringens food poisoning in each year since 1997–98; [130070]

(3) how many cases of campylobacter food poisoning there were in each year since 1997–98; and what steps the Government is taking to reduce the cases of campylobacter food poisoning; [130081]

(4) what progress his Department is making towards the target to reduce foodborne disease by 20 per cent. by 2006; and by what percentage foodborne disease was reduced in 2001–02. [130176]

Miss Melanie Johnson: In the baseline year, 2000, the percentage of the target accounted for by each organism was:

	percentage
Salmonella	20
Campylobacter	78
Clostridium perfringens	0.3
E.coli 0157	2
Listeria monocytogenes	0.2

A study of foodborne disease statistics carried out by the Health Protection Agency (HPA) was used to provide the following estimated number of deaths due to indigenous foodborne infection in England and Wales between 1997–2000:

	Number of deaths per year
Bacterial Pathogen	1997	1998	1999	2000
Salmonellas (non typhoidal)	304	208	146	119
Clostridium perfringens	260	189	89	89
Campylobacter spp.	79	88	84	86

Source:
(Raw data): Gastrointestinal Diseases Division, Health Protection Agency, Communicable Disease Surveillance Centre. 23/07/03.

Routine data on causes of death, collected by the Office of National Statistics, do not provide a breakdown for individual organisms. The most recent HPA data currently available are for the year 2000.

The number of laboratory-confirmed cases of Campylobacter spp. in the United Kingdom in each year since 1997–98 is shown in the table. Not all of these infections will have been transmitted by food. Note that due to under-reporting the actual numbers of cases will be higher. On the basis of a large study of intestinal infectious disease in England, funded by the Department, the true number is estimated to be eight to ten times greater.

	England and Wales	Northern Ireland	Scotland	UK total
1997	50,177	778	5,533	56,488
1998	58,059	775	6,381	65,215
1999	54,987	862	5,865	61,714
2000	55,887	1,001	6,482	63,370
2001	56,592	885	5,435	62,912
2002[1]	47,231	817	5,121	53,169

[1] based on provisional data sets.
Source:
HPA (PHLS) laboratory reports to the CDSC, CDSC (NI) and laboratory reports to the SCEIH

Measures to reduce cases of Campylobacter are set out in paragraphs 55–60 of the Food Standards Agency (FSA) strategy for reducing cases of foodborne illness by 20 per cent, by April 2006. This is available on the FSA's website at http://www.food.gov.uk/multimedia/pdfs/fdscg-strategy-revised.pdf

A detailed strategy, which aims to reduce the presence of Campylobacter in United Kingdom-produced chicken on retail sale significantly, was published for consultation in June 2003. This can be found on the FSA's website at http://www.food.gov.uk/foodindustry/consultations/completed consultationscompleteduk/campylobacterstrategycons

As part of a nation-wide food hygiene campaign, the FSA is currently developing material to promote awareness of Campylobacter among poultry farmers. Earlier phases of this campaign have been targeted largely at raising awareness and promoting good hygiene practice in the catering industry. Messages about thorough cooking and the avoidance of cross-contamination are particularly relevant to prevention of Campylobacter infection. Further high-profile activity to increase awareness of cross-contamination in the kitchen is planned for early 2004.

Good progress is being made towards reducing foodborne disease by 20 per cent. Provisional data for 2002 suggest there has been just over a 13 per cent. reduction in the number of cases of foodborne illness due to the target organisms, compared with the baseline figure for 2000.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions his Department has had with other countries (a) in the EU and (b) outside the EU on food safety. [130071]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Food Standards Agency (FSA) is responsible for food safety issues. It frequently discusses many aspects of food safety, on the basis of European Commission proposals and in scientific exchanges, with all other European Union member states. In addition, FSA officials have met counterparts from the 10 countries which are preparing to join the EU on 1 May next year as well as from many other countries. The discussions, at various levels, have ranged over many items of mutual interest, including: development of food safety and consumer-related policies; risk management and current legislative programmes; communication of risk; building relationships between food authorities; methods of scientific analysis; research and development; and inspection and food law enforcement.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the Government is taking to ensure that salmonella in eggs is strictly controlled. [130074]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The key intervention is the statutory on-farm control programme for breeding flocks. All layer breeding flocks must be monitored at regular intervals for the presence of Salmonella. Any flock infected with Salmonella Enteriditis or Salmonella Typhimurium is compulsorily slaughtered. Ministers at the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) are responsible for these controls. The Government will also be supporting new European Union proposals aimed at controlling salmonella pathogens of public health significance in poultry and other farm animals, including egg layer flocks.

Statutory measures are complemented by voluntary codes of practice published by DEFRA, which industry has incorporated into their own salmonella controls.

The Food Standards Agency (FSA) has issued advice to caterers and consumers on the safe handling, storage and consumption of eggs. This advice is published on the FSA's website at http://www.food.gov.uk/safereating/foodadvice/eggs2002advice

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what systems are required to be in place to ensure that the risk of contamination from food-borne micro-organisms is minimised during slaughter. [130075]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Current European Union meat hygiene rules contain detailed requirements for the structure and operation of slaughterhouses and require all slaughterhouse operators to implement and maintain hazard analysis critical control point-based programmes to prevent, eliminate or reduce hazards to acceptable levels. Red meat slaughterhouse operators are required to carry out microbiological testing of carcasses to verify that their controls are working. The legislation is enforced in Great Britain by the Meat Hygiene Service, an executive agency of the Food Standards Agency (FSA) and in Northern Ireland by the Department for Agriculture and Rural Development veterinary service on behalf of the FSA.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to ensure that staff working with food are aware of the need to wash their hands after visiting the lavatory; and what further steps his Department is planning to take to ensure the highest levels of personal hygiene are maintained by staff working for organisations involved with the handling of food. [130076]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Staff working with food must, by law, maintain high standards of personal hygiene and be supervised to ensure that they work hygienically. These requirements are enforced by local food authorities.

Effective hand washing is important in preventing contamination of food and the spread of food poisoning bacteria in catering premises and in the domestic setting. To help reinforce this message, the Food Standards Agency (FSA) has run a high profile nationwide campaign targeting the catering industry with material stressing the importance of staff working with food washing their hands after visiting the lavatory. Further advice on how to clean and dry hands, is available on the FSA website at www.foodstandards.gov.uk

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will set out the main criteria of the hazard analysis and critical control point system; [130072]

(2) when he expects the hazard analysis and critical control point system to be extended to all food businesses under EU legislation; and whether his Department has evaluated the effects of implementing the HACCP system to other food businesses not currently included. [130073]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Hazard analysis critical control point (HACCP) is a risk-based system designed to control food safety hazards inherent in food production. The main criteria of the HACCP system are set out in the Regulatory Impact Assessments (RIAs) which consider the effects of the proposed new legislation.

The date of implementation of the consolidated European Union food hygiene legislation is not yet decided. Negotiations under the co-decision procedure are continuing, however, the Council has agreed a formula under which the new legislation would apply from 1 January 2006, or 18 months after coming into force, whichever is the later.

The latest versions of these can be found on the Food Standards Agency website at:
www.food.gov.uk/foodindustry/regulation/europeleg/eufoodhygieneleg/six

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the Government are taking to ensure that food manufacturers provide information that is not misleading. [130175]

Miss Melanie Johnson: It is an offence under current legislation for anyone to label food in a manner that could be misleading. In support of this legislation, the Food Standards Agency has produced guidance for manufacturers on a number of aspects of labelling, such as country of origin and the use of terms such as 'fresh', 'pure' and 'natural'. In addition, proposed legislation on the use of nutrition and health claims on food labels is currently being discussed in Brussels.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many food samples were submitted for testing by local authorities in England in 1996. [130963]

Miss Melanie Johnson: A total of 175,096 food samples were taken for testing by local authorities in England in 1996.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the costs are for the testing of a food sample by (a) a local authority public analyst, (b) a private sector public analyst and (c) the Food Standards Agency's laboratory at York. [130965]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Costs for the analysis of food samples vary greatly depending on the food type and the analyses being carried out. As such, an average cost is not available.

Food Standards Agency

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who the committee members for the Food Standards Agency's Consumer Committee are; and how they were chosen. [130095]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The twelve members of the consumer committee are chosen in two ways, six through open competition and six nominated by the main consumer organisations. The current membership is as follows:

Appointees from Open Competition

Nancy Robson (Chair)

Alison Childs (Deputy Chair)

Marvelle Brown

John Godfrey

Appointees nominated by Consumer Organisations

Sue Dibb (National Consumer Council)

Emma Copeland (Consumers' Association)

Sinead Furey (General Consumer Council for Northern Ireland)

Lucy Gillie (Scottish Consumer Council)

Jeanette Longfield (Sustain: the alliance for better food and farming)

Claire Whyley (Welsh Consumer Council)

The two vacancies are currently being filled though open competition.

Foundation Hospitals

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what method each candidate trust for Foundation Hospital status has adopted to carry out public consultation about their plans; when those consultations will be completed; and what the total cost is to each trust of the consultation exercises. [129748]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 16 September 2003]: Individual applicants are developing their own plans for consultation to reflect how best to engage with key stakeholders locally. These consultations may involve a balance of staff and public meetings, written documents and presentations to key stakeholders depending on what fits best locally to allow the public, staff and other stakeholders to provide their views. Evidence of consultation and a summary of comments received is a requirement for the material submitted for consideration by the Secretary of State on 12 December as part of the next stage of the applications process. Consultation will need to conclude therefore in time to allow this. Costs will differ depending on the exact method of consultation chosen; we do not hold centrally information on these individual costs.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the auditor for a foundation hospital will be appointed. [130105]

Mr. Hutton: It will be up to the board of governors of each national health service foundation trust to appoint the auditor, subject to provisions in Schedule 1, paragraph 21, of the Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Bill.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on plans to develop a bond market to allow foundation trusts to raise capital. [130394]

Mr. Hutton: Initial consultations with financial institutions support the Government's view that bond finance may offer medium term opportunities for national health service foundation trusts to raise capital under certain circumstances. In the near term, bonds are not the preferred source of finance for NHS foundation trusts.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with financial institutions to develop a bond market to allow foundation trusts to raise capital. [130398]

Mr. Hutton: The Department has undertaken wide ranging consultations with financial institutions in order to establish a sustainable financial regime for national health service foundation trusts. A variety of bonds were part of a range of financial instruments discussed during this consultation process.

Free NHS Care

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what advice his Department gives to those embarking on gap years abroad on the effect that their absence from the UK will have on their entitlement to claim free NHS care on return to the UK, [130187]

(2) what discussions his Department has had with (a) student organisations and (b) representatives of the travel industry about advice offered to gap year students on the availability of free NHS provision when students return from an extended trip outside the UK. [130188]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 16 September 2003]: Students who choose to spend some time abroad before starting a university degree course remain fully entitled to free National Health Service treatment as soon as they return to take up permanent residence in the United Kingdom. This advice is given to anyone who enquires on the subject, but there have been no specific discussions with the bodies mentioned.

Gateway Controls

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many departmentally-approved targets have been introduced since the introduction of Gateway controls. [129587]

Mr. Hutton: The NHS Plan set out a 10-year programme of reform. The targets that the national health service is required to deliver over the next three years as part of the programme were set out in "Improvement, Expansion and Reform: The next 3 years, Priorities & Planning Framework 2003–2006", published on 1 April 2003. No other targets have been created for the NHS.

Genito-urinary Medicine

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on genito-urinary medicine services in (a) each of the past three financial years and (b) 1997–98. [131019]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Hospital and community health services expenditure on genito-urinary medicine services for each of the past three financial years and 1997–98 are shown in the table[1].

£ million

	Expenditure
2001–02	182.13
2000–01[2]	157.138
1999–2000	171.593
1997–98	137.367

[1] In 1999–2000, one NHS trust recorded expenditure on HIV/AIDS within the speciality genito-urinary medicine. However, in 2000–01 the trust reclassified this expenditure and recorded it within the speciality infectious diseases.
[2] Following further validation of the data, this is a revised figure for 2000–01.
Sources:
Annual financial returns of NHS trusts, 1997–98 and 1999–2000 to 2001–02.
Annual financial returns of primary care trusts, 2000–01 to 2001–02.

GM Foods

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department (a) has undertaken and (b) plans to undertake in 2003–04 into the health risks of GM foods. [130152]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Food Standards Agency (FSA) funds two extensive research programmes on the safety of genetically modified food. The first underpins the current safety assessment to ensure the most up to date knowledge is used. The second is a three-year programme that started in 2001. This investigates new and emerging scientific techniques (such as gene arrays, metabolomics and proteomics) and explores how they might be used to refine the current safety assessment.

This research is undertaken by independent research scientists and is peer reviewed before final reports are made publicly available through the FSA's library. Details of the research programme are published in the FSA's research and surveys programmes annual report and are available on the FSA website at www.foodstandards.gov.uk.

General Practitioners

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the GPs' contract includes recognition of the number of drug addicts treated beyond capitation alone. [129136]

Mr. Hutton: Under the new general medical service contract, most patient services will be funded by weighted capitation.

With effect from 1 April 2004, there will be a national enhanced service for the treatment of patients with specialised drug and alcohol misuse problems. This will be based on national specifications and there will be additional funding.

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what constitutes an improvement to a GP's premises, as referred to in the Department of Health Public Service Agreements from 1998. [128908]

Mr. Hutton: Improvements are building works that lead to a substantive change to the premises from which a primary care team provides services, which in the view of the primary care trust, or its predecessor health authority, improve patient access to services or enhance the working environment for the primary care team.

Green Transport Policies

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the NHS hospital trusts which have implemented green transport policies at the request of their local planning authorities. [129642]

Mr. Hutton: Data on national health service trust transport plans implemented at the request of local authorities are not collected centrally.

Health and Social Services (Merseyside)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of health and social services in Merseyside. [129063]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The publication of the 2003 national health service performance ratings was undertaken by the Commission for Health Improvement, on behalf of the Department. The performance ratings contain full star ratings for acute/specialist and ambulance trusts and for the first time, mental health and primary care trusts.

Information on all the star ratings awarded in 2003 for the Cheshire and Merseyside region can be found at http://www.nhs.uk/root/StarRatings/StrategicHealthAuthority.asp/SHACode=Q15

The Department's social services inspectorate produces for each council social services department an annual performance report. This includes information about the standard of service over the preceding year and the capacity for improvement for the coming year and beyond. Star ratings are awarded each November to every social services department.

The star ratings awarded to the Merseyside councils in 2002 are shown as follows:

2 star
Cheshire
Knowsley
Sefton
Warrington

1 star
Halton
Liverpool
St. Helens
Wirral

Information on star ratings for all council social services departments can be found in the social service inspectorate's 2002–03 annual report. A copy of the report can be found at http://www.doh.uk/ssi/ciann-12.htm

Health Care (Buckinghamshire)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations were cancelled in hospitals in (a) Chesham and Amersham and (b) Buckinghamshire in the last quarter for which figures are available; what percentage of the cancelled operations were subsequently carried out in four weeks; and if he will make a statement. [130595]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department collects quarterly data on last minute cancelled operations for non-clinical reasons at trust level (that is, patients cancelled on the day of admission, after admission, or on the day of surgery). Figures for the first quarter of 2003–04 were published on 11 September 2003. Data by individual hospital sites are not collected.

The percentage of cancelled operations that were consequently carried out within four weeks can not be calculated from the data available. However, data are available for the number of patients who were not treated within four weeks of a last minute cancellation as part of the central data collection arrangements for the NHS Plan cancelled operations guarantee. These data are shown in the table for Buckinghamshire Hospitals NHS Trust, Heatherwood and Wexham Park Hospitals NHS Trust, and Milton Keynes General Hospital NHS Trust.

Quarter 1, 2003–04

	Number of last minute cancellations for non-acute clinical reasons	Number of patients not admitted within 28 days of a last minute cancellation
Buckinghamshire Hospitals NHS Trust	129	13
Heatherwood and Wexham Park Hospitals NHS Trust	73	0
Milton Keynes General Hospital NHS Trust	47	0

Note:
The NHS Plan stated: "From 2002, when a patient's operation is cancelled by the hospital on the day of surgery for non clinical reasons, the hospital will have to offer another binding date within a maximum of the next 28 days or fund the patient's treatment at the time and hospital of the patient's choice". From April 2003, the cancelled operations guarantee was extended to apply to cancellations that occur on or after the day of admission.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have been waiting to be registered by NHS dentists in (a) Chesham and Amersham and (b) Buckinghamshire in each year since 1 January 1996. [130597]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he is taking to increase the number of dental practices taking NHS patients in (a) Chesham and Amersham and (b) Buckinghamshire. [130599]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Subject to the will of Parliament, the Health & Social Care (Community Health & Standards) Bill would enable primary care trusts (PCTs) to provide assistance and support to dental practices with which they contract. To enable PCTs to provide such assistance in advance of 2005, the general dental services incentive schemes directions 2003 have been published, together with guidance to PCTs.

To support the change programme, a £10 million package of investment was announced on 12 August. A National Health Service team, backed by £9 million, will support PCTs where access is most challenging, providing advice and guidance on best practice in increasing access and modernising dentistry locally to tackle longstanding bottlenecks where it is hard to find a NHS dentist. The remaining £1 million will assist PCTs, local dental committees and dentists in preparing for the change.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) general practitioners and (b) vacancies for general practitioners there are in (i) Chesham and Amersham and (ii) Buckinghamshire. [130600]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of general practitioners for the Buckinghamshire area is shown in the table.

Unrestricted Principals and Equivalents (UPEs)[1] for Primary Care Trusts in the Buckinghamshire area, June 2003

Numbers (headcount)

	All practitioners	UPEs[1]
June 2003	of which:
Milton Keynes PCT	123	117
Vale of Aylesbury PCT	136	112
Chiltern and South Bucks PCT	109	96
Wycombe PCT	93	81

[1] UPEs include General Medical Services Unrestricted Principals, Personal Medical Services, Contracted GPs and PMS Salaried GPs.
Data as at 3Q June 2003
Source:
Department of Health General and Personal Medical Services Statistics.

With regard to the number of general practitioner vacancies, the Department carries out an annual survey of GP recruitment and retention of which the latest published data are for 2001–02. The information available for Buckinghamshire covers all vacancies outstanding at any time in the 12 month period between the 1 March 2001 and 28 February 2002. This information relates to Buckinghamshire health authority (HA), which had 27 GP vacancies, which were outstanding at some time in the 12 month period. For this survey, it is not possible to break the information down below HA level.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the funding he announced to support the hospice movement has been allocated to (a) Chesham and Amersham and (b) Buckinghamshire; and if he will make a statement. [130601]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The additional £50 million per annum has been made available to support specialist care, including hospices, for three years beginning 2003–04. This extra £50 million is to help tackle inequalities in access to specialist palliative care in a range of settings, including hospices and to enable the national health service to increase their contribution to the cost hospices incur in providing agreed levels of service. The level of funding agreed for hospices, both from the additional £50 million and from local resources, is a matter for local discussion and decision.

Networks were asked to submit their proposed investment plan for the use of their allocation from the £50 million to the National Partnership Group (a joint NHS/voluntary sector group). Their plans have been approved and funding allocated for specialist palliative care services.

The Thames Valley Cancer Network, in which Chesham, Amersham and Buckinghamshire sit, received £1.844 million from the central allocation. The use of the funds will be monitored against plans.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with health organisations in (a) Chesham and Amersham and (b) Buckinghamshire during the last 12 months. [130602]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There have been no recent discussions with health organisations in Buckinghamshire.

Thames Valley Strategic Health Authority, which, since 'Shifting the Balance of Power', now performance manages National Health Service health services in the Buckinghamshire area, regularly meets with the management of the trusts in Buckinghamshire. The Department and Ministers will continue to work with the local NHS to review the progress of the local economy.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding Buckinghamshire Health Authority received from the Government in (a) 2002–03 and (b) 2003–04; and how much it is expected that it will receive in 2004–05. [130604]

Ms Rosie Winterton: 2003–04 was the first year of direct allocations to primary care trusts. Prior to that, allocations were made to health authorities.

Revenue allocations to Buckinghamshire Health Authority and its successor primary care trusts for the time periods requested are shown in the table.

£ thousands

	Allocation
Health authority/Primary care trust	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05
Buckinghamshire HA	493,959	N/A	N/A
Chiltern and South Bucks PCT	N/A	117,675	128,126
Milton Keynes PCT	N/A	167,638	183,498
Vale of Aylesbury PCT	N/A	143,593	157,179
Wycombe PCT	N/A	107,852	117,956

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans he has to assess the (a) capital and (b) revenue requirements of hospitals within (i) Chesham and Amersham and (ii) Buckinghamshire; and if he will make a statement; [130605]

(2) what decisions have been taken within the last 12 months to make extra (a) capital and (b) revenue money available to hospitals within (i) Chesham and Amersham and (ii) Buckinghamshire; if he will list the (A) projects, (B) sums of money involved and (C) start dates; and if he will make a statement. [130606]

Dr. Ladyman: It is for primary care trusts in partnership with strategic health authorities and other local stakeholders to determine how best to use their revenue funds to meet national and local priorities for improving health, tackling health inequalities and modernising services.

Revenue funding is allocated to primary care trusts on the basis of the relative needs of their populations. A weighted capitation formula is used to determine each primary care trust's target share of available resources. National health service trusts as providers of services receive the bulk of their revenue funding from commissioning by primary care trusts.

Operational capital is allocated to all NHS trusts and PCTs primarily for minor capital investments and equipment replacement, and is distributed using a formula based on the size of the current asset base. Strategic capital is allocated directly to strategic health authorities to fund larger capital developments to facilitate strategic change, and is distributed using a population based formula. Strategic health authorities then prioritise allocations from the strategic capital to NHS trusts and PCTs in their patch.

It is for the local health economy to decide the most appropriate use of this capital funding in order to meet national and local priorities.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Oxford, West and Abingdon (Dr. Harris) of 13 May 2003, Official Report, column 234W, on target funding allocations, how much of the additional allocation became available to (a) Chesham and Amersham and (b) Buckinghamshire. [130607]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Cash increases to Buckinghamshire primary care trusts are shown in the table.

	2003–04 cash increase		2004–05 cash increase		2005–06 cash increase		Three year cash increase
Primary Care Trust	£000	%	£000	%	£000	%	£000	%
Chiltern and South Bucks	9,850	9.14	10,451	8.88	11,183	8.73	31,484	29.20
Milton Keynes	14,803	9.69	15,860	9.46	17,181	9.36	47,844	31.30
Vale of Aylesbury	12,684	9.69	13,586	9.46	14,720	9.37	40,990	31.31
Wycombe	9,433	9.58	10,104	9.37	10,969	9.30	30,506	31.00

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of residential care homes in (a) Chesham and Amersham and (b) Buckinghamshire have been inspected by the National Care Standards Commission since 1 April 2002. [130608]

Dr. Ladyman: All of the residential care homes in Chesham and Amersham, and in Buckinghamshire have been inspected by the National Care Standards Commission since 1 April 2002.

Health Care (North Cheshire)

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to ensure that the North Cheshire Hospitals NHS Trust meets the outpatient targets set by the Government; and if he will make a statement. [129928]

Miss Melanie Johnson: North Cheshire Hospitals National Health Service Trust is making every effort to meet the Government's target of 21 weeks for a first outpatient appointment. This includes regular discussions between clinicians and managers about clinical capacity and modernising out-patient processes. The Cheshire and Merseyside Strategic Health Authority continually monitors the progress of all partner organisations, including North Cheshire Hospitals NHS Trust, against Government targets.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to improve access to general practitioners in Warrington; and what discussions have taken place with the Warrington Primary Care Trust to ensure that the targets for access are met. [129929]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Steps being taken to improve access to general practitioners in Warrington include Warrington Primary Care Trust (PCT) employing an access facilitator, who is working with eight GP practices to redesign services in order to improve access. The PCT board has in addition approved the recruitment of additional salaried GPs and nurse practitioners. Individual practices are also being supported in reviewing their appointment management processes.

The Cheshire and Merseyside Strategic Health Authority has established performance monitoring processes to gauge PCTs' progress on meeting GP access targets.

Health Care Assistants

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many health care assistants have been seconded to train as nurses in each acute trust, in each year since the scheme was introduced; [130045]

(2) what records are kept of the number of health care assistants who apply for secondments to train as nurses and are refused such secondments; [130046]

(3) how many NHS trusts are refusing all secondment applications from health care assistants who wish to train as nurses; and which of these trusts have decided to ban all secondments, whatever training is involved. [130047]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 17 September 2003]: The number of health care assistants seconded to train as nurses is a matter for local determination. Records of numbers accepted by trusts, refused applications for secondments and trusts not offering secondments are not collected centrally.

In the current financial year, workforce development confederations plan to support 6,966 secondments. The Department is substantially increasing the amount of funding available in the years 2004–05 and 2005–06.

For the current financial year, central funding has been provided for up to 15 per cent. of the nurses in training to be on secondments.

Health Protection Agency

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what stocks of vital materiel the Health Protection Agency is procuring to prepare for an attack by nuclear, biological, radiological or chemical weapons. [128666]

Mr. Hutton: The Health Protection Agency (HPA) is not procuring any stocks of vital material in preparation for an attack using chemical, biological, radiological or nuclear (CBRN) weapons. The procurement of health-related CBRN countermeasures is the responsibility of the Department and, in undertaking this role, the Department seeks scientific and technical advice from the HPA as required.

Health Staff (Performance)

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the Government is taking to identify poorly performing (a) doctors and (b) nurses. [130155]

Mr. Hutton: The Government established the National Clinical Assessment Authority in April 2001. The key functions of the Authority include helping local organisations manage problems quickly and effectively; promoting effective local and national procedures for preventing, identifying and resolving performance problems; and providing individual assessments that recommend practical ways in which individual performance can be improved.

At present the National Clinical Assessment Authority applies only to doctors and dentists. The Government will consider the case for whether a similar approach would be appropriate for the other health professions.

Health Visiting Services

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the implications for effective early intervention in cases of potential child abuse of the reduction in health visiting services in South Worcestershire. [129312]

Dr. Ladyman: It is for local organisations to determine the health visiting workforce required to deliver local and national health priorities including child health.

The proposals which have been put forward by South Worcestershire Primary Care Trust are based upon the commitment to provide a family-centred health visiting service which will work with individuals, families and communities to improve child health and tackle health inequalities. The review process for health visiting also took into account public health deprivation indices, the number of children aged up to four years registered with a general practitioner and the number of children currently on the child protection register. All families with children under five years will continue to have access to a named health visitor attached to their general practitioner's practice for advice on health and parenting issues.

The Department is currently funding a range of initiatives to support primary care trusts in promoting recruitment, retention and return to practice within the primary care nursing and health visiting workforce.

High Security Hospital Patients

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons he intends to move 400 patients from high security hospitals to prison settings by 2004. [130328]

Dr. Ladyman: Paragraph 14.35 of the NHS Plan said that by 2004 up to 400 patients should have moved from the high security hospitals to more appropriate accommodation. A programme is under way aimed at moving up to 400 patients from high security hospitals to more appropriate accommodation by 2004.

It is intended that the patients concerned should move to less secure hospitals or other suitable settings rather than to prisons. The programme has been initiated to address the problem of patients remaining in high security hospitals for longer than safety and security considerations dictate, which is an infringement of human rights and wasteful of scarce resources. The movement out of inappropriately placed patients will also facilitate the admission of people who do need high security care and treatment, including prisoners requiring transfer.

Histopathology

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will assess the impact on patients of the availability of histopathology consultants working in the NHS. [129110]

Miss Melanie Johnson: It is for cancer networks to work in partnership with workforce development confederations and strategic health authorities to put in place a sustainable process to assess, plan and review their work force needs and the education and training of all staff linked to local and national priorities for cancer.

To meet NHS Plan and Cancer Plan commitments to get the staff that the national health service needs to deliver high quality care to patients, the Department is taking steps to increase the overall number of histopathologists. Three histopathology training schools were piloted in Leeds, Leicester and Southampton. The schools trained 18 senior house officers a year to be able to apply for specialist registrar posts. Building on their early success, we are increasing funding to the existing schools to enrol 24 trainees each year. We are also increasing the number of schools from three to 12 and raising the annual intake from 18 to 96 by 2005–06.

We have also set up an intensive training programme at Southampton for exceptional overseas graduates with at least two years previous experience in pathology. The aim of the programme is to provide support and targeted training and to assess competence and educational needs in three months, rather than in one year, resulting in an extra eight histopathologists a year being eligible to apply for specialist registrar posts in histopathology.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to train histopathology consultants. [129112]

Mr. Hutton: In line with the commitment in "The NHS Cancer Plan", in 2000–01 the Department set up three histopathology training schools in Leeds, Leicester and Southampton. These schools initially trained an extra 18 senior house officers a year, to be eligible to apply for specialist registrar (SpR) posts in histopathology. Building on early success, we are increasing funding to the schools to take on 24 trainees each year. We are also pleased to expand the initiative nationally, increasing the number of schools from three to 12 and raising the annual intake from 18 to 96 by 2005–06.

We have also set up an intensive training programme at Southampton for exceptional graduates with at least two years overseas experience in pathology. The aim of the programme is to provide support and targeted training and to assess competence and educational needs in three months, rather than in one year, resulting in an extra eight histopathologists a year being eligible to apply for SpR posts in histopathology.

HIV

Mrs Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in (a) the UK and (b) Sefton are infected with HIV. [127667]

Miss Melanie Johnson: In 2002, 29,044 HIV-infected individuals were reported to be resident in England. Of these, 38 were resident in Sefton.

Hospices

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the £50 million he announced to support the hospice movement has (a) been allocated and (b) been spent; and if he will list the recipients of the funds. [128954]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 11 September 2003]: The additional £50 million per annum has been made available to support specialist care, including hospices, for three years beginning 2003–04. This extra £50 million is to help tackle inequalities in access to specialist palliative care in a range of settings, including hospices and to enable the national health service to increase their contribution to the cost hospices incur in providing agreed levels of service. The level of funding agreed for hospices, both from the additional £50 million and from local resources, is a matter for local discussion and decision.

All 34 cancer networks were asked to submit their proposed investment plan for the use of their allocation from the £50 million to the National Partnership Group for palliative care. The National Partnership Group—a joint NHS/voluntary sector group—has assessed all the investment plans and 32 cancer network plans have now been approved and funding allocated for specialist palliative care services. The use of funds will be monitored against plans. It is anticipated that information will be available on the first year's funding during 2004.

Hospital Acquired Infections

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 8 September 2003, Official Report, column 6W, on healthcare-associated infections, what the longer term strategy is; and what measures he will use to evaluate the contribution made by each of the targeted action plans. [129714]

Miss Melanie Johnson: On 9 June 2003 the Chief Medical Officer announced that he would be spearheading a new Government drive to tackle healthcare associated infections and in particular hospital acquired infections. Alongside action to target problem areas and step up monitoring of infections, he will look at evidence from other countries to see what we can learn from them, and an action plan for the longer term will be published later this year.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the incidence of hospital-acquired infections since March. [129484]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of reported incidents of hospital acquired infections is not available. Comprehensive data on hospital infections are currently only available for methicillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) blood stream infections.

A new national mandatory surveillance system for healthcare associated infection started with reporting of methicillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) blood stream infections (bacteraemias), in April 2001. All acute trusts in England now collect this information and results for the first year of this scheme (April 2001 to March 2002) were published by individual trusts in the Communicable Disease Report Weekly on 20 June 2002. They are available at www.phls.co.uk/publications/cdr/PDFfiles/2002/cdr2502.pdf.

National data on MRSA blood stream infections are published quarterly in the Communicable Disease Report Weekly. Data for the last quarter (1 April to 30 June 2003) will be published shortly.

Hospital Viruses

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nosocomial cases of small round-structured viruses there were in (a) England and (b) each strategic health authority in each month in (i) 2002 and (ii) 2003 up to the latest date for which figures are available. [128901]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Health Protection Agency has a voluntary reporting system for outbreaks of gastroenteritis, including those caused by norovirus (formerly known as small round structured virus, norwalk or norwalk-like virus). From 1 January 2002 to 31 March 2003, in England, there were there were 369[1] outbreaks affecting 10,975 patients and staff.

The number of cases by strategic health authority and by each month is not available. The table shows a regional breakdown of cases of norovirus infection in outbreaks in hospitals reported to the Communicable Disease Surveillance Centre of the Health Protection Agency from 1 January 2002 to 31 March 2003 in England.

[1] Outbreaks in England proven or suspected of being associated with norovirus.

Region[1]	Total cases in norovirus outbreaks[2]
Anglia and Oxford	2,265
North and West	1,247
North Thames	1,454
Northern and Yorkshire	2,550
South and West	1,481
South Thames	294
Trent	341
West Midlands	1,343
Total	10,975

[1] PHLS/NHS region.
[2] Patients and staff.

Hospital Waiting Lists/Times

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to reduce the number of patients in the Cheshire and Merseyside Strategic Health Authority area who have waited over nine months for in-patient treatment. [130925]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 18 September 2003]: All national health service trusts in Cheshire and Merseyside have agreed plans with primary care trusts (PCTs) and the strategic health authority (SHA)7 that deliver the maximum nine month wait target by 31 March 2004.

Most NHS trusts are planning to achieve this target earlier than the specified date.

The Cheshire and Merseyside SHA and PCTs monitor the waiting time target on a weekly basis. The service improvement managers assist wherever problems are experienced.

HRT

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Government have to restrict the use of hormone replacement therapy. [130106]

Dr. Ladyman: Following careful review of the recent findings from a number of studies that provide important new information on the safety of hormone replacement therapy (HRT), the committee on safety of medicines (CSM) and its expert working group on HRT have issued clear advice to prescribers and women.

The CSM has advised that, for short-term use of HRT for the relief of menopausal symptoms, the benefits outweigh the risks for many women. However, for longer-term use of HRT, prescribers are advised that each decision to start HRT should be made on an individual basis and that women should be made aware of the increased risk of the adverse effects, including cancer and cardiovascular disease. Each treatment decision should take into consideration the known risks and benefits of HRT, the contraindications for use and each woman's individual circumstances. In addition, the need to continue HRT treatment should be reappraised at least once yearly.

Product information is being updated to reflect fully the new information and will additionally advise prescribers that, for the treatment of post-menopausal symptoms, the lowest effective dose of HRT should be used and that treatment should only be continued as long as the benefit in alleviating severe symptoms outweighs the risks.

As with all licensed medicines, the CSM keeps the safety of HRT under close review, and would take appropriate action if further evidence relating to its safe use became available.

Human Fertilisation and Embryology

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many responses have been received by the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority on the sixth edition of their code of practice; and how many were from (a) individual patients, (b) clinics and (c) professional bodies; [131310]

(2) when the sixth edition of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority's code of practice will be implemented. [131311]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority (HFEA) has informed me that 59 responses were received to the consultation exercise on the sixth edition of its code of practice. Of these, three were from the public including patients, 22 were from clinics and 24 from professional and patient bodies.

The HFEA is aiming to publish the new edition before the end of the year. It will be implemented immediately on publication.

Jim Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many human embryos have been created specifically for the purposes of research since the passage of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1990; and how many such human embryos have been created by (a) fertilisation and (b) other processes. [129026]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority has informed me that since August 1991, when the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1990 came in to force, approximately 311 human embryos have been created for use in licensed research projects—257 between 1991 and 1997 and 54 since 1998. All of the embryos were created by fertilisation.

Illegal Meat

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the cost of the specialist training in illegal meat for local authority enforcement officers; whether the 30 candidates being appointed as regional advisers following the specialist training will be in addition to the current levels of local authority enforcement officers; who has been appointed to run the training and under what procedure they were chosen; and whether the funding for the training is to be taken from (a) the Food Standards Agency funding and (b) his Department's central funding. [130085]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The cost of the specialist training in illegal meat for 26 United Kingdom local authority officers and four officers from the Republic of Ireland, including accommodation, venue hire and travel and subsistence, was £40,000. The training of the UK officers was funded by the Food Standards Agency (FSA) and provided by Mallard Consultancy Ltd., following a competitive tendering process. The 26 candidates appointed as regional advisers in the UK will act in this capacity for 10 working days per year for the FSA. They will continue to be employed by their local authorities and, when not working on behalf of the FSA, will continue their normal work for their authorities. They are not additional staff for the local authorities. The FSA will reimburse the authorities for the cost of their time in carrying out work for the FSA.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of the candidates undertaking specialist training in illegal meat for local authority enforcement officers completed their training. [130087]

Miss Melanie Johnson: All 30 candidates who undertook the specialist training in illegal meat investigation and enforcement arranged by the Food Standards Agency completed their training.

Immigration

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the Department of Health's contribution to the Cabinet Office's review of immigration and infectious diseases. [131016]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Cabinet Office review of imported infections and immigration, which involves the Department and other Government Departments, is on-going and no decisions have been taken.

Immunisation

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of children were immunised by their 2nd birthday in England in 2001–02 for (a) diphtheria, (b) tetanus, (c) polio, (d) pertussis, (e) Hib and (f) MMR. [127523]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Information about uptake rates for routine childhood immunisations by their second birthday for diphtheria, tetanus, polio, tetanus, Hib and measles/mumps/rubella are shown in the following table:

Completed primary courses at two years of age England 2001–02
Immunised by 2nd birthday in 2001–02 Per cent.

Diptheria	Polio	Tetanus	Whooping cough	Hib	Measles/ mumps/ rubella
93.8	93.7	93.8	93	93.3	84.1

Infectious Patients

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 24 June 2003, Official Report, column 721W, on infectious patients, what information was collected centrally from the local risk assessments; and if he will publish such information. [129123]

Miss Melanie Johnson: These risk assessments were not collected centrally.

Information Management

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which NHS trusts are experiencing problems with the compatibility of the computer systems used to record data. [130156]

Mr. Hutton: Problems with compatibility are the responsibility of local trusts to resolve with their suppliers. No data are currently collected and no reports are routinely made to the Department on any such problems. The collection of such data is not a part of core reporting requirements for the National Health Service and it would not be economically viable or appropriate on business grounds to add this requirement.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to improve standards of information management in the NHS. [130157]

Mr. Hutton: Two key initiatives which aim to improve the standards of information management in the national health service focus on the better recording and exchange of information to national standards and the development of health informatics skills.

All national standards for the recording and transfer of information across the NHS now have to be approved by the independent NHS information standards board. This ensures that data are collected using agreed common standards so that NHS information can be used consistently across the NHS. When approved, these standards are included within the NHS data dictionary which provides the core reference manual on information standards for the NHS. Part of the approval process of the information standards board is to ensure compatibility with the design authority of the national programme for information technology. This Design Authority is responsible for the design of the future NHS IT infrastructure through which much patient-related information will be collected in future.

The management of information to support the delivery of patient care and healthcare service planning and performance is undertaken by a range of people within the NHS. This includes clinicians, managers and specialist information analysts working in a range of local and national NHS organisations. For effective use of information, skills in health informatics are vital to ensure that information is not misinterpreted or misunderstood. The National Health Informatics Development Programme run by the NHS Information Authority is developing a range of products and services which aim to improve these across the NHS, so that the analysis and interpretation of information is undertaken to clear professional standards.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance his Department gives to health authorities to ensure they comply with the Freedom of Information Act 2000. [130158]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department set up a high level steering group in 2001 to oversee implementation of the Freedom of Information Act in the Department itself and in the National Health Service.

In line with the Government's policy of empowering front-line staff, the steering group commissioned a project, led by South East London Strategic Health Authority, to develop an implementation plan and provide guidance on Freedom of Information for the NHS. NHS staff from trusts and strategic health authorities have collaborated to develop the plan and guidance.

Working closely with the Information Commissioner's office, the project has produced model publication schemes, which have been adopted by trusts, strategic health authorities and independent practitioners. Guidance on other aspects of Freedom of Information has been made available by the project through a national awareness programme.

Within the Department, a Freedom of Information Unit (also set up in 2001), supports the steering group and provides support as needed by the NHS project team. This unit has prepared a departmental implementation plan and begun conducting awareness events for all staff.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress of the NHS national information technology programme. [130395]

Mr. Hutton: The national programme for information technology in the national health service is continuing to make good progress on schedule. The previously published milestones have all been met, in particular for:

E-booking—three bidders were shortlisted on time, best and final offer proposals were received at the end of August 2003 and the project received a successful gateway 3 review.

The new NHS network—six responses to the preliminary invitation to negotiate were received on time, three bidders were shortlisted on schedule and we are looking to an accelerated procurement timetable to select a winner by the end of 2003.

Electronic transfer of prescriptions—the target remains as 50 per cent. of transactions by the end of 2005 and 100 per cent. by the end of 2007. Scope and objectives have been agreed by the programme board.

Integrated care records service (National Patient Record Spine)— four bidders' proposals received on time on 30 June 2003. Two shortlisted companies are bidding. Contract award planned for 31 October 2003.

Integrated care records service (local service providers)—10 shortlisted bidders against five clusters of NHS strategic health authorities are continuing in the procurement competition.

Intermediate Care Beds

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many new intermediate care beds there have been in the last two years; [127565]

(2) where new NHS intermediate care bed capacity has been introduced in the last two years. [127566]

Dr. Ladyman: Data are not available to assess the growth of intermediate care (IC) beds in the last two years. Between the 1999–2000 baseline for growth in IC beds and the end of June 2003, 3,600 additional beds have been established. New capacity has been established in all strategic health authorities but, because of restructuring within the national health service, precise data for each authority are not available.

Junior Doctors

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many junior doctors were in training in the NHS in England on (a) a headcount and (b) a whole-time-equivalent basis, in each year since 1990. [128931]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the tables.

Hospital, public health medicine and community health services (HCHS) and general medical practitioners: doctors in training by grade; 1990–2002. England, as at 30 September

Numbers

	All training grades		Of which HCHS training grades
	Hc	Wte	Hc	Wte
1990	26,015	25,255.7	24,453	23,709.7
1991	26,874	26,151.6	25,235	24,529.8
1992	27,353	26,531.0	25,740	24,933.6
1993	28,057	27,236.3	26,528	25,731.7
1994	28,295	27,558.9	26,850	26,138.7
1995	29,510	28,739.7	28,106	27,364.5
1996	30,173	29,343.2	28,868	28,065.0
1997	31,656	30,887.6	30,313	29,586.6
1998	32,294	31,483.7	30,848	30,090.9
1999	33,047	31,974.1	31,527	30,499.3
2000	33,581	32,801.9	31,922	31,204.5
2001	34,675	33,815.8	32,792	32,004.8
2002	36,895	35,839.3	34,915	33,932.1

(Hc) Headcount
(Wte) Whole time equivalents

Numbers

	Registrar Group		Senior House Officer		House Officer		GP Registrars
	Hc	Wte	Hc	Wte	Hc	Wte	Hc	Wte
1990	10,345	9,700.4	11,165	11,056.2	3,126	3,120.7	1,562	1,546.0
1991	10,541	9,926.6	11,549	11,460.6	3,163	3,159.0	1,639	1,621.8
1992	10,732	10,076.8	11,865	11,717.8	3,143	3,138.9	1,613	1,597.4
1993	11,049	10,357.2	12,299	12,198.9	3,180	3,175.5	1,529	1,504.6
1994	11,213	10,592.3	12,541	12,459.3	3,096	3,087.1	1,445	1,420.2
1995	11,466	10,841.9	13,342	13,238.5	3,298	3,284.2	1,404	1,375.2
1996	11,385	10,716.8	14,213	14,084.3	3,270	3,263.9	1,305	1,278.2
1997	11,909	11,335.9	15,006	14,860.1	3,398	3,390.6	1,343	1,301.0
1998	12,131	11,559.2	15,221	15,042.2	3,496	3,489.5	1,446	1,392.8
1999	12,682	12,085.3	15,239	14,865.9	3,606	3,548.0	1,520	1,474.8
2000	12,730	12,198.9	15,501	15,322.4	3,691	3,683.2	1,659	1,597.4
2001	13,220	12,629.1	15,830	15,642.5	3,742	3,733.2	1,883	1,811.0
2002	13,770	13,031.1	17,135	16,912.0	4,010	3,989.0	1,980	1,907.2

(He) Headcount
(Wte) Whole time equivalents
Source:
Department of Health medical and dental workforce census.

Local Exercise Action Pilots

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health where the Local Exercise Action Pilots are to take place; how his Department will measure the effectiveness of the LEAP pilots; and who will be eligible to participate in the LEAP pilots. [130113]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Local Exercise Action Pilots (LEAP) will test out different community approaches to increasing levels of and access to physical activity. They will help to establish the evidence base on what works, and support the delivery of milestones in the national service frameworks and priorities and planning framework. The on-going results will inform and lead action on physical activity across the national health service.

The LEAP pilots are based in based in primary care trusts (PCT) at:

Durham Dales PCT;

Hastings and St. Leonards PCT;

Great Yarmouth PCT;

North Kirklees PCT;

Wandsworth PCT;

Dudley Beacon and Castle PCT;

Ashton, Leigh and Wigan PCT;

Nottingham City PCT; and

West of Cornwall PCT.

Eligibility to participate in the pilots depends on the specific groups to be targeted by each pilot. All pilot sites are in neighbourhood renewal areas and up to three are also in sport action zones. The pilots focus on high risk and disadvantaged groups.

We will be measuring both the effectiveness of the direct interventions in the pilots and the extent to which the physical activity messages in those pilots that are community wide have impacted at a community level.

Low Flying

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessments have been undertaken by the Department of the effect of military low flying exercises on (a) blood pressure, (b) hearing and (c) cardio-vascular state. [129193]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department has not funded research on the effect of military low flying exercises on blood pressure, hearing or cardio-vascular state in the civilian population.

Lincolnshire NHS Partnership Trust

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) psychiatric doctors, (b) psychiatric nurses, (c) agency nurses and (d) new category primary care mental health workers were employed in Lincolnshire NHS Trust in 2003. [129286]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information is shown in the tables.

Hospital, public health medicine and community health services (HCHS): Doctors in Lincolnshire Partnership NHS Trust (RP7) with a specialty in psychiatric medicine

Numbers (headcount)

	September 2002		March 2003
England	All staff	Consultants	All staff	Consultants
Psychiatry group total	60	28	[1]—	30
Child and adolescent psychiatry	6	4	[1]—	5
General Psychiatry	42	16	[1]—	17
Learning disabilities	6	4	[1]—	3
Old age psychiatry	5	3	[1]—	4
Psychotherapy	1	1	[1]—	1

[1] Date not available

Note:

Data as at 30 September or as at 31 March

Source:

Department of Health medical and dental workforce census

NHS hospital and community services qualified psychiatric nurses in the Lincolnshire Partnership NHS Trust as at 30 September 2002

	Headcount
Lincolnshire Partnership NHS Trust	464

Source:

Department of Health Non-medical Workforce Census

Figures for the numbers of agency nurses and new category primary care mental health workers are not held centrally.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) assertive outreach teams, (b) early intervention teams and (c) crisis resolution teams work in the area of Lincolnshire NHS Trust; and how many of each offer 24 hour cover. [129287]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Lincolnshire Partnership National Health Service Trust has three assertive outreach teams and one pilot early intervention team available during office hours. There is also one crisis resolution team, which offers 24-hour cover.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what facilities exist offering female service users access to a women-only day centre in Lincolnshire NHS Trust. [129288]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Lincolnshire Partnership National Health Service Trust does not currently provide a women-only day centre.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what mechanisms are in place in Lincolnshire NHS Trust which allow carers to take respite breaks. [129289]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Lincolnshire Partnership National Health Service Trust is working with the mental health charity Rethink to provide comprehensive services for carers across Lincolnshire.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the number of patients using mental health services has changed over the last two years in the Lincolnshire NHS Trust. [129290]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Lincolnshire Partnership National Health Service Trust was established in June 2002. Data on changes in the number of patients using the trust's mental health services over the last two years are therefore not available.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what special arrangements have been made in the Lincolnshire NHS Trust for (a) homeless people, (b) minority ethnic people and (c) asylum seekers needing mental health services. [129291]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Lincolnshire Partnership National Health Service Trust funds the mental health charity Rethink to provide a homeless persons' officer in Lincoln. It is working with the social services department to develop a race equality scheme for service users. The Trust does not have any special arrangements for asylum seekers needing mental health services.

Maternity Services (Shropshire)

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much of the additional investment given to maternity units from May 2001 has gone to Oswestry's maternity services. [130224]

Dr. Ladyman: The extra £100 million announced in May 2001 was invested over two years, 2001–02 and 2002–03, to modernise and refurbish maternity units. Over 200 maternity units in the country are benefiting from this new investment. Local services decided on the top local priorities for investment.

The Royal Shrewsbury Hospital NHS Trust received £896,000, which was spent on modernisation of the Shrewsbury consultant-led unit including sleeping facilities for fathers and a transitional care ward. These facilities benefit mothers from the Oswestry area who give birth at Shrewsbury.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average number of babies born per bed per day was in labour wards in (a) England and (b) Shropshire in each year since 1997. [130225]

Dr. Ladyman: This information is not available in the form requested. Information about maternities and maternity beds in England is shown in the table. This information is not available for Shropshire.

Number of maternities and available maternity beds, England, 1997–98 to 2001–02

	Maternities	Available maternity beds	Maternities per bed per day
1997–98	585,000	10,781	0.15
1998–99	577,500	10,398	0.15
1999–2000	565,300	10,203	0.15
2000–01	549,600	9,767	0.15
2001–02	541,700	9,812	0.15

Source:

Maternities—DH/SD3G

Available beds—DH/hospital activity statistics

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many full-time equivalent midwives were employed by the NHS in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [130228]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is in the following table.

	Number of full-time equivalent midwives
1998	18,168
1999	17,876
2000	17,662
2001	18,048
2002	18,119

Note:
Data as at 30 September
Source:
Department of Health NHS Hospital and Community Health Services
Non-Medical Workforce Census

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps were made to recruit midwives to cover maternity leave before the decision was made to close the maternity unit at the Robert James and Agnes Hunt Orthopaedic Hospital. [130229]

Dr. Ladyman: Posts held by staff on maternity leave are not available to be offered permanently to new staff. However the Royal Shrewsbury Hospital NHS Trust (which is responsible for the maternity unit at the Robert Jones and Agnes Hunt Orthopaedic Hospital) has been involved in a number of initiatives to help address the current situation. These include: advertising in the nursing press; and midwifery recruitment stands at the national health service careers fair in Telford and at the Shrewsbury flower show.

In addition, all midwifery bank shifts available in Shropshire have been used and part-time staff have been asked to work extra shifts. The Trust has also approached two agencies in the area.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the closure of the maternity unit at the Robert James and Agnes Hunt Orthopaedic Hospital will be temporary. [130230]

Dr. Ladyman: The maternity unit at Oswestry, which is managed by the Royal Shrewsbury Hospital NHS Trust, is to close temporarily due to a large number of midwives across Shropshire taking maternity leave. The Trust plans to reopen the unit on 1 April 2004. During this period women in the area will still be able to choose to give birth at either: Shrewsbury general practitioners maternity unit; Shrewsbury consultant maternity unit; home; or at one of the maternity units in Wales.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the cost of refurbishing the maternity unit at the Robert James and Agnes Hunt Orthopaedic Hospital at Gobowen to the latest quality standards with a projected life span of 25 years. [130231]

Dr. Ladyman: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the cost of constructing a maternity unit with eight beds attached to a primary care centre. [130232]

Dr. Ladyman: Any estimate of the cost of construction of a particular unit will obviously be subject to a number of local factors. Without further specific information, there are too many variables to make a realistic estimate of the likely costs involved.

Medical Trainees

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) GPs and (b) nurses have been in training in (i) South Tyneside, (ii) the North East and (iii) the UK in each year since 1997. [130740]

Mr. Hutton: The numbers (headcount) of general practitioner registrars in South Tyneside primary care trust (PCT), Northumberland, Tyne and Wear and County Durham and Tees Valley strategic health authorities (SHAs) and England in each year since 1997 are shown in table 1.

Table 1—GP registrars in South Tyneside, the North East and England

Numbers (headcount)

	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002	June 2003
South Tyneside PCT	[1]—	[1]—	1	1	3	3	4
Northumberland, Tyne and Wear SHA and County Durham and Tees Valley SHA	53	80	77	83	89	110	129
England	1,343	1,446	1,520	1,659	1,883	1,980	2,157

[1] Not available.
Source:
Department of Health General and Personal Medical Services Statistics.

The numbers (whole time equivalent) of pre-registration nurses in training in the Northern England and County Durham and Tees Valley Workforce Development Confederations (WDC) and England in each year since 1997 are shown in Table 2. Information is not available at South Tyneside PCT level.

Table 2—Number of students in pre-registration nursing and midwifery training between 1998–99 and 2002–03

Numbers (whole time equivalent)

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03
Northern England WDC and County Durham and Tees Valley WDC	1,973	2,480	2,227	2,915	2,826
England	39,319	44,005	48,422	53,299	58,902

Source:
Financial and Workforce Information Return.

Information about GP registrars and nurses in training in Scotland and Wales is the responsibility of the devolved Administrations. Whilst the institutions in Northern Ireland are dissolved, responsibility rests with Ministers in the Northern Ireland Office.

Medicines (Advertisements)

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which over the counter medicines are to be freed from the ban on advertising. [130104]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government have recently announced their intention to remove the ban on advertising over the counter (OTC) medicines for certain diseases and conditions. The change will mean that if a product is classified as available for purchase by consumers then they will be able to receive advertising about the medicine.

The change will affect OTC medicines for the treatment, prevention or diagnosis of bone diseases, cardiovascular diseases, diseases of the liver, biliary system and pancreas, endocrine diseases, genetic disorders, joint, rheumatic and collagen diseases, psychiatric diseases, serious disorders of the eye and ear, serious gastrointestinal diseases, serious neurological and muscular diseases, serious renal diseases, serious respiratory diseases and serious skin disorders. The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency is not aware of any medicines at present classified as suitable for OTC supply in a number of these categories, including psychiatric diseases, endocrine diseases and genetic diseases.

Examples of OTC products that will be affected by the change include aspirin 75 mg tablets, calcium/vitamin D preparations, fish oils, isphagula, nitrates and theophylline and aminophylline products. To protect public safety, these changes will not come into force until the necessary guidelines for advertisers are in place and information and training for pharmacy staff have been provided.

The ban on advertising any prescription-only medicine to the public will remain.

Mental Health

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) mean and (b) median waiting times for (i) initial and (ii) follow-up appointments for accessing respite care for mental health users were in each primary care trust for the most recent three quarters available. [131026]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not hold this information centrally.

Mersey Regional Ambulance Service

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to improve the performance of the Mersey Regional Ambulance Service. [130926]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 18 September 2003]: The Mersey Regional Ambulance Service National Health Service Trust has an action plan with the central commissioning group (CCG), which represents the 15 primary care trusts across Cheshire and Merseyside.

The immediate actions agreed with the CCG include:

additional resources to provide an intermediate patient transport service whereby out-patient transport staff will be provided with additional training and resources in order to assist with the response to emergency demand;

introducing additional solo operated rapid response vehicles;

extending the hours of the existing solo operated rapid response vehicles; and introduction of a community paramedic.

The Mersey Regional Ambulance Service NHS Trust and the CCG are assessing further action needed to ensure the Trust achieves a headline performance of 80 per cent. from April 2004. The Trust will present these plans by October 2003.

Methylphenidate

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he plans to investigate the extent of Methylphenidate prescribing in the UK. [130259]

Dr. Ladyman: Information is collected on the number of prescription items of all Methylphenidate drugs dispensed in the community. The data include prescriptions prescribed in general practitioner practices, and prescriptions prescribed in hospitals that have been dispensed in the community. Private prescriptions, and prescriptions dispensed in hospitals are not included. Numbers of prescriptions in England for the years 1997 to 2002 are set out in the table.

	Items (Thousand)
1997	92.1
1998	126.6
1999	158.0
2000	186.2
2001	208.5
2002	254.0

In 2000, the National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) made an appraisal of the use of Methylphenidate in the treatment of attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD). NICE estimated that approximately 1 per cent. of all school-aged children—about 69,000 of 6 to 16-year-olds in England met the diagnostic criteria for Hyperkinetic Disorder, the more severe type ADHD, of whom some 45,000 might benefit from Methylphenidate were not receiving this treatment. A review of the appraisal is planned for this year.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) short and (b) long-term adverse effects are described with Methylphenidate. [130260]

Dr. Ladyman: Methylphenidate (sold in the UK as Ritalin, Equasym and Concerta XL) is licensed for use in children over six years of age as part of a comprehensive treatment programme for attention deficit hyperactivity disorder, where remedial measures alone prove insufficient.

The most common short-term adverse effects generally occur at the beginning of treatment, and include central nervous system effects, such as nervousness and insomnia, and gastro-intestinal effects, such as abdominal pain, nausea and vomiting.

The long-term safety and efficacy profiles of methylphenidate are not fully known. This is reflected in the product information of Ritalin provided to prescribers which advises that patients requiring long-term therapy should be carefully monitored. It warns of the risk of moderately reduced weight gain and slight growth retardation with the long-term use of stimulants in children and that careful monitoring of growth is recommended. It also recommends that blood tests should be performed periodically during long-term use.

Microbiology Laboratories

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what systems are in place to ensure that the former Public Health Laboratory Service microbiology laboratories (a) maintain their standards of practice under NHS trusts and (b) continue to report national data statistics to central Government; [130077]

(2) what safeguards are in place to ensure that food-borne disease is given high priority by the Health Protection Agency when commissioning services from microbiology laboratories; [130078]

(3) what service level agreements are in place for microbiology laboratories. [130079]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Health Protection Agency is in the final stages of putting in place a detailed service level agreement (SLA) with those national health service trusts from which it is commissioning public health services from NHS microbiology laboratories. Reporting of results, submission of samples and food-related public health work are all specified in detail within the SLA, which provides a clear exposition of the range and level of service required.

To improve clinical governance, raise quality standards and improve openness and transparency for patients, the Department recently decided that all NHS pathology laboratories in England should enrol with an appropriate accreditation scheme. Further information will be contained in the Department's document on modernising pathology services, which will be published later this year.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what supporting inspection arrangements are in place for microbiology laboratories. [130080]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department expects to appoint a new inspector of microbiology shortly, with the key aim of ensuring high quality public health and clinical microbiology. His/her functions will include:

ensuring that all microbiology laboratories providing services to the national health service meet their responsibilities for public health surveillance;

promoting standards and ensuring quality in the operation of microbiology services;

identifying significant gaps in specialist and reference microbiological testing that are relevant to public health surveillance;

achieving adherence to standard operating procedures in diagnostic microbiology.

To improve clinical governance, raise quality standards and improve openness and transparency for patients, the Department recently decided that all NHS pathology laboratories in England should enrol with an appropriate accreditation scheme. Further information will be contained in the Department's document on modernising pathology services, which will be published in the autumn.

Midwives

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many midwives were employed in the NHS in (a) 1997 and (b) 2002, broken down by health authority. [130955]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the table. The 1997 health authority data has been mapped into strategic health authority (SHA) area. SHAs were introduced in 2001.

SHA	1997	2002
Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridgeshire	715	910
Bedfordshire and Hertfordshire	541	605
Essex	596	644
South Yorkshire	664	649
Trent	959	1,053
Leicestershire, Northamptonshire and Rutland	632	644
Shropshire and Staffordshire	638	652
Birmingham and The Black Country	1,261	1,234
Coventry, Warwickshire, Herefordshire and Worcestershire	720	739
North West London	864	842
North Central London	535	628
North East London	753	724
South East London	721	769
South West London	587	638
Northumberland, Tyne and Wear	699	675
County Durham and Tees Valley	513	566
North and East Yorkshire and Northern Lincolnshire	703	651
West Yorkshire	1,038	1,021
Cumbria and Lancashire	1,008	985
Greater Manchester	1,683	1,572
Cheshire and Merseyside	1,173	1,276
Thames Valley	876	1,004
Hampshire and Isle of Wight	771	730
Kent and Medway	703	660
Surrey and Sussex	728	1,020
Avon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire	1,126	1,091
South West Peninsula	751	797
Dorset and Somerset	427	470
Special health authorities and other statutory bodies	0	0
England	22,385	23,249

Mixed Sex Wards

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which hospitals under the control of primary care trusts have yet to end the use of mixed sex wards. [131034]

Miss Melanie Johnson: We have no plans to publish the names of trusts which are yet to meet the target.

The majority of national health service trusts were successful in eliminating mixed sex accommodation by the target date. The remainder will comply once current Private Finance Initiatives and other building projects are completed. These works affect just 2 per cent. of 10,000 wards and for the trusts involved, only affect a limited proportion of their wards.

MRI Scanners

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many MRI scanners each NHS trust has; and what the age of each machine is. [129760]

Miss Melanie Johnson: In the national health service in England, 145 NHS trusts have at least one magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) scanner installed. In total there are currently 206 MRI scanners installed.

A programme to provide an additional 50 machines was announced on 22 May 2003 as well as funding to support a programme of replacement over the next three years. We anticipate there will be approximately 275 MRI scanners by the end of 2004, and by December 2006, no MRI scanner will be older than 10 years.

The list of MRI scanners currently installed in the NHS in England has been placed in the Library.

MRSA

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many MRSA cases were reported by each acute trust in each year since 1997. [129687]

Miss Melanie Johnson: A new national mandatory surveillance system for healthcare associated infection started with reporting of methicillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) blood stream infections (bacteraemias), in April 2001. All acute trusts in England now collect this information and results for the first year of this scheme (April 2001 to March 2002) were published by individual trust in the Communicable Disease Report Weekly on 20 June 2002. They are available at www.phls.co.uk/publications/cdr/PDFfiles/2002/cdr2502.pdf. Information for 2002–03 will be published later this year.

Trust specific data will be published as part of the Chief Medical Officer's longer-term action plan to tackle healthcare associated infections.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the Answer of 1 September 2003, Official Report, columns 943–44W, on MRSA, to the hon. Member for Manchester, Central (Tony Lloyd), when each of the research programmes will report; which other projects are included in the wider programme; and what their completion dates are. [129723]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The current research programmes on methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA), giving lead researcher, project title and project end date, are shown in the table.

Lead researcher	Project title	Project end date
Professor Michael R.W. Brown, Department of Pharmacy and Pharmacology, University of Bath	Dormancy, resistance to antimicrobials and environmental survival.	March 2006
Dr. Mark H. Wilcox, Department of Microbiology, Leeds University	What is the size and nature of the current need for single room isolation in hospital and how does success or failure to isolate patients affect the control of MRSA?	May 2005
Dr. Alasdair MacGowan, Department of Medical Microbiology, Southmead Hospital	The development and evaluation of a population-based surveillance programme for antimicrobial resistance.	June 2006
Dr. Lucinda M.C. Hall, Department of Microbiology, Barts and The London School of Medicine and Dentistry	Mechanisms involved in the maintenance of antibiotic resistance.	September 2006
Professor Robert J. Pratt, Richard Wells Research Centre, Faculty of Health and Human Sciences, Thames Valley University	Collaborative research to reduce the incidence of hospital ward-acquired MRSA colonisation/infection using statistical process control (SPC) feedback and structured diagnosis.	February 2006
Dr. Stephanie Dancer, Scottish Centre for Infection and Environmental Health	Environmental organisms from hospital wards with differing antibiotic exposure.	December 2003
Professor Ian Chopra, Department of Microbiology, University of Leeds	Emergence of resistance to linezolid in Staphylococcus aureus and evaluation of combination therapies to suppress resistance.	April 2006
Dr. Jennifer A. Roberts, Department of Public Health and Policy, London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine	Faster testing for MRSA: models to estimate the cost-effectiveness of faster testing of cases admitted for hip and knee replacement.	November 2004
Dr. Cliodna A.M. McNulty, PHLS Primary Care Unit, Gloucester Royal Hospital	Household face-to-face survey of home held antibiotics and awareness of good antibiotic use.	September 2004
Dr. David M. Livermore, ARMRL, Central Public Health Laboratory	Does hypermutability underlie the rapid clinical emergence of resistant mutant types that are vanishingly rare in vitro?	May 2006
Dr. Andrew C. Hayward, UCL Centre for Infectious Disease Epidemiology	Antimicrobial resistance and prescribing (AmRAP): sentinel surveillance using spotter practices—a feasibility study.	March 2005
Dr. Andrew C. Hayward, UCL Centre for Infectious Disease Epidemiology	Routine national surveillance of antibiotic prescribing for common infections using the GPRD and PACT data.	June 2005
Dr. Anthony J. Howard, Department of Medical Microbiology and Public Health Laboratory, University Hospital of Wales	Development of cost-effective surveillance for hospital antibiotic resistance and factors that contribute to its occurrence.	March 2006

NHS Advertisement Costs

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the NHS spent on (a) advertising and (b) advertising for personnel in each of the last five years. [130226]

Mr. Hutton: Expenditure for the last five years spent on national health service advertising is listed as follows. Advertising for personnel is included in these figures and not available separately.

Advertising costs in the NHS 1997–98 to 2001–02

£

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02
NHS trusts	45,717,794	59,545,526	64,666,951	91,733,138	101,541,324
Health authorities	3,092,494	3,878,354	5,038,724	8,942,782	7,633,702
Primary care trusts	—	—	—	1,279,262	9,970,446
Total	48,810,288	63,423,880	69,705,675	101,955,182	119,145,472

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many advertisements were placed to recruit extra midwives to avoid closing the Oswestry maternity unit; and what the cost of the advertisements was. [130227]

Dr. Ladyman: Over the last two years there have been three national advertisements in the nursing press. These have cost a total of about £1,900.

NHS Capital Expenditure

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much capital expenditure has been made by the NHS in (a) the North East and (b) the UK in (i) 1996, (ii) 2000 and (iii) (projected for) 2003. [130738]

Mr. Hutton: The table shows capital expenditure in England and in the North East. Expenditure figures for Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland are the responsibility of the devolved Administrations. The table shows information for England.

Capital expenditure in England and the North East[1]—1996–97, 2000–01 and 2003–04

£ millions

	1996–97 (outturn)	2000–01 (outturn)	2003–04[5] (plan)
North East	44[2,3]	174[3,4]	n/a[5]
England[6,7]	1,341	1,246	2,892

Notes:
[1] Assumed to be the area now covered by Northumberland, Tyne and Wear Strategic Health Authority and County Durham and Tees Valley Strategic Health Authority.
[2] Source: 1996–97 Audited Accounts for Health Authorities and the Summarisation Schedules for NHS trusts 1996–97.
[3] Figures include health authority, primary care trust and NHS trust fixed assets (tangible and intangible).
[4] Source: 2000–01 Audited Accounts for Health Authorities and the Summarisation Schedules for NHS trusts for 2000–01.
[5] A comparable figure for 2003–04 is not available.
[6] Figure for 1996–97 is on a cash basis.
Figure for 2000–01 is on a stage 1 Resource Budgeting basis.
Figure for 2003–04 is on a stage 2 Resource Budgeting basis.
[7] Due to the move to Resource Accounting and Budgeting (April 2001) figures for England are not comparable across the three years.

NHS Counter-fraud Team

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many investigations of irregularities are underway in the NHS by the NHS Counter-Fraud Team. [130392]

Mr. Hutton: The counter fraud and security management service currently has 443 investigations under way relating to alleged fraud in the national health service.

NHS Direct

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the locations of NHS Direct sites. [127641]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The location and geographical coverage of the 22 NHS Direct sites are laid out in the table.

NHS Direct site	Organisational model	Geographical coverage
Anglia	Planet—Camdoc (Cambridgeshire). Satellites (2)—Sdoc (Suffolk) and Medicom (Norfolk)	Cambridgeshire, Norfolk and Suffolk
Avon, Gloucester and Wiltshire	Single call centre—Bristol	Avon, Gloucester and Wiltshire
Bedfordshire and Hertfordshire	Single call centre—Bedfordshire	Bedfordshire and Hertfordshire
Birmingham, Black Country and Solihull	Hub—Dudley. Spokes (1 daytime, 2 out of hours)—(virtual call centres) 9am-5pm—Neptune Health Park, Tipton; out of hours—Walsall, and Selly Oak Birmingham	West Midlands
East Midlands	Single call centre—Nottingham	Leicestershire, Lincolnshire, Derbyshire and Nottinghamshire
Essex	Single call centre—Essex	Essex, London borough of Barking and Havering
Greater Manchester, Cheshire and Wirral	Planet—Bolton (Ladybridge Hall). Satellite—Manchester Royal Infirmary, Landsmark House—Bolton, Cheshire, Chester and Nantwich	Cheshire
Hampshire and Isle of Wight	Single call centre—Hampshire	Hampshire and Isle of Wight
Kent, Surrey and Sussex	Hub—Surrey. Spoke—Chatham	Surrey, Kent and Sussex
Midlandshires	Single call centre—Stafford	Staffordshire, Shropshire, Herefordshire, Warwickshire and Worcester
North and Central London	Single call centre—St Charles' Hospital, London	Barnet, Barking and Havering, Enfield and Haringey, Kensington, Chelsea and Westminster
North East	Single call centre—Newcastle	Northumberland, Tyne and Wear
North East London	Single call centre—Ilford	East London and City, Redbridge and Waltham Forest
North West Coast	Hub—Preston (call handling, health information and nursing). Spokes (8)—Mersey (Old Swan, Southport and St. Helen's); Lancashire (Chorley, Blackburn and Blackpool); and Cumbria (Carlisle and Kendal)	Lancashire, Merseyside and Cumbria
South East London	Single call centre—Dulwich	Lambeth, Southwark and Lewisham
South West London	Single call centre—Croydon	Croydon, Kingston and Richmond, Merton, Sutton and Wandsworth
South Yorkshire and Humber	Call centre—Sheffield. Call centre—Doncaster	South Yorkshire, North Lincolnshire, North East Lincolnshire
Tees, East and North Yorkshire	Hub—East Yorkshire (York). Spokes (3)—Middlesbrough, Hull and York	East Riding, Cleveland and North Yorkshire

NHS Direct site	Organisational model	Geographical coverage
Thames Valley and Northamptonshire	Hub—Thames Valley and Northamptonshire. No spoke as yet	Northamptonshire, Buckinghamshire, Oxfordshire and Berkshire
West Country	Hub—Exeter. Spokes (4)—Truro, Plymouth, Taunton (Somerset), St Leonard's (Dorset)	Cornwall, Devon, Dorset and Somerset
West London	Single call centre—Middlesex	Hillingdon, Brent and Harrow, Ealing, Hammersmith and Hounslow
West Yorkshire	Single call centre—Wakefield	Calderdale and Kirklees, Leeds Bradford, Wakefield and North Yorkshire

Notes:
1. Hub and Spoke—A spoke is a small call centre environment (approximately up to 10 seats) which relies on technology sited at a remotely connected site. The management team and technology is located at the main "Hub" site.
2. Planet and Satellites—A satellite is a small call centre environment (approximately up to 10 seats) which relies on technology sited at a remotely connected site. The management team and technology is located at the main "Planet" site.
3. Call Centre—A call centre is a structured environment specifically set up to manage incoming/outgoing calls from a single location.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many calls NHS Direct has received in each year since 1998. [130372]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The table shows how many calls have been made to NHS Direct since its launch in March 1998.

Financial Year	Total calls handled	Accumulative total calls
1998–99	110,000	110,000
1999–2000	1,650,000	1,760,000
2000–01	3,420,000	5,180,000
2001–02	5,213,062	10,393,062
2002–03	6,318,844	16,711,906
2003 to 31 August 2004	2,173,005	18,884,911

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the most recent vacancy rates were for staff at each NHS Direct site. [131035]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information collected centrally on the most recent vacancy rates for call handlers and nurses at each NHS Direct site is shown in the tables.

Funded establishment against staff in post for the period of August 2003 (whole time equivalent)

Nurses	Funded establishment	Staff in post	Shortfall (+) Surplus (−)
Anglia	42	38.8	3.2
Avon	50	46.9	3.1
Beds and Herts	50	43.6	6.4
Birmingham, Black Country and Solihull	50	47.9	2.1
East Midlands	74	67.4	6.6
Essex	52	48.0	4
Manchester, Cheshire and Wirral	80	82.8	-2.8
Hampshire	55	54.5	0.5
KSS	72	62.2	9.8
Midlandshires	58	57.7	0.3
NC London	33	23.1	9.9
North East	60	55.7	4.3
NE London	25	22.4	2.6
NW Coast	70	69.3	0.7
SE London	37	26.4	10.6
SW London	31	23.9	7.1
South Yorkshire and South Humber	42	43.6	-1.6
Tees, East and North Yorkshire	36	33.5	2.5
Thames Valley	54	45.8	8.2
West Country	64.98	61.3	3.68
West London	41	40.0	1
West Yorkshire	60	54.2	5.8

Funded establishment against staff in post for the period of August 2003 (whole time equivalent)

Call Handlers	Funded establishment	Staff in post	Shortfall (+) Surplus (−)
Anglia	15.22	15.22	0
Avon	33	30.41	2.59
Beds and Herts	24	25.17	-1.17
Birmingham, Black Country and Solihull	25	26.79	-1.79
East Midlands	40	32.72	7.28
Essex	27	24	3
Hampshire	20	14.6	5.4
KSS	30	25.94	4.06
Manchester, Cheshire and Wirral	40	37.88	2.12
Midlandshires	32	32.72	-0.72
NC London	16	14.94	1.06
North East	31	27.12	3.88
NE London	18	16.5	1.5
NW Coast	35	22.1	12.9
SE London	22	23.25	-1.25
SW London	15	12.3	2.7
South Yorkshire and South Humber	29	26.6	2.4
Tees East and North Yorkshire	17	16.05	0.95
Thames Valley	18	19.88	-1.88
West Country	30	27.55	2.45
West London	27	21.6	5.4
West Yorkshire	30	26.6	3.4

NHS Doctors

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many additional doctors he estimates will be required in each NHS trust as a consequence of the recent European Court of Justice ruling on the status of rest periods during on-call duties in the application of the Working Time Directive. [131023]

Mr. Hutton: The Department's guidance to the national health service—HSC 2003/001 "Protecting Staff, Delivering Services—Implementing the European Working Time Directive (EWTD) for Doctors in Training" states that while the number of doctors on an individual rota will generally have to increase, trusts should find ways to reduce the number of resident rotas. Thus, the total staffing requirement does not have to increase substantially as a result of the EWTD.

To assist trusts in meeting the EWTD and to support increases in consultant numbers, the Department has significantly increased the number of Specialist Registrar (SpR) training opportunities. Priority is being given to hospitals facing EWTD challenges when considering the allocation of 1,500 additional locally funded SpR training opportunities available this year.

NHS Finance

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 5 February, Official Report, columns 315–16W, on NHS finance, if he will give a comparable percentage of the total NHS expenditure, in cash terms, which is represented by the resource and capital allocations to health authorities and NHS trusts in (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98, (c) 1998–99, (d) 1999–2000 and (e) 2000–01; and if he will give this as a percentage of the total Department of Health budget for these years and for each year from 2001–02 to 2005–06. [129124]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the tables.

Revenue and capital allocations as a percentage of total net national health service expenditure

	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05	2005–06
Health authority/PCT revenue allocations[1,2,3,4]	63.3	62.9	62.5	78.2	77.9	75.4	76.3	73.5	73.1	72.5
Capital Allocations to:	3.6	3.0	2.5	3.0	2.8	2.6	2.7	—	—	—
Regional capital planning total[5]	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	0.1	0.1	0.1
NHS Trusts	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	1.2	1.2	1.2
Strategic health authorities[6]	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	1.3	1.3	1.3

Revenue and Capital allocations as a percentage of total Net Department of Health expenditure

Percentage of total net Department of Health expenditure[7]

	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05	2005–06
Health authority/PCT revenue allocations[1,2,3,4]	61.8	61.8	61.3	76.9	69.2	57.9	64.7	62.8	63.2	63.1
Capital allocations to:	3.5	3.0	2.5	2.9	2.5	2.0	2.3	—	—	—
Regional capital planning total[5]	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	0.1	0.1	0.1
NHS trusts	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	1.1	1.1	1.1
Strategic Health Authorities[6]	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	1.1	1.1	1.1

[1] Allocations made in 2003 cover the three-year period 2003–04 to 2005–06. For the first time allocations have been made directly to PCTs. Prior to 2003 allocations were made to health authorities.
[2] 1999–2000 was the first year of unified allocations covering HCHS, prescribing and CMS cash limited. These figures are not comparable to those for previous years which cover HCHS only.
[3] The 2000–01 figure includes a further £660 million distributed after main allocations were announced.
[4] The 2001–02 figure includes £140 million extra, distributed after main allocations were announced.
[5] Up to and including 2002–03, capital allocations were made to the Department of Health's regional offices.
[6] For allocation later to PCTs and NHS trusts to fund larger capital projects which required business case approval.
[7] Includes expenditure on personal social services distributed to local authorities.

It is not appropriate to show the total of revenue and capital allocations as a percentage of the national health service budget. This is because NHS trust capital allocations are financed, in part, through primary care trust (PCT) revenue allocations. Adding the two allocations together would mean double counting this element of expenditure.

In addition to PCT revenue allocations, a number of revenue budgets currently held centrally will be issued to PCTs later, for example, for personal medical services pilot schemes. These will mean that PCTs will control more than 75 per cent. of the NHS budget from 2003–04 onwards.

NHS Pay Negotiations

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for the NHS Confederation to take full responsibility for pay negotiations within the NHS. [130166]

Mr. Hutton: Discussions are currently taking place with the national health service confederation. I expect firm proposals to emerge later this year.

NHS Pensions

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on why in figure 3.1 of the Department of Health annual report 2003 the cost of NHS pensions for 2001–02 is almost twice as high as that in any other year; and why it was decided to issue the figures without an explanatory note. [130885]

Mr. Hutton: The national health service pensions figures in figure 3.1 of the Department's annual report 2003 shows the request for resource figure. This resource based expenditure figure comprises primarily of the increase in total scheme liability plus the interest payable on the total liability, less income receivable including employer and employee contributions and transfers into the scheme.

The relatively large increase in 2001–02, is as a result of two factors.

The first was the one-off strengthening of assumptions used by the Government Actuaries Department for calculating the total liability of the NHS pension scheme.

The second was the updating of base data used for the actuarial assessment of total NHS pension liability.

NHS Staff

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many individuals employed by the NHS hold the position of (a) chief executive, (b) finance director and (c) director of public health. [131022]

Mr. Hutton: Chief executives and finance directors are included within the senior managers category of the non medical work force census but are not separately identifiable. As at 30 September 2002, there were 11,859 senior managers working in the national health service. The majority of the 616 NHS organisations (primary care trusts, NHS trusts, strategic health authorities, special health authorities and other statutory bodies) employ both a chief executive and a finance director.

As at 30 June 2003, there were 256 directors of public health.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the total NHS work force (a) medical and dental staff and (b) administration and estates staff represented in each of the last seven years. [131014]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is shown in the tables.

Total employed NHS staff and in the specified staff groups in England as at 30 September in each year

Whole time equivalents and percentages

	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002
Total employed staff	846,128	844,329	853,304	871,533	890,660	929,006	976,573
of which:
All doctors[1]	79,807	82,789	84,770	86,679	88,678	90,868	95,611
(Percentage)	9.4	9.8	9.9	9.9	10.0	9.8	9.8
All administration and estates[2]	167,426	166,960	167,701	172,765	178,533	188,526	201,777
(Percentage)	19.8	19.8	19.7	19.8	20.0	20.3	20.7
Administration and estates[3] (excluding support to clinical staff)	105,539	104,487	103,737	107,094	109,281	114,494	122,483
(Percentage)	12.5	12.4	12.2	12.3	12.3	12.3	12.5

[1] Consists of GPs (excluding retainers) and hospital and community health services medical and dental staff (excluding locums).
[2] Consists of all managers and senior managers and all clerical and administrative staff employed within all areas of work—central functions, hotel, property and estates, STT support, clinical support and ambulance service support (includes support to clinical staff).
[3] Consists of all managers and senior managers and those clerical and administrative staff and maintenance and works staff within central functions and hotel, property and estates (excludes support to clinical staff).
Sources:
Department of Health Non-Medical Workforce Census.
Department of Health Medical and Dental Workforce Census.
Department of Health General and Personal Medical Services Statistics.

Total employed NHS staff and in the specified staff groups in England as at 30 September in each year

Headcount and percentages

	1996	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002
Total employed staff	1,056,501	1,058,686	1,071,562	1,097,376	1,117,841	1,166,016	1,223,824
of which:
All doctors[1]	86,584	89,619	91,837	93,981	96,319	99,169	103,350
(Percentage)	8.2	8.5	8.6	8.6	8.6	8.5	8.4
All administration and estates[2]	196,529	196,695	198,540	204,617	212,017	224,033	239,568
(Percentage)	18.6	18.6	18.5	18.6	19.0	19.2	19.6
Administration and estates[3] (excluding support to clinical staff)	117,628	116,833	116,514	120,226	123,275	129,053	138,086
(Percentage)	11.1	11.0	10.9	11.0	11.0	11.1	11.3

[1] Consists of GPs (excluding retainers) and hospital and community health services medical and dental staff (excluding locums).
[2] Consists of all managers and senior managers and all clerical and administrative staff employed within all areas of work—central functions, hotel, property and estates, STT support, clinical support and ambulance service support (includes support to clinical staff).
[3] Consists of all managers and senior managers and those clerical and administrative staff and maintenance and works staff within central functions and hotel, property and estates (excludes support to clinical staff).
Sources:
Department of Health Non-Medical Workforce Census.
Department of Health Medical and Dental Workforce Census.
Department of Health General and Personal Medical Services Statistics.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the job titles included under support staff in the NHS. [130154]

Mr. Hutton: Job titles of staff within National Health Service organisations are determined at a local level and are not collated centrally. The annual NHS work force census records staff by a system of occupational coding introduced in 1995. Descriptions of the occupational codes that are included in the staff groupings, support to clinical staff and NHS infrastructure support in the publication of the September 2002 non-medical workforce census results have been placed in the Library.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) consultants, (b) nurses, (c) support staff, (d) ambulance staff and (e) therapists left the NHS in 2002–03. [130153]

Mr. Hutton: Data collected by the Department record the net change in staff numbers rather than the number of leavers or joiners. As at 30 September 2002, there were 1,288 more consultants, 17,140 more nurses, 18,634 more clinical support staff, 754 more qualified ambulance staff and 2,139 more qualified allied health professionals working in the National Health Service than there were in September 2001.

Nightingale Wards

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the NHS trusts which have yet fully to eliminate Nightingale wards. [130324]

Mr. Hutton: The elimination of Nightingale wards for older people has been included in the planning and priorities framework 2003–06 as one of the Department's key investment priorities. A target has been set for the elimination of Nightingale wards for older people by April 2004. A report will be made at that time.

Notifiable Diseases

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the Answer of 17 July 2003, Official Report, column 629W, on notifiable diseases, what the timetable is for the review of the infectious disease law. [128525]

Miss Melanie Johnson: No specific timetable has yet been set for the review, but we intend that it should take account of the new emergency powers which it is planned to provide through the Civil Contingencies Bill.

Nursing

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the training arrangements in NHS trusts to ensure that nursing staff are trained to use existing and new medical equipment. [130874]

Mr. Hutton: "Working Together—Learning Together", the framework for lifelong learning, published in November 2001, specifies national health service trust responsibilities for staff education and development and for ensuring that they have clear local procedures to make sure that all staff are trained to operate new and existing medical equipment in a safe and effective way. It states that, "all NHS employer organisations, supported by Workforce Development Confederations will have in place a clear organisational strategy and annual plan for education, training and development which links explicitly with local modernisation priorities and the delivery of clinical governance".

The proposed introduction of the knowledge and skills framework through pay modernisation will strengthen the identification of the skills and competencies of nurses to undertake certain work. Similarly, the introduction of the NHS University will also strengthen the availability of learning opportunities.

We are investing over £30 million a year in improving continuing professional development infrastructure through workforce development confederations so that health professionals can maintain and improve the standards of care they provide. This will include learning to use new equipment and new techniques as they are introduced.

In addition, our care group workforce teams are reviewing the skills and competencies required to implement our priorities to improve the NHS through the national service frameworks. This work will identify the key skills needed in the NHS.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurse vacancies there are at Southend General Hospital. [130373]

Mr. Hutton: The total number of nurse vacancies at Southend General Hospital is not recorded centrally. However, the number of three-month vacancies for qualified nurses at Southend Hospital National Health Service Trust at 31 March 2003 was 19.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people there are in each of the registered nursing care contribution bands. [130907]

Dr. Ladyman: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of the availability of (a) defibrillators, (b) ECG machines, (c) portable oxygen and (d) infusion pumps to nursing staff within the NHS. [130876]

Miss Melanie Johnson: No national assessment has been made. All national health service trusts and health authorities in England have access to a national contract for portable oxygen cylinders.

Infusion pumps, electro-cardiogram machines and defibrillators are bought at local level by individual trusts.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the extent to which single use medical equipment is re-used within the NHS; and if he will make a statement. [130877]

Mr. Hutton: The Department is funding a research project to establish whether single use instruments are being re-used and, if so, the scale of reuse. This project will guide the Department, the National Patient Safety Agency and the Medical and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency on whether future guidance is required. Previous research has highlighted the issue of re-using medical devices designated for single use only.

Older People

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the National Service Framework for older people milestones on (a) strategic and operational plans to promote healthy ageing and disease prevention in older people, (b) local health systems demonstrating improvements and moving towards benchmarked intervention rates, (c) skills profile of staff who care for older people in hospital, (d) analysis of levels and patterns of key intervention rates to establish best practice benchmarks and (e) one-stop dispensing/dispensing for discharge scheme were achieved. [130937]

Dr. Ladyman: Information on such milestones has not been collected centrally. A monitoring exercise conducted at the end of 2002 suggested that 54 per cent., of hospitals have a 'one-stop' dispensing/dispensing for discharge scheme and, where appropriate, self administration schemes for medicines for older people .

Responsibility for monitoring progress with these milestones and ensuring that any shortcomings are addressed rests with strategic health authorities.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department has taken to measure the National Service Framework for older people milestones on (a) additional people receiving intermediate care services promoting rehabilitations compared with the 1999–2000 baseline and (b) jointly appointed co-ordinators for intermediate care. [131005]

Dr. Ladyman: The specific information requested is not collected centrally. Responsibility for monitoring progress and delivering these services rests with strategic health authorities, who must ensure that milestones are met and, where appropriate, joint working arrangements are developed to ensure delivery.

During a stocktake exercise conducted by the Department in January 2002, 87 per cent. of national service framework local implementation teams reported that an intermediate care co-ordinator was in place.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department has taken to monitor achievement of the National Service Framework for older people milestones that information provided to older people is reviewed and action plans developed to correct shortcomings. [131006]

Dr. Ladyman: Joint responsibility for ensuring that reviews of information take place and shortcomings are addressed rests with strategic health authorities and local authorities, who must ensure that milestones are met and joint working arrangements are developed to ensure delivery.

Councils reported brief progress information to the social services inspectorate (SSI) as part of the in-year monitoring programme for 2002–03. This information is available at www.doh.gov.uk/ssi/ciann-12.htm. More recent and detailed information about progress in 2003–04 is being gathered by SSI from the councils during the autumn and the results will be available in January 2004.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress is being made in meeting the National Service Framework for Older People target of having an additional 5,000 intermediate care beds and 1,700 non-residential intermediate care places in place by March 2004 compared with the 1999–2000 baseline. [131046]

Mr. Paul Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people received intermediate care preventing hospital admission in each region under the National Service Framework for Older People; [124922]

(2) how many people received intermediate care services promoting rehabilitation in each region under the National Service Framework for Older People; [124923]

(3) how many intermediate care beds in each region have been set up under the National Service Framework for Older people. [124925]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 18 September 2003]: By the end of June 2003, there were approximately 3,600 additional intermediate care beds and approximately 12,800 additional non-residential places compared with the 1999–2000 baseline. During the year 2002–03 approximately 143,200 additional people received intermediate care services, compared with the 1999–2000 baseline. It is not possible to break this down into the categories requested.

It is not possible to make comparisons by region due to restructuring within the National Health Service.

Operation Costs

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the variation in the cost of operations in NHS hospitals and health authorities in the last 12 months. [127481]

Mr. Hutton: Data showing the variation of national health service unit costs are provided through the reference cost index. Since the data are provided at health care resource group (groupings of treatment episodes similar in resource use and clinical response) level, it is not possible to determine the variation in the cost of operations specifically. In addition, reference cost data for the financial year 2002–03 will not be available until the autumn.

The Department's report provides an analysis of 2001–02 reference cost data. This shows that the variation in unit costs across NHS trusts, measured by the standard deviation, fell from 21.2 in 2000–01 to 16.9 in 2001–02.

Ophthalmology

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to introduce tariffs for ophthalmological procedures which take into account the complexity of a case. [129590]

Mr. Hutton: The Department is currently introducing a new way of funding national health service providers for the care that they provide. Under this system, the prices charged to primary care trusts will be based on a national tariff which takes account of the complexity of different cases by using healthcare resource groups.

The first phase of this implementation started this year and includes all additional in-patient and daycase activity for cataract surgery. From 2005–06, all activity within ophthalmology will be undertaken at the national tariff.

Organ Donors

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of the effect of using the electoral registration form to increase the number of organ donors; what discussions he has had with (a) ministerial colleagues and (b) others about this scheme; if he will make it his policy to ensure the scheme continues; what other plans he has to increase the number of organ donors; and if he will make a statement. [128321]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Electoral Commission has issued guidance on including additional non-electoral material on or with electoral registration forms. Circular EC23/2003 can be found at http://www.electoralcommission.gov.uk. The guidance makes clear that the ultimate decision on whether or not to include any additional material with electoral registration forms rests with individual electoral registration officers.

People are encouraged to join the organ donor register through a number of initiatives, including when they apply for a driving licence, register with a new general practitioner or, apply for a new passport. Additionally, UK Transplant runs publicity campaigns and targets action to raise the profile of organ donation, including specific advertising and information campaigns to increase organ donation from the South Asian and black African and Caribbean populations.

Out-patient Care

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the (a) percentage change in elective activity and (b) percentage change in out-patient referrals from general practitioners in each of the last five years. [130329]

Mr. Hutton: The tables show national figures for elective admissions and general practitioner referrals for first out-patient appointments over the last five years.

Elective general and acute admissions, England 1996–97 to 2002–03

	Elective admissions (thousand)	Percentage growth from previous year	Percentage growth over five years
1997–98	4,655	2.0
1998–99	5,093	9.4
1999–2000	5,160	1.3
2000–01	5,277	2.3
2001–02[1]	5,314	0.7
2002–03[2]	5,552	4.5	19.3

[1] Earlier figures are from health authorities. With the abolition of health authorities, figures for 2001–02 and 2002–03 are estimated based on growth in NHS trusts.

[2] These are provisional figures for admissions commissioned by the NHS.

Source:

Department of Health, SaFFR

GP and dental practitioner written referrals for first consultant out-patient appointments, England 1997–98 to 2002–03

	Number of referrals	Percentage growth from previous year	Percentage growth over five years
1997–98	8,991,722
1998–99	9,139,785	1.6
1999–2000	9,141,425	0.0
2000–01	9,362,770	2.4
2001–02	9,470,342	1.1
2002–03	9,655,874	2.0	7.4

Note:

These figures are for GP and dental practitioner written referrals received by NHS hospitals "provider based". They will include some private patients, and some patients who live outside England.

Source:

Department of Health form QM08

Overseas Nurses

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it a requirement for all private nurse recruitment agencies, who supply staff to the NHS, to sign up to his Department's code of practice governing the recruitment of overseas nurses. [129117]

Mr. Hutton: Workforce development confederations are working with trusts to ensure they comply with the code of practice and only work with agencies who are compliant.

We strongly recommend trusts to incorporate the code of practice in contracts with agencies.

A list of agencies compliant with the code of practice is available at www.doh.gov.uk/international-recruitment.

PAF PI C33

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital admissions due to falls or hypothermia as recorded in PAF PI C33 were recorded in each of the last five years. [130847]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of admissions due to falls or hypothermia as recorded in PAF PI C33 for the last five years are shown in the table.

	Number of admissions
1997–98	72,416
1998–99	77,854
1999–2000	80,711
2000–01	78,787
2001–02	80,034

The figures have been calculated on the same basis as those used to form the numerator part of the C33 indicator. Data are calculated for patients aged 75 or over and resident in England.

Patient Care

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guarantees of further treatment are given to patients whose operations are cancelled at the last minute. [130316]

Mr. Hutton: Since 1 April 2002, the NHS Plan cancelled operations guarantee has been in place. It states:

> "if a patient's operation is cancelled by the hospital on the day of surgery for non-clinical reasons, the hospital will have to offer another binding date within a maximum of the next 28 days or fund the patient's treatment at the time and hospital of the patient's choice".

Since 1 April 2003, the guarantee covers those patients who are cancelled 'at the last minute', that is, on the day patients are due to arrive or after arrival in hospital or on the day of their operation.

Patient Environment and Action Team Reports

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the most recent reports of the Patient Environment and Action Team inspection units for acute trusts in the Northern and Yorkshire statistical area. [129586]

Mr. Hutton: The results of the Patient Environment Action Team (PEAT) assessments for all hospitals included in the 2003 assessment were published on the NHS Estates' website on 13 August 2003.

There are no plans to publish PEAT reports, although each national health service trust received a copy for each of their hospitals included in the assessment.

Personal Care (Voluntary Organisations)

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of (a) the increase in aggregate indemnity insurance costs borne by voluntary organisations involved in the personal care sector between 2000–01 and 2003–04 and (b) the resultant impact on activity levels of such voluntary organisations. [130699]

Dr. Ladyman: Information on the level of insurance costs paid by voluntary organisations involved in personal care is not collected centrally. We have consequently no way of relating back any measure of activity relating to the care sector with any change to insurance costs. However, overall activity levels in the care sector have increased over this period: since 1997 the number of older residents supported by local authorities in care homes has increased by 3,000, and the number of households receiving intensive home care, ten hours or more and six plus visits, increased from 72,300 in 2000 to 81,500 in 2002. We cannot, however, determine any relationship between this increase in overall activity to either voluntary sector providers or to any change in liability insurance costs.

Plasma

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to make virally inactivated fresh frozen plasma available to patients requiring blood transfusions. [129995]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Most United Kingdom fresh frozen plasma (FFP) is not virally inactivated. High levels of safety are achieved by using leucodepleted blood from single donors, by screening out potential high risk donors and by testing every unit of donated blood for the presence of infections such as HIV, hepatitis B and hepatitis C before it is released to hospitals.

The decision taken to import FFP from the United States for young babies and children born after 1 January 1996 will provide additional protection to the most vulnerable group, who will not have been exposed to BSE through the food chain. The National Blood Authority is currently involved in negotiating for supplies of FFP for this group of patients. This FFP will be virally inactivated and its planned availability is later this year. A commercially produced virally inactivated FFP product, sourced from the United States, is also available for the national health service to purchase.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent evidence he has received concerning the risks to patients associated with the transfusion of blood plasma. [129996]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The sixth report (2001–02) on the serious hazards of transfusion was published on 17 July 2003. The report provides an updated analysis of serious transfusion hazards in the United Kingdom. A copy of the report and summary findings is available at http://www.shotuk.org/.

Polypill

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the Under-Secretary of State's letter, PO 1032287, of 13 August, what action he is taking to explore proposals for the polypill. [128267]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Roger Boyle, national director for heart disease, has invited the lead researchers to attend a meeting in October to discuss the "polypill" proposals. Although there are some clear attractions, there are significant clinical, practical and financial implications that need to be explored further.

Post-operative Care

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research has been carried out into the impact of increasing the number of critical care beds on post-operative death rates. [129600]

Mr. Hutton: The Department has not conducted any research on the impact of increasing the number of critical care beds on post-operative death rates.

The policy research programme has recently been asked to commission research on early warning scoring systems and outreach services for adult critical care; both of which can help improve experience and outcomes for patients with potential or actual need of critical care services.

Post-operative Deaths

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research has been carried out into comparative post-operative death rates at hospitals in England. [129650]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 15 September 2003]: The national health service performance ratings include an assessment of post-operative death rates for English trusts. These allow a survey of trust performance and the overall England figure.

The information is available at: http://www.doh.gov.uk/performanceratings/

This web site gives links to the published rates for:

National health service performance ratings and indicators: July 2002;

Performance ratings: September 2001;

Performance indicators: February 2002; and

Performance indicators: July 2000.

Information on the July 2003 star ratings published by the Commission for Health Improvement is available at: http://www.chi.nhs.uk/eng/ratings/2003/

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list post-operative death rates, by hospital, for each of the last five years. [129652]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 15 September 2003]: A continuous series of rates for the last five years is not available, as there have been refinements and improvements in the definitions used form year to year.

However, rates have been previously published. The information is available at: http://www.doh.gov.uk/performanceratings/

This website gives links to the published rates for:

National health service performance ratings and indicators: July 2002;

Performance ratings: September 2001;

Performance indicators: February 2002; and

Performance indicators: July 2000.

Information on the July 2003 star ratings published by the Commission for Health Improvement is available at: http://www.chi.nhs.uk/eng/ratings/2003/ Please note, though, that the definition and coverage of the post-operative mortality rate changes from year to year.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the post-operative death rate cited by the research undertaken by University College, London, and Columbia University for the Queen Alexandra Hospital, Portsmouth, is in line with that for other United Kingdom hospitals. [129654]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 15 September 2003]: In the 2003 performance ratings, Portsmouth Hospitals National Health Service Trust had a post-surgical mortality rate that was assessed to be not significantly different from the England average.

Further information is available at: http://www.chi.nhs.uk/eng/ratings/2003/

Prescriptions

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total value of prescriptions for privately prescribed medicines made out to patients eligible for NHS treatment was in the most recent 12 months for which figures are available. [129585]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not collect information on private prescriptions.

Primary Care

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the elements of primary care trust funding which are ring fenced for specific purposes for this financial year. [131017]

Mr. Hutton: In 2003–04, the only funding protected by a statutory ring fence is the out of hours development fund.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the (a) deficits and (b) underspends for each primary care trust for 2002–03. [131027]

Mr. Hutton: Audited financial information in respect of the 2002–03 year for all primary care trusts is published in their individual annual accounts. This information will not be available centrally until the end of October 2003.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many school nurses per child of school age there were in each primary care trust in the last year for which figures are available. [131028]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Private Health Care Providers

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what contacts at official level there have been between his Department and United Healthcare group over the past three years. [131345]

Dr. Ladyman: Ministers and officials have had a number of discussions and meetings with representatives of United Healthcare Group since summer 2002.

In November 2002, a framework agreement was signed between the Secretary of State for Health and United Healthcare Group. Under this agreement, United Healthcare Group carried out scoping work with ten primary care trusts (PCTs) to produce recommendations on how the 'Evercare' model of care for the at-risk elderly could be implemented by those PCTs. As part of this work, two Departmental officials accompanied representatives from the communities covered by the ten PCTs on a study visit to United Healthcare Group's operations in Minnesota.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which private healthcare companies expressed interest in the pilots contracted to United Healthcare at competitive tender stage. [131346]

Dr. Ladyman: The services provided by United Healthcare Group under the framework agreement with the Secretary of State for Health and under the contracts with 10 individual primary care trusts fall into the category of administrative healthcare services and are not subject to a competitive tendering process under European or domestic procurement law.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his Department's contract with United Healthcare and the Evercare pilots. [131347]

Dr. Ladyman: A framework agreement was signed between the Secretary of State for Health and United Healthcare Group in November 2002. This covered initial scoping work—completed in February 2003—and provided for call-off contracts between United Healthcare Group and individual primary care trusts (PCTs).

Nine PCTs have entered into contracts with United Healthcare Group for support services to help them to implement the 'Evercare' model of care for the at-risk elderly. One PCT has entered into a contract for support services to help them predict demand for health care and to plan services and workforce accordingly.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the areas piloting the United Healthcare Evercare programme; and if he will list for each pilot the percentage change in bed occupancy achieved by the programme. [131348]

Dr. Ladyman: The following primary care trusts are implementing the 'Evercare' model of care for the at-risk elderly: Airedale; Bexley; Bristol North; Bristol South and West; Halton; Luton; South Gloucestershire; Walsall; and Wandsworth.

Implementation began in April 2003 and runs to October 2004. The early stages have involved recruiting general practitioner practices and nurses, identifying the at-risk population and training the nurses. Evaluation and monitoring, including bed occupancy rates, is built into the contracts and will be available at a later stage.

Prostate Cancer

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what efforts are being made to monitor the satisfaction of prostate cancer patients with their NHS treatment; and what the findings are. [130039]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 16 September 2003]: A national cancer patient survey took place in 2001. Over 65,000 cancer patients discharged between July 1999 and June 2000 responded, including almost 11,000 men with prostate cancer. The outcome of the survey was published in July 2002 and it is available at: http://www.doh.gov.uk/nhspatients/cancersurvey. It provides a baseline measurement of cancer patients' experience of care in the national health service against which improvements can be monitored.

Overall the survey showed patients reporting:

confidence in the doctors responsible for their care;

being treated with dignity and respect;

understanding the explanation of their diagnosis; and being involved in decision making as much as they wanted.

However it also pointed to areas where improvements needed to be made, for example:

the provision of written information;

being informed about support/self help groups.

The results of the survey were shared with, among others, cancer networks and NHS Trusts who should have studied their local results and taken action to respond to them.

Responsibility for the national survey programme has now moved to the Commission for Health Improvement.

In September 2002, the National Institute of Clinical Excellence (NICE) published improving outcomes guidance for urological cancers, including prostate cancer. This guidance included the need for providers to carry out surveys of patients experience to assess the adequacy of each component of patient-centred care. This guidance is informing the development of urological cancer standards for inclusion in the Manual of Cancer Services Standards against which cancer networks will be peer reviewed.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) urologists, (b) pathologists, (c) radiologists and (d) prostate cancer nurses have been working in the NHS on prostate cancer cases in each of the last five years. [130040]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 16 September 2003]: The total number of urologists, pathologists and radiologists working in the National Health Service in each of the last five years is shown in the table. The data collected by the Department does not specify in which area of care these staff are employed. The Department does not collect the number of prostate nurses working in the NHS.

Doctors in selected specialties, England, by year

As at 30 September each year[1] Numbers (headcount)

	1998		1999		2000		2001		2002		March 2003
	All staff consultant	of which	All staff consultant	of which	All staff consultant	of which	All staff consultant	of which	All staff consultant	of which	Consultant
Histopathology[2]	1,100	828	1,129	836	1,199	865	1,291	915	1,374	968	994
Clinical radiology	2,075	1,481	2,164	1,507	2,303	1,585	2,454	1,645	2,538	1,702	1,781
Urology	961	358	1,024	388	1,052	382	1,115	427	1,164	448	466

[1] Except 2003 where data is as at 31 March

[2] Histopathology includes general pathology and neuropathology

Source:

Department of Health medical and dental workforce census

Public Analysts Laboratories

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many public analysts' laboratories there were in England and Wales checking foodstuffs in 1996; and how many there are in 2003. [130961]

Miss Melanie Johnson: There were 26 public analysts' laboratories in England and Wales checking foodstuffs in 1996 and there are currently 23 public analysts' laboratories doing such work.

Public Appointments

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of NHS Trust, Health Authority and Primary Care Trust board members were (a) women, (b) ethnic minorities and (c) disabled in each year since 1997. [128909]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information available for the percentages of appointments to national health service boards in each category is as follows:

Percentage

	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002	2003
Women	39	[1]42.3	47.5	48.7	48.5	47.8	47.4
Black and Ethnic Minority	5	[1]7.5	10.6	12.3	12.9	11.5	10.5
Disabled	n/a	n/a	n/a	n/a	3.2	3.1	4.3

[1] Includes figures for non-departmental public bodies.

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) chairmen, (b) chief executives and (c) other board members have resigned from, or not sought re-appointment to, an NHS Trust Board in each of the last six years. [129013]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not collected, either by the National Health Service Appointments Commission or by the Department.

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many women have been appointed by the NHS Appointments Commission to the position of (a) NHS Trust Chair and (b) NHS Trust board member. [129014]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Of those board members appointed by the National Health Service Appointments Commission who are still in post, 84 chairs are women (43.8 per cent.) and 402 non-executives are women (47.2 per cent.).

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have been appointed by the NHS Appointments Commission to the position of (a) NHS Trust Chief Executive and (b) NHS Trust board member, broken down by a declared background in (i) medicine, (ii) nursing and (iii) other professions allied to medicine. [129015]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Chief executives are appointed by the chair and non-executives of National Health Service boards, not by the NHS Appointments Commission. The information requested on the backgrounds of chairs and non-executive directors could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) executive and (b) non-executive NHS Trust directors have gone on to become (i) Chairmen and (ii) Chief Executives of an NHS Trust. [129016]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not collected either by the National Health Service Appointments Commission or the Department.

Radiology

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what targets have been set for the electronic transfer of radiology reports; what the baseline is for the target; in which document the target was published; and what progress has been made towards the target. [128913]

Mr. Hutton: The Government's strategy document, "Building the Information Core—Implementing the NHS Plan" published in 2000 set the target of March 2003 for all radiology reports between hospital and general practitioners to be sent electronically. This target was based on the use of messaging technology. Work in this area has been superseded by the national programme for information technology in the national health service and the development of the integrated care records service (ICRS). Electronic transfer of radiology reports forms one element of phase 1 that will be implemented by December 2004.

It was decided to suspend roll out of the message based technology for radiology reports as a more modern, reliable and cost effective set of technology options are available within the development of the online database system, for the ICRS. This will provide a more reliable arrangement with lower unit costs and increased flexibility for clinicians.

Recruitment

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans there are for the NHS to advertise for (a) consultants, (b) general practitioners, (c) nursing and midwifery staff and (d) professions allied to medicine in the foreign media; if he will list such campaigns since 1 May 1997; and what the (i) cost of each advertisement and (ii) the total cost was. [128919]

Mr. Hutton: National health service trusts are responsible for their own recruitment and no data on the number and costs of their advertisements in the foreign media are held centrally.

Since 1 May 1997 the following annual costs for advertising in foreign media have been incurred by the Department to recruit healthcare professionals for the NHS.

£

Year	Consultants and GPs	NHS International Fellowships	Nurses	Allied Health Professionals	Total
2001–02	61,874	12,403	—	—	74,277
2002–03	194,888	188,455	—	—	383,343
2003–04	501.63	36,922.53	12,967.28	7,972.98	58,364
Total					515,984

Further advertising is planned to support the Department-led international recruitment campaigns for consultants, general practitioners, nurses and allied health professionals.

Rural Standards Inspections

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to provide for (a) the Commission for Healthcare Audit and Inspection and (b) the Commission for Social Care Inspection to monitor rural standards as part of their inspection regime. [129358]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Commission for Healthcare Audit and Inspection (CHAI) will monitor the provision of health care and the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI) will monitor the provision of social care in all localities, including rural areas as part of their function.

It will be for CHAI and CSCI to decide, as independent bodies, whether they choose to carry out particular work that relates only to rural areas, or a specific geographic area.

SARS

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the letter of 28 May 2003, reference PO 102 7835, what action he has taken since 28 May 2003 to assess the evolving situation of SARS. [126271]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 17 July 2003]: Our policy with regard to severe acute respiratory syndrome (SARS) has been kept under continuous review and amended according to the current and anticipated situation in the United Kingdom.

There have been reports of suspected cases of SARS in both Singapore and Hong Kong. The World Health Organisation actively follow up any suspected cases and will issue an alert if confirmed. In the meantime, the Department, along with the Health Protection Agency, is carrying out a number of reviews covering surveillance, national health service guidance and exit screening.

Secondments

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether personnel from his Department have been seconded to offer advice and assistance in Iraq. [129879]

Dr. Ladyman: Since 13 May, there have been 11 personnel from this Department seconded to offer advice and assistance in Iraq. Four personnel have since returned and seven personnel are still in Iraq.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff are on secondment in each acute trust in the North-West region; what the (a) job titles and (b) grade of such staff are; and what type of training is being undertaken. [130048]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 17 September 2003]: The information requested is not held centrally.

Sexual Assault Referral Centres

Vera Baird: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether it is his policy that foundation hospitals will accommodate sexual assault referral centres; [129623]

(2) if he will make it his policy that in areas where there are no foundation hospitals in the short term sexual assault referral centres should be located at major general hospitals. [129624]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The development and funding of sexual assault referral centres is the responsibility of primary care trusts and the relevant local police force. Currently, a number of different models exist, which include centres located within or attached to hospitals. Encouraging the further roll-out of such centres is a matter for the Ministerial Committee on Sex Offending.

Sexually Transmitted Diseases

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on NHS sexual health clinics, the demand for these services and the ability of these clinics to cater for this demand. [127457]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department recognises that additional investment in sexual health services is required to tackle poor sexual health. This is why we have already invested £15 million to improve access to genito-urinary medicine (GUM) services and reduce waiting times; £9.5 million in chlamydia screening, and £5 million in termination of pregnancy services. In response to concerns expressed by the health committee and others about sexual health services, an additional £11 million will be allocated this year. This will comprise £5 million for GUM services; £5 million to improve chlamydia testing, and £1 million for contraceptive services. In line with the health committee's recommendations, the Department is also actively exploring the introduction of a 48-hour waiting time performance indicator for GUM services.

Smoking

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment has been made of the NHS smoking cessation campaign; what plans there are to assist the campaign; and if he will make a statement. [128763]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The current tobacco education campaign was launched in December 1999, following the publication of the White Paper, 'Smoking kills' and is aimed at persuading and helping smokers to give up and non-smokers, particularly children not to start.

A number of different measures are in place to evaluate the effectiveness of the "Don't Give Up Giving Up" advertising campaign. These include prevalence surveys, quarterly tracking research, monitoring calls to the national health service smoking helpline, evaluation of media coverage and helpline referrals to local services.

Headline results from the latest tracking study among 1,275 smokers—which took place in February 2003—are as follows:

59 per cent. spontaneous awareness of advertising campaign;

93 per cent. prompted awareness;

49 per cent. of smokers taking action as result of seeing adverts; and

51 per cent. of smokers more likely to give up as a result of seeing the advertising.

The monitoring of calls to the NHS smoking helpline show that, from June 2000 to 2 September 2003, over 759,000 smokers called the NHS smoking helpline. Over 22,400 of these calls can be attributed to the introduction this year of the new starker health warnings on cigarette packets, one of which gives the NHS helpline number.

The Department is extending its campaign this year by informing people about the risks from second-hand smoke, the risk of less publicised diseases caused by smoking, and through funding charities, starting with Cancer Research UK and the British Heart Foundation, to run hard hitting campaigns.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on further steps which he intends to take to combat smoking and tobacco use. [129485]

Miss Melanie Johnson: We are implementing a comprehensive tobacco programme to help the seven in 10 smokers who want to quit and to prevent people starting to smoke. As well as introducing legislation, we are investing £138 million in national health service 'Stop Smoking' services over the next three years and expanding our information and education campaigns to address second-hand smoke as well as cessation.

We are working with key charities, including the British Heart Foundation and Cancer Research UK, and are providing £15 million over three years to carry out hard-hitting media campaigns.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Government has to legislate to prevent tobacco companies placing features with their logos in magazines. [130059]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Tobacco Advertising and Promotion Act 2002 prohibits the publishing of an advertisement which has the purpose or effect of promoting a tobacco product in the United Kingdom.It would be for a court to decide in each case whether a magazine feature which included a tobacco company logo constituted a tobacco advertisement.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his Department plans to do to educate the public further into the health risks associated with smoking. [130067]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department is expanding its public information campaign to highlight the dangers of smoking and tobacco smoke through a wider range of media. This includes highlighting diseases caused by smoking not covered in the campaign so far. Cancer Research UK and the British Heart Foundation will also be launching campaigns funded by the Department.

The new warnings on cigarette packs have made a significant impact already in getting health messages to smokers. These will be legally required on all packs from 30 September 2003 and on non-cigarette tobacco products such as cigars from 30 September 2004.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many smoking cessation co-ordinators there are in the NHS; and what the target is for the number of co-ordinators in 2004–05. [130068]

Miss Melanie Johnson: 109 smoking cessation co-ordinators (whole time equivalent) were in post at 31 March 2002 and 66 staff were responsible for co-ordinating services for pregnant women. Shifting the balance of power from central to local decision making means that primary care trusts now have responsibility in negotiating with their respective strategic health authorities for co-ordinator posts. Targets are not set for numbers of co-ordinators.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans there are to extend the use of Zyban (a) on prescription-only and (b) over the counter. [130168]

Miss Melanie Johnson: No application to extend the use or change the legal status of Zyban has been made to the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much it costs per smoker for the NHS to assist someone to give up smoking. [130169]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Data collected from the NHS stop smoking services and published in the Department's Statistical Bulletin—Statistics on smoking cessation services in England, April 2001 to March 2002, tables 8 & 9—show the average cost for the national health service to assist someone to give up smoking in 2001–02 was around £210 (based on self report). Costs including nicotine replacement therapy (NRT) or bupropion (Zyban) are not centrally collected.

The National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) guidance on the use of NRT and bupropion for smoking cessation, published in March 2002, estimated the cost of life year gained for a smoker using either NRT or bupropion in addition to brief advice would be not more than £1,000. NICE guidance advised that both NRT and bupropion were considered to be among the most cost effective of all healthcare interventions.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will take steps to limit by legislation the amount of freebase nicotine in tobacco products. [130171]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Levels of nicotine are currently regulated by the Tobacco Products (Manufacture, Presentation and Sale) (Safety) Regulations 2002. As of 1 January 2004, the maximum permitted yield of nicotine in cigarettes will be one milligram. This is measured in accordance with the International Standards Organisation's methodology. The Regulations implement a European Directive which is due to be reviewed in 2004 in the light of any updated scientific evidence.

However, experimental work for the Department in 2000–01 has indicated that the current International Standards Organisation's methodology used for determining tar and nicotine yields of cigarettes traps over 99 per cent. of nicotine present in cigarette smoke of major brands on the United Kingdom market. Therefore at that time there was no evidence that freebase nicotine posed a problem in UK cigarette brands.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Government have to restrict the amount of (a) ammonia and (b) urea in cigarettes. [130172]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Ammonium compounds and urea are currently permitted in United Kingdom cigarettes under the terms of a voluntary agreement concluded in 1997. The European Commission is expected to propose a common list of permitted ingredients in tobacco products by the end of 2004. We will consider the status of all permitted additives to tobacco products in the light of this proposal.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to recommend a ban on smoking in (a) domestic television programmes and (b) films classified as 15 or under. [130173]

Estelle Morris: I have been asked to reply.

The Government have no plans to ban the depiction of smoking in domestic television programmes or films classified as 15 or under. Tobacco products may not be actively promoted by way of sponsorship or product placement in either medium. Beyond that, the depiction of smoking in television programmes is already discouraged and otherwise responsibly regulated by the broadcasting regulatory authorities. Film classification is the responsibility of the British Board of Film Classification whose research into public views on classification has not indicated that the portrayal of smoking is a concern.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many smoking cessation project co-ordinators have been appointed in each primary care trust. [130320]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The information is not available centrally in the form requested. One hundred and nine smoking cessation co-ordinators (whole time equivalent) were in post at 31 March 2002 and 66 staff were responsible for co-ordinating services for pregnant women.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received regarding the television advertisement anti-smoking campaign showing children inhaling smoke. [127690]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department has received four letters making representations regarding this television advertisement.

The advertisement, which uses special effects to represent children exhaling smoke, focuses on the risk to children and reminds people to protect children by not making them breathe cigarette smoke.

Unlike adults, young children do not have any choice about whether or not they are exposed to tobacco smoke. In the UK today, it is estimated that 42 per cent. of children—"Towards Smoke-Free Public Places", British Medical Association publication (November 2002)—live in a house where at least one person smokes, and approximately one third of smokers continue to smoke near children: over 4 million people.

Social Services

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will break down the figure published in paragraph 2.76 of the Chief Inspector of Social Services 12th Annual Report showing for each staff/professional group how many additional whole time equivalent people will need to join the work force; and what the timetable is for this increase. [130908]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government do not hold information that shows the breakdown for each staff/professional group. Increases in different parts of the workforce will be dependent upon service design and skill mix, a process that will be focused on user need and carried out by the individual employers. For similar reasons the timetable for increases will vary by employer and service user group, and according to availability of development funding. The national recruitment campaign is planned to continue to 2006.

Sport and Physical Activity Board

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the membership of the Sport and Physical Activity Board; what its terms of reference are; and what projects it is working on. [130114]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The activity co-ordination team (ACT), formerly the sports and physical activity board, is jointly chaired by my right hon. the Minister of State at the Department for Culture, Media and Sport (Mr Caborn) and myself. The membership is drawn from officials from the following Government Departments and other organisations:

Department of Health;

Department for Culture, Media and Sport;

Department for Education and Skills;

Treasury;

The Prime Minister's Office;

Department for Transport;

Home Office;

Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs;

Department for Work and Pensions;

Office of the Deputy Prime Minister;

Health Development Agency;

New Opportunities Fund;

Sport England; and

Local Government Association.

The terms of reference for the ACT are:

to make recommendations to Ministers on interventions to raise mass participation in sport and physical activity, particularly among economically disadvantaged groups, school leavers, women and older people;

to deploy existing funding (for example, local exercise action pilots, sport action zones, new opportunities for physical exercise and sport and new opportunities fund/Sport England partnership fund) and to identify new sources of funding for interventions where there is existing robust evidence of their cost-effectiveness, pilot projects where there is potential to increase participation where the evidence is not yet in place;

to identify and co-ordinate existing work and to classify it as delivery elements of the strategy reporting to and steered by ACT, or as autonomous programmes feeding information into and being informed by ACT as appropriate;

to ensure effective evaluation of the strategy and communication of results from existing and new national, local and regional projects to inform policy and practice;

to make recommendations to Ministers on a methodology to secure better evidence and data on participation and fitness;

to develop and oversee an effective communication strategy, in line with Ministers' wishes and agreed as widely as possible both within Government and with outside bodies such as health charities, Sport England, the national health service, the business community and others; and to ensure that the programme of work includes quick wins and easily implemented low-cost interventions as well as longer-term solutions.

ACTs work centres on the development of a delivery plan by April 2004, to implement the key recommendation in 'Game Plan':

"to increase significantly levels of physical activity and sport particularly among disadvantaged groups".

Staff Expenses

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost was of (a) staff excess travel and (b) removal expenses in the NHS in the last year for which figures are available. [131021]

Mr. Hutton: Information on staff excess travel and removal expenses is not identified separately in the annual financial returns of national health service employers.

Stomach Stapling

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many stomach stapling operations took place in England, broken down by region, in each year between 1995 and 2002; [127702]

(2) what percentage of stomach stapling operations failed due to the patient overeating after the operation in the last 12 months. [127703]

Mr. Hutton: The Hospital Episode Statistics (HES) database provides data on the number of surgical operations and procedures carried out in the National Health Service. Data on stomach stapling are collected under the code for partitioning of stomach. This code includes a number of procedures, and no further breakdown is available to identify stomach stapling procedures separately.

HES data do not record information on the number of failed stomach stapling operations due to patients overeating.

Stroke Care

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the general hospitals caring for people with a stroke which do not have a specialist stroke unit. [130325]

Dr. Ladyman: We do not routinely collect the information requested. The most comprehensive source of information is the national sentinel stroke audit, carried out by the Royal College of Physicians. The audit was commissioned by the national health service in 1998 and was last updated in 2002. The results can be found at http://www.rcplondon.ac.uk/pubs/strokeaudit01–02.pdf. The 2002 audit shows that 73 per cent. of trusts who participated had a stroke unit compared to 56 per cent. three years earlier. The audit shows that 80 per cent. of trusts that participated have a consultant physician with specialist knowledge of stroke who is formally recognised as having principal responsibility for stroke services. While it is recognised that some services need to increase their capacity, the audit notes that very significant improvements have already been made.

Our major vehicle for further improving standards for stroke services is through the older people's national service framework which sets specific milestones for improvement by 2004 of stroke services in primary care trusts, specialist services and general hospitals that care for people suffering from a stroke. Our document, "Improvement, Expansion and Reform", which sets for the national health service a priorities and planning framework for 2003–06, makes clear that implementation of the older people's national service framework is a top priority, and that the 2004 milestone around specialist stroke services is a key target.

We monitor progress against the key milestones in the national service framework. From the information gathered so far we know that 83 per cent., of the hospitals who have replied, .now have plans to have a specialist stroke service in place by April 2004.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many stroke patients are treated in specialist stroke units; and how many he estimates will be treated in such units by April 2004; [131045]

(2) how many of the anticipated specialist stroke units in place by April 2004 he estimates will be (a) acute, (b) rehabilitation and (c) both acute and rehabilitation; and what percentage each will represent of the total; [131047]

(3) what progress is being made in introducing stroke registers in GP practices; and what percentage of GP practices he estimates will have a fully operational and resourced register by April 2004. [131048]

Dr. Ladyman [holding answer 18 September 2003]: We do not routinely collect information on stroke services at the level of detail requested in these questions. The most comprehensive source of information on stroke is the national sentinel stroke audit, carried out; by the Royal College of Physicians. The audit was commissioned by the National Health Service in 1998 and was last updated in 2002. The results can be found at http://www.rcplondon.ac.uk/pubs/strokeaudit01–02.pdf. There will be a further update of these figures next year.

The 2002 audit shows that 73 per cent., of trusts who participated had a stroke unit, compared to 56 per cent. three years earlier. In addition, 83 per cent. of patients receive brain imaging—the highest ever level. The audit shows that 80 per cent. of trusts that participated have a consultant physician with specialist knowledge of stroke who is formally recognised as having principal responsibility for stroke services. While it is recognised that some services need to increase their capacity, the audit notes that very significant improvements have already been made.

The quality framework of the new contract for general practitioners includes an indicator on the practice having a register of stroke patients. However, as the quality framework is voluntary, not all practices may choose to work towards this, although we expect many will do so. The first formal measurement of achievement against this indicator will be March 2005, and practices will be working to develop their stroke registers over the next 18 months.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the most recent occupancy levels for each specialist stroke unit; and what age restrictions are placed on admission at each stroke unit. [131033]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Tobacco Advertising

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations the Government have made to (a) the Belgian Government and (b) the European Commission regarding the Belgian Government's postponement of a complete ban on tobacco advertising. [130162]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Government have not made representations to either the Belgian Government or the European Commission regarding the Belgian Government's postponement of a complete ban on tobacco advertising.

UK Biobank

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1)how much funding the Government has put into the creation of the UK Biobank; who the other funders are; and how much they have put in; [130097]

(2) what the terms of reference are for the United Kingdom Biobank; and for how long the Government intends to fund the United Kingdom Biobank; [130098]

(3) when the independent oversight body for the United Kingdom Biobank will be set up; and who will sit on the body. [130099]

Dr. Ladyman: The UK Biobank is a partnership between the Medical Research Council (MRC), the Department of Health and the Wellcome Trust. Initially, the Department will contribute £5 million and the MRC and the Wellcome Trust will each contribute up to £28 million, making a total of £61 million, of which £33 million is from government sources. In addition the Scottish Executive has offered to contribute £0.5 million to the project.

The UK Biobank is being established as a limited company with charitable status. The memorandum and articles of association have been substantially agreed by the funders and are being reviewed by the Charity Commission. The UK Biobank is a long term project and it is envisaged that information on the health of the participants will be collected for at least ten years after recruitment in order to ensure the UK Biobank reaches its full potential as a research resource. Initial funding is for the piloting and recruitment phases (approximately seven years), but the funders recognise that additional funding (at a lower level) will be required for the follow-up phase.

The independent oversight body is now termed the Ethics and Governance Council on the recommendation of the interim advisory group that has developed the draft ethics and governance framework for the UK Biobank. The framework will be published for consultation later this month and will be discussed at the meeting of the Human Genetics Commission on 25 September 2003. Responses to the consultation will inform the exact timescale for the creation of the council and its composition, but the funders want to establish this body as soon as possible.

Vaccines

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the levels of health risk associated with the use of (a) mercury free and (b) mercury based preservatives in vaccines for children. [122715]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 30 June 2003]: The vaccines used in the childhood immunisation programme have been thoroughly assessed for safety prior to being licensed. As with all medicinal products, vaccine safety is continually monitored by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) and the independent expert advisory Committee on Safety of Medicines (CSM).

No vaccine or medicinal product is without potential side effects and these are clearly listed in the product information that is available to health professionals and patients. The CSM has reviewed the safety of vaccines containing the preservative thiomersal (which contains ethyl mercury) on a number of occasions. In 2001, the CSM conducted a major review of the available evidence and has considered new data as it has come to light in 2003. A statement was placed on the MHRA website at http://medicines.mhra.gov.uk in February 2003, summarising the latest evidence on this issue.

The advice of the CSM remains that, with the exception of possible hypersensitivity reactions (that typically include skin rashes or local swelling at the site of injection), there is no evidence of harm from thiomersal contained in vaccines and that the benefits of immunisation with thiomersal-containing vaccines outweigh any potential risks of vaccination. This view concurs with that of the World Health Organisation.

Waiting Times

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time was for patients admitted to Southend General Hospital Accident and Emergency Department to see a doctor in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000, (e) 2001 and (f) 2002. [130957]

Dr. Ladyman: Information on average waiting times in accident and emergency departments is not collected centrally.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time was for patients admitted to Southend General Hospital Accident and Emergency Department to be admitted to a ward in each year since 1997. [130958]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested for the period from 2001–02 to the present is shown in the table. Prior to 2001–02, data were collected at health authority level.

Admission from Accident and Emergency Departments, Southend Hospital NHS Trust, 2001–02 to 2003–04

			Number of patients admitted through	Patients placed in bed in a ward within 2 hours of a decision to admit		Patients placed in bed in a ward within 2 to 4 hours of a decision to admit		Patients not placed in bed in a ward within 4 hours of a decision to admit
	Qtr	Name	major A&E	Number	%	Number	%	Number	%
2003–04	1	Southend Hospital NHS Trust	3,674	891	24.3	2,783	75.7	0	0.0
2002–03	4	Southend Health Care NHS Trust	3,549	1,189	33.5	2,357	66.4	3	0.1
2002–03	3	Southend Health Care NHS Trust	2,784	380	13.6	2,395	86.0	9	0.3
2002–03	2	Southend Health Care NHS Trust	2,609	577	22.1	2,031	77.8	1	0.0
2002–03	1	Southend Health Care NHS Trust	2,431	1,386	57.0	1,044	42.9	1	0.0
2001–02	4	Southend Health Care NHS Trust	2,441	984	40.3	1,454	59.6	3	0.1
2001–02	3	Southend Health Care NHS Trust	2,561	1221	47.7	1,334	52.1	6	0.2
2001–02	2	Southend Health Care NHS Trust	2,428	1068	44.0	1,350	55.6	10	0.4
2001–02	1	Southend Health Care NHS Trust	4,192	4,186	99.9	0	0.0	6	0.1

Source:
Department of Health dataset QMAE/AMGN

Weight Reduction Operations

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many surgeons performed weight reduction operations in the last 12 months; [127088]

(2) if he will state for each hospital trust whether it has established a database to monitor surgery undertaken to aid weight loss for patients; [127091]

(3) how many children in the last year have undergone surgery to aid weight reduction. [127092]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 8 September 2003]: The data collected by Hospital Episode Statistics do not identify individual surgeons, so it is not possible to confirm how many surgeons performed these operations.

The Department does not collect centrally information on whether trusts have developed databases to monitor surgery undertaken to aid weight loss. The decision on whether surgery is the most appropriate option for children to aid weight reduction is for clinical judgement. Hospital Episode Statistics data show that in 2001–02 there were 16 Finished Consultant Episodes for children aged between 0–17 years of age with a primary diagnosis of obesity and which included a main operative procedure.

Whistleblowers

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 4 February 2003, Official Report, column 230W, on whistleblowers, who in the Department is responsible for examining such cases. [129336]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 15 September 2003]: The Department's policy is that, wherever possible, concerns raised by staff should be dealt with locally in accordance with local policies and procedures on whistleblowing, so that problems can be addressed quickly. However, there have been cases where whistleblowers have considered the local response inadequate, and as a consequence have sought to raise their concerns with the Department. Such cases are examined by the relevant strategic health authorities at the request of the human resources directorate of the Department.

An updated policy pack to support organisations in developing and/or reviewing their whistleblowing policies and procedures was sent by the director of human resources to all National Health Service trusts and health authorities on 25 July 2003. A copy has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to his answer of 12 May 2003, Official Report, column 234W, on whistleblowers, what steps he has taken in response to the Prime Minister's letter of 23 October 2002 concerning Mark Heyes. [129335]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 15 September 2003]: Officials have looked into the matters which Mr. Heyes raised in his letter to my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister. These were considered to be a reiteration of previous issues, which have already been investigated by the Southport and Ormskirk Hospitals National Health Service Trust.

The Department of Health cannot intervene in individual NHS trust employment issues and Mr. Heyes has been advised to seek independent legal advice.

Young People (Medication)

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many persons aged 18 years and younger are receiving (a) antidepressants, (b) antipsychotics and (c) amphetamines. [130264]

Dr. Ladyman: Information on the numbers of children and young aged 18 and younger receiving antidepressants, antipsychotics and amphetamines is not collected. However an estimate is available on the number of prescriptions dispensed for young people in England aged under 15 and those under 19 in full-time education. This information is in the table.

Estimated number of prescription items (Thousand) of antidepressants, antipsychotics and amphetamines dispensed in the community in England in 2002 for children under 15 and those under 19 in full-time education[1]

	Number of prescription items (Thousand)
Antipsychotics	50
Antidepressants	260
Amphetamines[2]	240

[1] This does not include private prescriptions or prescriptions dispensed in hospitals, for which information is not available.

[2] This is all central nervous system stimulants, as defined by the British National Formulary, which includes amphetamines and related drugs such as methylphenidate.

X-ray Scans

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dual energy x-ray absorptiometry scans per 100,000 population were carried out in (a) Birmingham, (b) the West Midlands and (c) England in the last year for which figures are available. [129769]

Miss Melanie Johnson: We do not collect the information requested centrally.

Ward Housekeepers

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many ward housekeepers are employed in each NHS trust. [130323]

Dr. Ladyman: As of January 2003, around 5,000 housekeepers were reported as providing housekeeping services within 200 national health service trusts and primary care trusts.

The number of housekeepers per trust is varied and reflects local needs and systems.

Xenotransplantation

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to appoint new members to the UK Xenotransplantation Interim Regulatory Authority. [129270]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We are currently in the process of appointing two new Members to the United Kingdom Xenotransplantation Interim Regulatory Authority. A further recruitment exercise will take place in early 2004.

A press release will be issued in due course.

HOUSE OF COMMONS PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES (HANSARD) ● 2002-03

CHADWYCK-HEALEY Vol. 410 Index pp1-73 (A-ZIM) 8 Sept - 6 Oct 2003

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 410

SESSION 2002–2003

8th September 2003—6th October 2003

Printed indexes to Hansard

The fortnightly index is one of three printed indexes to Commons Hansard produced from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Indexing Service (POLIS). It contains references to material in the daily parts and weekly edition of Hansard. The other indexes produced are:

- The volume index to Hansard. This covers the same date range as the fortnightly index but references may be different as a result of changes to the text and column numbering in the bound volume.
- The sessional index to Hansard. This contains references to material in the bound volumes for a whole session.

Indexes on the Parliamentary website

Fortnightly, volume and sessional indexes covering material from the beginning of the 1999/2000 session will also appear on the Parliamentary website at http://www.parliament.uk with links to the full text of Hansard.

SCOPE

The indexes include entries covering:

- The content of all material recorded in Hansard, including debates, procedural motions and questions.
- The names of all Members contributing to the Parliamentary business recorded in Hansard.
- The names of some types of Parliamentary business whenever they occur in Hansard. These are 'Ministerial statements', 'Business statements', 'Opposition days' and 'Estimates days'.

ARRANGEMENT

- All headings are in one word-by-word alphabetical sequence, with Members' contribution entries distinguished from other entries by italics.
- Where a Member contributes to Parliamentary business and is the subject of Parliamentary business there are separate contribution and subject entries, the subject entry coming first.
- Entries beginning 'Mac' and 'Mc' are sorted in one sequence as 'Mac'.
- 'St', when abbreviated for Saint, is filed as 'Saint'.
- Numbers are filed as if spelt out, e.g. '10 Downing Street' as if 'Ten Downing Street'.

HEADINGS

Choice of headings

- Specificity—Entries summarise the overall content of a debate or question as specifically as the various POLIS thesauruses allow. For example, Education, Higher education, Universities or the name of a particular university is used depending on the breadth of the item.
- Name headings—Specific entries are included for the names of people, places, institutions, organisations, committees, programmes, initiatives, publications and legislation when these constitute the overall subject of an item.
- Organisations and subjects—Organisation entries are preferred for material about the general performance, administration and staffing of an organisation (for example, United Kingdom Passports Agency, Standards). Subject entries are preferred for what organisations do as part of their duties (for example, Passports, Fees and charges).

Geographical coverage

- Subject headings—Subject headings are assumed to refer to the whole of England, Great Britain or the United Kingdom unless otherwise stated.
- Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales—Material relating to the whole of Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales is indexed under these headings.
- Places within the UK—Material about specific towns, areas and institutions is entered under the name of the specific town, area or institution.
- Foreign countries—Most material relating to foreign countries is collected under the name of that country. Some additional material may be found under the names of—groups of countries, areas within countries, geographical features, place names associated with particular issues, politicians and heads of state, international bodies, and institutions and companies operating in those countries.
- EC/EU material—General material about the European Communities and European institutions as bodies is entered under 'European Communities' and 'EC institutions'. Organisational material about specific communities and institutions is entered under the name of the body, for example 'European Coal and Steel Community' or 'European Parliament'. Material about what the Communities and institutions are doing or propose to do is entered under various subject headings beginning 'EC' such as 'EC environmental policy'.

Parliamentary material and business

- Material about Parliament—This is indexed under 'Parliament', the names of the two Houses, the 'Palace of Westminster' and parts of the Parliamentary estate (such as 'Portcullis House').
- Committees—Material about committees is indexed under 'Committees', types of committee (such as 'Select committees') and the names of individual committees (such as 'Home Affairs Select Committee').
- Parliamentary proceedings/procedures—Material discussing these is indexed under the specific type of proceeding (such as 'Parliamentary questions' or 'Oral questions'), procedure (such as 'Calling of Members') or issue (such as 'Unparliamentary expressions').
- Legislation—Entries for Parliamentary proceedings on bills and statutory instruments are entered under their titles. Where the lead word of the bill or statutory instrument does not provide a full or clear indication of the subject there are additional subject entries when the bill or instrument is debated. For example, debates on the 'Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill' have entries under 'Pensions' and 'Social security benefits' as well as under the title of the Bill.
- Members' names—These are given in the form by which the Member prefers to be known.
- Speaker and Chair—Contributions by the Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker and deputies'. Contributions from the chair during Committees of the Whole House are brought together under 'Chairman of Committee of the Whole House'. Significant rulings and statements (as opposed to routine comments) are indicated by the sub-heading 'Rulings and statements' in both cases.

Guidance on headings

- Cross references—'See' references indicate all the material has been entered under another heading. 'See also' references indicate that additional information may be found under another heading.
- Concept thesaurus—A copy of the subject thesaurus to POLIS, listing the concept entries used in the index, is available on the Parliamentary website. A hard copy is available from the Head of the POLIS Unit, House of Commons Library, 1 Derby Gate, London, SW1A 2DG (020 7219 6456).

REFERENCES

- References in the indexes are to columns rather than pages.
- References to debates, but not questions, are accompanied by the date of the item.
- There are separate sequences in Hansard for the material taken on the floor of the House, Westminster Hall sittings, written statements and written questions:
  - References consisting of a number by itself indicate material taken on the floor of the House.
  - References ending in 'wh' indicate Westminster Hall sittings.
  - References ending in 'ws' indicate written statements.
  - References ending in 'w' indicate written questions.
- References under all headings except the names of Members contributing to Parliamentary business and the titles of legislation are listed in one numerical sequence irrespective of whether the material is taken on the floor of the House, is discussed at a Westminster Hall sitting, is a written statement or is a written question.
- References under the names of Members contributing to Parliamentary business and the titles of legislation are listed in numerical sequence under the following headings:
  - Chamber Debates (which includes interventions and points of order as well as significant contributions to debates);
  - Westminster Hall Debates (covering all debates held as part of the Westminster Hall sittings);
  - Written Statements (consisting of ministerial statements issued in writing); and
  - Questions (which includes all written, oral and urgent questions).

ABBREVIATIONS

The following abbreviations are used in connection with the progress of bills:

- 1R = First reading
- 2R = Second reading
- Com = Committee stage
- Rep = Report stage
- 3R = Third reading
- res = resolution
- amendt(s) = amendment(s)
- * = matter taken formally without debate or division
- (HL) = Bill starting in House of Lords
- (SP) = Bill in Scottish Parliament.

Parliamentary background

- The Parliamentary website at http://www.parliament.uk contains a range of information about Parliament and the full text of some Parliamentary papers and proceedings including Hansard.
- Information on current Parliamentary business is provided in the House of Commons Information Office Weekly Information Bulletin, available on the website and from The Stationery Office (020 7873 8499).
- Further information on Parliamentary proceedings and procedures is available from the House of Commons Information Office (020 7219 4272).

A12
Repairs and maintenance 503w

A27
372-3w
Repairs and maintenance 503-4w

A38
Accidents 504w

A483
842

Abandoned vehicles
770w

Abbott, Ms Diane
Chamber Debates
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 872
Questions
Education, Assessments 459-60

Abortion
327w
Breast cancer 1257w
Counselling 1257w
Havering 834-5w

Abortion Act 1967
Questions
327w

Absent voting
51-2ws, 587-8, 614-5w
Local government 964w

Access to Learning Fund
789-90w

Accident and emergency departments
(10.09.03) 69-91wh, 155w
Admissions 272w
Broomfield Hospital 616-7w
EC law 273w
Southend Hospital 1356w
Standards 155-6w
Waiting lists 835-6w, 1257w

Accident Group
72w

Accidents
1338w
A38 504w
Elderly 187w
Emergency services 658-9w
Iraq conflict 45-6w, 515w
Pollution 1190w
Roads 411w, 578w, 1250w

Accountancy
Mersey tunnel 277w, 1062w

Acrylamide
629w, 1282w
Genetically modified organisms 365w

Acupuncture
1257-8w

Acute beds
Worcestershire 630w

Additives
Food 188w, 1282-4w

Administration of justice
497-8w
Developing countries 892w
Domestic violence 1035-6w
EC action 470-1
Reform 337w, 780w
Standards 1221w, 1242w

Admissibility of evidence
1231-2w

Adoption
Gloucestershire 1124w

Adult education
686-7w

Adult education—continued
Grants 114w, 446w
Hertfordshire 550-1w
Qualifications 790w

Adur Arun and Worthing Primary Care Trust
Arthritis 163w
Mental health services 217w

Advertising
Alcoholic drinks 328w
Drugs 1319w
Food 782-3w, 1281w
Jobcentres 1051w
Television 782-3w, 958-9w
Tobacco 1349w, 1354w

Advisory Board of Restricted Patients see Restricted Patients' Advisory Board

Advisory bodies
Economic and monetary union 1088-91w

Advisory services
Jobcentres 757-8w

Advocacy
Mental health services 836-7w

Advocate General for Scotland
Official engagements 17w

Aerials
Northern Ireland 490w, 728-9w
Petitions (17.09.03) 1040

Afghanistan
784w
Armed forces 320w, 343-4w, 947w, 1106-7w
Bomb disposal 555-6w
Children's rights 320w
Democracy 1107w
Detainees 323-5w, 592-3w
Drugs 64w, 79-80w, 674w
Females 320w
Floods 80-1w
Health services 554-5w, 888w
Overseas aid 1000-1w
Overseas investment 80w
Peace keeping operations 10-1, 321w, 343w, 511-2w, 787w, 1107-8w
Reconstruction 80w, 1000-1w

Africa
Diamonds 67-8w

African Union
Zimbabwe 65w

Agency nurses
245-6w
Expenditure 157w
Foreign workers 1337-8w
Leicestershire 245w
Vetting 1221-3w

Aggregates
392w
Northern Ireland 462w
Roads 373w

Aggregates levy
95w, 1174w
Northern Ireland 95w

Agricultural products
302w, 310w
Imports 308-9w
Labelling 155w

Agriculture
see also Farmers and Farms
Banks 1192w
EC enlargement 918-9w
EC law 300-1w
Exchange rates 919-20w
Incinerators 312-4w
Industrial health and safety 899w

Agriculture—continued
Northern Ireland 565-6w
Regulation 919-20w
Subsidies 917-8w, 1174-5w
Waste disposal 1198w

AIDS
200-1w
Research 157-8w
Tuberculosis 270w

Ainsworth, Mr Peter
Chamber Debates
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 61, 70, 85-8
Questions
Campbell, Alastair 520w
Redhill Aerodrome 885w

Air conditioning
Aviation 388-9w

Air force
Deployment 404-6w
Gliding 416-7w
Gulf states 400w
Training 1171-2w

Air pollution
1175-6w
Greater London 373-4w
Romford 1176w
Transport 278w

Air routes
Belfast 815w

Aircraft carriers
512w, 701w
European fighter aircraft 512w
Procurement 44-5ws, 344w, 700-1w, 746w, 947w
Scotland 638w

Airguns
582w

Airports
410w
Construction 882-3w
Languages 505w
St Helena 43-4ws
South East region 412w, 506-7w, 533-4w, 1187w

Al Muhajiroun
582-3w

Al Qaeda
436w

Alcoholic drinks
Advertising 328w
Antisocial behaviour 657-8w, 660w
Drugs 1233w
Imports 455-6w
Labelling 1258w
Young people 323, 672w

Alconbury airfield
608w

Alexander, Mr Douglas, Minister for the Cabinet Office and Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster
Questions
Asbestos 994-6w
Electronic government 14-5w
Females, Cabinet Office 502w
Information technology, Cabinet Office 797w, 996-7w
Office of the e-Envoy 502-3w
Office of the e-Envoy, Annual reports 653w
Official cars 501w
"Public Bodies 2003" 502w
Secondment, Cabinet Office 997-9w
Terrorism 501w, 994w

Algeria
784-5w

Allan, Mr Richard
Questions
Teachers, Redundancy 463

Allen, Mr Graham
Chamber Debates
European Union (16.09.03) 787
Westminster Hall Debates
Curriculum (17.09.03) 303-6wh, 308-10wh
Questions
Convention on the Future of Europe 18w
Judges, Public appointments 160
Legislative drafting, Parliamentary scrutiny 168-9

Allergies
158w
Clinics 158w
Labelling 1258-9w
Nuts 1258-9w
Waiting lists 158w

Allocation of time motions
(17.09.03) 881-1010, 1015-20

Alpacas
1199-200w

Alzheimer's disease
1259-61w
Obesity 159w
Prescription drugs 12w

Ambulance services
Emergency calls 184w
Essex 159-60w, 185w
Greater London 159w, 185w, 859w
Infectious diseases 847w
Northern Ireland 492w, 708w
Security 161w
Speed limits 160-1w
Standards 159-60w, 184-5w
Vehicles 161w

Amendments and new clauses
Rulings and statements (15.09.03) 598

Amess, Mr David
Chamber Debates
Stray Animals Bill, 1R (17.09.03) 878-80
Teachers (09.09.03) 266-70
Westminster Hall Debates
Coastal areas, Regeneration (10.09.03) 106-7wh
Questions
Arthritis, Drugs 615-6w
Driving, Cellular phones 1250w
Iraq, Weapons 46w, 750-1w
Midwives 1322w
NHS Direct 1327w
Post offices, Closures 75-7w, 878w
Prostate cancer 629w
Southend Hospital, Accident and emergency departments 1356w
Southend Hospital, Admissions 1356w
Southend Hospital, Nurses 1334w
Southend on Sea 745w
Times of sittings 636-7w

Ammonia
Tobacco 1350w

Anaemia
161-2w
Screening 162w

Anaesthetics
Consultants 1262w

Ancillary staff
NHS 228w, 1261-2w, 1331w

Ancram, Rt Hon Michael
Chamber Debates
European Union (09.09.03) 175-7, (16.09.03) 777-85, 789, 791, 793
Iraq (08.09.03) 40-1, (10.09.03) 403, 405-12, 429
Ministers, Points of order (15.09.03) 591
Questions
Iraq, Reconstruction 593w
Zimbabwe, Freedom of expression 1119w

Anderson, Rt Hon Donald
Chamber Debates
European Union (09.09.03) 184-5
Iraq (08.09.03) 45
Questions
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 8

Anderson, Janet
Questions
Atkinson, George 323w
Common land, Urban areas 543-4w

Angina
162-3w

Angling
Northern Ireland 468-9w
Seas and oceans (08.09.03) 143-8

Angola
65w
Arms trade 789w

Animal By-Products Regulations 2003
Questions
1084

Animal experiments
Higher education 551w

Animal feed
Antibiotics 282-3w

Animal welfare
287w, 309w

Animals
Insurance 1185w

Annuities
21w

Antenatal care
183-4w

Antibiotics
1264-5w
Animal feed 282-3w
Drug resistance 1263w
Poultry meat 1191w
Urinary system 1264w

Antisemitism
Schools 366w
West Midlands 378w

Antisocial behaviour
(11.09.03) 561-70, 1202-3w
Alcoholic drinks 657-8w, 660w
Young people 664-5w

Antisocial behaviour orders
932-3w

Apprentices
Rural areas 1124-5w

Apprenticeships, modern see Modern apprenticeships

Arbuthnot, Rt Hon James
Chamber Debates
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1098

Archives
Dept for Work and Pensions 903-4w, 907w

Argentina
Falkland Islands 948w

Armagh
Police stations 825w

Armed conflict
Indonesia 323-4w
Liberia 11-2ws
Middle East 992w
Uganda 678-9w

Armed forces
12-4
Afghanistan 320w, 343-4w, 947w, 1106-7w
Asbestos 513w
Commonwealth 1156-7w
Deployment 52w, 949w
Discharges 705-6w, 952w
Electoral register 39-40w
Falkland Islands 948-50w
Families 50-1w
Females 42-3w, 520w
Fiji 1156w
Health services 1-2w, 707w
Housing 39-40w, 45w
Injuries 2w
Intimidation 1169-70w
Location 40-1w
Logistics 26-7ws, 952w
Pensions 39-40ws, 751-2w, 1054w, 1160w
Privacy 517w
Recruitment 752w
Religion 514w
Scotland 51-2w
Security 703w
Surveys 1157w
Training 346w, 348-50w, 519w
Uganda 90-1w
Uniforms 518w

Armoured fighting vehicles
705w, 1153-4w, 1161-4w
Iraq conflict 952-3w
Procurement 949-50w

Arms Control and Disarmament (Inspections) Bill (HL) 2002/03
Chamber Debates
2R (18.09.03) 1107-22

Arms trade
764w, 1108w, 1154-5w
Angola 789w
Czech Republic 589w
Democratic Republic of Congo 991w
Developing countries 679w, 889w, 1002w
EC countries 1165-6w, 1172w
Export controls 72-3w, 749w, 1064-8w, 1074w
Fraud 425-6w
Indonesia 73-4w
Iran 324w
Iraq 53ws
Israel 1154w
Rwanda 679w
Sanctions 1117w
Trade promotion 322w
USA 1165w

Army
994w
Deployment 351w
Drugs 344-5w
Manpower 16-7
Self-mutilation 701-2w
Training 512w, 750w

Arson
Schools 446-7w

Art works
Theft 671-2w

Arthritis
Adur Arun and Worthing Primary Care Trust 163w
Drugs 163w, 269w, 615-6w
Medical treatments 1262-3w
Northern Ireland 727w

Asbestos
639w, 994-6w
Armed forces 513w
Dept for Constitutional Affairs 1033w
Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1176-7w
Dept for Transport 1055w
Dept for Work and Pensions 1048w
Dept of Trade and Industry 1069w
Foreign and Commonwealth Office 1109w
Ministry of Defence 746w
Police stations 825w

Ashford Hospital
1265w

Asians
Health 1265w

Asperger's syndrome
(10.09.03) 437-44

Assassination
Heads of state 1113-4w

Assembly Powers Independent Commission
see Independent Commission on Assembly Powers

Assets Recovery Agency
1204-5w
Northern Ireland 311-3

Asteroid task Force
see Near Earth Objects Task Force

Asthma
164w
Research 164-5w

Astra Training Services
442w

Asylum
934-9w, 1207-8w
Administrative delays 1206-7w
Appeals 1208w
Applications 933-4w, 1207-8w
Central African Republic 82w
Children 420w, 798-9w, 933-4w, 937w, 1123w
Community development 798w
Crime 1206w
Custodial treatment 63w
Deportation 1209w
Documents 941-2w
EC enlargement 593w
Extradition 1248w
Haslar Prison 1249w
Havering 1205-6w
Housing 583-4w, 1201-2w, 1208w
Mental health services 211-2w
Northern Ireland 55w
Palestinians 87-8w, 375w
Romford 1205-6w
Solicitors 56w
Somalia 584-5w
Turkey 799w

Atherton, Ms Candy
Chamber Debates
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 88-9
Westminster Hall Debates
Housing, South West region (09.09.03) 62wh, 64wh
Schools, Finance (17.09.03) 273wh
Questions
Bees, Varroasis 544w
Customs and Excise, Plymouth 99w

Atherton, Ms Candy*—*continued
Customs and Excise, South West region 966-7w

Athletics
North East region 574-5

Atkinson, George
323w

Atkinson, Mr Peter
Chamber Debates
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 66, 82-3
Questions
Digital broadcasting 956w

Atkinson Morley's Hospital
Land use 631w

Atomic Energy Board
1069w

Attorney General
Legal opinion 1114w

Aung San Suu Kyi
321w, 988w

Australia
Double taxation 3ws

Autism
165-6w, 272-3w, 837-8w, 1265w
Northern Ireland 566-7w, 813-4w
Social security benefits 19w
Tyne and Wear 1125-6w

Automated credit transfer
Social security benefits 900-1w

Avian influenza
283-4w

Avian Influenza and Newcastle Disease (England and Wales) Order 2003
Questions
283-4w

Aviation
277-8w, 388w, 412-3w, 883w
Air conditioning 388-9w
Health 858
Passengers 504w
Scotland 638w
Security 689w, 761w
Standards 760w
Taxation 653-4w, 859w
Terrorism 797w

Babies
8w
Safety 166w

Bacon, Mr Richard
Chamber Debates
European Union (16.09.03) 796, 821
Westminster Hall Debates
Disability living allowance (09.09.03) 53-60wh
Questions
Elderly, Community care 703

Badgers
see Bovine tuberculosis

BAE Systems
425-6w

Bailey, Mr Adrian
Chamber Debates
Teachers (09.09.03) 264-6, 274, 278, 290
Questions
Armed forces, Housing 45w
Supporters Direct 29w
Trade agreements, Developing countries 1056

Bailiffs
583w

Baird, Vera
Westminster Hall Debates
Coastal areas, Regeneration (10.09.03) 115wh, 117wh
Questions
Aung San Suu Kyi 988w
Burma, British American Tobacco 988w
Burma, Higher education 989w
Burma, Human rights 989w
Burma, Overseas aid 1003-4w
Burma, Politics and government 989-90w
Burma, Tourism 989w
Coroners 1215-6w
Domestic violence 1285-6w
Domestic violence, Administration of justice 1035-6w
Domestic violence, Education 1130-1w
Drugs, Alcoholic drinks 1233w
Females, Public appointments 870-1w
Police, Training 1226w
Rape, Drugs 1225-7w, 1248w
Rape, Sentencing 472
Rape, Victim support schemes 1248w
Sexual offences, Victim support schemes 1347w
Sixth form education 466

Baker, Ellie
665-6w

Baker, Norman
Chamber Debates
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 62, 73-80
Westminster Hall Debates
Flood control, Lewes (10.09.03) 131-5wh, 137wh
Questions
A27 372-3w
Agriculture, Waste disposal 1198w
Airports, Languages 505w
Atomic Energy Board 1069w
Bishops, Official cars 524w
Bishops, Official residences 523-4w
Bishops, Pay 523-4w
British Nuclear Fuels, US Nuclear Energy Institute 74w
Cars 374w
Chemicals, Exports 873w
Church Commissioners, Genetically modified organisms 523w
Closed circuit television 1209w
Combined heat and power 286-7w
Consumer goods, Radioactive materials 1192w
Crown Prosecution Service, Public appointments 745w, 781-2w
Freight 508w
Government art collection 532w
Higher education, Animal experiments 551w
House of Commons, Recycling 500w
Lorry drivers, France 503w
Mandelson, Peter 407w
Ministerial policy advisors 407w
Ministers, Codes of practice 521w
Ministers, Intelligence services 522w
Overseas aid 897-8w, 1005-6w
Paper, Exports 77w
Peat 1187w
Radar 1171w
RAF Fylingdales 1170w
RAF Molesworth 1171w
Railways, Freight 507-8w
Recycling 311w
Roads, Construction 412w
Royal family, Official residences 1048w
Royal parks 649w
Slaughterhouses 1173w
Sports, Finance 532w

Baker, Norman—continued*
Taxation 656-7w
Waste disposal, Taxation 779-80w
Written questions, Disclosure of information 637w
Xenotransplantation Interim Regulatory Authority 1359-60w

Baku-Tbilisi-Ceyhan oil pipeline
356-7w, 383-4w, 651w, 877w, 889-90w, 1069w

Balance of payments
456w
Food 280w

Baldry, Tony
Chamber Debates
Community hospitals, Petitions (16.09.03) 829
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 868
Westminster Hall Debates
United Nations (11.09.03) 142wh, 163-9wh
Questions
Diplomatic service 1112w
Sierra Leone 1116w

Balkans
10
Peace keeping operations 9-10

Ballistic missile defence
USA 401w

Ballooning
1055-8w

Baltic Sea
Chemical weapons 674-5w, 1111-2w

Bangor Hospital Co Down
708w

Bankruptcy
Interest rates 426w

Banks
Agriculture 1192w

Barker, Gregory
Questions
Bailiffs 583w
Nurses, Recruitment 850w
Petrol alternatives 689-90w

Barnes, Mr Harry
Chamber Debates
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1100
Iraq (08.09.03) 53
Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission Etc) Bill (HL), Allocation of time motion, 2R and rem stages (17.09.03) 890, 909, 933-5
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 876
Questions
Assets Recovery Agency, Northern Ireland 311
Elderly, Care homes 705
Electoral register 584
Post office card account 1058

Baron, Mr John
Questions
Alzheimer's disease, Prescription drugs 12w
Caesarean sections 205w
Cancer, Waiting lists 4-5w
Children, Protection 172w
Chronic fatigue syndrome 1271-2w
Community health councils, Buildings 840w
Community health councils, Manpower 840w
Dental services 714
Epilepsy, Prescription drugs 11-2w
Health services, Elderly 1335-6w

Baron, Mr John—continued*
Hospitals, Waiting lists 13w, 271w
Maternity services 7w, 205w
Midwives, Manpower 7w
Nurses, Children 839-40w
Parkinson's disease 11w
Patients' forums 854w
Prostate cancer 1343-4w
Radiography, Manpower 12w
Riluzole 11w
Strokes 1353-4w
Strokes, Admissions 271w

Barrett, John
Chamber Debates
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 873
Questions
Afghanistan, Floods 80-1w
Central African Republic, Asylum 82w
Consultation papers, Ministry of Defence 398-400w
Consultation papers, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 36-7w
Developing countries, Common agricultural policy 82w
Developing countries, Disease control 420-1w
Ethiopia, Child prostitution 83w
Ethiopia, Droughts 82-3w
Ethiopia, HIV infection 83w
Nigeria, Poliomyelitis 87w
Sudan, Overseas aid 90w
Sudan, Press freedom 89-90w
Uganda, Armed forces 90-1w
World Trade Organisation 315-6w
Zimbabwe, Crops 91-2w

Batten's disease
1266w

Battle, Rt Hon John
Chamber Debates
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 868

Bayley, Hugh
Questions
BBC 579-80
Education, Assessments 460-1
Females, Income 1070
Serious Fraud Office, Prosecutions 471-2

BBC
529w, 579-82
Digital broadcasting 22w

Beard, Mr Nigel
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 540-3

Beckett, Rt Hon Margaret, Secretary of State for Environment Food and the Regions*
Questions
Agriculture, Banks 1192w
Airports, South East region 1187w
Cellular phones, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1186-7w
Departmental coordination, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1186w
Environment Agency, Surveys 1181w
Food, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1181-2w
Genetically modified organisms, Crops 1182-3w
Hazardous substances, Waste disposal 1183-4w
Horses, Transport 1176w
Inland waterways, Waste management 1198w
Llamas 1199-200w
Motor vehicles, Waste disposal 1179w
Nature conservation 1185w, 1189-90w

Beckett, Rt Hon Margaret—continued*
Offices, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1192w
Official visits, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1186w
Packaging, Recycling 1198w
Phytophthora ramorum 1188-9w
Pollution, Accidents 1190w
Pollution control 1189-90w
Sites of special scientific interest 1197w
Sites of special scientific interest, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1197w
Training, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1185w
Travel, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1179w
Waste management, Finance 1198-9w
Wildlife Trusts 1199w

Beef
Northern Ireland 567w

Bees
Varroasis 544w, 931-2w

Beeston, Russell
320

Begg, Miss Anne
Chamber Debates
Elderly (10.09.03) 339-40, 343

Beggs, Mr Roy
Chamber Debates
Teachers (09.09.03) 276
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 875
Questions
Agriculture, Northern Ireland 565-6w
Assets Recovery Agency, Northern Ireland 312
Business, Northern Ireland 574w
Business questions 484-5
Child care vouchers 392-3w
Children, Maintenance 569w
Education, Northern Ireland 569-70w
Grammar schools, Admissions 461-2
Heart diseases, Northern Ireland 819-20w
Horses, Northern Ireland 574-5w
Literacy, Northern Ireland 575-6w
Mature students, Northern Ireland 568w
Mental health services, Northern Ireland 573w
Portugal, Embassies 1115w
Primary education, Northern Ireland 477-8w
Public expenditure, Northern Ireland 712w
Roads, Northern Ireland 729-30w
Schools, Northern Ireland 828-9w
Screening, Northern Ireland 573w
Social security benefits, Automated credit transfer 900-1w
Wildlife, Northern Ireland 396w

Beith, Rt Hon A J
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 493, 497
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1095
Westminster Hall Debates
Dental services (09.09.03) 35wh, 43-4wh
Questions
Channel Islands, Departmental responsibilities 1045w
Church of England, Public appointments 1036w
Diabetes 1278-9w
Judges, Public appointments 160-1
Lighting, Pollution 1184-5w
Lighting, Roads 1063-4w
Warships, USA 886-7w

Belfast
Air routes 815w
Regeneration 814-6w
Sewers 832w
Social rented housing 483-4w
Special educational needs 484-6w
Teachers 831-2w
Water 833w

Belfast City Airport
708-9w

Belfast City Hospital
Cancer 827w

Belgium
Tobacco 1354w

Bell, Mr Stuart, Second Church Estates Commissioner*
Chamber Debates
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1096
Questions
Bishops, Official cars 524w
Bishops, Official residences 523-4w
Bishops, Pay 523-4w
Cathedrals 522w
Church Commissioners, Genetically modified organisms 523w
Church of England, Discrimination 585-6
Church of England, Finance 522w
Churches, Disabled 586-7
Countryside, Access 1032w

Bellingham, Mr Henry
Questions
Business, Regulation 767w
Carbon Trust 408w, 1177-8w
Counterfeit manufacturing 873-4w
Courts, Closures 162-3
Energy, Conservation 1181w
Foreign investment in UK 432-3w
Foreign workers, Low pay 875-6w
Safeway 767w
Skilled workers, Shortages 767-8w
Small businesses, Finance 768w
Small businesses, Fraud 493w
Small businesses, Northern Ireland 395w
Small businesses, Scotland 149-50
Telecommunications, Manpower 549w
World Trade Organisation 522w

Benefits Agency
see Social Security Benefits Agency

Benn, Hilary, Minister of State, Dept for International Development*
Chamber Debates
Iraq (10.09.03) 428-32
Written Statements
Liberia, Armed conflict 11-2ws
Questions
Afghanistan, Drugs 79-80w
Afghanistan, Floods 80-1w
Afghanistan, Overseas investment 80w
Afghanistan, Reconstruction 80w
Botswana, Ethnic groups 81w
Burundi 81-2w
Cameroon, Poverty 1004w
Central Africa 1007w
Central African Republic, Asylum 82w
Defence equipment, Smuggling 1002-3w
Democratic Republic of Congo 1005w
Developing countries, Common agricultural policy 82w
Developing countries, Disease control 420-1w
Developing countries, Information technology 84w
Developing countries, Internet 84w
Developing countries, Microfinance 554w
Developing countries, Technology 87w
Developing countries, Trade 91w
Ethiopia, Child prostitution 83w

Benn, Hilary—continued*
Ethiopia, Droughts 82-3w
Ethiopia, HIV infection 83w
Forced labour 650-1w
Iraq, Food 1011w
Iraq, International assistance 1011w
Iraq, Medical equipment 1010w
Iraq, Non-governmental organisations 653w
Iraq, Overseas aid 652w, 1009-12w
Iraq, Pulses and seeds 557w
Iraq, Reconstruction 420w, 557w
Iraq, United Nations 1011w
Iraq conflict, Prisoners of war 893w
Liberia 84-6w
Microsoft, Dept for International Development 1013w
New partnership for Africa's development 86w
Nigeria, Poliomyelitis 87w
Overseas aid, Family planning 1014-5w
Palestinians, Asylum 87-8w
Sao Tome and Principe, International assistance 368w
Sao Tome and Principe, Overseas aid 88w
Secondment, Dept for International Development 88-90w
Sierra Leone, Overseas aid 89w
Sierra Leone, Poverty 557-8w
Southern Africa, Overseas aid 1019-20w
Sub-Saharan Africa, Common agricultural policy 556w
Sudan, Overseas aid 90w
Sudan, Press freedom 89-90w
Uganda, Armed forces 90-1w
UN Conference on Population and Development 556-7w
Written questions, Dept for International Development 1014w
Zimbabwe, Crops 91-2w
Zimbabwe, Food 92-3w

Bennett, Andrew
Questions
Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 534-6w

Bercow, Mr John
Chamber Debates
Business questions intervention (11.09.03) 475
Elderly (10.09.03) 343, 346
European Union (16.09.03) 790, 792, 797, 802
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1100
Local Government Bill, Lords amendts (15.09.03) 598-600, 603, 606
Ministerial statement intervention (09.09.03) 180, 182
Oral question time intervention (09.09.03) 165
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 63
Questions
Administration of justice, Standards 1221w
Assets Recovery Agency 1204-5w
Asylum, Applications 1207w
Asylum, Deportation 1209w
BBC 581
Burglary 1224-5w, 1232w
Business questions 482, 1078
Cocaine 944w
Community support officers 1214-5w
Crime 1252-3w
Crime, Costs 1216-7w
Crime, Insurance 1209w
Crime, Motor vehicles 1253w
Crime prevention, Motor vehicles 1253-4w

Bercow, Mr John—continued*
Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority 1218w
Drugs, Misuse 1227w
Drugs, Young people 1213-4w
EC action, Dept for Education and Skills 122-3w
EC law, Dept for Constitutional Affairs 32w
EC law, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 24w
EC law, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister 35w
EC law, Treasury 107-8w
European Union, Dept for Constitutional Affairs 32w
European Union, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 301-2w
European Union, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 75-6w
Forensic Science Service 1229-30w
Genetics, Databases 1224w
Human trafficking 1247w
Immigrants, Taxation 1237w
Immigration 1237-8w
Judges, Public appointments 164
Labour turnover, Home Office 57w
Local criminal justice boards 1219-22w
Ministerial statements, Northern Ireland Office 492w
Ministerial statements, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister 744w
Motor vehicles, Salvage 1238w
National Crime Squad 1238w
National Criminal Intelligence Service 1238-9w
Organised crime 1218w
Police, Standards 1243-4w
Reoffenders, Drugs 1249-50w
Schools, Police 985w
Seasonal agricultural workers' scheme 1250w
Security Industry Authority, Manpower 1250w
Students, Fees and charges 464-5
United Kingdom Passport Service, Manpower 812w
Youth Justice Board, Manpower 1256w

Berezovsky, Boris
1207w

Berry, Mr Roger
Questions
Disabled, Northern Ireland 465w

Best, Mr Harold
Questions
Adult education, Grants 114w
BBC 529w
Further education, Leeds 1136w
Higher education, Research 1150w
Pre-school education, Leeds 458-9
Students, Fees and charges 149w
Teachers, Leeds 145w
Tourism 422w, 528w

Best value
1024w

Betts, Clive
Members' suspension (11.09.03) 488-90

Bicycles
Docklands light railway line 1059w

Biobank UK
1354-5w

Biodiversity
Departmental coordination 364w

Biofuels
689w, 883w
Excise duties 102w

Biotechnology
434w
Manpower 424w
Merseyside 1069-70w

Birkenhead
Sure start programme 1146-7w

Birth rate
207-8w
Hospitals 1316w

Bishops
Official cars 524w
Official residences 523-4w
Pay 523-4w

Blackman, Mrs Liz
Chamber Debates
Asperger's syndrome (10.09.03) 439

Blair, Rt Hon Tony, Prime Minister, First Lord of the Treasury and Minister for the Civil Service*
Written Statements
Intelligence services 17ws
Ministerial policy advisors, Civil servants 33-4ws
Questions
Alcoholic drinks, Young people 323
Aviation, Health 858
Beeston, Russell 320
Boundary Commission for Scotland 17-8w
By-elections, Brent 858-9
Campbell, Alastair 520w
Charter of Fundamental Rights (EU) 329-30
Chechnya 18w
Children's rights 325-6
Coastal areas 326
Committee on Standards in Public Life, Public appointments 867w
Convention on the Future of Europe 324-5, 327-8
Council tax 855-6
Crown Prosecution Service, Public appointments 745w
David Kelly Death Inquiry, Disclosure of information 520-1w
Devolution 315w
Drug treatment centres 857-8
Drugs, Misuse 856-7
Dumfries and Galloway 315w
EC reform 867-8w
Economic and monetary union 851-2
Education, Standards 855
Emergency services, Lancashire 854
Falkland Islands 520w
High Hedges (No 2) Bill 2002/03 859-60
Hoon, Geoffrey 320-1
Hospital beds 858
Intelligence and Security Committee 323-4
Internet, Regulation 853
Iraq, Bomb disposal 323
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 322, 854-5
Iraq, Politics and government 868w
Iraq, Reconstruction 745w
Iraq, Weapons 18w, 321-2, 326, 407w, 521w, 852-3, 868w
Iraq Communications Group 868w
Iraq conflict 18w, 396-7w, 521w
Iraq conflict, International law 634w
Iraq conflict, Legal opinion 18-9w
Israel, Detainees 19w
Joint Intelligence Committee 869w
Labour Party 319-20
Leavesden Green School 321
Mandelson, Peter 407w
Manufacturing industries 328-9
Meat, Smuggling 328
Members, Correspondence 745w

Blair, Rt Hon Tony—continued*
Ministerial policy advisors 407w
Ministerial policy advisors, Prime Minister 18w, 745-6w
Ministers, Codes of practice 521w
Ministers, Intelligence services 522w
Mongolia, Official visits 869w
Multinational Chairman's Group 521w
NHS treatment centres, Greater London 857
Occupational pensions 860
Official engagements, Prime Minister 634w
Post offices, Closures 851
Prime Minister 860
Public inquiries 521-2w
Public sector, Fees and charges 853-4
Public sector net cash requirement 327
Sheffield Forgemasters, Redundancy 852
Southend on Sea 745w
Students, Fees and charges 324, 850-1, 857-8
Sweden 867w
Sweden, Economic and monetary union 869w
Tax burden 327-8
Tibet 315w
Training, Prime Minister 315w
World Trade Organisation 315-6w, 522w

Bleach, Peter
595w

Blears, Ms Hazel, Minister of State, Home Office*
Westminster Hall Debates
Police (16.09.03) 223-6wh
Written Statements
"Forensic Science Service Annual Report and Accounts, 2002/03" 7-8ws
"Police Complaints Authority Annual Report, 2002/03" 43ws
Questions
Alcoholic drinks, Antisocial behaviour 657-8w, 660w
Alcoholic drinks, Young people 672w
Antisocial behaviour 1202-3w
Antisocial behaviour, Young people 664-5w
Antisocial behaviour orders 932-3w
Baker, Ellie 665-6w
Burglary 1224-5w, 1232w
Children, Abuse 660-1w
Children, Kidnapping 662w
Children, Protection 661-2w
Closed circuit television 672-3w, 1209w
Community support officers 1214-5w
Crime 672w, 1217w
Crime, Costs 1216-7w
Crime, Crosby 662-3w
Crime, Insurance 1209w
Crime, Motor vehicles 1253w
Crime, Retail trade 1202w
Crime, Rural areas 56-8w
Crime prevention, Motor vehicles 1253-4w
Crime prevention, Romford 663w
Crimes of violence, Public sector 670-1w
Crimes of violence, Retail trade 1251-2w
Criminal investigation 1223w
Demonstrations, RAF Fairford 1234-5w
Domestic violence 665w, 1225w
Domestic violence, Surrey 58-9w
Driving offences, Fixed penalties 805-6w
Emergency services, Accidents 658-9w
Essex Police 939w
Forensic Science Laboratory, Chepstow 666w
Forensic Science Service 807w, 1228-30w
Fraud, Credit cards 1200-1w
Genetics, Databases 665w, 1224w

Blears, Ms Hazel—continued*
Graffiti 807-8w, 1230w
Hoaxes and false alarms 939-40w
Immigration, Police 1232w
Labour Party, Conferences 1236-7w
Leicestershire Constabulary, Vacancies 809w
Merseyside Police 944w
Metropolitan Police, Disciplinary proceedings 670w
Metropolitan Police, Finance 1235-6w
Motor vehicles, Salvage 1238w
"National Alcohol Harm Reduction Strategy Consultation Paper" 657w
National Crime Squad 1238w
National Criminal Intelligence Service 1238-9w
Organised crime 1218w
Passports, Applications 60-1w
Police, Bureaucracy 670w
Police, Complaints 668w
Police, Disciplinary proceedings 668-9w, 810w
Police, Firearms 1242w, 1244w
Police, Havering 663-4w
Police, Iraq 810-1w, 942-3w
Police, Manpower 61-2w
Police, Radio 1252w
Police, Secondment 671w
Police, Standards 1243-4w
Police, Training 1226w
Police, Weapons 1239w
Police custody 368w
Police Standards Unit 810w
Police stations, Leighton Buzzard 60w
Pornography, Children 1239w
Prosecutions 1028w
Riot control weapons 1209-10w
Security Industry Authority, Manpower 1250w
Sexual offences, Public lavatories 658w
Surveillance, Pilot schemes 667w
Thames Valley Police, Radio 659-60w
Theft, Art works 671-2w
Theft, Cellular phones 667-8w
Thomas, Richard 797w
Travelling people, Trespass 666-7w
West Mercia Police, Finance 1255w
West Mercia Police, Manpower 1255w
Young offenders, Havering 1218w

Blind
see Sight impaired

Blizzard, Mr Bob
Questions
Excise duties, Biofuels 102w
Navy, Hydrography 43w
Petrol alternatives 295-6w

Blood transfusions
Safety 1339-40w

Blue badge scheme
274-5w

Bluetongue disease
916w
Sheep 1195w

Blunkett, Rt Hon David, Secretary of State for the Home Dept*
Questions
Al Muhajiroun 582-3w
Demonstrations 1242w
Departmental responsibilities, Home Office 62w
Inquiries, Disclosure of information 1214w
RAF Fairford 1234w
Royal family, Security 811w
Terrorism 1204w
Terrorism, Aviation 797w
Terrorism, Crime prevention 660w

Blunkett, Rt Hon David—continued
Theft, Depleted uranium 58w

Blunt, Mr Crispin
Chamber Debates
Electricity (16.09.03) 734, 743, 757-61
Questions
Balkans 10

Board of Inland Revenue
see Inland Revenue

Boateng, Rt Hon Paul*, Chief Secretary to the Treasury*
Written Statements
Cash ratios 63-4ws
Futurebuilders' Fund 34-6ws
Government departments, Fees and charges 3-4ws
Questions
Balance of payments 456w
Credit cards, Retail trade 106w
Credit unions 97-8w
Debts 600w
Debts, Developing countries 605-6w
Economic and monetary union, Economic situation 101-2w
Economic and monetary union, Publicity 101w
Economic growth 1104w
Fraud, Government departments 653w
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 105w
Members, Correspondence 456w
Personal income 457w
Privatisation 457-8w
Provident societies 98w
Public sector, Pay 602w
Public sector, Procurement 456-7w
Taxation, Self-assessment 394w

Boating
410w

Bomb disposal
Afghanistan 555-6w
Iraq 46w, 323, 515-7w, 704w, 952w, 1152w

Bombs
Iraq conflict 704w

Borrow, Mr David
Chamber Debates
Elderly (10.09.03) 350
Local Government Bill, Lords amendts (15.09.03) 658-9
Questions
Emergency services, Lancashire 854
European fighter aircraft 2

Bosnia
Peace keeping operations 41w, 702w, 1155w

Boswell, Mr Tim
Westminster Hall Debates
Higher education (18.09.03) 325wh, 329wh, 340wh, 346wh, 350-3wh
Questions
Access to Learning Fund 789-90w
Entry clearances, Overseas students 678w, 1240w
Foundation degrees 983-4w
Further education, Finance 552w
Higher education, Admissions 1145w
Learning and skills councils, Finance 1138w
Learning and skills councils, Redundancy 685w
Mature students, Fees and charges 1136w, 1138w
Modern apprenticeships 790-2w
National vocational qualifications, Fees and charges 685-6w

Boswell, Mr Tim—continued
Office for Fair Access, Public appointments 1145-6w
Pensions 914w
Registration of births deaths and marriages 904w
Schools, Buildings 1132w
Schools, Transport 987-8w
Science, Research 1150w
Sixth form colleges, Finance 1144-5w
Students, Fees and charges 552w, 857, 1133w, 1146w
Students, Finance 552-3w, 1145-6w
Students, Loans 795-6w
Vocational education 795w

Botswana
Ethnic groups 81w

Bottomley, Peter
Questions
A27, Repairs and maintenance 503-4w
Bankruptcy, Interest rates 426w
Judges, Public appointments 161-2
Maharaj, Krishna 1114w
Supreme Court 1045-6w

Boundary Commission for Scotland
17-8w

Bournemouth University
988w

Bovine spongiform encephalopathy
see BSE

Bovine tuberculosis
284w, 770-1w

Bradley, Rt Hon Keith
Questions
Further education 450-1w
Intensive supervision and surveillance programme 1249w
National Probation Service for England and Wales, Manpower 587-8w
Personal income 457w

Bradley, Peter
Questions
Armoured fighting vehicles 1162w
Doctors, Wrekin 182-4w
Elderly, Injuries 167-8w
General practitioners, Wrekin 195w
Health services, Shropshire 239w
Princess Royal Hospital Telford 260-1w
Royal Shrewsbury Hospital 259-60w
West Mercia Police, Finance 1255w
West Mercia Police, Manpower 1255w

Bradshaw, Mr Ben*, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs*
Chamber Debates
Angling, Seas and oceans (08.09.03) 146-8
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 125-8
Questions
Agricultural products 302w, 310w
Agricultural products, Imports 308-9w
Agriculture, EC enlargement 918-9w
Agriculture, EC law 300-1w
Agriculture, Incinerators 312-4w
Agriculture, Regulation 919-20w
Agriculture, Subsidies 917-8w, 1174-5w
Air pollution 1175-6w
Air pollution, Romford 1176w
Animal feed, Antibiotics 282-3w
Animal welfare 287w, 309w
Animals, Insurance 1185w
Avian influenza 283-4w
Bees, Varroasis 544w, 931-2w
Bluetongue disease 916w
Bovine tuberculosis 284w, 770-1w
BSE 285-6w

Bradshaw, Mr Ben—continued
Combined heat and power 286-7w
Committees, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 296-9w
Common agricultural policy 299-300w, 1177w
Common agricultural policy, Reform 916-7w
Common fisheries policy 299w
Common sugar regime, Reform 931w
Convention on the Future of Europe 299w, 364w
Crops 293-5w
Crops, Research 307-8w
EC law, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 292w
Eggs, EC law 74-5w
Eggs, Trade agreements 281w
Energy, Conservation 1179-81w
European Union, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 301-2w
Exports 536w
Farmers, Income 919w
Farmers, Marketing 292w
Fish farming, Disease control 920w
Fisheries, South West region 920-1w
Fishing vessels 303-4w, 773-4w
Food 306-7w
Food, Balance of payments 280w
Food, Consumption 921w
Food, Prices 917w
Food, Safety 293w
Food, Sales 290-1w
Food, Smuggling 293w
Foreign policy, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 291-2w
Fruit 294w
Fruit, Import duties 540-2w, 1182w
Gangmasters 764-5w, 775-6w
Lighting, Pollution 541-2w, 1184-5w
Livestock, Disease control 287-8w, 309w
Livestock, Imports 1195-6w
Livestock, Transport 770w
Livestock, Waste disposal 777-8w
Meat, Import controls 533w
Meat, Smuggling 921-2w
Milk 922-6w
Organic farming, Subsidies 925-6w
Peat 1187w
Petrol alternatives 295-6w
Phytophthora ramorum 927-31w
Phytophthora ramorum, Imports 927w
Phytophthora ramorum, National parks 927w
Poultry 286w
Poultry, Trade competitiveness 1190-1w
Renewable energy 290w
Risk assessment, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 310-1w
Seals, Disease control 309-10w
Seas and oceans, Temperature 1193-4w
Sheep, Bluetongue disease 1195w
Sheep, Ear tagging 312w
Sheep, Exports 1196w
Sheep dipping 542-3w
Slaughterhouses 916w
Trees, Diseases 931w
Whales, Iceland 918w
Wood 779w, 928-30w

Brady, Mr Graham
Chamber Debates
Local Government Bill, Lords amendts (15.09.03) 682-5, 687, 689
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 101, 109-10, 116
Westminster Hall Debates
Schools, Finance (17.09.03) 272wh, 285-9wh, 291wh
Questions
Antisocial behaviour orders 932w

Brady, Mr Graham—continued*
Armed forces, Electoral register 39-40w
Children, Social services 447w
General Teaching Council 119w
Public expenditure, Dept for Education and Skills 121w
Public relations, Dept for Education and Skills 131-2w
Publicity, Dept for Education and Skills 121-2w
Pupils, Per capita costs 132w
Regional government, Dept for Education and Skills 135w
Schools, Finance 135w, 137-8w, 140w, 142w, 339-40w
Schools, Standards 138w
Science, Curriculum 140-1w
Teachers, Internet 147-8w
Teachers, Life expectancy 688w

Brake, Tom
Chamber Debates
Electricity (16.09.03) 763-4
Westminster Hall Debates
Transport, Greater London (16.09.03) 187-90wh, 192wh
Questions
Sky marshals 761w
Transport, Finance 1059-60w

Brazier, Mr Julian
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 505
Questions
Army, Manpower 16-7

Brazil
Foreign relations 589-90w
Prisoners 1110w
Prisons 1110-1w

Breast cancer
1082w
Abortion 1257w
Elderly 1266w

Breed, Mr Colin
Questions
Iraq conflict, Civilians 415w

Brennan, Kevin
Chamber Debates
Elderly (10.09.03) 342
Questions
Constitutions 336-7w
Electoral register 584
NHS treatment centres 706-7
Winter fuel payments, Wales 700w

Brent
By-elections 858-9
Dental services 838w
Prescriptions 838-9w

British American Tobacco
Burma 988w

British citizenship
Applications 1212-3w

British Coal Corporation
Pensions 1070-1w

"British Council Annual Report and Accounts, 2002/03"
40-1ws

British Energy
62-3ws, 639-40w

British nationality
Patients 252-3w

British Nuclear Fuels
US Nuclear Energy Institute 74w

British overseas territories
Dept of Trade and Industry 426w

British overseas territories—continued*
Passports 31ws

British Overseas Territories Act 2002
Written Statements
31ws

British Sky Broadcasting
640w

Broadband
872-3w, 1071w
Northern Ireland 709w
Rural areas 387w
Schools 115w, 680w

Broadcasting reception
529w

Brooke, Mrs Annette L
Chamber Debates
Elderly (10.09.03) 356
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 78
Questions
Prison Service, Vetting 585-6w

Broomfield Hospital
Accident and emergency departments 616-7w
Hospital wards 168w
Surgery 168w

Brown, Rt Hon Nicholas
Questions
Animals, Insurance 1185w
NHS, Private sector 708, 1342w
United Health Group 1342-3w

Brown, Mr Russell
Westminster Hall Debates
Dental services (09.09.03) 32wh, 44-5wh
Questions
Armed forces 13-4
Digital broadcasting 583-4

Browne, Mr Desmond, Minister of State for Work, Dept for Work and Pensions*
Questions
Archives, Dept for Work and Pensions 903-4w, 907w
Chemicals, Exports 873w
Children, Maintenance 569w
Depleted uranium, Theft 938-9w
Employers' liability, Forestry 757w, 906w
Employers' liability, Insurance 20-1w, 902-3w, 905-6w
Employment, Crosby 695w
Employment, Regulation 905w
Employment schemes 904-5w
Health and Safety Executive 899-900w
Health and Safety Executive, Finance 900w
Health and Safety Executive, Manpower 899w
Industrial health and safety, Agriculture 899w
Industrial health and safety, Stress 900w
Insurance, Construction 903w
Jobcentre Plus, Temporary employment 1051-3w
Jobcentres, Advertising 1051w
Jobcentres, Advisory services 757-8w
Low incomes 908-10w
Microsoft, Dept for Work and Pensions 1053w
New deal for young people 910-2w
New deal schemes 696w
Social security appeal tribunals, Northern Ireland 578-9w

Browning, Mrs Angela
Chamber Debates
Asperger's syndrome (10.09.03) 437-41
New towns, Petitions (15.09.03) 694

Browning, Mrs Angela—continued*
Questions
Teachers, Conditions of employment 684-5w
Teachers, Pay 142w

Bruce, Malcolm
Chamber Debates
European Union (09.09.03) 186-7
Westminster Hall Debates
East coast railway line (16.09.03) 228wh
Questions
Constituencies, Scotland 153
Convention on the Future of Europe 1108-9w
Developing countries, Trade 91w
Film, Hearing impaired 525-6w
Sign language 914w
Translation services, Government departments 1234w

Bryant, Mr Chris
Chamber Debates
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1104
Questions
Business questions 480-1
Carlton Communications, Granada Television 1054-5
Church of England, Discrimination 586
House of Lords, Reform 163-4
Office of Communications, Pay 27w

BSE
168w, 285-6w
Disease control 581w
Northern Ireland 567-8w

Buck, Ms Karen
Questions
Schools, Finance 124w

Buckinghamshire
Care homes 1301w
Classroom assistants 1143-4w
Dental services 1299-300w
Education 793w
Flood control 774w
General practitioners 1300w
Health services 1301-2w
Hospices 1300w
Literacy 1138-9w
Pre-school education 1131w
Primary education 793-4w
Schools 985w
Secondary education 986w
Surgery 1298-9w
Teachers 112w, 1143-4w, 1148w

Bull
Subsidies 426-7w

Burden, Richard
Chamber Debates
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1097
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 92
Questions
Post offices, Urban areas 1060

Bureaucracy
Higher education 982w
NHS 839w
Police 670w

Burglary
1224-5w, 1232w

Burgon, Colin
Questions
Forensic Science Service 1228-9w

Burma
783-4w
British American Tobacco 988w
Higher education 989w
Human rights 989w
Overseas aid 1003-4w

Burma—continued
Politics and government 989-90w
Tourism 989w

Burnett, Mr John
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 497
Questions
Serious Fraud Office, Prosecutions 469-70

Burnham, Andy
Chamber Debates
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 66, 81, 114-6, 121
Westminster Hall Debates
Higher education (18.09.03) 339-44wh, 350wh
Questions
Electronic equipment, Manpower 1063-4

Burnley Pendle and Rossendale Primary Care Trust
Standards 233-4w

Burns, Mr Simon
Westminster Hall Debates
Dental services (09.09.03) 45wh, 48-9wh
Questions
A12, Repairs and maintenance 503w
Accident and emergency departments, Standards 155-6w
Ambulance services, Essex 185w
Ambulance services, Greater London 159w, 185w
Ambulance services, Standards 159-60w
Angina 162-3w
Broomfield Hospital, Accident and emergency departments 616-7w
Broomfield Hospital, Hospital wards 168w
Broomfield Hospital, Surgery 168w
Care homes 171w, 1268w
Care homes, Essex 171w
Care homes, Fees and charges 191w
Care homes, Vetting 1221-3w, 1270-1w
Chelmsford Primary Care Trust, Finance 171-2w
Community care, Elderly 703-4
Community health councils, Closures 175-6w
Community health councils, Resignations 840w
Cot deaths 166w
Deep vein thrombosis 177-8w
Dept of Health 179w
Digestive system, Diseases 199w
Doctors, Recruitment 176w
Fuzeon 192w
General practitioners 193w
General practitioners, Greater London 193w
General practitioners, Recruitment 193-4w
Health professions, Essex 220-1w
Health professions, Tolls 176w
Heart diseases 177w
Heart diseases, Surgery 199w
HIV infection 200-1w
HIV infection, Screening 200w
Hospital beds 617w, 975w
Hospital wards 156w
Hospital wards, Gender 976-7w
Hospitals, Admissions 272w
Hospitals, Waiting lists 177w
Infant mortality 94w
Locums 203-4w
Medical treatments abroad 232w, 250w
Mid Essex Hospital Services NHS Trust, Waiting lists 252w, 622-3w
Ministerial policy advisors, Dept of Health 270w

Burns, Mr Simon—continued
NHS, Disclosure of information 243-4w
NHS, Fraud 238w
NHS, Managers 227-8w
NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency 255w
Nutrition, Disadvantaged 181w
Oesophagus cancer 93-4w, 619-20w
Official hospitality, Dept of Health 329w
Pregnancy complications 253-4w
Press, Dept of Health 179w
Sex, Health services 229-30w, 1347-8w
Sexually transmitted diseases 230-1w
Sunscreens 268w
Surgery, Costs 1336w
Surgery, Waiting lists 972w
Testicular cancer 268w
Tuberculosis 269-70w
Tuberculosis, AIDS 270w
Visits abroad, Dept of Health 222w
Written questions, Dept of Health 333-4w, 852-3w

Burnside, David
Chamber Debates
Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission Etc) Bill (HL), Allocation of time motion, 2R and rem stages (17.09.03) 892-3, 901, 903, 909-10, 927, 934, 937, 955, 968-72, 978-9, 989-90
Questions
Beef, Northern Ireland 567w
BSE, Northern Ireland 567-8w
Fisheries, Northern Ireland 318-9
Homicide, Londonderry 729-30w
Police, Northern Ireland 711w
Police Service of Northern Ireland, Recruitment 724-5w
Police Service of Northern Ireland, Reserve forces 725w
Secondary education, Northern Ireland 725-6w

Burstow, Mr Paul
Chamber Debates
Children (08.09.03) 28-9
Elderly (10.09.03) 335-44, 346, 371
Questions
Accidents 1338w
Antibiotics 1264w
Breast cancer, Elderly 1266w
Care homes, Fees and charges 1334w
Care homes, Vetting 1270w
Children, Corporal punishment 1132-3w
Children, Departmental responsibilities 1127w
Community care, Direct payments 1284-5w
Dementia 1276w
Disease control 6w
Fractures 331w
Health services, Elderly 1334-6w
Hospitals, Infectious diseases 1306-7w, 1310w
Hospitals, Standards 630w
Lost working days 1094w
Magnetic resonance imagers 1323w
Methicillin resistant staphylococcus aureus 1324w
Neurology, Manpower 10-1w
NHS 1334w
Nurses, Training 1333w
Pain 1272w
Prescription drugs, Children 1286w
Public Health Laboratory Service 978-80w
Recruitment, Dept for Constitutional Affairs 1046w
Schools, Finance 446w
Social services, Manpower 1351w
Strokes 626w

Burstow, Mr Paul—continued
Vaccination, Mercury 1355-6w
Viruses 1307w

Burt, Alistair
Chamber Debates
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 870
Westminster Hall Debates
Yarls Wood Detention Centre (16.09.03) 196-202wh, 204wh
Questions
Inquiries, Disclosure of information 1214w
Yarls Wood Detention Centre 1256w
Yarls Wood Detention Centre, Fires 946-7w

Burundi
65-6w, 81-2w, 1004w, 1105w

Bus lanes
Newtownards 832w

Bus services
Merseyside 275-6w, 278w

Business
Languages 1075w
Northern Ireland 574w
Regulation 767w

Business motions
(09.09.03) 277, (11.09.03) 559

Business premises
General practitioners 1297w

Business statements
474-85, 1071-85

Butterfill, Mr John
Chamber Debates
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 79, 82, 101-3

By-elections
Brent 858-9

Byers, Rt Hon Stephen
Questions
Agriculture, Subsidies 917-8w
Food, Prices 917w
Supported housing, Domestic violence 632w
Television, Obscenity 530w

C17 aircraft
344w

Cabinet Office
994-6w
Females 502w
Information technology 797w, 996-7w
Secondment 997-9w

Cable, Mr Vincent
Chamber Debates
Iraq (08.09.03) 51
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 865-6
Westminster Hall Debates
Roads, Freight (17.09.03) 249-51wh
Questions
Ambulance services, Greater London 859w
Asbestos 639w, 994-6w
Asbestos, Dept for Constitutional Affairs 1033w
Asbestos, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1176-7w
Asbestos, Dept for Transport 1055w
Asbestos, Dept for Work and Pensions 1048w
Asbestos, Dept of Trade and Industry 1069w
Asbestos, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 1109w
Asbestos, Ministry of Defence 746w

Cable, Mr Vincent*—*continued
British Energy 639-40w
Broadband 1071w
Care homes, Greater London 617w
Computers, Dept for Education and Skills 682w
Computers, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 634w
Computers, Dept of Health 972-3w
Computers, Dept of Trade and Industry 763w
Computers, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 436-7w
Computers, Treasury 597w
Consumers, Credit 644w, 873w
Debts 600w, 1084-5w
Debts, Repayments 874w
Defence equipment, Exhibitions 747-9w, 948w
Dental services, Brent 838w
Education, Finance 468
Electronic commerce 1072-3w
Emergency services, Accidents 658-9w
Estate agents 429-31w
Export credit guarantees 645-6w, 1073w
Family courts, Greater London 446w
Fees and charges, Dept of Trade and Industry 435w
Financial services, Computers 1083w
Gangmasters 911w
General practitioners, Vacancies 718
Government art collection 531-2w
Health and Safety Executive, Finance 900w
Hospital wards, Gender 846w
Hospitals, Negligence 849w
Hospitals, Police 978w
House of Commons, Recycling 500-1w
Immigration and Nationality Directorate, Theft 940-1w
Incapacity benefit 695w
International Labour Organisation, Treaties 559-62w
Internet, Home Office 57w
Iraq, Politics and government 676w
Iraq conflict 16
Local Government Act 1988, Homosexuality 452-3w
Members, Correspondence 1078w, 1102w
Metropolitan Police, Finance 1235-6w
Misleading advertising 872w
Multinational Chairman's Group 521w
Museums and galleries, Fees and charges 421w
Norman Shaw Buildings, Repairs and maintenance 499w
Nuclear power stations, Temperature 547w
Obesity, Greater London 851w
Official cars 501w
Parliamentary tours, Tickets 500w
Police, Complaints 668w
Police, Firearms 1242w
Police Standards Unit 810w
Post office card account 1058-9
Prescriptions, Brent 838-9w
Prescriptions, Time limits 856w
Prosecutions 1028w
Renewable energy 1076-7w
Renewable energy, Finance 427-8w
River Thames, Floods 774-5w
Road traffic control, Emergency services 511w
Rolling stock 1062w
Royal family, Official residences 571
Schools, Arson 446-7w
Smoking 1348w
Surgery, Administrative delays 1266-7w
Teachers, Pay 454w
Trade 769w

Cable, Mr Vincent*—*continued
Welfare tax credits, Greater London 604-5w
Working tax credit, Publicity 107w
World Trade Organisation 768-9w, 881-2w

Caborn, Rt Hon Richard, Minister of State for Sport, Dept for Culture Media and Sport*
Questions
Athletics, North East region 574
Charities, Lotteries 957-8w
Contracts, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 27-8w
EC law, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 24w
English Sports Council, Finance 532w
Food, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 529-30w
Gatwick Airport, Listed buildings 530w
Government art collection 531-2w
Horse racing 529w
Location, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 23w
Manpower, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 23w
Microsoft, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 958w
National Lottery, Sports 572-3
Physical education, Schools 335-6w
Physical education, Teachers 421-2w
Playing fields 27w
Public libraries, Internet 958w
Royal family, Official residences 571-2, 1048w
Royal parks 649w
Royal Parks Constabulary 649-50w
Secondment, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 28-9w
Sports 31w
Sports, Tax allowances 582-3
Supporters Direct 29w
Tourism 29-30w, 336w, 422w, 528w
Tourism, Marketing 528w
Tourism, North East region 783w
Tourism, Publicity 378-80w
Tourism, South West region 30w
Tourism, Tolls 422w
Tourist boards 379w
Travel, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 955-6w
Written questions, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 783w

Caesarean sections
205w

Cairns, David
Chamber Debates
Iraq (08.09.03) 54
Questions
Digital broadcasting, Scotland 578-9
Electronic equipment, Manpower 1061-2

Caledonian MacBrayne
16w

Calton, Mrs Patsy
Chamber Debates
Elderly (10.09.03) 353-6
Westminster Hall Debates
Diabetes (09.09.03) 13-7wh
Questions
Driving offences, Fixed penalties 805-6w
Endometriosis, Health education 185-6w
NHS foundation trusts 702
Uganda, Entry clearances 788w
USA, Foreign investment in UK 873w

Cameras
Speed limits 279-80w, 392w

Cameron, Mr David
Questions
Disabled, Public participation 631w
NHS foundation trusts 701-2
Sixth form education 467
Small businesses 1051
Thames Valley Police, Radio 659-60w

Cameroon
Poverty 1004w

Campbell, Mr Alan
Chamber Debates
Teachers (09.09.03) 249
Westminster Hall Debates
Coastal areas, Regeneration (10.09.03) 112-3wh
Questions
Film, North East region 956-7w
Foreign investment in UK, North East region 1074-5w
Literacy, North Tyneside 1139w
National Lottery, Coastal areas 1047-8w
Numeracy, North Tyneside 1141w
Pupil exclusions 1142-3w
Pupil exclusions, North Tyneside 794-6w
Sure start programme, North East region 1147w
Sure start programme, Standards 1147w
Tourism, North East region 783w

Campbell, Alastair
520w

Campbell, Mrs Anne
Chamber Debates
Iraq (10.09.03) 399-400
Questions
Entry clearances, Overseas students 673w, 784w, 808-9w
Females, Service industries 1069-70
Students, Fees and charges 464
Trade agreements, Developing countries 1055-6
Walking 278w

Campbell, Mr Gregory
Chamber Debates
Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission Etc) Bill (HL), Allocation of time motion, 2R and rem stages (17.09.03) 963, 986-8, 996-7
Questions
Cultural heritage, Northern Ireland 491w
Motor vehicles, Excise duties 827-8w
Public inquiries 521-2w
Sports, Northern Ireland 570-4w

Campbell, Rt Hon Menzies
Chamber Debates
European Union (09.09.03) 179-80, (16.09.03) 799-804, 811
Iraq (08.09.03) 42-3, (10.09.03) 393-7, 401
Questions
Afghanistan, Detainees 324-5w
Arms trade, Czech Republic 589w
Arms trade, Democratic Republic of Congo 991w
Arms trade, Export controls 72-3w
Arms trade, Trade promotion 322w
Central Africa, Overseas aid 890-2w
Diego Garcia 440w
Diego Garcia, Land mines 439-40w
Iraq conflict, Bombs 704w

Cancer
3-4w, 169-70w
Belfast City Hospital 827w
Clatterbridge Hospital 1272w
Drugs 186w
Health services 168-9w, 1267-8w

Cancer—continued
Northern Ireland 463w
Pathology 1305-6w
Waiting lists 4-5w, 332-4w

Cannabis
Prescription drugs 251-2w

Capita
Local authorities 959w

Capital allowances
606w

Capital gains tax
654w, 859-61w, 966w, 968w, 1085w

Caplin, Mr Ivor, Parliamentary Under-Secretary, Ministry of Defence*
Chamber Debates
Iraq (09.09.03) 210, 238-44
Written Statements
Armed forces, Pensions 39-40ws
Exservicemen 51ws
Low flying, Night flying 62ws
Questions
Air force, Deployment 404-6w
Air force, Gliding 416-7w
Armed forces, Asbestos 513w
Armed forces, Commonwealth 1156-7w
Armed forces, Discharges 705-6w, 952w
Armed forces, Electoral register 39-40w
Armed forces, Families 50-1w
Armed forces, Females 42-3w
Armed forces, Fiji 1156w
Armed forces, Health services 1-2w, 707w
Armed forces, Housing 39-40w
Armed forces, Injuries 2w
Armed forces, Intimidation 1169-70w
Armed forces, Pensions 751-2w, 1160w
Armed forces, Recruitment 752w
Armed forces, Religion 514w
Armed forces, Surveys 1157w
Army, Drugs 344-5w
Army, Manpower 16-7
Army, Self-mutilation 701-2w
Asbestos, Ministry of Defence 746w
Chatham Dockyard, Radiation exposure 513w, 702w
Defence support agencies, Manpower 51-2w
Drummore Harbour 42w
Firing ranges, South East region 48w
General Service Medal, Suez 52w, 417-8w, 512w
Gurkhas 1164-5w
HMS Daedalus 1157w
HMS Dryad 415w
Iraq, Crimes against humanity 46-7w
Iraq, Health services 705w
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 43-4w
Iraq conflict, Depleted uranium 1159w
Iraq conflict, Reserve forces 415w, 516w
Location, Ministry of Defence 1158-9w
Low flying 954-5w, 1166-9w
Low flying, Complaints 1168-9w
Maeer, Charmaine 702w
Military decorations 414-5w
Military police, Procurement 1170w
Military police, West Sussex 48w
Ministerial policy advisors, Ministry of Defence 3w
Ministry of Defence Police, Standards 415w
Navy, Desertion 53w
Navy, Recruitment 50w
Navy Army and Air Force Institutes 518w
Official hospitality, Ministry of Defence 42w
Princess Royal Barracks, Drugs 345w
RAF Chilmark 49w
RAF Halton 416w, 1155w

Caplin, Mr Ivor—continued*
RAF Northolt 351-2w
Reserve forces, Deployment 352w
Secondment, Ministry of Defence 352-6w
Sir John Moore Barracks 52w
Sites of special scientific interest, Ministry of Defence 1173w
Territorial Army 20
Territorial Army, Manpower 707w
Terrorism, Cyprus 8-9
UK Defence Standardisation Team, Manpower 345-6w
War pensions, Devon 54w
War pensions, Incapacity benefit 355w
West Freugh airfield 355w
World War II, Military decorations 14-5
Written questions, Administrative delays 1171w

Carbon dioxide
1071w

Carbon Trust
408w, 1177-8w

Cardiovascular system
Northern Ireland 472-3w

Care homes
170-1w, 704-5, 1268-70w
Admissions 843-4w
Buckinghamshire 1301w
Elderly 705
Essex 171w
Fees and charges 191w, 1334w
Greater London 617w
Northern Ireland 710w
Police Service of Northern Ireland 825w
Regulation 1268-9w
Vetting 1221-3w, 1270-1w
Voluntary organisations 1339w

Care Standards Act 2000
Questions
623w

Care Standards Act 2000 (Domiciliary Care Agencies and Nurses Agencies) (Amendment) (England) Regulations 2003
Chamber Debates
(15.09.03) 694

Carers
617w
Finance 201w
Respite care 217-8w

Carlton Communications
Granada Television 1054-5

Carmarthen
Welfare tax credits 605w

Carmichael, Mr Alistair
Chamber Debates
Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission Etc) Bill (HL), Allocation of time motion, 2R and rem stages (17.09.03) 891-2, 924, 988-9, 1004
Questions
Consumer Council for Postal Services, Postwatch Scotland 1076w
"Disability Handbook" 755-6w
Elections, Disabled 525w
Females, Small businesses 869-70w
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 854-5
Northern Ireland government 316-7
Warships, USA 693w

Cars
374w

Casale, Roger
Questions
Atkinson Morley's Hospital, Land use 631w

Casale, Roger—continued*
Iraq conflict 15-6

Cash, Mr William
Chamber Debates
European Union (16.09.03) 789-90, 795, 800
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1088-91
Ministerial statement intervention (09.09.03) 181
Questions
Judges, Public appointments 159-60
Scottish Parliament, Legislative competence 637-8w

Cash ratios
63-4ws

Castle Morpeth
Social security benefits 18-9ws

Casualties
Iraq 514-5w, 1151w
Iraq conflict 514-6w

Cathedrals
522w

Catheters
1271w

Caton, Mr Martin
Questions
Afghanistan, Armed forces 320w
Afghanistan, Detainees 323-4w
Afghanistan, Drugs 64w, 79-80w, 674w
Afghanistan, Females 320w
Afghanistan, Peace keeping operations 321w
Afghanistan, Reconstruction 80w
African Union, Zimbabwe 65w
Alcoholic drinks, Young people 672w

Catterick
Military bases 702-3w

Cattle
Transport 534w

Causeway HSS Trust
Termination of employment 568w

Cellular phone masts
see Aerials

Cellular phones
Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1186-7w
Driving 411w, 1250w
Fees and charges 1075w
Income tax 863w
Theft 667-8w

Cement
918w

Cemeteries
197w
Planning permission 35w

Census
3ws, 96w, 393w
Costs 96-7w
Crosby 609w
Forms 609w
Local government finance 737w

"Census 2001 Key Statistics for Health Areas in England and Wales"
3ws

Central Africa
1007w
Overseas aid 890-2w

Central African Republic
Asylum 82w

Central Asia
1111w
International assistance 1017-8w

Ceramics
Trade competitiveness 1065-6

Chairman of Committee of the Whole House
Chamber Debates
Amendments and new clauses (17.09.03) 986, 1002-3

Challen, Mr Colin
Chamber Debates
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 869
Questions
Engineering, Student numbers 1139-41w
Iraq, Elections 786w
Olympic Games, Greater London 576-7
Physics, Curriculum 1140-1w
Postal services, Railways 778w
Scholarships, Companies 1131-2w
Social security benefits, Take-up 915w

Chancellor of the Exchequer
see Treasury

Channel Islands
Departmental responsibilities 1045w

Chapman, Mr Ben
Questions
Clatterbridge Hospital, Cancer 1272w
Dental services 1277w
Dental services, Wirral 1278w
Iraq, Frontiers 44w
Maternity leave 1067
Mersey tunnel, Accountancy 277w, 1062w
Northern Ireland government 395w
RNAS Yeovilton, Lynx helicopters 1173w
RNAS Yeovilton, Security 1173w
Schools, Private finance initiative 1142w
Smuggling 1171w
Times of sittings 369w
Transsexuality 337-8w
Vietnam, Overseas aid 1020-1w

Chapman, Sir Sydney
Westminster Hall Debates
Energy, Conservation (10.09.03) 92-5wh, 98wh
Questions
Afghanistan, Peace keeping operations 11
Business questions 481
Churches, Disabled 586-7
Housing, Thames Gateway 461-2w
NHS, Recruitment 711
Regeneration, Finance 461w
Regional planning and development, EC grants and loans 460-1w
Robbery, Millennium Exhibition 1239w

Charities
Lotteries 957-8w

Charter of Fundamental Rights (EU)
329-30

Chatham Dockyard
Radiation exposure 513w, 702w

Chaytor, Mr David
Westminster Hall Debates
Higher education (18.09.03) 318wh, 322wh, 344-7wh
Questions
Business questions 1084-5
English language, Standards 1137w
Mathematics, Standards 1137w
Refuges, Finance 870w
Schools, Admissions 1129w
Secondary education, Admissions 1123-4w
Teachers, Performance appraisal 1147-8w

Chechnya
18w, 396-7w, 590w, 1115-6w

Chelmsford Primary Care Trust
Finance 171-2w

Chemical weapons
Baltic Sea 674-5w, 1111-2w
Iraq conflict 951w

Chemicals
Exports 873w
North West region 1071-2w

Chepstow
Forensic Science Laboratory 666w

Cheshire and Merseyside Strategic Health Authority
Waiting lists 1308w

Chichester
Military police 349w

Chief of Defence Logistics
see Defence Logistics Organisation

"Chief Surveillance Commissioner Annual Report, 2002/03"
17ws

Child care vouchers
392-3w

Child prostitution
1211-2w
Ethiopia 83w

Child Support Agency
Finance 444w
Information technology 1049-50w

Child tax credit
97w, 603-4w
Chorley 394w

Child Trust Fund
861-2w

Children
Abuse 493w, 660-1w, 753w
Asylum 420w, 798-9w, 933-4w, 937w, 1123w
Corporal punishment 1132-3w
Day care 116-8w, 1049w, 1121-2w
Death 1127w
Dental health 268-9w, 626-8w, 856-8w
Departmental responsibilities 1127w
Disabled 617-8w
Dungavel Detention Centre 1227w
Human trafficking 803-5w
Internet 586w, 1210-1w, 1233w
Kidnapping 662w
Maintenance 19-20w, 442-4w, 558w, 569w, 694-5w, 710w
Mental health services 215w, 218w
Ministerial statements (08.09.03) 21-35
Nurses 839-40w
Obesity 249w
Pornography 1239w
Post-operative care 857-9w
Prescription drugs 3w, 1286w, 1358w
Protection 172w, 661-2w, 1122-3w, 1126-7w, 1304w
Social services 447w
Sugar 267w

Children and Families Directorate
1128w

Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service
1126w

Children and Young People's Unit
Scotland 1127-8w

Children's centres
447w, 455-7

Children's rights
321-2w, 325-6
Afghanistan 320w

China
66-7w
Prisoners 785w

Chlamydia infection
Screening 173w

Cholesterol
174w
Health education 376-7w

Chope, Mr Christopher
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 505-6
Written questions, Points of order (18.09.03) 1105
Westminster Hall Debates
Roads, Freight (17.09.03) 246wh, 251-7wh, 259-63wh
Transport, Greater London (16.09.03) 190-2wh
Questions
Asylum, Applications 1208w
Bournemouth University 988w
Business questions 1077
Council tax, Pensioners 633w
Labour Party, Conferences 1236-7w
Peacock, Nataliya 1208-9w
Phytophthora ramorum 927-31w
Phytophthora ramorum, Imports 927w
Phytophthora ramorum, National parks 927w
Trees, Diseases 931w

Chorley
Child tax credit 394w
Dental services 235w
Working tax credit 394w

Christianity
Iraq 375w, 440-1w
Pakistan 594w

Chronic fatigue syndrome
1271-2w

Church Commissioners
Genetically modified organisms 523w

Church of England
Discrimination 585-6
Finance 522w
Public appointments 1036w

Churches
Disabled 586-7
VAT 969w

Cigarette Lighter Refill (Safety) Regulations 1999
Questions
937-8w

Circulars
Dept for Education and Skills 135-7w, 680w

Citizenship
Teachers 984-5w

City academies
118w

Civil proceedings
Debts 864w

Civil servants
Dept for Education and Skills 1128-9w
Iraq 1106w
Ministerial policy advisors 33-4ws
Treasury 106w

Civil service
Northern Ireland 710-1w

Civil service agencies
Dept of Health 970w

Civilians
Iraq conflict 44w, 415w

Clappison, Mr James
Questions
Medicine, Education 1149-50w
Teachers, Redundancy 463

Clark, Mrs Helen
Questions
Arthritis, Drugs 616w
Creative partnerships initiative 119-20w
Domestic wastes, Recycling 408w
Drugs, Misuse 842-3w
Drugs, Rehabilitation 1286w
General practitioners, Contracts 1297w
Hepatitis, Prisoners 423w
Renewable energy 766w
River Nene 311w
Roads, Rural areas 410w

Clark, Dr Lynda, Advocate General for Scotland*
Questions
Devolution, Scotland 156-8
Official engagements, Advocate General for Scotland 17w
Standards in Scotlands Schools Etc Act 2000 (SP), Human rights 157

Clarke, Rt Hon Charles, Secretary of State for Education and Skills*
Chamber Debates
Children, Ministerial statements (08.09.03) 21-35
Oral question time intervention (11.09.03) 460
Questions
Adult education 686-7w
Astra Training Services 442w
Bournemouth University 988w
Civil servants, Dept for Education and Skills 1128-9w
Computers, Dept for Education and Skills 682w
Crosby 681w
Engineering, Student numbers 1139-40w
"Every Child Matters" 116w
Grammar schools, Admissions 461-2
Internet, Disadvantaged 1136-7w
Internet, North West region 981w
Internet, Sight impaired 1150-1w
Manpower, Dept for Education and Skills 447-8w
Mathematics, Standards 130w
Microsoft, Dept for Education and Skills 1141w
Pre-school education, Leeds 458-9
Public expenditure, Dept for Education and Skills 121w
Schools, Broadband 680w
Schools, Private finance initiative 1142w
Students, Fees and charges 453w
University for Industry Learning and Skills Council for England, Finance 112-4w

Clarke, Rt Hon Tom
Questions
Churches, Disabled 587
Sheffield Forgemasters, Redundancy 852

Class sizes
Leicestershire 447w

Classroom assistants
Buckinghamshire 1143-4w
Crosby 681w
South East region 118w
Taunton 149w

Clatterbridge Hospital
Cancer 1272w

Cleaning services
Hospitals 6w, 976w, 1358w

Clelland, Mr David
Questions
Armoured fighting vehicles 1161-2w

Clifton-Brown, Mr Geoffrey
Chamber Debates
Iraq (09.09.03) 241
Westminster Hall Debates
Coastal areas, Regeneration (10.09.03) 101wh, 117-20wh
Questions
Adoption, Gloucestershire 1124w
Convention on the Future of Europe 328
Home loss payments 632w
Sunderland Football Club, Planning permission 320w

Climate change
289-90w, 771w, 961w
European Union 301w

Climate change levy
National insurance contributions 1095w

Clinics
Allergies 158w

Closed circuit television
672-3w, 1209w
Motorway service areas 885w

Clothing
Courts 753w

Clwyd, Ann
Chamber Debates
Iraq (08.09.03) 49, (10.09.03) 417-20
Questions
Hazardous substances, Cynon Valley 841

Coal
Government assistance 545w, 871w

Coastal areas
326
National Lottery 1047-8w
Regeneration (10.09.03) 99-122wh

Cocaine
944w

Cohabitation
Registration 545w

Cohen, Harry
Chamber Debates
Electricity (16.09.03) 736-7
Iraq (09.09.03) 195, 200, (10.09.03) 402-3, 423-5
Westminster Hall Debates
Transport, Greater London (16.09.03) 185-7wh
Questions
Aircraft carriers, Procurement 746w
Cotton, Trade agreements 357w
Deep vein thrombosis, Pregnant women 178-9w, 970w
Fraud, Credit cards 1200-1w
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 19
Iraq, Politics and government 324w
Iraq conflict, Civilians 44w
Metropolitan Police, Disciplinary proceedings 670w
Work permits, Football 812-3w

Collins, Tim
398w

Collins, Mr Tim
Chamber Debates
Electricity (16.09.03) 739, 764-8

Colman, Mr Tony
Chamber Debates
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 867

Colombia
Hostages 1105w
Human rights 67w
Politics and government 590w

Combined heat and power
286-7w, 771-2w

Commission for Health Improvement
Surveys 174w

Commission for Healthcare Audit and Inspection
1346w
Finance 13-4ws

Commission for Social Care Inspection
1346w
Finance 13-4ws

Commission for the Protection of the Marine Environment of the North-East Atlantic
see OSPAR Commission

Committee on Radioactive Waste Management
see Radioactive Waste Management Committee

Committee on Standards in Public Life
Public appointments 867w

Committees
Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 296-9w

Common agricultural policy
299-300w, 1177w
Developing countries 82w
Northern Ireland 396w
Reform 916-7w
Scotland 369w
Sub-Saharan Africa 556w
Wales 850

Common customs tariffs
Textiles 763-4w

Common fisheries policy
299w, (16.09.03) 828, (17.09.03) 1011-4

Common land
Urban areas 543-4w

Common sugar regime
Reform 931w

Commonwealth
Armed forces 1156-7w

Communications Act 2003
Questions
877w

Community care
Direct payments 1284-5w
Elderly 702-4

Community care grants
Domestic violence 444w

Community development
Asylum 798w
Northern Ireland 476w
Pensioners 55w

Community Fund
23w, 26w

Community health councils
840w

Community health councils—continued
Buildings 840w
Closures 174-6w
Manpower 840w
Resignations 840w

Community hospitals
Petitions (16.09.03) 829

Community legal service partnerships
753w

Community nurses
181w

Community Punishment and Rehabilitation Service see National Probation Service for England and Wales

Community relations
Northern Ireland 463-4w
Religion 586w

Community support officers
1214-5w
Wales 734w

Companies
640-1w
Developing countries 76w
Environment protection 280-1w
Scholarships 1131-2w

Competition
Postal services 548w

Competition Act 1998
Questions
641w

Competition Appeal Tribunal
643-4w
Public appointments 641-3w

Competition Commission
643-4w
Public appointments 641-3w

Competition law
641w

Complementary medicine
Endometriosis 186w
Grants 159w

Compost
1178w

Compulsory purchase
1023w

Computer software
Housing benefit 445w

Computer viruses
762-3w

Computers
Dept for Education and Skills 682w
Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 634w
Dept of Health 972-3w
Dept of Trade and Industry 763w, 765w
Financial services 1083w
Foreign and Commonwealth Office 436-7w
Standing committees 167
Tax allowances 598-9w
Treasury 597w

Conditions of employment
Age 425w
Health professions 254w
Teachers 684-5w, 796-7w

Confiscation orders
1215w

Conflict prevention
990w

Congo (Kinshasa)
see Democratic Republic of Congo

Connarty, Mr Michael
Questions
Asylum, Children 420w
Constituencies, Scotland 152-3
EU Economic and Financial Affairs Council 100-1w
Haemophilia 718-20
Standards in Scotlands Schools Etc Act 2000 (SP), Human rights 157

Connexions Service
119w, 982-4w, 1129-30w
Finance 112-4w

Conservation
Energy (10.09.03) 92-8wh, 427w, 862w, 1179-81w
Water 606w, 833w

Conservation areas
Northern Ireland 465w

Conservation (Natural Habitats Etc) Regulations 1994
Questions
772-3w

Constituencies
588-90
Scotland 16w, 152-4, 370w, 965w

Constitutions
336-7w

Consultants
Anaesthetics 1262w
Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1178-9w
Dept for International Development 1005w
Dept of Health 1272w
Foreign and Commonwealth Office 990-1w
Hospitals 630w
Maternity services 7-8w
Pathology 845w
Royal Mail 548w

Consultation papers
Ministry of Defence 398-400w
Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 36-7w

Consumer Council for Postal Services
Postwatch Scotland 1076w

Consumer Credit Act 1974
Questions
644w

Consumer goods
Radioactive materials 1192w

Consumers
Credit 644w, 873w

Consumption
Electricity 763w
Food 921w

Contact lenses
1272-3w

Contamination
Land 841
Shellfish 153w

Contracts
Dept for Culture Media and Sport 27-8w
Dept of Trade and Industry 361-2w
General practitioners 193w, 1297w
Inland Revenue 95-6w
Public sector 610w
Smallpox 13w
Tuberculosis 13w

Convention on the Future of Europe
18w, 299w, 322-3w, 324-5, 327-8, 364w, 591-2w, 786w, 1108-9w, 1112w

Convictions
Sexual offences 1250-1w

Conway, Derek
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 496, 521-3
Questions
Armed forces 12-3

Cook, Rt Hon Robin
Chamber Debates
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1093
Questions
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 7

Cooper, Ms Yvette, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister*
Chamber Debates
Housing, Easington (09.09.03) 307-10
Westminster Hall Debates
Coastal areas, Regeneration (10.09.03) 120-2wh
Written Statements
Neighbourhood Renewal Fund 45-7ws
Questions
Disabled facilities grants 609-10w
Disadvantaged 655w
Domestic violence, Victim support schemes 1024-5w
Homelessness 738-9w
Homelessness, North East region 1025-6w
Homelessness, Temporary accommodation 738w
Local government finance 1028-9w
Local government finance, North West region 735w
Local government finance, Sefton 735-7w
Manpower, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister 959-61w
Mapeley 1061w
Members, Correspondence 609w
Ministerial statements, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister 744w
Mobile homes 612w
Planning obligations 459w
Poverty 735w
Poverty, Pensioners 614w
Public buildings 461w
Recreation spaces, Planning 460w
Sefton 743-4w
Supported housing, Domestic violence 632w
Travelling people 964-5w

Copyright
1072-3w

Coral reefs
Scotland 369w

Corbyn, Jeremy
Chamber Debates
Iraq (08.09.03) 52, (09.09.03) 197, 203, 214-7, 233-4
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 873-4
Questions
Air pollution, Greater London 373-4w
Arms trade, Indonesia 73-4w
Asylum 937w
Asylum, Applications 1207w
Asylum, Children 937w, 1123w
Asylum, Somalia 584-5w
Defence equipment, Exhibitions 1064w, 1158w
Democratic Republic of Congo, Peace keeping operations 67w

Corbyn, Jeremy—continued
Housing, Greater London 962-3w
Immigration, Death 1237w
Immigration, Legal aid 606w
Immigration controls 944-5w
Indonesia, Armed conflict 323-4w
Khat 59-60w
Learning and skills councils, Islington 131w
Pensioners, Income support 21w
Somalia 69-70w
Somalia, Entry clearances 595-6w
Somalis, Race relations 1252w
Western Sahara 679-80w

Cormack, Sir Patrick
Chamber Debates
Children (08.09.03) 33-4
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1097
Iraq (08.09.03) 45-6
Questions
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 19
Royal family, Official residences 571-2
Small businesses 1052

Coroners
1215-6w

Corporal punishment
Children 1132-3w

Corporate manslaughter
1216w

Corporate Responsibility Bill 2002/03
Questions
545w

Corporation tax
597w, 862w, 1086w

Corston, Jean
Chamber Debates
Children (08.09.03) 28

CoRWM
see Radioactive Waste Management Committee

Cosmetic surgery
Qualifications 5w
Standards 1274w

Cot deaths
166w

Cotter, Brian
Chamber Debates
Elderly (10.09.03) 343
Questions
Child prostitution 1212w
Contracts, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 27-8w
Contracts, Dept of Trade and Industry 361-2w
Employers' liability, Insurance 20-1w
Employment, Regulation 428/9w, 905w
Human trafficking, Children 803-5w
Human trafficking, West Sussex 588-9w
Legal costs, Insurance companies 31-2w
Small businesses 77w
Waste management 769-70w

Cotton
Trade agreements 357w

Council housing
608-9w, 742-3w
Finance 608w, 742w, 963w, 1026w
Property transfer 740-1w, 1023-4w
Standards 743w
Thames Gateway 739w

Council of Ministers
15-6ws

Council tax
612w, 855-6

Council tax—continued
Pensioners 633w

Council tax capping
37-8ws

Counselling
Abortion 1257w

Counterfeit manufacturing
873-4w

Countryside
Access 1032w

Countryside Agency
288-9w

Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000
Questions
534-6w, 772-3w

Courts
Closures 162-3
Clothing 753w
Hampshire 1033-5w
Winchester 1034-5w

Cox, Mr Tom
Questions
Community health councils, Closures 174-5w
Trade 769w

Cranston, Ross
Questions
Blue badge scheme 274-5w
"National Alcohol Harm Reduction Strategy Consultation Paper" 657w

Crausby, Mr David
Chamber Debates
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 92-3

Creative partnerships initiative
119-20w

Credit
Consumers 644w, 873w

Credit cards
644w
Fraud 1200-1w
Retail trade 106w, 647-8w

Credit unions
97-8w

Crime
672w, 1217w, 1252-3w
Asylum 1206w
Costs 1216-7w
Crosby 662-3w
Diplomatic service 31-2ws
Drugs 367w
Immigration 1232w
Insurance 1209w
Motor vehicles 1253w
Northern Ireland 711w
Retail trade 1202w
Rural areas 56-8w

Crime and Disorder Act 1998
Westminster Hall Debates
(16.09.03) 205-26wh

Crime (International Co-operation) Bill (HL) 2002/03
Questions
Northern Ireland 711w

Crime prevention
Motor vehicles 1253-4w
Public transport 762w
Romford 663w
Terrorism 660w

Crimes against humanity
Iraq 46-7w

Crimes of violence
Public sector 670-1w
Retail trade 1251-2w
Teachers 148w

Criminal Assets Recovery Agency
see Assets Recovery Agency

Criminal Cases Review Commission
1218w

Criminal injuries compensation
Payments 585w

Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority
1218w

Criminal investigation
1223w
Paedophilia 1241w

Criminal Justice Bill 2002/03
Questions
367-8w, 1231-2w

Criminal proceedings
780w

Crops
293-5w
Genetically modified organisms 308w, 387-8w, 1182-3w
Insurance 1185w
Research 307-8w
Zimbabwe 91-2w

Crosby
681w, 1050w
Census 609w
Classroom assistants 681w
Crime 662-3w
Education 681-2w
Employment 599w, 695w
Roads 509w
Transport 414w

Crossrail line
17-8ws

Crown courts
498w

Crown Prosecution Service
493-7w
Manpower 50ws
Public appointments 495w, 745w, 781-2w
Standards 780-1w, 999w

Cryer, Mrs Ann
Westminster Hall Debates
Entry clearances, Married people (17.09.03) 265wh
Questions
Afghanistan, Peace keeping operations 11
Church of England, Discrimination 585-6
Health, Asians 1265w
Indian subcontinent, Foreign relations 1109-10w
Indian subcontinent, Overseas aid 1018-9w
South Asia, Trade 1080-1w
Teachers, Recruitment 455

Cultural heritage
Iraq 525w

Cultural heritage—continued*
Northern Ireland 491w

Cummings, Mr John
Chamber Debates
Housing, Easington (09.09.03) 303-7

Cunningham, Rt Hon Dr Jack
Questions
Radioactive Waste Management Committee 772w

Cunningham, Mr Jim
Westminster Hall Debates
Schools, Finance (17.09.03) 279-80wh
Questions
Administration of justice, Reform 337w
Antisemitism, Schools 366w
Antisemitism, West Midlands 378w
Carbon dioxide 1071w
Care homes 1269-70w
Care homes, Regulation 1268-9w
Debts, Civil proceedings 864w
Economic and monetary union, Referendums 1101w
Energy, Conservation 862w, 1179-80w
Experience Corps 939w
Firearms 1230w
General Agreement on Trade in Services 431-2w
Housing, Low incomes 739-40w
Internet, Children 586w, 1233w
Iraq, International assistance 786-7w
Iraq, Overseas aid 1009-10w
Loans, Young people 880w
Tobacco, EC action 786w
Welfare tax credits, Applications 865w
World Trade Organisation 1065

Cunningham, Tony
Questions
Manufacturing industries 328-9

Curriculum
(17.09.03) 303-10wh
Field studies 138w
Further education 448-9w
Mathematics 1140-1w
Physics 1140-1w
Science 140-1w

Curry, Rt Hon David
Chamber Debates
Iraq (08.09.03) 51
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 58
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 871

Curtis-Thomas, Ms Claire
Chamber Debates
Elderly (10.09.03) 342
Electricity (16.09.03) 729-30, 737, 739-40, 753-7
Teachers (09.09.03) 277, 284-6
Questions
Abortion 327w
Administration of justice 497-8w
Administration of justice, Reform 780w
Administration of justice, Standards 1242w
Admissibility of evidence 1231-2w
Afghanistan, Health services 888w
Afghanistan, Peace keeping operations 511-2w, 787w
Agriculture, Banks 1192w
Al Qaeda 436w
Alcoholic drinks, Antisocial behaviour 657-8w, 660w
Antisocial behaviour orders 933w
Armed forces, Females 520w
Armed forces, Uniforms 518w
Army, Training 512w
Asylum, Administrative delays 1206-7w
Asylum, Children 798-9w

Curtis-Thomas, Ms Claire—continued*
Asylum, Turkey 799w
Balance of payments 456w
Biotechnology, Merseyside 1069-70w
Bovine tuberculosis 770-1w
Brazil, Foreign relations 589-90w
Bus services, Merseyside 275-6w, 278w
Cattle, Transport 534w
Census, Crosby 609w
Children, Abuse 493w, 660-1w, 753w
Children's rights 321-2w
Classroom assistants, Crosby 681w
Climate change 961w
Colombia, Politics and government 590w
Common agricultural policy 1177w
Common agricultural policy, Reform 916-7w
Computers, Dept of Trade and Industry 765w
Corporate manslaughter 1216w
Crime 672w
Crime, Crosby 662-3w
Criminal Cases Review Commission 1218w
Criminal investigation 1223w
Criminal proceedings 780w
Crosby 681w, 1050w
Crown courts 498w
Crown Prosecution Service 493-7w
Crown Prosecution Service, Public appointments 495w
Crown Prosecution Service, Standards 780-1w, 999w
Defence Fire Service 703w
Dementia 179w
Developing countries, HIV infection 888-9w
Developing countries, Vaccination 893w
Disadvantaged 655w
Doctors, Suicide 618w
Domestic violence 999-1000w
Domestic violence, Victim support schemes 1024-5w
Drug treatment centres 367-8w
Drugs, Crime 367w
EC grants and loans, Merseyside 433w
Economic growth 1104w
Education, Crosby 681-2w
Employment, Crosby 599w, 695w
Energy 429w
Energy, Conservation 427w
Engineers, Public appointments 432w
Females, Cabinet Office 502w
Females, Public appointments 762w
Genetics, Databases 665w
Health services, Homelessness 845-6w
Health services, Merseyside 1298w
HIV infection 1306w
Hoaxes and false alarms 939-40w
Hospitals, Infectious diseases 1307w
Housing, South East region 459-60w
Immigrants, Detainees 667w
Immigration controls 941w
Internet, North West region 981w
Iraq conflict 516w
Iraq conflict, Reserve forces 516w
Kidneys 842w
Legislation, Explanatory notes 455w
Local government finance, North West region 735w
Local government finance, Sefton 735-7w
Lung cancer, Death rate 601w
Magistrates' courts 498-9w
Manufacturing Advisory Service 871-2w
Mental health services, Health professions 847-8w
Merseyside Police 944w
Middle East, Peace negotiations 594w
Military aircraft, Helicopters 746w
National Treatment Agency 615w
Nepal 787-8w

Curtis-Thomas, Ms Claire—continued*
Newspaper press, Distributive trade 647w
NHS, Compensation 329w
NHS, Pay 327-8w
NHS foundation trusts 190w
NHS foundation trusts, Regulation 189-90w
NHS foundation trusts, Standards 190w
North Korea, Nuclear weapons 441w
Official engagements, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 1048w
Pakistan, Females 894w
Palestinians, Poverty 894w
Pensions 697-9w
Planning obligations 459w
Police, Bureaucracy 670w
Police custody 368w
Pornography, Finance 378w
Poverty, Developing countries 457w
Pregnancy complications 254w
Public buildings 461w
Public libraries, Internet 958w
Public transport 508w
Public transport, Finance 1063w
Railways, Merseyside 278-9w, 389-90w
Railways, Repairs and maintenance 276-7w
Railways, Standards 511w
Roads, Crosby 509w
Science, Females 548w
Sefton 743-4w
Sexual offences, Convictions 1250-1w
Sexual offences, Liability 811-2w
Sexual offences, Public lavatories 658w, 1247-8w
Sierra Leone, Poverty 557-8w
Smoking 1348w
Smuggling, Meat 921-2w
South Africa, HIV infection 896-7w
Southern Africa, Overseas aid 1019-20w
Students, Loans 453w
Taxation, Transport 969w
Telecommunications, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 441-2w
Territorial Army, Manpower 707w
Terrorism 1204w
Theft, Art works 671-2w
Tibet, Human rights 596w
Transport, Crosby 414w
Transport, Merseyside 760w
Transport, Repairs and maintenance 886w
Transport, Urban areas 280w
Travelling people, Trespass 666-7w
Trials, Mass media 498w
UN Conference on Population and Development 556-7w
Unemployment, Sefton 458w
USA, Foreign aid 898w
Visits abroad, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 784w
Wind power 435-6w
Witnesses, Intimidation 1255-6w
Witnesses, Payments 664w
Witnesses, Video recordings 499w
Written questions, Dept for Constitutional Affairs 1044-5w
Written questions, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 783w
Written questions, Dept for Education and Skills 1142w
Written questions, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 925-6w
Written questions, Dept for International Development 1014w
Written questions, Dept for Transport 760-1w
Written questions, Dept for Work and Pensions 911w

Curtis-Thomas, Ms Claire—continued
Written questions, Dept of Trade and Industry 878w
Written questions, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 992w
Written questions, Home Office 1241w
Written questions, Minister for Women 870w
Written questions, Treasury 656w

Custodial treatment
Asylum 63w

Customs
862w

Customs and Excise
99w
Expenditure 316w
Plymouth 99w
Seized articles 99w
Serious Fraud Office 469
South West region 966-7w
Southern region 98-9w, 654-5w

Cynon Valley
Hazardous substances 841

Cyprus
Education 785-6w
Entry clearances 591w, 675w
Terrorism 8-9

Cyprus Turkish Airlines
Complaints 759w

Czech Republic
Arms trade 589w

Dairy farming
Scotland 579-80w

Dalyell, Mr Tam
Chamber Debates
Iraq (10.09.03) 399, 419
Ministers, Points of order (15.09.03) 591
Questions
Cement 918w
Coral reefs, Scotland 369w
Heart diseases, Preventive medicine 1340w
Higher education, Bureaucracy 982w
Iraq, Cultural heritage 525w
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 43-4w, 322
Iraq conflict, International law 634w
Iraq conflict, Legal opinion 18-9w, 497w
NATO, Science 517w
Official engagements, Prime Minister 634w
RMS Titanic 442w
SARS 1346-7w
Stem cells, Research 979-80w
Students, Fees and charges 453-4w
Surveillance, Pilot schemes 667w
Tuberculosis 631w

Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976
Questions
396w

Darling, Rt Hon Alistair, Secretary of State for Transport and Secretary of State for Scotland*
Written Statements
Crossrail line 17-8ws
Manpower, Scotland Office 23-4ws
Questions
Constituencies, Scotland 152-4, 370w
Devolution, Scotland 370w
Edinburgh Waverley Station 638w
London Underground, Dept for Transport 884w
National Lottery, Scotland 966w
Official engagements, Scotland Office 581w

Darling, Rt Hon Alistair—continued
Roads, Freight 371w
Small businesses, Scotland 149-51
Visits abroad, Scotland Office 154-5

Databases
Genetics 665w, 1224w

Davey, Mr Edward
Chamber Debates
Local Government Bill, Lords amendts (15.09.03) 599-600, 609, 612-8, 624-5, 628-9, 633, 651-3, 657-8, 661-2, 664, 668-9, 673-4, 685-6, 688, 691, (17.09.03) 1022, 1024-5, 1030-3, 1035

Davey, Mrs Valerie
Westminster Hall Debates
Higher education (18.09.03) 333-7wh
United Nations (11.09.03) 159-63wh, 174wh
Questions
Connexions Service 119w

David, Mr Wayne
Questions
Community support officers, Wales 734w
Moldova, Peace keeping operations 325-6w

David Kelly Death Inquiry
350-1w, 399-400w
Disclosure of information 347w, 520-1w

Davidson, Mr Ian
Chamber Debates
European Union (16.09.03) 797
Questions
Warships, Procurement 706w

Davies, Rt Hon Denzil
Chamber Debates
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 870-1

Davies, Geraint
Chamber Debates
Elderly (10.09.03) 337

Davies, Mr Quentin
Chamber Debates
Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission Etc) Bill (HL), Allocation of time motion, 2R and rem stages (17.09.03) 885-6, 892-3, 905, 911-7, 923, 929-30, 974, 979
Questions
Northern Ireland government 317-8

Davis, Rt Hon David
Questions
David Kelly Death Inquiry, Disclosure of information 347w
Official visits, Dept for Constitutional Affairs 33w
Official visits, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 648w
Official visits, Dept for Education and Skills 339w
Official visits, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1186w
Official visits, Dept for Transport 391w
Official visits, Dept for Work and Pensions 1053-4w
Official visits, Dept of Health 9-10w
Official visits, Dept of Trade and Industry 76w
Official visits, Leader of the House of Commons 36w
Official visits, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 363-4w
Official visits, Scotland Office 965-6w

Davis, Rt Hon David—continued
Road works, Fees and charges 374w

Dawson, Mr Hilton
Chamber Debates
Children (08.09.03) 32

Day care
Children 116-8w, 1049w, 1121-2w

Deaf
see Hearing impaired

Dean, Mrs Janet
Questions
Children's centres 447w
Jobcentres, Advertising 1051w
Learning and skills councils 551-2w
Prisons, Private sector 1246-7w

Death
Children 1127w
Immigration 1237w
Methicillin resistant staphylococcus aureus 620-1w
Patients 252w

Death rate
Intensive care 1340w
Lung cancer 601w
Strokes 94w
Surgery 854w, 1340-1w

Debates
Reform 167-8

Debts
583w, 600w, 1084-5w
Civil proceedings 864w
Developing countries 605-6w
Iraq 1093-4w
Repayments 874w

Deep vein thrombosis
177-8w, 505-6w, 883w, 1275-6w
Pregnant women 178-9w, 970w

Defence
(11.09.03) 491-559
Falkland Islands 1160w
Finance 1158w
Research 1172w

Defence Diversification Agency
1157-8w

Defence equipment
1170w
Costs 403-4w
Exhibitions 746-9w, 948w, 1064w, 1158w
Procurement 401-4w, 513w
Smuggling 1002-3w
Thermal imaging 746w

Defence Fire Service
703w

Defence Logistics Organisation
18, 39w

Defence support agencies
Manpower 51-2w

Deleg Rinpoche, Tenzin
66w

Dementia
179w, 1276w

Democracy
Afghanistan 1107w

Democratic Republic of Congo
675w, 1005w
Arms trade 991w
Human rights 675w
Peace keeping operations 67w

Demonstrations
1242w

Demonstrations—continued*
RAF Fairford 1234-5w

Denham, Rt Hon John
Chamber Debates
Children (08.09.03) 33

Dental health
Children 268-9w, 626-8w, 856-8w
Research 1274w

Dental services
(09.09.03) 30-52wh, 59-60ws, 234w, 713-5, 850w, 1277w
Brent 838w
Buckinghamshire 1299-300w
Chorley 235w
Fees and charges 631w, 841w
Harrow 838w
Lancashire 233-4w
North East region 623-4w, 850w
Shropshire 1276-8w
West Sussex 234-5w
Wirral 1278w

Dentistry
Student numbers 1276w

Departmental coordination
Biodiversity 364w
Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1186w

Departmental responsibilities
Channel Islands 1045w
Children 1127w
Home Office 62w
Isle of Man 1045w

Depleted uranium
347-8w
Dundrennan 1159w
Iraq conflict 1159w
Theft 58w, 938-9w

Deployment
Air force 404-6w
Armed forces 52w, 949w
Army 351w
Guard Service 1171w
Military police 350w, 1171w
Reserve forces 352w

Deportation
Asylum 1209w
Prisoners 1228w

Deposits
Rents 1029-30w, 1096w

Dept for Constitutional Affairs
Asbestos 1033w
EC law 32w
Ethnic groups 1036-7w
European Union 32w
Food 1037-9w
Location 1035w
Manpower 419w
Microsoft 1044w
Official visits 33w
Public appointments 1046w
Recruitment 1046w
Training 338w
Written questions 1044-5w

Dept for Culture Media and Sport
Contracts 27-8w
EC law 24w
Environmental impact assessment 23-4w
Food 529-30w
Location 23w
Manpower 23w
Microsoft 958w
Official engagements 1048w
Official visits 648w
Secondment 28-9w
Travel 955-6w

Dept for Culture Media and Sport—continued*
Written questions 783w

Dept for Education and Skills
Circulars 135-7w, 680w
Civil servants 1128-9w
Computers 682w
EC action 122-3w
Manpower 447-8w
Microsoft 1141w
Official visits 339w
Public expenditure 121w
Public relations 131-2w
Publicity 121-2w
Regional government 135w
Travel 120-1w
Written questions 1142w

Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs
Asbestos 1176-7w
Cellular phones 1186-7w
Committees 296-9w
Computers 634w
Consultants 1178-9w
Correspondence 287-8w
Departmental coordination 1186w
EC law 292w
European Union 301-2w
Food 1181-2w
Foreign policy 291-2w
Freedom of information 307w
Manpower 535-6w, 538-40w
Microsoft 1185-6w
Offices 1192w
Official visits 1186w
Risk assessment 310-1w
Secondment 1194-5w
Sites of special scientific interest 1197w
Training 1185w
Travel 1179w
Written questions 925-6w

Dept for International Development
Consultants 1005w
Food 1007w
Microsoft 1013w
Secondment 88-90w
Written questions 1014w

Dept for Transport
Asbestos 1055w
Food 1058-60w
London Underground 884w
Manpower 276w
Microsoft 884-5w
Official visits 391w
Sites of special scientific interest 691-2w
Written questions 760-1w

Dept for Work and Pensions
Archives 903-4w, 907w
Asbestos 1048w
Manpower 1050w
Microsoft 1053w
Official visits 1053-4w
Written questions 911w

Dept of Health
179w
Civil service agencies 970w
Computers 972-3w
Consultants 1272w
Finance 971w
Food 1289-90w
Information technology 203w
Manpower 971w
Ministerial duties 221-2w
Ministerial policy advisors 270w
Official cars 377w
Official hospitality 329w
Official visits 9-10w
Plants 1275w

Dept of Health—continued*
Press 179w
Publications 249w
Secondment 1347w
Visits abroad 222w
Written questions 333-4w, 852-3w

Dept of Trade and Industry
Asbestos 1069w
British overseas territories 426w
Computers 763w, 765w
Contracts 361-2w
Fees and charges 435w
Official visits 76w
Personnel management 878w
Trade promotion 546-7w
Travel 74w
Written questions 878w

Desertion
Navy 53w

Destroyers
Operating costs 346-7w

Detainees
Afghanistan 323-5w, 592-3w
Immigrants 667w
Israel 19w

Detention and training orders
1250w

Developing countries
Administration of justice 892w
Arms trade 679w, 889w, 1002w
Common agricultural policy 82w
Companies 76w
Debts 605-6w
Disease control 420-1w
HIV infection 888-9w
Information technology 84w
Internet 84w
Microfinance 554w
Overseas aid 1009-10w
Poverty 457w
Property 598w, 651-2w, 880w, 894-6w
Smoking 1018w
Technology 87w
Trade 91w, 435w
Trade agreements 875w, 880w, 1055-6
Vaccination 893w
Water 436w
Weapons 1001-2w

"Development of Services for People with Learning Disabilities or Mental Illness in England Report, 13"
48ws

Devolution
315w
National Lottery 27w
Parliamentary procedure 170
Scotland 156-8, 370w
Supreme Court 337w
Transport 371-2w, 759w

Devon
War pensions 54w

Dhanda, Mr Parmjit
Chamber Debates
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 81
Westminster Hall Debates
Police (16.09.03) 206wh, 208wh, 215-8wh, 223wh
Questions
Accident and emergency departments, EC law 273w
African Union, Zimbabwe 65w
Asylum 934w
Asylum, Applications 933-4w
China 66-7w
Climate change 289-90w
Deleg Rinpoche, Tenzin 66w

Dhanda, Mr Parmjit—continued
Doctors, Working hours 273w
Electronic government 14-5w
Liberia 84-6w
Liberia, Peace negotiations 63-4w
New partnership for Africas development 86w
Productivity 766-7w
Railways, Loans 276w
Renewable energy 77-9w, 290w
Tibet 315w
Tibet, Human rights 322w
Transport, Schools 279w
Vocational education 151-2w, 450w, 454-5w
Vocational training 639w
Welfare tax credits, Appeals 1102w
Zimbabwe, Food 92-3w

Diabetes
(09.09.03) 1-21wh, 225w, 841-2w, 1278-9w
Research 164-5w
Screening 1278w

Diamonds
Africa 67-8w

Diego Garcia
440w
Land mines 439-40w

Dietary supplements
329-30w

Digestive system
Diseases 199w

Digital broadcasting
583-4, 956-7w
BBC 22w
Scotland 578-9

Diplomatic service
1112w
Crime 31-2ws
Non-domestic rates 33ws
Parking offences 32-3ws

Dir77/388/EEC
361w

Dir92/43/EEC
1189-90w

Dir93/42/EEC
200w

Dir2000/53/EC
1179w

Dir2001/29/EC
1073w

Dir2002/46/EC
976w

Dir2002/91/EC
1132w

Dir2002/96/EC
478-9w, 773w

Dir2003/9/EC
934w

Dir2003/30/EC
883w

Direct payments
Community care 1284-5w

Director of Public Prosecutions
see Crown Prosecution Service

Directors
765w

Disability Bill (Draft)
Questions
341w, 444-5w, 974w

"Disability Handbook"
755-6w

Disability living allowance
(09.09.03) 53-60wh, 341-2w
Appeals 755w
Fraud 905w
Pensioners 905w

Disabled
Access 756-7w, 1021-2w
Children 617-8w
Churches 586-7
Elections 525w
Northern Ireland 465-7w, 816-7w, 821w
Public participation 631w
Railway stations 692w

Disabled facilities grants
609-10w

Disadvantaged
655w
Internet 1136-7w
Legal advice and assistance 1043w
Nutrition 181w
Pupils 682-3w

Disciplinary proceedings
Metropolitan Police 670w
Police 668-9w, 810w

Discrimination
Age 19w
Church of England 585-6

Disease control
6w
BSE 581w
Developing countries 420-1w
Fish farming 920w
Livestock 287-8w, 309w
Seals 309-10w

Diseases
Digestive system 199w
Trees 931w

Dismore, Mr Andrew
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 495-6
Questions
Al Muhajiroun 582-3w
Armed forces, Religion 514w
Jobcentre Plus, Temporary employment 1051-3w
Judges, Housing 1040-3w
Mobile homes 612w
Sheriffs 607w, 754w
Students, Muslims 986-7w
Thameslink railway line 511w
Uganda, Armed conflict 678-9w
Uganda, Human rights 678w

Distributive trade
Newspaper press 647w

District policing partnerships
Northern Ireland 723-4w

Djanogly, Mr Jonathan
Chamber Debates
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 70, 105-8
Questions
Alconbury airfield 608w

Dobbin, Jim
Questions
Human embryo experiments 1309w
Occupational pensions 860

Dobson, Rt Hon Frank
Questions
Electricity 75w
Electricity generation 357-60w
Fraud, Government departments 653w
Hospitals, Standards 843w
National Grid 433w

Dobson, Rt Hon Frank—continued
NHS foundation trusts 846w
NHS treatment centres 973-4w, 1279-80w
Privatisation 457-8w
Railways, Finance 411w
Railways, Franchises 410-1w
Regional electricity companies, Government assistance 875w
Roads, Accidents 411w
Water companies 408-10w

Docklands light railway line
Bicycles 1059w

Dockyards
Scotland 519w

Doctors
Manpower 182w
Recruitment 176w
Suicide 618w
Vacancies 177w
Working hours 273-4w, 1328-9w
Wrekin 182-4w

Doctors' list of patients
844w

Dodds, Mr Nigel
Chamber Debates
Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission Etc) Bill (HL), Allocation of time motion, 2R and rem stages (17.09.03) 906-7, 911, 920-1, 925, 957-62, 1004, 1006-8
Questions
Aerials, Northern Ireland 490w
Air routes, Belfast 815w
Assets Recovery Agency, Northern Ireland 312-3
Business questions 1080-1
Care homes, Northern Ireland 710w
Community development, Northern Ireland 476w
Community relations, Northern Ireland 463-4w
Disabled, Northern Ireland 465-6w
Education, Northern Ireland 578w
Elderly, Northern Ireland 475w
Energy, Northern Ireland 468w
Home helps, Northern Ireland 471w
Insurance, Northern Ireland 473w
Irish language 474w
Leisure, Northern Ireland 485-6w
Market research, Northern Ireland Office 462w
Non-domestic rates, Northern Ireland 463w
North South Ministerial Council 475w
Northern Ireland Equality Commission 468w
Northern Ireland Planning Appeals Commission 476-7w
Nurses, Northern Ireland 722-4w
Planning permission, Northern Ireland 824w
Prescriptions, Northern Ireland 477w
Public Administration in Northern Ireland Review 478w
Refrigerators, Northern Ireland 478-9w
Regeneration, Belfast 814-6w
Road works, Northern Ireland 828w
Roads, Northern Ireland 828w
Schools, Northern Ireland 480-1w
Social rented housing, Belfast 483-4w
Special educational needs, Belfast 484-6w
Teachers, Belfast 831-2w
Teachers, Manpower 580w
Teachers, Northern Ireland 490w
Television, Licensing 30-1w
Tolls, Northern Ireland 711w
Transfer procedure tests, Northern Ireland 578w

Dodds, Mr Nigel—continued*
Transport, Northern Ireland 832w
Travel, Concessions 829-31w
Voting behaviour, Northern Ireland 463w
Water, Belfast 833w

Domestic violence
497w, 665w, 999-1000w, 1225w, 1285-6w
Administration of justice 1035-6w
Community care grants 444w
Education 1130-1w
Legal aid 337w
Supported housing 632w
Surrey 58-9w
Victim support schemes 1024-5w

Domestic wastes
Recycling 312w, 408w
Waste management 1199w

Donaldson, Mr Jeffrey M
Chamber Debates
Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission Etc) Bill (HL), Allocation of time motion, 2R and rem stages (17.09.03) 906-7, 918, 924, 962-8, 981, 1007
Questions
Foyle Fisheries Commission 817-8w

Donohoe, Mr Brian H
Chamber Debates
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 62-3, 80-2
Questions
Boating 410w
Home accident surveillance system 432w

Donors
Organs 250-1w, 809-10w, 1336-7w

Doran, Mr Frank
Westminster Hall Debates
East coast railway line (16.09.03) 233wh

Dorrell, Rt Hon Stephen
Chamber Debates
European Union (16.09.03) 807-10
Questions
Agency nurses 245w
Class sizes, Leicestershire 447w
General practitioners, Leicestershire 192w
Health professions, Leicestershire 255w
Leicestershire Constabulary, Vacancies 809w
Schools, Leicester 116w, 139-40w
Speech therapy, Leicestershire 264-5w
Teachers, Manpower 148w

Dorset
MMR vaccine 222w
Teachers 142-3w

Double taxation
Australia 3ws

Doughty, Sue
Chamber Debates
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 98-100
Westminster Hall Debates
Schools, Finance (17.09.03) 280-2wh
Questions
Agriculture, Incinerators 312-4w
Crops 294-5w
Domestic violence, Surrey 58-9w
NHS, Thermal insulation 1288w
Renewable energy, Wood 384-6w
Roads, Aggregates 373w

Dover House
965w

Down Lisburn HSS Trust
Finance 575w

Drew, Mr David
Chamber Debates
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 62
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 873
Westminster Hall Debates
Dental services (09.09.03) 41-2wh
Diabetes (09.09.03) 11-3wh
Housing, South West region (09.09.03) 63wh
Police (16.09.03) 205-10wh, 217wh
Schools, Finance (17.09.03) 276wh
Questions
Apprentices, Rural areas 1124-5w
Armed forces, Pensions 751-2w, 1160w
Broadband 872-3w
Child Support Agency, Information technology 1049-50w
China, Prisoners 785w
Compost 1178w
Council housing, Property transfer 740w
Crime, Retail trade 1202w
Crimes of violence, Retail trade 1251-2w
Digital broadcasting 957w
Health and Safety Executive 899-900w
Health and Safety Executive, Manpower 899w
Lantra 540w, 634-5w, 777w, 922w
Military bases, USA 53-4w
Renewables obligation, Trade 879w, 1077-8w
Rural areas, Housing 1192w
Rural areas, Training 543w, 635-6w
Serbia and Montenegro, Religious freedom 992w
Social security benefits, Holidays 906w
Sudan, Human rights 1116w
Sudan, Press freedom 1116w
Terrorism 1204w
Trade unions, Training 1081w
Western Sahara 326w, 1121w
Whales, Iceland 918w
Wildlife Trusts 1199w

Drinking water
Fluoride 775w
Iraq conflict 42w

Driving
Cellular phones 411w, 1250w

"Driving at Work"
49ws

Driving offences
Fixed penalties 805-6w
Speed limits 805-6w

Droughts
Ethiopia 82-3w

Drug resistance
Antibiotics 1263w

Drug treatment centres
367-8w, 857-8

Drugs
Advertising 1319w
Afghanistan 64w, 79-80w, 674w
Alcoholic drinks 1233w
Army 344-5w
Arthritis 163w, 269w, 615-6w
Cancer 186w
Crime 367w
Hyperactivity 218-9w
Misuse 842-3w, 856-7, 1227w
Princess Royal Barracks 345w
Prosecutions 367w
Rape 1225-7w, 1248w
Rehabilitation 1286w
Reoffenders 1249-50w
Young people 1213-4w

Drummore Harbour
42w

Dumfries and Galloway
315w

Duncan, Mr Alan
Westminster Hall Debates
United Nations (11.09.03) 147-50wh, 169-71wh, 174wh

Duncan, Mr Peter
Questions
Aircraft carriers, Scotland 638w
Annual reports, Scotland Office 418w
Asylum, Children 933w
Asylum, Northern Ireland 55w
Aviation, Scotland 638w
BBC, Digital broadcasting 22w
Boundary Commission for Scotland 17-8w
BSE, Disease control 581w
Community Fund 23w, 26w
Constituencies, Scotland 16w, 154, 965w
Dairy farming, Scotland 579-80w
Depleted uranium, Dundrennan 1159w
Dover House 965w
Drummore Harbour 42w
Dumfries and Galloway 315w
Edinburgh Waverley Station 638w
European Parliament elections, Scotland 961w
Ferries, Safety 391w
Ferries, Scotland 16w
Fisheries, Scotland 580-1w
Friends of Scotland 419w
Hospitals, Consultants 630w
Iraq, Bomb disposal 516-7w
Local government, Absent voting 964w
Low flying 954-5w, 1169w
Manpower, Dept for Constitutional Affairs 419w
Manufacturing industries, Scotland 638w
National Lottery 25-7w
National Lottery, Devolution 27w
National Lottery, Scotland 22w, 966w
Official engagements, Advocate General for Scotland 17w
Official engagements, Scotland Office 581w
Parliament, Research 397w
Ports, Rosyth 17w
Post office card account 1058
Quality Meat Scotland 581w
Renewable energy 79w
Rescue services, Finance 276w
Robin Rigg wind farm, Shipping 371w
Scottish Land Fund 28w
Sewel motions, Scotland Office 581w
Television channels 22-3w
West Freugh airfield 355w
Wind power, Scotland 17w
Wind power, Solway Firth 383w
Youth Justice Board 63w

Duncan Smith, Rt Hon Iain
Questions
Convention on the Future of Europe 324-5
Council tax 855-6
Economic and monetary union 851-2
Hoon, Geoffrey 320-1

Dundrennan
Depleted uranium 1159w

Dungavel Detention Centre
Children 1227w

Dunwoody, Mrs Gwyneth
Chamber Debates
Electricity (16.09.03) 742, 744-7
European Union (09.09.03) 187

Dunwoody, Mrs Gwyneth—continued*
Westminster Hall Debates
Dental services (09.09.03) 35-8wh
Questions
Business questions 1076-7
Debates, Reform 168

E coli
1287-8w

e Envoy
see Office of the e-Envoy

Eagle, Angela
Questions
Race relations, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 38w

Eagle, Maria, Parliamentary Secretary, Department for Work and Pensions*
Westminster Hall Debates
Disability living allowance (09.09.03) 57-60wh
Questions
Asbestos, Dept for Work and Pensions 1048w
Disability Bill (Draft) 341w, 444-5w, 974w
"Disability Handbook" 755-6w
Disability living allowance 341-2w
Disability living allowance, Appeals 755w
Disability living allowance, Pensioners 905w
Disabled, Access 756-7w
Employment, Learning disability 561-3w, 907-8w
Employment schemes, Mentally ill 343w
Incapacity benefit 695w
Incapacity benefit, Appeals 342w
Incapacity benefit, Employment tribunals 1050-1w
Incapacity benefit, War pensions 340w
Manpower, Dept for Work and Pensions 1050w
Members, Correspondence 20w
Sign language 340w, 914w
Social security benefits, Autism 19w
Social security benefits, Hyperactivity 970-2w
Written questions, Dept for Work and Pensions 911w

Ealing Hospital NHS Trust
Resignations 183w

Ear tagging
Sheep 312w

Earned autonomy scheme
1131w

Easington
Housing (09.09.03) 303-10

East and North Hertfordshire NHS Trust
Waiting lists 183w

East Anglia
Sexually transmitted diseases 230w

East Cambridgeshire and Fenland Primary Care Trust
Sexually transmitted diseases 230w

East coast railway line
(16.09.03) 227-35wh

East Midlands Airport
759w

EC action
Administration of justice 470-1
Dept for Education and Skills 122-3w
Herbal medicine 976w
Infectious diseases (08.09.03) 140
Ports (15.09.03) 692

EC action—continued*
Radioactive wastes 365-6w
Tobacco 786w

EC budget
1082-3w

EC countries
Arms trade 1165-6w, 1172w
Rapid reaction forces 43w

EC defence policy
1160w

EC enlargement
1113w, 1115w
Agriculture 918-9w
Asylum 593w
Immigration 593w
Work permits 991w

EC grants and loans
Merseyside 433w
Northern Ireland 475-6w
Regional planning and development 460-1w

EC internal trade
762w

EC law
Accident and emergency departments 273w
Agriculture 300-1w
Dept for Constitutional Affairs 32w
Dept for Culture Media and Sport 24w
Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 292w
Eggs 74-5w
Office of the Deputy Prime Minister 35w
Power stations 646-7w
Treasury 107-8w

EC nationals
Health services 187w

EC reform
867-8w

EC regional policy
53-6ws, 1064w

Economic and monetary union
851-2, 1025w
Advisory bodies 1088-91w
Economic growth 1092w
Economic situation 101-2w
Northern Ireland Office 713w
Public participation 1091-2w
Publicity 101w
Referendums 1101w
Sweden 869w

Economic growth
1104w
Economic and monetary union 1092w
Wales 733w

Economic situation
Economic and monetary union 101-2w

Edinburgh Waverley Station
638w

Education
Assessments 123w, 459-61
Buckinghamshire 793w
Crosby 681-2w
Cyprus 785-6w
Domestic violence 1130-1w
Finance 467-9
Iraq 1009w
Lincolnshire 467-8
Medicine 1149-50w
Northern Ireland 569-70w, 578w
Standards 855
Ulster Scots language 579w

Education Act 1996
Questions
141-2w

Education maintenance allowance
Kingston upon Hull 984w

Education (School Premises) Regulations 1999
Questions
1143w

Edwards, Mr Huw
Questions
Churches, Disabled 586
Domestic violence 497w
Employers' liability, Forestry 757w, 906w
Forensic Science Laboratory, Chepstow 666w
Independent Commission on Assembly Powers 363w
Pensioners, Monmouthshire 913w
Public sector, Wales 849
Sports, Tax allowances 582

e-Envoy
see Office of the e-Envoy

Efford, Clive
Chamber Debates
Roaccutane (17.09.03) 1042-6, 1048
Questions
Pension credit 565w
Pension credit, Eltham 564-5w
Pensioners, Income support 699-700w
Personal income 1102-3w
Welfare tax credits 605w
Welfare tax credits, Eltham 604-5w

Eggs
EC law 74-5w
Salmonella 1292-3w
Trade agreements 281w

Eight minutes rule
Rulings and statements (08.09.03) 56

Elderly
Accidents 187w
Breast cancer 1266w
Care homes 705
Community care 702-4
Health services 1334-6w
Injuries 167-8w
Northern Ireland 475w
Opposition days (10.09.03) 335-92
Residential and nursing care see care homes

Elections
524w
Disabled 525w
Iraq 786w

Electoral register
584, 809-10w, 1032-3w
Armed forces 39-40w
Scotland 155-6

Electricity
75w
Consumption 763w
Opposition days (16.09.03) 723-76

Electricity generation
357-60w, 645w

Electroconvulsive therapy
210w

Electronic commerce
1072-3w

Electronic equipment
Manpower 1061-4
Waste disposal 773w

Electronic government
14-5w

Electronic voting
Privacy 525w

Elgin marbles
335w

Ellman, Mrs Louise
Chamber Debates
Iraq (09.09.03) 228
Questions
Business questions 1082
Iran, Arms trade 324w
NHS, Recruitment 711
Post offices, Urban areas 1060-1

Eltham
Pension credit 564-5w
Pensioners 699-700w
Welfare tax credits 604-5w

Email
NHS 849-50w
Social Security Benefits Agency 902w

Embassies
Portugal 1115w

Emergencies
NHS 1288w

Emergency calls
Ambulance services 184w
Fire services 962w
Greater London 159w

Emergency services
Accidents 658-9w
Lancashire 854
Road traffic control 511w

Employee share ownership schemes
859w

Employers' liability
Forestry 757w, 906w
Insurance 20-1w, 902-3w, 905-6w

Employment
Crosby 599w, 695w
Learning disability 561-3w, 907-8w
Regulation 428-9w, 905w

Employment schemes
904-5w
Mentally ill 343w
Northern Ireland Office 491w

Employment services
Older workers 60-2ws

Employment tribunals
Incapacity benefit 1050-1w

Empty property
Hospitals 625-6w
Northern Ireland 396w

Endometriosis
Complementary medicine 186w
Health education 185-6w

Energy
429w
Conservation (10.09.03) 92-8wh, 427w, 862w, 1179-81w
Northern Ireland 468w

Engineering
Student numbers 1139-41w

Engineers
Public appointments 432w

English language
Standards 1137w

English Sports Council
Finance 532w

Ennis, Jeff
Westminster Hall Debates
Higher education (18.09.03) 337-9wh

Ennis, Jeff*—*continued
Questions
Elderly, Community care 702-3
Horse racing 1053
Postal services, Lorries 548w

Enterprise investment scheme
599w

Enterprise management incentives
599-600w

Entry clearances
1112-3w, 1118w
Cyprus 591w, 675w
Fees and charges 943-4w
Married people (17.09.03) 264-71wh
Nepal 677-8w, 1230-1w
Overseas students 673w, 678w, 784w, 808-9w, 1118w, 1240w
Overseas visitors 1119-22w
Security 1241-2w
Slovakia 945w
Somalia 595-6w
Uganda 788w

Environment Agency
Surveys 1181w

Environment protection
Companies 280-1w
Small businesses 281w
Trade agreements 1021w

Environmental Audit Select Committee
(08.09.03) 142, (09.09.03) 302, (10.09.03) 436, (11.09.03) 560

Environmental impact assessment
Dept for Culture Media and Sport 23-4w
Northern Ireland Office 570w
Office of the Deputy Prime Minister 319-20w

Environmental Protection Act 1990
Questions
769-70w

Epilepsy
Prescription drugs 11-2w

Equal opportunities
NHS 258w

Equal pay
993w

Equality Commission for Northern Ireland
see Northern Ireland Equality Commission

Essex
Ambulance services 159-60w, 185w
Care homes 171w
Health professions 220-1w

Essex Police
939w

Estate agents
429-31w

Etherington, Bill
Chamber Debates
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 118-20

Ethics
Foreign policy 1105w

Ethiopia
1006-7w
Child prostitution 83w
Droughts 82-3w
HIV infection 83w

Ethnic groups
Botswana 81w
Dept for Constitutional Affairs 1036-7w
Legal aid scheme 1037-8w
Mental health services 209w
NHS 225-6w

EU Economic and Financial Affairs Council
100-1w

European Aviation Safety Agency
389w

European Central Bank
Interest rates 1092w

European Communities
see also EC and EU headings

European Communities Act 1972
Questions
322-3w

European Convention on Human Rights
Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission etc) Bill (HL) 2002/03 53ws

European fighter aircraft
1-3
Aircraft carriers 512w

European Parliament elections
Scotland 961w

European Parliamentary and Local Elections (Pilots) Bill 2002/03
Chamber Debates
1R (17.09.03) 877
Written Statements
51-2ws

European Scrutiny Committee
(15.09.03) 692

European Union
Climate change 301w
Dept for Constitutional Affairs 32w
Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 301-2w
Foreign and Commonwealth Office 75-6w
Ministerial statements (09.09.03) 171-87
Opposition days (16.09.03) 777-828

Evans, Mr Nigel
Questions
Alcoholic drinks, Imports 455-6w
Colombia, Hostages 1105w
Customs and Excise, Seized articles 99w
Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs, Correspondence 287w
Higher education, Wales 338-9w
Manufacturing industries, Wales 846-7
NHS, Wales 843-4
Parliamentary tours, Tickets 499-500w
Tobacco, Imports 393w, 456w

"Every Child Matters"
116w

Ewing, Annabelle
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 500
Elderly (10.09.03) 348
Questions
Devolution, Scotland 156-7
Dungavel Detention Centre, Children 1227w
Immigrants, Scotland 940w
Immigration and Nationality Directorate 940w
Immigration and Nationality Directorate, Scotland 940w
Local government, Manpower 36w
Manpower, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 538-40w
Manpower, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 438-40w
Manpower, Home Office 1213w
Manpower, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister 959-61w
Manpower, Treasury 1087w
Members, Correspondence 1227-8w
Police, Manpower 61-2w

Ewing, Annabelle—continued*
Secondment, Cabinet Office 997-9w
Secondment, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 28-9w
Secondment, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1194-5w
Secondment, Dept for International Development 88-90w
Secondment, Ministry of Defence 352-6w
Secondment, Northern Ireland Office 481-2w
Secondment, Scotland Office 419w
Supreme Court 151-2

Exchange rates
Agriculture 919-20w

Excise duties
Biofuels 102w
Liquefied petroleum gas 887w
Motor vehicles 827-8w, 969-70w
Petrol alternatives 968w

Executives
NHS 242w

Exercise
Police Service of Northern Ireland 725w

Exhaust emissions
691w

Exhibitions
Defence equipment 746-9w, 948w, 1064w, 1158w

Experience Corps
939w

Explanatory notes
Legislation 455w

Export Control Act 2002
Questions
703w, 1065-6w
Orders and regulations 892-3w, 1007w

Export controls
1068-9w
Arms trade 72-3w, 749w, 1064-8w, 1074w
USA 1069w

Export credit guarantees
302w, 645-6w, 1073w

Exports
536w
Chemicals 873w
Paper 77w
Sheep 1196w

Exservicemen
51ws

Extradition
Asylum 1248w
Treaties 666w

Eyesight
Surgery 186w, 331w

Fabricant, Michael
Chamber Debates
Electricity (16.09.03) 743
Questions
Broadcasting reception 529w
Electronic equipment, Manpower 1063
Electronic voting, Privacy 525w
Females, Service industries 1068-9
Industrial investment, Northern Ireland 395-6w
Office of Communications, Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration 877w
Office of the e-Envoy 502-3w
Office of the e-Envoy, Annual reports 653w
Palace of Westminster, Repairs and maintenance 637w

Fabricant, Michael—continued*
Smuggling, Meat 394w, 602w
Theatre, Finance 573-4
Trade promotion, Dept of Trade and Industry 546-7w
Trade promotion, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 321w

Falkland Islands
520w
Argentina 948w
Armed forces 948-50w
Defence 1160w
Patrol craft 948w

Families
Armed forces 50-1w

Family centres
124w

Family courts
Greater London 446w

Family planning
Overseas aid 1014-5w

Family practitioner services
Nurses 246-7w

Family Support Unit
see Children and Families Directorate

Farmers
see also Agriculture
Income 919w
Marketing 292w
Markets 291w

Farms
see also Agriculture
Maps 302w

Females
Afghanistan 320w
Armed forces 42-3w, 520w
Cabinet Office 502w
Human trafficking 993-4w
Income 1070
Information technology 870w
Mental health services 214-5w
Pakistan 894w
Public appointments 762w, 870-1w
Science 548w
Service industries 1068-70
Small businesses 869-70w
Social clubs 1066-7
Young offenders 1217-8w

Ferries
Safety 391w
Scotland 16w

Fertility
Havering 844w

Field, Rt Hon Frank
Questions
Sure start programme, Birkenhead 1146-7w

Field, Mr Mark
Westminster Hall Debates
Transport, Greater London (16.09.03) 182-5wh

Field studies
Curriculum 138w

Fiji
Armed forces 1156w

Film
Finance 1046-7w
Hearing impaired 525-6w
North East region 956-7w
Tax allowances 655w

Financial services
Computers 1083w

Financial services—continued*
Fraud 1083w, 1201w

Fines
1038w
North East region 1038w

Fire extinguishers
610-1w

Fire services
Emergency calls 962w

Firearms
1230w
Police 1242w, 1244w

Fires
Yarls Wood Detention Centre 946-7w

Fireworks Bill 2002/03
Chamber Debates
Royal Assent (18.09.03) 1122

Firing ranges
South East region 48w

First Group
GB Railways 277w

First time buyers
Northern Ireland 713w

Fish farming
Disease control 920w

Fisheries
Northern Ireland 318-9, 576-7w
Patrol craft 706-7w
Scotland 580-1w
South West region 920-1w

Fishing vessels
303-4w, 773-4w

Fitzsimons, Lorna
Questions
Business questions 1078

Fixed penalties
Driving offences 805-6w

Flexitime
431w

Flight, Mr Howard
Questions
Cellular phones, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1186-7w
Child Trust Fund 861-2w
Civil servants, Treasury 106w
Economic and monetary union, Northern Ireland Office 713w
Information technology, Cabinet Office 996-7w
Information technology, Home Office 59w
Information technology, Scotland Office 419w
Manpower, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 23w
Manpower, Dept for Education and Skills 447-8w
Manpower, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 535-6w
Manpower, Dept for Transport 276w
Manpower, Dept for Work and Pensions 1050w
Manpower, Scotland Office 418-9w
Manpower, Treasury 1087-8w
NHS, Pensions 1329-30w
Offices, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1192w
Research and development tax credit 1096w
Training, Dept for Constitutional Affairs 338w
Training, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1185w

Flight, Mr Howard—continued
Training, Prime Minister 315w
Travel, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 955-6w
Travel, Dept for Education and Skills 120-1w
Travel, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1179w
Travel, Dept of Trade and Industry 74w
Travel, Treasury 100w

Flint, Caroline, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Home Office*
Questions
Airguns 582w
Assets Recovery Agency 1204-5w
Asylum, Extradition 1248w
Cocaine 944w
Confiscation orders 1215w
Drug treatment centres 367-8w
Drugs, Alcoholic drinks 1233w
Drugs, Crime 367w
Drugs, Prosecutions 367w
Drugs, Reoffenders 1249-50w
Drugs, Young people 1213-4w
Extradition, Treaties 666w
Firearms 1230w
Fraud, Financial services 1201w
Khat 59-60w
Lighters 937-8w
Rape, Drugs 1225-7w, 1248w
Rape, Victim support schemes 1248w
Robbery, Millennium Exhibition 1239w

Flood control
304-5w
Buckinghamshire 774w
Lewes (10.09.03) 131-8wh
Lincolnshire 304-5w
Tendring 928w

Floods
Afghanistan 80-1w
River Thames 774-5w

Flook, Mr Adrian
Westminster Hall Debates
Speed limits, Somerset (16.09.03) 237wh
Questions
Bovine tuberculosis 284w
Classroom assistants, Taunton 149w
Jobseeker's allowance, Somerset 341-3w
Magnetic resonance imagers, Somerset 221-4w
Mental health services, Somerset 211w
Ministerial statements 36w
MMR vaccine, Somerset 222w
Organs, Donors 250-1w
Pre-school education, South West region 122w
Primary education, Assessments 382-3w
Primary education, Taunton 131w
Teachers, Redundancy 462-3
Tourism, South West region 30w

Fluoride
305-6w, 1288-9w
Drinking water 775w

Flynn, Paul
Chamber Debates
Asperger's syndrome (10.09.03) 440
Westminster Hall Debates
Entry clearances, Married people (17.09.03) 267wh
Questions
Companies 640-1w
Farmers, Income 919w
Gurkhas 1164-5w
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 593-4w, 1106w
Iraq, Weapons 676w, 868w
Manufacturing industries, Wales 845-6

Flynn, Paul—continued
Methicillin resistant staphylococcus aureus, Death 620-1w
National insurance contributions, Climate change levy 1095w
National insurance contributions, NHS 1095-6w
National insurance contributions, Rebates 904w
National Insurance Fund 601w, 1096w
Passport Office 806w
Pension credit 1054w
Police, Disciplinary proceedings 810w
Post offices 1076w
Speed limits, Cameras 392w
Thomas, Richard 797w
THORP, Finance 879w

Follett, Barbara
Questions
Post offices, Closures 851

Food
306-7w
Additives 188w, 1282-4w
Advertising 782-3w, 1281w
Balance of payments 280w
Consumption 921w
Dept for Constitutional Affairs 1037-9w
Dept for Culture Media and Sport 529-30w
Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1181-2w
Dept for International Development 1007w
Dept for Transport 1058-60w
Dept of Health 1289-90w
Foreign and Commonwealth Office 592w
Hospitals 1289w
Hygiene 1293-4w
Iraq 1008-9w, 1011w
Labelling 1294w
Ministry of Defence 1160-1w
Misleading advertising 1283w
Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 734w
Prices 917w
Procurement 284-5w, 290w
Safety 293w, 1292w
Sales 290-1w
Smuggling 293w
Standards 1290w
Testing 1294w
Treasury 1092w
Zimbabwe 92-3w

Food poisoning
188w, 1290-2w

Food Standards Agency
188-9w, 1281-2w, 1294-5w
Public participation 188w

Food Supplements (England) Regulations 2003
Questions
329w

Football
Work permits 812-3w

Forced labour
650-1w

Foreign aid
USA 898w

Foreign and Commonwealth Office
Asbestos 1109w
Computers 436-7w
Consultants 990-1w
European Union 75-6w
Food 592w
Manpower 438-40w
Microsoft 787w

Foreign and Commonwealth Office—continued
Telecommunications 441-2w
Trade promotion 321w
Trade unions 59ws
Visits abroad 784w
Written questions 992w

Foreign investment in UK
432-3w
North East region 1074-5w
USA 873w
Wales 848-9

Foreign policy
Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 291-2w
Ethics 1105w

Foreign relations
Brazil 589-90w
Indian subcontinent 1109-10w

Foreign workers
Agency nurses 1337-8w
Health professions 1346w
Low pay 875-6w
Nurses 246w

Foreigners
Patients 852w
Prisoners 1245-6w

Forensic Science Laboratory
Chepstow 666w

Forensic Science Service
807w, 1228-30w

"Forensic Science Service Annual Report and Accounts, 2002/03"
7-8ws

Forestry
Employers' liability 757w, 906w

Forms
Census 609w
Welfare tax credits 21-2w

Forth, Mr Eric
Chamber Debates
Betts, Clive, Members' suspension (11.09.03) 489-90
Electricity (16.09.03) 725, 731
Intelligence and Security Committee, Points of order (10.09.03) 392, (11.09.03) 486-7
Questions
Business statements 474-8, 1071-3

Fossil fuels
Reserves 646w

Foster, Rt Hon Derek
Questions
Small businesses 1051-2

Foster, Mr Don
Questions
Cameroon, Poverty 1004w

Foster, Mr Michael Jabez, (Hastings and Rye)*
Chamber Debates
Winter fuel payments, Petitions (17.09.03) 1040

Foster, Mr Michael John, (Worcester)*
Questions
Local government finance 1027-8w, 1031-2w
Local government finance, West Midlands 1027-8w
Local government finance, Worcester 1031w

Foster care
1133-4w

Foulkes, Rt Hon George
Chamber Debates
European Union (16.09.03) 779-80
Foreign Affairs Select Committee, Points of order (08.09.03) 55
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1099
Iraq (08.09.03) 52-3, (09.09.03) 194-5, 211-4, (10.09.03) 410-4, 426-7
Ministerial statement intervention (18.09.03) 1102
Oral question time intervention (10.09.03) 326
Unparliamentary expressions, Points of order (18.09.03) 1106
Questions
Electoral register, Scotland 155-6
Fisheries, Northern Ireland 319

Foundation degrees
983-4w

Fox, Dr Liam
Questions
Accident and emergency departments, Standards 156w
Acupuncture 1257-8w
Agency nurses 246w
AIDS, Research 157-8w
Ambulance services, Infectious diseases 847w
Ambulance services, Speed limits 160-1w
Ambulance services, Standards 160w
Ambulance services, Vehicles 161w
Asthma, Research 164-5w
Cancer 169-70w
Care homes 170-1w
Care homes, Admissions 843-4w
Commission for Health Improvement, Surveys 174w
Community health councils 840w
Diabetes 1279w
Diabetes, Screening 1278w
Doctors, Vacancies 177w
Doctors, Working hours 1328-9w
Elderly, Accidents 187w
Electroconvulsive therapy 210w
Food poisoning 188w, 1290w
Food Standards Agency 188-9w
Food Standards Agency, Public participation 188w
General practitioners 192-3w
Genito-urinary medicine 1296-7w
Health, Conferences 975w
Health action zones 197w
Health centres 242w
Hepatitis 199w
Hospital beds 233w
Hospital wards 1333w
Hospital wards, Gender 1322w
Hospitals, Admissions 853-4w
Hospitals, Cleaning services 1358w
Hospitals, Construction 202-3w
Hospitals, Empty property 625-6w
Hospitals, Northern region 1338-9w
Hospitals, Standards 201-2w
Hospitals, Waiting lists 271w
Infectious diseases, Immigration 1310w
Information technology, Dept of Health 203w
Junior doctors, Working hours 182w
Medical treatments abroad 231-2w
Mental health services 209w
Mental health services, Ethnic groups 209w
Mental health services, Respite care 1319w
Midwives, Administration 1266w
NHS, Ancillary staff 228w
NHS, Bureaucracy 839w

Fox, Dr Liam—continued*
NHS, Ethnic groups 225-6w
NHS, Finance 239w
NHS, Management 1330-2w
NHS, Manpower 1332w
NHS, Pay 242w, 980w, 1352w
NHS, Racial harassment 255-6w
NHS, Recruitment 240w, 711-3
NHS, Reform 1296w
NHS, Stress 229w
NHS Direct 1327-8w
NHS Direct, Expenditure 235-6w
NHS foundation trusts 189w
NHS treatment centres 1279w
NHS treatment centres, Fees and charges 180w
NHS treatment centres, Manpower 179-80w
NHS treatment centres, Medical treatments 180w
Nurses, Schools 1342w
Nurses, Training 246w
Nutrition 180w, 1280w
Obesity, Children 249w
Ophthalmic services, Fees and charges 1336w
Out-patients 1337w
Patients, British nationality 252-3w
Pay beds 254w
Plants, Dept of Health 1275w
Prescription drugs, Private sector 1341w
Primary care trusts, Finance 1341w
Primary care trusts, Recruitment 240w
Publications, Dept of Health 249w
Smallpox, Contracts 13w
Smoking 1350-1w
Special hospitals, Prisoners' transfers 1304-5w
Strokes 1353-4w
Strokes, Health services 266-7w
Suicide 267-8w
Surgery, Costs 250w
Surgery, Waiting lists 972w, 1338w

Foyle Fisheries Commission
817-8w

Fractures
331w

France
Lorry drivers 503w

Franchises
Railways 410-1w

Francois, Mr Mark
Chamber Debates
Arms Control and Disarmament (Inspections) Bill (HL), 2R (18.09.03) 1111
European Union (16.09.03) 798, 819
Iraq (09.09.03) 202, 223-4

Fraud
Arms trade 425-6w
Credit cards 1200-1w
Disability living allowance 905w
Financial services 1083w, 1201w
Government departments 653w
NHS 233w, 238w, 1326w
Passports 945w
Small businesses 493w
Social security benefits 18-22ws, 25-6ws, 758w

Free school meals
1134-5w

Freedom of expression
Zimbabwe 1119w

Freedom of information
Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 307w

Freedom of information—continued*
NHS 1311-2w
Northern Ireland Office 569w

Freedom of Information Act 2000
Questions
307w, 1311-2w

Freight
508w
Motorways 1062w
Railways 277w, 507-8w
Roads (17.09.03) 245-63wh, 371w

Friction Dynamex
734w

Friends of Scotland
419w

Frontiers
Iraq 44w, 1106w

Fruit
294w
Import duties 540-2w, 1182w
Schools 223w

Fund raising
Licensing 16-7ws
Self-regulation 799-804w

Further education
450-1w
Admissions 1123-4w
Curriculum 448-9w
Finance 125-9w, 552w
Leeds 1136w
Mature students 981-2w
National insurance contributions 126w

Futurebuilders' Fund
34-6ws

Fuzeon
192w

Gale, Mr Roger
Chamber Debates
Elderly (10.09.03) 357-8
Questions
Care homes, Vetting 1270-1w
General Service Medal, Suez 417-8w
Sonar, Marine animals 417w
Sonar, Procurement 417w

Gangmasters
694w, 743w, 764-5w, 775-6w, 911-2w

Gapes, Mike
Chamber Debates
European Union (16.09.03) 778
Iraq (08.09.03) 51

Gardiner, Barry
Chamber Debates
Local Government Bill, Lords amendts (15.09.03) 600-1, 608, 610-1, 613, 615
Questions
Angola, Arms trade 789w
Armed forces, Security 703w
Arms trade 764w, 1108w
Arms trade, Export controls 749w, 1064-8w, 1074w
Arms trade, Sanctions 1117w
Biodiversity, Departmental coordination 364w
Business questions 482-3
Cellular phones, Fees and charges 1075w
Children's centres 455-6
Combined heat and power 771-2w
Credit cards 644w
Defence equipment, Smuggling 1002-3w
Developing countries, Administration of justice 892w
Developing countries, Arms trade 679w, 889w, 1002w
Developing countries, Microfinance 554w

Gardiner, Mr Barry—continued
Developing countries, Property 598w, 651-2w, 880w, 894-6w
Developing countries, Smoking 1018w
Developing countries, Weapons 1001-2w
Docklands light railway line, Bicycles 1059w
Education, Standards 855
Export Control Act 2002, Orders and regulations 892-3w, 1007w
Export controls 1068-9w
Export controls, USA 1069w
Housing, Sewers 611-2w
Income support, Housing improvement 907w
Iraq 1153w
Iraq, Bomb disposal 952w
Iraq, Civil servants 1106w
Iraq, Crimes against humanity 46-7w
Iraq, Debts 1093-4w
Iraq, Education 1009w
Iraq, Food 1008-9w
Iraq, Frontiers 1106w
Iraq, Health services 705w
Iraq, Import duties 876w
Iraq, Laboratories 1008w
Iraq, Overseas aid 1011-2w
Iraq, Reconstruction 1008w, 1153w
Iraq, Water 1008w
Iraq conflict, Depleted uranium 1159w
Job grant 861w
Local government finance, Census 737w
Local government finance, Greater London 737w
Low incomes 908-10w, 1085-6w
Medical treatments, Overseas visitors 1296w
Moldova, Weapons 677w
Mortgages, Pensions 1095w
Overseas trade 878w
Pensions 912-3w
Pensions, Forecasts 914w
Pollution control 771w
Prescription drugs, Waste management 1286-7w
Provident societies 596w
Rents, Deposits 1029-30w, 1096w
Rwanda, Arms trade 679w
Sanctions 1114-5w
Secondment, Dept of Health 1347w
Smuggling, Meat 393-4w
Social Security Benefits Agency, Email 902w
United Nations, Peace keeping operations 679w
United Nations, Sanctions 1117-8w
Water, Pollution 636w, 780w

Garnier, Mr Edward
Chamber Debates
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1096
Iraq (09.09.03) 242, (10.09.03) 401, 407-8, 414-7
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 63
Questions
NHS, Theft 265-6w

Gas fired power stations
Langage 546w

Gatwick Airport
413w, 506-7w, 533-4w
Listed buildings 530w

GB Railways
First Group 277w

GCE A level
Languages 380-1w

GCE AS level
338w

Gender
Hospital wards 846w, 976-7w, 1322w

Gender Recognition Bill (Draft)
Questions
337-8w

General Agreement on Trade in Services
431-2w

General certificate of secondary education
381-2w, 449w
Languages 449w
Specialist schools 449w

General practitioners
192-3w
Buckinghamshire 1300w
Business premises 1297w
Contracts 193w, 1297w
Greater London 193w
Information technology 195-6w
Leicestershire 192w
Manpower 1285w
North East region 1318-9w
Northern Ireland Office 481w
Part-time employment 196-8w
Prescription drugs 330w
Recruitment 193-4w, 845w
Vacancies 194-5w, 717-8
Waiting lists 195w
Warrington 1303w
Wrekin 195w

General Service Medal
Suez 52w, 417-8w, 512w

General Teaching Council
119w

Genetically modified organisms
197w, 776-7w, 1297w
Acrylamide 365w
Church Commissioners 523w
Crops 308w, 387-8w, 1182-3w
Regulation 364-5w
Weedkillers 365w

Genetics
Databases 665w, 1224w

Genito-urinary medicine
1296-7w

George, Andrew
Westminster Hall Debates
Schools, Finance (17.09.03) 272-7wh, 285wh, 290wh, 293wh
Questions
Agricultural products 302w, 310w
Agricultural products, Imports 308-9w
Agricultural products, Labelling 155w
Agriculture, EC law 300w
Biotechnology 434w
Business questions 1084
Crops 293-4w
Farmers, Marketing 292w
Food 306-7w
Food, Balance of payments 280w
Food, Safety 293w
Food, Smuggling 293w
Fruit 294w
Iraq, Christianity 375w, 440-1w
Meat, Import controls 533w
Sheep, Bluetongue disease 1195w

George, Rt Hon Bruce
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 507-11

Georgia
International assistance 1017w

Gibb, Mr Nick
Questions
Acrylamide 629w
Afghanistan, Armed forces 343-4w, 947w

Gibb, Mr Nick—continued
Agriculture, Subsidies 1174-5w
Business, Languages 1075w
Farms, Maps 302w
GCE A level, Languages 380-1w
GCE AS level 338w
General certificate of secondary education 381-2w, 449w
Grant maintained schools, Inspections 451w
Literacy 551w
Middle East, Politics and government 1013-4w
National Academy for Gifted and Talented Youth 684w
National Foundation for Educational Research, Finance 130-1w
Pensioners, Income 343w
Pensioners, Means tested benefits 563-4w
Post offices, Urban areas 1061
Prisoners, Foreigners 1245-6w
Prisons, Overcrowding 1246w
Schools, Inspections 339w
Schools, Standards 448w
Secondary education, Teaching methods 1141-2w
Specialist schools 458
Specialist schools, General certificate of secondary education 449w
Stakeholder pensions 343w
Sub-Saharan Africa, Common agricultural policy 556w
Sub-Saharan Africa, Imports 764w
Sub-Saharan Africa, Trade agreements 1073-4w
Teachers, Citizenship 984-5w
Textiles, Common customs tariffs 763-4w

Gibson, Dr Ian
Westminster Hall Debates
Diabetes (09.09.03) 1-7wh, 21wh
Higher education (18.09.03) 314-6wh, 318wh, 327wh, 329-33wh, 341wh
Questions
Alzheimer's disease 1259-61w
Cancer 3-4w
Copyright 1072-3w
Health, Research 256w

Gidley, Sandra
Questions
Community care grants, Domestic violence 444w
Maternity leave 1068
Schools, Broadband 115w
Schools, Transport 124w
Standing Medical Advisory Committee 265w
UN Convention on the Rights of the Child 64w

Gifted children
129w, 1136w

Gillan, Mrs Cheryl
Chamber Debates
Aerials, Petitions (17.09.03) 1040
Schools, Petitions (17.09.03) 1041
Teachers (09.09.03) 248, 259-60
Questions
Care homes, Buckinghamshire 1301w
Dental services, Buckinghamshire 1299-300w
Devolution, Scotland 370w
Education, Assessments 459
Education, Buckinghamshire 793w
General practitioners, Buckinghamshire 1300w
Health, Scotland 370w
Health services, Buckinghamshire 1301-2w
Hospices, Buckinghamshire 1300w

Gillan, Mrs Cheryl—continued*
Literacy, Buckinghamshire 1138-9w
Personnel management, Dept of Trade and Industry 878w
Pre-school education, Buckinghamshire 1131w
Primary education, Buckinghamshire 793-4w
Schools, Buckinghamshire 985w
Serious Fraud Office, Secondment 469
Surgery, Buckinghamshire 1298-9w
Teachers, Buckinghamshire 1143-4w
Teachers, Redundancy 112w, 1148w

Gilroy, Linda
Questions
Afghanistan, Peace keeping operations 10-1

Gliding
Air force 416-7w

Gloucestershire
Adoption 1124w
Lung diseases 625w
Lymphoedema 621-2w
National insurance contributions 969w
Tax burden 969w

GNVQs
381-2w

Godsiff, Mr Roger
Questions
Asylum, Solicitors 56w
Cosmetic surgery, Qualifications 5w

Goggins, Paul, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Home Office*
Written Statements
Public protection panels 38-9ws
Racially aggravated offences, Sentencing 29ws
Restricted Patients' Advisory Board 43ws
Questions
Administration of justice, Standards 1221w, 1242w
Admissibility of evidence 1231-2w
Bailiffs 583w
Child prostitution 1211-2w
Coroners 1215-6w
Corporate manslaughter 1216w
Criminal Cases Review Commission 1218w
Criminal injuries compensation, Payments 585w
Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority 1218w
Detention and training orders 1250w
Drugs, Misuse 1227w
Intensive supervision and surveillance programme 1249w
Internet, Children 586w, 1210-1w, 1233w
Local criminal justice boards 1219-22w
National Probation Directorate 1247w
National Probation Service for England and Wales, Manpower 587-8w
Open prisons, Prisoner escapes 809w
Paedophilia, Criminal investigation 1241w
Paedophilia, Prisoners' release 1241w
Paedophilia, Sentencing 1240-1w
Pornography, Children 1239w
Prison Service, Vetting 585-6w
Prisoners, Foreigners 1245-6w
Prisons, Overcrowding 1244-6w
Prisons, Private sector 1246-7w
Reparation by offenders 588w
Sexual offences 1251w
Sexual offences, Convictions 1250-1w
Sexual offences, Public lavatories 1247-8w
Shoplifting, Romford 1217w

Goggins, Paul—continued*
Vetting, Care homes 1221-3w
Vetting, Voluntary organisations 1223w
Witnesses, Intimidation 1255-6w
Young offenders, Females 1217-8w
Youth Justice Board 63w
Youth Justice Board, Manpower 1256w

Gold and foreign exchange reserves
1092-3w

Goodman, Mr Paul
Questions
Community relations, Religion 586w
Flood control, Buckinghamshire 774w
Grammar schools, Admissions 461
Judges, Public appointments 158-9
National Lottery 531w
Northern Ireland government 395w
Secondary education, Buckinghamshire 986w
Ulster Scots language, Education 579w

Gosport
1026w

Governing bodies
NHS foundation trusts 189w
Schools 137-8w

Government
Information services 520-1w

Government art collection
531-2w

Government departments
Fees and charges 3-4ws
Fraud 653w
Translation services 1234w

Gowan, Douglas
(09.09.03) 53-60wh

Graffiti
807-8w, 1230w

Grammar schools
Admissions 461-2

Granada Television
Carlton Communications 1054-5

Grant maintained schools
Inspections 451w

Gray, Mr James
Questions
Housing, South West region 34w
Inland Revenue 103w
Inland Revenue, Contracts 95-6w
Inland Revenue, Pay 103-4w
Iraq conflict, Drinking water 42w
Iraq conflict, Uniforms 348w
Mongolia, Official visits 869w
Official hospitality, Home Office 57w
Official hospitality, Ministry of Defence 42w
Oshkosh tank transporters 47-9w
RAF Lyneham 351w, 1172w

Grayling, Chris
Chamber Debates
Horse racing (18.09.03) 1123, 1129-33
Iraq (08.09.03) 44
Teachers (09.09.03) 246
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 874
Westminster Hall Debates
Accident and emergency departments (10.09.03) 73wh, 86-9wh
Questions
Accident and emergency departments 155w
Accident and emergency departments, Admissions 272w
Accident and emergency departments, Waiting lists 1257w
Acrylamide 1282w

Grayling, Chris—continued*
Alcoholic drinks, Advertising 328w
Allergies 158w
Allergies, Clinics 158w
Allergies, Labelling 1259w
Allergies, Nuts 1258-9w
Allergies, Waiting lists 158w
Alzheimer's disease, Obesity 159w
Ambulance services, Emergency calls 184w
Ambulance services, Security 161w
Ambulance services, Standards 184-5w
Arthritis, Drugs 163w
Aviation, Security 689w, 761w
Biobank UK 1354-5w
Cancer, Health services 168-9w
Cholesterol 174w
Complementary medicine, Grants 159w
Cosmetic surgery, Standards 1274w
Dental health, Research 1274w
Diabetes 225w
Doctors, Working hours 273-4w
Drugs, Advertising 1319w
Ealing Hospital NHS Trust, Resignations 183w
East and North Hertfordshire NHS Trust, Waiting lists 183w
Food, Additives 188w, 1282-3w
Food, Advertising 1281w
Food, Hygiene 1293-4w
Food, Labelling 1294w
Food, Misleading advertising 1283w
Food, Safety 1292w
Food, Standards 1290w
Food poisoning 1291-2w
Food Standards Agency 1281-2w, 1294-5w
Fruit, Schools 223w
General practitioners, Information technology 195-6w
General practitioners, Prescription drugs 330w
Genetically modified organisms 197w, 776-7w, 1297w
Health, Research 256-7w
Health centres, Location 243w
Health centres, Manpower 243w
Health professions, Conditions of employment 254w
Health professions, Retirement 257w
Health professions, Standards 1304w
Health professions, Vacancies 975w
Health services, EC nationals 187w
Heart diseases 1274w
Heart diseases, Prescription drugs 377-8w
Heart diseases, Research 1273-4w
Herbal medicine, EC action 976w
Hormone replacement therapy 1308w
Horse racing 1053
Hospitals, Cleaning services 976w
Hospitals, Smoking 262w
Hospitals, Standards 836w
Hypertension 167w
Industrial health and safety, Stress 900w
Local exercise action programme 1313-4w
Locums, Expenditure 157w
Meat, Smuggling 1309-10w
Ministerial duties, Dept of Health 221-2w
NHS 1258w
NHS, Administration 850w
NHS, Ancillary staff 1331w
NHS, Equal opportunities 258w
NHS, Ethnic groups 226w
NHS, Executives 242w
NHS, Finance 242w
NHS, Fraud 233w, 1326w
NHS, Freedom of information 1311-2w
NHS, Industrial health and safety 226-7w
NHS, Information 1310-1w

Grayling, Chris—continued
NHS, Information technology 977w, 1310w, 1312w
NHS, Laboratories 219-20w, 1321-2w
NHS, Manpower 227-8w, 1332w
NHS, Pay 1329w
NHS, Wales 843
NHS Direct 237w
NHS Direct, Finance 237w
NHS Direct, Location 1326-8w
NHS Direct, Manpower 237-8w
NHS Direct, Nurses 236-7w
NHS foundation trusts 189w, 1295w
NHS foundation trusts, Finance 190w, 1295-6w
NHS foundation trusts, Governing bodies 189w
NHS foundation trusts, Recruitment 189w
Obesity 247-9w, 1280-1w, 1283w
Obesity, Surgery 1352-3w
Obesity Awareness and Solutions Trust 1284w
Official cars, Dept of Health 377w
Organic farming, Subsidies 925-6w
Pharmacy 328w
Prescriptions, Fees and charges 191-2w
Public sector, Fees and charges 853-4
Public transport, Crime prevention 762w
Salmonella, Eggs 1292-3w
Salt 258w
School meals 109-10w
Sex, Health services 229w
Slaughterhouses, Hygiene 1293w
Smoking 244w, 263-4w, 1349-51w
Smoking, Medical treatments 1349w
Smoking, Public places 262-3w
Smoking, Television 1350w
Sport and Physical Activity Board 1351-2w
Strokes, Death rate 94w
Strokes, Health services 266w
Sugar, Children 267w
Tobacco, Advertising 1349w
Tobacco, Belgium 1354w
Tobacco, Labelling 262w
Work permits, Information technology 946w

Greater London
Air pollution 373-4w
Ambulance services 159w, 185w, 859w
Care homes 617w
Emergency calls 159w
Family courts 446w
General practitioners 193w
Housing 962-3w
Local government finance 737w
NHS treatment centres 857
Obesity 851w
Olympic Games 334-5w, 526-8w, 576-8
Teachers 148-9w
Terrorism 409w
Tolls 373-4w, 422w
Transport (16.09.03) 175-95wh
Welfare tax credits 604-5w

Green, Mr Damian
Chamber Debates
Children (08.09.03) 24-6
Teachers (09.09.03) 245-52, 258-60
Questions
Children, Day care 116-8w
Children, Protection 1123w
Children and Families Directorate 1128w
Circulars, Dept for Education and Skills 135-7w, 680w
City academies 118w
Earned autonomy scheme 1131w
Education, Assessments 123w
"Every Child Matters" 116w
Family centres 124w

Green, Mr Damian—continued
Hedges and ditches 1025w
International baccalaureate 114-5w
Literacy, Primary education 139w
Literacy, Standards 985-6w
Primary education 131w
Pupil exclusions 381-2w, 687-8w
Pupil exclusions, Appeals 452w
Pupil exclusions, Ministerial powers 794w
Qualifications and Curriculum Authority 132-3w
Schools, Finance 120w
Special educational needs 141-2w
Teachers, Conditions of employment 796-7w
Teachers, Crimes of violence 148w
Teachers, Recruitment 454
Teachers, Redundancy 112w
Teachers, Vacancies 145-7w
University for Industry Learning and Skills Council for England, Finance 112-4w

Green, Matthew
Chamber Debates
Local Government Bill, Lords amendts (15.09.03) 601, 605, 610, 614-6, 639, 644, 647, 673, 679-80, 689
Westminster Hall Debates
Dental services (09.09.03) 32wh
Questions
Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995 611w

Grieve, Mr Dominic
Questions
Departmental responsibilities, Home Office 62w
Hearing impaired, Suicide 856w
Mental health services, Hearing impaired 848w

Griffiths, Jane
Chamber Debates
European Union (16.09.03) 815-6
Questions
Nagorno Karabakh 68w
Reading Station 279w

Griffiths, Nigel, Parliamentary Secretary, Dept of Trade and Industry
Questions
Arms trade 764w
Arms trade, EC countries 1166w
Arms trade, Export controls 72-3w, 1064-8w, 1074w
Arms trade, Indonesia 73-4w
Asbestos 639w
Construction, Standards 640w
Contracts, Dept of Trade and Industry 361-2w
Export controls 1068-9w
Export controls, USA 1069w
Industrial diseases, Compensation 546w
International Atomic Energy Agency 646w
New businesses, North East region 1078w
Personnel management, Dept of Trade and Industry 878w
Small businesses 77w, 1051-2
Small businesses, Finance 768w
Small businesses, Taxation 871-2w

Griffiths, Mr Win
Chamber Debates
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1098
Probate (15.09.03) 695-6
Questions
Children's centres 455-6

Griffiths, Mr Win—continued
Industrial diseases, Compensation 733w
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 44w
Public appointments, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 421w

Grogan, Mr John
Questions
BBC 581
Medical records 208-9w

Guard Service
Deployment 1171w

Gulf states
Air force 400w

Gummer, Rt Hon John
Chamber Debates
Local Government Bill, Lords amendts (17.09.03) 1022-4, 1027, 1033-6
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 872-3

Gurkhas
677-8w, 1164-5w, 1230-1w
Higher education 684w
Immigration rules 1231w

Hackney
Social security benefits 25-6ws

Haemophilia
718-20

Hague, Rt Hon William
Chamber Debates
European Union (09.09.03) 181
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1093-4

Hain, Rt Hon Peter, Leader of the House of Commons, Secretary of State for Wales and Lord Privy Seal
Chamber Debates
Intelligence and Security Committee, Points of order (11.09.03) 486
Written Statements
Opening of Parliament 56ws
Questions
Business statements 474-85, 1071-85
Debates, Reform 167-8
Economic growth, Wales 733w
Foreign investment in UK, Wales 848-9
Housing, Wales 733w
Independent Commission on Assembly Powers 363w
Legislation, Explanatory notes 455w
Manufacturing industries, Wales 845-7
Microsoft, Leader of the House of Commons 636w
Ministerial policy advisors, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 38w
Ministerial statements 36w
NHS, Wales 843-5
Official visits, Leader of the House of Commons 36w
Official visits, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 363-4w
Public appointments, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 421w
Public sector, Wales 849
Race relations, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 38w
Select committees, Pay 166-7
Times of sittings 369w, 636-7w
Timetabling of bills 169-70
Written questions, Disclosure of information 637w

Hall, Mr Mike
Questions
Chemicals, North West region 1071-2w

Hall, Mr Mike—continued*
"Public Bodies 2003" 502w

Hall, Patrick
Westminster Hall Debates
Yarls Wood Detention Centre (16.09.03) 198wh, 202wh

Hamilton, Mr Fabian
Questions
Cemeteries 197w
Cemeteries, Planning permission 35w

Hammond, Mr Philip
Chamber Debates
Local Government Bill, Lords amendts (15.09.03) 599-600, 601-12, 618-9, 624-8, 631, 633, 638-51, 654-5, 658-9, 660-4, 666-8, 670-4, 676-9, (17.09.03) 1024, 1026-30, 1034
Questions
Care Standards [illegible] 623w
Charter of Fundamental Rights (EU) 329-30
Fire services, Emergency calls 962w
Police, Firearms 1244w
Police, Weapons 1239w
Voluntary organisations 1254w
Voluntary organisations, Care homes 1339w
Voluntary organisations, Vetting 1223w

Hampshire
Courts 1033-5w

Hancock, Mr Mike
Questions
Adult education 686-7w
Agriculture, Regulation 919-20w
Aircraft carriers, Procurement 344w, 947w
Airguns 582w
Antisocial behaviour 1202-3w
Armed forces, Females 42-3w
Army, Drugs 344-5w
Army, Self-mutilation 701-2w
Astra Training Services 442w
Asylum 939w
Aviation 883w
British Sky Broadcasting 640w
BSE 286w
Care homes 1268w
Classroom assistants, South East region 118w
Community nurses 181w
Compulsory purchase 1023w
Conditions of employment, Age 425w
Construction, Manpower 34-5w
Countryside Agency 288-9w
Courts, Hampshire 1033-5w
Customs and Excise 99w
Customs and Excise, Southern region 98-9w, 654-5w
Deep vein thrombosis 505-6w, 1275-6w
Destroyers, Operating costs 346-7w
Dietary supplements 329-30w
Disability Bill (Draft) 974w
Disabled, Children 617-8w
Domestic violence 665w, 1225w
Domestic violence, Legal aid 337w
Electoral register 809-10w, 1032w
Export credit guarantees 302w
Extradition, Treaties 666w
Flood control 305w
Fluoride, Drinking water 775w
Genetically modified organisms, Regulation 364-5w
HMS Bridport 347w
HMS Dryad 415w
HMS Sheffield 950w
HMS St Albans 43w
Hospitals, Cleaning services 6w
Immigration Advisory Service 1039w

Hancock, Mr Mike—continued*
Iraq conflict, Accidents 515w
Land, Public sector 458w
Learning and Skills Council for England 982w
Learning and Skills Council for England, Finance 685w
Legal aid scheme, Ethnic groups 1037-8w
Lighters 937-8w
Livestock, Disease control 309w
Livestock, Waste disposal 777-8w
Location, Ministry of Defence 1158-9w
Maeer, Charmaine 702w
Mental Incapacity Bill (Draft) 332w
Ministry of Defence Police, Standards 415w
Modern apprenticeships 687w
Navy, Desertion 53w
Notifiable diseases 1333w
Older workers 693-4w
Older workers, Training 1142w
Older workers, Vocational guidance 794w
Organs, Donors 1336-7w
Patrol craft, Fisheries 706-7w
Police, Iraq 810-1w
Police, Secondment 671w
Ports, Orders and regulations 508w
Poultry, Trade competitiveness 1190-1w
Princess Royal Barracks 702-3w
Princess Royal Barracks, Drugs 345w
Prosthetics 624-5w
Reparation by offenders 588w
RFA Wave Ruler 50w
Roll-on roll-off ships 519w
Royal Parks Constabulary 649-50w
Rural areas, Broadband 387w
Rural areas, Housing 386w
Rural areas, Transport 311-2w
Rural Payments Agency, Standards 635w
Slaughterhouses 916w
Smuggling 1086-8w
St Mary's Hospital Portsmouth, Maternity services 204-5w
Teachers, Training 1148-9w
Type 23 frigates, Sonar 707w
Type 42 destroyers 703w
Water, South East region 965w
Water abstraction 1174w
Written questions, Administrative delays 1171w

Hare coursing
Northern Ireland 714w

Hares
Northern Ireland 470w, 719-20w

Harman, Rt Hon Harriet,*
Solicitor-General
Written Statements
Crown Prosecution Service, Manpower 50ws
Questions
Administration of justice 497-8w
Administration of justice, EC action 470-1
Administration of justice, Reform 780w
Children, Abuse 493w
Criminal proceedings 780w
Crown courts 498w
Crown Prosecution Service 493-7w
Crown Prosecution Service, Public appointments 495w, 781-2w
Crown Prosecution Service, Standards 780-1w, 999w
Domestic violence 497w, 999-1000w
Fraud, Small businesses 493w
Iraq conflict, Legal opinion 497w
Magistrates' courts 498-9w
Prosecutions, Sports 782w
Rape, Sentencing 472

Harman, Rt Hon Harriet—continued*
Serious Fraud Office, Prosecutions 469-72
Serious Fraud Office, Secondment 469
Trials, Mass media 498w
Witnesses, Payments 664w
Witnesses, Video recordings 499w

Harris, Dr Evan
Westminster Hall Debates
Accident and emergency departments (10.09.03) 83-6wh, 91wh
Dental services (09.09.03) 45-7wh
Questions
Accident and emergency departments, Waiting lists 835-6w
Antibiotics 1264-5w
Antibiotics, Drug resistance 1263w
Antibiotics, Urinary system 1264w
Babies 8w
Cancer, Health services 1267-8w
Church of England, Discrimination 585
Doctors' list of patients 844w
E coli 1287-8w
General practitioners, Business premises 1297w
General practitioners, Manpower 1285w
General practitioners, Recruitment 845w
Health professions, Foreign workers 1346w
Health professions, Student numbers 847w
Infectious diseases 5-6w
Junior doctors, Training 1312-4w
Maternity services, Consultants 7-8w
Mental health services, Advocacy 836-7w
Methicillin resistant staphylococcus aureus 1263-4w
Midwives, Manpower 221w
National Lottery, Sports 572
NHS, Email 849-50w
NHS, Emergencies 1288w
NHS, Finance 1329-30w
NHS, Private sector 708-9
NHS, Public appointments 1344w
NHS Professionals 240-2w
Nurses, Leave 850-1w
Nutrition 180-1w
Radiotherapy 1345-6w

Harris, Mr Tom
Chamber Debates
European Union (16.09.03) 781-2, 801, 808
Iraq (09.09.03) 204
Questions
Business questions 1084
Confiscation orders 1215w

Harrow
Dental services 838w
Prescriptions 838-9w
Social security benefits 20-1ws

Harvey, Nick
Questions
Arms trade 764w
National Lottery 24-5w
Prosecutions, Sports 782w

Haslar Prison
Asylum 1249w

Havering
Abortion 834-5w
Asylum 1205-6w
Fertility 844w
Hospitals 846w
Police 663-4w
Young offenders 1218w

Hawkins, Mr Nick
Questions
Labour Party 319-20

Hawkins, Mr Nick—continued*
Serious Fraud Office, Prosecutions 470
Terrorism, Cyprus 8-9

Hayes, Mr John
Questions
Agriculture, EC law 300-1w
Animal feed, Antibiotics 282-3w
Animal welfare 287w, 309w
Avian influenza 283-4w
Climate change, European Union 301w
Committees, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 296-9w
Common agricultural policy 299-300w
Common fisheries policy 299w
Convention on the Future of Europe 299w, 364w
EC internal trade 762w
EC law, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 292w
Fishing vessels 303-4w
Flood control 304w
Flood control, Lincolnshire 304-5w
Fluoride 305-6w
Food, Consumption 921w
Food, Procurement 284-5w, 290w
Food, Sales 290-1w
Foreign policy, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 291-2w
Genetically modified organisms, Crops 308w
Incinerators 314w
Livestock, Disease control 287-8w
Milk 922-6w
Nuclear submarines, Russia 72w
OSPAR Commission 309w
Radioactive wastes, EC action 365-6w
Risk assessment, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 310-1w
Sheep, Ear tagging 312w
Shellfish, Contamination 153w

Hazardous substances
Cynon Valley 841
Shipping 509-10w
Waste disposal 1183-4w

Heads of state
Assassination 1113-4w

Heald, Mr Oliver
Questions
Jobcentres, Advisory services 757-8w
Post office card account 700w
Teachers, Redundancy 143-4w

Healey, John, Economic Secretary, Treasury*
Written Statements
Census 3ws
Questions
Aggregates levy 95w
Aggregates levy, Northern Ireland 95w
Alcoholic drinks, Imports 455-6w
Census 393w
Civil servants, Treasury 106w
Computers, Treasury 597w
Customs 862w
Customs and Excise 99w
Customs and Excise, Expenditure 316w
Customs and Excise, Plymouth 99w
Customs and Excise, Seized articles 99w
Customs and Excise, South West region 966-7w
Customs and Excise, Southern region 98-9w, 654-5w
Debts, Civil proceedings 864w
Energy, Conservation 862w
Excise duties, Biofuels 102w
Excise duties, Motor vehicles 969-70w
Excise duties, Petrol alternatives 968w
Job grant 861w
Manpower, Treasury 1087-8w

Healey, John—continued*
Microsoft, Treasury 1094-5w
Poverty, Developing countries 457w
Property, Developing countries 598w
Rents, Deposits 1096w
Smuggling 1086-8w
Smuggling, Meat 393-4w, 602w, 922w
Stamp duty reserve tax 864w
Standards, Treasury 968-9w
Taxation, Aviation 653-4w, 859w
Taxation, Lorries 1101w
Taxation, Transport 969w
Tobacco, Imports 393w, 456w
Travel, Treasury 100w
VAT, Churches 969w
VAT, Housing 102-3w
VAT exemptions, Historic buildings 866w
Written questions, Treasury 656w

Health
Asians 1265w
Aviation 858
Conferences 975w
Low flying 1314w
Research 256-7w
Scotland 370w

Health action zones
197-8w

Health and Safety Executive
899-900w
Finance 900w
Manpower 899w

Health and Social Care in Wales Review
734w

Health centres
242w
Location 243w
Manpower 243w

Health education
Cholesterol 376-7w
Endometriosis 185-6w
Sex 231w

Health insurance
710

Health professions
Conditions of employment 254w
Essex 220-1w
Foreign workers 1346w
Leicestershire 255w
Manpower 1344w
Mental health services 847-8w
Negligence 255w
Northern Ireland Office 482w
Pay 11w
Retirement 257w
Security 153-4w
Standards 1304w
Student numbers 847w
Tolls 176w
Uniforms 6w
Vacancies 975w

Health Protection Agency
Finance 618w
Laboratories 219-20w

Health services
Afghanistan 554-5w, 888w
Armed forces 1-2w, 707w
Buckinghamshire 1301-2w
Cancer 168-9w, 1267-8w
EC nationals 187w
Elderly 1334-6w
Homelessness 257-8w, 845-6w
Iraq 705w
Learning disability 621w
Merseyside 1298w
North East region 1325w

Health services—continued*
Northern Ireland 470w, 712w, 714w, 815w
Paddington 177w, 706
Romford 845w
Security 154-5w
Sex 26ws, 229-30w, 1347-8w
Shropshire 239w
Sleeping rough 12w
Strokes 266-7w
Terrorism 1303-4w
Wales 37w, 362-3w

Health visitors
Worcestershire 619w, 1304w

Hearing impaired
Film 525-6w
Mental health services 848w
Specialist schools 550w
Suicide 856w

Heart diseases
177w, 1274w
Northern Ireland 819-20w
Prescription drugs 377-8w
Preventive medicine 1340w
Research 1273-4w
Surgery 199w

Heath, Mr David
Chamber Debates
Elderly (10.09.03) 384
European Union (16.09.03) 806
Iraq (10.09.03) 420-3
Local Government Bill, Lords amendts (15.09.03) 652, 674-5, 678
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 57-8
Westminster Hall Debates
Police (16.09.03) 217-20wh
Questions
Education, Finance 468-9
European fighter aircraft 2-3
Judges, Public appointments 159
Pharmacy 716-7
Small businesses, Taxation 871-2w

Heathcoat-Amory, Rt Hon David
Chamber Debates
European Union (09.09.03) 182-3, (16.09.03) 791, 793, 795-6, 802
Questions
Economic and monetary union, Advisory bodies 1088-91w
Economic and monetary union, Public participation 1091-2w
Palace of Westminster, Repairs and maintenance 424w
Regional government 613-4w
UK trade with EC 1113w

Hedges and ditches
1025w

Helicopters
Military aircraft 746w

Henderson, Mr Doug
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 518-21

Henderson, Mr Ivan
Questions
Abandoned vehicles 770w
Chechnya 590w
Democratic Republic of Congo 675w
Flood control, Tendring 928w
Graffiti 807-8w
Railway stations, Disabled 692w

Hendrick, Mr Mark
Chamber Debates
Electricity (16.09.03) 756, 761
European Union (16.09.03) 805, 808, 813-4

Hendrick, Mr Mark—continued
Iraq (10.09.03) 412

Hendry, Mr Charles
Chamber Debates
Teachers (09.09.03) 288-91
Questions
Connexions Service 119w, 1129-30w
Education, Assessments 460
Endometriosis, Complementary medicine 186w
Hospices, Finance 1306w
Schools, Intimidation 139w

Hepatitis
199w
Prisoners 423w

Hepburn, Mr Stephen
Questions
Athletics, North East region 574
Autism, Tyne and Wear 1125-6w
Dental health, Children 626-8w, 856-8w
Dental services 850w
Dental services, North East region 623-4w
Diabetes 841-2w
Fines 1038w
Fines, North East region 1038w
Health services, North East region 1325w
Homelessness 738-9w
Homelessness, North East region 1025-6w
Homelessness, Temporary accommodation 738w
New businesses, North East region 1078-80w
Nurses, North East region 1318-9w
Teachers, Physical education 421-2w

Herbal medicine
EC action 976w

Hercules aircraft
Sales 1165w

Hermon, Lady
Chamber Debates
Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission Etc) Bill (HL), Allocation of time motion, 2R and rem stages (17.09.03) 977
Questions
Ambulance services, Northern Ireland 492w, 708w
Arthritis, Northern Ireland 727w
Bangor Hospital Co Down 708w
Belfast City Airport 708-9w
Bluetongue disease 916w
Broadband, Northern Ireland 709w
Children, Maintenance 710w
Conservation areas, Northern Ireland 465w
Courts, Clothing 753w
Crime (International Co-operation) Bill (HL) 2002/03, Northern Ireland 711w
Democratic Republic of Congo, Human rights 675w
District policing partnerships, Northern Ireland 723-4w
Health services, Northern Ireland 712w
Homicide, Northern Ireland 474w
Iraq, Marsh Arabs 1009w
Liberia 676w
Motor vehicles, Northern Ireland 832-3w
Organised Crime Task Force, Finance 723w
Police Service of Northern Ireland, Recruitment 723w
Prisoners, Suicide 726w
Recycling, Northern Ireland 726-7w
Teachers, Northern Ireland 831w

Hermon, Lady—continued
VAT exemptions, Historic buildings 866w
Water, Conservation 833w
Water, Northern Ireland 834w
Water Bill (HL) 2002/03, Northern Ireland 833w

Hertfordshire
Adult education 550-1w

Hesford, Stephen
Chamber Debates
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 71, 111, 113-4
Questions
EC enlargement, Immigration 593w
Nurses, Training 851w

Hewitt, Rt Hon Ms Patricia*, Secretary of State for Trade and Industry*
Chamber Debates
World Trade Organisation, Ministerial statements (17.09.03) 861-76
Written Statements
British Energy 62-3ws
EC regional policy 53-6ws
Regional development agencies, Public appointments 8-9ws
Questions
Asbestos, Dept of Trade and Industry 1069w
Business, Languages 1075w
Business, Regulation 767w
Carlton Communications, Granada Television 1054-5
Computers, Dept of Trade and Industry 763w, 765w
Copyright 1072-3w
Equal pay 993w
Fees and charges, Dept of Trade and Industry 435w
Females, Income 1070
Females, Information technology 870w
Females, Public appointments 762w
General Agreement on Trade in Services 431-2w
Imports, Sub-Saharan Africa 764w
Iraq, Reconstruction 876w
Manufacturing Advisory Service 871-2w
Maternity leave 1067-8
Music, Internet 873w
Nanotechnology 359w, 766w
Near Earth Objects Task Force 1075-6w
Official visits, Dept of Trade and Industry 76w
Productivity 766-7w
Regional planning and development, Warrington 877-8w
Safeway 767w
Science, Research 1150w
Technology, Government assistance 362w
Trade 769w
Trade agreements, Developing countries 875w, 1055-6
Travel, Dept of Trade and Industry 74w
World Trade Organisation 768-9w, 880-2w
Written questions, Dept of Trade and Industry 878w
Written questions, Minister for Women 870w

Heyes, Mark
1357-8w

High court
397w

High Hedges (No 2) Bill 2002/03
Questions
859-60

Higher civil servants
Vetting 519-20w

Higher education
(18.09.03) 311-56wh
Admissions 553-4w, 797w, 1145w
Animal experiments 551w
Bureaucracy 982w
Burma 989w
Gurkhas 684w
Research 449-50w, 1150w
Wales 338-9w

Hill, Keith*, Minister of State for Housing and Planning, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister*
Westminster Hall Debates
Housing, South West region (09.09.03) 65-8wh
Written Statements
Housing Corporation 45ws
Planning, Rural areas 37ws
Regional planning and development, West Midlands 29-31ws
Questions
Alconbury airfield 608w
Cemeteries, Planning permission 35w
Compulsory purchase 1023w
Construction, Manpower 34-5w
Council housing 608-9w, 742-3w
Council housing, Finance 608w, 742w, 963w, 1026w
Council housing, Property transfer 740-1w, 1023-4w
Council housing, Standards 743w
Council housing, Thames Gateway 739w
Council tax 612w
EC law, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister 35w
Environmental impact assessment, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister 319-20w
Gangmasters 743w
Hedges and ditches 1025w
Home loss payments 632w
Homelessness 35-6w
Housing, Construction 963w
Housing, Greater London 962-3w
Housing, Low incomes 611w, 633w, 739-40w
Housing, Sewers 611-2w
Housing, South East region 459-60w
Housing, South West region 34w
Housing, Thames Gateway 461-2w
Housing associations, Standards 741-2w
Housing estates 1026w
Land, Public sector 458w
Local government, Manpower 36w
Planning obligations 612-3w
Planning permission 1029w
Playing fields, Sales 633w
Regeneration, Finance 461w
Regional planning and development, EC grants and loans 460-1w
Rents, Deposits 1029-30w
Sunderland Football Club, Planning permission 320w
Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995 611w
Water, South East region 965w

Hinchliffe, Mr David
Questions
NHS, Private sector 709

Hip replacements
200w, 975w

Historic buildings
VAT exemptions 866w

HIV infection
200-1w, 1306w

HIV infection—continued*
Developing countries 888-9w
Ethiopia 83w
Overseas aid 1014-5w
Screening 173w, 200w
South Africa 896-7w

HM Customs and Excise
see Customs and Excise

HM Prison Service
see Prison Service

HMS Bridport
347w

HMS Daedalus
1157w, 1208w

HMS Dryad
415w

HMS Sheffield
950w

HMS St Albans
43w

Hoaxes and false alarms
939-40w

Hoban, Mr Mark
Questions
Anaesthetics, Consultants 1262w
Armed forces, Health services 1-2w
Cohabitation, Registration 545w
Intensive care, Death rate 1340w
Surgery, Death rate 854w, 1340-1w

Hodge, Margaret, Minister of State for Children Young People and Families, Dept for Education and Skills*
Questions
Adoption, Gloucestershire 1124w
Autism, Tyne and Wear 1125-6w
Children, Asylum 1123w
Children, Corporal punishment 1132-3w
Children, Day care 1049w, 1121-2w
Children, Death 1127w
Children, Departmental responsibilities 1127w
Children, Protection 1122-3w, 1126-7w
Children, Social services 447w
Children and Families Directorate 1128w
Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service 1126w
Children and Young People's Unit, Scotland 1127-8w
Children's centres 447w, 455-7
Connexions Service 119w, 982-4w, 1129-30w
Domestic violence, Administration of justice 1035-6w
Foster care 1133-4w
Pre-school education, Buckinghamshire 1131w
Schools, Libraries 138w
Schools, Standards 138w
Special educational needs 141-2w
Sure start programme, Birkenhead 1146-7w
Sure start programme, North East region 1147w
Sure start programme, Standards 1147w
Teenage pregnancy 1149w

Hoey, Miss Kate
Chamber Debates
European Union (09.09.03) 182
Questions
Northern Ireland Cycling Federation, Finance 579w
Playing fields 27w
Public inquiries, Mallusk 473-4w
Recreation spaces, Planning 460w
Schools, Playing fields 1143w

Hoey, Miss Kate—continued*
Sports, Northern Ireland 728w

Holidays
Misleading advertising 876w
Social security benefits 906w

Holmes, Paul
Questions
Children, Maintenance 19-20w
Disability living allowance, Fraud 905w
Employment, Learning disability 561-3w, 907-8w
Further education, Finance 125-9w
Further education, National insurance contributions 126w
New deal for young people 910-2w
New deal schemes 696w
Teachers, Redundancy 112w

Home accident surveillance system
432w

Home helps
Northern Ireland 471w

Home information packs
Northern Ireland 713-4w

Home loss payments
632w

Home Office
Departmental responsibilities 62w
Identity cards 805w
Information technology 59w
Internet 57w
Labour turnover 57w
Manpower 1213w
Microsoft 1236w
Official hospitality 57w
Sites of special scientific interest 812w
Written questions 1241w

Home visits
Social security benefits 901w

Homelessness
35-6w, 738-9w
Health services 257-8w, 845-6w
Mental health services 214w
North East region 738w, 1025-6w
Temporary accommodation 738w

Homicide
Londonderry 729-30w
Northern Ireland 474w

Homosexuality
Local Government Act 1988 452-3w

Hood, Mr Jimmy
Chamber Debates
European Union (09.09.03) 178-9
Iraq (09.09.03) 207-9

Hoon, Geoffrey
320-1

Hoon, Rt Hon Geoffrey, Secretary of State for Defence*
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 491-503
Iraq (09.09.03) 192, 196-203
Written Statements
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 2-3ws
Trident 1ws
Questions
Afghanistan, Peace keeping operations 10-1, 511w
Armed forces 12-4
Armed forces, Deployment 52w
Bosnia, Peace keeping operations 702w
David Kelly Death Inquiry 350-1w, 399-400w
David Kelly Death Inquiry, Disclosure of information 347w
Depleted uranium 347-8w

Hoon, Rt Hon Geoffrey—continued*
European fighter aircraft 1-3
Higher civil servants, Vetting 519-20w
Iraq, Casualties 1151w
Iraq, Frontiers 44w
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 3-8, 18-20
Iraq, Reconstruction 1151-2w
Iraq conflict, Accidents 45-6w
Iraq conflict, Prisoners of war 750w
Kelly, David 332w, 704-5w
Official secrets 517w
Rapid reaction forces, EC countries 43w

Hope, Phil, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister*
Chamber Debates
Local Government Bill, Lords amendts (15.09.03) 607, 611, 648, 650-4, 659-60, 662, 669-70, 676-80, (17.09.03) 1029
Questions
Absent voting 614-5w
Climate change 961w
Disabled, Access 1021-2w
Fire extinguishers 610-1w
Housing, Construction 613w
Housing, Warranties 1023w
Local government, Absent voting 964w
Public sector, Contracts 610w

Hopkins, Mr Kelvin
Westminster Hall Debates
Higher education (18.09.03) 316wh
Questions
Jean Monnet action 129-30w

Horam, Mr John
Chamber Debates
Elderly (10.09.03) 336
Local Government Bill, Lords amendts (15.09.03) 650
Teachers (09.09.03) 254
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 57
Westminster Hall Debates
Schools, Finance (17.09.03) 273wh
Transport, Greater London (16.09.03) 180-2wh
Questions
Environmental impact assessment, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 23-4w
Environmental impact assessment, Northern Ireland Office 570w
Environmental impact assessment, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister 319-20w
Queen Mary's Sidcup Hospital NHS Trust, Parking 979w

Hormone replacement therapy
1308w

Hormone treatments
Northern Ireland 714w

Horse racing
529w, 1053-4, (18.09.03) 1123-38

Horses
Northern Ireland 574-5w
Transport 1176w

Hospices
Buckinghamshire 1300w
Finance 201w, 1306w

Hospital beds
233w, 617w, 858, 975w, 1312w
Wales 734w, 847

Hospital wards
156w, 1333w
Broomfield Hospital 168w
Gender 846w, 976-7w, 1322w

Hospitals
240w
Admissions 272w, 853-4w

Hospitals—continued*
Birth rate 1316w
Cleaning services 6w, 976w, 1358w
Construction 202-3w, 223-5w, 630-1w
Consultants 630w
Empty property 625-6w
Food 1289w
Havering 846w
Infectious diseases 630w, 1306-7w, 1310w
Negligence 849w
Northern Ireland 714w, 819-21w
Northern region 1338-9w
Norwich 262w
Police 978w
Shropshire 1316w
Smoking 262w
Standards 201-2w, 630w, 836w, 843w
Waiting lists 13w, 177w, 232w, 271w, 334w, 846w, 980-1w

Hostages
Colombia 1105w

House of Commons
Recycling 500-1w

House of Commons Modernisation Select Committee see Modernisation of the House of Commons Select Committee

House of Lords
Ministerial statements (18.09.03) 1086-104
Reform 163-4

Housing
Armed forces 39-40w, 45w
Asylum 583-4w, 1201-2w, 1208w
Construction 613w, 963w
Easington (09.09.03) 303-10
Greater London 962-3w
Judges 1040-3w
Low incomes 611w, 633w, 739-40w
Rural areas 386w, 1192w
Sales 603w
Sewers 611-2w
South East region 459-60w
South West region 34w, (09.09.03) 61-8wh
Thames Gateway 461-2w
VAT 102-3w
Wales 733w
Warranties 1023w

Housing associations
Standards 741-2w

Housing benefit
445w
Administrative delays 963w
Computer software 445w
Swale 445w

Housing Corporation
45ws

Housing estates
1026w

Housing improvement
Income support 907w

Howarth, Rt Hon Alan
Westminster Hall Debates
Higher education (18.09.03) 323-9wh, 342-3wh
Questions
Students, Fees and charges 858

Howarth, Mr George
Chamber Debates
Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission Etc) Bill (HL), Allocation of time motion, 2R and rem stages (17.09.03) 894

Howarth, Mr George—continued*
Questions
Business questions 1074-5

Howarth, Mr Gerald
Questions
Afghanistan, Armed forces 1106-7w
Air force, Training 1171-2w
Armed forces, Logistics 952w
Armoured fighting vehicles 1154w, 1163w
Armoured fighting vehicles, Procurement 949-50w
Arms trade, EC countries 1165-6w, 1172w
Arms trade, USA 1165w
Bosnia, Peace keeping operations 1155w
Defence, Research 1172w
Defence equipment 1170w
EC defence policy 1160w
Guard Service, Deployment 1171w
Iraq, Reconstruction 1151w
Iraq, Weapons 521w
Military police, Procurement 1170w
Terrorism 994w
Terrorism, Cyprus 9
Vehicles, Ministry of Defence 1153-4w

Howells, Dr Kim, Minister for Transport, Dept for Transport*
Chamber Debates
Electricity (16.09.03) 749, 751, 753, 767-72
Questions
Aviation 412-3w
Biofuels 689w
Exhaust emissions 691w
Gatwick Airport 413w, 506-7w
London airports 412w
London airports, Parking 506w
Railways, Finance 411w
Railways, Franchises 410-1w
Redhill Aerodrome 413-4w
Roads, Accidents 411w
Roads, Lighting 1063-4w

Hoyle, Mr Lindsay
Questions
Aircraft carriers 512w
Bosnia, Peace keeping operations 41w
Child tax credit, Chorley 394w
Defence equipment, Procurement 513w
Dental services, Chorley 235w
European fighter aircraft, Aircraft carriers 512w
Freedom of information, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 307w
Freedom of information, Northern Ireland Office 569w
Joint strike fighter aircraft 705w
Postal services, Trade unions 547-8w
Postal services, VAT 361w
Royal Mail, Consultants 548w
School milk 124w
Sports 31w

Hughes, Rt Hon Beverley, Minister of State, Home Office*
Westminster Hall Debates
Entry clearances, Married people (17.09.03) 267-71wh
Yarls Wood Detention Centre (16.09.03) 200-4wh
Questions
Asylum 934-9w, 1207-8w
Asylum, Administrative delays 1206-7w
Asylum, Appeals 1208w
Asylum, Applications 933-4w, 1207-8w
Asylum, Children 420w, 798-9w, 933-4w, 937w
Asylum, Community development 798w
Asylum, Crime 1206w

Hughes, Rt Hon Beverley—continued*
Asylum, Custodial treatment 63w
Asylum, Deportation 1209w
Asylum, Documents 941-2w
Asylum, Haslar Prison 1249w
Asylum, Havering 1205-6w
Asylum, Housing 583-4w, 1201-2w, 1208w
Asylum, Northern Ireland 55w
Asylum, Solicitors 56w
Asylum, Somalia 584-5w
Asylum, Turkey 799w
Berezovsky, Boris 1207w
British citizenship, Applications 1212-3w
Child prostitution 1212w
Dungavel Detention Centre, Children 1227w
Entry clearances, Fees and charges 943-4w
Entry clearances, Overseas students 808-9w, 1240w
Entry clearances, Security 1241-2w
Entry clearances, Slovakia 945w
Gurkhas 1230-1w
Human trafficking 1247w
Human trafficking, Children 803-5w
Human trafficking, Females 993-4w
Human trafficking, West Sussex 588-9w
Identity cards, Home Office 805w
Immigrants, Detainees 667w
Immigrants, Scotland 940w
Immigrants, Taxation 1237w
Immigration 1237-8w
Immigration, Appeals 1232-3w
Immigration, Crime 1232w
Immigration, Death 1237w
Immigration and Nationality Directorate 940w
Immigration and Nationality Directorate, Manpower 798w
Immigration and Nationality Directorate, Scotland 940w
Immigration and Nationality Directorate, Theft 940-1w
Immigration controls 941w, 944-5w
Immigration rules, Gurkhas 1231w
Members, Correspondence 56w, 1216w, 1227-8w
Passport Office 806w
Passports, Applications 587w
Passports, Fraud 945w
Peacock, Nataliya 1208-9w
Prisoners, Deportation 1228w
Seasonal agricultural workers' scheme 1250w
Translation services, Government departments 1234w
United Kingdom Passport Service, Manpower 812w
Work permits, Football 812-3w
Work permits, Information technology 946w
Yarls Wood Detention Centre 1256w
Yarls Wood Detention Centre, Fires 946-7w

Hughes, Mr Kevin Michael
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 494
Electricity (16.09.03) 727-8, 733-5
Questions
Coal, Government assistance 871w

Hughes, Simon
Questions
Batten's disease 1266w
Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service 1126w
Crime 1217w
Entry clearances, Fees and charges 943-4w

Hughes, Simon—continued
National Probation Directorate 1247w
Theft, Cellular phones 667-8w

Human embryo experiments
1309w

Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority
Codes of practice 1308-9w

Human Fertilisation and Embryology (Deceased Fathers) Bill 2002/03
Chamber Debates
Royal Assent (18.09.03) 1122

Human rights
Burma 989w
Colombia 67w
Democratic Republic of Congo 675w
Standards in Scotlands Schools etc Act 2000 (SP) 157
Sudan 1116w
Tibet 322w, 596w
Uganda 678w

Human Rights Act 1998
Questions
666w

Human Rights Commission of Northern Ireland
see Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission

Human trafficking
1247w
Children 803-5w
Females 993-4w
West Sussex 588-9w

Hume, Mr John
Questions
Autism, Northern Ireland 813-4w
Causeway HSS Trust, Termination of employment 568w
Northern Ireland government 315
Northern Ireland Strategic Investment Board 489w
Water, Northern Ireland 730-2w

Hunter, Mr Andrew
Chamber Debates
Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission Etc) Bill (HL), Allocation of time motion, 2R and rem stages (17.09.03) 902, 972-4

Hunting Bill 2002/03
Questions
388w, 1080

Hutton, Rt Hon John, Minister of State, Dept of Health*
Chamber Debates
Royal Naval Hospital Haslar (16.09.03) 833-6
Written Statements
NHS, Pensions 52ws
Questions
Abortion, Havering 834-5w
Accident and emergency departments, EC law 273w
Acupuncture 1257-8w
Agency nurses 246w
Agency nurses, Expenditure 157w
Agency nurses, Foreign workers 1337-8w
Allergies 158w
Ambulance services, Greater London 159w, 185w, 859w
Anaesthetics, Consultants 1262w
Ashford Hospital 1265w
Atkinson Morley's Hospital, Land use 631w
Cancer 169-70w
Cancer, Health services 168-9w

Hutton, Rt Hon John—continued
Cancer, Pathology 1305-6w
Civil service agencies, Dept of Health 970w
Community nurses 181w
Computers, Dept of Health 972-3w
Cosmetic surgery, Qualifications 5w
Cosmetic surgery, Standards 1274w
Deep vein thrombosis, Pregnant women 970w
Dental services, Brent 838w
Dept of Health 179w
Disabled, Public participation 631w
Doctors, Manpower 182w
Doctors, Recruitment 176w
Doctors, Vacancies 177w
Doctors, Working hours 273-4w, 1328-9w
Doctors' list of patients 844w
Drugs, Misuse 842-3w
Drugs, Rehabilitation 1286w
Eyesight, Surgery 186w
Fertility, Havering 844w
Food, Dept of Health 1289-90w
Fractures 331w
General practitioners 192-3w
General practitioners, Business premises 1297w
General practitioners, Contracts 193w, 1297w
General practitioners, Greater London 193w
General practitioners, Information technology 195-6w
General practitioners, Manpower 1285w
General practitioners, Part-time employment 196-8w
General practitioners, Recruitment 193-4w, 845w
General practitioners, Vacancies 194-5w, 717-8
Health, Conferences 975w
Health action zones 197-8w
Health centres 242w
Health centres, Location 243w
Health centres, Manpower 243w
Health professions, Conditions of employment 254w
Health professions, Foreign workers 1346w
Health professions, Retirement 257w
Health professions, Security 153-4w
Health professions, Standards 1304w
Health professions, Student numbers 847w
Health professions, Tolls 176w
Health professions, Uniforms 6w
Health professions, Vacancies 975w
Health services, EC nationals 187w
Health services, Homelessness 257-8w, 845-6w
Health services, North East region 1325w
Health services, Paddington 177w, 706
Health services, Romford 845w
Health services, Security 154-5w
Health services, Sleeping rough 12w
Health services, Terrorism 1303-4w
Hip replacements 200w, 975w
Hospital beds 233w, 975w
Hospital wards 156w, 1333w
Hospital wards, Gender 976-7w
Hospitals 240w
Hospitals, Admissions 272w
Hospitals, Cleaning services 6w, 976w
Hospitals, Construction 202-3w, 223-5w, 630-1w
Hospitals, Consultants 630w
Hospitals, Empty property 625-6w
Hospitals, Food 1289w
Hospitals, Negligence 849w
Hospitals, Northern region 1338-9w

Hutton, Rt Hon John—continued
Hospitals, Police 978w
Hospitals, Standards 630w, 836w, 843w
Hospitals, Waiting lists 13w, 177w, 271w, 334w, 846w, 980-1w
Infectious diseases 5-6w
Information technology, Dept of Health 203w
Intensive care, Death rate 1340w
Junior doctors, Training 1312-4w
Junior doctors, Working hours 182w
Locums 203-4w
Locums, Expenditure 157w
Manpower, Dept of Health 971w
Medical treatments, Overseas visitors 1296w
Medical treatments, Research 978w
Medical treatments abroad 167w, 231-2w, 250w
Mid Essex Hospital Services NHS Trust, Waiting lists 252w
Midwives 1316-7w, 1322w
Midwives, Administration 1266w
Midwives, Manpower 7w, 207w, 221w
Midwives, Pay 207-8w
Neurology, Manpower 10-1w
NHS 1258w, 1334w
NHS, Administration 850w
NHS, Ancillary staff 228w, 1331w
NHS, Bureaucracy 839w
NHS, Disclosure of information 243-4w, 1357w
NHS, Email 849-50w
NHS, Emergencies 1288w
NHS, Equal opportunities 258w
NHS, Ethnic groups 225-6w
NHS, Executives 242w
NHS, Fees and charges 977w
NHS, Finance 239w, 242w, 1329-30w
NHS, Fraud 233w, 238w, 1326w
NHS, Industrial health and safety 226-7w
NHS, Information 1310-1w
NHS, Information technology 977w, 1310w, 1312w
NHS, Management 1330-2w
NHS, Managers 227-8w
NHS, Manpower 227-8w, 1332w
NHS, Pay 11w, 242w, 327-8w, 980w, 1329w, 1352w
NHS, Pensions 1329-30w
NHS, Private sector 708-10
NHS, Racial harassment 255-6w
NHS, Recruitment 240w, 1323-4w
NHS, Redundancy 256w
NHS, Reform 1296w
NHS, Stress 229w
NHS, Theft 265-6w
NHS, Transport 1298w
NHS foundation trusts 189-90w, 846w, 1295w
NHS foundation trusts, Finance 190w, 1295-6w
NHS foundation trusts, Governing bodies 189w
NHS foundation trusts, Recruitment 189w
NHS foundation trusts, Regulation 189-90w
NHS foundation trusts, Standards 190w
NHS Professionals 240-2w
NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency 255w
NHS treatment centres 973-4w, 1279-80w
NHS treatment centres, Fees and charges 180w
NHS treatment centres, Manpower 179-80w
NHS treatment centres, Medical treatments 180w
Nurses, Age 245w

Hutton, Rt Hon John—continued
Nurses, Family practitioner services 246-7w
Nurses, Foreign workers 246w
Nurses, Leave 850-1w
Nurses, Manpower 245w, 629w
Nurses, North East region 1318-9w
Nurses, Recruitment 850-2w
Nurses, Schools 1342w
Nurses, Training 246w, 851w, 1303w, 1333w
Obesity, Greater London 851w
Obesity, Surgery 1352-3w, 1357w
Ophthalmic services, Fees and charges 1336w
Out-patients 1337w
Pain 1272w
Pain, Medical treatments 251w
Pathology, Consultants 845w
Patients, British nationality 252-3w
Patients, Death 252w
Patients, Foreigners 852w
Pay beds 254w
Prescription drugs, Children 1286w
Prescriptions 855-6w
Prescriptions, Brent 838-9w
Prescriptions, Finance 855w
Primary care trusts, Finance 1341w
Primary care trusts, Recruitment 240w
Queen Mary's Sidcup Hospital NHS Trust, Parking 979w
Radiography, Manpower 12w
Radiotherapy 1345-6w
Sex, Health services 229w
Smallpox, Contracts 13w
Southend Hospital, Nurses 1334w
Standing Medical Advisory Committee 265w
Surgery, Administrative delays 1266-7w
Surgery, Costs 250w, 1336w
Surgery, Death rate 1340-1w
Surgery, Waiting lists 250w, 272w, 972w, 1338w

Hutton Inquiry
see David Kelly Death Inquiry

Hydrography
Navy 43w

Hygiene
Food 1293-4w
Slaughterhouses 1293w

Hyperactivity
218-9w, 1265w
Drugs 218-9w
Social security benefits 970-2w

Hypertension
167w

Hypothermia
1338w

Iceland
Whales 918w

Iddon, Dr Brian
Chamber Debates
Local Government Bill, Lords amendts (17.09.03) 1027, 1036
Questions
Business questions 1079-80
Members, Correspondence 1216w
Students, Fees and charges 465-6

Identity cards
Home Office 805w

Illsley, Mr Eric
Questions
General practitioners, Vacancies 717-8
Theatre, Finance 573
War pensions, Incapacity benefit 340w, 355w

Imitation guns
582w

Immigrants
Detainees 667w
Scotland 940w
Taxation 1237w

Immigration
1237-8w
Appeals 1232-3w
Crime 1232w
Death 1237w
EC enlargement 593w
Infectious diseases 376w, 1310w
Legal aid 606w
Legal aid scheme 1043w
Police 1232w

Immigration Advisory Service
1039w

Immigration and Asylum Act 1999
Questions
583-4w

Immigration and Nationality Directorate
940w
Manpower 798w
Scotland 940w
Theft 940-1w

Immigration Appellate Authorities
34w

Immigration controls
941w, 944-5w

Immigration rules
Gurkhas 1231w

Import controls
546w
Meat 533w

Import duties
Fruit 540-2w, 1182w
Iraq 876w
Vegetables 540-2w, 1182w

Imports
Agricultural products 308-9w
Alcoholic drinks 455-6w
Livestock 1195-6w
Phytophthora ramorum 927w
Sub-Saharan Africa 764w
Tobacco 393w, 456w

"Improving the Delivery of Cross Departmental Support and Services for Veterans"
51ws

Incapacity benefit
695w
Appeals 342w
Employment tribunals 1050-1w
War pensions 340w, 355w

Incinerators
314w
Agriculture 312-4w

Income support
Housing improvement 907w
Pensioners 21w, 696w, 699-700w

Income tax
862-3w, 967-8w, 1103-4w
Cellular phones 863w
Pensioners 967w

Independent Commission on Assembly Powers
363w

India
Sea Harrier aircraft 352w

Indian subcontinent
Foreign relations 1109-10w

Indian subcontinent—continued
Overseas aid 1018-9w

Individual learning accounts
Finance 793w
Tax allowances 600-1w

Indonesia
Armed conflict 323-4w
Arms trade 73-4w

Industrial diseases
Compensation 546w, 647w, 733w
Wales 733w

Industrial health and safety
Agriculture 899w
NHS 226-7w
Stress 900w

Industrial investment
Northern Ireland 395-6w

Infant mortality
94w

Infectious diseases
5-6w, 1271w
Ambulance services 847w
EC action (08.09.03) 140
Hospitals 630w, 1306-7w, 1310w
Immigration 376w, 1310w
Transplant surgery 158-9w
Vaccination 1310w

Information services
Government 520-1w

Information technology
Cabinet Office 797w, 996-7w
Child Support Agency 1049-50w
Dept of Health 203w
Developing countries 84w
Females 870w
General practitioners 195-6w
Home Office 59w
NHS 977w, 1310w, 1312w
Scotland Office 419w
Work permits 946w

Ingram, Rt Hon Adam, Minister of State, Ministry of Defence
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 552-9
Written Statements
Aircraft carriers, Procurement 44-5ws
Armed forces, Logistics 26-7ws
Questions
Afghanistan, Armed forces 343-4w, 947w
Afghanistan, Peace keeping operations 343w, 511-2w
Air force, Gulf states 400w
Air force, Training 1171-2w
Aircraft carriers 512w, 701w
Aircraft carriers, Procurement 344w, 700-1w, 746w, 947w
Armed forces, Deployment 949w
Armed forces, Falkland Islands 948-50w
Armed forces, Females 520w
Armed forces, Housing 45w
Armed forces, Location 40-1w
Armed forces, Logistics 952w
Armed forces, Privacy 517w
Armed forces, Security 703w
Armed forces, Training 346w, 348-50w
Armed forces, Uniforms 518w
Armoured fighting vehicles 705w, 1154w, 1161-4w
Armoured fighting vehicles, Procurement 949-50w
Arms trade 1154-5w
Arms trade, EC countries 1165w, 1172w
Arms trade, Export controls 749w
Arms trade, Israel 1154w
Arms trade, USA 1165w
Army 994w

Ingram, Rt Hon Adam—continued*
Army, Deployment 351w
Army, Training 512w, 750w
Assets, Ministry of Defence 703-4w
Audit, Ministry of Defence 47w
Balkans 10
Balkans, Peace keeping operations 9-10
Ballistic missile defence, USA 401w
Bosnia, Peace keeping operations 41w, 1155w
C17 aircraft 344w
Chemical weapons, Baltic Sea 674-5w
Collins, Tim 398w
Consultation papers, Ministry of Defence 398-400w
Defence, Finance 1158w
Defence, Research 1172w
Defence Diversification Agency 1157-8w
Defence equipment 1170w
Defence equipment, Costs 403-4w
Defence equipment, Exhibitions 746-9w, 948w, 1158w
Defence equipment, Procurement 401-4w, 513w
Defence equipment, Thermal imaging 746w
Defence Fire Service 703w
Defence Logistics Organisation 18, 39w
Depleted uranium, Dundrennan 1159w
Destroyers, Operating costs 346-7w
Dockyards, Scotland 519w
EC defence policy 1160w
European fighter aircraft, Aircraft carriers 512w
Falkland Islands, Argentina 948w
Falkland Islands, Defence 1160w
Falkland Islands, Patrol craft 948w
Finance, Ministry of Defence 1158w
Food, Ministry of Defence 1160-1w
Guard Service, Deployment 1171w
Hercules aircraft, Sales 1165w
HMS Bridport 347w
HMS Sheffield 950w
HMS St Albans 43w
Iraq 1153w
Iraq, Bomb disposal 46w, 515-7w, 704w, 952w, 1152w
Iraq, Casualties 514-5w, 1151w
Iraq, Military alliances 1152w
Iraq, Military police 44w
Iraq, Navy Army and Air Force Institutes 705w
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 44w, 951-2w
Iraq, Reconstruction 400-1w, 1151w, 1153w
Iraq, Weapons 46w, 514w, 750-1w
Iraq conflict 15-6, 400w, 516w, 750w, 1152-3w
Iraq conflict, Accidents 46w, 515w
Iraq conflict, Armoured fighting vehicles 952-3w
Iraq conflict, Bombs 704w
Iraq conflict, Casualties 515-6w
Iraq conflict, Chemical weapons 951w
Iraq conflict, Civilians 44w, 415w
Iraq conflict, Drinking water 42w
Iraq conflict, Intelligence services 44-5w
Iraq conflict, Radio 1w
Iraq conflict, Uniforms 41w, 348w
Joint strike fighter aircraft 705w
Joint Terrorism Analysis Centre 397-8w
Military aircraft, Helicopters 746w
Military bases, USA 53-4w
Military police 49-50w
Military police, Chichester 349w
Military police, Deployment 350w
Military police, Training 348-9w
NATO, Science 517w
Navy 49w
Navy, Hydrography 43w

Ingram, Rt Hon Adam—continued*
Navy, Training 53w
Nuclear submarines, Decommissioning 954w
Nuclear submarines, Scotland 954w
Oshkosh tank transporters 47-9w
Patrol craft, Fisheries 706-7w
Patrol craft, Operating costs 344w
Princess Royal Barracks 415w, 702-3w
Radar 1171w
RAF Fylingdales 1170w
RAF Lyneham 351w, 1172w
RAF Molesworth 1171w
RFA Wave Ruler 50w
RNAS Yeovilton, Lynx helicopters 1173w
RNAS Yeovilton, Security 1173w
Roll-on roll-off ships 519w
Rosyth Dockyard 955w
Royal Air Force Gliding and Soaring Association 519w
SA80 rifle 50w
Sea Harrier aircraft, India 352w
Smuggling 1171w
Sonar, Marine animals 417w
Sonar, Procurement 417w
Type 23 frigates, Sonar 707w
Type 42 destroyers 703w
Vehicles, Ministry of Defence 1153-4w
Warships 947w
Warships, Manpower 54w
Warships, Procurement 39w, 706w, 751-2w

Inheritance tax
601w

Injuries
244w
Armed forces 2w
Elderly 167-8w

Inland Revenue
103w
Contracts 95-6w
Pay 103-4w
Standards 104-5w

Inland waterways
Waste management 1198w

Insider trading
319w

Insolvency
596w

Insurance
Animals 1185w
Construction 903w
Crime 1209w
Crops 1185w
Employers' liability 20-1w, 902-3w, 905-6w
Northern Ireland 473w

Insurance companies
Legal costs 31-2w

Intelligence and Security Committee
323-4

Intelligence services
17ws
Iraq conflict 44-5w
Ministers 522w

"Intelligence Services Commissioner Annual Report, 2002"
17ws

Intensive care
Death rate 1340w

Intensive supervision and surveillance programme
1249w

"Interception of Communications Commissioner Annual Report, 2002"
17ws

Interest rates
Bankruptcy 426w
European Central Bank 1092w

International Atomic Energy Agency
646w

International baccalaureate
114-5w

International Labour Organisation
Treaties 559-62w

International law
Iraq conflict 634w

Internet
Children 586w, 1210-1w, 1233w
Developing countries 84w
Disadvantaged 1136-7w
Home Office 57w
Music 544-5w, 873w
North West region 981w
Public libraries 958w
Regulation 853
Sight impaired 1150-1w
Teachers 147-8w

Intimidation
Armed forces 1169-70w
Schools 139w
Witnesses 1255-6w

Iran
(17.09.03) 295-302wh
Arms trade 324w

Iraq
1153w
Arms trade 53ws
Bomb disposal 46w, 323, 515-7w, 704w, 952w, 1152w
Casualties 514-5w, 1151w
Christianity 375w, 440-1w
Civil servants 1106w
Crimes against humanity 46-7w
Cultural heritage 525w
Debts 1093-4w
Education 1009w
Elections 786w
Food 1008-9w, 1011w
Frontiers 44w, 1106w
Health services 705w
Import duties 876w
International assistance 786-7w, 1011w
Kidnapping 1106w
Laboratories 1008w
Marsh Arabs 1009w
Medical equipment 1010w
Military alliances 1152w
Military police 44w
Ministerial statements (08.09.03) 36-54
Navy Army and Air Force Institutes 705w
Non-governmental organisations 653w
Opposition days (09.09.03) 190-244, (10.09.03) 393-435
Overseas aid 652w, 1009-12w
Peace keeping operations 2-8ws, 18-20, 43-4w, 105w, 322, 593-4w, 750w, 854-5, 951-2w, 1106w
Police 441w, 810-1w, 942-3w
Politics and government 324w, 676w, 868w
Pulses and seeds 557w
Reconstruction 400-1w, 420w, 557w, 593w, 745w, 876w, 1008w, 1010-1w, 1151-3w
United Nations 1011w
Water 1008w

Iraq—continued
Weapons 11ws, 18w, 46w, 321-2, 326, 375w, 407w, 514w, 521w, 676w, 750-1w, 852-3, 868w, 950-1w

Iraq Communications Group
868w

Iraq conflict
15-6, 18w, 396-7w, 400w, 516w, 521w, 750w, 1152-3w
Accidents 45-6w, 515w
Armoured fighting vehicles 952-3w
Bombs 704w
Casualties 514-6w
Chemical weapons 951w
Civilians 44w, 415w
Depleted uranium 1159w
Drinking water 42w
Intelligence services 44-5w
International law 634w
Legal opinion 18-9w, 497w
Prisoners of war 750w, 893w
Radio 1w
Reserve forces 415w, 516w
Uniforms 41w, 348w

Irish language
474w
Northern Ireland government 720-1w

Irranca-Davies, Huw
Questions
Construction, Standards 1022-3w
Housing, Warranties 1023w
Judicial review, Pupil exclusions 33-4w
Legal aid 606-7w

ISAs
Tax allowances 1093w

Isle of Man
Departmental responsibilities 1045w

Islington
Learning and skills councils 131w

Israel
Arms trade 1154w
Detainees 19w
Land 594w

Israeli-Palestinian conflict
see Middle East

Jack, Rt Hon Michael
Questions
European fighter aircraft 3
Open prisons, Prisoner escapes 809w
Standing committees, Computers 167
Students, Fees and charges 850-1

Jackson, Ms Glenda
Questions
Iraq, Bomb disposal 46w

Jackson, Helen
Chamber Debates
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 869
Questions
Manufacturing industries, Skilled workers 876-7w
Modern apprenticeships 549-50w

Jamieson, Mr David, Parliamentary Secretary, Dept for Transport*
Westminster Hall Debates
East coast railway line (16.09.03) 232-5wh
Speed limits, Somerset (16.09.03) 239-44wh
Roads, Safety 49ws
Questions
A12, Repairs and maintenance 503w
A27 372-3w
A27, Repairs and maintenance 503-4w
A38, Accidents 504w

Jamieson, Mr David—continued
Air pollution, Greater London 373-4w
Biofuels 883w
Boating 410w
Cars 374w
Driving, Cellular phones 1250w
Ferries, Safety 391w
Freight 508w
Liquefied petroleum gas, Excise duties 887w
Lorry drivers, France 503w
M6 884w, 1061w
Mersey tunnel, Accountancy 277w, 1062w
Motor vehicles, Pollution control 1055w
Motorway service areas, Closed circuit television 885w
Motorways 1062w
Motorways, Freight 1062w
Petrol alternatives 689-90w, 1055w
Ports, Orders and regulations 508w
Public transport, Crime prevention 762w
Rescue services, Finance 276w
Road signs and markings 1064w
Road traffic control, Emergency services 511w
Road works, Fees and charges 374w
Roads, Accidents 411w
Roads, Aggregates 373w
Roads, Construction 412w
Roads, Crosby 509w
Roads, Rural areas 410w
Roads, Standards 690w
Robin Rigg wind farm, Shipping 371w
Shipping, Hazardous substances 509-10w
Shipping, Oil 509w
Speed limits, Cameras 279-80w, 392w
Transport, Devolution 371-2w
Transport, Radioactive materials 409-10w
Warships, USA 693w, 886-7w

Jean Monnet action
129-30w

Jenkin, Mr Bernard
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 492, 504-7, 554, 556
European Union (16.09.03) 787
Iraq (09.09.03) 190-6, 199, 205, 240
Questions
Aircraft carriers, Procurement 700-1w
Armed forces, Deployment 949w
Armed forces, Falkland Islands 948-50w
Armed forces, Health services 707w
Armed forces, Housing 39-40w
Assets, Ministry of Defence 703-4w
Bosnia, Peace keeping operations 702w
C17 aircraft 344w
Collins, Tim 398w
David Kelly Death Inquiry 350-1w, 399-400w
Defence, Finance 1158w
Defence equipment, Costs 403-4w
Defence equipment, Procurement 401-4w
Falkland Islands 520w
Falkland Islands, Argentina 948w
Falkland Islands, Defence 1160w
Falkland Islands, Patrol craft 948w
Finance, Ministry of Defence 1158w
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 5-6
Iraq, Reconstruction 400-1w
Iraq conflict 400w
Iraq conflict, Armoured fighting vehicles 952-3w
Iraq conflict, Uniforms 41w
Navy 49w
Navy, Recruitment 50w
Navy, Training 53w
Patrol craft, Operating costs 344w
SA80 rifle 50w
Sea Harrier aircraft, India 352w

Jenkin, Mr Bernard—continued
Warships, Manpower 54w

Jenkins, Mr Brian
Questions
Children, Maintenance 442-3w, 558w
Location, Dept for Constitutional Affairs 1035w
Location, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 23w
Police, Disciplinary proceedings 668-9w

Job creation
Northern Ireland Office 491-2w

Job grant
861w

Jobcentre Plus
Temporary employment 1051-3w

Jobcentres
Advertising 1051w
Advisory services 757-8w

Jobseeker's allowance
Somerset 341-3w

Johnson, Rt Hon Alan, Minister of State for Higher Education, Dept for Education and Skills*
Westminster Hall Debates
Curriculum (17.09.03) 306-10wh
Higher education (18.09.03) 353-6wh
Schools, Finance (17.09.03) 289-94wh
Questions
Adult education, Grants 114w
Adult education, Qualifications 790w
EC action, Dept for Education and Skills 122-3w
Education maintenance allowance, Kingston upon Hull 984w
Engineering, Student numbers 1141w
Foundation degrees 983-4w
Further education 450-1w
Further education, Curriculum 448-9w
Further education, Finance 125-9w, 552w
Further education, Mature students 981-2w
Further education, National insurance contributions 126w
Higher education, Admissions 553-4w, 797w, 1145w
Higher education, Animal experiments 551w
Higher education, Bureaucracy 982w
Higher education, Gurkhas 684w
Higher education, Research 449-50w, 1150w
International baccalaureate 114-5w
Learning and Skills Council for England, Finance 685w
Learning and skills councils 551-2w
Learning and skills councils, Finance 1138w
Learning and skills councils, Redundancy 685w
Literacy, Primary education 139w
Mature students, Fees and charges 1136w
Medicine, Education 1149-50w
Modern apprenticeships 549-50w
National Foundation for Educational Research, Finance 130-1w
National vocational qualifications, Fees and charges 685-6w
Office for Fair Access, Public appointments 1145-6w
Pupils, Per capita costs 132w
Schools, Finance 135w, 140w, 142w
Schools, Transport 987-8w
Science, Curriculum 140-1w
Sixth form colleges, Finance 1144-5w

Johnson, Rt Hon Alan—continued*
Students, Fees and charges 149w, 453-4w, 463-6, 552-3w, 1133w, 1146w
Students, Finance 552-3w, 1145-6w
Students, Loans 453w, 791-3w, 795-6w
Students, Muslims 986-7w
Teachers, Pay 454w
Youth clubs 111w

Johnson, Mr Boris
Chamber Debates
European Union (09.09.03) 187
Questions
BBC 581-2
Manpower, Dept of Health 971w

Johnson, Miss Melanie, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept of Health*
Westminster Hall Debates
Dental services (09.09.03) 49-52wh
Keynsham Hospital (10.09.03) 128-30wh
Written Statements
Sex, Health services 26ws
Questions
Abortion 327w
Abortion, Breast cancer 1257w
Abortion, Counselling 1257w
Acrylamide 629w, 1282w
Agricultural products, Labelling 155w
AIDS, Research 157-8w
Alcoholic drinks, Advertising 328w
Alcoholic drinks, Labelling 1258w
Allergies, Labelling 1259w
Allergies, Nuts 1258-9w
Anaemia 161-2w
Angina 162-3w
Antibiotics, Urinary system 1264w
Asthma, Research 164-5w
Blood transfusions, Safety 1339-40w
Breast cancer, Elderly 1266w
BSE 168w
Cancer 3-4w
Cancer, Drugs 186w
Cancer, Health services 169w, 1267-8w
Cancer, Pathology 1305w
Cancer, Waiting lists 4-5w, 332-4w
Cannabis, Prescription drugs 251-2w
Cheshire and Merseyside Strategic Health Authority, Waiting lists 1308w
Chlamydia infection, Screening 173w
Cholesterol 174w
Clatterbridge Hospital, Cancer 1272w
Complementary medicine, Grants 159w
Deep vein thrombosis 177-8w, 1275-6w
Dental health, Research 1274w
Dental services, Chorley 235w
Dental services, Wirral 1278w
Dietary supplements 329-30w
Disease control 6w
Domestic violence 1285-6w
E coli 1287-8w
Elderly, Accidents 187w
Endometriosis, Complementary medicine 186w
Endometriosis, Health education 185-6w
Fluoride 1288-9w
Food, Additives 188w, 1282-4w
Food, Advertising 1281w
Food, Hygiene 1293-4w
Food, Labelling 1294w
Food, Misleading advertising 1283w
Food, Safety 1292w
Food, Standards 1290w
Food, Testing 1294w
Food poisoning 188w, 1290-2w
Food Standards Agency 188-9w, 1281-2w, 1294-5w
Food Standards Agency, Public participation 188w
Fruit, Schools 223w

Johnson, Miss Melanie—continued*
Fuzeon 192w
General practitioners, Warrington 1303w
Genetically modified organisms 197w, 1297w
Genito-urinary medicine 1296-7w
Haemophilia 718-20
Health, Low flying 1314w
Health, Research 256-7w
Health education, Cholesterol 376-7w
Health education, Sex 231w
Health Protection Agency, Finance 618w
Health services, Merseyside 1298w
Heart diseases 177w, 1274w
Heart diseases, Prescription drugs 377-8w
Heart diseases, Preventive medicine 1340w
Heart diseases, Research 1273-4w
Heart diseases, Surgery 199w
Hepatitis 199w
Herbal medicine, EC action 976w
Heyes, Mark 1357-8w
HIV infection 200-1w, 1306w
HIV infection, Screening 200w
Hospices, Buckinghamshire 1300w
Hospices, Finance 201w, 1306w
Hospital wards, Gender 1322w
Hospitals, Infectious diseases 630w, 1306-7w, 1310w
Hospitals, Standards 202w
Human embryo experiments 1309w
Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority, Codes of practice 1308-9w
Hypertension 167w
Infectious diseases 1271w
Infectious diseases, Immigration 376w, 1310w
Laboratories, Public analysts 1343w
Lincolnshire Partnership NHS Trust 1314-6w
Local exercise action programme 1313-4w
Magnetic resonance imagers 1323w
Maize 376w
Meat, Smuggling 1309-10w
Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency 622w
Mersey Regional Ambulance Service NHS Trust 1319-20w
Methicillin resistant staphylococcus aureus 1323-4w
National Treatment Agency 615w
NHS 1334w
NHS, Laboratories 219-20w, 1321-2w
NHS, Recruitment 711-3
NHS, Thermal insulation 1288w
North Cheshire Hospitals NHS Trust 1302-3w
Notifiable diseases 1333w
Nutrition 180-1w, 1280w
Nutrition, Disadvantaged 181w
Obesity 247-9w, 1280-1w, 1283w
Obesity, Children 249w
Obesity Awareness and Solutions Trust 1284w
Poultry meat, Antibiotics 1191w
Prostate cancer 629w, 1343-4w
Public Health Laboratory Service 978-80w
Salmonella, Eggs 1292-3w
Salt 258w
SARS 1346-7w
Secondment, Dept of Health 1347w
Sex, Health services 229-30w, 1347-8w
Sexual offences, Victim support schemes 1347w
Sexually transmitted diseases 230-1w
Sexually transmitted diseases, Young people 172-3w
Shellfish, Contamination 153w
Sibutramine 261-2w

Johnson, Miss Melanie—continued*
Slaughterhouses 1173w
Slaughterhouses, Hygiene 1293w
Smoking 244w, 263-4w, 1348-51w
Smoking, Medical treatments 1349w
Smoking, Public places 262-3w
Solvents, Misuse 264w
Sport and Physical Activity Board 1351-2w
Stem cells, Research 979-80w
Sugar, Children 267w
Sunscreens 268w
Testicular cancer 268w
Tobacco, Advertising 1349w
Tobacco, Belgium 1354w
Tobacco, Labelling 262w
Tomography 253w
Tuberculosis 269-70w
Tuberculosis, AIDS 270w
Vaccination 166w
Vaccination, Infectious diseases 1310w
Vaccination, Mercury 1355-6w
Viruses 1307w
X rays, West Midlands 1358w

Joint Intelligence Committee
869w

Joint strike fighter aircraft
705w

Joint Terrorism Analysis Centre
397-8w

Jones, Helen M
Questions
Cheshire and Merseyside Strategic Health Authority, Waiting lists 1308w
Free school meals 1134-5w
General practitioners, Warrington 1303w
Magistrates, Recruitment 1044w
Mersey Regional Ambulance Service NHS Trust 1319-20w
Methicillin resistant staphylococcus aureus 1323-4w
NHS, Ancillary staff 1261-2w
North Cheshire Hospitals NHS Trust 1302-3w
Nurses, Training 715-6, 1303w
Regional planning and development, Warrington 877-8w
Secondment, Dept of Health 1347w
Transport, Warrington 761w
VAT, Churches 969w

Jones, Mr Jon Owen
Chamber Debates
Iraq (09.09.03) 208, 214, 217, 224
Westminster Hall Debates
Entry clearances, Married people (17.09.03) 264-8wh, 270wh
Questions
Health and Social Care in Wales Review 734w
Health services, Wales 37w, 362-3w
Hospital beds, Wales 847
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 19-20

Jones, Mr Kevan
Chamber Debates
Iraq (09.09.03) 229-30
Questions
Armoured fighting vehicles 1162-3w

Jones, Dr Lynne
Questions
Asylum 938w
Asylum, Documents 941-2w
Disabled facilities grants 609-10w
Employment schemes, Mentally ill 343w
Iraq, Pulses and seeds 557w
Iraq conflict, Accidents 45-6w
Mental health services, Children 218w
Police, Radio 1252w

Jones, Dr Lynne—continued*
X rays, West Midlands 1358w
Young offenders, Females 1217-8w

Jones, Mr Martyn David
Questions
A483 842

Jones, Mr Nigel
Questions
Cancer, Pathology 1305-6w
Pathology, Consultants 845w

Jowell, Rt Hon Ms Tessa, Secretary of State for Culture Media and Sport*
Questions
BBC 529w, 579-82
Broadcasting reception 529w
Cultural heritage, Iraq 525w
Digital broadcasting 583-4
Official engagements, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 1048w
Official visits, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 648w
Olympic Games, Greater London 334-5w, 526-8w, 576-8
Olympic Games, National Lottery 335w

Joyce, Mr Eric
Chamber Debates
Iraq (09.09.03) 222-5
Questions
Adult education, Grants 446w
Common agricultural policy, Northern Ireland 396w
Weapons, Northern Ireland 314

Judges
Housing 1040-3w
Public appointments 32w, 158-62, 164

Judicial review
Pupil exclusions 33-4w

Judiciary
Public appointments 165

Junior doctors
Training 1312-4w
Working hours 182w

Juries
31ws

Kaufman, Rt Hon Gerald
Chamber Debates
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1095
Iraq (08.09.03) 46
Questions
BBC 580-1
Business questions 1077-8
Correspondence, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 287-8w
Members, Correspondence 20w, 745w

Keeble, Ms Sally
Chamber Debates
Disclosure of information (18.09.03) 1105-6
Elderly (10.09.03) 370-5, 378

Keen, Alan
Questions
Aviation 277-8w

Keetch, Mr Paul
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 492-3, 511-3, 549-50, 556
Iraq (09.09.03) 193, 203-9, 211, 215, 226, 241-2
Questions
Air force, Deployment 404-6w
Air force, Gulf states 400w
Armed forces, Commonwealth 1156-7w
Armed forces, Discharges 705-6w, 952w

Keetch, Mr Paul—continued*
Armed forces, Fiji 1156w
Armed forces, Intimidation 1169-70w
Armed forces, Surveys 1157w
Army, Deployment 351w
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 6-7
Iraq conflict 1152-3w
Iraq conflict, Reserve forces 415w
Reserve forces, Deployment 352w

Kelly, David
see also David Kelly Death Inquiry
332w, 704-5w

Kelly, Ruth, Financial Secretary, Treasury*
Questions
Aggregates 392w
Breast cancer 1082w
Census 96w
Census, Costs 96-7w
Census, Crosby 609w
Child Trust Fund 861-2w
Debts 1084-5w
Debts, Iraq 1093-4w
Doctors, Suicide 618w
EC budget 1082-3w
EC law, Treasury 107-8w
Economic and monetary union, Advisory bodies 1088-91w
Economic and monetary union, Economic growth 1092w
Economic and monetary union, Public participation 1091-2w
Economic and monetary union, Referendums 1101w
Employee share ownership schemes 859w
Employment, Crosby 599w
EU Economic and Financial Affairs Council 100-1w
European Central Bank, Interest rates 1092w
Financial services, Computers 1083w
Financial services, Fraud 1083w
Food, Treasury 1092w
Gold and foreign exchange reserves 1092-3w
Infant mortality 94w
Insolvency 596w
Lost working days 1094w
Lung cancer, Death rate 601w
Members, Correspondence 598w, 863w
Methicillin resistant staphylococcus aureus, Death 620-1w
Ministerial policy advisors, Treasury 603w
Mortgages, Pensions 1095w
National income 105-6w
National savings 603w
Oesophagus cancer 93-4w
Office for National Statistics, Finance 105w
Premium bonds, Prize money 602w
Provident societies 596w
Publicity, Treasury 1084w
Stamp duty reserve tax 864-5w
Strokes, Death rate 94w
Tax allowances, Pensions 863-4w
Taxation 1096-102w
Teenage pregnancy 110-1w
UK membership of EC, Cost benefit analysis 1082-3w
Unemployment, Sefton 458w

Kennedy, Rt Hon Charles
Questions
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 322

Kennedy, Rt Hon Charles—continued*
Iraq, Weapons 321-2, 852-3

Kennedy, Rt Hon Jane, Minister of State, Northern Ireland Office*
Chamber Debates
Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission Etc) Bill (HL), Allocation of time motion, 2R and rem stages (17.09.03) 923, 974-83, 1008-10
Written Statements
"Oversight Commissioner Report, 8" 44ws
Questions
Assets Recovery Agency, Northern Ireland 311-3
Autism, Northern Ireland 566-7w, 813-4w
Crime, Northern Ireland 711w
District policing partnerships, Northern Ireland 723-4w
Education, Northern Ireland 578w
Empty property, Northern Ireland 396w
Literacy, Northern Ireland 575-6w
Mature students, Northern Ireland 568w
Ministerial statements, Northern Ireland Office 492w
Northern Ireland education and library boards 468w
Northern Ireland government, Irish language 720-1w
Organised Crime Task Force, Finance 723w
Parades Commission 475w
Police, Northern Ireland 711w
Police Service of Northern Ireland 577w
Police Service of Northern Ireland, Care homes 825w
Police Service of Northern Ireland, Exercise 725w
Police Service of Northern Ireland, Recruitment 723-5w
Police stations, Asbestos 825w
Primary education, Northern Ireland 477-8w, 577w
Prisoners, Suicide 726w
Pupil exclusions, Northern Ireland 728w
Royal Ulster Constabulary 825w
Schools, Northern Ireland 480-1w, 828-9w
Secondary education, Northern Ireland 725-6w
Special educational needs, Belfast 484-6w
Teachers, Belfast 831-2w
Teachers, Manpower 580w
Teachers, Northern Ireland 490w, 831w
Transfer procedure tests, Northern Ireland 578w

Key, Mr Robert
Chamber Debates
Angling, Seas and oceans (08.09.03) 143-6
Defence (11.09.03) 537-40
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 78, 93-6
Questions
Courts, Winchester 1034-5w
Electronic equipment, Manpower 1062
Fluoride 1288-9w
Grammar schools, Admissions 462
Iraq, Navy Army and Air Force Institutes 705w
Navy Army and Air Force Institutes 518w
NHS, Transport 1298w
RAF Chilmark 49w

Keynsham Hospital
(10.09.03) 123-30wh

Khabra, Mr Piara S
Questions
Teachers, Recruitment 453

Khat
59-60w

Kidnapping
Children 662w
Iraq 1106w

Kidney, Mr David
Westminster Hall Debates
Police (16.09.03) 210-5wh
Questions
Deep vein thrombosis 883w
Disabled, Access 1021-2w
Food, Testing 1294w
Laboratories, Public analysts 1343w
M6 884w, 1061w
Motorway service areas, Closed circuit television 885w
Motorways 1062w
Motorways, Freight 1062w
Power failures 1070w
Taxation, Lorries 1101w
Transport, Working hours 887w

Kidney patients
North West region 842w

Kidneys
842w

Kilfoyle, Mr Peter
Chamber Debates
Roaccutane (17.09.03) 1042-3

King, Andy
Chamber Debates
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 96-8
Questions
Elderly, Community care 703

King, Ms Oona
Chamber Debates
Antisocial behaviour (11.09.03) 561-4
Questions
Burundi 1105w
Central Africa 1007w
Democratic Republic of Congo 1005w

King Committee
see Intelligence and Security Committee

Kingston upon Hull
Education maintenance allowance 984w

Kirkistown Castle
467w

Kirkwood, Sir Archy
Questions
Electoral register, Scotland 156
House of Commons, Recycling 500-1w
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 8
Norman Shaw Buildings, Repairs and maintenance 499w
Palace of Westminster, Repairs and maintenance 424w, 637w, 981w
Parliament, Postal services 423-4w
Parliamentary tours, Tickets 499-500w

Knight, Rt Hon Greg
Questions
Customs 862w
Exhaust emissions 691w
Olympic Games, Greater London 577-8
Palace of Westminster, Repairs and maintenance 981w

Knight, Rt Hon Greg—continued
Royal family, Security 811w

Knight, Jim
Westminster Hall Debates
Housing, South West region (09.09.03) 61-5wh
Questions
Teachers, Recruitment 446w, 454-5

Kosovo
Orphans 1012w
Overseas aid 893-4w

Kumar, Dr Ashok
Questions
Children, Day care 1049w
Eyesight, Surgery 331w
Flexitime 431w
Iraq, Bomb disposal 515w
Physical education, Standards 451-2w
Public sector, Contracts 610w
Regional assistance, Standards 362w
Welfare tax credits 395w, 604w

Labelling
Agricultural products 155w
Alcoholic drinks 1258w
Allergies 1258-9w
Food 1294w
Tobacco 262w

Laboratories
Health Protection Agency 219-20w
Iraq 1008w
NHS 219-20w, 1321-2w
Public analysts 1343w
Schools 138-9w

Labour Party
319-20
Conferences 1236-7w

Labour turnover
Home Office 57w

Ladyman, Dr Stephen, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept of Health*
Chamber Debates
Asperger's syndrome (10.09.03) 441-4
Elderly (10.09.03) 382-5
Roaccutane (17.09.03) 1045-50
Westminster Hall Debates
Accident and emergency departments (10.09.03) 89-91wh
Written Statements
Commission for Healthcare Audit and Inspection, Finance 13-4ws
"National Care Standards Commission Annual Report and Accounts, 2002/03" 14ws
Questions
Accidents 1338w
Acute beds, Worcestershire 630w
Agency nurses 245w
Allergies, Clinics 158w
Allergies, Waiting lists 158w
Alzheimer's disease 1259-61w
Alzheimer's disease, Obesity 159w
Alzheimer's disease, Prescription drugs 12w
Ambulance services, Essex 185w
Antenatal care 183-4w
Antibiotics 1264-5w
Antibiotics, Drug resistance 1263w
Arthritis, Drugs 163w, 269w, 615-6w
Arthritis, Medical treatments 1262-3w
Asthma 164w
Autism 165-6w, 272-3w, 837-8w, 1265w
Babies 8w
Batten's disease 1266w
Biobank UK 1354-5w

Ladyman, Dr Stephen—continued
Broomfield Hospital, Accident and emergency departments 616-7w
Broomfield Hospital, Hospital wards 168w
Broomfield Hospital, Surgery 168w
Caesarean sections 205w
Care homes 170-1w, 704-5, 1268-70w
Care homes, Admissions 843-4w
Care homes, Buckinghamshire 1301w
Care homes, Essex 171w
Care homes, Fees and charges 191w, 1334w
Care homes, Greater London 617w
Care homes, Regulation 1268-9w
Care homes, Vetting 1270-1w
Care homes, Voluntary organisations 1339w
Care Standards Act 2000 623w
Carers 617w
Carers, Finance 201w
Chelmsford Primary Care Trust, Finance 171-2w
Children, Protection 172w
Chronic fatigue syndrome 1271-2w
Community care, Direct payments 1284-5w
Consultants, Dept of Health 1272w
Cot deaths 166w
Deep vein thrombosis, Pregnant women 178-9w
Dementia 179w, 1276w
Dental services, Shropshire 1276-8w
Digestive system, Diseases 199w
Disabled, Children 617-8w
Doctors, Wrekin 182-4w
Drugs, Advertising 1319w
East and North Hertfordshire NHS Trust, Waiting lists 183w
East Cambridgeshire and Fenland Primary Care Trust, Sexually transmitted diseases 230w
Elderly, Accidents 187w
Elderly, Care homes 705
Elderly, Community care 702-4
Elderly, Injuries 167-8w
Epilepsy, Prescription drugs 11-2w
General practitioners, Buckinghamshire 1300w
General practitioners, Leicestershire 192w
General practitioners, Wrekin 195w
Health professions, Essex 220-1w
Health professions, Leicestershire 255w
Health services, Buckinghamshire 1301-2w
Health services, Elderly 1334-6w
Health services, Shropshire 239w
Health visitors, Worcestershire 619w, 1304w
Hepatitis, Prisoners 423w
Hormone replacement therapy 1308w
Hospital beds 617w, 1312w
Hospitals, Admissions 853-4w
Hospitals, Birth rate 1316w
Hospitals, Cleaning services 1358w
Hospitals, Infectious diseases 1307w
Hospitals, Smoking 262w
Hospitals, Waiting lists 271w
Hyperactivity 1266w
Hyperactivity, Drugs 218-9w
Learning disability 203w
Learning disability, Health services 621w
Lincolnshire Partnership NHS Trust 423w
Maternity services 7w, 205-6w, 1318w
Maternity services, Consultants 7-8w
Maternity services, Finance 206-7w
Maternity services, Oswestry 1316w
Mental health services, Advocacy 836-7w

Ladyman, Dr Stephen—continued*
Mental health services, Children 215w, 218w
Methicillin resistant staphylococcus aureus 1263-4w
Mid Essex Hospital Services NHS Trust, Waiting lists 622-3w
Midwives 1325w
NHS, Ancillary staff 1261-2w
NHS, Freedom of information 1311-2w
NHS, Private sector 1342w
Nurses, Children 839-40w
Oesophagus cancer 619-20w
Parkinson's disease 11w
Plants, Dept of Health 1275w
Post-operative care, Children 857-9w
Pregnancy complications 253-4w
Prescription drugs, Children 3w, 1358w
Prescription drugs, Mentally ill 255w
Princess Royal Hospital Telford 260-1w
Riluzole 11w
Ritalin 848-9w, 1320-1w
Robert Jones and Agnes Hunt Orthopaedic Hospital 1317-8w
Royal Shrewsbury Hospital 259-60w
Secondment, Dept of Health 1347w
Social services, Manpower 1351w
Southend Hospital, Accident and emergency departments 1356w
Southend Hospital, Admissions 1356w
Special hospitals, Prisoners' transfers 1304-5w
Speech therapy, Leicestershire 264-5w
St Mary's Hospital Portsmouth, Maternity services 204-5w
Strokes 626w, 1353-4w
Strokes, Admissions 271w
Strokes, Health services 266-7w
Tuberculosis 631w
United Health Group 1342-3w
Worcestershire Royal Hospital 619w

Laing, Mrs Eleanor
Questions
Children's centres 456-7

Lait, Mrs Jacqui
Questions
Supreme Court 152

Lamb, Norman
Chamber Debates
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 875
Questions
Hercules aircraft, Sales 1165w
Mapeley 1061w
Microsoft, Dept for Constitutional Affairs 1044w
Microsoft, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 958w
Microsoft, Dept for Education and Skills 1141w
Microsoft, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1185-6w
Microsoft, Dept for International Development 1013w
Microsoft, Dept for Transport 884-5w
Microsoft, Dept for Work and Pensions 1053w
Microsoft, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 787w
Microsoft, Home Office 1236w
Microsoft, Leader of the House of Commons 636w
Microsoft, Treasury 1094-5w

Lammy, David, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept for Constitutional Affairs*
Chamber Debates
Probate (15.09.03) 696-700

Lammy, David—continued*
Written Statements
"Public Guardianship Office Annual Report and Accounts, 2002/03" 43ws
Questions
Asbestos, Dept for Constitutional Affairs 1033w
Channel Islands, Departmental responsibilities 1045w
Community legal service partnerships 753w
Construction, Standards 1022-3w
Courts, Closures 162-3
Domestic violence, Legal aid 337w
EC law, Dept for Constitutional Affairs 32w
Ethnic groups, Dept for Constitutional Affairs 1036-7w
European Union, Dept for Constitutional Affairs 32w
Family courts, Greater London 446w
Food, Dept for Constitutional Affairs 1037-9w
Immigration Advisory Service 1039w
Immigration Appellate Authorities 34w
Judicial review, Pupil exclusions 33-4w
Legal advice and assistance, Disadvantaged 1043w
Legal aid 606-7w
Legal aid, Immigration 606w
Legal aid scheme, Ethnic groups 1037-8w
Legal aid scheme, Finance 1043w
Legal costs, Insurance companies 31-2w
Location, Dept for Constitutional Affairs 1035w
Mental Incapacity Bill (Draft) 753-4w
Meyer, Catherine 1033w
Office for the Supervision of Solicitors, Reviews 33w
Recruitment, Dept for Constitutional Affairs 1046w
Sexual offences, Liability 811-2w
Sheriffs 754w
Training, Dept for Constitutional Affairs 338w
Transsexuality 337-8w
Written questions, Dept for Constitutional Affairs 1044-5w

Lancashire
Dental services 233-4w
Emergency services 854

Land
Contamination 841
Israel 594w
Public sector 458w

Land mines
Diego Garcia 439-40w

Land use
611w
Atkinson Morley's Hospital 631w

Langage
Gas fired power stations 546w

Languages
Airports 505w
Business 1075w
GCE A level 380-1w
General certificate of secondary education 449w

Lansley, Mr Andrew
Chamber Debates
Children (08.09.03) 32-3
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 116-8
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 867-8
Questions
Blood transfusions, Safety 1339-40w
NHS, Redundancy 256w

Lantra
540w, 634-5w, 777w, 922w

Laws, Mr David
Questions
Capital allowances 606w
Capital gains tax 654w, 859-61w, 966w, 1085w
Corporation tax 597w, 862w, 1086w
Employee share ownership schemes 859w
Enterprise investment scheme 599w
Enterprise management incentives 599-600w
Excise duties, Motor vehicles 969-70w
Housing, Sales 603w
Income tax 862-3w, 967-8w, 1103-4w
Income tax, Cellular phones 863w
Income tax, Pensioners 967w
North Sea oil, Royalties 601-2w
Pension credit 21w
Personal income 1083-4w
Research and development tax credit 602w
Stamp duties 656w
Stamp duty reserve tax 864-5w
Surgery, Waiting lists 250w
Tax allowances, Computers 598-9w
Tax allowances, Film 655w
Tax allowances, Individual learning accounts 600-1w
Tax allowances, ISAs 1093w
Tax allowances, Pensions 656w, 863-4w
Taxation 657w, 1096-102w
Taxation, Aviation 653-4w, 859w
Unpaid taxes 866w
Venture capital 1086w
Winter fuel payments 915w
Working tax credit 1103w

Laxton, Mr Bob
Questions
Developing countries, Trade 435w

Lazarowicz, Mr Mark
Chamber Debates
European Union (16.09.03) 810-3
Westminster Hall Debates
East coast railway line (16.09.03) 232wh
Questions
Children and Young People's Unit, Scotland 1127-8w
Judges, Public appointments 161
Supreme Court, Devolution 337w

Leader of the House of Commons
Microsoft 636w
Official visits 36w

Learning and Skills Act 2000
Questions
114-5w

Learning and Skills Council for England
982w
Finance 685w

Learning and skills councils
551-2w
Finance 1138w
Islington 131w
Redundancy 685w

Learning disability
203w
Employment 561-3w, 907-8w
Health services 621w

Leave
Nurses 850-1w

Leavesden Green School
321

Lebanon
Syrian Arab Republic 375w

Leeds
Further education 1136w
Pre-school education 458-9
Teachers 145w

Legal advice and assistance
Disadvantaged 1043w

Legal aid
606-7w
Domestic violence 337w
Immigration 606w

Legal aid scheme
Ethnic groups 1037-8w
Finance 1043w
Immigration 1043w

Legal costs
Insurance companies 31-2w

Legal opinion
Attorney General 1114w
Iraq conflict 18-9w, 497w

Legislative competence
Scottish Parliament 637-8w

Legislative drafting
Parliamentary scrutiny 168-9

Leicester
Schools 116w, 139-40w

Leicestershire
Agency nurses 245w
Class sizes 447w
General practitioners 192w
Health professions 255w
Speech therapy 264-5w
Teachers 148w

Leicestershire Constabulary
Vacancies 809w

Leigh, Mr Edward
Chamber Debates
European Union (16.09.03) 801, 803-4
Iraq (08.09.03) 48

Leighton Buzzard
Police stations 60w

Leisure
Northern Ireland 485-6w

Lepper, Mr David
Westminster Hall Debates
Iran (17.09.03) 296wh, 302wh

Leslie, Mr Christopher, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept for Constitutional Affairs*
Chamber Debates
European Parliamentary and Local Elections (Pilots) Bill, 1R (17.09.03) 877
House of Lords, Ministerial statements (18.09.03) 1086-104
Written Statements
Absent voting 51-2ws
Juries 31ws
Questions
Administration of justice, Reform 337w
Children, Abuse 753w
Church of England, Public appointments 1036w
Constitutions 336-7w
Courts, Clothing 753w
Courts, Hampshire 1033-5w
Courts, Winchester 1034-5w
Crime 1252-3w
Electoral register 809-10w, 1032-3w
Fines 1038w
Fines, North East region 1038w
High court 397w
House of Lords, Reform 163-4
Judges, Housing 1040-3w

Leslie, Mr Christopher—continued*
Judges, Public appointments 32w, 158-62, 164
Judiciary, Public appointments 165
Magistrates, Recruitment 1044w
Microsoft, Dept for Constitutional Affairs 1044w
Official visits, Dept for Constitutional Affairs 33w
Parliament, Research 397w
Public appointments, Dept for Constitutional Affairs 1046w
Sheriffs 607w, 754w
Supreme Court 1045-6w
Supreme Court, Costs 164-5
Supreme Court, Devolution 337w

Letwin, Rt Hon Oliver
Questions
Demonstrations 1242w

Levitt, Mr Tom
Chamber Debates
Iraq (08.09.03) 48
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 58, 67, 111

Lewes
Flood control (10.09.03) 131-8wh

Lewis, Mr Ivan, Parliamentary Secretary, Dept for Education and Skills*
Questions
Access to Learning Fund 789-90w
Adult education, Grants 446w
Adult education, Hertfordshire 550-1w
Apprentices, Rural areas 1124-5w
Further education, Leeds 1136w
Individual learning accounts, Finance 793w
Learning and Skills Council for England 982w
Mature students, Fees and charges 1138w
Modern apprenticeships 686-7w, 790-2w
Numeracy, Reoffenders 452w
Older workers, Training 1142w
Older workers, Vocational guidance 794w
Pupil exclusions 688w, 1142-3w
Pupil exclusions, Appeals 452w
Pupil exclusions, Ministerial powers 794w
Pupil exclusions, North Tyneside 794-6w
Pupils, Disadvantaged 682-3w
Schools, Intimidation 139w
Sixth form education 466-7
Skilled workers, Shortages 767-8w
Teachers, Internet 147-8w
Trade unions, Training 1081w
Union Learning Fund 150-1w
Vocational education 151-2w, 450w, 454-5w, 795w
Vocational education, Eligibility 688-9w

Lewis, Dr Julian
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 546-52
Questions
Armed forces 13
Breast cancer 1082w
Business questions 1080
Chechnya 18w
Higher civil servants, Vetting 519-20w
Iraq, Weapons 18w
Iraq conflict 18w, 396-7w
Ministerial policy advisors, Prime Minister 18w, 745-6w
Official secrets 517w

Lewis, Mr Terry
Chamber Debates
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 110-2

Liability
Sexual offences 811-2w

Liberia
84-6w, 676w, 1012-3w
Armed conflict 11-2ws
Peace negotiations 63-4w, 676-7w
Sanitation 1012w

Libraries
see also Public libraries
Schools 138w

Licensing and Registration of Gangmasters Bill 2002/03
Chamber Debates
1R (10.09.03) 331-4

Liddell, Rt Hon Mrs Helen
Questions
Afghanistan, Health services 554-5w

Liddell-Grainger, Mr Ian
Chamber Debates
Iraq (09.09.03) 225-7
Westminster Hall Debates
Speed limits, Somerset (16.09.03) 236-9wh, 242wh
Questions
Common agricultural policy, Scotland 369w
Tourism, Wales 733w

Lidington, Mr David
Chamber Debates
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 65-71
Questions
Air force, Gliding 416-7w
Airports, South East region 1187w
Asylum 936-7w
Charities, Lotteries 957-8w
Commission for Social Care Inspection 1346w
Community legal service partnerships 753w
Environment Agency, Surveys 1181w
Food, Dept for Constitutional Affairs 1037-9w
Food, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 529-30w
Food, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1181-2w
Food, Dept for International Development 1007w
Food, Dept for Transport 1058-60w
Food, Dept of Health 1289-90w
Food, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 592w
Food, Ministry of Defence 1160-1w
Food, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 734w
Food, Treasury 1092w
Hazardous substances, Waste disposal 1183-4w
Horses, Transport 1176w
Hospitals, Food 1289w
Immigration, Appeals 1232-3w
Inland waterways, Waste management 1198w
Llamas 1199-200w
Motor vehicles, Waste disposal 1179w
Nature conservation 1185w, 1189-90w
Packaging, Recycling 1198w
Phytophthora ramorum 1188-9w
Pollution, Accidents 1190w
Pollution control 1189-90w
Poultry meat, Antibiotics 1191w
Prescriptions, Finance 855w
Public sector, Procurement 456-7w
RAF Halton 416w, 1155w
Royal Air Force Gliding and Soaring Association 519w
Schools, Broadband 680w

Lidington, Mr David—continued
Sites of special scientific interest 1197w
Sites of special scientific interest, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1197w
Sites of special scientific interest, Dept for Transport 691-2w
Sites of special scientific interest, Home Office 812w
Sites of special scientific interest, Ministry of Defence 1173w
Waste management, Finance 1198-9w

Life expectancy
Teachers 688w

Lighters
937-8w

Lighting
Pollution 541-2w, 1184-5w
Roads 1063-4w

Lilley, Rt Hon Peter
Questions
London airports, Parking 505w

Lincolnshire
Education 467-8
Flood control 304-5w

Lincolnshire Partnership NHS Trust
423w, 1314-6w

Liquefied petroleum gas
Excise duties 887w

Listed buildings
Gatwick Airport 530w

Literacy
551w, 1139w
Buckinghamshire 1138-9w
North Tyneside 1139w
Northern Ireland 575-6w
Primary education 139w
Standards 985-6w

Livestock
Disease control 287-8w, 309w
Imports 1195-6w
Scottish Islands 370w
Transport 770w
Waste disposal 537w, 777-8w

Llamas
1199-200w

Lloyd, Mr Tony
Chamber Debates
Iraq (08.09.03) 44
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 56
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 871
Questions
Accident Group 72w
National Lottery 576
Teachers, Redundancy 112w

Llwyd, Mr Elfyn
Chamber Debates
Local Government Bill, Lords amendts (15.09.03) 662
Questions
Internet, Sight impaired 1150-1w
Iraq conflict 750w
NHS, Wales 845
Terrorism, Crime prevention 660w

Local authorities
Capita 959w

Local criminal justice boards
1219-22w

Local exercise action programme
1313-4w

Local government
Absent voting 964w

Local government—continued
Manpower 36w

Local Government Act 1988
Questions
Homosexuality 452-3w

Local Government Bill 2002/03
Chamber Debates
Lords amendts (17.09.03) 1021-40
Programme motion and Lords amendts (15.09.03) 594-692
Royal Assent (18.09.03) 1122

Local government finance
64ws, (10.09.03) 445-52, 1027-9w, 1031-2w
Census 737w
Greater London 737w
North West region 735w
Sefton 735-7w
West Midlands 1027-8w
Worcester 1031w

Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1982
Questions
1028w

Location
Armed forces 40-1w
Dept for Constitutional Affairs 1035w
Dept for Culture Media and Sport 23w
Health centres 243w
Ministry of Defence 1158-9w
NHS Direct 1326-8w

Locums
203-4w
Expenditure 157w

Logistics
Armed forces 26-7ws, 952w

London
see Greater London

London airports
412w
Parking 505w

London Local Authorities and Transport for London Bill (HL) 2001/02
Chamber Debates
Rep* (16.09.03) 701

London Underground
Dept for Transport 884w
Public private partnerships 57ws
Terrorism 758-9w

Londonderry
Homicide 729-30w

Lorries
Postal services 548w
Taxation 1101w

Lorry drivers
France 503w

Lost working days
1094w

Lotteries
Charities 957-8w

Loughs Agency
817-8w

Loughton, Tim
Westminster Hall Debates
Diabetes (09.09.03) 5wh, 8wh, 17-9wh
Questions
Adur Arun and Worthing Primary Care Trust, Arthritis 163w
Agency nurses, Expenditure 157w
Ambulance services, Standards 160w
Anaemia 161-2w
Anaemia, Screening 162w

Loughton, Tim—continued
Arthritis, Drugs 269w
Aviation, Security 689w
BSE 168w
Cancer, Drugs 186w
Cancer, Waiting lists 332-4w
Children, Death 1127w
Children, Kidnapping 662w
Children, Protection 661-2w, 1122-3w, 1126-7w
Chlamydia infection, Screening 173w
Dental services, West Sussex 234-5w
Developing countries, Water 436w
Doctors, Manpower 182w
Eyesight, Surgery 186w
General practitioners, Contracts 193w
General practitioners, Part-time employment 196-8w
General practitioners, Vacancies 194-5w
Health education, Sex 231w
Health services, Security 154-5w
Hip replacements 200w, 975w
Hospital beds 1312w
Hospitals, Construction 223-5w
Hospitals, Standards 202w
Hospitals, Waiting lists 271w, 980-1w
Lincolnshire Partnership NHS Trust 423w, 1314-6w
Mental health services 210-3w, 216-8w
Mental health services, Asylum 211-2w
Mental health services, Children 215w
Mental health services, Expenditure 215w
Mental health services, Females 214-5w
Mental health services, Homelessness 214w
Mental health services, Manpower 216w
Mental health services, West Sussex 217w
Midwives, Manpower 221w
NHS, Fees and charges 977w
NHS, Private sector 709-10
NHS, Public appointments 244w
NHS, Standards 172w
NHS Direct 236w
NHS Direct, Nurses 236w
NHS Direct, Per capita costs 236w
Nurses, Age 245w
Nurses, Family practitioner services 246-7w
Nurses, Foreign workers 246w
Nurses, Manpower 245w
Patients, Death 252w
Pornography, Children 1239w
Post-operative care, Children 857-9w
Sexually transmitted diseases 231w
Sexually transmitted diseases, Young people 172-3w
Surgery, Waiting lists 272w
Teenage pregnancy 110-1w
Tomography 253w
Transplant surgery, Infectious diseases 158-9w
Vaccination 166w
Vaccination, Infectious diseases 1310w

Love, Mr Andrew
Questions
Assets Recovery Agency, Northern Ireland 311-2
Burundi 65-6w, 81w
Credit unions 97-8w
Cyprus, Entry clearances 591w, 675w
Electoral register 1032-3w
Higher education, Research 449-50w
Lebanon, Syrian Arab Republic 375w
Olympic Games, Greater London 526w
Palestinians, Asylum 87-8w, 375w
Provident societies 98w
Sierra Leone, Overseas aid 89w
Sierra Leone, Peace keeping operations 69w
Teenage pregnancy 1149w

Low flying
954-5w, 1166-9w
Complaints 1168-9w
Health 1314w
Night flying 62ws
Wales 848

Low incomes
908-10w, 1085-6w
Housing 611w, 633w, 739-40w

Low pay
Foreign workers 875-6w

Lucas, Ian
Questions
Incapacity benefit, Appeals 342w

Luff, Mr Peter
Chamber Debates
Arms Control and Disarmament (Inspections) Bill (HL), 2R (18.09.03) 1108-15, 1121
Electricity (16.09.03) 726
Westminster Hall Debates
Accident and emergency departments (10.09.03) 81-3wh
Questions
Acute beds, Worcestershire 630w
Agriculture, EC enlargement 918-9w
Business questions 1081-2
Cathedrals 522w
EC enlargement, Work permits 991w
Gangmasters 694w, 743w, 764-5w, 775-6w, 911-2w
Health visitors, Worcestershire 619w, 1304w
Industrial health and safety, Agriculture 899w
Judiciary, Public appointments 165
National Lottery 575-6
Vocational education, Eligibility 688-9w
Warships, Procurement 39w
Worcestershire Royal Hospital 619w

Luke, Mr Iain
Chamber Debates
Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission Etc) Bill (HL), Allocation of time motion, 2R and rem stages (17.09.03) 1005
Westminster Hall Debates
East coast railway line (16.09.03) 227-32wh
Questions
Northern Ireland government 317
Small businesses, Scotland 150
Students, Fees and charges 324

Lung cancer
Death rate 601w

Lung diseases
Gloucestershire 625w

Lymphoedema
Gloucestershire 621-2w
Medical treatments 621-2w

Lynx helicopters
RNAS Yeovilton 1173w

Lyons, Mr John
Westminster Hall Debates
Roads, Freight (17.09.03) 247wh

M6
884w, 1061w

McCafferty, Ms Chris
Chamber Debates
Iraq (08.09.03) 50-1

McDonagh, Ms Siobhain
Questions
NHS treatment centres, Greater London 857

Macdonald, Mr Calum
Questions
Post offices, Scotland 369w

MacDougall, Mr John
Questions
Developing countries, Trade agreements 880w
Winter fuel payments, Scotland 370w

McGrady, Mr Eddie
Questions
Aerials, Northern Ireland 728-9w
Civil service, Northern Ireland 710-1w
Colombia, Human rights 67w
Disabled, Northern Ireland 466-7w, 816-7w
Down Lisburn HSS Trust, Finance 575w
EC grants and loans, Northern Ireland 475-6w
First time buyers, Northern Ireland 713w
Forced labour 650-1w
Home information packs, Northern Ireland 713-4w
Iraq, Reconstruction 557w
Israel, Detainees 19w
Neurology, Northern Ireland 471-2w
Northern Ireland Coownership Housing Association 715w
Organs, Northern Ireland 715-6w
Orthopaedics, Northern Ireland 472-3w
Planning permission, Northern Ireland 822-4w
Public expenditure, Northern Ireland 816w
Public expenditure, Northern Ireland Office 815w
Social security appeal tribunals, Northern Ireland 578-9w
Standards, Northern Ireland Office 816w
THORP 425w

McGuire, Mrs Anne, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept for Constitutional Affairs and Scotland Office
Questions
Aircraft carriers, Scotland 638w
Annual reports, Scotland Office 418w
Aviation, Scotland 638w
BSE, Disease control 581w
Common agricultural policy, Scotland 369w
Constituencies, Scotland 16w, 965w
Coral reefs, Scotland 369w
Dairy farming, Scotland 579-80w
Dover House 965w
Electoral register, Scotland 155-6
European Parliament elections, Scotland 961w
Ferries, Scotland 16w
Fisheries, Scotland 580-1w
Friends of Scotland 419w
Health, Scotland 370w
Information technology, Scotland Office 419w
Livestock, Scottish Islands 370w
Manpower, Dept for Constitutional Affairs 419w
Manpower, Scotland Office 418-9w
Manufacturing industries, Scotland 638w

McGuire, Mrs Anne*—*continued
Ministerial policy advisors, Scotland Office 966w
National income 16w
Official visits, Scotland Office 965-6w
Ports, Rosyth 17w
Post offices, Scotland 369w
Quality Meat Scotland 581w
Scottish Agricultural College 369-70w
Scottish Parliament, Legislative competence 637-8w
Scottish Parliament, Members 17w
Secondment, Scotland Office 419w
Sewel motions, Scotland Office 581w
Supreme Court 151-2
Wind power, Scotland 17w
Winter fuel payments, Scotland 370w

McIntosh, Miss Anne
Questions
Administration of justice, EC action 470-1
Afghanistan, Detainees 592-3w
Airports 410w
Arms trade, Israel 1154w
BSE 285-6w
Church of England, Finance 522w
Common agricultural policy, Wales 850
Common sugar regime, Reform 931w
Crime, Rural areas 56-8w
Devolution, Scotland 158
European fighter aircraft 1-2
Foreign policy, Ethics 1105w
Forensic Science Service 807w
Health insurance 710
Hospital beds 858
Incapacity benefit, Employment tribunals 1050-1w
Livestock, Transport 770w
Livestock, Waste disposal 537w
London Underground, Terrorism 758w
Mental Incapacity Bill (Draft) 753-4w
National insurance contributions, Shipping 1095w
Post offices, Urban areas 1065
Rural development programme 635w, 778w
Students, Loans 791-3w
Terrorism, Aviation 797w

McIsaac, Shona
Westminster Hall Debates
Coastal areas, Regeneration (10.09.03) 113-5wh
Questions
Committee on Standards in Public Life, Public appointments 867w
European fighter aircraft 3
Health insurance 710

MacKay, Rt Hon Andrew
Questions
Business questions 1076
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 3-5
Students, Fees and charges 463-4
Timetabling of bills 169-70

McKechin, Ann
Chamber Debates
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 875

Mackinlay, Andrew
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 498
Defence, Points of order (11.09.03) 487
Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission Etc) Bill (HL), Allocation of time motion, 2R and rem stages (17.09.03) 884, 886-8, 910, 931, 978, 988-9, 1002-6, 1008
Questions
Business questions 479

Mackinlay, Andrew—continued*
David Kelly Death Inquiry 351w
Depleted uranium, Theft 58w, 938-9w
Kelly, David 332w
NHS, Recruitment 713

McLoughlin, Mr Patrick
Chamber Debates
Business questions intervention (18.09.03) 1075
Deferred divisions, Points of order (10.09.03) 334
Electricity (16.09.03) 725-6, 732, 769-70
European Union (16.09.03) 787-8, 821-2
Iraq (09.09.03) 200
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 59
Questions
Business questions 1079
Debates, Reform 168
Supreme Court, Costs 165

McNamara, Mr Kevin
Questions
Armed forces, Injuries 2w
Asylum, Custodial treatment 63w
Education maintenance allowance, Kingston upon Hull 984w
Hare coursing, Northern Ireland 714w
Hares, Northern Ireland 719-20w
Police Service of Northern Ireland 577w
Police stations, Asbestos 825w
Security Forces Collusion with Loyalist Terrorists Inquiry 580w

McNulty, Mr Tony, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept for Transport*
Westminster Hall Debates
Roads, Freight (17.09.03) 257-63wh
Transport, Greater London (16.09.03) 192-5wh
Written Statements
London Underground, Public private partnerships 57ws
Questions
Airports 410w
Airports, Construction 882-3w
Airports, Languages 505w
Asbestos, Dept for Transport 1055w
Aviation 277-8w, 388w, 883w
Aviation, Air conditioning 388-9w
Aviation, Passengers 504w
Aviation, Security 689w, 761w
Aviation, Standards 760w
Ballooning 1055-8w
Blue badge scheme 274-5w
Bus services, Merseyside 275-6w, 278w
Cyprus Turkish Airlines, Complaints 759w
Deep vein thrombosis 505-6w, 883w
Docklands light railway line, Bicycles 1059w
East Midlands Airport 759w
European Aviation Safety Agency 389w
Food, Dept for Transport 1058-60w
GB Railways, First Group 277w
London Underground, Terrorism 758-9w
Manpower, Dept for Transport 276w
Mayor of London 884w
Microsoft, Dept for Transport 884-5w
Official visits, Dept for Transport 391w
Public transport 508w
Public transport, Finance 1063w
Railway stations, Disabled 692w
Railways, Freight 277w, 507-8w
Railways, Loans 276w
Railways, Merseyside 278-9w, 389-90w
Railways, Repairs and maintenance 276-7w
Railways, Standards 278w, 511w
Reading Station 279w

McNulty, Mr Tony—continued*
Redhill Aerodrome 885w
Rolling stock 1062w
Silverlink Trains, Standards 279w
Sites of special scientific interest, Dept for Transport 691-2w
Sky marshals 761w
Terrorism, Greater London 409w
Thameslink railway line 511w
Transport, Air pollution 278w
Transport, Crosby 414w
Transport, Devolution 759w
Transport, Finance 1059-60w
Transport, Merseyside 760w
Transport, Repairs and maintenance 886w
Transport, Schools 279w
Transport, Urban areas 280w
Transport, Warrington 761w
Transport, Working hours 887w
Walking 278w
Written questions, Dept for Transport 760-1w

MacShane, Mr Denis, Minister for Europe, Foreign and Commonwealth Office*
Chamber Debates
Arms Control and Disarmament (Inspections) Bill (HL), 2R (18.09.03) 1107-8, 1114, 1119-22
European Union (16.09.03) 804, 807, 818-21
Written Statements
Council of Ministers 15-6ws
Questions
Al Qaeda 436w
Algeria 784-5w
Arms trade 764w
Baltic Sea, Chemical weapons 1111-2w
Colombia, Hostages 1105w
Convention on the Future of Europe 18w, 322-3w, 591-2w, 786w, 1108-9w, 1112w
Cyprus, Education 785-6w
EC enlargement 1113w, 1115w
EC enlargement, Immigration 593w
EC enlargement, Work permits 991w
Heads of state, Assassination 1113-4w
Iran, Arms trade 324w
Iraq, Weapons 676w
Moldova, Peace keeping operations 325-6w
Moldova, Weapons 677w
Portugal, Embassies 1115w
Serbia and Montenegro, Religious freedom 992w
Tobacco, EC action 786w
UK trade with EC 1113w

Mactaggart, Fiona, Parliamentary Under-Secretary, Home Office*
Chamber Debates
Antisocial behaviour (11.09.03) 564-70
Written Statements
Fund raising, Licensing 16-7ws
Voluntary organisations, Finance 49-50ws
Questions
Antisemitism, Schools 366w
Antisemitism, West Midlands 378w
Community relations, Religion 586w
Experience Corps 939w
Fund raising, Self-regulation 799-804w
Information technology, Home Office 59w
Internet, Home Office 57w
Labour turnover, Home Office 57w
Manpower, Home Office 1213w
Microsoft, Home Office 1236w
Official hospitality, Home Office 57w

Mactaggart, Fiona—continued*
Pensioners, Community development 55w
Sites of special scientific interest, Home Office 812w
Somalis, Race relations 1252w
Voluntary organisations 1254w
Written questions, Home Office 1241w

McWalter, Mr Tony
Chamber Debates
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 876
Questions
Business questions 480
National Lottery, Sports 572-3

Maeer, Charmaine
702w

Maghaberry Prison
5-6ws

Magistrates
Recruitment 1044w
Warrington 1044w

Magistrates' courts
498-9w

Magnetic resonance imagers
1323w
Somerset 221-4w

Maharaj, Krishna
1114w

Mahon, Mrs Alice
Chamber Debates
Iraq (08.09.03) 44, (09.09.03) 198-9, 216, 218, 227-31

Maintenance
Children 19-20w, 442-4w, 558w, 569w, 694-5w, 710w
Northern Ireland 569w, 710w

Maize
376w

Males
Rape 728w

Malins, Mr Humfrey
Questions
Asylum 1207-8w
Asylum, Extradition 1248w
Berezovsky, Boris 1207w

Mallaber, Judy
Questions
Meat, Smuggling 328

Mallon, Mr Seamus
Chamber Debates
Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission Etc) Bill (HL), Allocation of time motion, 2R and rem stages (17.09.03) 892-4, 903, 914, 917-26, 970-1, 975-6, 990, 1004-5, 1008
Questions
Health services, Northern Ireland 470w
NHS trusts, Northern Ireland 470-1w
Northern Ireland education and library boards 468w
Northern Ireland Equality Commission 817w
Northern Ireland government 316
Northern Ireland Strategic Investment Board 831w
Pilot schemes, Northern Ireland Office 491-2w
Roads, Newry 727w

Mallusk
Public inquiries 473-4w

Managers
NHS 227-8w
NHS Direct 236-7w

Manchester
Social security benefits 21-2ws

Mandelson, Peter
407w

Manufacturing Advisory Service
871-2w

Manufacturing industries
328-9
Scotland 638w
Skilled workers 876-7w
South East region 871w
Wales 845-7

Mapeley
1061w

Maps
Farms 302w

Marine animals
Sonar 417w

Market research
Northern Ireland Office 462w

Marketing
Farmers 292w
Tourism 528w

Markets
Farmers 291w

Married people
Entry clearances (17.09.03) 264-71wh

Marris, Rob
Chamber Debates
Elderly (10.09.03) 356-61, 378
Questions
Higher education, Admissions 553-4w, 797w
Modern apprenticeships 686w
Students, Fees and charges 465

Marsden, Mr Gordon
Westminster Hall Debates
Coastal areas, Regeneration (10.09.03) 108-10wh
Questions
Roads, Accidents 411w

Marsden, Mr Paul
Westminster Hall Debates
Accident and emergency departments (10.09.03) 86wh
Dental services (09.09.03) 30-5wh, 51wh
Questions
Antenatal care 183-4w
Baker, Ellie 665-6w
Civil service agencies, Dept of Health 970w
Dental health, Children 268-9w
Dental services, Shropshire 1276-8w
Health services, Homelessness 257-8w
Health services, Sleeping rough 12w
Hyperactivity, Drugs 218-9w
Injuries 244w
Obesity, Surgery 1357w
Prescription drugs, Children 3w
Ritalin 848-9w
Sibutramine 261-2w

Marsh Arabs
Iraq 1009w

Marshall, Mr David
Westminster Hall Debates
Roads, Freight (17.09.03) 246wh, 248wh
Questions
Bees, Varroasis 931-2w
Cyprus Turkish Airlines, Complaints 759w
Members, Correspondence 56w

Marshall, Mr David—continued
Scottish Parliament, Members 17w

Martlew, Mr Eric
Chamber Debates
Elderly (10.09.03) 380, 382
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1101
Iraq (09.09.03) 219

Mass media
Trials 498w

Maternity leave
1067-8

Maternity services
7w, 205-6w, 1318w
Consultants 7-8w
Finance 206-7w
Oswestry 1316w
St Mary's Hospital Portsmouth 204-5w

Mates, Mr Michael
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 494-5
Questions
Aggregates, Northern Ireland 462w
Aggregates levy, Northern Ireland 95w

Mathematics
Curriculum 1140-1w
Standards 130w, 1137w

Mature students
Fees and charges 1136w, 1138w
Further education 981-2w
Northern Ireland 568w

Maude, Rt Hon Francis
Questions
Airports, South East region 533-4w
Aviation 412-3w
Gatwick Airport 413w, 506-7w
Gatwick Airport, Listed buildings 530w
London airports 412w
Redhill Aerodrome 413-4w

Mayor of London
884w

Meacher, Rt Hon Michael
Questions
Biofuels 689w
Food, Additives 1284w
Genetically modified organisms 776w
Israel, Land 594w
Middle East, Armed conflict 992w
Pensioners, Income support 696w

Means tested benefits
Pensioners 563-4w

Meat
Import controls 533w
Smuggling 328, 393-4w, 602w, 921-2w, 1309-10w

Medical equipment
Iraq 1010w

Medical records
174w, 208-9w

Medical treatments
Arthritis 1262-3w
Lymphoedema 621-2w
NHS treatment centres 180w
Overseas visitors 1296w
Pain 251-2w
Research 978w
Smoking 1349w

Medical treatments abroad
167w, 231-2w, 250w

Medicine
Education 1149-50w

Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency
255w, 622w, 976w

Members
Correspondence 20w, 56w, 456w, 597-8w, 609w, 680-1w, 745w, 773w, 863w, 1078w, 1102w, 1216w, 1227-8w
Postal services 1076w
Scottish Parliament 17w

Members' suspension
Betts, Clive (11.09.03) 488-90

Men
see Males

Mental Health Bill (Draft)
Questions
343w

Mental health services
209-13w, 216-8w
Adur Arun and Worthing Primary Care Trust 217w
Advocacy 836-7w
Asylum 211-2w
Children 215w, 218w
Ethnic groups 209w
Expenditure 215w
Females 214-5w
Health professions 847-8w
Hearing impaired 848w
Homelessness 214w
Manpower 216w
Northern Ireland 573w
Respite care 1319w
Somerset 211w
West Sussex 217w

Mental Incapacity Bill (Draft)
Questions
332w, 753-4w

Mentally ill
Employment schemes 343w
Northern Ireland 821w
Prescription drugs 255w

Mercer, Patrick
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 501-2, 509, 554
Electricity (16.09.03) 738-9, 755, 762-3
Questions
Afghanistan, Peace keeping operations 343w
Audit, Ministry of Defence 47w
Entry clearances, Security 1241-2w
Health Protection Agency, Finance 618w
Health services, Terrorism 1303-4w
Joint Terrorism Analysis Centre 397-8w
Passports, Fraud 945w
Terrorism 501w
Terrorism, Greater London 409w

Mercury
Vaccination 1355-6w

Merron, Ms Gillian, An Assistant Whip
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 559

Mersey Regional Ambulance Service NHS Trust
1319-20w

Mersey tunnel
Accountancy 277w, 1062w

Mersey Tunnels Bill 2001/02
Chamber Debates
Order for further consideration read (09.09.03) 149, (16.09.03) 701

Merseyside
Biotechnology 1069-70w
Bus services 275-6w, 278w

Merseyside—continued*
EC grants and loans 433w
Health services 1298w
Railways 278-9w, 389-90w
Social services 1298w
Transport 760w

Merseyside Police
944w

Methicillin resistant staphylococcus aureus
202w, 1263-4w, 1323-4w
Death 620-1w

Metropolitan Police
650w
Disciplinary proceedings 670w
Finance 1235-6w

Meyer, Catherine
1033w

Michael, Rt Hon Alun, Minister of State, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs*
Written Statements
"Rural Payments Agency Annual Report and Accounts, 2002/03" 59ws
Questions
Airports, South East region 533-4w
Asbestos, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1176-7w
Cattle, Transport 534w
Common land, Urban areas 543-4w
Computers, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 634w
Consultants, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1178-9w
Correspondence, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 287-8w
Countryside Agency 288-9w
Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 534-6w
Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs, Correspondence 287w
Farms, Maps 302w
Food, Procurement 284-5w, 290w
Freedom of information, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 307w
Hunting Bill 2002/03 388w
Lantra 540w, 634-5w, 777w, 922w
Livestock, Waste disposal 537w
Manpower, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 535-6w, 538-40w
Microsoft, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1185-6w
Nature conservation 772-3w
Rural areas, Broadband 387w
Rural areas, Housing 386w, 1192w
Rural areas, Training 543w, 635-6w
Rural areas, Transport 311-2w
Rural development programme 635w, 778w
Rural Payments Agency, Standards 635w
Secondment, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1194-5w
Written questions, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 925-6w

Microfinance
Developing countries 554w

Microsoft
Dept for Constitutional Affairs 1044w
Dept for Culture Media and Sport 958w
Dept for Education and Skills 1141w
Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1185-6w
Dept for International Development 1013w
Dept for Transport 884-5w
Dept for Work and Pensions 1053w
Foreign and Commonwealth Office 787w

Microsoft—continued*
Home Office 1236w
Leader of the House of Commons 636w
Treasury 1094-5w

Mid Essex Hospital Services NHS Trust
Waiting lists 177w, 252w, 622-3w

Middle East
Armed conflict 992w
Peace negotiations 594w
Politics and government 1013-4w

Midwives
1316-7w, 1322w, 1325w
Administration 1266w
Manpower 7w, 207w, 221w
Pay 207-8w

Miliband, Mr David, Minister of State for Schools, Dept for Education and Skills*
Chamber Debates
Local Government Bill, Lords amendts (15.09.03) 685
Teachers (09.09.03) 249, 252-60
Questions
Children, Day care 116-8w
Circulars, Dept for Education and Skills 135-7w, 680w
City academies 118w
Classroom assistants, Crosby 681w
Classroom assistants, South East region 118w
Classroom assistants, Taunton 149w
Earned autonomy scheme 1131w
Education, Assessments 123w, 459-61
Education, Buckinghamshire 793w
Education, Crosby 681-2w
Education, Finance 467-9
English language, Standards 1137w
GCE A level, Languages 380-1w
GCE AS level 338w
General certificate of secondary education 381-2w, 449w
General Teaching Council 119w
Gifted children 129w, 1136w
Grant maintained schools, Inspections 451w
Jean Monnet action 129-30w
Learning and skills councils, Islington 131w
Literacy, Standards 985-6w
Local Government Act 1988, Homosexuality 452-3w
Mathematics, Standards 1137w
Members, Correspondence 680-1w
National Academy for Gifted and Talented Youth 684w
Physics, Curriculum 1140-1w
Pre-school education, South West region 122w
Primary education 131w
Primary education, Assessments 382-3w
Primary education, Buckinghamshire 793-4w
Publicity, Dept for Education and Skills 121-2w
Pupil exclusions 381-2w, 687-8w
Regional government, Dept for Education and Skills 135w
Scholarships, Companies 1131-2w
School meals 109-10w
School milk 124w
Schools, Admissions 1129w
Schools, Arson 446-7w
Schools, Broadband 115w
Schools, Buckinghamshire 985w
Schools, Finance 120w, 124w, 339-40w, 446w, 1144w
Schools, Inspections 339w
Schools, Laboratories 138-9w

Miliband, Mr David—continued*
Schools, Leicester 116w, 139-40w
Schools, Police 985w
Schools, Standards 448w
Schools, Transport 124w
Schools, Uniforms 983w
Secondary education, Admissions 1123-4w
Secondary education, Buckinghamshire 986w
Secondary education, Teaching methods 1141-2w
Specialist schools 457-8
Specialist schools, General certificate of secondary education 449w
Specialist schools, Hearing impaired 550w
Teachers 134-5w
Teachers, Buckinghamshire 1143-4w
Teachers, Citizenship 984-5w
Teachers, Conditions of employment 684-5w, 796-7w
Teachers, Crimes of violence 148w
Teachers, Greater London 148-9w
Teachers, Leeds 145w
Teachers, Life expectancy 688w
Teachers, Manpower 148w
Teachers, Pay 142w
Teachers, Performance appraisal 1147-8w
Teachers, Redundancy 112w, 142-4w, 462-3, 1148w
Teachers, Training 133-4w, 144-5w, 1148-9w
Teachers, Vacancies 145-7w

Military aircraft
see also Low flying
Helicopters 746w

Military alliances
Iraq 1152w

Military bases
Catterick 702-3w
USA 53-4w

Military decorations
414-5w
World War II 14-5

Military police
49-50w
Chichester 349w
Deployment 350w, 1171w
Iraq 44w
Procurement 1170w
Training 348-50w
West Sussex 48w

Milk
922-6w

Millennium Exhibition
Robbery 1239w

Miller, Mr Andrew
Chamber Debates
European Union (16.09.03) 777
Questions
Army, Manpower 17
Business questions 485
Education, Finance 468

Minister for Women
Written questions 870

Ministerial duties
Dept of Health 221-2w

Ministerial policy advisors
407w
Civil servants 33-4ws
Dept of Health 270w
Ministry of Defence 3w
Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 38w

Ministerial policy advisors—continued
Prime Minister 18w, 745-6w
Scotland Office 966w
Treasury 603w

Ministerial powers
Pupil exclusions 794w

Ministerial statements
36w
Children (08.09.03) 21-35
European Union (09.09.03) 171-87
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1086-104
Iraq (08.09.03) 36-54
Northern Ireland Office 492w
Office of the Deputy Prime Minister 744w
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 861-76

Ministers
Codes of practice 521w
Intelligence services 522w

Ministry of Defence
Asbestos 746w
Assets 703-4w
Audit 47w
Consultation papers 398-400w
Finance 1158w
Food 1160-1w
Location 1158-9w
Ministerial policy advisors 3w
Official hospitality 42w
Secondment 352-6w
Sites of special scientific interest 1173w
Vehicles 1153-4w

Ministry of Defence Police
Standards 415w

Misleading advertising
872w
Food 1283w
Holidays 876w

Misuse
Drugs 842-3w, 856-7, 1227w
Solvents 264w

Mitchell, Mr Andrew
Chamber Debates
Elderly (10.09.03) 360-5
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1101
Ministers, Points of order (15.09.03) 591
Oral question time intervention (18.09.03) 1069
Questions
Business questions 479-80, 1075-6
Churches, Disabled 587
Elderly, Care homes 705
Tax burden 319w

Mitchell, Mr Austin
Questions
Consultants, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1178-9w
Consultants, Dept for International Development 1005w
Consultants, Dept of Health 1272w
Consultants, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 990-1w
Council housing 742-3w
Council housing, Finance 742w
Council housing, Property transfer 740-1w, 1023-4w
Council housing, Standards 743w
Health professions, Uniforms 6w
Hospitals, Cleaning services 6w
Housing associations, Standards 741-2w
Teachers, Redundancy 112w

MMR vaccine
Dorset 222w
Somerset 222w

Mobile homes
612w

Mobile phone masts
see Aerials

Mobile phones
see Cellular phones

Modern apprenticeships
549-50w, 686-7w, 790-2w

Modernisation of the House of Commons Select Committee
(08.09.03) 142

Moffatt, Laura
Questions
Defence Logistics Organisation 39w
Infectious diseases 1271w
Manufacturing industries, South East region 871w
Welfare tax credits, Administrative delays 106w

Moldova
Peace keeping operations 325-6w
Weapons 677w

Mongolia
Official visits 869w

Monmouthshire
Pensioners 913w

Montserrat
Volcanoes 41-2ws

Moore, Mr Michael
Chamber Debates
Arms Control and Disarmament (Inspections) Bill (HL), 2R (18.09.03) 1115-6
Westminster Hall Debates
United Nations (11.09.03) 154-9wh, 173wh

Morgan, Julie
Questions
Business questions 481-2
Debates, Reform 167-8

Morley, Mr Elliot, Minister of State for the Environment, Dept of Environment Food and Rural Affairs*
Chamber Debates
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 56-65, 74, 77-8, 107
Westminster Hall Debates
Energy, Conservation (10.09.03) 95-8wh
Flood control, Lewes (10.09.03) 135-8wh
Packaging, Regulation (09.09.03) 25-9wh
Questions
Abandoned vehicles 770w
Aggregates levy 1174w
Agriculture, Waste disposal 1198w
Biodiversity, Departmental coordination 364w
Carbon Trust 408w, 1177-8w
Cement 918w
Climate change 289-90w
Climate change, European Union 301w
Combined heat and power 771-2w
Compost 1178w
Consumer goods, Radioactive materials 1192w
Domestic wastes, Recycling 312w, 408w
Domestic wastes, Waste management 1199w
Electronic equipment, Waste disposal 773w
Energy, Conservation 1181w
Environment protection, Companies 280-1w
Environment protection, Small businesses 281w

Morley, Mr Elliot—continued
Export credit guarantees 302w
Flood control 304-5w
Flood control, Buckinghamshire 774w
Flood control, Lincolnshire 304-5w
Flood control, Tendring 928w
Fluoride 305-6w
Fluoride, Drinking water 775w
Genetically modified organisms 776-7w
Genetically modified organisms, Acrylamide 365w
Genetically modified organisms, Crops 308w, 387-8w
Genetically modified organisms, Regulation 364-5w
Genetically modified organisms, Weedkillers 365w
Incinerators 314w
Members, Correspondence 773w
OSPAR Commission 309w
Pollution control 771w
Postal services, Railways 778w
Radioactive Waste Management Committee 772w
Radioactive wastes 281-2w, 770w
Radioactive wastes, EC action 365-6w
Recycling 311w
River Nene 311w
River Thames, Floods 774-5w
UN Commission on Sustainable Development 931w
Waste disposal, Taxation 779-80w
Waste management 769-70w
Water, Pollution 636w, 780w
Water abstraction 1174w
Water companies 408-10w
Wood 778-9w

Morris, Rt Hon Ms Estelle, Minister of State for the Arts, Dept for Culture Media and Sport*
Questions
BBC, Digital broadcasting 22w
Community Fund 23w, 26w
Creative partnerships initiative 119-20w
Digital broadcasting 956-7w
Digital broadcasting, Scotland 578-9
Elgin marbles 335w
Environmental impact assessment, Dept for Culture Media and Sport 23-4w
Film, Finance 1046-7w
Film, Hearing impaired 525-6w
Film, North East region 956-7w
Government art collection 532w
Museums and galleries 530-1w
Museums and galleries, Fees and charges 421w
National Lottery 24-7w, 531w, 575-6
National Lottery, Coastal areas 1047-8w
National Lottery, Devolution 27w
National Lottery, Scotland 22w
Office of Communications, Pay 27w
Pornography, Finance 378w
Scottish Land Fund 28w
Sports, Finance 532w
Television, Advertising 782-3w, 958-9w
Television, Licensing 30-1w
Television, Obscenity 530w
Television, Smoking 1350w
Television channels 22-3w
Theatre, Finance 573-4

Mortgages
Pensions 1095w

Moss, Mr Malcolm
Chamber Debates
Local Government Bill, Lords amendts (15.09.03) 653
Questions
Athletics, North East region 574-5

Moss, Mr Malcolm—continued*
East Cambridgeshire and Fenland Primary Care Trust, Sexually transmitted diseases 230w
English Sports Council, Finance 532w
Olympic Games, Greater London 334w, 526-7w
Physical education, Schools 335-6w
Playing fields, Sales 633w
Tourism 29-30w, 336w
Tourism, Publicity 378-80w
Tourism, Tolls 422w
Tourist boards 379w

Motor neurone disease
Prescription drugs 11w

Motor vehicles
Crime 1253w
Crime prevention 1253-4w
Excise duties 827-8w, 969-70w
Northern Ireland 821-2w, 827-8w, 832-3w
Pollution control 1055w
Salvage 1238w
Waste disposal 1179w

Motorway service areas
Closed circuit television 885w

Motorways
1062w
Freight 1062w

Mourne
Sheep 713w

Mullin, Mr Chris, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office*
Westminster Hall Debates
Iran (17.09.03) 299-302wh
Written Statements
"British Council Annual Report and Accounts, 2002/03" 40-1ws
"Wilton Park Executive Agency Annual Report and Accounts, 2002/03" 11ws
Questions
Afghanistan, Detainees 323-4w
African Union, Zimbabwe 65w
Angola 65w
Atkinson, George 323w
Brazil, Prisoners 1110w
Burundi 65-6w, 1105w
Cyprus, Entry clearances 591w, 675w
Democratic Republic of Congo 675w
Democratic Republic of Congo, Human rights 675w
Democratic Republic of Congo, Peace keeping operations 67w
Entry clearances 1112-3w, 1118w
Entry clearances, Overseas students 673w, 678w, 784w, 1118w
Entry clearances, Overseas visitors 1119-22w
Gurkhas 677-8w
Iraq, Weapons 375w
Liberia 676w
Liberia, Peace negotiations 63-4w, 676-7w
Maharaj, Krishna 1114w
Rwanda, Arms trade 679w
Sao Tome and Principe 68-9w
Sierra Leone, Peace keeping operations 69w
Somalia 69-70w
Somalia, Entry clearances 595-6w
Sudan, Human rights 1116w
Sudan, Press freedom 1116w
Uganda 71w
Uganda, Armed conflict 678-9w
Uganda, Entry clearances 788w
Uganda, Human rights 678w

Multinational Chairman's Group
521w

Multiple sclerosis
Northern Ireland 721w

Murphy, Mr Denis
Chamber Debates
Housing, Easington (09.09.03) 304
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 103-5
Questions
Absent voting 614-5w
Criminal injuries compensation, Payments 585w

Murphy, Rt Hon Paul, Secretary of State for Northern Ireland*
Chamber Debates
Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission Etc) Bill (HL), Allocation of time motion, 2R and rem stages (17.09.03) 881-5, 888, 900-11
Written Statements
Maghaberry Prison 5-6ws
Northern Ireland Equality Commission, Public appointments 4-5ws
Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission etc) Bill (HL) 2002/03, European Convention on Human Rights 53ws
Questions
Crime (International Co-operation) Bill (HL) 2002/03, Northern Ireland 711w
Freedom of information, Northern Ireland Office 569w
Homicide, Londonderry 729-30w
Homicide, Northern Ireland 474w
Market research, Northern Ireland Office 462w
Northern Ireland government 314-8, 395w
Northern Ireland Strategic Investment Board 831w
Police Service of Northern Ireland, Reserve forces 725w
Rape, Males 728w
Security, Northern Ireland 476w
Security Forces Collusion with Loyalist Terrorists Inquiry 580w
Sexual offences, Northern Ireland 728w
Voting behaviour, Northern Ireland 463w
Weapons, Northern Ireland 313-4

Murrison, Dr Andrew
Questions
Computer viruses 762-3w
Internet, Disadvantaged 1136-7w
Music, Internet 873w
Numeracy, Reoffenders 452w

Museums and galleries
530-1w
Fees and charges 421w

Music
Internet 544-5w, 873w

Muslims
Students 986-7w

Nagorno Karabakh
68w

Nanotechnology
359w, 766w

National Academy for Gifted and Talented Youth
684w

"National Alcohol Harm Reduction Strategy Consultation Paper"
657w

"National Care Standards Commission Annual Report and Accounts, 2002/03"
14ws

National Crime Squad
1238w

National Criminal Intelligence Service
1238-9w

National Experience Corps
see Experience Corps

National Foundation for Educational Research
Finance 130-1w

National Grid
433w

National income
16w, 105-6w

National insurance contributions
327-8
Climate change levy 1095w
Further education 126w
Gloucestershire 969w
NHS 1095-6w
Rebates 904w
Shipping 1095w

National Insurance Fund
601w, 1096w

National Lottery
24-7w, 531w, 575-6
Coastal areas 1047-8w
Devolution 27w
Olympic Games 335w
Scotland 22w, 966w
Sports 572-3

National Lottery (Funding of Endowments) Bill 2002/03
Chamber Debates
Royal Assent (18.09.03) 1122

National parks
Phytophthora ramorum 927w

National Probation Directorate
1247w

National Probation Service for England and Wales
Manpower 587-8w

National savings
603w

National Statistics
see Office for National Statistics

National Treatment Agency
615w

National vocational qualifications
Fees and charges 685-6w

Nationality Immigration and Asylum Act 2002
Questions
934w

NATO
Science 517w

Nature conservation
772-3w, 1185w, 1189-90w

Navy
49w
Desertion 53w
Hydrography 43w
Recruitment 50w
Training 53w

Navy Army and Air Force Institutes
518w

Navy Army and Air Force Institutes*—*continued
Iraq 705w

Naysmith, Dr Douglas
Questions
Nurses 716
Teachers, Recruitment 453-4

Near Earth Objects Task Force
1075-6w

Negligence
Health professions 255w
Hospitals 849w

Neighbourhood Renewal Fund
45-7ws

Neill Committee
see Committee on Standards in Public Life

Nepal
787-8w
Entry clearances 677-8w, 1230-1w

Neurology
Manpower 10-1w
Northern Ireland 471-2w, 721-2w

New businesses
North East region 1078-80w

New deal for young people
910-2w

New deal schemes
696w

New Opportunities Fund
26w

New partnership for Africa's development
86w

New Scotland Yard
see Metropolitan Police

New towns
Petitions (15.09.03) 694

Newry
Roads 727w

Newspaper press
Distributive trade 647w

Newtownards
Bus lanes 832w

NHS
1258w, 1334w
Administration 850w
Ancillary staff 228w, 1261-2w, 1331w
Bureaucracy 839w
Compensation 329w
Disclosure of information 243-4w, 1357w
Email 849-50w
Emergencies 1288w
Equal opportunities 258w
Ethnic groups 225-6w
Executives 242w
Fees and charges 977w
Finance 239w, 242w, 1329-30w
Fraud 233w, 238w, 1326w
Freedom of information 1311-2w
Industrial health and safety 226-7w
Information 1310-1w
Information technology 977w, 1310w, 1312w
Laboratories 219-20w, 1321-2w
Management 1330-2w
Managers 227-8w
Manpower 225w, 227-8w, 1332w
National insurance contributions 1095-6w
Pay 11w, 242w, 327-8w, 980w, 1329w, 1352w
Pensions 52ws, 1329-30w
Private sector 708-10, 1342-3w

NHS*—*continued
Public appointments 244w, 1344-5w
Racial harassment 255-6w
Recruitment 240w, 711-3, 1323-4w
Redundancy 256w
Reform 1296w
Standards 172w
Stress 229w
Theft 265-6w
Thermal insulation 1288w
Transport 1298w
Wales 843-5

NHS Direct
236-7w, 1327-8w
Expenditure 235-6w
Finance 237w
Location 1326-8w
Managers 236-7w
Manpower 237-8w
Nurses 236-7w
Per capita costs 236w

NHS foundation trusts
189-90w, 701-2, 846w, 1295w
Finance 190w, 1295-6w
Governing bodies 189w
Recruitment 189w
Regulation 189-90w
Standards 190w

NHS Professionals
240-2w

NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency
255w

NHS treatment centres
706-7, 973-4w, 1279-80w
Fees and charges 180w
Greater London 857
Manpower 179-80w
Medical treatments 180w

NHS trusts
Northern Ireland 470-1w

Nicotine
Tobacco 1350w

Nigeria
Poliomyelitis 87w

Night flying
Low flying 62ws

Nolan Committee
see Committee on Standards in Public Life

Non-domestic rates
Diplomatic service 33ws
Northern Ireland 463w
Telecommunications 319w

Non-governmental organisations
Iraq 653w

Norman, Mr Archie
Questions
NHS, Public appointments 1345w

Norman Shaw Buildings
Repairs and maintenance 499w

Norris, Dan
Westminster Hall Debates
Keynsham Hospital (10.09.03) 123-8wh

North Africa
Politics and government 1013-4w

North Cheshire Hospitals NHS Trust
1302-3w

North East region
Athletics 574-5
Dental services 623-4w, 850w
Film 956-7w
Fines 1038w

North East region*—*continued
Foreign investment in UK 1074-5w
General practitioners 1318-9w
Health services 1325w
Homelessness 738w, 1025-6w
New businesses 1078-80w
Nurses 1318-9w
Sure start programme 1147w
Tourism 783w

North Korea
Nuclear weapons 441w

North Sea oil
Royalties 601-2w

North South Ministerial Council
475w

North Tyneside
Literacy 1139w
Numeracy 1141w
Pupil exclusions 794-6w

North West region
Chemicals 1071-2w
Internet 981w
Kidney patients 842w
Local government finance 735w

Northern Ireland
Aerials 490w, 728-9w
Aggregates 462w
Aggregates levy 95w
Agriculture 565-6w
Ambulance services 492w, 708w
Angling 468-9w
Arthritis 727w
Assets Recovery Agency 311-3
Asylum 55w
Autism 566-7w, 813-4w
Beef 567w
Broadband 709w
BSE 567-8w
Business 574w
Cancer 463w
Cardiovascular system 472-3w
Care homes 710w
Civil service 710-1w
Common agricultural policy 396w
Community development 476w
Community relations 463-4w
Conservation areas 465w
Crime 711w
Crime (International Co-operation) Bill (HL) 2002/03 711w
Cultural heritage 491w
Disabled 465-7w, 816-7w, 821w
District policing partnerships 723-4w
EC grants and loans 475-6w
Education 569-70w, 578w
Elderly 475w
Empty property 396w
Energy 468w
First time buyers 713w
Fisheries 318-9, 576-7w
Hare coursing 714w
Hares 470w, 719-20w
Health services 470w, 712w, 714w, 815w
Heart diseases 819-20w
Home helps 471w
Home information packs 713-4w
Homicide 474w
Hormone treatments 714w
Horses 574-5w
Hospitals 714w, 819-21w
Industrial investment 395-6w
Insurance 473w
Leisure 485-6w
Literacy 575-6w
Maintenance 569w, 710w
Mature students 568w
Mental health services 573w
Mentally ill 821w

Northern Ireland—continued
Motor vehicles 821-2w, 827-8w, 832-3w
Multiple sclerosis 721w
Neurology 471-2w, 721-2w
NHS trusts 470-1w
Non-domestic rates 463w
Numeracy 575-6w
Nurses 722-4w
Operating theatres 714w
Organs 709w, 715-9w
Orthopaedics 472-3w
Patients 730w
Pensioners 829-31w
Physiotherapy 822w
Planning permission 822-4w
Police 711w
Prescriptions 477w
Primary education 477-8w, 577w
Public bodies 478w
Public expenditure 712w, 816w
Pupil exclusions 728w
Radiography 826-7w
Radiotherapy 826-7w
Rape 728w
Recycling 726-7w
Reform and reinvestment initiative 479-80w
Refrigerators 478-9w
Regional assistance 469-70w, 818-9w
Respite care 827w
Road signs and markings 732w
Road works 828w
Roads 480w, 578w, 729-30w, 828w, 832w
Schools 480-1w, 828-9w
Screening 573w
Secondary education 725-6w
Security 476w
Sexual offences 728w
Small businesses 395w
Social security appeal tribunals 578-9w
Sports 570-4w, 728w
Suicide 726w
Teachers 490w, 580w, 831w
Television 30-1w
Tolls 711w
Tomography 833w
Transfer procedure tests 578w
Transport 832w
Victim support schemes 492w
Voting behaviour 463w
Water 730-2w, 834w
Water Bill (HL) 2002/03 833w
Weapons 313-4
Wildlife 396w

Northern Ireland Act 2000
Questions
817w

Northern Ireland Act 2000 (Modification) (No 2) Order 2003
Chamber Debates
(15.09.03) 692

Northern Ireland Coownership Housing Association
715w

Northern Ireland Cycling Federation
Finance 579w

Northern Ireland education and library boards
468w

Northern Ireland Equality Commission
468w, 817w
Public appointments 4-5ws

Northern Ireland government
314-8, 395w
Irish language 720-1w

Northern Ireland Grand Committee
(08.09.03) 140-1

Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission
577w

Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission Etc) Bill (HL) 2002/03
Chamber Debates
Allocation of time motion, 2R and rem stages (17.09.03) 881-1010, 1015-20
Order relating to Com (11.09.03) 559
Royal Assent (18.09.03) 1122
Written Statements
European Convention on Human Rights 53ws
Questions
474-9

Northern Ireland Office
Economic and monetary union 713w
Employment schemes 491w
Environmental impact assessment 570w
Freedom of information 569w
General practitioners 481w
Health professions 482w
Job creation 491-2w
Manpower 486-9w
Market research 462w
Ministerial statements 492w
Orders and regulations 713w
Pilot schemes 491-2w
Public expenditure 815w
Regulation 479w
Secondment 481-2w
Smoking 481-3w
Standards 816w

Northern Ireland Organised Crime Task Force
see Organised Crime Task Force

Northern Ireland Parades Commission
see Parades Commission

Northern Ireland Planning Appeals Commission
476-7w

Northern Ireland Police Service
see Police Service of Northern Ireland

Northern Ireland Strategic Investment Board
489w, 831w

Northern region
Hospitals 1338-9w

Norwich
Hospitals 262w

Notifiable diseases
1333w

Nuclear power stations
Temperature 547w

Nuclear submarines
Decommissioning 954w
Russia 72w
Scotland 954w

Nuclear weapons
North Korea 441w

Numeracy
1139w
North Tyneside 1141w
Northern Ireland 575-6w
Primary education 139w
Reoffenders 452w
Standards 985-6w

Nurses
716-7
Administration 1266w
Age 245w
Children 839-40w
Family practitioner services 246-7w
Foreign workers 246w

Nurses—continued
Leave 850-1w
Manpower 182w, 245w, 629w
NHS Direct 236-7w
North East region 1318-9w
Northern Ireland 722-4w
Recruitment 850-2w
Schools 1342w
Southend Hospital 1334w
Suicide 618w
Training 246w, 715-6, 851w, 1303w, 1333w

Nutrition
180-1w, 1280w
Disadvantaged 181w

Nuts
Allergies 1258-9w

Oaten, Mr Mark
Questions
Learning disability, Health services 621w
Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency 622w
Prisons, Overcrowding 1244-5w
Sir John Moore Barracks 52w

Obesity
247-9w, 1280-1w, 1283w
Alzheimer's disease 159w
Children 249w
Greater London 851w
Richmond upon Thames 851w
Surgery 1352-3w, 1357w

Obesity Awareness and Solutions Trust
1284w

O'Brien, Mr Mike, Minister of State for Trade, Foreign and Commonwealth Office and Dept of Trade*
Questions
Afghanistan, Armed forces 320w, 1106-7w
Afghanistan, Democracy 1107w
Afghanistan, Females 320w
Afghanistan, Peace keeping operations 321w, 787w, 1107-8w
Aung San Suu Kyi 321w, 988w
BAE Systems 425-6w
Baku-Tbilisi-Ceyhan oil pipeline 877w, 1069w
British overseas territories, Dept of Trade and Industry 426w
Bull, Subsidies 426-7w
Burma 783-4w
Burma, British American Tobacco 988w
Burma, Higher education 989w
Burma, Human rights 989w
Burma, Politics and government 989-90w
Burma, Tourism 989w
Cotton, Trade agreements 357w
Counterfeit manufacturing 873-4w
Defence equipment, Exhibitions 1064w
Developing countries, Companies 76w
Developing countries, Property 880w
Developing countries, Trade 435w
Developing countries, Trade agreements 880w
Developing countries, Water 436w
EC internal trade 762w
Export credit guarantees 645-6w, 1073w
Foreign investment in UK 432-3w
Indian subcontinent, Foreign relations 1109-10w
Indonesia, Armed conflict 323-4w
Iraq, Import duties 876w
Manpower, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 438-40w
Nepal 787-8w
Overseas trade 878w
Pakistan, Christianity 594w

O'Brien, Mr Mike*—*continued
Paper, Exports 77w
South Asia, Trade 1080-1w
Sub-Saharan Africa, Trade agreements 1073-4w
Textiles, Common customs tariffs 763-4w
Trade promotion, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 321w
USA, Foreign investment in UK 873w
Visits abroad, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 784w
World Trade Organisation 1065

O'Brien, Mr Stephen
Questions
Census 96w, 393w
Census, Costs 96-7w
Customs and Excise 99w
Customs and Excise, Expenditure 316w
EC budget 1083w
Economic and monetary union 1025w
Economic and monetary union, Economic growth 1092w
Economic and monetary union, Economic situation 101-2w
Economic and monetary union, Publicity 101w
Electronic government 14w
European Central Bank, Interest rates 1092w
Financial services, Fraud 1083w
Fraud, Credit cards 1201w
Fraud, Financial services 1201w
Gold and foreign exchange reserves 1092-3w
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 105w
Standards, Treasury 968-9w
Taxation, Self-assessment 316-9w, 394w
Taxation, Venture capital 106-7w

O'Brien, Mr William
Westminster Hall Debates
Packaging, Regulation (09.09.03) 22-3wh, 26wh, 28wh
Questions
Constituencies 588-90
Elderly, Community care 704

Obscenity
Television 530w

Occupational pensions
860

Oesophagus cancer
93-4w, 619-20w

Office for Civil Nuclear Security
877w

Office for Fair Access
Public appointments 1145-6w

Office for National Statistics
Finance 105w

Office for the Supervision of Solicitors
Reviews 33w

Office of Communications
Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration 877w
Pay 27w

Office of the Deputy Prime Minister
EC law 35w
Environmental impact assessment 319-20w
Manpower 959-61w
Ministerial statements 744w

"Office of the Deputy Prime Minister Select Committee on Reducing Regional Disparities in Prosperity"
28ws

Office of the e-Envoy
502-3w
Annual reports 653w

Office of the Secretary of State for Wales
Consultation papers 36-7w
Food 734w
Ministerial policy advisors 38w
Official visits 363-4w
Public appointments 421w
Race relations 38w
Regulatory impact assessments 38w

Offices
Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1192w

Official cars
501w
Bishops 524w
Dept of Health 377w

Official engagements
Advocate General for Scotland 17w
Dept for Culture Media and Sport 1048w
Prime Minister 634w
Scotland Office 581w

Official hospitality
Dept of Health 329w
Home Office 57w
Ministry of Defence 42w

Official residences
Bishops 523-4w
Royal family 571-2, 1048w

Official secrets
517w

Official visits
Dept for Constitutional Affairs 33w
Dept for Culture Media and Sport 648w
Dept for Education and Skills 339w
Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1186w
Dept for Transport 391w
Dept for Work and Pensions 1053-4w
Dept of Health 9-10w
Dept of Trade and Industry 76w
Leader of the House of Commons 36w
Mongolia 869w
Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 363-4w
Scotland Office 965-6w

Offshore industry
Wind power 384-5w, 433-4w

Oil
Shipping 509w

Older workers
693-4w
Employment services
Training 1142w
Vocational guidance 794w

Olympic Games
Greater London 334-5w, 526-8w, 576-8
National Lottery 335w

O'Neill, Mr Martin
Questions
Electronic equipment, Manpower 1062-3

Open prisons
Prisoner escapes 809w

Opening of Parliament
56ws

Operating theatres
Northern Ireland 714w

Ophthalmic services
Fees and charges 1336w

Opik, Lembit
Chamber Debates
Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission Etc) Bill (HL), Allocation of time motion, 2R and rem stages (17.09.03) 884, 888-9, 903-4, 910, 915, 923, 926-32, 942, 977, 990, 1005
Questions
Manufacturing industries, Wales 846
Near Earth Objects Task Force 1075-6w
Princess Royal Barracks 415w
VAT 1104w

"Opportunity For All Fifth Annual Report"
60ws

Opposition days
Elderly (10.09.03) 335-92
Electricity (16.09.03) 723-76
European Union (16.09.03) 777-828
Iraq (09.09.03) 190-244, (10.09.03) 393-435
Teachers (09.09.03) 245-301

Organ, Diana
Chamber Debates
Children (08.09.03) 34
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 59-60, 64, 71, 76
Questions
Dental services 714-5
Tourism 528w

Organic farming
Subsidies 925-6w

Organised crime
1218w

Organised Crime Task Force
Finance 723w

Organs
Donors 250-1w, 809-10w, 1336-7w
Northern Ireland 709w, 715-9w

Orphans
Kosovo 1012w

Orthopaedics
Northern Ireland 472-3w

Osborne, Mr George
Chamber Debates
Horse racing (18.09.03) 1132-4
Intelligence and Security Committee, Points of order (10.09.03) 334
Iraq (09.09.03) 218
Trade, Petitions (18.09.03) 1122
Questions
Business questions 1083-4
Constituencies 590
Intelligence and Security Committee 323-4
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 18-9
Museums and galleries 530-1w
Sixth form education 467
Supreme Court, Costs 164-5

Oshkosh tank transporters
47-9w

OSPAR Commission
309w

Oswestry
Maternity services 1316w

Ottaway, Richard
Chamber Debates
Electricity (16.09.03) 728-9, 734, 741, 747-53
Questions
Insolvency 596w
Iraq, Weapons 326

Ottaway, Richard—continued*
Iraq conflict 521w
Overseas aid, Family planning 1014-5w

Out-patients
1337w

Overcrowding
Prisons 1244-6w

Overpayments
Social security benefits 901-2w
Taxation 23ws

Overseas aid
897-8w, 1001w, 1005-6w
Afghanistan 1000-1w
Burma 1003-4w
Central Africa 890-2w
Developing countries 1009-10w
Family planning 1014-5w
HIV infection 1014-5w
Indian subcontinent 1018-9w
Iraq 652w, 1009-12w
Kosovo 893-4w
Sao Tome and Principe 88w
Sierra Leone 89w
Southern Africa 1019-20w
Sudan 90w
Vietnam 1020-1w

Overseas investment
Afghanistan 80w

Overseas students
Entry clearances 673w, 678w, 784w, 808-9w, 1118w, 1240w

Overseas trade
878w

Overseas visitors
Entry clearances 1119-22w
Medical treatments 1296w

"Oversight Commissioner Report, 8"
44ws

Packaging
Recycling 1198w
Regulation (09.09.03) 22-9wh

Paddington
Health services 177w, 706

Paedophilia
Criminal investigation 1241w
Prisoners' release 1241w
Sentencing 1240-1w

Page, Mr Richard
Chamber Debates
Horse racing (18.09.03) 1127-9, 1131
Iraq (09.09.03) 234-6
Questions
Iraq, Casualties 1151w
Iraq, Reconstruction 420w, 876w
Iraq conflict, Casualties 515-6w

Paice, Mr James
Westminster Hall Debates
Police (16.09.03) 205wh, 220-3wh
Questions
Sports, Tax allowances 582-3

Pain
1272w
Medical treatments 251-2w

Paisley, Rev Ian
Chamber Debates
European Union (16.09.03) 813-5
Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission Etc) Bill (HL), Allocation of time motion, 2R and rem stages (17.09.03) 884, 886, 893-7, 902-4, 908, 926, 943, 993, 1005-6
Questions
Weapons, Northern Ireland 314

Pakistan
Christianity 594w
Females 894w

Palace of Westminster
Repairs and maintenance 424w, 637w, 981w

Palestinians
Asylum 87-8w, 375w
Poverty 894w

Palmer, Dr Nick
Questions
Armed forces 13
Iraq, Weapons 407w

Paper
Exports 77w

Parades Commission
475w

Parking
London airports 505w
Queen Mary's Sidcup Hospital NHS Trust 979w
Stormont 483w

Parking offences
Diplomatic service 32-3ws

Parkinson's disease
11w

Parliament
Postal services 423-4w
Research 397w

Parliamentary Boundary Commission for Scotland
see Boundary Commission for Scotland

Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration
Office of Communications 877w

Parliamentary procedure
Devolution 170

Parliamentary scrutiny
Legislative drafting 168-9

Parliamentary tours
Tickets 499-500w

Part-time employment
General practitioners 196-8w

Passengers
Aviation 504w

Passport Agency
see United Kingdom Passport Service

Passport Office
806w

Passports
Applications 60-1w, 587w
British overseas territories 31ws
Fraud 945w

Paterson, Mr Owen
Questions
Ballooning 1055-8w
Hospitals, Birth rate 1316w
Maternity services 1318w
Maternity services, Oswestry 1316w
Midwives 1316-7w, 1325w
NHS, Recruitment 1323-4w
Robert Jones and Agnes Hunt Orthopaedic Hospital 1317-8w

Pathology
Cancer 1305-6w
Consultants 845w

Patients
British nationality 252-3w
Death 252w
Foreigners 852w

Patients—continued*
Northern Ireland 730w
Taxis 730w

Patients' forums
854w

Patrol craft
Falkland Islands 948w
Fisheries 706-7w
Operating costs 344w

Paulton Memorial Hospital
(10.09.03) 123-30wh

Pay beds
254w

Peace keeping operations
Afghanistan 10-1, 321w, 343w, 511-2w, 787w, 1107-8w
Balkans 9-10
Bosnia 41w, 702w, 1155w
Democratic Republic of Congo 67w
Iraq 2-8ws, 18-20, 43-4w, 105w, 322, 593-4w, 750w, 854-5, 951-2w, 1106w
Moldova 325-6w
Sierra Leone 69w
United Nations 679w

Peace negotiations
Liberia 63-4w, 676-7w
Middle East 594w

Peacock, Nataliya
1208-9w

Pearson, Mr Ian, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Northern Ireland Office*
Questions
Aggregates, Northern Ireland 462w
Agriculture, Northern Ireland 565-6w
Beef, Northern Ireland 567w
Broadband, Northern Ireland 709w
BSE, Northern Ireland 567-8w
Business, Northern Ireland 574w
Cancer, Northern Ireland 463w
Civil service, Northern Ireland 710-1w
Common agricultural policy, Northern Ireland 396w
Community development, Northern Ireland 476w
EC grants and loans, Northern Ireland 475-6w
Economic and monetary union, Northern Ireland Office 713w
Education, Northern Ireland 569-70w
Energy, Northern Ireland 468w
Fisheries, Northern Ireland 318-9, 576-7w
Foyle Fisheries Commission 817-8w
Hares, Northern Ireland 470w
Heart diseases, Northern Ireland 819-20w
Horses, Northern Ireland 574-5w
Industrial investment, Northern Ireland 395-6w
Insurance, Northern Ireland 473w
Manpower, Northern Ireland Office 486-9w
Non-domestic rates, Northern Ireland 463w
Northern Ireland Strategic Investment Board 489w
Orders and regulations, Northern Ireland Office 713w
Pilot schemes, Northern Ireland Office 491-2w
Public Administration in Northern Ireland Review 478w
Public bodies, Northern Ireland 478w
Public expenditure, Northern Ireland 712w, 816w

Pearson, Mr Ian—continued*
Public expenditure, Northern Ireland Office 815w
Reform and reinvestment initiative, Northern Ireland 479-80w
Regional assistance, Northern Ireland 469-70w, 818-9w
Regulation, Northern Ireland Office 479w
Secondment, Northern Ireland Office 481-2w
Small businesses, Northern Ireland 395w
Smoking, Northern Ireland Office 481-3w
Standards, Northern Ireland Office 816w
Stormont, Parking 483w

Peat
1187w

Pension credit
21w, 564-5w, 1054w
Eltham 564-5w
Telephone services 558w, 696-7w

Pensioners
Community development 55w
Council tax 633w
Disability living allowance 905w
Eltham 699-700w
Income 343w
Income support 21w, 696w, 699-700w
Income tax 967w
Means tested benefits 563-4w
Monmouthshire 913w
Northern Ireland 829-31w
Poverty 614w

Pensions
697-9w, 912-4w
Armed forces 39-40ws, 751-2w, 1054w, 1160w
British Coal Corporation 1070-1w
Forecasts 914w
Mortgages 1095w
NHS 52ws, 1329-30w
Self-employed 912w
Tax allowances 656w, 863-4w

Performance appraisal
Teachers 1147-8w

Perham, Linda
Questions
Afghanistan, Overseas investment 80w
Age, Discrimination 19w
Autism 166w, 272-3w
Cancer, Health services 169w
Carers, Finance 201w
Child prostitution 1211-2w
Corporate Responsibility Bill 2002/03 545w
Crops, Research 307-8w
Elgin marbles 335w
Environment protection, Companies 280-1w
Environment protection, Small businesses 281w
Health action zones 198w
Homelessness 35-6w
Human trafficking, Females 993-4w
Identity cards, Home Office 805w
Insider trading 319w
Internet, Children 1210-1w
Learning disability 203w
Mathematics, Standards 130w
Nanotechnology 359w
Prescription drugs, Mentally ill 255w
Prosthetics 624-5w
Railways, Standards 278w
Schools, Laboratories 138-9w
Schools, Libraries 138w
Schools, Standards 149-50w
Seals, Disease control 309-10w
Sexual offences 1251w

Perham, Linda—continued*
Silverlink Trains, Standards 279w
Social security benefits, Autism 19w
Teachers, Greater London 148-9w
Technology, Government assistance 362w
Union Learning Fund 150-1w

Personal income
457w, 1083-4w, 1102-3w

Personnel management
Dept of Trade and Industry 878w

Petitions
Aerials (17.09.03) 1040
Community hospitals (16.09.03) 829
New towns (15.09.03) 694
Schools (17.09.03) 1041
Trade (18.09.03) 1122
Winter fuel payments (17.09.03) 1040

Petrol alternatives
295-6w, 689-90w, 1055w
Excise duties 968w

Pharmacy
328w, 716-7

Photovoltaics
427-8w

Physical education
Schools 335-6w
Standards 451-2w
Teachers 421-2w

Physics
Curriculum 1140-1w

Physiotherapy
Northern Ireland 822w

Phytophthora ramorum
927-31w, 1188-9w
Imports 927w
National parks 927w

Pickles, Mr Eric
Chamber Debates
Local Government Bill, Lords amendts (17.09.03) 1026

Pickthall, Mr Colin
Westminster Hall Debates
Accident and emergency departments (10.09.03) 75-9wh
Questions
British overseas territories, Dept of Trade and Industry 426w
Heyes, Mark 1357-8w
NHS, Disclosure of information 1357w
Roads, Standards 690w

Pike, Mr Peter L
Chamber Debates
Local Government Bill, Lords amendts (17.09.03) 1022-3, 1029
Teachers (09.09.03) 247, 257
Questions
Absent voting 588
Dental services 713-4
Learning and skills councils, Finance 1138w
Teachers, Redundancy 463
VAT, Housing 102-3w

Pilot schemes
Northern Ireland Office 491-2w
Surveillance 667w

Planning
Recreation spaces 460w
Rural areas 37ws

Planning and Compulsory Purchase Bill 2002/03
Chamber Debates
Programme motion (08.09.03) 136-40

Planning and Compulsory Purchase Bill 2002/03—continued*
Questions
474-8, 481

Planning Appeals Commission for Northern Ireland
see Northern Ireland Planning Appeals Commission

Planning obligations
459w, 612-3w

Planning permission
1029w
Cemeteries 35w
Northern Ireland 822-4w
Sunderland Football Club 320w

Plants
Dept of Health 1275w

Playing fields
27w
Sales 633w
Schools 1143w

Plymouth
Customs and Excise 99w

Police
(16.09.03) 205-26wh
Bureaucracy 670w
Complaints 668w
Disciplinary proceedings 668-9w, 810w
Firearms 1242w, 1244w
Havering 663-4w
Hospitals 978w
Immigration 1232w
Iraq 441w, 810-1w, 942-3w
Manpower 61-2w
Northern Ireland 711w
Powers 1242w
Radio 1252w
Schools 985w
Secondment 671w
Standards 1243-4w
Training 1226w
Weapons 1239w

"Police Complaints Authority Annual Report, 2002/03"
43ws

Police custody
368w

Police Reform Act 2002
Westminster Hall Debates
(16.09.03) 205-26wh

Police Service of Northern Ireland
577w
Care homes 825w
Exercise 725w
Recruitment 723-5w
Reserve forces 725w

Police Standards Unit
810w

Police stations
Armagh 825w
Asbestos 825w
Leighton Buzzard 60w

Poliomyelitis
Nigeria 87w

Political refugees
see Asylum

Politics and government
Burma 989-90w
Colombia 590w
Iraq 324w, 676w, 868w
Middle East 1013-4w
North Africa 1013-4w

Pollution
Accidents 1190w
Lighting 541-2w, 1184-5w
Water 636w, 780w

Pollution control
771w, 1189-90w
Motor vehicles 1055w

Pond, Mr Chris, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept for Work and Pensions*
Chamber Debates
Elderly (10.09.03) 355
Written Statements
Social Fund 48ws
Social security benefits, Fraud 18-22ws, 25-6ws
Questions
Capita, Local authorities 959w
Child Support Agency, Information technology 1049-50w
Children, Maintenance 442-4w, 558w, 694-5w
Community care grants, Domestic violence 444w
Disability living allowance, Fraud 905w
Gangmasters 694w, 911-2w
Housing benefit 445w
Housing benefit, Administrative delays 963w
Housing benefit, Computer software 445w
Housing benefit, Swale 445w
Income support, Housing improvement 907w
International Labour Organisation, Treaties 559-62w
Jobseeker's allowance, Somerset 341-3w
National insurance contributions, Rebates 904w
Older workers 693-4w
Pension credit 564-5w
Pension credit, Eltham 564-5w
Pension credit, Telephone services 558w, 696-7w
Pensioners, Income support 696w, 699-700w
Pensions 697-9w
Post office card account 700w
Social security benefits, Automated credit transfer 900-1w
Social security benefits, Fraud 758w
Social security benefits, Holidays 906w
Social security benefits, Overpayments 901-2w
Social security benefits, Take-up 915w
Social Security Benefits Agency, Email 902w
Winter fuel payments, Wales 700w

Pornography
Children 1239w
Finance 378w

Portcullis House
Repairs and maintenance 499w

Portillo, Mr Michael
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 493-4, 515-8, 520-1
Westminster Hall Debates
Higher education (18.09.03) 320-3wh

Ports
EC action (15.09.03) 692
Orders and regulations 508w
Rosyth 17w

Portugal
Embassies 1115w

Post office card account
700w, 1057-9

Post offices
1076w
Closures 75-7w, 851, 878w
Scotland 369w
Urban areas 1059-61, 1064-5

Postal services
Competition 548w
Lorries 548w
Members 1076w
Parliament 423-4w
Railways 547w, 778w, 1078w
Trade unions 547-8w
VAT 361w

Post-operative care
Children 857-9w

Postwatch Scotland
Consumer Council for Postal Services 1076w

Poultry
286w
Trade competitiveness 1190-1w

Poultry meat
Antibiotics 1191w

Pound, Mr Stephen
Questions
High Hedges (No 2) Bill 2002/03 859-60

Poverty
735w
Cameroon 1004w
Developing countries 457w
Palestinians 894w
Pensioners 614w
Sierra Leone 557-8w

Power failures
9-10ws, 1070w

Power stations
EC law 646-7w

Powers
Police 1242w

Powershift programme
887w

Pregnancy complications
253-4w

Pregnant women
Deep vein thrombosis 178-9w, 970w

Premium bonds
Prize money 602w

Prentice, Mr Gordon
Chamber Debates
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1101-2
Questions
Archives, Dept for Work and Pensions 903-4w, 907w
Business questions 1076
Countryside, Access 1032w
Dental services, Lancashire 233-4w
Dentistry, Student numbers 1276w
Medical records 174w
NHS foundation trusts 702
Regional government 1028w
Regional government, Public opinion 1030w

Pre-school education
Buckinghamshire 1131w
Leeds 458-9
South West region 122w

Prescription drugs
Alzheimer's disease 12w
Cannabis 251-2w
Children 3w, 1286w, 1358w
Epilepsy 11-2w
General practitioners 330w
Heart diseases 377-8w

Prescription drugs—continued*
Mentally ill 255w
Motor neurone disease 11w
Private sector 1341w
Waste management 1286-7w

Prescriptions
855-6w
Brent 838-9w
Fees and charges 191-2w
Finance 855w
Harrow 838-9w
Northern Ireland 477w
Time limits 856w

Press
Dept of Health 179w

Press freedom
Sudan 89-90w, 1116w

Preventive medicine
Heart diseases 1340w

Price, Adam
Questions
Alcoholic drinks, Labelling 1258w
Baku-Tbilisi-Ceyhan oil pipeline 889-90w
Coal, Government assistance 545w
Demonstrations, RAF Fairford 1234-5w
Health, Low flying 1314w
Industrial diseases, Compensation 546w, 647w
Iraq, Bomb disposal 516w
Iraq, Casualties 1151w
Iraq, Reconstruction 745w
Iraq conflict, Prisoners of war 750w, 893w
Kosovo, Orphans 1012w
Kosovo, Overseas aid 893-4w
Low flying 1166-9w
Low flying, Complaints 1168-9w
Low flying, Wales 848
Postal services, Competition 548w
Postal services, Railways 1078w
RAF Fairford 1234w
Students, Fees and charges 465
Welfare tax credits, Carmarthen 605w

Primarolo, Rt Hon Dawn, Paymaster General*
Written Statements
Double taxation, Australia 3ws
Taxation, Overpayments 23ws
Questions
Capital allowances 606w
Capital gains tax 654w, 859-61w, 966w, 1085w
Child care vouchers 392-3w
Child tax credit 97w, 603-4w
Child tax credit, Chorley 394w
Corporation tax 597w, 862w, 1086w
Enterprise investment scheme 599w
Enterprise management incentives 599-600w
Housing, Sales 603w
Income tax 862-3w, 967-8w, 1103-4w
Income tax, Cellular phones 863w
Income tax, Pensioners 967w
Inheritance tax 601w
Inland Revenue 103w
Inland Revenue, Contracts 95-6w
Inland Revenue, Pay 103-4w
Inland Revenue, Standards 104-5w
Low incomes 1085-6w
Members, Correspondence 597-8w, 1102w
National insurance contributions, Climate change levy 1095w
National insurance contributions, NHS 1095-6w
National insurance contributions, Shipping 1095w

Primarolo, Rt Hon Dawn—continued*
National Insurance Fund 601w, 1096w
North Sea oil, Royalties 601-2w
Personal income 1083-4w, 1102-3w
Research and development tax credit 602w, 1096w
Stamp duties 656w
Tax allowances, Computers 598-9w
Tax allowances, Film 655w
Tax allowances, Individual learning accounts 600-1w
Tax allowances, ISAs 1093w
Tax allowances, Pensions 656w
Tax burden 319w
Tax burden, Gloucestershire 969w
Taxation 656-7w
Taxation, Self-assessment 316-9w
Taxation, Venture capital 106-7w
Thalidomide Trust 1104w
Unpaid taxes 866w
VAT 1104w
Venture capital 1086w
Welfare tax credits 395w, 604-5w
Welfare tax credits, Administrative delays 106w, 866w
Welfare tax credits, Appeals 1101-2w
Welfare tax credits, Applications 865w
Welfare tax credits, Carmarthen 605w
Welfare tax credits, Compensation 1102w
Welfare tax credits, Eltham 604-5w
Welfare tax credits, Forms 21-2w
Welfare tax credits, Greater London 604-5w
Working tax credit 1103w
Working tax credit, Publicity 107w

Primary care trusts
Finance 1341w
Recruitment 240w

Primary education
131w
Assessments 382-3w
Buckinghamshire 793-4w
Literacy 139w
Northern Ireland 477-8w, 577w
Numeracy 139w
Taunton 131w

Prime Minister
860
Ministerial policy advisors 18w, 745-6w
Official engagements 634w
Training 315w

Princess Royal Barracks
415w, 702-3w
Drugs 345w

Princess Royal Hospital Telford
182-4w, 259-61w

Prisk, Mr M
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 496, 502
Westminster Hall Debates
Schools, Finance (17.09.03) 275wh, 277-9wh, 281wh, 283wh, 291wh
Questions
Stamp duties 656w

Prison Service
Vetting 585-6w

Prisoner escapes
Open prisons 809w

Prisoners
Brazil 1110w
China 785w
Deportation 1228w
Foreigners 1245-6w
Hepatitis 423w
Suicide 726w

Prisoners of war
Iraq conflict 750w, 893w

Prisoners' release
Paedophilia 1241w

Prisoners' transfers
Special hospitals 1304-5w

Prisons
Brazil 1110-1w
Overcrowding 1244-6w
Private sector 1246-7w

Privacy
Armed forces 517w
Electronic voting 525w

Private finance initiative
Schools 1142w

Private sector
NHS 708-10, 1342-3w
Prescription drugs 1341w
Prisons 1246-7w

Privatisation
457-8w

Prize money
Premium bonds 602w

Probate
(15.09.03) 695-700

Probation Directorate
see National Probation Directorate

Procurement
Aircraft carriers 44-5ws, 344w, 700-1w, 746w, 947w
Armoured fighting vehicles 949-50w
Defence equipment 401-4w, 513w
Food 284-5w, 290w
Military police 1170w
Public sector 456-7w
Sonar 417w
Warships 39w, 706w, 751-2w

Productivity
766-7w

Programme motions
see Timetabling of bills

Property
Developing countries 598w, 651-2w, 880w, 894-6w

Prosecutions
1028w
Drugs 367w
Serious Fraud Office 469-72
Sports 782w

Prosser, Mr Gwyn
Questions
Livestock, Imports 1195-6w
Sheep, Exports 1196w

Prostate cancer
629w, 1343-4w

Prosthetics
624-5w

Prostitution
see Child prostitution

Provident societies
98w, 596w

Public Accounts Committee
(10.09.03) 436

Public Administration in Northern Ireland Review
478w

Public analysts
Laboratories 1343w

Public appointments
Church of England 1036w

Public appointments—continued*
Committee on Standards in Public Life 867w
Competition Appeal Tribunal 641-3w
Competition Commission 641-3w
Crown Prosecution Service 495w, 745w, 781-2w
Dept for Constitutional Affairs 1046w
Engineers 432w
Females 762w, 870-1w
Judges 32w, 158-62, 164
Judiciary 165
NHS 244w, 1344-5w
Northern Ireland Equality Commission 4-5ws
Office for Fair Access 1145-6w
Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 421w
Regional development agencies 8-9ws

Public bodies
Northern Ireland 478w

"Public Bodies 2003"
502w

Public buildings
461w

Public expenditure
Dept for Education and Skills 121w
Northern Ireland 712w, 816w
Northern Ireland Office 815w

"Public Guardianship Office Annual Report and Accounts, 2002/03"
43ws

Public Health Laboratory Service
978-80w

Public inquiries
521-2w
Mallusk 473-4w

Public lavatories
Sexual offences 658w, 1247-8w

Public libraries
Internet 958w

Public opinion
Regional government 1030w

Public participation
Disabled 631w
Economic and monetary union 1091-2w
Food Standards Agency 188w

Public places
Smoking 262-3w

Public private partnerships
London Underground 57ws

Public protection panels
38-9ws

Public relations
Dept for Education and Skills 131-2w

Public sector net cash requirement
327

Public transport
508w
Crime prevention 762w
Finance 1063w

Publicity
Dept for Education and Skills 121-2w
Economic and monetary union 101w
Tourism 378-80w
Treasury 1084w
Working tax credit 107w

Pugh, Dr John
Chamber Debates
Teachers (09.09.03) 261-4

Pugh, Dr John—continued*
Westminster Hall Debates
Accident and emergency departments (10.09.03) 69-76wh, 78wh
Questions
Civil servants, Dept for Education and Skills 1128-9w
Hospitals 240w
Information technology, Cabinet Office 797w, 996w

Pulses and seeds
Iraq 557w

Pupil exclusions
381-2w, 687-8w, 1142-3w
Appeals 452w
Judicial review 33-4w
Ministerial powers 794w
North Tyneside 794-6w
Northern Ireland 728w

Pupils
Disadvantaged 682-3w
Per capita costs 132w

Purchase, Mr Ken
Chamber Debates
Teachers (09.09.03) 256-7

Purnell, James
Chamber Debates
Iraq (08.09.03) 52-3
Teachers (09.09.03) 260, 267, 275, 280-3, 290
Questions
Hospitals, Construction 630-1w

Qualifications and Curriculum Authority
132-3w

Quality Meat Scotland
581w

Queen Mary's Sidcup Hospital NHS Trust
Parking 979w

Quin, Rt Hon Joyce
Chamber Debates
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1097
Transport (Concessionary Fares) Bill, 1R (16.09.03) 721-2
Questions
Departmental coordination, Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1186w
Devolution 315w
Home accident surveillance system 432w
Regional government 1030w

Quinn, Lawrie
Westminster Hall Debates
Coastal areas, Regeneration (10.09.03) 101wh, 104wh
Questions
Carlton Communications, Granada Television 1055

Race relations
Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 38w
Somalis 1252w

Race Relations (Amendment) Act 2000
Questions
38w

Racial harassment
NHS 255-6w

Racially aggravated offences
Sentencing 29ws

Radar
1171w

Radiation exposure
Chatham Dockyard 513w, 702w

Radio
Iraq conflict 1w
Police 1252w
Thames Valley Police 659-60w

Radioactive materials
Consumer goods 1192w
Transport 409-10w

Radioactive Waste Management Committee
772w

Radioactive wastes
281-2w, 770w
EC action 365-6w

Radiography
Manpower 12w
Northern Ireland 826-7w

Radiotherapy
1345-6w
Northern Ireland 826-7w

RAF Chilmark
49w

RAF Fairford
1234w
Demonstrations 1234-5w

RAF Fylingdales
401w, 1170w

RAF Halton
348-9w, 416-7w, 1155w

RAF Lyneham
351w, 1172w

RAF Molesworth
1171w

RAF Northolt
351-2w

Railway stations
Disabled 692w

Railways
Finance 411w
Franchises 410-1w
Freight 277w, 507-8w
Loans 276w
Merseyside 278-9w, 389-90w
Postal services 547w, 778w, 1078w
Repairs and maintenance 276-7w
Standards 278w, 511w

Rammell, Mr Bill, Parliamentary Under Secretary of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office*
Westminster Hall Debates
United Nations (11.09.03) 139-47wh, 169-74wh
Written Statements
British overseas territories, Passports 31ws
Iraq, Arms trade 53ws
Sanctions 57-8ws
UN Convention Against Torture 10-1ws
Questions
Afghanistan, Detainees 592-3w
Afghanistan, Drugs 64w, 674w
Africa, Diamonds 67-8w
Angola, Arms trade 789w
Arms trade 1108w
Arms trade, Export controls 1067-8w
Arms trade, Sanctions 1117w
Asbestos, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 1109w
Bleach, Peter 595w
Brazil, Foreign relations 589-90w
Brazil, Prisons 1110-1w
Central Asia 1111w
Chechnya 590w, 1115-6w
Children's rights 321-2w

Rammell, Mr Bill—continued*
China 66-7w
China, Prisoners 785w
Colombia, Human rights 67w
Colombia, Politics and government 590w
Computers, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 436-7w
Conflict prevention 990w
Consultants, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 990-1w
Deleg Rinpoche, Tenzin 66w
Developing countries, Arms trade 679w
Diplomatic service 1112w
Food, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 592w
Foreign policy, Ethics 1105w
Iraq, Christianity 375w, 440-1w
Iraq, Civil servants 1106w
Iraq, Elections 786w
Iraq, Frontiers 1106w
Iraq, International assistance 786-7w
Iraq, Kidnapping 1106w
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 593-4w, 1106w
Iraq, Police 441w
Iraq, Politics and government 324w, 676w
Iraq, Weapons 950-1w
Israel, Land 594w
Lebanon, Syrian Arab Republic 375w
Legal opinion, Attorney General 1114w
Microsoft, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 787w
Middle East, Armed conflict 992w
Middle East, Peace negotiations 594w
Nagorno Karabakh 68w
North Korea, Nuclear weapons 441w
Palestinians, Asylum 375w
RMS Titanic 442w
Sanctions 1114-5w
Sierra Leone 1116w
Telecommunications, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 441-2w
Tibet, Human rights 322w, 596w
UN Convention on the Rights of the Child 64w
UN Security Council 789w
UN Security Council, Terrorism 788w
United Nations, Peace keeping operations 679w
United Nations, Sanctions 1117-8w
Wang, Andrew 589w
Western Sahara 326w, 679-80w, 1121w

Randall, Mr John
Chamber Debates
Iraq (09.09.03) 235
Westminster Hall Debates
Diabetes (09.09.03) 3wh
Transport, Greater London (16.09.03) 175-80wh, 184wh, 189wh
Questions
Health services, Paddington 177w, 706
Medical treatments abroad 167w
RAF Northolt 351-2w
World War II, Military decorations 14

Rape
Drugs 1225-7w, 1248w
Males 728w
Northern Ireland 728w
Sentencing 472
Victim support schemes 1248w

Rapid reaction forces
EC countries 43w

Rapson, Syd
Questions
Developing countries, Companies 76w

Raynsford, Rt Hon Nick, Minister for Local Government, Office of the Deputy Prime Minister*
Chamber Debates
Local Government Bill, Lords amendts (15.09.03) 598-609, 616-9, 622-6, 630-4, 637-8, 640-1, 644-8, 651, 663-6, 669, 681-2, 686-92, (17.09.03) 1021-6, 1028-9, 1031-4, 1036-7
Written Statements
Council tax capping 37-8ws
Local government finance 64ws
Regional planning and development 28ws
Questions
Council tax, Pensioners 633w
Economic and monetary union 1025w
Fire services, Emergency calls 962w
Local government finance 1027-8w, 1031-2w
Local government finance, Census 737w
Local government finance, Greater London 737w
Local government finance, West Midlands 1027-8w
Local government finance, Worcester 1031w
Regional government 613-4w, 1028w, 1030w
Regional government, Public opinion 1030w

Reading Station
279w

Recess motions
(09.09.03) 301

Reconstruction
Afghanistan 80w, 1000-1w
Iraq 400-1w, 420w, 557w, 593w, 745w, 876w, 1008w, 1010-1w, 1151-3w

Recreation spaces
Planning 460w

Recruitment
Armed forces 752w
Dept for Constitutional Affairs 1046w
Doctors 176w
General practitioners 193-4w, 845w
Magistrates 1044w
Navy 50w
NHS 240w, 711-3, 1323-4w
NHS foundation trusts 189w
Nurses 850-2w
Police Service of Northern Ireland 723-5w
Primary care trusts 240w
Teachers 446w, 453-5

Recycling
311w
Domestic wastes 312w, 408w
House of Commons 500-1w
Northern Ireland 726-7w
Packaging 1198w

Redhill Aerodrome
413-4w, 885w

Redundancy
Learning and skills councils 685w
NHS 256w
Sheffield Forgemasters 852

Redundancy—continued*
Teachers 112w, 142-4w, 462-3, 1148w

Redwood, Rt Hon John
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 493
European Union (16.09.03) 779, 787
Iraq (08.09.03) 50
Local Government Bill, Lords amendts (15.09.03) 624-5, 629-32, 639-40
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 60-1, 67
Questions
Trade agreements, Developing countries 875w
World Trade Organisation 880-1w

Reed, Mr Andy
Chamber Debates
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1102
Local Government Bill, Lords amendts (15.09.03) 653, 655-7, 659

Referendums
Economic and monetary union 1101w

Reform and reinvestment initiative
Northern Ireland 479-80w

Refrigerators
Northern Ireland 478-9w
Waste disposal 478-9w

Refugees
see Asylum

Refuges
Finance 870w

Reg(EC)1592/2002
389w

Reg(EC)1774/2002
301w

Regeneration
Belfast 814-6w
Coastal areas (10.09.03) 99-122wh
Finance 460-1w

Regional assistance
Northern Ireland 469-70w, 818-9w
Standards 362w

Regional development agencies
Public appointments 8-9ws

Regional electricity companies
Government assistance 875w

Regional government
613-4w, 1028w, 1030w
Dept for Education and Skills 135w
Public opinion 1030w

Regional planning and development
28ws
EC grants and loans 460-1w
Warrington 877-8w
West Midlands 29-31ws

Registration of births deaths and marriages
904w

Regulatory impact assessments
Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 38w

Rehabilitation
Drugs 1286w

Reid, Mr Alan
Chamber Debates
Elderly (10.09.03) 351
Questions
Nuclear submarines, Scotland 954w

Reid, Rt Hon Dr John, Secretary of State for Health*
Questions
Health insurance 710
NHS foundation trusts 701-2

Reid, Rt Hon Dr John—continued*
NHS treatment centres 706-7

Religion
Armed forces 514w
Community relations 586w

Religious freedom
Serbia and Montenegro 992w

Removal and Disposal of Vehicles Regulations 1986
Questions
770w

Rendel, Mr David
Chamber Debates
Teachers (09.09.03) 272
Westminster Hall Debates
Higher education (18.09.03) 326wh, 341wh, 344-5wh, 347-50wh
Schools, Finance (17.09.03) 282-5wh, 290wh
Questions
Students, Fees and charges 453w

Renewable energy
77-9w, 290w, 766w, 1076-7w, 1197w
Finance 427-8w
Wood 384-6w

Renewables obligation
Trade 879w, 1077-8w

Renfrewshire
Social security benefits 19-20ws

Rents
Deposits 1029-30w, 1096w

Reoffenders
Drugs 1249-50w
Numeracy 452w

Reparation by offenders
588w

Rescue services
Finance 276w

Research and development tax credit
602w, 1096w

Reserve forces
Deployment 352w
Iraq conflict 415w, 516w
Police Service of Northern Ireland 725w

Reserves
Fossil fuels 646w

Resignations
Community health councils 840w
Ealing Hospital NHS Trust 183w

Respite care
Carers 217-8w
Mental health services 1319w
Northern Ireland 827w

Restricted Patients' Advisory Board
43ws

Retail trade
Credit cards 106w, 647-8w
Crime 1202w
Crimes of violence 1251-2w

Retirement
Health professions 257w

Reviews
Office for the Supervision of Solicitors 33w

RFA Wave Knight
50w

RFA Wave Ruler
50w

Richmond upon Thames
Obesity 851w

Riluzole
11w

Riot control weapons
1209-10w

Risk assessment
Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 310-1w

Ritalin
848-9w, 1320-1w

River Connswater
464-5w

River Nene
311w

River Thames
Floods 774-5w

RMS Titanic
442w

RNAS Yeovilton
Lynx helicopters 1173w
Security 1173w

Roaccutane
(17.09.03) 1042-50

Road signs and markings
1064w
Northern Ireland 732w

Road traffic control
Emergency services 511w
Standards 690w

Road works
Fees and charges 374w
Northern Ireland 828w

Roads
Accidents 411w, 578w, 1250w
Aggregates 373w
Construction 412w
Crosby 509w
Freight (17.09.03) 245-63wh, 371w
Lighting 1063-4w
Newry 727w
Northern Ireland 480w, 578w, 729-30w, 828w, 832w
Rural areas 410w
Safety 49ws
Standards 690w

Robathan, Mr Andrew
Chamber Debates
Electricity (16.09.03) 726, 730
Ministerial statement intervention (17.09.03) 864
Questions
Northern Ireland government 314-5
Post offices, Urban areas 1059-60

Robbery
Millennium Exhibition 1239w

Robert Jones and Agnes Hunt Orthopaedic Hospital
1317-8w

Robertson, Angus
Chamber Debates
European Union (09.09.03) 186
Questions
Afghanistan, Democracy 1107w
Afghanistan, Peace keeping operations 1107-8w
Angola 65w
Armed forces 14
Armed forces, Recruitment 752w
Baku-Tbilisi-Ceyhan oil pipeline 356-7w, 383-4w, 1069w
Botswana, Ethnic groups 81w
Brazil, Prisoners 1110w
Brazil, Prisons 1110-1w
Central Asia 1111w

Robertson, Angus—continued
Central Asia, International assistance 1017-8w
Chechnya 1115-6w
Children, Maintenance 694-5w
Defence equipment, Exhibitions 746-9w
Defence support agencies, Manpower 51-2w
Georgia, International assistance 1017w
Liberia, Peace negotiations 676-7w
Overseas aid 1001w
Russia 1016-7w
Russia, International assistance 1015-6w
Sao Tome and Principe 68-9w
Sao Tome and Principe, International assistance 368w
Sao Tome and Principe, Overseas aid 88w
Uganda 71w
UK Defence Standardisation Team, Manpower 345-6w
Visits abroad, Scotland Office 155

Robertson, Hugh
Questions
Iraq conflict, Accidents 46w

Robertson, John
Questions
Africa, Diamonds 67-8w
Burundi 66w, 81-2w
Contact lenses 1272-3w
Credit cards, Retail trade 106w, 647-8w
Developing countries, Information technology 84w
Developing countries, Internet 84w
Developing countries, Technology 87w
Music, Internet 544-5w
Pensioners, Community development 55w
Pensioners, Poverty 614w
Winter fuel payments, Scotland 370w

Robertson, Mr Laurence
Chamber Debates
Horse racing (18.09.03) 1123-7, 1130, 1136
Questions
Armed forces, Privacy 517w
Competition Commission 643-4w
Competition Commission, Public appointments 641-3w
Competition law 641w
Debts, Developing countries 605-6w
Disability Bill (Draft) 444-5w
Electricity, Consumption 763w
Electricity generation 645w
Fossil fuels, Reserves 646w
Horse racing 529w, 1053-4
Lung diseases, Gloucestershire 625w
Lymphoedema, Medical treatments 621-2w
Post offices, Closures 878w
Power stations, EC law 646-7w

Robin Rigg wind farm
Shipping 371w

Robinson, Mrs Iris
Questions
Angling, Northern Ireland 468-9w
Army 994w
Autism, Northern Ireland 566-7w
Aviation, Standards 760w
Belfast City Hospital, Cancer 827w
Cancer, Northern Ireland 463w
Disabled, Northern Ireland 821w
Fisheries, Northern Ireland 576-7w
General practitioners, Northern Ireland Office 481w
Health professions, Northern Ireland Office 482w

Robinson, Mrs Iris—continued
Health services, Northern Ireland 714w, 815w
Hormone treatments, Northern Ireland 714w
Hospitals, Northern Ireland 714w, 819-21w
Hyperactivity 1265w
Kirkistown Castle 467w
Mentally ill, Northern Ireland 821w
Motor vehicles, Northern Ireland 821-2w
Multiple sclerosis, Northern Ireland 721w
Northern Ireland government, Irish language 720-1w
Operating theatres, Northern Ireland 714w
Organs, Northern Ireland 709w, 716-9w
Physiotherapy, Northern Ireland 822w
Police Service of Northern Ireland, Care homes 825w
Police Service of Northern Ireland, Exercise 725w
Prescription drugs, Children 1358w
Primary education, Northern Ireland 577w
Radiography, Northern Ireland 826w
Radiotherapy, Northern Ireland 826-7w
Respite care, Northern Ireland 827w
Ritalin 1320-1w
Road signs and markings, Northern Ireland 732w
Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children, Surgery 828w
Royal Ulster Constabulary 825w
Sheep, Mourne 713w
Social security benefits, Hyperactivity 970-2w
Tomography, Northern Ireland 833w

Robinson, Mr Peter D
Chamber Debates
Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission Etc) Bill (HL), Allocation of time motion, 2R and rem stages (17.09.03) 893, 903, 925, 948-54, 978, 991-3, 995, 1007
Questions
Bus lanes, Newtownards 832w
Northern Ireland government 317
Northern Ireland government, Irish language 720w
Parades Commission 475w
Patients, Taxis 730w
Public Administration in Northern Ireland Review 478w
Public bodies, Northern Ireland 478w
Pupil exclusions, Northern Ireland 728w
Reform and reinvestment initiative, Northern Ireland 479-80w
Regional assistance, Northern Ireland 469-70w, 818-9w
Roads, Accidents 578w
Roads, Northern Ireland 480w, 828w, 832w
Security, Northern Ireland 476w
Sewers, Belfast 832w
Victim support schemes, Northern Ireland 492w
Westlink 832w

Roe, Mrs Marion
Questions
Employers' liability, Insurance 902-3w, 905-6w
Insurance, Construction 903w
Members, Correspondence 597-8w, 609w, 773w
Nurses, Manpower 629w
Nurses, Training 716

Rolling stock
1062w

Roll-on roll-off ships
519w

Romford
Air pollution 1176w
Asylum 1205-6w
Crime prevention 663w
Health services 845w
Shoplifting 1217w
Speed limits 279w

Rooney, Mr Terry
Questions
Thalidomide Trust 1104w

Rosindell, Mr Andrew
Questions
Abortion, Breast cancer 1257w
Abortion, Counselling 1257w
Abortion, Havering 834-5w
Air pollution, Romford 1176w
Asylum 934-6w
Asylum, Children 934w
Asylum, Havering 1205-6w
Crime prevention, Romford 663w
EC budget 1082w
EC enlargement 1113w, 1115w
Fertility, Havering 844w
Graffiti 1230w
Health services, Romford 845w
Hospitals, Waiting lists 846w
Hunting Bill 2002/03 388w
Infectious diseases, Immigration 376w
Motor vehicles, Pollution control 1055w
Petrol alternatives 1055w
Police, Havering 663-4w
Poultry 286w
Shoplifting, Romford 1217w
Speed limits, Cameras 279w
UK membership of EC, Cost benefit analysis 1082-3w
Young offenders, Havering 1218w

Ross, Mr Ernie
Questions
Armed forces, Deployment 52w

Rosyth
Ports 17w

Rosyth Dockyard
519w, 955w

Roy, Mr Frank
Questions
Territorial Army 20

Royal Air Force Gliding and Soaring Association
416w, 519w

Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children
Surgery 828w

Royal family
Official residences 571-2, 1048w
Security 811w

Royal Mail
Consultants 548w

Royal Naval Hospital Haslar
(16.09.03) 830-6

Royal parks
649w

Royal Parks Constabulary
649-50w

Royal Shrewsbury Hospital
259-60w

Royal Ulster Constabulary
825w

Royalties
North Sea oil 601-2w

Ruane, Chris
Westminster Hall Debates
Coastal areas, Regeneration (10.09.03) 99-105wh
Questions
Coastal areas 326
Local government finance 1028-9w
Schools, Uniforms 983w
Voluntary organisations, Grants 915w

Ruddock, Joan
Questions
Afghanistan, Peace keeping operations 511w
Genetically modified organisms 776w
Riot control weapons 1209-10w

Ruffley, Mr David
Questions
Judges, Public appointments 164
Northern Ireland government 395w
Tax burden 327-8

Rural areas
Apprentices 1124-5w
Broadband 387w
Crime 56-8w
Housing 386w, 1192w
Planning 37ws
Roads 410w
Training 543w, 635-6w
Transport 311-2w

Rural development programme
635w, 778w

Rural Payments Agency
Standards 635w

"Rural Payments Agency Annual Report and Accounts, 2002/03"
59ws

Rural transport partnership scheme
289w

Russell, Bob
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 543-6, 550
Questions
By-elections, Brent 858-9
Council housing 608-9w
Council housing, Finance 608w, 963w, 1026w
Council housing, Thames Gateway 739w
Elections 524w
Essex Police 939w
GB Railways, First Group 277w
General Service Medal, Suez 512w
Hospices, Finance 201w
Iraq, Police 441w, 942-3w
Military decorations 414-5w
Planning permission 1029w

Russia
1016-7w
International assistance 1015-6w
Nuclear submarines 72w

Rwanda
Arms trade 679w

SA80 rifle
50w

Safeguarding Children and Supporting Families Directorate
see Children and Families Directorate

Safeway
767w

St Helena
Airports 43-4ws

St Mary's Hospital Portsmouth
Maternity services 204-5w

Salmond, Mr Alex
Chamber Debates
Iraq (09.09.03) 191, 195, 197-8, 209-14, 219, 232, 241-2, (10.09.03) 395, 401, 406, 411
Oral question time intervention (09.09.03) 157
Questions
Aggregates 392w
Aggregates levy 95w, 1174w
National income 16w, 105-6w
Office for National Statistics, Finance 105w
Prime Minister 860
Public sector, Pay 602w
Renewable energy 77-8w
Small businesses, Scotland 150-1
Wind power, Licensing 359-61w
Wind power, Scotland 360w

Salmonella
Eggs 1292-3w

Salt
258w

Salter, Mr Martin
Chamber Debates
Angling, Seas and oceans (08.09.03) 144-5
Questions
Drugs, Misuse 856-7

Salvage
Motor vehicles 1238w

Sanctions
57-8ws, 1114-5w
Arms trade 1117w
United Nations 1117-8w

Sanders, Mr Adrian
Westminster Hall Debates
Coastal areas, Regeneration (10.09.03) 115-7wh
Diabetes (09.09.03) 7-11wh
Questions
Employment schemes 904-5w
Fund raising, Self-regulation 799-804w
Housing, Low incomes 611w, 633w
National Lottery 576
Poverty 735w
Shipping, Hazardous substances 509-10w
Shipping, Oil 509w

Sanitation
Liberia 1012w

Sao Tome and Principe
68-9w
International assistance 368w
Overseas aid 88w

SARS
1346-7w

Sarwar, Mr Mohammad
Questions
Beeston, Russell 320

Savidge, Mr Malcolm
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 505, 523-6
Iraq (08.09.03) 49
Questions
Scottish Agricultural College 369-70w

Sawford, Phil
Questions
Children's rights 325-6
Solvents, Misuse 264w

Scholarships
Companies 1131-2w

School meals
109-10w

School milk
124w

School Standards and Framework Act 1998
Questions
137-8w

Schools
Admissions 1129w
Antisemitism 366w
Arson 446-7w
Broadband 115w, 680w
Buckinghamshire 985w
Buildings 1132w
Finance 120w, 124w, 135w, 137-8w, 140w, 142w, (17.09.03) 272-94wh, 339-40w, 446w, 1144w
Fruit 223w
Governing bodies 137-8w
Inspections 339w
Intimidation 139w
Laboratories 138-9w
Leicester 116w, 139-40w
Libraries 138w
Northern Ireland 480-1w, 828-9w
Nurses 1342w
Petitions (17.09.03) 1041
Physical education 335-6w
Playing fields 1143w
Police 985w
Private finance initiative 1142w
Standards 138w, 149-50w, 448w
Transport 124w, 279w, 987-8w
Uniforms 983w
Vandalism 480-1w
West Sussex 339w

Science
Curriculum 140-1w
Females 548w
NATO 517w
Research 1150w

Scotland
Aircraft carriers 638w
Armed forces 51-2w
Aviation 638w
Children and Young People's Unit 1127-8w
Common agricultural policy 369w
Constituencies 16w, 152-4, 370w, 965w
Coral reefs 369w
Dairy farming 579-80w
Devolution 156-8, 370w
Digital broadcasting 578-9
Dockyards 519w
Electoral register 155-6
European Parliament elections 961w
Ferries 16w
Fisheries 580-1w
Health 370w
Immigrants 940w
Immigration and Nationality Directorate 940w
Manufacturing industries 638w
National Lottery 22w, 966w
Nuclear submarines 954w
Post offices 369w
Small businesses 149-51
Wind power 17w, 360w
Winter fuel payments 370w

Scotland Act 1998
Questions
17w

Scotland Office
Annual reports 418w
Information technology 419w
Manpower 23-4ws, 418-9w
Ministerial policy advisors 966w

Scotland Office*—*continued
Official engagements 581w
Official visits 965-6w
Secondment 419w
Sewel motions 581w
Visits abroad 154-5

Scotland Yard
see Metropolitan Police

Scottish Agricultural College
369-70w

Scottish Islands
Livestock 370w

Scottish Land Fund
28w

Scottish Parliament
Legislative competence 637-8w
Members 17w

Scottish Quality Meat Council
see Quality Meat Scotland

Sea Harrier aircraft
India 352w

Seals
Disease control 309-10w

Seas and oceans
Angling (08.09.03) 143-8
Temperature 1193-4w

Seasonal agricultural workers' scheme
1250w

Secondary education
Admissions 1123-4w
Buckinghamshire 986w
Northern Ireland 725-6w
Teaching methods 1141-2w

Secondment
Cabinet Office 997-9w
Dept for Culture Media and Sport 28-9w
Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1194-5w
Dept for International Development 88-90w
Dept of Health 1347w
Ministry of Defence 352-6w
Northern Ireland Office 481-2w
Police 671w
Scotland Office 419w
Serious Fraud Office 469

Security
Ambulance services 161w
Armed forces 703w
Aviation 689w, 761w
Entry clearances 1241-2w
Health professions 153-4w
Health services 154-5w
Northern Ireland 476w
RNAS Yeovilton 1173w
Royal family 811w
Rulings and statements (11.09.03) 473

Security Forces Collusion with Loyalist Terrorists Inquiry
580w

Security Industry Authority
Manpower 1250w

Sefton
743-4w
Local government finance 735-7w
Unemployment 458w

Seized articles
Customs and Excise 99w

Select Committee on Standards and Privileges
see Standards and Privileges Select Committee

Select committees
Pay 166-7

Self-assessment
Taxation 316-9w, 394w

Self-employed
Pensions 912w

Self-mutilation
Army 701-2w

Self-regulation
Fund raising 799-804w

Selous, Andrew
Chamber Debates
Teachers (09.09.03) 258, 264-5, 272, 274-80, 282
Questions
Parliamentary procedure, Devolution 170
Police stations, Leighton Buzzard 60w
Specialist schools 457-8
Travelling people 964-5w

Sentencing
Paedophilia 1240-1w
Racially aggravated offences 29ws
Rape 472

Serbia and Montenegro
Religious freedom 992w

Serious Fraud Office
Customs and Excise 469
Prosecutions 469-72
Secondment 469

Service industries
Females 1068-70

Sewel motions
Scotland Office 581w

Sewers
Belfast 832w
Housing 611-2w

Sex
Health education 231w
Health services 26ws, 229-30w, 1347-8w

Sexual offences
1251w
Convictions 1250-1w
Liability 811-2w
Northern Ireland 728w
Public lavatories 658w, 1247-8w
Victim support schemes 1347w

Sexually transmitted diseases
230-1w
East Anglia 230w
East Cambridgeshire and Fenland Primary Care Trust 230w
Young people 172-3w

Shaw, Mr Jonathan
Chamber Debates
Teachers (09.09.03) 251, 267-8, 270-4, 279
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 874
Questions
Airports, Construction 882-3w
Chatham Dockyard, Radiation exposure 513w, 702w

Sheep
Bluetongue disease 1195w
Ear tagging 312w
Exports 1196w
Mourne 713w

Sheep dipping
542-3w

Sheerman, Mr Barry
Chamber Debates
Children (08.09.03) 31

Sheerman, Mr Barry—continued*
Westminster Hall Debates
Higher education (18.09.03) 311-21wh
Questions
Children's centres 457

Sheffield Forgemasters
Redundancy 852

Shellfish
Contamination 153w

Shephard, Rt Hon Gillian
Chamber Debates
Children (08.09.03) 31
Teachers (09.09.03) 249-50
Questions
Biofuels 883w
Disability Bill (Draft) 341w
Excise duties, Petrol alternatives 968w

Shepherd, Mr Richard
Chamber Debates
European Union (09.09.03) 184, (16.09.03) 794

Sheridan, Mr Jim
Westminster Hall Debates
Roads, Freight (17.09.03) 245-9wh, 251wh, 253-6wh
Questions
Roads, Freight 371w

Sheriffs
607w, 754w

Shipley, Ms Debra
Questions
Television, Advertising 782-3w

Shipping
Hazardous substances 509-10w
National insurance contributions 1095w
Oil 509w
Robin Rigg wind farm 371w
Terrorism 797w

Shoplifting
Romford 1217w

Short, Rt Hon Clare
Questions
Asylum, Housing 583-4w
Members, Correspondence 1216w

Shropshire
Dental services 1276-8w
Health services 239w
Hospitals 1316w

Sibutramine
261-2w

Sierra Leone
1116w
Overseas aid 89w
Peace keeping operations 69w
Poverty 557-8w

Sight impaired
Internet 1150-1w

Sign language
340w, 914w

Silverlink Trains
Standards 279w

Simmonds, Mr Mark
Chamber Debates
Arms Control and Disarmament (Inspections) Bill (HL), 2R (18.09.03) 1116-9
Licensing and Registration of Gangmasters Bill, 1R (10.09.03) 331-4
Questions
Education, Finance 467-8

Simmonds, Mr Mark—continued*
Post office card account 1057

Simpson, Mr Alan
Questions
Ballistic missile defence, USA 401w

Simpson, Mr Keith
Chamber Debates
Iraq (09.09.03) 223
Questions
Army, Manpower 17
Business questions 1082-3

Sir John Moore Barracks
52w

Sites of special scientific interest
1197w
Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1197w
Dept for Transport 691-2w
Home Office 812w
Ministry of Defence 1173w

Sixth form colleges
Finance 1144-5w

Sixth form education
466-7

Skilled workers
Manufacturing industries 876-7w
Shortages 767-8w

Skin Piercing Bill 2002/03
Chamber Debates
1R (09.09.03) 188-9

Skinner, Mr Dennis
Chamber Debates
European Union (09.09.03) 186
Iraq (08.09.03) 47
Ministerial statement intervention (18.09.03) 1090
Questions
Business questions 1079

Sky marshals
761w

Slaughterhouses
916w, 1173w
Hygiene 1293w

Sleeping rough
Health services 12w

Slovakia
Entry clearances 945w

Small businesses
77w, 1051-2
Environment protection 281w
Females 869-70w
Finance 768w
Fraud 493w
Northern Ireland 395w
Scotland 149-51
Taxation 871-2w

Smallpox
Contracts 13w

Smith, Rt Hon Andrew, Secretary of State for Work and Pensions*
Written Statements
Older workers, Employment services 60-2ws
Welfare state 60ws
Questions
Crosby 1050w
Official visits, Dept for Work and Pensions 1053-4w

Smith, Angela, An Assistant Whip and Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Northern Ireland Office*

Smith, Angela—continued*
Questions
Aerials, Northern Ireland 490w, 728-9w
Ambulance services, Northern Ireland 492w, 708w
Angling, Northern Ireland 468-9w
Arthritis, Northern Ireland 727w
Bangor Hospital Co Down 708w
Belfast City Airport 708-9w
Belfast City Hospital, Cancer 827w
Care homes, Northern Ireland 710w
Causeway HSS Trust, Termination of employment 568w
Conservation areas, Northern Ireland 465w
Cultural heritage, Northern Ireland 491w
Disabled, Northern Ireland 466-7w, 816-7w
Down Lisburn HSS Trust, Finance 575w
Environmental impact assessment, Northern Ireland Office 570w
General practitioners, Northern Ireland Office 481w
Hare coursing, Northern Ireland 714w
Hares, Northern Ireland 719-20w
Health professions, Northern Ireland Office 482w
Health services, Northern Ireland 470w, 712w, 714w, 815w
Home helps, Northern Ireland 471w
Hormone treatments, Northern Ireland 714w
Hospitals, Northern Ireland 714w, 819-21w
Irish language 474w
Kirkistown Castle 467w
Leisure, Northern Ireland 485-6w
Mental health services, Northern Ireland 573w
Mentally ill, Northern Ireland 821w
Motor vehicles, Excise duties 827-8w
Motor vehicles, Northern Ireland 821-2w, 832-3w
Multiple sclerosis, Northern Ireland 721w
Neurology, Northern Ireland 471-2w, 721-2w
NHS trusts, Northern Ireland 470-1w
Northern Ireland Cycling Federation, Finance 579w
Northern Ireland Planning Appeals Commission 477w
Nurses, Northern Ireland 722-4w
Operating theatres, Northern Ireland 714w
Organs, Northern Ireland 709w, 715-9w
Orthopaedics, Northern Ireland 472-3w
Patients, Taxis 730w
Physiotherapy, Northern Ireland 822w
Planning permission, Northern Ireland 822-4w
Prescriptions, Northern Ireland 477w
Public inquiries, Mallusk 473-4w
Radiography, Northern Ireland 826w
Radiotherapy, Northern Ireland 826-7w
Recycling, Northern Ireland 726-7w
Refrigerators, Northern Ireland 478-9w
Respite care, Northern Ireland 827w
River Connswater 464-5w
Road signs and markings, Northern Ireland 732w
Road works, Northern Ireland 828w
Roads, Accidents 578w
Roads, Newry 727w
Roads, Northern Ireland 480w, 729-30w, 828w
Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children, Surgery 828w
Screening, Northern Ireland 573w
Sheep, Mourne 713w
Sports, Northern Ireland 570-4w, 728w

Smith, Angela—continued*
Tolls, Northern Ireland 711w
Tomography, Northern Ireland 833w
Transport, Northern Ireland 832w
Ulster Scots language, Education 579w
Water, Belfast 833w
Water, Northern Ireland 730-2w
Water Bill (HL) 2002/03, Northern Ireland 833w
Wildlife, Northern Ireland 396w

Smith, Rt Hon Chris
Questions
Cyprus, Education 785-6w

Smith, Rt Hon Jacqui, Minister of State and Deputy Minister for Women, Dept of Trade and Industry*
Questions
Accident Group 72w
Biotechnology 434w
Biotechnology, Manpower 424w
Biotechnology, Merseyside 1069-70w
Ceramics, Trade competitiveness 1065-6
Chemicals, North West region 1071-2w
Cohabitation, Registration 545w
Corporate Responsibility Bill 2002/03 545w
Directors 765w
EC grants and loans, Merseyside 433w
EC regional policy 1064w
Electronic equipment, Manpower 1061-4
European Union, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 75-6w
Females, Public appointments 870-1w
Females, Service industries 1068-70
Females, Small businesses 869-70w
Females, Social clubs 1066-7
Foreign investment in UK, North East region 1074-5w
Insider trading 319w
Manufacturing industries, Skilled workers 876-7w
New businesses, North East region 1079-80w
Refuges, Finance 870w
Regional assistance, Standards 362w

Smith, Mr John
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 507, 529-32, 535-6
Iraq (09.09.03) 201
Questions
Aviation, Health 858
Economic growth, Wales 733w
Foreign investment in UK, Wales 849
Iraq conflict 16

Smith, Llew
Chamber Debates
Iraq (09.09.03) 191, 199
Questions
Armoured fighting vehicles 705w
Arms trade 1154-5w
British Energy 640w
Business questions 1083
David Kelly Death Inquiry, Disclosure of information 520-1w
Defence Diversification Agency 1157-8w
Defence equipment, Exhibitions 749w
Depleted uranium 347-8w
Heads of state, Assassination 1113-4w
International Atomic Energy Agency 646w
Iraq, Overseas aid 1010w
Iraq, Weapons 375w, 950-1w
Iraq Communications Group 868w
Iraq conflict, Chemical weapons 951w
Iraq conflict, Intelligence services 44-5w
Joint Intelligence Committee 869w
Legal opinion, Attorney General 1114w
London Underground, Terrorism 758-9w

Smith, Llew—continued*
Manufacturing industries, Wales 846
Office for Civil Nuclear Security 877w
THORP 879w
Trade agreements, Environment protection 1021w
UN Commission on Sustainable Development 931w
UN Security Council 789w
UN Security Council, Terrorism 788w

Smith, Sir Robert
Questions
Trade agreements, Developing countries 1056

Smoking
244w, 263-4w, 1348-51w
Developing countries 1018w
Hospitals 262w
Medical treatments 1349w
Northern Ireland Office 481-3w
Public places 262-3w
Television 1350w

Smuggling
1086-8w, 1171w
Defence equipment 1002-3w
Food 293w
Meat 328, 393-4w, 602w, 921-2w, 1309-10w

Smyth, Rev Martin
Chamber Debates
Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission Etc) Bill (HL), Allocation of time motion, 2R and rem stages (17.09.03) 887, 904, 914, 934, 951, 954-7
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 872
Questions
River Connswater 464-5w
Smoking, Northern Ireland Office 481-3w
Stormont, Parking 483w

Social clubs
Females 1066-7

Social Fund
48ws

Social rented housing
Belfast 483-4w

Social security appeal tribunals
Northern Ireland 578-9w

Social security benefits
Autism 19w
Automated credit transfer 900-1w
Castle Morpeth 18-9ws
Fraud 18-22ws, 25-6ws, 758w
Hackney 25-6ws
Harrow 20-1ws
Holidays 906w
Home visits 901w
Hyperactivity 970-2w
Manchester 21-2ws
Overpayments 901-2w
Renfrewshire 19-20ws
Take-up 915w

Social Security Benefits Agency
Email 902w

Social services
Children 447w
Manpower 1351w
Merseyside 1298w

Soley, Mr Clive
Westminster Hall Debates
United Nations (11.09.03) 150-4wh
Questions
House of Lords, Reform 163
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 3-5

Solicitors
Asylum 56w

Solvents
Misuse 264w

Solway Firth
Wind power 383w

Somalia
69-70w
Asylum 584-5w
Entry clearances 595-6w

Somalis
Race relations 1252w

Somerset
Jobseeker's allowance 341-3w
Magnetic resonance imagers 221-4w
Mental health services 211w
MMR vaccine 222w
Speed limits (16.09.03) 236-44wh
Teachers 462-3

Sonar
Marine animals 417w
Procurement 417w
Type 23 frigates 707w

South Africa
HIV infection 896-7w

South Asia
Trade 1080-1w

South East region
Airports 412w, 506-7w, 533-4w, 1187w
Classroom assistants 118w
Firing ranges 48w
Housing 459-60w
Manufacturing industries 871w
Water 965w

South West region
Customs and Excise 966-7w
Fisheries 920-1w
Housing 34w, (09.09.03) 61-8wh
Pre-school education 122w
Tourism 30w

Southend Hospital
Accident and emergency departments 1356w
Admissions 1356w
Nurses 1334w

Southend on Sea
745w

Southern Africa
Overseas aid 1019-20w

Southern region
Customs and Excise 98-9w, 654-5w

Speaker and deputies
Chamber Debates
Amendments and new clauses (08.09.03) 56, (09.09.03) 190, 252, (10.09.03) 335, 393, (15.09.03) 637, 646, 648, 660, 669, 680-1, (16.09.03) 723, 777
Conduct of proceedings (08.09.03) 4, 12, 31, 35, 37, 72, 93, 96, 98, 100, 120, (09.09.03) 155, 182, 242, 270, 281, 293, (10.09.03) 314, 316, 318, 321, 325, 327, 350, 413, (11.09.03) 456, 494, 511, 515, 526, 532, (15.09.03) 613, 637, (16.09.03) 710, 712, 715, 748, 795, 828, (17.09.03) 847, 854, 856, 867, 893-7, 921, 958, 974, 1021, 1025, 1029, (18.09.03) 1059, 1073
Deferred divisions (10.09.03) 404, (17.09.03) 932
Disallowed questions (08.09.03) 17, (09.09.03) 153, 155, (15.09.03) 575
Points of order (08.09.03) 55, (10.09.03) 334, 392, (11.09.03) 486-7, 507, (15.09.03) 591, (17.09.03) 893, 904, 943, (18.09.03) 1105-6

Speaker and deputies—continued*
Royal Assent (18.09.03) 1122
Rulings and statements, Amendments and new clauses (15.09.03) 598
Rulings and statements, Eight minutes rule (08.09.03) 56
Rulings and statements, Security (11.09.03) 473
Rulings and statements, Twelve minutes rule (11.09.03) 507
Westminster Hall Debates
Conduct of proceedings (09.09.03) 1wh, 16wh, 35wh, 38wh, 42wh, 52wh, 60wh, (10.09.03) 69wh, 75wh, 91wh, 100wh, 105wh, 110wh, 115wh, 130wh, (16.09.03) 175wh, 185wh, 196wh, 205wh, 226wh, 232wh, 235-6wh, (17.09.03) 249wh, (18.09.03) 320wh

Special educational needs
141-2w
Belfast 484-6w

"Special Grant Report (No 123) on the Social Services (High Performers No 2) Grant 2003/04"
(10.09.03) 450-2

"Special Grant Report (No 124) on the Delayed Discharges Grant 2003/04" (10.09.03) 447-50

"Special Grant Report (No 125) on the Preserved Rights grant for 2003/04" (10.09.03) 445-7

Special hospitals
Prisoners' transfers 1304-5w

Specialist schools
457-8
General certificate of secondary education 449w
Hearing impaired 550w

Speech therapy
Leicestershire 264-5w

Speed limits
Ambulance services 160-1w
Cameras 279-80w, 392ws
Driving offences 805-6w
Romford 279w
Somerset (16.09.03) 236-44wh

Spellar, Rt Hon John, Minister of State, Northern Ireland Office*
Chamber Debates
Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission Etc) Bill (HL), Allocation of time motion, 2R and rem stages (17.09.03) 897, 993-6
Questions
Air routes, Belfast 815w
Bus lanes, Newtownards 832w
Children, Maintenance 710w
Community relations, Northern Ireland 463-4w
Disabled, Northern Ireland 465-6w, 821w
Elderly, Northern Ireland 475w
First time buyers, Northern Ireland 713w
Home information packs, Northern Ireland 713-4w
North South Ministerial Council 475w
Northern Ireland Coownership Housing Association 715w
Northern Ireland Equality Commission 468w, 817w
Northern Ireland Planning Appeals Commission 476-7w
Regeneration, Belfast 814-6w
Roads, Northern Ireland 828w, 832w
Sewers, Belfast 832w
Social rented housing, Belfast 483-4w
Travel, Concessions 829-31w

Spellar, Rt Hon John—continued*
Victim support schemes, Northern Ireland 492w
Water, Conservation 833w
Water, Northern Ireland 834w
Westlink 832w

Spelman, Mrs Caroline
Chamber Debates
Iraq (09.09.03) 222, 236-9
Questions
Afghanistan, Bomb disposal 555-6w
Afghanistan, Overseas aid 1000-1w
Afghanistan, Reconstruction 1000-1w
Aviation 388w
Burma 783-4w
Burundi 1004w
Ethiopia 1006-7w
Iraq, Food 1011w
Iraq, International assistance 1011w
Iraq, Kidnapping 1106w
Iraq, Medical equipment 1010w
Iraq, Non-governmental organisations 653w
Iraq, Overseas aid 652w
Iraq, Reconstruction 1010-1w
Iraq, United Nations 1011w
Liberia 1012-3w
Liberia, Sanitation 1012w
Maternity leave 1067-8

Spicer, Sir Michael
Questions
Public sector net cash requirement 327

Spink, Bob
Questions
Arthritis, Drugs 163w
Neurology, Northern Ireland 721-2w
Olympic Games, Greater London 578
Orders and regulations, Northern Ireland Office 713w
Regulatory impact assessments, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 38w

Sport and Physical Activity Board
1351-2w

Sport England
see English Sports Council

Sports
31w
Finance 532w
National Lottery 572-3
Northern Ireland 570-4w, 728w
Prosecutions 782w
Tax allowances 582-3

Spring, Mr Richard
Chamber Debates
European Union (16.09.03) 816-8
Ministerial statement intervention (08.09.03) 46
Questions
Convention on the Future of Europe 591-2w, 786w, 1112w
EC regional policy 1064w

Squire, Ms Rachel
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 513-5
Questions
Dockyards, Scotland 519w
Rosyth Dockyard 955w

Stakeholder pensions
343w

Stamp duties
656w

Stamp duty reserve tax
864-5w

Standards and Privileges Select Committee
(08.09.03) 142

Standards in Scotland's Schools Etc Act 2000 (SP)
Questions
Human rights 157

Standards of Conduct in Public Office Standing Committee
see Committee on Standards in Public Life

Standing Committee on the Intergovernmental Conference
(10.09.03) 435, (15.09.03) 692-3

Standing committees
Computers 167

Standing Medical Advisory Committee
265w

Standing Orders
(08.09.03) 141-2, (09.09.03) 301-2, (10.09.03) 436, (11.09.03) 560

Stanley, Rt Hon Sir John
Questions
Members, Correspondence 863w

Starkey, Dr Phyllis
Chamber Debates
Local Government Bill, Lords amendts (15.09.03) 602
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 68, 70, 86, 100-1

Starting Early Directorate
see Children and Families Directorate

Steen, Mr Anthony
Questions
Lighting, Pollution 541-2w
Members, Correspondence 1216w
Patients, Foreigners 852w
Prescriptions 855-6w
Social security benefits, Overpayments 901-2w

Stem cells
Research 979-80w

Stevens Inquiry
see Security Forces Collusion with Loyalist Terrorists Inquiry

Stevenson, Mr George
Chamber Debates
European Union (09.09.03) 180-1, (16.09.03) 804-7, 812
Questions
Convention on the Future of Europe 327
Hospitals, Waiting lists 334w

Stewart, Mr David
Questions
Children, Day care 1121-2w
Conflict prevention 990w
Equal pay 993w
Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority, Codes of practice 1308-9w
Nuclear submarines, Decommissioning 954w
Pensions, Armed forces 1054w
Renewable energy 1077w

Stewart, Ian
Chamber Debates
European Union (16.09.03) 777

Stinchcombe, Mr Paul
Questions
Prisoners, Deportation 1228w

Stoate, Dr Howard
Chamber Debates
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 79-80, 85, 102

Stoate, Dr Howard*—*continued
Questions
Agency nurses, Foreign workers 1337-8w
Antisocial behaviour orders 932-3w
Detention and training orders 1250w
Fire extinguishers 610-1w
Nurses, Recruitment 851-2w

Stomach
Surgery 1352-3w, 1357w

Stormont
Parking 483w

Strategic Investment Board for Northern Ireland
see Northern Ireland Strategic Investment Board

Straw, Rt Hon Jack, Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs*
Chamber Debates
European Union (16.09.03) 779, 781, 785-99, 801
European Union, Ministerial statements (09.09.03) 171-87
Iraq (10.09.03) 397-404
Iraq, Ministerial statements (08.09.03) 36-54
Written Statements
Diplomatic service, Crime 31-2ws
Diplomatic service, Non-domestic rates 33ws
Diplomatic service, Parking offences 32-3ws
Iraq, Weapons 11ws
Terrorism 58-9ws
Trade unions, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 59ws
Questions
Afghanistan, Detainees 324-5w
Arms trade, Trade promotion 322w
Czech Republic, Arms trade 589w
Democratic Republic of Congo, Arms trade 991w
Diego Garcia 440w
Diego Garcia, Land mines 439-40w
Iraq, Reconstruction 593w
Written questions, Foreign and Commonwealth Office 992w
Zimbabwe, Freedom of expression 1119w

Stray Animals Bill 2002/03
Chamber Debates
1R (17.09.03) 878-80

Street Works (Charges for Occupation of the Highway) (England) Regulations 2001
Questions
374w

Streeter, Mr Gary
Questions
A38, Accidents 504w
Armed forces, Asbestos 513w
Drug treatment centres 857-8
Gas fired power stations, Langage 546w

Stress
Industrial health and safety 900w
NHS 229w

Strokes
626w, 1353-4w
Admissions 271w
Death rate 94w
Health services 266-7w

Stuart, Ms Gisela
Chamber Debates
European Union (09.09.03) 183-4
Skin Piercing Bill, 1R (09.09.03) 188-9
Questions
Business questions 1082

Student numbers
Dentistry 1276w
Engineering 1139-41w
Health professions 847w

Students
Fees and charges 149w, 324, 453-4w, 463-6, 552-3w, 850-1, 857-8, 1133w, 1146w
Finance 552-3w, 986-7w, 1145-6w
Loans 453w, 791-3w, 795-6w
Muslims 986-7w

Stunell, Mr Andrew
Chamber Debates
Electricity (16.09.03) 730, 740-4, 748
Iraq (10.09.03) 432

Sub-Saharan Africa
Common agricultural policy 556w
Imports 764w
Trade agreements 1073-4w

Sudan
Human rights 1116w
Overseas aid 90w
Press freedom 89-90w, 1116w

Suez
General Service Medal 52w, 417-8w, 512w

Sugar
Children 267w

Suicide
267-8w
Doctors 618w
Hearing impaired 856w
Northern Ireland 726w
Nurses 618w
Prisoners 726w

Sunderland Football Club
Planning permission 320w

Sunscreens
268w

Supported housing
Domestic violence 632w

Supporters Direct
29w

Supporting Children and Young People Directorate
see Children and Families Directorate

Supreme Court
151-2, 1045-6w
Costs 164-5
Devolution 337w

Supreme Court Act 1981
Questions
1045w

Sure start programme
Birkenhead 1146-7w
North East region 1147w
Standards 1147w

Surgery
Administrative delays 1266-7w
Broomfield Hospital 168w
Buckinghamshire 1298-9w
Costs 250w, 1336w
Death rate 854w, 1340-1w
Eyesight 186w, 331w
Heart diseases 199w
Obesity 1352-3w, 1357w
Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children 828w
Stomach 1352-3w, 1357w
Waiting lists 250w, 272w, 972w, 1338w

Surrey
Domestic violence 58-9w

Surveillance
Pilot schemes 667w

Surveys
Armed forces 1157w
Commission for Health Improvement 174w
Environment Agency 1181w

Sutcliffe, Mr Gerry, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept of Trade and Industry*
Chamber Debates
Horse racing (18.09.03) 1134-8
Questions
Bankruptcy, Interest rates 426w
British Sky Broadcasting 640w
Companies 640-1w
Competition Commission 643-4w
Competition Commission, Public appointments 641-3w
Competition law 641w
Conditions of employment, Age 425w
Consumers, Credit 644w, 873w
Credit cards 644w
Credit cards, Retail trade 647-8w
Debts, Repayments 874w
Employment, Regulation 428-9w
Estate agents 429-31w
Flexitime 431w
Foreign workers, Low pay 875-6w
Home accident surveillance system 432w
Horse racing 1053-4
Loans, Young people 880w
Manufacturing industries, South East region 871w
Misleading advertising 872w
Misleading advertising, Holidays 876w
Newspaper press, Distributive trade 647w
Vocational training 639w

Swale
Housing benefit 445w

Swayne, Mr Desmond
Questions
British citizenship, Applications 1212-3w

Sweden
867w
Economic and monetary union 869w

Swire, Mr Hugo
Chamber Debates
Iraq (09.09.03) 228
Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission Etc) Bill (HL), Allocation of time motion, 2R and rem stages (17.09.03) 945-8
Questions
Afghanistan, Peace keeping operations 11
Asthma 164w
Drugs, Crime 367w
Drugs, Prosecutions 367w
War pensions, Devon 54w
Wind power, Offshore industry 384-5w, 433-4w

Syms, Mr Robert
Questions
Teachers, Redundancy 142-3w
Territorial Army 20

Syrian Arab Republic
Lebanon 375w

Tami, Mark
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 534-7
Questions
Alcoholic drinks, Young people 323

Tami, Mark—continued
Hares, Northern Ireland 470w

Tapsell, Sir Peter
Chamber Debates
Iraq (08.09.03) 50

Taunton
Classroom assistants 149w
Primary education 131w
Teachers 149w

Tax allowances
Computers 598-9w
Film 655w
Individual learning accounts 600-1w
ISAs 1093w
Pensions 656w, 863-4w
Sports 582-3

Tax burden
319w, 327-8
Gloucestershire 969w

Taxation
656-7w, 1096-102w
Aviation 653-4w, 859w
Immigrants 1237w
Lorries 1101w
Overpayments 23ws
Self-assessment 316-9w, 394w
Small businesses 871-2w
Transport 969w
Venture capital 106-7w
Waste disposal 779-80w

Taxis
Patients 730w

Taylor, Ms Dari
Chamber Debates
Iraq (09.09.03) 200, 212-3, 224-5
Questions
Armed forces 12

Taylor, Mr David
Chamber Debates
Elderly (10.09.03) 346
Teachers (09.09.03) 254-5, 257, 293
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 83
Questions
Balkans 10
Constituencies, Scotland 153-4
Females, Information technology 870w
Judges, Public appointments 159
Post offices, Urban areas 1064-5

Taylor, Mr Ian
Questions
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 7-8

Taylor, Mr John
Chamber Debates
Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission Etc) Bill (HL), Allocation of time motion, 2R and rem stages (17.09.03) 883, 939
Questions
Assets Recovery Agency, Northern Ireland 313

Taylor, Matthew
Questions
Army, Training 750w
BAE Systems 425-6w
Child tax credit 97w
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 951-2w
Publicity, Treasury 1084w
Welfare tax credits, Forms 21-2w

Taylor, Dr Richard
Westminster Hall Debates
Accident and emergency departments (10.09.03) 79[illegible]wh
Questions
Iraq, Bomb disposal 323

Taylor, Dr Richard—continued
NHS treatment centres 707

Taylor, Sir Teddy
Chamber Debates
European Union (16.09.03) 782, 796, 800
Iraq (08.09.03) 45
Teachers (09.09.03) 251, 266
Westminster Hall Debates
Iran (17.09.03) 295-9wh, 302wh
Questions
Asylum, Appeals 1208w
Bull, Subsidies 426-7w
European Aviation Safety Agency 389w
Exports 536w
Fish farming, Disease control 920w
Fruit, Import duties 540-2w, 1182w
National savings 603w
Premium bonds, Prize money 602w

Teachers
134-5w
Belfast 831-2w
Buckinghamshire 112w, 1143-4w, 1148w
Citizenship 984-5w
Conditions of employment 684-5w, 796-7w
Crimes of violence 148w
Dorset 142-3w
Greater London 148-9w
Internet 147-8w
Leeds 145w
Leicestershire 148w
Life expectancy 688w
Manpower 148w, 580w
Northern Ireland 490w, 580w, 831w
Opposition days (09.09.03) 245-301
Pay 142w, 454w
Performance appraisal 1147-8w
Physical education 421-2w
Recruitment 446w, 453-5
Redundancy 112w, 142-4w, 462-3, 1148w
Somerset 462-3
Taunton 149w
Training 133-4w, 144-5w, 1148-9w
Vacancies 145-7w

Teaching methods
Secondary education 1141-2w

Technology
Developing countries 87w
Government assistance 362w

Teenage pregnancy
110-1w, 1149w

Telecommunications
Foreign and Commonwealth Office [illegible]41-2w
Manpower 549w
Non-domestic rates 319w

Telecommunications masts
see Aerials

Telephone services
Pension credit 558w, 696-7w
Working tax credit 107w

Television
Advertising 782-3w, 958-9w
Licensing 30-1w
Northern Ireland 30-1w
Obscenity 530w
Smoking 1350w

Television channels
22-3w

Temperature
Nuclear power stations 547w
Seas and oceans 1193-4w

Temporary accommodation
Homelessness 738w

Temporary employment
Jobcentre Plus 1051-3w

Tendring
Flood control 928w

Termination of employment
Causeway HSS Trust 568w

Territorial Army
20
Manpower 707w

Terrorism
58-9ws, 501w, 994w, 1204w
Aviation 797w
Crime prevention 660w
Cyprus 8-9
Greater London 409w
Health services 1303-4w
London Underground 758-9w
Shipping 797w
UN Security Council 788w

Terrorism Act 2000
Questions
660w, 1234w, 1242w

Testicular cancer
268w

Textiles
Common customs tariffs 763-4w

Thalidomide Trust
1104w

Thames Gateway
Council housing 739w
Housing 461-2w

Thames Valley Police
Radio 659-60w

Thameslink railway line
511w

Theatre
Finance 573-4

Theft
Art works 671-2w
Cellular phones 667-8w
Depleted uranium 58w, 938-9w
Immigration and Nationality Directorate 940-1w
NHS 265-6w

Thermal imaging
Defence equipment 746w

Thermal insulation
NHS 1288w

Thomas, Gareth, (Clwyd West)
Questions
Algeria 784-5w
Housing, Wales 733w
NHS, Wales 844-5

Thomas, Mr Gareth, (Harrow West), Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept for International Development
Written Statements
Montserrat, Volcanoes 41-2ws
St Helena, Airports 43-4ws
Questions
Afghanistan, Bomb disposal 555-6w
Afghanistan, Health services 554-5w, 888w
Afghanistan, Overseas aid 1000-1w
Afghanistan, Reconstruction 1000-1w
Baku-Tbilisi-Ceyhan oil pipeline 651w, 889-90w
Burma, Overseas aid 1003-4w
Burundi 1004w
Central Africa, Overseas aid 890-2w

Thomas, Mr Gareth—continued
Central Asia, International assistance 1017-8w
Consultants, Dept for International Development 1005w
Developing countries, Administration of justice 892w
Developing countries, Arms trade 889w, 1002w
Developing countries, HIV infection 888-9w
Developing countries, Property 651-2w, 894-6w
Developing countries, Smoking 1018w
Developing countries, Vaccination 893w
Developing countries, Weapons 1001-2w
Ethiopia 1006-7w
Export Control Act 2002, Orders and regulations 892-3w, 1007w
Food, Dept for International Development 1007w
Georgia, International assistance 1017w
Indian subcontinent, Overseas aid 1018-9w
Iraq, Education 1009w
Iraq, Food 1008-9w
Iraq, Laboratories 1008w
Iraq, Marsh Arabs 1009w
Iraq, Reconstruction 1008w, 1010-1w
Iraq, Water 1008w
Iraq conflict, Prisoners of war 893w
Kosovo, Orphans 1012w
Kosovo, Overseas aid 893-4w
Liberia 1012-3w
Liberia, Sanitation 1012w
Middle East, Politics and government 1013-4w
Overseas aid 897-8w, 1001w, 1005-6w
Pakistan, Females 894w
Palestinians, Poverty 894w
Russia 1016-7w
Russia, International assistance 1015-6w
South Africa, HIV infection 896-7w
Trade agreements, Environment protection 1021w
USA, Foreign aid 898w
Vietnam, Overseas aid 1020-1w

Thomas, Richard
797w

Thomas, Simon
Chamber Debates
Iraq (08.09.03) 46-7, (10.09.03) 394-5, 402, 406, 413
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 59, 67, 74, 77-8, 84, 90-2
Westminster Hall Debates
Dental services (09.09.03) 40-1wh
Questions
Baku-Tbilisi-Ceyhan oil pipeline 651w, 877w
Rape, Males 728w
Sexual offences, Northern Ireland 728w

THORP
425w, 879w
Finance 879w

Thurso, John
Chamber Debates
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1099-100
Questions
Business questions 1082
Small businesses, Scotland 150

Tibet
315w
Human rights 322w, 596w

Time limits
Prescriptions 856w

Times of sittings
369w, 636-7w

Timetabling of bills
(08.09.03) 56-140, 169-70, (15.09.03) 592-692

Timms, Mr Stephen, Minister of State, E-Commerce and Competitiveness, Dept of Trade and Industry*
Chamber Debates
Electricity (16.09.03) 724, 728, 731-40
Written Statements
Power failures 9-10ws
Questions
Atomic Energy Board 1069w
Baku-Tbilisi-Ceyhan oil pipeline 356-7w, 383-4w
British Coal Corporation, Pensions 1070-1w
British Energy 639-40w
British Nuclear Fuels, US Nuclear Energy Institute 74w
Broadband 872-3w, 1071w
Carbon dioxide 1071w
Cellular phones, Fees and charges 1075w
Coal, Government assistance 545w, 871w
Computer viruses 762-3w
Consumer Council for Postal Services, Postwatch Scotland 1076w
Electricity 75w
Electricity, Consumption 763w
Electricity generation 357-60w, 645w
Electronic commerce 1072-3w
Energy 429w
Energy, Conservation 427w
Engineers, Public appointments 432w
Fossil fuels, Reserves 646w
Gas fired power stations, Langage 546w
Import controls 546w
Industrial diseases, Compensation 647w
Members, Correspondence 1078w
Music, Internet 544-5w
National Grid 433w
Nuclear power stations, Temperature 547w
Nuclear submarines, Russia 72w
Office for Civil Nuclear Security 877w
Office of Communications, Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration 877w
Post office card account 1057-9
Post offices 1076w
Post offices, Closures 75-7w, 878w
Post offices, Urban areas 1059-61, 1064-5
Postal services, Competition 548w
Postal services, Lorries 548w
Postal services, Members 1076w
Postal services, Railways 547w, 1078w
Postal services, Trade unions 547-8w
Postal services, VAT 361w
Power failures 1070w
Power stations, EC law 646-7w
Regional electricity companies, Government assistance 875w
Renewable energy 77-9w, 766w, 1076-7w, 1197w
Renewable energy, Finance 427-8w
Renewable energy, Wood 384-6w
Renewables obligation, Trade 879w, 1077-8w
Royal Mail, Consultants 548w
Science, Females 548w
Telecommunications, Manpower 549w
Telecommunications, Non-domestic rates 319w
THORP 425w, 879w
THORP, Finance 879w
Trade promotion, Dept of Trade and Industry 546-7w
Wind power 435-6w

Timms, Mr Stephen—continued
Wind power, Licensing 359-61w
Wind power, Offshore industry 384-5w, 433-4w
Wind power, Scotland 360w
Wind power, Solway Firth 383w

Tipping, Mr Paddy
Chamber Debates
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 60, 108-9, 123
Questions
Nature conservation 772-3w

Tobacco
Advertising 1349w, 1354w
Ammonia 1350w
Belgium 1354w
EC action 786w
Imports 393w, 456w
Labelling 262w
Nicotine 1350w

Todd, Mr Mark
Questions
Care homes 705
Iraq, Bomb disposal 1152w

Tolls
Greater London 373-4w, 422w
Health professions 176w
Northern Ireland 711w
Tourism 422w

Tomography
253w
Northern Ireland 833w

Tonge, Dr Jenny
Chamber Debates
Iraq (10.09.03) 414, 425-8
Questions
Bleach, Peter 595w
Health education, Cholesterol 376-7w
Iraq conflict, Radio 1w
Wang, Andrew 589w

Touhig, Mr Don, Parliamentary Secretary, Dept for Constitutional Affairs & Office of the Secretary of State for Wales*
Questions
A483 842
Common agricultural policy, Wales 850
Community support officers, Wales 734w
Consultation papers, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 36-7w
Food, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 734w
Friction Dynamex 734w
Hazardous substances, Cynon Valley 841
Health and Social Care in Wales Review 734w
Health services, Wales 37w, 362-3w
Higher education, Wales 338-9w
Hospital beds, Wales 847
Industrial diseases, Compensation 733w
Low flying, Wales 848
Regulatory impact assessments, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 38w
Tourism, Wales 733w

Tourism
29-30w, 336w, 422w, 528w
Burma 989w
Marketing 528w
North East region 783w
Publicity 378-80w
South West region 30w
Tolls 422w
Wales 733w

Tourist boards
379w

Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995
Questions
611w

Trade
769w
Developing countries 91w, 435w
Petitions (18.09.03) 1122
Renewables obligation 879w, 1077-8w
South Asia 1080-1w

Trade agreements
Cotton 357w
Developing countries 875w, 880w, 1055-6
Eggs 281w
Environment protection 1021w
Sub-Saharan Africa 1073-4w

Trade competitiveness
Ceramics 1065-6
Poultry 1190-1w

Trade promotion
Arms trade 322w
Dept of Trade and Industry 546-7w
Foreign and Commonwealth Office 321w

Trade unions
Foreign and Commonwealth Office 59ws
Postal services 547-8w
Training 1081w

Training
Air force 1171-2w
Armed forces 346w, 348-50w, 519w
Army 512w, 750w
Dept for Constitutional Affairs 338w
Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1185w
Junior doctors 1312-4w
Military police 348-50w
Navy 53w
Nurses 246w, 715-6, 851w, 1303w, 1333w
Older workers 1142w
Police 1226w
Prime Minister 315w
Rural areas 543w, 635-6w
Teachers 133-4w, 144-5w, 1148-9w
Trade unions 1081w

Transcaucasus
590w

Transfer procedure tests
Northern Ireland 578w

Translation services
Government departments 1234w

Transplant surgery
Infectious diseases 158-9w

Transport
Air pollution 278w
Cattle 534w
Crosby 414w
Devolution 371-2w, 759w
Finance 1059-60w
Greater London (16.09.03) 176-95wh
Horses 1176w
Livestock 770w
Merseyside 760w
NHS 1298w
Northern Ireland 832w
Radioactive materials 409-10w
Repairs and maintenance 886w
Rural areas 311-2w
Schools 124w, 279w, 987-8w
Taxation 969w
Urban areas 280w
Warrington 761w
Working hours 887w

Transport (Concessionary Fares) Bill 2002/03
Chamber Debates
1R (16.09.03) 721-2

Transsexuality
337-8w

Travel
Concessions 829-31w
Dept for Culture Media and Sport 955-6w
Dept for Education and Skills 120-1w
Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 1179w
Dept of Trade and Industry 74w
Treasury 100w

Travelling people
964-5w
Trespass 666-7w

Treasury
Audit 968-9w
Civil servants 106w
Computers 597w
EC law 107-8w
Food 1092w
Manpower 1087-8w
Microsoft 1094-5w
Ministerial policy advisors 603w
Publicity 1084w
Standards 968-9w
Travel 100w
Written questions 656w

Treaties
Extradition 666w
International Labour Organisation 559-62w

Trees
Diseases 931w

Trespass
Travelling people 666-7w

Trials
Mass media 498w

Trident
1ws

Trimble, Rt Hon David
Chamber Debates
Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission Etc) Bill (HL), Allocation of time motion, 2R and rem stages (17.09.03) 890-2, 903, 935-45, 951, 990-2
Questions
Northern Ireland government 315-6

Truancy
1142-3w

Tuberculosis
269-70w, 631w
AIDS 270w
Contracts 13w

Turkey
Asylum 799w

Turner, Mr Andrew
Chamber Debates
Local Government Bill, Lords amendts (15.09.03) 605
Teachers (09.09.03) 246, 253, 256, 281, 283-4
Westminster Hall Debates
Coastal areas, Regeneration (10.09.03) 99wh, 107wh
Dental services (09.09.03) 38-40wh
Higher education (18.09.03) 316wh, 324wh
Questions
Absent voting 587-8
Empty property, Northern Ireland 396w

Turner, Mr Andrew—continued
Immigration and Nationality Directorate, Manpower 798w
Livestock, Scottish Islands 370w
Postal services, Members 1076w
Tourism, Marketing 528w
Transport, Devolution 371-2w, 759w

Turner, Dr Desmond
Westminster Hall Debates
Coastal areas, Regeneration (10.09.03) 100wh

Turner, Mr Neil
Chamber Debates
Elderly (10.09.03) 357, 365-7, 370, 379
Questions
Internet, Regulation 853
World War II, Military decorations 14-5

Twelve minutes rule
Rulings and statements (11.09.03) 507

Twigg, Mr Stephen, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Dept for Education and Skills
Chamber Debates
Teachers (09.09.03) 276, 291-4
Questions
Class sizes, Leicestershire 447w
Domestic violence, Education 1130-1w
Family centres 124w
Free school meals 1134-5w
Literacy 551w, 1139w
Literacy, Buckinghamshire 1138-9w
Literacy, North Tyneside 1139w
Numeracy, North Tyneside 1141w
Official visits, Dept for Education and Skills 339w
Physical education, Standards 451-2w
Primary education, Taunton 131w
Public relations, Dept for Education and Skills 131-2w
Qualifications and Curriculum Authority 132-3w
Schools, Buildings 1132w
Schools, Finance 137-8w
Schools, Playing fields 1143w
Schools, Standards 149-50w
Teachers, Recruitment 446w, 453-5
Travel, Dept for Education and Skills 120-1w
Written questions, Dept for Education and Skills 1142w

Tyler, Mr Paul
Chamber Debates
Betts, Clive, Members' suspension (11.09.03) 490
Elderly (10.09.03) 335
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1091-2
Intelligence and Security Committee, Points of order (11.09.03) 486
Westminster Hall Debates
Coastal areas, Regeneration (10.09.03) 110-2wh
Questions
Aviation, Air conditioning 388-9w
Business questions 478-9, 1074
General Service Medal, Suez 52w
Select committees, Pay 166-7
Sheep dipping 542-3w

Tynan, Mr Bill
Chamber Debates
European Union (09.09.03) 185
Questions
Inheritance tax 601w
Iraq, Military alliances 1152w
Post office card account 1057-8

Tyne and Wear
Autism 1125-6w

Type 23 frigates
Sonar 707w

Type 42 destroyers
703w

Tyrie, Mr Andrew
Chamber Debates
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1098-9
Teachers (09.09.03) 293
Questions
Armed forces, Location 40-1w
Armed forces, Training 346w, 348-50w
Military police 49-50w
Military police, Chichester 349w
Military police, Deployment 350w
Military police, Training 348-9w
Military police, West Sussex 48w
Ministerial policy advisors, Dept of Health 270w
Ministerial policy advisors, Ministry of Defence 3w
Ministerial policy advisors, Office of the Secretary of State for Wales 38w
Ministerial policy advisors, Scotland Office 966w
Ministerial policy advisors, Treasury 603w

Uganda
71w
Armed conflict 678-9w
Armed forces 90-1w
Entry clearances 788w
Human rights 678w

UK Defence Standardisation Team
Manpower 345-6w

UK membership of EC
Cost benefit analysis 1082-3w

UK trade with EC
1113w

Ulster Scots language
474w
Education 579w

UN Commission on Sustainable Development
931w

UN Conference on Population and Development
556-7w

UN Convention Against Torture
10-1ws

UN Convention on the Rights of the Chi l
64w

UN Security Council
789w
Terrorism 788w

Unemployment
Sefton 458w

Uniforms
Armed forces 518w
Health professions 6w
Iraq conflict 41w, 348w
Schools 983w

Union Learning Fund
150-1w

United Health Group
708, 1342-3w

United Kingdom Passport Service
587w
Manpower 812w

United Nations
(11.09.03) 139-74wh
Iraq 1011w
Peace keeping operations 679w

United Nations*—*continued
Sanctions 1117-8w

Universities
see Higher education

University for Industry Learning and Skills Council for England
Finance 112-4w

Unpaid taxes
866w

Uranium, depleted
see Depleted uranium

Urban areas
Common land 543-4w
Post offices 1059-61, 1064-5
Transport 280w

Urinary system
Antibiotics 1264w

US Nuclear Energy Institute
British Nuclear Fuels 74w

USA
Arms trade 1165w
Ballistic missile defence 401w
Export controls 1069w
Foreign aid 898w
Foreign investment in UK 873w
Military bases 53-4w
Warships 693w, 886-7w

Vaccination
166w
Developing countries 893w
Infectious diseases 1310w
Mercury 1355-6w

Vandalism
Schools 480-1w

Varroasis
Bees 544w, 931-2w

VAT
1104w
Churches 969w
Housing 102-3w
Postal services 361w

VAT exemptions
Historic buildings 866w

Vaz, Mr Keith
Questions
Arthritis, Medical treatments 1262-3w
Business questions 483-4
East Midlands Airport 759w
EC reform 867-8w
Entry clearances 1112-3w, 1118w
Entry clearances, Overseas students 1118w
Entry clearances, Overseas visitors 1119-22w
Ethnic groups, Dept for Constitutional Affairs 1036-7w
High court 397w
Immigration Appellate Authorities 34w
Judges, Public appointments 32w, 162
Legal advice and assistance, Disadvantaged 1043w
Legal aid scheme, Finance 1043w
London Underground, Dept for Transport 884w
Mayor of London 884w
Meyer, Catherine 1033w
Office for the Supervision of Solicitors, Reviews 33w
Public appointments, Dept for Constitutional Affairs 1046w
Sweden 867w
Sweden, Economic and monetary union 869w

Vegetables
Import duties 540-2w, 1182w

Vehicles
Ambulance services 161w
Ministry of Defence 1153-4w

Venture capital
1086w
Taxation 106-7w

Venture capital trusts
599w

Vetting
Agency nurses 1221-3w
Care homes 1221-3w, 1270-1w
Higher civil servants 519-20w
Prison Service 585-6w
Voluntary organisations 1223w

Victim support schemes
Domestic violence 1024-5w
Northern Ireland 492w
Rape 1248w
Sexual offences 1347w

Video recordings
Witnesses 499w

Vietnam
Overseas aid 1020-1w

Viggers, Mr Peter
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 526-9, 558
Royal Naval Hospital Haslar (16.09.03) 830-3
Questions
Absent voting 587-8
Asylum, Haslar Prison 1249w
Asylum, Housing 1201-2w, 1208w
Constituencies 588-90
Dental services 234w
Elections 524w
Elections, Disabled 525w
Electoral register 584
Electronic voting, Privacy 525w
HMS Daedalus 1157w
Housing estates 1026w
Immigration, Crime 1232w
Immigration, Police 1232w
Rapid reaction forces, EC countries 43w
Warships 947w

Viruses
1307w

Vocational education
151-2w, 450w, 454-5w, 795w
Eligibility 688-9w

Vocational guidance
Older workers 794w

Vocational training
639w

Volcanoes
Montserrat 41-2ws

"Voluntary and Community Sector Infrastructure Consultation Paper"
49-50ws

Voluntary organisations
1254w
Care homes 1339w
Finance 49-50ws
Grants 915w
Vetting 1223w

Voting behaviour
614-5w
Northern Ireland [illegible]3w

Voting methods
(17.09.03) 877

Wales
Common agricultural policy 850
Community support officers 734w
Economic growth 733w
Foreign investment in UK 848-9
Health services 37w, 362-3w
Higher education 338-9w
Hospital beds 734w, 847
Housing 733w
Industrial diseases 733w
Low flying 848
Manufacturing industries 845-7
NHS 843-5
Public sector 849
Tourism 733w
Winter fuel payments 700w

Walking
278w

Walley, Ms Joan
Chamber Debates
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 122
Questions
General practitioners, Vacancies 718

Walter, Mr Robert
Chamber Debates
European Union (09.09.03) 185, (16.09.03) 820
Iraq (09.09.03) 217-21
Questions
Females, Social clubs 1066-7

Wang, Andrew
589w

War pensions
Devon 54w
Incapacity benefit 340w, 355w

Ward, Ms Claire
Questions
Leavesden Green School 321

Wareing, Mr Robert N
Chamber Debates
Iraq (08.09.03) 50

Warranties
Housing 1023w

Warrington
General practitioners 1303w
Magistrates 1044w
Regional planning and development 877-8w
Transport 761w

Warships
947w
Manpower 54w
Procurement 39w, 706w, 751-2w
USA 693w, 886-7w

Waste disposal
Agriculture 1198w
Electronic equipment 773w
Hazardous substances 1183-4w
Livestock 537w, 777-8w
Motor vehicles 1179w
Refrigerators 478-9w
Taxation 779-80w

Waste management
769-70w
Domestic wastes 1199w
Finance 1198-9w
Inland waterways 1198w
Prescription drugs 1286-7w

Water
Belfast 833w
Conservation 606w, 833w
Developing countries 436w
Iraq 1008w
Northern Ireland 730-2w, 834w

Water—continued
Pollution 636w, 780w
South East region 965w

Water abstraction
1174w

Water Bill (HL) 2002/03
Chamber Debates
2R, Programme motion, Money res* and Ways and means res* (08.09.03) 56-136
Programme motion (15.09.03) 592-4
Questions
305-6w, 775w
Northern Ireland 833w

Water companies
408-10w

Water Industry Act 1991
Questions
775w

Waterson, Mr Nigel
Chamber Debates
Elderly (10.09.03) 342, 349-50, 367-71
Teachers (09.09.03) 247, 255, 286-8

Watkinson, Angela
Questions
Constituencies, Scotland 370w
NHS, Recruitment 713
Schools, Finance 1144w

Watson, Mr Tom
Questions
Road signs and markings 1064w

Weapons
Developing countries 1001-2w
Iraq 11ws, 18w, 46w, 321-2, 326, 375w, 407w, 514w, 521w, 676w, 750-1w, 852-3, 868w, 950-1w
Moldova 677w
Northern Ireland 313-4
Police 1239w

Webb, Mr Steve
Chamber Debates
Elderly (10.09.03) 347-9, 353, 358, 366, 376-82
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 112-4
Questions
Autism 1265w
Child tax credit 603-4w
Inland Revenue, Standards 104-5w
Pension credit 21w, 564w
Pension credit, Telephone services 558w, 696-7w
Pensions, Self-employed 912w
Social security benefits, Home visits 901w
Tax burden, Gloucestershire 969w
Welfare tax credits, Appeals 1101-2w
Welfare tax credits, Compensation 1102w

Weedkillers
Genetically modified organisms 365w

Welfare of Farmed Animals (England) (Amendment) Regulations 2002
Questions
286w

Welfare state
60ws

Welfare tax credits
395w, 604-5w
Administrative delays 106w, 866w
Appeals 1101-2w
Applications 865w
Carmarthen 605w
Compensation 1102w
Eltham 604-5w
Forms 21-2w
Greater London 604-5w

West Freugh airfield
355w

West Mercia Police
Finance 1255w
Manpower 1255w

West Midlands
Antisemitism 378w
Local government finance 1027-8w
Regional planning and development 29-31ws
X rays 1358w

West Sussex
Dental services 234-5w
Human trafficking 588-9w
Mental health services 217w
Military police 48w
Schools 339w

Western Sahara
326w, 679-80w, 1121w

Westlink
832w

Whales
Iceland 918w

White, Brian
Westminster Hall Debates
Energy, Conservation (10.09.03) 94wh
Questions
Electronic equipment, Waste disposal 773w
Telecommunications, Non-domestic rates 319w

Whitehead, Dr Alan, Parliamentary Secretary, Dept for Transport Local Government and the Regions
Westminster Hall Debates
Packaging, Regulation (09.09.03) 22-5wh, 27wh

Whittingdale, Mr John
Questions
BBC 580
Film, Finance 1046-7w
Firing ranges, South East region 48w
Olympic Games, Greater London 335w, 527-8w
Olympic Games, National Lottery 335w
Speed limits, Cameras 279-80w

Wicks, Malcolm, Minister of State for Pensions, Dept for Work and Pensions
Chamber Debates
Elderly (10.09.03) 344-53, 380
Questions
Age, Discrimination 19w
Children, Maintenance 19-20w
Pension credit 21w, 1054w
Pensioners, Income 343w
Pensioners, Income support 21w
Pensioners, Means tested benefits 563-4w
Pensioners, Monmouthshire 913w
Pensions 912-4w
Pensions, Armed forces 1054w
Pensions, Forecasts 914w
Pensions, Self-employed 912w
Registration of births deaths and marriages 904w
Social security benefits, Home visits 901w
Stakeholder pensions 343w
Voluntary organisations, Grants 915w
Winter fuel payments 915w

Wicks Committee
see Committee on Standards in Public Life

Widdecombe, Rt Hon Ann
Questions
Gurkhas 677-8w, 1230-1w

Widdecombe, Rt Hon Ann—continued
Gurkhas, Higher education 684w
Gurkhas, Immigration rules 1231w

Wiggin, Mr Bill
Chamber Debates
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 123-5
Questions
Air pollution 1175-6w
Aung San Suu Kyi 321w
Convention on the Future of Europe 322-3w
Domestic wastes, Recycling 312w
Domestic wastes, Waste management 1199w
Energy, Conservation 1180-1w
Iraq, Casualties 514-5w
Iraq, Reconstruction 1151-2w
Nurses, Manpower 629w
Public sector, Wales 849
Renewable energy 1197w

Wildlife
Northern Ireland 396w

Wildlife Trusts
1199w

Wilkinson, Mr John
Chamber Debates
Defence (11.09.03) 499
European Union (16.09.03) 788
Iraq (08.09.03) 47
Ministerial statements, Points of order (11.09.03) 487
Questions
Autism 837-8w
Balkans, Peace keeping operations 9-10
Business questions 480
Entry clearances, Slovakia 945w
Health services, Paddington 706

Willetts, Mr David
Questions
New deal for young people 910-2w
Social security benefits, Fraud 758w
Welfare tax credits, Administrative delays 866w

Williams, Rt Hon Alan
Chamber Debates
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 83-5
Questions
Kelly, David 704-5w
NHS, Wales 843
Television, Advertising 958-9w

Williams, Mrs Betty
Westminster Hall Debates
Coastal areas, Regeneration (10.09.03) 102wh

Williams, Hywel
Chamber Debates
Elderly (10.09.03) 375-7
Questions
Friction Dynamex 734w

Williams, Mr Roger
Questions
A483 842
Biotechnology, Manpower 424w
Genetically modified organisms, Acrylamide 365w
Genetically modified organisms, Crops 387-8w, 1182-3w
Genetically modified organisms, Weedkillers 365w
Maize 376w
Wood 778-9w, 928-30w

Willis, Mr Phil
Chamber Debates
Oral question time intervention (11.09.03) 456

Willis, Mr Phil—continued
Questions
Adult education, Hertfordshire 550-1w
Adult education, Qualifications 790w
Connexions Service 982-4w
Further education, Curriculum 448-9w
Further education, Mature students 981-2w
Individual learning accounts, Finance 793w
Literacy 1139w
Specialist schools 458
Teachers 134-5w
Teachers, Training 133-4w, 144-5w

Wilshire, Mr David
Chamber Debates
Local Government Bill, Lords amendts (17.09.03) 1025
Questions
Ashford Hospital 1265w

"Wilton Park Executive Agency Annual Report and Accounts, 2002/03"
11ws

Winchester
Courts 1034-5w

Wind power
435-6w
Licensing 359-61w
Offshore industry 384-5w, 433-4w
Scotland 17w, 360w
Solway Firth 383w

Winnick, David
Chamber Debates
Iraq (09.09.03) 199-200
Northern Ireland (Monitoring Commission Etc) Bill (HL), Allocation of time motion, 2R and rem stages (17.09.03) 922
Questions
Business questions 1080
Iraq, Peace keeping operations 6
Iraq, Politics and government 868w
Members, Correspondence 456w, 680-1w
Parliament, Postal services 423-4w

Winter fuel payments
915w
Petitions (17.09.03) 1040
Scotland 370w
Wales 700w

Winterton, Ann
Questions
Ceramics, Trade competitiveness 1065-6
Fisheries, Northern Ireland 318
Fisheries, South West region 920-1w
Fishing vessels 773-4w
Seas and oceans, Temperature 1193-4w

Winterton, Sir Nicholas
Chamber Debates
Local Government Bill, Lords amendts (17.09.03) 1023, 1027, 1032
Oral question time intervention (19.09.03) 155
Questions
Care homes 704-5
Foreign investment in UK, Wales 848-9
Select committees, Pay 166
Visits abroad, Scotland Office 154-5
Weapons, Northern Ireland 313-4

Winterton, Ms Rosie, Minister of State, Dept of Health
Westminster Hall Debates
Diabetes (09.09.03) 19-21wh
Written Statements
Dental services 59-60ws

Winterton, Ms Rosie—continued
"Development of Services for People with Learning Disabilities or Mental Illness in England Report, 13" 48ws
Questions
Accident and emergency departments 155w
Accident and emergency departments, Admissions 272w
Accident and emergency departments, Standards 155-6w
Accident and emergency departments, Waiting lists 835-6w, 1257w
Adur Arun and Worthing Primary Care Trust, Arthritis 163w
Ambulance services, Emergency calls 184w
Ambulance services, Infectious diseases 847w
Ambulance services, Security 161w
Ambulance services, Speed limits 160-1w
Ambulance services, Standards 159-60w, 184-5w
Ambulance services, Vehicles 161w
Anaemia, Screening 162w
Cemeteries 197w
Commission for Health Improvement, Surveys 174w
Commission for Social Care Inspection 1346w
Community health councils 840w
Community health councils, Buildings 840w
Community health councils, Closures 174-6w
Community health councils, Manpower 840w
Community health councils, Resignations 840w
Contact lenses 1272-3w
Dental health, Children 268-9w, 626-8w, 856-8w
Dental services 234w, 713-5, 850w, 1277w
Dental services, Buckinghamshire 1299-300w
Dental services, Fees and charges 631w, 841w
Dental services, Lancashire 233-4w
Dental services, North East region 623-4w
Dental services, West Sussex 234-5w
Dentistry, Student numbers 1276w
Diabetes 225w, 841-2w, 1278-9w
Diabetes, Screening 1278w
Ealing Hospital NHS Trust, Resignations 183w
Elderly, Accidents 187w
Electroconvulsive therapy 210w
Eyesight, Surgery 331w
General practitioners, Prescription drugs 330w
Health, Asians 1265w
Health action zones 198w
Health services, Buckinghamshire 1301-2w
Hearing impaired, Suicide 856w
Hospital wards, Gender 846w
Hospitals, Standards 201-2w
Injuries 244w
Kidneys 842w
Lung diseases, Gloucestershire 625w
Lymphoedema, Medical treatments 621-2w
Magnetic resonance imagers, Somerset 221-4w
Medical records 174w, 208-9w
Mental health services 209-13w, 216-8w
Mental health services, Asylum 211-2w
Mental health services, Ethnic groups 209w
Mental health services, Expenditure 215w

Winterton, Ms Rosie*—*continued
Mental health services, Females 214-5w
Mental health services, Health professions 847-8w
Mental health services, Hearing impaired 848w
Mental health services, Homelessness 214w
Mental health services, Manpower 216w
Mental health services, Respite care 1319w
Mental health services, Somerset 211w
Mental health services, West Sussex 217w
Mental Incapacity Bill (Draft) 332w
Ministerial duties, Dept of Health 221-2w
Ministerial policy advisors, Dept of Health 270w
MMR vaccine, Somerset 222w
NHS, Compensation 329w
NHS, Public appointments 244w, 1344-5w
NHS, Recruitment 240w
NHS, Standards 172w
NHS Direct 236-7w, 1327-8w
NHS Direct, Expenditure 235-6w
NHS Direct, Finance 237w
NHS Direct, Location 1326-8w
NHS Direct, Manpower 237-8w
NHS Direct, Nurses 236-7w
NHS Direct, Per capita costs 236w
Nurses 716
Nurses, Training 715-6
Official cars, Dept of Health 377w
Official hospitality, Dept of Health 329w
Official visits, Dept of Health 9-10w
Organs, Donors 250-1w, 1336-7w
Patients' forums 854w
Pharmacy 328w, 716-7
Prescription drugs, Private sector 1341w
Prescription drugs, Waste management 1286-7w
Prescriptions, Fees and charges 191-2w
Prescriptions, Time limits 856w
Press, Dept of Health 179w
Prosthetics 624-5w
Publications, Dept of Health 249w
Sibutramine 261w
Suicide 267-8w
Surgery, Buckinghamshire 1298-9w
Surgery, Death rate 854w
Transplant surgery, Infectious diseases 158-9w
Visits abroad, Dept of Health 222w
Written questions, Dept of Health 333-4w, 852-3w
Xenotransplantation Interim Regulatory Authority 1359-60w

Wirral
Dental services 1278w

Wishart, Pete
Chamber Debates
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 869
Questions
Business questions 483, 1078-9
Horse racing 1054

Witnesses
Intimidation 1255-6w
Payments 664w
Video recordings 499w

Women
see Females

Wood
778-9w, 928-30w

Wood*—*continued
Renewable energy 384-6w

Woolas, Mr Phil*, *Deputy Leader of the House of Commons
Chamber Debates
Betts, Clive, Members' suspension (11.09.03) 490
Questions
Parliamentary procedure, Devolution 170
Parliamentary scrutiny, Legislative drafting 168-9
Standing committees, Computers 167

Worcester
Local government finance 1031w

Worcestershire
Acute beds 630w
Health visitors 619w, 1304w

Worcestershire Royal Hospital
619w

Work permits
EC enlargement 991w
Football 812-3w
Information technology 946w

Workforce and Common Assessment Directorate
see Children and Families Directorate

Working Age Agency
see Jobcentre Plus

Working hours
Doctors 273-4w, 1328-9w
Junior doctors 182w
Transport 887w

Working tax credit
1103w
Chorley 394w
Publicity 107w
Telephone services 107w

Working Time (Amendment) Regulations 2003
Chamber Debates
(15.09.03) 693

World Trade Organisation
315-6w, 522w, 768-9w, 880-2w, 1065
Ministerial statements (17.09.03) 861-76

World War II
Military decorations 14-5

Wray, Mr James
Chamber Debates
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 62, 71-3
Questions
Aircraft carriers 701w
Aircraft carriers, Procurement 344w
Antisocial behaviour, Young people 664-5w
Armed forces, Families 50-1w
Armoured fighting vehicles 1164w
Asylum, Community development 798w
Asylum, Crime 1206w
Autism 165w
Aviation, Passengers 504w
Baltic Sea, Chemical weapons 674-5w, 1111-2w
Cannabis, Prescription drugs 251-2w
Carers 617w
Children, Maintenance 444w
Closed circuit television 672-3w
Construction, Standards 640w

Wray, Mr James*—*continued
Crime, Northern Ireland 711w
Crimes of violence, Public sector 670-1w
Defence equipment, Thermal imaging 746w
Dental services, Fees and charges 631w, 841w
Disability living allowance 341-2w
Disability living allowance, Appeals 755w
Disabled, Access 756-7w
Foster care 1133-4w
Gifted children 129w, 1136w
Health professions, Security 153-4w
Immigration controls 941w
Iraq, Military police 44w
Maternity services 206w
Maternity services, Finance 206-7w
Medical treatments, Research 978w
Midwives, Manpower 207w
Midwives, Pay 207-8w
Misleading advertising, Holidays 876w
Nanotechnology 766w
NHS, Pay 11w
Paedophilia, Criminal investigation 1241w
Paedophilia, Prisoners' release 1241w
Paedophilia, Sentencing 1240-1w
Pain, Medical treatments 251w
Pakistan, Christianity 594w
Passports, Applications 60-1w, 587w
Postal services, Railways 547w
Pupils, Disadvantaged 682-3w
Radioactive wastes 281-2w, 770w
Railways, Freight 277w
School meals 110w
Sign language 340w
Specialist schools, Hearing impaired 550w
Students, Fees and charges 454w, 553w
Transport, Air pollution 278w
Transport, Radioactive materials 409-10w
Warships, Procurement 751-2w
Youth clubs 111w

Wrekin
Doctors 182-4w
General practitioners 195w

Wright, Mr Anthony D
Chamber Debates
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1102-3

Wright, David
Questions
Defence Logistics Organisation 18
Directors 765w

Wright, Tony
Chamber Debates
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1094
Questions
British Coal Corporation, Pensions 1070-1w
Business questions 1081
Iraq, Weapons 868w

Written questions
Administrative delays 1171w
Dept for Constitutional Affairs 1044-5w
Dept for Culture Media and Sport 783w
Dept for Education and Skills 1142w
Dept for Environment Food and Rural Affairs 925-6w
Dept for International Development 1014w
Dept for Transport 760-1w
Dept for Work and Pensions 911w
Dept of Health 333-4w, 852-3w
Dept of Trade and Industry 878w
Disclosure of information 637w
Foreign and Commonwealth Office 992w

Written questions—continued
Home Office 1241w
Minister for Women 870w
Treasury 656w

Wyatt, Derek
Questions
Capita, Local authorities 959w
Council tax 612w
Disability living allowance, Pensioners 905w
Housing, Construction 613w, 963w
Housing benefit 445w
Housing benefit, Administrative delays 963w
Housing benefit, Computer software 445w
Housing benefit, Swale 445w
Liquefied petroleum gas, Excise duties 887w
Olympic Games, Greater London 526w, 578
Planning obligations 612-3w

X rays
West Midlands 1358w

Xenotransplantation Interim Regulatory Authority
1359-60w

Yarls Wood Detention Centre
(16.09.03) 196-204wh, 1256w
Fires 946-7w

Yeo, Mr Tim
Chamber Debates
Electricity (16.09.03) 723-31
World Trade Organisation (17.09.03) 863-4
Questions
Eggs, EC law 74-5w
Eggs, Trade agreements 281w
Import controls 546w
Manpower, Northern Ireland Office 486-9w
Post office card account 1059
Regulation, Northern Ireland Office 479w
Small businesses 1052
Trade 769w

Young, Sir George
Chamber Debates
Betts, Clive, Members' suspension (11.09.03) 488-9
House of Lords (18.09.03) 1094
Questions
Business questions 484

Young offenders
Females 1217-8w
Havering 1218w

Young people
Alcoholic drinks 323, 672w
Antisocial behaviour 664-5w
Drugs 1213-4w
Loans 880w
Sexually transmitted diseases 172-3w

Younger-Ross, Richard
Chamber Debates
Elderly (10.09.03) 337-8, 352, 370-1, 378
Iraq (08.09.03) 49, (09.09.03) 205, 216, 231-4, 242-3, (10.09.03) 416
Water Bill (HL), 2R (08.09.03) 120-2
Questions
Hospitals, Infectious diseases 630w
Iraq, Bomb disposal 704w
Iraq, Weapons 514w

Youth clubs
111w

Youth Justice Board
63w
Manpower 1256w

Zimbabwe
African Union 65w
Crops 91-2w
Food 92-3w
Freedom of expression 1119w

CAMBRIDGE